The Egyptian word [hpet] may be cognate with the Latin capto, and from it comes the Persian kaftan, a monk's robe and hood completely embracing the body.⁴⁴⁰

6-39 The Gnostic Apocryphon of James has Christ saying to his Apostles: "If you consider how long the world existed [before] you, and how long it will exist after you, you will find that your life is one single day and your sufferings one single hour... Scorn death, therefore, and take thought for life! Remember my cross and my death, and you will live!"⁴⁴¹

6-40 Citing Elder Neal A. Maxwell, Elder Bruce C. Hafen writes:⁴⁴²

"The very act of choosing to be a disciple... can bring to us a certain special suffering," because affliction and chastening are "a form of learning as it is administered at the hands of a loving Father."⁴⁴³ He also said, "If we are serious about our discipleship, Jesus will eventually request each of us to do those things which are most difficult for us to do."⁴⁴⁴ And so, he said, "sometimes the best people... have the worst experiences...because they are the most ready to learn."⁴⁴⁵

429 Ibid., 3:7-8.

430 Ibid., 28:7-8.

431 Ibid., 21:3-5.

432 Ibid., 42:8.

433 W. W. Isenberg, Philip, 59:8-9, p. 145; 63:33, p. 148.

434 Cf. R. M. Wilson, Philip, p. 115.

435 Hosea 1-3.

436 F. I. Andersen et al., Hosea, p. 165; cf. 1 Corinthians 7:14; D&C 74.

437 M. von Wellnitz, Liturgy, pp. 33-34.

438 See R. H. Wilkinson, Art, pp. 50-51.

439 H. W. Nibley, Atonement, p. 559; cf. D. R. Seely, Hand of God in the Book of Mormon, pp. 147-149.

440 H. W. Nibley, Atonement, pp. 558-559.

441 F. E. Williams, Apocryphon of James, 5:23-35, p. 32.

442 B. C. Hafen, Disciple's Journey, p. 300.

443 N. A. Maxwell, Experience, pp. 32, 39.

444 N. A. Maxwell, Choose, p. 46.

445 N. A. Maxwell, remarks at Joseph S. Clark funeral, 23 February 1996, cited in B. C. Hafen, Disciple's Life, p. 20.

- 6-41 In a similar vein, Faulconer has written:

The notion of repentance makes sense on a view that allows for backwards causation, but not on the usual view of time. If the past is indeed absolutely past and not to be changed, then repentance is a sham. It is no more than feeling sorry for what happened and it is probably an exercise in bad-faith to take it as more than that. God's promise to remember our sins no more is only a rhetorical flourish and I have difficulty understanding why an atonement is needed or what it could possibly do.

Assume, however, that repentance is meaningfully described as Christianity describes it, as a change of one's personal history. One might make sense of such a view by thinking that repentance has to do with events rather than points of time. To repent is to change the meaning of a past event. But if the existence of the past is a function of its meaning in the present (something I believe but cannot argue for here), then the existence of the past is altered when I change its present meaning by repenting.⁴⁴⁶

- 6-42 In recent years, the concept of Limbo for unbaptized children has increasingly fallen into disfavor in the Roman Catholic Church.⁴⁴⁷

- 6-43 The Savior not only is the "keeper of the gate," He is the very gate itself. Writes Ostler:

The quasi-canonical Pastor of Hermas is a good illustration of the necessity of both the garment and the name [to pass through the last barrier to the presence of God]:

No man shall enter into the kingdom of heaven except he shall take upon him the name of the "Son of God"... The gate is the Son of God, who is the only way of coming to God.... No man can enter into the kingdom of God except these [virgins] clothe him with their garment.⁴⁴⁸ It availeth nothing to take up the name of the "Son of God" unless thou shalt receive the garment.... A man shall in vain bear his name unless he is endowed with his powers.⁴⁴⁹

Christ is also represented as the door to the kingdom of heaven in the Odes of Solomon. "He gave me the way of His precepts and I opened the doors that were closed.... Nothing appeared closed to me: Because I am the door of everything."⁴⁵⁰ Since the gate is Christ, the scene at the gate is often one of intimate union with Christ, as in the Apocryphon of James. After the spirit is clothed again with its garment, Christ tells the Apostle, Behold, I shall reveal everything to you, my beloved. Know that you came forth just as I am. Behold, I shall reveal to you Him who is hidden. Now stretch out your hand. Now take hold of me.... Those who wish to enter and seek to walk in the way that is before the door, open the door through you.⁴⁵¹

- 6-44 Note al-Tabari's mention of "an iron rod growing on the mountain," which he implausibly explains in terms of the origin of toolmaking by Adam.⁴⁵²

After mentioning the pilgrimage by handrail, ropes, and chains to the top of Adam's Peak in Sri Lanka, Nibley writes:

There is an account of the iron rod from Jerusalem that led to the temple... Remember, before the top of the mountain was leveled off for the temple, it was much higher, and it was risky. When it was rainy and stormy (it was Spring when people would have to go), it was hard to get up there, to follow the sacred trail up.

They still do that in Athens, going up to the Acropolis the same way—the sacred trail going to the top of the mountain. So they had the handrail going up to help people. It was iron, but it rusted away. It was supplanted by wood, brass, and other things. But they always used the expression, for old or weak people or when it was dangerous and slippery, to get to the temple you had to hang 446 J. E. Faulconer, Hebrew Time. See also J. E. Faulconer, Study, pp. 148-149; M. C. Thomas, Light, pp. 349-350.

447 International Theological Commission, Hope.

448 Cf. Matthew 22:1-14; J. E. Talmage, Jesus the Christ, pp. 501-502, 504.

449 Cf. C. Osiek, Shepherd, 9:12 [89]:4, 6, p. 230; 9:13 [90]:2, p. 230.

450 Cf. J. H. Charlesworth, Odes, 17:9, 11, pp. 750, 751.

451 B. T. Ostler, Clothed, p. 9; cf. C. W. Hedrick et al., James, 57:4-11, 55:6-11, pp. 274, 273. See also J. H. Charlesworth, Odes, 37:1-4, p. 766; 42:14, p. 771; J. K. Elliott, Pearl, 98-102, p. 327; H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, 98-102, pp. 499-501.

452 al-Tabari, Creation, 1:126-127, p. 297.

onto the railing, “grasp the iron rod.” This emerges in the Book of Mormon in a context which Joseph Smith couldn’t have discovered or anybody else in his time.⁴⁵³

Lehi’s dream does not contain any explicit description of a mountain, but only a reference to a “strait and narrow path, which came along by the rod of iron, even to the tree by which [Lehi] stood; and it also led by the head of the fountain, unto a large and spacious field.”⁴⁵⁴ However the fact that the waters are described as originating at the Tree of Life⁴⁵⁵ implies at the very least that the tree sits on higher ground than the surrounding area.

- 6-45 Islamic commentary on this verse describes a handhold as “something which the hands can grasp for safety in a moment of danger. It may be a loop or a handle, or anchor. It is without flaw, so that there is no danger of breaking; our safety is absolutely assured so long as we hold fast to it. Our safety then depends on our own will and faith...”⁴⁵⁶ Another commentator further elucidates: “When one wants to lay one’s hold on a thing, one has to discard all other things before that. In other words, one has first to leave unwanted things, then comes the stage of holding fast to the desired thing... Its root meaning is attachment; it is said ‘arahu and ‘itarahu both of which mean ‘was attached to him’... You cannot be sure of your hold unless you keep the handle in your grip...”⁴⁵⁷

- 6-46 The document in the hand of the ascending one can be profitably discussed in light of the Mandaean consecrating rituals for a ganzibra (= treasurer), the name for the office probably being derived from the idea that the individual would have a stewardship for sacred religious texts (e.g., Ginza). (Drower learned that this rite was originally intended to be performed for all dying persons, but is rarer now due to the shortage of priests.⁴⁵⁸) In this ceremony, a worthy person who is soon to die bears a message or “letter” of the new ganzibra to the World of Light. The “letter” takes the physical form of a vial of specially-prepared oil made from sesame and dates which is sealed with the priest’s ring and the imprint of one of his fingernails, and then placed in the pocket of the overshirt or smock of the dying one’s sacred burial clothing.⁴⁵⁹ In the liturgy that accompanies the sealing of the flask of oil we read of the journey of the soul to the House of Life, proceeding by a series of ritual stages marked by handclasps:

A sealed letter which leaveth the world
—A letter written in good-faith (kushta)
And sealed with the seal of the Mighty [Life]—
... The spirits of Purgatory abased their heads
And the soul passed the purgatory-spirits by.
... As she reached the waters of death
There came forth towards her
A great Beam of radiance [and] of life, [who] Grasped her by the palm of her right hand
And brought her over the waters of death
The soul flieth and goeth
Until she reacheth the House of Life,
And when He heard her call, the Life
Sent a messenger towards her,
[Who] grasped her by the palm of her hand,
Conducted her, [came] to support her [embrace her?]
In the likeness of the Life to the place
Of radiance, light and beams of effulgence;
To unite her to [the company of] ‘uthras.⁴⁶⁰

- 6-47 Similar themes are found in sources from many different traditions. For example, the image of two birds, one eating and one watching, recalls the famous scene from the Hindu scriptures: “Two birds, inseparable friends, cling to the same tree. One of them eats the sweet fruit, the other looks on without eating. On the same tree a man sits grieving, immersed, bewildered, by his own impotence

453 H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the PGP, 16, pp. 195-196.

454 1 Nephi 8:20.

455 1 Nephi 11:25.

456 A. Ali, Qur’an, 2:256, p. 106 n. 301; cf. Hebrews 3:14. See H. W. Attridge et al., Hebrews, pp. 118-119.

457 A. at-Tabataba’i, Al-Mizan, 2:256; 4:173-174.

458 E. S. Drower, Adam, pp. 73-74.

459 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, p. 29.

460 E. S. Drower, Prayerbook, 73, pp. 61-63. See also E. S. Drower, Prayerbook, 49, pp. 43-46; 63, p. 52.

(an-isâ). But when he sees the other lord (isa) contented, and knows his glory, then his grief passes away.”⁴⁶¹ The tree in question is the sacred Bodhi (fig, pippala). Christian texts also mention birds who sometimes lodged in the Tree of Life to eat “the berries of the tree. These were large berries, sweeter than all honey, and more intoxicating than every wine.”⁴⁶² In a relief relating to the Mithraic mysteries, “Mithra and Sol clasp hands over an altar, while a spit of meat pecked at by a raven is directly above the union of the hands. Vermaseren interprets this as a treaty before ‘the divine meal which itself took place before their ascent to heaven in the chariot of the sun.’”⁴⁶³

The idea of two convergent doves at the top of the Tree of Life recalls a Roman design with two doves that may have a Greek antecedent. Butterworth relates the “legend that two eagles (or swans or crows) were dispatched by Zeus from the opposite ends of the earth and that they met at the Pythian oracle, which had its seat at the Delphic omphalos.”⁴⁶⁴ He also notes that “imperial coins show a bird on either side of the Paphian omphalos” (ibid.).

Of the symbolism of the dove in pagan, Jewish, and Christian iconography, Goodenough writes:

The bird, especially the dove, has come in many situations to suggest an association with soul, immortality, and love, three conceptions which are really one since the first two mean life directly, and since also love is life. The dove properly, as soul or divine love, takes its place in the vine, and feeds on the grapes, whence, as from the cup, it gets, or gives divine life. The logic of symbolism is highly circuitous. Association which returns by a circle to its point of origin only enhances the value of the symbol. It is absurd to say that the cupid and dove, if they represent divine love given to man, cannot at the same time be the souls of the departed getting their eternal life from the juice; that they cannot simultaneously be the saved and saviors. This is utterly to misunderstand symbolism and religion alike. The analogy seems to me quite perfect with the Christian lamb, which can interchangeably be Christ himself, Christ’s loving sacrifice of himself, or a member of Christ’s flock. A religious aspirant who craves to assimilate divine life into himself through the god’s love and to achieve mystical union here and immortality hereafter, sees the process at the same time to be the exaltation of the believer into identity with the savior, so that the symbol of the savior represents the one who is saved. In all the mysteries, as in Christianity, the believer became identified with the person of the saving god by identifying himself with the god’s experiences.⁴⁶⁵

6-48 Wikipedia gives the following about the life of Herbert:⁴⁶⁶

George Herbert (3 April 1593 – 1 March 1633) was a Welsh poet, orator and priest. Being born into an artistic and wealthy family, he received a good education which led to his holding prominent positions at Cambridge University and Parliament. As a student at Trinity College, Cambridge, England, George Herbert excelled in languages and music. He went to college with the intention of becoming a priest, but his scholarship attracted the attention of King James I. Herbert served in parliament for two years. After the death of King James and at the urging of a friend, Herbert’s interest in ordained ministry was renewed. In 1630, in his late thirties he gave up his secular ambitions and took holy orders in the Church of England, spending the rest of his life as a rector of the little parish of St. Andrew Bemerton, near Salisbury. He was noted for unfailing care for his parishioners, bringing the sacraments to them when they were ill, and providing food and clothing for those in need. Throughout his life he wrote religious poems characterized by a precision of language, a metrical versatility, and an ingenious use of imagery or conceits that was favoured by the metaphysical school of poets. He is best remembered as a writer of poems and the hymn “Come, My Way, My Truth, My Life.”

Many of Herbert’s poems were included in the posthumously-published volume entitled The Temple. It is reported that the author, on his death-bed, delivered the book to his executor, with the following instructions:⁴⁶⁷

Sir, I pray deliver this little book to my dear brother Ferrar, and tell him, he shall find in it a picture of the many spiritual conflicts that have passed betwixt God and my soul, before I could subject 461 F. M. Müller, Upanishads 2, Mundaka 3:1-2, p. 38; cf. R. T. H. Griffith, Rig Veda, 1:164:22, p. 111; F. M. Müller, Upanishads 2, Svetasvatara 4:6-7, pp. 234-235; Katha 3:1, p. 12.

462 M. Herbert, Irish Apocrypha, p. 19; cf. p. 17.

463 M. J. Vermaseren, Mithras, p. 98, cited in T. M. Compton, Handclasp, pp. 619-620.

464 E. A. S. Butterworth, Tree, p. 36.

465 E. R. Goodenough, Pagan Symbols, 8:36-37.

466 George Herbert.

467 From the preface of G. Herbert, Temple, p. vi.

mine to the will of Jesus my master, in whose service I have now found perfect freedom; desire him to read it, and then if he can think it may turn to the advantage of any dejected poor soul, let it be made public; if not, let him burn it, for I and it are less than the least of God's mercies.

The English composer Ralph Vaughan Williams set music to a carefully selected set of Herbert's poems in his 1911 Five Mystical Songs. Palmer writes:⁴⁶⁸

Both what Herbert said... and the way he said it appealed to the Christian agnostic (or "disappointed theist") in Vaughan Williams... "Love bade me welcome" looks both more inward and... far further forward than the other songs. The rapt stillness at its center—the Act, at which point, in the traditionally Edenic key of E, wordless voices intone the O sacrum convivium,⁴⁶⁹ is one of the great moments in Vaughan Williams.

As a fitting coincidence, the Harvard University library copy used to create a digital version of this book is signed, "Amy Lothrop, December 25, 1889." Amy Lothrop was the pen name of Anna Bartlett Warner (1827-1915), who is best known for having written the children's prayer song, "Jesus Loves Me, This I Know."

468 C Palmer, Vaughan Williams, p. 4.

469 O sacrum convivium is a liturgical reflection on the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper: "O sacred banquet! / in which Christ is received, / the memory of his Passion is renewed, / the mind is filled with grace, / and a pledge of future glory to us is given. / Alleluia." As the words make it clear, however, the sacrament is only a foretaste of the celestial feast. Thus, in the musical setting for Herbert's dialogue with Deity, one might further imagine the culminating encounter of Divine acceptance, the wordless refrain in the crucial instant at once expressing both the ineffable joy of the penitent soul and the magnitude of the love freely offered through the sufferings of our Lord.

EXCURSUS

1: Speech, Writing, and Revelation.....	512
2: Ancient Concepts of Wisdom.....	516
3: Temple Blessings in the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood	519
4: Chance and Purpose in Creation	524
5: Science and Mormonism.....	526
6: The Authority and Power of Scripture.....	531
7: Time and Eternity.....	537
8: The Origin and Premortal Existence of Human Spirits.....	540
9: The Premortal Organization of the Human Family.....	544
10: The Great Chain of Being.....	546
11: The Sacred Circle.....	547
12: Saint Exupéry and Genesis.....	549
13: Some Perspectives on Historicity	552
14: The Garden of Eden as a Prototype for the Temple	555
15: Description of the LDS Temple Endowment.....	557
16: The Role of Revelation in Temple Building.....	561
17: The Veil of the Temple	564
18: Kolob.....	565
19: “If You Could Hie to Kolob”.....	566
20: The Circle and the Square.....	571
21: The Power and Premortal Status of Satan	575
22: The Nature of Satan’s Premortal Proposal.....	577
23: The Roles of Christ, Adam, and Michael.....	582
24: The Watchers.....	585
25: The Tree of Life as the Hidden Throne of God.....	591
26: Justification and Sanctification	596
27: Diligence, Obedience, and Friendship.....	597
28: Ritual Aprons in Ancient Times.....	600
29: The Development of Extracanonial Literature on Adam and Eve	601
30: Adam-God Theory and the Heavenly and Earthly Adam	603
31: The Hospitality of Abraham.....	606
32: Freedman’s Analysis of the Primary History	607
33: The Restoration of Sacrifice.....	609
34: The Law of Consecration.....	611
35: Lamech’s “Sword Song”	612
36: The Legend of the True Cross	614
37: Traditions About the Role of Abel.....	617
38: The Meaning of “Adam-ondi-Ahman”	622
39: The Location of Adam-ondi-Ahman.....	623
40: Dating Joseph Smith’s Vision of Adam-ondi-Ahman.....	625
41: William Blake’s “Jerusalem”: A Vision of the Kingdom	627

42: Nebuchadnezzar's "Fall"	632
43: Adam and Eve in Mozart's "Magic Flute"	634
44: Shakespeare Creates a World: "The Tempest"	635
45: Impact of the "Black Death" on Art and Literature	640
46: The Origin and Meaning of the Term "Atonement"	642
47: Islamic Perspectives Relating to the Atonement	645
48: The Nature and Scope of Premortal Covenants	649
49: The People of the Book	651
50: Fu Xi and Nü Gua.....	654
51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple	658
52: Washing, Anointing, and Clothing Among Early Christians.....	661
53: Comparative Explorations of the Mysteries.....	663
The Mysteries of Aaron, Moses, and Melchizedek	663
The Cave of Treasures	669
The Eleusinian Mysteries	675
Jewish and Christian Analogues to the Cista Mystica?	679
Dexiosis	681
Jewish Mysticism at Dura Europos	687
54: Table of Parallels with the Apocalypse of Abraham	694
55: Mesoamerican Stories of Creation and Original Transgression	697
Endnotes	702

Excursus 1

Speech, Writing, and Revelation

SPEECH and writing are so commonplace that their almost miraculous nature is easily forgotten. Far from being mechanical processes, both their encoding and their decipherment relies on a complex creative act that is amazing to consider:

Michael Reddy¹ points out the predominance of what he calls the “conduit metaphor,” the fallacious belief that when we talk, we talk about the world directly, and send our thoughts felicitously over to other individuals through the conduit of language. Linguistic communication is typically viewed as the cloaking of ideas in words, as if words as packages somehow contain reports on the world they represent.

Reddy observes that none of this really happens. When one person talks to another, words do not come out of the speaker’s mouth as packages full of direct report on facts, which the hearer then opens up to discover the fully packed meaning inside. On the contrary, the speaker forces air out of the lungs and shapes the molecules with the vocal apparatus; these molecules vibrate on the hearer’s eardrums, sending neurochemical impulses to the brain. The hearer then constructs a model of what the speaker is thought to have said. People understand each other and communicate not by direct conveyance at all, but by broadcasting signals, which themselves evoke mental models... We do not speak about the extensional world, but about the model of the world we make up in our heads.²

Writing allows a similar process to take place among people separated by time or distance. Nibley comments:

Writing is as marvelous and subtle a thing in its operation and in its effects as television. Here we have a means of transmitting not only the deeds but also the very thoughts of men through unlimited expanses of space and time—and this amazingly economical and efficient device has been in the possession of the human race from its very beginning. Writing was not devised by men as a tool to help them in their everyday affairs: successful businessmen have been illiterates, and there is ample evidence that writing was adapted to commercial uses only after such uses were found for it. If you bring together all the written records of man’s past, you will discover that the overwhelming mass of material is religious in nature, and that the primary purpose to which writing has been put through the ages has not been for business records and correspondence, in which writing is employed awkwardly and without enthusiasm, but for keeping a remembrance of God’s dealings with men. The specific purpose of writing, as the Egyptians put it, is to record the mdw ntr, the divine words.³

Different theories on the origins of writing raise “contentious” questions,⁴ however it is widely agreed that the first “continuous texts” of Old Egyptian date to the third millennium BCE.⁵ Nibley explains both “the popularity and the variety of ancient writing... by its religious nature,” noting that “new scripts invariably appear as the vehicles of new religions” and that “all of man’s greatest inventions and discoveries seem to have the primary purpose of putting him into communication with the other world.”⁶ Whoever reads the scriptures today “has before him the words of God to men from the beginning, in witness of which

1 M. Reddy, Conduit.

2 W. Frawley, Semantics, pp. 23-24.

3 H. W. Nibley, Gnostics, p. 207.

4 J. T. Hooker, Reading, p. 6. For a readable history of world languages, see N. Ostler, Empires.

5 W. V. Davies, Hieroglyphs, p. 81.

6 H. W. Nibley, Written Word, p. 109.

the very letters on the page are but slightly conventionalized forms of the original symbols in which the message was conveyed,” thus these writings “are the nearest approach and the best clue thus far discovered to the genesis of the written word.”⁷

Despite the crucial role of the written word in conveying knowledge of God, Brigham Young was emphatic that: “Language to convey all the truth, does not exist. Even in the Bible, and all books that have been revealed from heaven unto men, the language fails to convey all the truth as it is.”⁸ That is because an understanding of truth, especially spiritual truth, does not come through language itself, but through a process of revelation. After having been filled with the Holy Ghost following his baptism, Joseph Smith wrote: “Our minds being now enlightened, we began to have the scriptures laid open to our understandings, and the true meaning and intention of their more mysterious passages revealed unto us in a manner which we never could attain to previously, nor ever before had thought of.”⁹ He also said that: “...we never can comprehend the things of God and of heaven, but by revelation. We may spiritualize and express opinions to all eternity; but that is no authority.”¹⁰

The Prophet taught that gospel ordinances were given for the express purpose of giving us a direct experience of spiritual matters:

Could we read and comprehend all that has been written from the days of Adam, on the relation of man to God and angels in a future state, we should know very little about it. Reading the experience of others, or the revelation given to them, can never give us a comprehensive view of our condition and true relation to God. Knowledge of these things can only be obtained by experience through the ordinances of God set forth for that purpose. Could you gaze into heaven five minutes, you would know more than you would by reading all that ever was written on the subject.¹¹

Oliver Cowdery observed that “one touch with the finger of his love, yes, one ray of glory from the upper world, or one word from the mouth of the Saviour, from the bosom of eternity, strikes [fiction and falsehood] into insignificance and blots it forever from the mind!”¹²

7 Ibid., p. 122.

8 B. Young, 27 February 1853, p. 117.

9 JS-H 1:74.

10 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 8 April 1843, p. 292. Thus Underwood’s comment that scripture “should become a ‘gateway’ to God rather than an idol that replaces him” (G. Underwood, Revelation, p. 81).

11 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 9 October 1843, p. 324; cf. 8 April 1843, p. 292.

12 O. Cowdery, Phelps, p. 16.

FIGURE E1-1. Shabaka Stone, ca. 710 BCE

According to Nibley's unique exegesis,¹ the drama recounted on the Shabaka stone "begins with Ptah [the creator god] in his glory, and he wishes to transmit the powers of heaven (the powers he possesses) to the earth, the same celestial order.... The whole purpose of this is to show that the king at Memphis (Shabaka in this case) holds the same authority that was held by God and was handed down to man through Atum and through the heavenly council to the spirits and brought down to earth [1-6]....² [Geb, lord of the gods,] calls the council of the gods and they discuss a division between Seth and Horus [7]... Seth is our Satan, of course... [T]he land is divided between them... He sends each one to his part of the hall and says, 'Let there be no more argument between you' [8-9]. And each one takes his place [10a-b, 11a-12b]. But then he does a strange thing. He decides to give the whole inheritance to Horus [10c, 13a-16b]. Why is that?... [Because] the division of the land is not the question of who is to be priest and king, and there can only be one...³ [Geb] speaks again to the council of the gods and says, 'This is my son who is born, who is Horus, and who is born at the new year' [17a-b, 18a-b]. So [the text] celebrates the new year. It's the beginning of a new age... This is the end of Act One.... So we get to Act Two, and the trouble begins.... All of a sudden the Osiris theme is introduced.... Osiris is overcome and either thrown into the water or drowned... by the wicked Seth [17c, 19; cf. 62].... And Horus gave an order and cried out to [Isis and Nephthys], 'Ladies, go rescue him and take him from the water and prevent his drowning' [18c, 19, 20a, 21a; cf. 62]. [J]ust in time they catch him and bring him up again upon the land [20b, 21b; cf. 63]... 'He now enters through the gate [it also means initiation] of the glory of the land of the holy ones, the lords of eternity' [21b; cf. 63-64]. The final test is the baptism. He emerges from the waters of life [cf. Moses 1:20].... 'When you reach the great throne, there he shall be united in salvation and safety'.... Notice the two brother signs, sensen, with the nose there for sniff: 'And they shall kiss one another and fall upon each other's shoulders [cf. Moses 7:63]... And he shall be entered into the brotherhood of the gods' [22; cf. 64]... Osiris doesn't stay in the grave. He comes and introduces the ordinances for redemption for the dead on earth. So he enters into his temple. Here is the house of the great old man [21b; cf. 64]. It is often rendered 'the house of the Ancient of Days,' in other words God's representative on earth."⁴

In addition to the themes discussed above, Nibley describes the Shabaka Creation account [48-61] which is, in Sparks' words "reminiscent of Genesis" in its use of verbal commands.⁵ Nibley also sees in this account an "Opening of the Mouth."⁶ "All hail the plan of the Most High God presented to the Council; he plans and executes as he conceives in his heart and utters with his tongue his plan to be approved by the assembled hosts of the gods and preexistent spirits [53-54, 57]. Every living thing is invested with his divine power, shared by 'gods, mortals, beasts, all creeping things and other forms of life' [54]. Man is spiritually begotten and physically formed, the future ruler of the earth, endowed with eyes to see, ears to hear, a nose to smell, etc. [56]. The earth being prepared with all good things to receive him, a law is given to implement and explain the purpose of the earth as a place of probation: 'All who do good will be for eternal life, and all those who do evil for eternal bondage. This law is to be the measure of all things'—it is the purpose of all man's actions on earth [57]. 'And God finished his work... and was pleased with it' [59]. The heavenly plan was then implemented and carried out on earth, ... as fields and cities sprang up around these holy centers [59-61]."⁷

Regarding the influence of this text, Nibley reports that it is, "in the opinion of Sethe, Junker, Breasted, and others 'the most instructive which we possess for the inner content of Egyptian religion.'"⁸ Nibley also cites Zabkar, who concluded that the Memphite Theology "traveled from century to century, from one theological system to another; its theme resounds from the first line of Genesis, and from there on through the Old Testament and the latest period of Hebrew literature"... More than that, 'the Memphite Theology, through the Old Testament, prepared... the consciousness of the religious world for John's Logos doctrine about the manifestations and creative power of the Word of God, so the Amarna Theology sounded some themes which in the New Testament and especially in John's Gospel represent the fundamental features of the relation between the Father and the Son."⁹

The Shabaka stone purports to have been inscribed as a faithful and permanent reproduction of an ancient deteriorating document containing the Memphite theology, with worm holes in the original represented as intentional gaps in the text. However, most scholars have concluded that various archaisms and features of the layout were purposely added to give the stela an air of antiquity. While earlier studies placed the origin of the text in the Old Kingdom, prior to the Pyramid texts, more recent research posits a date no earlier than the 13th century BCE, and possibly as late as 710 BCE. Twenty-three of the sixty-four columns have been worn away. Unfortunately, much of the damage was done to the inscriptions in Roman times when this artifact was appropriated for use as a stationary lower millstone—the radial grooves having been deliberately made so as to let the flour come out—"like using the Great Seal of England to crack nuts," complained Nibley.¹⁰

1 See Endnote E-1, p. 704.

2 Cf. M. Lichtheim, Memphite, p. 56 n. 2.

3 Cf. ibid., p. 56 n. 3. On the contest of Horus and Seth, and the triumph of Horus, see J. Assman, Search, pp. 134-147.

4 H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the PGP, 8-10, pp. 99-100, 105-106, 103, 107, 117-119; cf. H. W. Nibley, Expanding 1992, pp. 182-184. For a standard translation, see M. Lichtheim, Memphite.

5 M. Lichtheim, Memphite, p. 56 n. 10; K. L. Sparks, Ancient Texts, p. 324.

6 H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the PGP, 9, pp. 108-115.

7 H. W. Nibley, Sacred, pp. 589-590.

8 K. Koch, Wort, cited in H. W. Nibley, Greatness, p. 303. See also A. Roberts, Anointing, p. 93.

9 L. V. Zabkar, Theocracy, p. 87, cited in H. W. Nibley, Greatness, pp. 303-304.

10 H. W. Nibley, Expanding 1992, p. 181. See H. W. Nibley, Expanding 1992, pp. 180-181 for a "readable" drawing.

Excursus 2

Ancient Concepts of Wisdom

ANCIENT concepts of Wisdom found in the book of Job are far removed from the secular and pietistic sayings in most of the rest of the wisdom literature of the Bible, much of which can be described as “a hotchpotch of trivia, some witty, others just banal.”¹³ Knowing he could not quench his thirst from these “broken cisterns,” Job sought “the fountain of living waters,”¹⁴ placing “emphasis on seeing God after so much mere hearsay.”¹⁵ Barker reminds us that this “hankering after divine wisdom... is exactly the theme of Job, where Job is challenged and eventually condemned on the grounds of his claim to knowledge. The book is not just about suffering but also about Job’s claim to know.”¹⁶

In Job 38:7... we... read of the sons of God who shouted for joy on the first day of Creation when the foundations of the earth were laid... The rest of Job 38 describes the works of Day One... And the point of all this is to ask Job: “Where were you when all this was done?” a strange question for the Lord to ask Job unless there was a known tradition of someone who witnessed the work of Creation and thus became wise.¹⁷

Extracanonical sources not only reinforce the priority of theophany over theodicy in the story of Job, but also introduce the theme of apotheosis. These traditions associate Job with key elements of temple ritual and apocalyptic accounts of heavenly ascents, some of which find parallels in the LDS understanding of the career of Adam and Eve. For example, Job’s ascent not only included a visit to a heavenly throne, but also descriptions of sacred clothing (“And as she chanted the hymns, she permitted ‘the Spirit’ to be inscribed on her garment”¹⁸), prayer circles (“And they lifted me up, supporting my arms on each side”¹⁹), ritual oaths (“Behold my sign!”²⁰), and tests for knowledge (“Arise, gird your loins like a man. I shall ask you certain questions, and you shall give me certain answers!”²¹). Like both the biblical story and the temple tradition, the pseudepigraphal account includes a series of tests provided by Satan himself who, for example, at one point cruelly declares to the penniless Job that he “can have anything in this world for money.”²² Indeed, throughout all the Job traditions²³—as in the stories of the Fall of Adam and Eve, the heavenly ascent of Moses, and Jesus’ temptation in the wilderness—the Adversary provides an essential element, “helping” the hero meet the requirement to prove himself worthy of a continued journey toward divine light and knowledge.²⁴

Barker argues that important elements of the wisdom traditions in Israel, including Wisdom traditions specifically associated with Adam,²⁵ have been obscured or lost through exclusion from the canon and deliberate alteration of what remained, and must be reconstructed from extracanonical sources that often blend wisdom with the apocalyptic.²⁶ In such literature:

13 M. Barker, Older, p. 84.

14 Jeremiah 2:13.

15 R. Murphy, Wisdom, p. 16; cf. J. L. Crenshaw, Love, pp. 62-63; Job 19:26-27, 42:5; Abraham 1:2.

16 M. Barker, Older, p. 238.

17 M. Barker, Beyond, pp. 195-196.

18 R. A. Kraft, Job, 48:4, p. 83.

19 R. P. Spittler, Testament of Job, 40:2, p. 859. See also H. W. Nibley, Prayer Circle, p. 63.

20 See discussion of Job 31:35 in B. Haymond, Job’s Covenant. Cf. R. J. Clifford, Wisdom, p. 86; S. D. Ricks, Oaths.

21 H. W. Nibley, Prayer Circle, p. 63; cf. Job 38:3; R. P. Spittler, Testament of Job, 47:5, p. 865: “Arise, gird your loins like a man. I shall question you, and you answer me.”

22 H. W. Nibley, Prayer Circle, p. 63; cf. H. W. Nibley, Consecration, p. 439; R. P. Spittler, Testament of Job, 23:3, p. 848: “Pay the price and take what you like.”

23 On the theme of divine testing in Job, and the book’s affinities with the story of the Fall, see T. N. D. Mettinger, Eden, pp. 54-58.

24 See Moses 4:5ff., 1:12-22; Matthew 4:1-11; Luke 4:1-13. For more on this topic, see J. M. Bradshaw et al., Satan.

25 D. E. Callender, Adam, pp. 2-4, 13-14, 67-84. Contrast A. G. Zornberg, Genesis, pp. 25, 27 regarding Torah at Creation.

26 See Endnote E-2, p. 702.

FIGURE E2-1. The Lord Answers Job from the Whirlwind, 1826
William Blake, 1757-1827

SEE COLOR PLATE E2-1.

*And behold, the glory of the Lord was upon Moses, so that Moses stood in the presence of God, and talked with him face to face.*¹ Like Job, each of us must eventually “see the face of God” and, seeing, either “live” or “die.”² As C. S. Lewis wrote: “In the twinkling of an eye, in a time too small to be measured, and in any place, all that seems to divide us from God can flee away, leaving us naked before Him, like the first man, like the only man, as if nothing but He and I existed. And since that contact cannot be avoided for long, and since it means either bliss or horror, the business of life is to learn to like it. That is the first and great commandment.”³

Blake’s depiction shows God surrounded by a concourse of angels. To Chrysostom, the cloud and whirlwind that came down on the mountain suggested that He “wanted to place heaven over Job as though setting His very throne near him.”⁴ Job looks up to converse with God face to face, while his friends lie prostrate in terror.⁵ In other versions of this drawing, Job is caught up with God in the circle, their identical faces mirroring one other in serene mutual regard. According to Fisch, the key to understanding the illustration is that “Man is about to take on the nature of God... For according to Blake’s radical reading of the Gospel, ...Man himself—not merely Jesus, but every man and woman—is potentially endowed with divine glory and even divine power! ...This is what Blake termed the religion of the Divine Humanity.”⁶ He expressed this thought in the couplet: “God becomes as we are, that we may be as he is.”⁷ Both William Blake and Joseph Smith, according to Harold Bloom, “sought to end the distinction between the human and the divine.”⁸

1 Moses 1:31.

2 Cf. Exodus 33:11/D&C 84:22 vs. JST Exodus 33:20. See P. J. Schakel, Reason, pp. 125-126, 197 n. 27.

3 C. S. Lewis, Dogma, p. 126.

4 J. Chrysostom, Job, 38:1, p. 186.

5 Job 38:1.

6 H. Fisch, Presence, pp. 310-312. “The ordinary educated modern person staring at these ‘Job’ designs can only say that God is a mere elderly twin brother of Job. Blake would have at once retorted that Job is an image of God” (G. K. Chesterton, William Blake, p. 149).

7 W. Blake, Natural Religion, p. 41; cf. G. B. Hinckley, Don’t Drop, p. 46; P. B. Munoa, Four Powers, p. 102; L. Snow, Teachings 1984, 15 June 1901, p. 1. See Endnote 2-28, p. 130. See also Introduction, pp. 10-11.

8 H. Bloom, Genius, p. 699.

... the exaltation of the wise man is a common motif... The wise man has knowledge of God, is a child/servant of the Lord, has God as his Father and, as God’s son, will receive help.²⁷ At the great judgment he will be exalted and take his place with the sons of God, the Holy Ones.²⁸ In 1 Enoch this pattern is applied to the Son of Man, the Elect One, or to the community of the righteous elect ones...²⁹ Wisdom was the secrets of creation, learned in heaven and brought to earth, the recurring theme of the apocalypses. There must have been some way in which the king, and the wise men, “went” to heaven like the prophets in order to learn these secrets by listening in the council of God³⁰ which compares the commandments favorably to something else, unspecified, which had to be brought from heaven by someone else.³¹

By piecing together the ancient sources,³² it can be surmised that the knowledge revealed to those made wise included an understanding of premortal life, the order of creation, and the eternal covenant³³—and it “provided a clue to the pattern and future destiny of the universe”³⁴ that “gave power over creation when used in conjunction with supernatural forces.”³⁵

27 S. Sandmel et al., Solomon, 2:12ff., pp. 98-99.

28 Ibid., 5:1ff., p. 100.

29 G. W. E. Nickelsburg et al., 1 Enoch, 46, 62-63, 104, pp. 59-60, 79-83, 161-163.

30 Job 15:8; Proverbs 30:1-4; cf. Deuteronomy 30:11-14.

31 M. Barker, Older, pp. 92, 95; cf. M. Barker, Great High Priest: Temple Roots, p. 343, n. 23.

32 See Endnote E-3, p. 702. See also, e.g., J. M. Bradshaw, Ezekiel.

33 M. Barker, Older, p. 82.

34 A. E. Harvey, Companion 2004, p. 533.

35 M. Barker, Older, p. 82; cf. JST Genesis 14:30-31.

Barker notes that the Messiah (= the anointed one) and the high priests who represented him in the temple figuratively received Wisdom as they were anointed with oil from the Tree of Life.³⁶ This Wisdom was brought:

... from heaven to earth, and the people knelt before him to receive it. This must underlie the now opaque lines in Proverbs 30:1-4, which have been reconstructed as [follows]:

For I surpass all men and have the discernment of Adam. God has surely given me Wisdom and I know the knowledge of the holy ones. Who has ascended to the clouds and come down, and who has gathered the wind in his fists? Who has caught up the waters in his garment and established the ends of the earth? What is his name and what is the name of his son? Surely, you know.

However the finer detail is reconstructed, the meaning is clear enough, as is the disordered state of the text. Given the tendencies of the second temple editors, the one undoubtedly explains the other. The messianic prophecy in Isaiah 11 must have had a similar setting: “The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and the fear of the Lord.”³⁷

Eventually, the Torah was substituted for the ancient concept of Wisdom:

[W]e have to ask what was meant by Deuteronomy 4:6, which seems to be saying that the Law was to function as the wisdom of the chosen people. Does this mean the central role of the Torah was formerly the role of wisdom? Deuteronomy, which is not noted for its toleration of foreign ways, is here finding a central place for something which we assume to have been foreign. Perhaps [the] Torah was being offered as a substitute for something in the older cult whose legitimacy they could not deny. Wisdom was an older form of communication between God and his people. Wisdom was something which the Deuteronomists reformed.³⁸

In his valuable chapter, Schäfer documents how the gift of prophecy was replaced during the Jewish exile by the concept of the Torah as Wisdom. Though the exact chronology varies, the “common denominator” for the set of dates given by the later rabbis is “guided by the conception that the cessation of prophecy was connected with the destruction of the First Temple.”³⁹ This transformation constituted “the replacement of the unpredictable voice of prophecy with the more manageable one of scholarship and bureaucratic precedent”.⁴⁰

The Written and Oral Torah are dependent on each other...; the Wisdom of the book pours itself into an abundance of teaching [epitomized by midrash] and has finally replaced prophecy. The rabbis of classical rabbinic Judaism have not only brought this idea to a grandiose fruition, they also have put themselves on top of it. They are the ones who in the end guarantee that the abundance of teaching is directed into the right channels, so to speak; that it does not flood—and destroy—everything.⁴¹

Ancient concepts of Wisdom find parallels elsewhere in the ancient Near East. For example, Egyptian ritual, once thought of as only intended for the dead, has increasingly been studied in terms of its use as an initiation of transfiguration for the living.⁴²

36 M. Barker, Angel Priesthood, p. 130.

37 Ibid., pp. 130-131.

38 M. Barker, Older, p. 83. See Figure 1-4, p. 35, Figure 5-11, p. 343 and Commentary 2:1-c, p. 93.

39 P. Schäfer, Torah as Wisdom, p. 28.

40 D. C. Peterson, Muhammad (2001), p. 598.

41 P. Schäfer, Torah as Wisdom, p. 34.

42 B. J. Petersen, Nibley, p. 369. See Endnote E-1, p. 702. J. D. G. Dunn et al., Commentary, p. 358 cites parallels between Egyptian ritual and Job 31. Excursus 6: The Authority and Power of Scripture, p. 531 further explores the relationship between the wisdom revealed through continuing revelation and its embodiment in scripture.

Excursus 3

Temple Blessings in the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood

CONTRARY to a common belief that the highest temple ordinances were not anticipated until the last few years of Joseph Smith's ministry, several references to temple-related concepts occur in his early revelations. Many of these ideas were not publicly explained by the Prophet until long after the time they were given to him. For example, three verses from the revelation on priesthood received on 22-23 September 1832 succinctly describe a definite sequence of promised blessings that were not fully bestowed upon the Saints until more than ten years later in Nauvoo:

And the sons of Moses and of Aaron shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, upon Mount Zion in the Lord's house, whose sons are ye; and also many whom I have called and sent forth to build up my church.

For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken, and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies.

They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom, and the elect of God.⁴³ whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods and the magnifying their calling. The higher ordinances of the temple are to be given only when the prerequisites of faithfulness here described have been met. The two priesthoods referred to, Aaronic and Melchizedek, are described in D&C 84:6-32.⁴⁴ Worthy women may, of course, receive temple blessings without priesthood ordination.

And the sons of Moses and of Aaron shall be filled with the glory of the Lord; ...in the Lord's house, whose sons are ye. The temple is the place where the Lord will bestow His glory upon the saints.

To magnify a calling means to faithfully perform the duties pertaining to it "with all diligence" and "by laboring with our might."⁴⁵ "When [a person] has proved himself by a worthy life, having been faithful in all things required of him, then it is his privilege to receive other covenants and to take upon himself other obligations."⁴⁶ This process continues until eventually, having received step-by-step all required ordinances and covenants, and having continued in faithfulness, that person will "receive of the Father's fulness and of his glory."⁴⁷ sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies. Since celestial personages are beings of both "spirit and element, inseparably connected,"⁴⁸ the promise of sanctification necessarily encompasses a renewal of the physical body. Explained Truman G. Madsen: "As Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations of the Mysteries, p. 663 discusses the relationship between Wisdom and ancient rites pertaining to the "mysteries of the kingdom." For additional discussion of the relationship between the law of Moses and the older Wisdom tradition, see R. Murphy, Wisdom, p. 21; P. Schäfer, Torah as Wisdom. For an in-depth survey of connections between the wisdom literature and the Book of Mormon, see K. Christensen, Temple, pp. 488-504. See also Commentary 1:31-d, p. 65; 2:1-c, p. 93; Figure 1-4, p. 35; Figure 5-11, p. 343.

43 D&C 84:33-34. Another example can be found in D&C 93:1. For an extended discussion of this revelation, see J. M. Bradshaw, Temple Themes in the Oath.

44 See S. B. Farley, Oath, pp. 221-222; J. F. Smith, Jr., Oath, p. 92.

45 Jacob 1:19; cf. Doctrine and Covenants Student Manual, p. 183.

46 J. F. Smith, Jr., Way 1945, 1931, p. 208.

47 Ibid.

48 D&C 93:33.

spirits, we are born of heavenly parentage. In the quickening processes of the temple we become Christ's—in mind, spirit, and body. Thus, when Joseph Smith first sent the Twelve to England he instructed them to teach: 'Being born again, comes by the Spirit of God through ordinances.'⁴⁹ Speaking of Christ as the prototype for all those who receive these ordinances, the Gospel of Philip expresses the same concept: "He who...[was begotten] before everything was begotten anew. He [who was] once [anointed] was anointed anew. He who was redeemed in turn redeemed (others)."⁵⁰

Anciently, this renewal was both symbolized and actualized when Aaron was "wash[ed]," "anoint[ed]," and clothed in "holy garments... so that he [might] minister unto [the Lord] in the priest's office,"⁵¹ thus recapitulating his foreordination to this calling.⁵² In premortal life, faithful women were also "given certain assignments" to be carried out later on earth.⁵³

As the Prophet Joseph Smith prayed for his friend Joseph Knight, Sr. that his "trembling, tortured, and broken body [might] be renewed" and restored to "the vigor of health,"⁵⁴ so one who has received the blessing of these temple rites might also hope in faith to be physically "quicken[ed], renew[ed], and strengthen[ed]."⁵⁵ The ultimate renewal of the body is, of course, the change that will take place for those found worthy to enter the celestial kingdom at the time of their resurrection.⁵⁶ However, there are also blessings of physical renewal that can be claimed in the here and now.⁵⁷ Sometimes, taught Joseph Smith, the receipt of these ordinances may produce a "visible effect"⁵⁸ on the individual.

sons of Moses and of Aaron. The promise of the renewing of the body mentioned in verse 33 includes being counted as part of God's chosen lineage, either literally or through "adoption."⁵⁹ "Sonship denotes belonging to a family and having certain rights as a member and as an heir."⁶⁰ Thus, as sons of Moses and Aaron, faithful priesthood holders have become rightful heirs to the blessings of the greater and the lesser priesthoods respectively.⁶¹ In similitude of Moses and Aaron, priesthood holders assist in gathering latter-day Israel and establishing them as a people of the Lord.⁶² They perform temple work wherein they "offer an acceptable offering and sacrifice in the house of the Lord."⁶³

The lesser priesthood, which was "confirmed... upon Aaron and his seed,"⁶⁴ "holdeth the key of the ministering of angels and the preparatory gospel."⁶⁵ The greater or Holy Priesthood

49 T. G. Madsen et al., House of Love, p. 48. See J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 2 July 1839, p. 162.

50 W. W. Isenberg, Philip, 70:36-71:3, p. 152. See Endnote E-4, p. 703.

51 Excursus 52: Washing, Anointing, and Clothing Among Early Christians, p. 661.

52 A poem by W. W. Phelps asserts that "[b]efore this world was known," certain spirits "were wash'd and set apart for the glory yet to be." He says they were also given a "white stone" with a "new name" (Deseret News, 6, 416, cited in T. G. Hatch, Visions, p. 230). See Endnote 4-9, p. 299. See also J. Smith, Jr., Words, 12 May 1844, p. 371; J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 12 May 1844, p. 365; Alma 13:1-8; cf. Moses 1:6; Abraham 3:23. See Endnote E-5, p. 704.

53 S. W. Kimball, Righteous Women, p. 102. See Emma Smith's blessing request, where she asked that she might live to "perform all the work that [she] covenanted to perform in the spirit-world" (G. N. Jones, Emma, p. 295).

54 J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 2 August 1842, 5:124.

55 O. Pratt, 9 March 1873, p. 365.

56 D&C 88:29. See the account of L. Snow, June 1846, cited in M. U. Beecher, Iowa, pp. 268-269.

57 See, e.g., D&C 84:80; B. K. Packer, Holy Temple, p. 154; H. B. Brown, Participation, p. 507; H. B. Eyring, Jr., Oath, p. 62; T. G. Madsen, Man Illumined, p. 311; M. G. Romney, Covenant, p. 98; B. Young, 29 June 1873, p. 123.

58 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 27 June 1839, p. 4.

59 See Endnote E-6, p. 704.

60 S. B. Farley, Oath, p. 223.

61 D&C 84:6, 18; Abraham 1:2.

62 D&C 84:2.

63 D&C 84:31-32.

64 D&C 84:18.

65 D&C 84:26.

“administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God.”⁶⁶ Moses sought unsuccessfully to prepare the children of Israel to receive the greater priesthood “that they might behold the face of God.”⁶⁷ Joseph Smith further explained: “All priesthood is Melchizedek; but there are different portions or degrees of it. That portion [i.e., the greater priesthood] which brought Moses to speak with God face to face was taken away [after the children of Israel rebelled in the wilderness;]⁶⁸ but that [lesser priesthood] which brought the ministry of angels remained.”⁶⁹

As a consequence of the greater priesthood being withheld from the children of Israel, His “holy order, and the ordinances thereof” that would have allowed them to have His “presence... in their midst”⁷⁰ were generally unavailable.⁷¹ Later, when the Mosaic Tabernacle was constructed, the high priest alone was authorized to pass through the veil and enter into the Lord’s presence in the Holy of Holies, and that only once a year. However, in New Testament times, and again in the latter days, the ordinances of the high priesthood have been made available to all who qualify themselves to receive them.⁷² seed of Abraham. Those who have become sons of Moses and of Aaron are eligible to receive the blessings of Abraham, as they are given in patriarchal marriage ordinances in the temple.⁷³

“Abraham received promises concerning his seed, and of the fruit of his loins... [that] both in the world and out of the world should they continue as innumerable as the stars... This promise is yours also, because ye are of Abraham...”⁷⁴ Of course, being a literal descendant of Abraham does not guarantee the fulfillment of these promises, as they are conditioned upon personal faithfulness to the covenants received: “they are not all Israel, which are of Israel: Neither, because they are all children of Abraham, are they the seed.... But the children of the promise are counted for the seed.”⁷⁵

“Elder McConkie noted that ‘what we say for Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob we say also for Sarah, Rebekah, and Rachel, the wives... who with them were true and faithful in all things,’⁷⁶ for, as President Joseph Fielding Smith taught, ‘the Lord offers to his daughters every spiritual gift and blessing that can be obtained by his sons.’”⁷⁷

the church and kingdom. The phrase “the church and kingdom” refers to the blessings belonging to one who is made a “king and a priest unto God, bearing rule, authority, and dominion under the Father.”⁷⁸ Correspondingly, women may likewise receive the 66 D&C 84:19. See discussion by Clark of how Abraham received the blessings of the priesthood, including the Patriarchal Priesthood (E. D. Clark, Blessings, pp. 81-85).

67 D&C 84:23.

68 JST Exodus 34:1-2.

69 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 5 January 1841, p. 59.

70 JST Exodus 34:1-2; cf. D&C 107:19.

71 See Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations of the Mysteries, p. 663.

72 J. Smith, Jr., Words, p. 305 n. 28.

73 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 27 August 1843, pp. 321-323.

74 D&C 132:30-31. For Goodenough’s relevant discussion of Philo’s allegorical views regarding Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, see E. R. Goodenough, Light, pp. 136-179 and E. R. Goodenough, Introduction to Philo, pp. 140-145.

75 JST Romans 9:6-8.

76 B. R. McConkie, Mothers, p. 37.

77 S. B. Farley, Oath, p. 225. See J. F. Smith, Jr., Magnifying, p. 66.

78 O. Hyde, Diagram, p. 23. See also D&C 76:56-59.

“confirmation of promises” that they “could become queens and priestesses in the eternal worlds.”⁷⁹

“Not all members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are members of the Church of the Firstborn⁸⁰ ...for, as Elder McConkie explained, ‘the Church of the Firstborn is made up of... those who are destined to be joint-heirs with Christ in receiving all that the Father hath.’”⁸¹ To merit these blessings, faithful priesthood holders must continue in righteousness until, in this life or the next, they are invited to receive additional ordinances, including the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood (or the “Holy Priesthood, after the order of the Son of God”⁸²), sometimes called the “second anointing.”⁸³

Differentiating the blessings of the fulness of the priesthood from the ones associated with Moses and Abraham, Ehat and Cook wrote that Abraham’s “Patriarchal Priesthood (the ordinances of the endowment and patriarchal marriage for time and eternity)... [is] not the same as the crowning ordinances of the Melchizedek Priesthood.”⁸⁴ The Prophet Joseph Smith explained that “Melchizedek... had still greater power... which was not the power of a Prophet nor Apostle nor Patriarch only, but of King and Priest to God.... No man can attain to the joint heirship with Jesus Christ without being administered to by one having the same power and authority of Melchizedek.”⁸⁵

The blessings of the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood, along with the keys to every other gospel ordinance, are confirmed upon the faithful through the power of Elijah, sealing in heaven what is sealed on earth.⁸⁶ Contrasting the role of the blessings of the Melchizedek Priesthood given through the “spirit of Elijah” to those of the Aaronic Priesthood bestowed through the preparatory “spirit of Elias,”⁸⁷ Joseph Smith said:

This power of Elijah is to that of Elias what, in the architecture of the temple of God, those who seal or cement the stone to their places are to those who cut or hew the stones—the one preparing the way for the other to accomplish the work. By this we are sealed with the Holy Spirit of Promise (i.e., Elijah).

To obtain this sealing is to make our calling and election sure, which we ought to give all diligence to accomplish.⁸⁸

the elect of God. The “elect” are those who not only have been “called”⁸⁹ but also—through their faithfulness—have been “chosen.”⁹⁰ They have had their calling and election made “sure”⁹¹ or, in other words, as a result of enduring to the end in faithfulness they have received the “more sure word of prophecy”⁹² from God Himself,⁹³ the assurance that they 79 G. M. Leonard, Nauvoo, pp. 260-261. See also W. W. Phelps in S. Brown, Paracletes, pp. 80-81.

80 D&C 76:54, 67, 71, 94. Contrast D&C 76:102.

81 S. B. Farley, Oath, p. 226. See B. R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, p. 139.

82 D&C 107:3.

83 J. F. Smith, Jr., Magnifying, pp. 65-66.

84 See J. Smith, Jr., Words, p. 303 n. 21.

85 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 27 August 1843, p. 245. See Endnote E-7, p. 704.

86 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 5 October 1840, p. 172; 10 March 1844, p. 338. See Endnote E-8, p. 705.

87 See Endnote E-9, p. 705.

88 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 10 March 1844, p. 335, modernized. The parenthetical “(i.e., Elijah)” is in the original.

89 D&C 84:33.

90 See Figure 5-13, p. 351.

91 2 Peter 1:10. See also D&C 53:1; B. M. Hauglid, Calling and Election.

92 2 Peter 1:17-19; D&C 131:5-6; cf. D&C 84:43; Moses 6:59.

93 D&C 84:47-48, 88:68, 132:49; J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 27 June 1839, pp. 150-151.

will receive the full blessings of the celestial kingdom forever and ever.⁹⁴ To each one will eventually be given a “white stone, whereon is a new name written, which no man knoweth save he that receiveth it. The new name is the key word.”⁹⁵

The assurance of the “more sure word of prophecy” comes only to those who have proven their determination to serve God “at all hazards.”⁹⁶ As Ehat and Cook explained: “Perhaps Abraham received the ‘anointing and sealing’ (the priesthood ordination of king and priest) under the hands of Melchizedek,⁹⁷ but the ‘election sure’—the absolute assurance of power in the priesthood—came directly from God only after Abraham indicated his willingness to sacrifice Isaac.”⁹⁸ Regarding the timing of this assurance for others besides Abraham, Robinson and Garrett write:⁹⁹

For most of the Saints, the fulfillment of God’s covenant promises will take place at the second coming of the Savior in the resurrection of the just. Some Saints [e.g., Abraham], however, are privileged to receive the unconditional promise of exaltation from the Lord’s own mouth¹⁰⁰ while they are still in mortality. Joseph Smith stated publicly that “to obtain a promise from God for myself that I shall have eternal life... is the more sure word of prophecy.”¹⁰¹ These individuals, such as the brother of Jared,¹⁰² have faith no longer (in the usual sense), for after receiving such a guarantee from the Lord, they subsequently know of themselves, nothing doubting.

The eventual fulfillment that follows the divine promise of election described above is called the “spirit of Messiah,” whereby the Savior was given “all power in heaven and in earth” and “enthroned in the heavens as King of kings and Lord of lords.”¹⁰³ That this blessing has already been extended to others besides Jesus Christ, who have also “kept their second estate,”¹⁰⁴ is attested by D&C 132:29, where the Lord told the Prophet Joseph Smith that “Abraham received all things... and hath entered into his exaltation and sitteth upon his throne.” Likewise, all men and women worthy of exaltation, those who are called “just men made perfect through Jesus,”¹⁰⁵ after they have finished their probationary labors, receive the “Father’s kingdom,” therefore “all that the Father hath” is given to them:¹⁰⁶ “Then shall they be gods, because they have no end; therefore shall they be from everlasting to everlasting, because they continue; then shall they be above all, because all things are subject unto them. Then shall they be gods, because they have all power, and the angels are subject unto them.”¹⁰⁷ This is the complete fulfillment of the promise of being “endowed with power from on high.”¹⁰⁸

94 D&C 132:26. See B. R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, pp. 109-110. See Endnote E-10, p. 705.

95 D&C 130:11; cf. Revelation 2:17. See Endnote E-11, p. 706. See also Commentary 1:27-b, p. 62; 3:19-b, p. 177; Figure 4-4, p. 219. See Endnote 4-9, p. 299. See Endnote 4-22, p. 304. See Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations, Cista Mystica, p. 679.

96 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 27 June 1839, p. 150.

97 Genesis 14:17-24 and JST Genesis 14:25-40. See E. D. Clark, Blessings, pp. 135-139.

98 J. Smith, Jr., Words, p. 305 n. 29. See also J. Lane, Redemption; J. Smith, Jr., Words, p. 302 n. 8.

99 S.E. Robinson et al., D&C Commentary, 4:238.

100 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 27 June 1839, p. 5. See also J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 1 May 1842, 4:608; cf. Luke 24:36-40; 2 Nephi 31:20; Enos 1:27; Hymns (1985), #134: “His voice is heard: ‘Ye shall obtain.’” See Endnote E-11, p. 706.

101 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 21 May 1843, p. 209.

102 Ether 3:19.

103 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 10 March 1844, p. 336. See Matthew 28:18; Revelation 17:14, 19:16. Hauglid mistakenly identifies the “spirit of Messiah” as the divine promise of election rather than as its eventual fulfillment (see B. M. Hauglid, Calling and Election, p. 214). The distinction is made more clear in the account of Joseph Smith’s discourse in Words cited here than in the version in Teachings that he references.

104 See Abraham 3:26.

105 D&C 76:69; cf. Hebrews 12:23. See H. W. Attridge, Hebrews, p. 376; S. E. Robinson et al., D&C Commentary, 2:310-311. See Endnote 0-23, p. 24.

106 D&C 84:38.

107 D&C 132:20; cf. J. Smith, Jr., Words, 10 March 1844, p. 336.

108 D&C 38:32; R. L. Bushman, Rough Stone, pp. 156-157, 175, 204-205, 216-217, 308-321, 387-388, 450-452.

Excursus 4

Chance and Purpose in Creation

TO what extent does our study of the universe make it evident that the requirements for human habitation figured in God's plans for the creation of the physical universe? Reflections by scientists and philosophers over the past several decades have led to widespread acknowledgment of the "anthropic principle" which, roughly stated, says that "we see the universe the way it is, at least in part, because we exist."¹⁰⁹ In other words, our existence as human beings would be impossible if the universe were different in certain key ways.

In its most common forms, the anthropic principle should not be confounded with the more specific and controversial claims of the "intelligent design" movement.¹¹⁰ However, the principle does suggest to believers that some basic features of the universe required for our existence were anticipated by the Creator from the beginning.¹¹¹ Davies, who accepts a relatively strong version of the anthropic principle but not a personal God, writes: "Far from exposing human beings as incidental products of blind physical forces, science suggests that the existence of conscious organisms is a fundamental feature of the universe. We have been written into the laws of nature in a deep and, I believe, meaningful way."¹¹² With characteristic hyperbole, Nibley rhapsodizes: "Not long ago we used to laugh our heads off at the idea that God created the stars and their motions for the benefit of puny man. Today the shoe is on the other foot. Now we are asked to believe how the unimaginable raging forces of the universe, completely uncontrolled and undirected, should zero in on this little planet with nothing but the most benevolent results, adjusting a score of fine-tuned constants to each other with unerring accuracy."¹¹³

Can similar arguments be made with respect to biological development? Scientists who accept the standard view that the structural features of living things arise through the mechanisms of random mutation followed by natural selection typically see no role for divine direction in the process of common descent. However, some believing advocates of evolution who want to leave room for participation by God in the process (as well as some nonbelievers) seek ways to explain how certain events that seem randomly determined could nonetheless be controlled in some fashion to produce predictable results, resulting in a world where natural selection is not the "exclusive driving force" for biological development.¹¹⁴ For example, Stephens points to research results indicating that evolutionary development is not exclusively "the result of genetic control but of genes interacting with material or design constraints," allowing "plenty of room for God to operate with predictability within evolution's bounded variation."¹¹⁵ In other words, there may be yet undiscovered laws of nature that constrain development to the extent that the mortal human form is inevitable—complete with seemingly imperfect adaptations such as blind spots, wisdom teeth, and the 109 S. Hawking, Nutshell, p. 86.

110 See Excursus 5: Science and Mormonism, p. 526.

111 See Endnote E-12, p. 706.

112 P. Davies, Mind, p. 21. For a very readable exposition of these ideas, see P. Davies, Goldilocks.

113 H. W. Nibley, Drama, p. 32.

114 O. Gingerich, Universe, p. 98. See E. Jablonka et al., Evolution for a discussion of new findings in molecular biology that point to mechanisms of adaptation that go beyond natural selection of chance DNA variations. See J. B. Cobb, Jr., Back to Darwin, especially pp. 311-411, for a respectful and well-reasoned discussion about various approaches for integrating evolution and religious thinking.

115 T. D. Stephens et al., Evolution, p. 200. See also S. C. Morris, Solution; T. D. Stephens, Tree of Life.

appendix. However, the jury is still out on whether such constraints in and of themselves are sufficient to completely specify the outcome of evolution.¹¹⁶

Others are exploring ways in which evidence for quantum chance as a fundamental property of the universe (e.g., Bell's Theorem, which seems to have provided a refutation of Einstein's famous conviction that "God does not play dice with the universe"¹¹⁷) could still allow for the possibility of Divine intervention,¹¹⁸ whether it be "preferred pathways for random chance to follow"¹¹⁹ or direct guidance of some of the seemingly random events "without requiring a locality-violating physical signal."¹²⁰ This being said, Gingerich argues that evidence for Divine intervention of this sort seems inevitably beyond the ken of science—though fortunately, however, such assumptions are ultimately irrelevant to the way science is conducted:

One can believe that some of the evolutionary pathways are so intricate and so complex as to be hopelessly improbable by the rules of random chance, but if you do not believe in divine action, then you will simply have to say that random chance was extremely lucky, because the outcome is there to see. Either way, the scientist with theistic metaphysics will approach laboratory problems in much the same way as will his atheistic colleague across the hall. And probably both will approach some of the astonishing adaptations seen in nature with a sense of surprise, wonder, and mystery.¹²¹

116 T. Butler, 2 October 2006.

117 See W. Isaacson, Einstein, pp. 326, 335.

118 T. Butler, 2 October 2006; K. W. Giberson, Saving Darwin, p. 220; F. B. Salisbury, Divine Design.

119 O. Gingerich, Universe, p. 119.

120 P. Dowe, Galileo, p. 186.

121 O. Gingerich, Universe, pp. 101-102. See Endnote E-13, p. 707. For a brief and highly readable summary of the debate surrounding various views concerning the anthropic principle and its implications for the nature and existence of God, see P. Dowe, Galileo, pp. 148-169.

Excursus 5

Science and Mormonism

SCIENCE and Mormonism have nearly always been on very friendly terms, with Church members sharing the deep conviction that, as expressed by former scientist and apostle Elder James E. Talmage, “within the gospel of Jesus Christ there is room and place for every truth thus far learned by man, or yet to be made known.”¹²² With respect to the idea that the Church is required to welcome religious and moral truth from all sources, President Brigham Young stated:

“Mormonism”... embraces every principle pertaining to life and salvation... no matter who has it. If the [unbeliever] has got truth, it belongs to “Mormonism.” The truth and sound doctrine possessed by [other churches], and they have a great deal, all belong to this Church... All that is good, lovely, and praiseworthy belongs to this Church... “Mormonism” includes all truth. There is no truth but what belongs to the Gospel.¹²³

With specific regard to scientific truth, President Young’s approach was no less open and all-embracing. As Barlow summarizes:

Brigham Young’s position was in one sense more “liberal” even than that of [many contemporaries]. Not a scholar himself and easily put off by what he saw as scholars’... pretentious ways, Young still wished to distance the Mormon response to science from what he took to be the common Christian reaction. Widespread infidelity in the world did not surprise him, he said, because religious teachers often advanced notions “in opposition to... facts demonstrated by science,” making it difficult for honest, informed people to embrace the claims of religion. Geology, to take a specific instance, “is a true science; not that I would say for a moment that all the conclusions and deductions of its professors are true, but its leading principles are; they are facts...” “[Our] geologists... tell us that this earth has been in existence for thousands and millions of years... [and Mormonism] differ[s] from the Christian world, for our religion will not clash with the facts of science.”¹²⁴

Moreover, President Young said:

The idea that the religion of Christ is one thing, and science is another, is a mistaken idea, for there is no true religion without true science, and consequently there is no true science without true religion.¹²⁵

Subsequent Presidents and General Authorities of the Church have advanced similar views about the ultimate compatibility of religious and scientific truths and, with notably few exceptions, have maintained markedly positive attitudes toward both the methods and conclusions of mainstream science and the advance of modern technology. A barometer for the positive attitude toward science among the membership of the Church has been a series of studies over the last several decades documenting numbers of scientists with backgrounds in different faith groups. For example, LDS historian of science Erich Paul noted:

... a 1974 article appearing in Science—published by the largest scientific society in America, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and, along with the British journal Nature, certainly the most influential science magazine—reported that Mormonism had ¹²² J. E. Talmage, Earth and Man, p. 252.

¹²³ B. Young, 8 April 1867, p. 375; B. Young, Discourses, p. 3.

¹²⁴ P. L. Barlow, Bible, pp. 90-91. See B. Young, 14 May 1871, pp. 115-117.

¹²⁵ B. Young, 3 May 1874, p. 52.

produced more scientists per capita than virtually all religious movements in twentieth-century America.¹²⁶ Although there are social, religious, and theological reasons for this mostly supportive relationship, the facts strongly indicate that Mormonism and at least science as philosophy are basically non-combative.¹²⁷

A more recent study reported that in the 1990 listing of 120,000 American Men and Women of Science, “Utah stood 21 percent above the second place state, which was Delaware.”¹²⁸ This was despite the fact that there were more Mormon scientists outside of Utah and Idaho than inside, that practicing Mormons no longer constitute the majority population in Utah, and that there has been an increase in the overall orthodoxy of Mormon scientists.¹²⁹

Such findings about LDS scientists are consistent with other studies affirming an exceptional proportion of Mormons in American university faculties across all disciplines. A major survey published in 2007 reported that while non-LDS “Christians are underrepresented among faculty,” Mormons are “overrepresented compared to the general public.”¹³⁰

Although the reasons for the attraction of science and academia for members of the Church have not been adequately studied, BYU professor and administrator Noel B. Reynolds offers one opinion:

In spite of occasional eruptions of anti-intellectualism in the LDS community, the long-term reality has been that Mormons, perhaps more than any other religious group, seek and respect learning.¹³¹ Joseph Smith set the example himself, establishing schools for adults and studying biblical languages. The LDS community has always produced far more than its share of highly educated people.... [and in the LDS community] the more educated a person is, the more likely he or she is to be fully observant and faithful.¹³²

There may be good reasons for this surprising characteristic of the Latter-day Saints. Mormonism is a religion of both the spirit and the intellect. Mormon missionaries tell their investigators that they have answers to the great human questions. Conversion stories are always stories of learning and inspiration... Mormonism is not a religion that tells its members they have no right to know the divine mysteries.¹³³ Rather, it tells them to seek knowledge of all things. There is nothing that God is not willing to reveal to his children, even to the point of showing himself to them on special occasions.

Nor are Mormons taught to be irrational or to despise logic in their understanding of the divine. From Joseph Smith to the present prophets, the Saints have always been urged to grasp a grand and coherent vision of themselves and their relationship to God. They are urged to acknowledge contradictions in their own lives and beliefs and to reconcile themselves to the full set of gospel truths. Latter-day Saints learn early that the Spirit can be their most valuable asset in this great quest, and that there is no true opposition between mind and spirit. The two must function harmoniously together to reach fully satisfying truth.

It would be fair to say that Latter-day Saints see themselves as both prophets and intellectuals. They depend daily on spiritual guidance, and they treasure deeply the understanding of God and his world that they have been given. They feel responsible to search the scriptures as a means of strengthening their spirits and their understandings simultaneously. They are 126 K. R. Hardy, Origins.

127 E. R. Paul, Science, pp. 6-7.

128 R. T. Wooton, Saints, p. 58.

129 See Endnote E-14, p. 707.

130 G. A. Tobin et al., Religious Beliefs, p. 20. See Endnote E-15, p. 707.

131 See Endnote E-16, p. 708.

132 See Endnote E-17, p. 708.

133 See Endnote E-18, p. 708.

suspicious of people who seem to emphasize one of these sources of knowledge to the neglect of the other.¹³⁴ Both are God-given, and both are necessary for a fulness of life.

The testimony that individual Latter-day Saints bear of the truthfulness of the Church and the Book of Mormon, as well as the other revelations of Joseph Smith is highly personal. The mind and spirit of a man or woman are finally quite private in their innermost workings. Each person must come to that mix of understanding and spiritual assurance that he or she finds adequate. There is nothing that others can hand out off a shelf that will do the job. It requires personal inquiry, reflection, prayer, and openness to God's revelations.¹³⁵

With respect to the creation account in Genesis, the Latter-day Saints have avoided some of the serious clashes with science that have troubled other religious traditions. For example, they have no serious quarrel with the concept of a very old earth whose "days" of creation seem to have been of very long, overlapping, and varying duration.¹³⁶ With respect to beliefs about the origin of man, Sorenson emphasizes the point that acceptance of essential doctrinal claims rather than belief in a particular modus operandi for the creation of man is ultimately the determinant of Mormon orthodoxy:

While the current state of revealed truth on the LDS doctrine of man's origin may permit some differences of opinion concerning the relationship of science and religion, it clearly affirms that God created man, that the Fall of Adam was foreknown of God and was real and significant, and that the Atonement of Christ was foreordained and necessary to reverse the effects of the Fall. Perhaps because these claims embrace the main doctrinal issues relevant to the condition of man, the description of the actual creation process does not receive much attention from the general membership of the Church or from the authorities.¹³⁷

There are other indicators of LDS moderation on these potentially divisive issues. For example, while the issue of how school teachers should handle questions about the origin of man has occasionally surfaced in public discussion, Utah and other states with large LDS populations have wisely refrained from embracing creationist agendas in their science curricula. Consistent with this stance, LDS scientist David Bailey has very competently summarized scientific inadequacies and theological incompatibilities of the creationist movement in both its "young earth" and "intelligent design" forms.¹³⁸ No matter how well-intentioned, Gingerich insightfully observes that intelligent design is "misguided when presented as an alternative to the naturalistic explanations offered by science, which do not explicitly require the hand of God... This does not mean that the universe is actually godless, just that science within its own framework has no other way of working."¹³⁹ He characterizes the universe in which we live as one "... where God can play an interactive role unnoticed by science, but not excluded by science."¹⁴⁰ Similarly, BYU Philosophy Professor James Faulconer argues that although scientists need not take a strictly scientific attitude except when they are explicitly doing science, the "scientific region, the region in which one investigates bodies using the assumptions, methods, and background of science, is necessarily godless. Scientific objects, themselves 'impoverished' or abstracted objects, 134 See, e.g., D&C 88:118.

135 N. B. Reynolds, Preface, p. xi.

136 See the overview of Moses 2, p. 84 and Commentary 2:5-e, p. 103.

137 J. L. Sorenson, Origin, p. 1053. See Endnote E-19, p. 709.

138 D. H. Bailey, Mormonism; D. H. Bailey, Deceiver; D. H. Bailey, Latter-day; D. H. Bailey, Church and Evolution; D. H. Bailey, What's Wrong. See Endnote E-20, p. 709.

139 O. Gingerich, Universe, p. x.

140 Ibid., p. 111.

incarnate the work and understanding of that region. Other objects incarnate other regions and orderings.”¹⁴¹ Continuing, he explains:

This is not to criticize scientists for that attitude or to suggest that God ought to be part of science. A great many other important things also do not exist in a world inhabited scientifically, things such as morality and value or, of less consequence, good taste in food or clothing. That absence is the consequence of the specialized incarnation required of science and is only a problem if scientists (or more often those who idolize science because they know too little of it) forget that such a specialized incarnation is not the only one, the best one, or the final one.¹⁴²

Even some of the most doubting of scientists have stated their willingness to keep their mind open to the possibility of a God—so long as it is a God “worthy of [the] grandeur”¹⁴³ of the Universe. For example, the well-known skeptic Richard Dawkins stated: “If there is a God, it’s going to be a whole lot bigger and a whole lot more incomprehensible than anything that any theologian of any religion has ever proposed.”¹⁴⁴ Similarly, Elder Neal A. Maxwell approvingly quoted the unbelieving scientist Carl Sagan, noting that he:

... perceptively observed that “in some respects, science has far surpassed religion in delivering awe. How is it that hardly any major religion has looked at science and concluded, ‘This is better than we thought! The Universe is much bigger than our prophets said—grander, more subtle, more elegant. God must be even greater than we dreamed’? Instead, they say, ‘No, no, no! My god is a little god, and I want him to stay that way.’ A religion, old or new, that stressed the magnificence of the Universe as revealed by modern science might be able to draw forth reserves of reverence and awe hardly tapped by the conventional faiths. Sooner or later, such a religion will emerge.”¹⁴⁵

The characteristic of awe mentioned by Sagan—so vital to the pursuit of knowledge in both science and religion—has been equated by Elder Maxwell with the scriptural term “meekness.”¹⁴⁶ Among other things, an attitude of meekness requires moving forward according to the best of our knowledge while simultaneously recognizing the provisional nature of our current understanding.¹⁴⁷ Indeed, it is because of the limits of our knowledge that we court danger when we try to effect a premature reconciliation of scientific and religious issues. BYU emeritus Professor of Physics and Astronomy B. Kent Harrison wisely wrote:

Some disagreements [between science and religion] are inevitable because our knowledge is incomplete. But we believe in a unified truth and so we eventually expect agreement. It is tempting to seek agreement now. *However, it is inappropriate, and often dangerous, to attempt a premature reconciliation or conflicting ideas where there is a lack of complete knowledge.*¹⁴⁸ If a scientist concludes that there is no God—based on inadequate evidence!—and thereby casts doubt on those who believe in God, he does them a disservice. For example, it is inappropriate for a scientist who accepts organic evolution to claim that there is no God. (However, many scientists do indeed take the position that they cannot comment on religious truth because they have little or no information on it.)

141 J. E. Faulconer, Incarnation, p. 41.

142 Ibid., p. 59. See also F. J. Ayala, Darwin’s Gift, pp. 171–202; M. Heidegger, Technology, pp. 115–182.

143 R. Dawkins in D. Van Biema, God vs. Science, p. 55.

144 In ibid. See Endnote E-21, p. 710.

145 Cited in N. A. Maxwell, Cosmos, p. 1. See Endnote E-22, p. 710.

146 N. A. Maxwell, Disciple-Scholar, pp. 14–18. See Endnote E-23, p. 710.

147 See Endnote E-24, p. 710.

148 See Endnote E-25, p. 710.

Similarly, if an ecclesiastic states that such and such a scientific idea is not true—based on inadequate evidence!—then he does a disservice to the scientist who has carefully explored that idea. As a hypothetical example, it would be inappropriate for a church authority to make a flat statement that special relativity is invalid because it limits information transmission such as prayer to the very slow (!) speed of electromagnetic waves. It may later turn out to be invalid in some sense, but current experimental and other considerations support it strongly.¹⁴⁹

The proper stance, it seems, is to withhold judgment on such questions until we have more information¹⁵⁰—but also to take advantage of what knowledge we do have.¹⁵¹

Some take the fact that science reverses its positions from time to time as a disturbing thing. On the contrary, I feel that we should take such events as encouraging news. In this regard, I side with those who locate the rationality of science not in the assertion that its theories are erected upon a consistent foundation of undeniable facts, but rather in the idea that it is at heart a self-correcting enterprise that can put any of its claims in jeopardy—though, of course, not all at once.¹⁵²

The most effective scientists move forward by adopting a given way of understanding their domain of interest, not simply because they might feel “justified” by the best available evidence in doing so, but more fundamentally because in actual practice the most effective means of investigation available is to commit oneself to a position and then, from that vantage point, to explore its consequences thoroughly.¹⁵³ We put on our chosen perspectives like a pair of glasses, and then try them out for a while to see if our capacities both for navigation and for additional discovery have increased.¹⁵⁴ In this way, scientific theory becomes useful not merely as a picture of reality but, more importantly for the ongoing process, as “a device for the attainment or formulation of greater knowledge about it.”¹⁵⁵ This requires one to embrace not only the question “How do we know our hypotheses are correct?” but also “How can we, to the greatest possible degree, expose our hypotheses to the light of experience in order to evaluate and refine them as thoroughly as possible?” Relative to this point, Hugh Nibley has written that the aim of honest scholarly discussion should be “to talk about the material at hand, hoping that in the course of the discussion every participant will privately and inwardly form, reform, change, or abandon his opinions... and thereby move in the direction of greater light and knowledge.”¹⁵⁶ Speaking about religious matters, the Apostle Paul succinctly expressed a similar idea: “Prove [i.e., examine, put to the test] all things; hold fast that which is good.”¹⁵⁷

149 See Endnote E-26, p. 711.

150 See Endnote E-27, p. 711.

151 B. K. Harrison, Truth, pp. 153-154.

152 G. Bateson, Mind, p. 216; G. Bateson et al., Angels, pp. 36-49; W. Weimer, Notes, pp. 47-49.

153 W. Weimer, Notes, p. 49.

154 Ibid., pp. 72-74.

155 A. Kaplan, Inquiry, p. 286. See Endnote E-28, p. 711.

156 H. W. Nibley, Since, p. xiv; cf. W. Weimer, Notes, pp. 78-86. See also M. J. Mahoney, Scientist, pp. 195-220.

157 1 Thessalonians 5:21. Representative works for understanding the broader history and the wide-ranging and complex sets of assumptions involved in recent debates about religion and science include D. N. Brems, Divine Engineering; A. R. Buskirk, Science; F. S. Collins, Language; G. Consolmagno, God's Mechanics; P. Dowe, Galileo; A. Flew, There Is; K. W. Giberson, Saving Darwin; O. Gingerich, Universe; K. R. Miller, Darwin's God; J. P. Moreland et al., Views; R. L. Numbers, Creationists; M. Ruse, Evolution-Creation. Walker provides a discussion of prominent works by proponents of scientific atheism from an LDS point of view (S. C. Walker, Selling).

Excursus 6

The Authority and Power of Scripture

THERE are few other branches of Christianity that revere Holy Scripture as do the Latter-day Saints. Yet, paradoxically, there is no other Christian faith that has felt such liberty—or rather such necessity—to continually add to and even revise it.¹⁵⁸ This is because Latter-day Saints are not fundamentally a “People of the Book” but instead a “People of Continuing Revelation.”¹⁵⁹ In other words, not only do they subscribe to the idea of an expanded canon through the acceptance of three additional books of scripture besides the Bible, but also to the concept of an open and unended one,¹⁶⁰ regarding efforts to “harden on the all-sufficiency or only-sufficiency of any part of scripture” as tantamount “to prais[ing] the cup and reject[ing] the fountain.”¹⁶¹ Thus, members of the Church hold that sacred texts are not only always open to the rendering of a “plainer translation,”¹⁶² but also to the possibility of significant expansion and elaboration by the current President of the Church.¹⁶³ The priority of prophetic prerogative over the authority of any written text is expressed by Elder Orson F. Whitney as follows:

No book presides over this Church and no book lies at its foundation. You cannot pile up books enough to take the place of God’s priesthood inspired by the power of the Holy Ghost.... No man ought to contend for what is in the books, in the face of God’s mouthpiece, who speaks for him and interprets his word. To so contend is to defer to the dead letter in preference to the living oracles, which is always a false position.¹⁶⁴

Of course this understanding does not presume a contest between scripture, on the one hand, and the direction of the leaders of the Church, on the other, for when living prophets speak under inspiration, their words become a part of scripture itself. Thus, in former times, wrote the Apostle Peter, scripture was the result of a process whereby “holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost”¹⁶⁵ and, as long as the Holy Ghost can so operate, scripture will continue to come forth by the same means.¹⁶⁶ Elaborating on this principle, a revelation to Joseph Smith in 1831 stated:

2 And, behold, and lo, this is an ensample unto all those who were ordained unto this priesthood, whose mission is appointed unto them to go forth—

3 ... that they shall speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost.

4 And whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost shall be scripture, shall be the will of the Lord, shall be the mind of the Lord, shall be the word of the Lord, shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation.¹⁶⁷

Hence, to Latter-day Saints, a closed and immutable canon is inconsistent with the idea of God’s continuing revelation, as expressed in the ninth Article of Faith: “We believe in all that ¹⁵⁸ See Endnote E-29, p. 711.

¹⁵⁹ D. H. Oaks, Scripture Reading, p. 7. See Excursus 49: The People of the Book, p. 651.

¹⁶⁰ 2 Nephi 29:3–14; A. B. Morrison, Canon, pp. 3–4.

¹⁶¹ T. G. Madsen, Essay, p. xf. See Endnote E-30, p. 712.

¹⁶² D&C 128:18.

¹⁶³ J. F. Smith, Gospel Doctrine, 1902, pp. 36–37.

¹⁶⁴ O. F. Whitney, 7 October 1916, pp. 55–56. See Endnote E-31, p. 712.

¹⁶⁵ 2 Peter 1:20.

¹⁶⁶ See Endnote E-32, p. 712.

¹⁶⁷ D&C 68:2–4. See Endnote E-33, p. 712.

God has revealed, all that he does now reveal, and we believe that he will yet reveal many great and important things pertaining to the kingdom of God.”¹⁶⁸ Thus, President Spencer W. Kimball affirmed that “revelation continues and that the vaults and files of the Church contain these revelations which come month to month and day to day.”¹⁶⁹

To Richard Bushman, this principle of continuing revelation constitutes “Joseph Smith’s significance for our time”:

He stood on the contested ground where the Enlightenment and Christianity confronted one another, and his life posed the question, Do you believe God speaks? Joseph was swept aside, of course, in the rush of ensuing intellectual battles and was disregarded by the champions of both great systems, but his mission was to hold out for the reality of divine revelation and establish one small outpost where that principle survived. Joseph’s revelatory principle is not a single revelation serving for all time, as the Christians of his time believed regarding the incarnation of Christ, nor a mild sort of inspiration seeping into the minds of all good people, but specific, ongoing directions from God to his people. At a time when the origins of Christianity were under assault by the forces of Enlightenment rationality, Joseph Smith returned modern Christianity to its origins in revelation.¹⁷⁰

Ellis Rivkin, speaking from the tradition of Reformed Judaism, eloquently expressed his inability to accept the versions of Christianity that he had encountered precisely because of their rejection of the idea that revelation continues. Though his characterization of the term “revelation” is very broad, his words echo themes to which the hearts of believing Latter-day Saints could enthusiastically warm:

I did not become a Christian because to have done so would have deprived me of the revelations that preceded the rise of Christianity and the revelations that were to follow. I would have cut myself off from a divine odyssey that reaches back to the Patriarchs and reaches forward to the Messianic Age, an odyssey of a people ever searching for the fullness of God... For what we find spread before us is a record of continuous revelation to and through the Jews—revelations through prophets, through books, through Scribes-Pharisees, through philosophers, through Christ-Jesus, through rationalists, through kabbalists, through charismatics, through Reformers, and even through Jewish secularists and nationalists....

The Jewish people [are] thus very much alive today for, it seems to me, their divine odyssey is not yet at an end. Humankind has still not recognized that God is One, that His Universe is a good one, and that every individual is created in His image and after His likeness. The end of days, which the prophets preached, is still far off. The meaning of the Jewish odyssey has yet to be assimilated. Paradise has not yet been regained. A re-genesis still eludes us. The need of Israel for multiple revelations is still manifest to those Jews, like myself, who see and feel this need. This, then, explains how I, a Jew, can look at the New Testament and read it as a record of a revelation-mutation and yet not become a Christian. For whereas a true Christian is totally fulfilled in Christ and needs no other revelation, I cannot be so fulfilled. I cannot be so fulfilled because I have become convinced that so long as God reveals himself through human instruments, every revelation is partial.¹⁷¹ I therefore feel the need for all the revelations that were given to Israel in the past, all the revelations that are being given to Israel in the present, and all the revelations that may be given to Israel in the future until the ushering in of the Messianic Age gives us, at long last, the fulness of God.¹⁷² Convinced that until the end of days the divine light will always be refracted through human prisms and convinced at the same time

168 See Endnote E-34, p. 713.

169 S. W. Kimball, Revelation, p. 78.

170 R. L. Bushman, Twenty-First Century, p. 274.

171 Cf. 1 Corinthians 13:9-10, 12; D&C 1:24.

172 Cf. Articles of Faith 1:9.

that the divine light will always be straining to break through, I do not wish to have the light streaming toward me and yet see it not.¹⁷³

While the gift of prophecy is to be coveted by every follower of Christ,¹⁷⁴ the living Prophet and, to a more limited degree, the General Authorities of the Church ultimately bear the responsibility of speaking for the Church as a whole.¹⁷⁵ “That is not to say, of course,” clarifies Elder Alexander B. Morrison, “that every word the Brethren speak is scripture.”¹⁷⁶ President J. Reuben Clark taught that all Church members and officers, including the General Authorities:

... must act and teach subject to the overall power and authority of the President of the Church... Sometimes in the past they have spoken “out of turn,” so to speak... [Even] the President of the Church, himself, may not always be “moved upon by the Holy Ghost,” when he addresses the people.¹⁷⁷ This has happened about matters of doctrine (usually of a highly speculative character) where subsequent Presidents of the Church and the people themselves have felt that in declaring the doctrine, the announcer was not “moved upon by the Holy Ghost.” How shall the Church know...? The Church will know by the testimony of the Holy Ghost in the body of the members,... and in due time that knowledge will be made manifest.¹⁷⁸

“In a way,” said President Clark, “this completely shifts the responsibility from them to us to determine when they so speak.”¹⁷⁹

Of course, the prerogative to speak by the power of the Holy Ghost is not reserved for a select few. In fact, Mormons would readily assent to Moses’ response to the complaint that some in the camp of Israel were seen prophesying: “... would God that all the Lord’s people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his spirit upon them!”¹⁸⁰ As non-Mormon anthropologist Mark P. Leone observes, this fact runs counter to public stereotype:

Mormonism is almost always characterized as hierarchical, authoritarian, and literalistic; frequently it is likened in organization and dogmatic rigidity to the Roman Catholic church. But these represent the surface, not the core, of contemporary Mormonism. At the heart of Mormonism is a continuous revision of meaning by the individual believer, a process facilitated by the immediacy and availability of revelation and the freedom to discuss all religious topics in the conviction that all can be equally well understood.... Mormonism has evolved a do-it-yourself theology which makes the growth of professional theologians impossible as well as unnecessary. A group of professional theologians would be a disadvantage to Mormonism: they would clash with a population of the faithful charged with the same tasks. Even more fundamental, a formal theology would centralize the creed and rigidify the doctrinal base of faith.... Mormonism publicly proclaims the duty of every member of the church to flesh out the bones of the faith for himself.¹⁸¹

The “do-it-yourself” tradition observed by Leone was encouraged by Joseph Smith, who intensely disliked being “bound up by... creeds,”¹⁸² saying:

173 E. Rivkin, Jesus, pp. 148, 150-151. See also J. Pelikan, Whose Bible, pp. 69-86. For a valuable study on the indispensability of continuing revelation, see H. W. Nibley, Prophets.

174 See, e.g., Numbers 11:29; Revelation 19:10.

175 A. B. Morrison, Canon, pp. 8-10.

176 Ibid., p. 4.

177 See Endnote E-35, p. 713.

178 J. R. Clark, Jr., Writings, pp. 101-102.

179 Ibid., p. 96.

180 Numbers 11:29. See D. H. Oaks, Revelation; D. H. Oaks, Personal World.

181 M. P. Leone, Roots, pp. 171-172. See Endnote E-36, p. 713.

182 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, September 1835, p. 100.

I cannot believe in any of the creeds of the different denominations, because they all have some things in them I cannot subscribe to, though all of them have some truth. I want to come up into the presence of God, and learn all things; but the creeds set up stakes, and say, "Hitherto shalt thou come, and no further"; which I cannot subscribe to.¹⁸³

Once, when a member of the Church was criticized for his sermon, the Prophet Joseph responded:

I did not like the old man being called up for erring in doctrine. It looks too much like the Methodists,¹⁸⁴ and not like the Latter-day Saints. Methodists have creeds which a man must believe or be asked out of their church. I want the liberty of thinking and believing as I please. It feels so good not to be trammelled. It does not prove that a man is not a good man because he errs in doctrine.¹⁸⁵

Brigham Young likewise saw dangers in the extremes of conformity: "There is too much of a sameness in this community.... I am not a stereotyped Latter-day Saint and do not believe in the doctrine... away with stereotyped Mormons."¹⁸⁶

Today, the Church continues to resist "the replacement of the unpredictable voice of prophecy with the more manageable one of scholarship and bureaucratic precedent,"¹⁸⁷ and eschews the notion that credentials in professional theology are necessary for Church leaders. "Theology," writes F. E. Peters, 'discourse about God according to the principles of reason, was the invention of a people without benefit of revelation.... [Theology] tames prophecy, manages it, and most often, worships at its tomb.'¹⁸⁸

The incremental process by which revelation is received accounts for the way the body of scripture has been collected into the canonical works. For a subject matter of such vital importance, one might have expected that it would have been organized into a comprehensive and orderly presentation of topics that would aid the believer to come to a firm grasp of the most vital truths inhering in the extensive corpus of God's Word.¹⁸⁹ However, that is not what we have been given. Instead, stories and revelations grounded in the circumstances of particular individuals at specific times have been passed down, and we are expected to learn from them not as intellectual abstractions, but as we "liken [them] unto us."¹⁹⁰ In this spirit, Givens observes that we are not to regard these texts as "a freestanding source of religious doctrine, authority, and inspiration, whose meaning could be grasped without too much reference to original or later contexts"¹⁹¹ but rather we are to enter into a particular relation with these texts.¹⁹² King expressed how the very language of religion invites us to enter such a relation:

183 Ibid., 15 October 1843, p. 327.

184 The Prophet's criticism of the Methodists was confined to their creeds. He recognized that they possessed many truths (e.g., J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 23 July 1843, p. 316), and in fact as a youth had become at one point "partial" to their teachings (JS-H 1:8).

185 J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 8 April 1843, 5:340.

186 B. Young, 23 September 1860, p. 185, cited in H. W. Nibley, Leaders, p. 498. See also B. Young, 14 November 1869, pp. 153, 155.

187 D. C. Peterson, Muhammad (2001), p. 598.

188 Ibid., p. 598. See Endnote E-37, p. 714. That is not to say that there are no serious scholars of theology among the Mormons. See, e.g., The Society for Mormon Theology and Philosophy.

189 B. K. Packer, Plan of Happiness, pp. 1-2. See Endnote E-38, p. 714.

190 1 Nephi 19:23. See Endnote E-39, p. 714.

191 M. Levering, Rethinking, p. 3.

192 T. L. Givens, Hand, p. 191.

The language of religion has from the beginning been the language of the total soul, the most profound and widespread rhetorical language with the maximum amount of effect. The truths we find in the scriptures are not couched in the prose appropriate to a scientist announcing a discovery to the world for the first time and trying to persuade other people to believe it. The language of the scriptures is the language of and to the whole individual; by that, I mean language that appeals to the whole individual—language that is there not simply to give us plain sense (and there is plenty of plain sense in the scriptures), but to back up that plain sense with an appeal couched in emotive language that enables us to feel the truth and exhorts us to follow the truth. The scriptures ask us to be different, not [merely] to think different....¹⁹³

[But w]hat do we do with [the scriptures]? We abstract principles from them... We abstract ideas. We abstract “concepts”... [However,] I do not find the word [“concept”] in the Bible or the Book of Mormon. It is not “concepts” with which we are concerned in scriptural writings. When the Lord uttered his Beatitudes, he did not say, “Blessed is peace,” but “Blessed are the peacemakers”...¹⁹⁴ Reality is not peace, but peacemakers, and peace exists only in peacemakers... The ultimate reality is not love, but a loving person: God is a person, not an abstract. We must not lose the great traditions of our forefathers, who knew how to handle and respond to the language of scripture but would have raised their eyebrows at “concepts.”

It is not helpful to think that all there is in the scriptures is a plain message that we can dig out and reformulate for ourselves. There are people who are willing (at the low emotive level at which they choose to live) to take the scriptures as a number of messages of plain sense that can be encapsulated, that can be learned, that can be called principles, and that one then lives by. But that is not living by every word that cometh out of the mouth of the living God.¹⁹⁵

When Jupiter and Mercury left the hospitable cottage of Baucis and Philemon, they gave the old couple the gift of an inexhaustible pitcher; however much was poured out of it, the pitcher remained full.¹⁹⁶ The scriptures are like that pitcher; however much they have given us, they have more to give. We drink them for life; we shall drink them forever.¹⁹⁷

Similar thoughts have been expressed by C. S. Lewis, who commends us to receive “the Word of God” from scripture:

... not by using it as an encyclopedia or an encyclical but by steeping ourselves in its tone or temper and so learning its overall message.

To a human mind this working-up (in a sense imperfectly), this sublimation (incomplete) of human material, seems, no doubt, an untidy and leaky vehicle. We might have expected, we may think we should have preferred, an unrefracted light giving us ultimate truth in systematic form—something we could have tabulated and memorized and relied on like the multiplication table...

We may observe that the teaching of Our Lord Himself, in which there is no imperfection, is not given us in that cut-and-dried, fool-proof, systematic fashion we might have expected or desired. He wrote no book. We have only reported sayings, most of them uttered in answer to questions, shaped in some degree by their context. And when we have collected them all we cannot reduce them to a system. He preaches but He does not lecture. He uses paradox, proverb, exaggeration, parable, irony; even (I mean no irreverence) the “wisecrack.” He utters maxims which, like popular proverbs, if rigorously taken, may seem to contradict one another.

193 Cf. J. S. Tanner, World and Word, pp. 231-234. See Endnote E-40, p. 715.

194 Matthew 5:9.

195 A. H. King, Total, pp. 186-187. See Matthew 4:4. Cf. D. Packard et al., Feasting, pp. 236-237. See Endnote E-41, p. 715.

196 N. Hawthorne, Pitcher.

197 A. H. King, Afterword, p. 237.

His teaching therefore cannot be grasped by the intellect alone, cannot be “got up” as if it were a “subject.” If we try to do that with it, we shall find Him the most elusive of teachers. He hardly ever gave a straight answer to a straight question. He will not be, in the way we want, “pinned down.” The attempt is (again, I mean no irreverence) like trying to bottle a sunbeam....

... It may be that what we should have liked would have been fatal to us if granted. It may be indispensable that Our Lord’s teaching, by that elusiveness (to our systematizing intellect), should demand a response from the whole man, should make it so clear that there is no question of learning a subject, but of steeping ourselves in a Personality, acquiring a new outlook and temper, breathing a new atmosphere, suffering Him, in His own way, to rebuild in us the defaced image of Himself... And in the same way, the value of the Old Testament may be dependent on what seems its imperfection. It may repel one use in order that we may be forced to use it in another way[:] ...to feel the very contentions between the Word and the human material through which it works. For here again, it is our total response that has to be elicited.¹⁹⁸

198 C. S. Lewis, Psalms, 11, pp. 112-114.

Excursus 7

Time and Eternity

ALTHOUGH big bang cosmology now predominates in both scientific thought and popular imagination, the concept of an expanding universe with a definite beginning is a fairly recent development.¹⁹⁹ Such a view has implications not only about the process of Creation, but also about the nature of the Creator Himself. For example, if it is true, as according to most contemporary cosmologists, that time as well as space in our universe began with the big bang, then because “our entire universe was created by God, ... one naturally assumes that he existed prior to that creation, outside our perceived universe, implying that his time is different from our time. Alma 40:8—‘all is as one day with God, and time only is measured unto men’—makes the dichotomy clear, although it does not help us understand God’s time.”²⁰⁰ An understanding of a God “prior to” and “outside of” our universe goes beyond “current theories of fundamental physics and cosmology [which] forbid any communication with or intervention by inhabitants of universes beyond the one created in the big bang.”²⁰¹ In some way that we do not now understand, God seems able both to transcend and to fully participate in our universe.²⁰² Indeed, the incarnation of the Son of God—not to mention our own status both as eternal identities and, simultaneously, as travelers within a particular instance of space-time—appears to provide a tangible witness to that idea.

Current scientific conceptions of time require “abandoning the idea that there is a universal quantity called time that all clocks would measure. Instead, everyone would have his or her own personal time. The times of two people would [almost] agree if the people were at rest with respect to each other, but not if they were moving.”²⁰³ Though the book of Abraham is silent regarding questions relating to the relativity of time in this sense, it does include substantial passages describing differences in the “reckoning” of time on different planets due to the length of their rotations.²⁰⁴ Nibley notes that: “Time is not reckoned in absolutes but is limited to Abraham’s system; ‘the reckoning of the Lord’s time’ is not reckoned absolutely but ‘according to the reckoning of Kolob’—an in-between element to gear Abraham’s time to a larger but not necessarily the largest system. There is also reckoning by sun and moon, relative to ‘the earth upon which thou standest.’²⁰⁵ In verse 6 the expression ‘set time’ is used four times, reminding us that there is more than one frame of time reference.”²⁰⁶ The key point being made by this section of the book of Abraham is that: “There is, in fact, no absolute reference frame for reckoning time—it depends on one’s location.”²⁰⁷

Some physicists have begun to imagine ways in which “time” could be conceived as existing independently of the “space-time” associated with the big bang, a quest that might ultimately help us understand in some small degree the eternal nature of God.²⁰⁸ For 199 D. H. Bailey, Foundations; W. Bradley, Why, p. 171; S. Hawking, Nutshell, p. 71; D. Wilkinson, Hawking, pp. 102-121.

200 B. K. Harrison, Truth, p. 166, cf. R. T. Pack, Quantum Cosmology. See also Commentary 1:6-g, p. 48.

201 D. H. Bailey, Foundations, p. 74.

202 J. E. Faulconer, Embodiment; H. R. Johnson, Big Bang, pp. 309-311.

203 S. Hawking, Nutshell, p. 9.

204 M. D. Rhodes et al., Astronomy, pp. 21-22.

205 Abraham 3:4-5.

206 H. W. Nibley, Before Adam, p. 68.

207 M. D. Rhodes et al., Astronomy, p. 22.

208 See Commentary 1:6-g, p. 48 and 2:1-e, p. 94.

example, the “most popular version” of current scientific ideas regarding vacuum energies and inflationary theories of the universe “does not require a singularity”—a state of infinite density where the laws of physics are assumed to break down—at the beginning of the universe.²⁰⁹ As physicist Fred Adams states: “The big bang does not represent creation ex nihilo... Energy is the currency of the cosmos, so this incorrect assumption would imply that an extraordinarily large violation of energy conservation took place at the beginning of time.”²¹⁰

Hartle and Hawking’s elegant “no boundary” proposal—with a model of “imaginary time” (i.e., a more basic form of time that has no beginning or end) running at right angles to the model of ordinary time (i.e., the “real” time that began with the big bang) and with rules that determine the history in each model of time in terms of the history of the other model—is one attempt to reconcile theorems that the universe is finite and had a definite beginning (in ordinary time) with a desire to do away with the need for any such boundary conditions (in imaginary time).²¹¹ Just as Antarctic explorers seamlessly change their direction from south to north once they pass the pole, so someone traveling back in imaginary time would, when he “passed” the big bang, would simply start moving forward in time again.²¹² The attractiveness of this model to some scientists is that it implies a universe that began in a way that is consistent with the laws of physics rather than created in some unknowable fashion. While this proposal might be taken as an argument against the concept of a God who created all things ex nihilo,²¹³ it does not seem however, on the face of it, to raise any obstacles for LDS doctrine, which does not preclude the possibility of time as “a dimension that extends infinitely in both directions.”²¹⁴

Since God and man are, as expressed by Elder B. H. Roberts, “co-eternal,”²¹⁵ many of these questions about the relationship of time and eternity also relate to our own nature—and the nature of matter itself. For example, the relationship of spirits possessing qualities that are infinite and eternal with bodies that are finite and physical is not yet understood. D&C 93:29 states that “man was also in the beginning with God. Intelligence, or the light of truth, was not created or made, neither indeed can be.”²¹⁶ Joseph Smith also taught: “Element had an existence from the time [God] had. The pure principles of element are principles that never can be destroyed. They may be organized and reorganized, but not destroyed. Nothing can be destroyed. They never can have a beginning or an ending; they exist eternally.”²¹⁷ Though quantum fluctuations seem to occur and there are still other mysteries to be solved with respect to the nature of our expanding universe, this statement is consistent with current scientific views, so long as one takes the term “pure principles of element” to refer to whatever mass-energy primitives are ultimately found to exist.²¹⁸ The Prophet taught that “spirit matter” was composed of the same primitives that we are currently able to apprehend

209 H. R. Johnson, Big Bang, p. 284; cf. pp. 288, 292-293.

210 Cited in ibid., pp. 290-291.

211 S. Hawking, Nutshell, p. 82; cf. D. Wilkinson, Hawking, pp. 102-108. See Endnote E-42, p. 715.

212 P. Halpern et al., Brave, pp. 174-175.

213 P. Dowe, Galileo, pp. 46-48. See Endnote E-43, p. 716.

214 T. L. Givens, Joseph Smith, p. 61.

215 In J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, p. 353 n. 8. See Excursus 8: The Origin and Premortal Existence of Human Spirits, p. 540.

216 See Excursus 8: The Origin and Premortal Existence of Human Spirits, p. 540.

217 J. Smith, Jr., 7 April 1844, in S. Larson, King Follett, p. 203; cf. D&C 93:33; Hymns (1985), #284.

218 R. W. Bradshaw, 9 October 2006; T. Butler, 9 October 2006; H. Eyring, Faith, p. 78.

in the universe, but in “purer” form: “There is no such thing as immaterial matter. All spirit is matter but is more fine or pure and can only be discerned by purer eyes; We cannot see it; but when our bodies are purified we shall see that it is all matter.”²¹⁹

Some emerging cosmological theories speak of a “multiverse” where “[t]iny universes continually pop into existence, both from extant universes and from the multiverse. Most of these baby universes quickly vanish again into the vast reservoir, but some inflate to enormous sizes... [Guth conjectures that:] ‘A fractal pattern is created, meaning that the sequence of false vacuum, pocket universe, and false vacuum is replicated on smaller and smaller scales. Thus, a region of false vacuum does not produce merely one universe, but instead produces an infinite number of universes!’”²²⁰ Barrow sees the “self-reproducing eternal inflationary universe [as] almost certainly [having] no beginning. It can be continued indefinitely into the past.”²²¹

As to the current scientific view of the future of our universe, it “seems grim” from “a human perspective.” “Over billions of years... the stars will eventually burn out. As the acceleration of the universe continues, distant galaxies will disappear from view, communication will be lost, and a dark, cold acceleration death or heat death will occur.”²²² Long before then, we would face unimaginable peril from the increasing brightness, followed by the death, of our own sun. The fact that the existence of God transcends the birth and death of universes attests to the truth that our own identities, being possessed of a similar eternal nature, will also survive the presumed winding-down of this universe. From his survey of scientific evidence, Johnson concludes: “While it is difficult to imagine any direct evidence for anything outside our universe, good theoretical reasons support a belief in such an overarching entity,” including “an endless background of energy for whatever else exists,” “a multitude of other bubble universes,” “God... [and] the spirits of mankind,” and—possibly—“dimensions, natural laws, mass-energy, and wave functions.” Since our understanding of these points, of course, is “rather primitive,” Johnson cautions that “these possibilities are only suggestions meant to stir thinking.”²²³

As a final issue to consider, if it turns out that the scriptural term “light” subsumes the scientific concept of mass-energy in some meaningful way, then the composite picture is of a cosmos consistent with the idea that “light proceedeth forth from the presence of God to fill the immensity of space.”²²⁴ Indeed, current scientific theories regarding the plenitude of pervasive energy seem to directly contradict any notion of absolute “emptiness” even in the most remote corner our universe. Writes Johnson: “In quantum mechanics a certain amount of energy is always present... An imaginary region containing nothing at all would collapse to zero size.... One must therefore discard old and seemingly obvious ideas about nothing or empty space, which do not exist in our universe. In reality empty space is filled with particles and waves, many of which we do not currently understand, and the mass-energy of empty space dominates our universe.”²²⁵

219 D&C 131:7-8. See J. Smith, Jr., Words, 17 May 1843, p. 203. See also J. Smith, Jr., Spirits, p. 745 where the “substance” of “spirit” is described as being “more pure, elastic, and refined matter than the body.”

220 H. R. Johnson, Big Bang, pp. 202-203. See also K. D. Hagen, Multiverse; M. E. McDonald, Cosmology; cf. D&C 88:37. Note that the idea of a multiverse, with its related theoretical underpinnings, is controversial—in part because of the seeming impossibility of any direct empirical confirmation.

221 Cited in H. R. Johnson, Big Bang, p. 298. See Endnote E-44, p. 716.

222 H. R. Johnson, Big Bang, p. 301. See Endnote E-45, p. 716.

223 Ibid., pp. 305-306.

224 D&C 88:12. See Commentary 2:3-b, p. 99; M. D. Rhodes et al., Astronomy, p. 23.

225 H. R. Johnson, Big Bang, pp. 295-296. Diverse views on the philosophical and scientific problems relating to

Excursus 8

The Origin and Premortal Existence of Human Spirits

CONVINCED that the doctrine of a “real” (vs. “ideal”) preexistence of the spirits of mankind is absent in early LDS scripture, Ostler concludes that relevant passages in the book of Moses either referred to “a conceptual or intellectual blueprint”²²⁶ or else, as he argues more strongly, the creation of all things in the Garden of Eden in their spiritual state at the time they were placed there.²²⁷ In support of the idea that scripture also does not allow a premortal existence for Adam’s spirit, he cites D&C 29:36: “the devil was before Adam.” Granting Ostler’s assumption that Joseph Smith may have had only an incipient understanding of the doctrine of preexistence in the early 1830s, Ostler’s interpretation nonetheless overreaches by dismissing the plain sense of Moses 3:5 as referring to a “real” premortal creation (“I... had created all the children of men... in heaven created I them”).²²⁸

It should also be noted that a reading of D&C 29:36 different from that of Ostler’s is possible. For instance, the intention of the statement that “the devil was before Adam” may not be to preclude the idea of some kind of premortal existence for all mankind, but simply to indicate that the Devil’s spirit, like that of Jesus Christ, was senior to that of the premortal Adam’s. Moreover, it is also true that Adam—i.e., the embodied man who, with the memory of his premortal existence obliterated, was tempted by the Devil in the Garden—had not yet been formed with a physical body at the time of Lucifer’s rebellion. Finally, note the Lord’s statement to Cain in Moses 5:24: “For from this time forth thou shalt be the father of [Satan’s] lies; thou shalt be called Perdition; for thou wast also before the world.” It seems reasonable to assume that if Cain, like Satan, was “before the world,” that Adam also enjoyed a premortal existence in spirit form.

Stories in early Christian literature and in the Qurʾān specifically connect Satan’s rebellion with the concept that “the devil was before Adam.” For example, one text reports that Adam, having learned of Satan’s success in tempting Eve, demands to know why he has done such a thing, and it is precisely the fact of his own seniority that the Devil uses to buttress his claim of superiority.²²⁹

I came to this measure because of you, on the day on which you were created, for I went forth on that day. When God breathed his spirit into you, you received the likeness of his image... Then Michael [or rather God, in some of the other texts²³⁰] summoned all the angels, and God said to them, ‘Come bow down to god whom I made.’ Michael bowed first. He called me and said, ‘You too, bow down to Adam.’ I said ‘Go away, Michael! I shall not bow [down] to him who is posterior to [i.e., was born after] me, for I am former!’²³¹ the nature of God and of the universe can be found in, e.g., D. H. Bailey, Foundations; D. H. Bailey, Science; D. H. Bailey, Omnis; P. Davies, About Time; P. Davies, Goldilocks; P. Dowe, Galileo; J. E. Faulconer, Embodiment; G. E. Ganssle, God and Time; O. Gingerich, Universe; B. Greene, Fabric; H. R. Johnson, Big Bang; H. Küng, Beginning; S. M. McMurrin, Theological; B. T. Ostler, Attributes; B. T. Ostler, Theism; B. T. Ostler, God; E. R. Paul, Science; C. H. Pinnock et al., Openness; R. D. Potter, Paradoxes of Providence; K. E. Robson, Time; D. Wilkinson, Hawking; E. O. Wilson, Creation; L. T. Zagzebski, Dilemma. See also Moses 1 Gleanings, p. 73.

226 See Endnote E-46, p. 716.

227 B. T. Ostler, Preexistence, p. 130. Givens mistakenly follows Ostler in this reading (T. L. Givens, When Souls, p. 214).

228 See ibid., p. 142, n. 9. Other relevant early statements that also support a “real” premortal creation include Moses 1:8, 5:24, 6:51; D&C 49:17, 77:2. See Commentary 1:8-b, p. 50.

229 See Excursus 10: The Great Chain of Being, p. 546.

230 Excursus 23: The Roles of Christ, Adam, and Michael, p. 582.

231 G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, Armenian recension, 12:1-14:3, pp. 15-17; cf. M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, pp. 27-28; al-Tabari, Creation, 1:54, p. 224; A. al-Tha’labi, Lives, p. 45; G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, 16:2, p. 49E; E. A.

In this connection, recall also Satan's angry claim to priority of worship in the temptation of Moses: "Satan cried with a loud voice, and ranted upon the earth, and commanded, saying: I am the Only Begotten, worship me."²³² It is also significant that the theme of the "elder [serving] the younger"²³³ is prominent throughout the rest of Genesis.²³⁴ The motive carries through in Exodus as well with the idea that Israel, arriving long after the great civilizations of Egypt, Sumer, and Babylon, was nonetheless to be considered the first-born child of God.²³⁵ Barker also notes a "dark parody of the story when John describes the reign of the beast."²³⁶ The second beast, the agent of the first beast, deceived those on the earth with an image of the beast that could breathe and speak. All those who would not worship the image of the beast were killed."²³⁷

D&C 93 is one of the earliest revelations on the origin and premortal existence of human spirits outside of the book of Moses. Received on 6 May 1833, the Lord states that:

Ye were also in the beginning with the Father; that which is Spirit, even the Spirit of truth.... Man was also in the beginning with God. Intelligence, or the light of truth, was not created or made, neither indeed can be. All truth is independent in that sphere in which God has placed it, to act for itself, as all intelligence also, otherwise there is no existence... For man is spirit. The elements are eternal, and spirit and element inseparably connected, receive a fulness of joy.²³⁸

During the Nauvoo period, the Prophet greatly elaborated on the origin and nature of spirits. For example, in 1839, Willard Richards recorded Joseph Smith as saying: "The spirit of man is not a created being; it existed from eternity and will exist to eternity. Anything created cannot be eternal. And earth, water, etc.—all these had their existence in an elementary state from eternity. The Father called all spirits before him at the creation of man and organized them. He (Adam) is the head, and was told to multiply."²³⁹ On 6 February 1840 he said: "I believe that the soul is eternal; and had no beginning; it can have no end.... the soul of man, the spirit, had existed from eternity in the bosom of Divinity."²⁴⁰ On 28 March 1841, he remarked to the school at Nauvoo that "the spirit or the intelligence of men are self-existent principles before the foundation [of] this earth... God saw that those intelligences had not power to defend themselves against those that had a tabernacle [i.e., a body], therefore the Lord called them together in council and agreed to form them tabernacles."²⁴¹ The King Follett discourse, given on 7 April 1844, contains the most extensive statement of these teachings, again emphasizing "that spirit has no beginning—it was not created; ...and that

W. Budge, Cave, pp. 55-59; N. J. Dawood, Koran, p. 13; M. Herbert, Irish Apocrypha, pp. 2, 10-11; L. Ginzberg, Legends, 1:62-64, 5:84-86 n. 35; H. W. Nibley, Sacred, p. 557; M.-A. Ouaknin et al., Rabbi Éliézer, 13, pp. 87-88; Timothy of Alexandria, Abbaton, p. 199; Hebrews 1:6; Qur'an 2:34, 7:11, 15:30-31, 17:61, 18:50, 20:116, 38:73-74. See also Commentary 1:12-d, p. 53 and 4:6-a, p. 249. See Endnote E-48, p. 716.

232 Moses 1:19. See Endnote E-49, p. 716.

233 Genesis 25:23.

234 I.e., Cain/Abel, Ishmael/Isaac, Esau/Jacob, Leah/Rachel, Reuben/Joseph, Manasseh/Ephraim; cf. Laman/Nephi; cf. Commentary 6:2-d, p. 476. See Endnote E-50, p. 716.

235 G. A. Anderson, Perfection, pp. 27-28 and Exodus 4:22. See Excursus 23: The Roles of Christ, Adam, and Michael, p. 582. For more on Satan's premortal rebellion see the overview of Moses 4, p. 223; Excursus 21: The Power and Premortal Status of Satan, p. 575; Excursus 22: The Nature of Satan's Premortal Proposal, p. 577.

236 Revelation 13:11-15.

237 M. Barker, Christmas, p. 38.

238 D&C 93:23, 29-30, 33.

239 J. Smith, Jr., Words, before 8 August 1839, p. 9, spelling and punctuation modernized.

240 Ibid., 6 February 1840, pp. 33, 46-47. See also 5 January 1841, p. 60.

241 Ibid., 28 March 1841, p. 68, spelling and punctuation modernized. See also E. England, Laub, pp. 22-23, 28

FIGURE E8-1. Creation Sequence, 1351-1360

The pseudepigraphal Jubilees described the creation on the first day of various ranks of angels along with “all of the spirits of his creatures which are in heaven and on earth.”¹ A more limited version of this idea, one that excluded the spirits of humans and animals, was later propagated in theological writings of the early Christian church. These writings, however, continued to advance the argument that the creation of the angels took place “in the beginning.” For example, St. Basil spoke of “a spiritual light” “even before this world” consisting of “intellectual and invisible natures, all the orderly arrangement of pure intelligences, who are beyond the reach of our mind and of whom we cannot even discover the names.”² Through the influential writings of St. Augustine,³ the idea that the angels were among the things created “in the beginning” became further entrenched in Christian belief. The argument was further developed in a treatise called De coelesti hierarchia (The Celestial Hierarchy),⁴ traditionally ascribed to Dionysius the Areopagite⁵ but actually dating to some centuries later. Here, the author elaborates tenuous allusions in Ephesians 1:21, 6:12 and Colossians 1:16, 2:15 to describe in great detail three angelic hierarchies, each consisting of three choirs or orders—nine choirs of angels in all.⁶

Accordingly, following the description of Pinkus,⁷ the opening depiction in the sequence of Creation in the great minster at Schwäbisch Gmünd illustrates the nine choirs of angels worshiping the Creator (top). The next image (bottom) actually mingles two distinct episodes into one: the division of light from darkness (sometimes taken to signify the casting down of Satan and his angels⁸), and the division of heaven and earth. A close look at the globe will reveal that the band across the Cosmos is the firmament with the signs of the zodiac. Moreover, in an arrangement entitled thema mundi, the figure functions as a liturgical calendar, in which the arrangement of the zodiacs in relation to the sun indicates a specific feast or biblical event.⁹

1 O. S. Wintermute, Jubilees, 2:2, p. 255. For a broad survey of the history of the idea of premortal existence in Western thought, see T. L. Given, When Souls.

2 Basil, Hexameron, 1:5, p. 54.

3 Augustine, Literal, I:1:3, I:17:32, VII:5:7, pp. 1:20, 1:38, 2:7.

4 Pseudo-Dionysius, Hierarchy; cf., e.g., the later Shelemon, Book of the Bee, 5, pp. 9-11.

5 Acts 17:34.

6 See Endnote E-47, p. 718.

7 A. Pinkus, 20 January 2007.

8 See Commentary 2:4-c, p. 101.

9 For more on this topic, see A. Pinkus, Patrons.

God, being greater than the other spirits, instituted laws so that the spirits could advance like himself.”²⁴²

One of the most challenging problems in sorting out the meaning of these statements is the variety of terms used to describe the same or similar concepts. In the past, LDS authors have frequently tried to draw a distinction between an “intelligence” (taken to be the eternal, uncreated part of each individual) and a “spirit” (taken to be the result of subsequent “organization” of an “intelligence” by God). However, these terms are conflated in Webster’s 1828 dictionary, which defines an “intelligence” as a spirit being.²⁴³ Moreover, the King Follett discourse uses the terms “spirit,” “mind,” “soul,” and “intelligence” more or less synonymously.²⁴⁴

Another potential source of misunderstanding is Joseph Smith’s statement that “the mind of man—the intelligent part—is as immortal as, and coequal with, God Himself.”²⁴⁵ However, later editors amended “coequal” to read “co-eternal,” consistent with the Oxford English Dictionary definition of the Latin original (“of equal age, companion in age”) and the seventeenth century meaning of the term (“of the same age, coeval”).²⁴⁶

Some of the Nauvoo saints were also perplexed by the Prophet’s teachings relating to the eternal nature of spirits. For example, Joseph Lee Robinson wrote:

[T]he question arose then, ‘How is God the father of our spirits?’ I wondered, studied and prayed over it for I did want to know how it could be. I inquired of several of the brethren how that could be—a father and son and the son as old as the father. There was not a person that could, or that would even try to explain that matter. But it came to pass that in time a vision was opened, the voice of the Spirit came to me saying that all matter was eternal, that it never had a beginning, and that it should never have an end, and that the spirits of all men were organized of a pure material or matter upon the principle of male and female, so that there was a time when my immortal spirit, as well as every other man’s spirit that was ever born into the world—that is to say, there was a moment when the spirit was organized or begotten or born so that the spirit has a [F]ather, and the material or matter that our tabernacles are composed of is eternal and, as we understand, are organized upon the principles of male and female.²⁴⁷

With respect to the official position of the Church, in 1974, a question was raised to Elder Bruce R. McConkie as to whether it could be authoritatively said “that we had no identity, that we were not individual intelligent entities before we were born into the spirit world?” While not speaking officially for the Church, Elder McConkie answered with his personal opinion:

As to official Church pronouncements on doctrinal points, they are almost nonexistent.... As far as I know there is no official pronouncement on the subject at hand.... In my judgment, spirit element exists and it was organized into spirit beings, or in other words intelligence exists and it became the intelligences that were organized. In my judgment there was no agency prior to spirit birth and we did not exist as (individual) entities until that time... [When the subject has come up] in reading and approving priesthood and auxiliary lessons... [in] each of these instances, the matter was deleted from the lesson. In each case it was expressly stated that we have no knowledge of any existence earlier than our existence as the spirit children of God.²⁴⁸

242 V. Hale, Spirit, pp. 118–119. For the complete discourse, see J. Smith, Jr., 7 April 1844, in S. Larson, King Follett.

243 N. Webster, Dictionary; cf. B. H. Roberts, The Truth, p. 77.

244 V. Hale, Spirit, pp. 118–119. See J. Smith, Jr., 7 April 1844, in S. Larson, King Follett.

245 J. Smith, Jr., 7 April 1844, S. Larson, King Follett, p. 196.

246 See T. L. Givens, When Souls, pp. 219–220.

247 J. L. Robinson, Journal, 21, cited in C. R. Harrell, Preexistence, p. 87. For a reasoned argument in defense of this perspective, see M. B. Brown, Plan, pp. 15–16, 25–28. See also T. L. Givens, When Souls, p. 217.

248 Cited in B. L. Top, Life Before, pp. 44–45. For historical overviews of LDS views on the origin of human spirits, see V. Hale, Spirit; C. R. Harrell, Preexistence; B. T. Ostler, Preexistence. A collection of statements from Church leaders on these and related topics can be found in B. L. Top, Life Before, pp. 39–88. A description of differences between the

Excursus 9

The Premortal Organization of the Human Family

OSTLER rightly observes that the term “organization” mentioned in Abraham 3:22 does not refer to “organization of the spirit body through spiritual birth, but social organization of spirits into a heavenly council of preexisting entities.”²⁴⁹ This interpretation is consistent with the terminology of Joseph Smith, who stated that:

Spirits are eternal. At the first organization in heaven, we were all present and saw the Savior chosen and appointed, and the plan of salvation made, and we sanctioned it.²⁵⁰

In another place, he uses the term “organization” in a similar sense:

The design of God before the foundation of the world was that we should take tabernacles... inasmuch as [a portion of] the spirits of the eternal world glory in bringing other spirits in subjection to them, striving continually for the mastery. He who rules the heavens when He has a certain work to do calls the spirits before him to organize them. They present themselves and offer their services.²⁵¹

Scriptures then available to the newly-restored Church²⁵² also describe the premortal foreordination of individuals to priesthood callings,²⁵³ though at first the Saints did not seem to infer the doctrine of mankind’s preexistence from them.²⁵⁴ It is evident, however, that the Prophet sometimes knew more about such doctrines than he felt at liberty to teach at the time.²⁵⁵ Elder Neal A. Maxwell wrote: “Whether [the delay in Joseph’s speaking publicly about the doctrines of premortal existence] reflected imperfect record-keeping, the Lord’s timing, Joseph’s degree of readiness, or the people’s readiness to receive, or all such factors, we do not know.”²⁵⁶

With respect to premortal foreordination to priesthood callings, the Prophet Joseph Smith later said: “Every man who has a calling to minister to the inhabitants of the world was ordained to that very purpose in the Grand Council of heaven before this world was. I suppose that I was ordained to this very office in that Grand Council.”²⁵⁷ The Prophet also spoke of Moses and other prophets who were “sons of God who exalt[ed] themselves to be Gods, even from before the foundation of the world.”²⁵⁸ “[A]ll those to whom a dispensation was to be committed were set apart and ordained at that time, to that calling.”²⁵⁹

LDS concept of a premortal life and views with affinities to Hermeticism (such as those cited by J. L. Brooke, Refiner’s Fire) can be found in D. C. Lindquist, Devils. Winston surveys the concept of preexistence in Hellenic, Judaic and Mormon sources (D. Winston, Preexistence). See Nibley for an interpretation of the Egyptian Shabaka stone as implying that man’s creation is a twofold process: begetting and formation (H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the PGP, pp. 110-111, 113). See also Commentary 2:3-b, p. 99; 2:4-c, p. 101; 3:1-b, p. 151; and the overview of Moses 3, p. 136.

249 B. T. Ostler, Preexistence, p. 133. See also R. E. Cooper, Promises, pp. 102-104; C. R. Harrell, Preexistence, p. 12; S. W. Kimball, Righteous Women, p. 102.

250 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 5 January 1841, p. 60.

251 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 21 May 1843, p. 207, spelling, capitalization, and grammar modernized. See also J. Smith, Jr., Words, before 8 August 1839, p. 9; 19 January 1841, p. 62; 28 March 1841, p. 68; 9 October 1843, p. 253; J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 1 April 1842, 4:575; J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 2 May 1844, p. 365.

252 E.g., 1 Peter 1:2; Alma 13:1, 3; Jeremiah 1:5.

253 See also Abraham 3:22-23; D&C 138:38-39.

254 C. R. Harrell, Preexistence, pp. 3-5; B. T. Ostler, Preexistence, p. 128.

255 E.g., G. Q. Cannon, Life, pp. 147-148; J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 7 April 1844, p. 361.

256 N. A. Maxwell, Small Moment, p. 85.

257 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 12 May 1844, p. 365.

258 Ibid., 16 June 1844, p. 375; cf. Moses 1:3-7.

259 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 12 May 1844, p. 371.

Regarding corresponding premortal assignments for women, President Spencer W. Kimball said:

Remember, in the world before we came here, faithful women were given certain assignments while faithful men were foreordained to certain priesthood tasks. While we do not now remember the particulars, this does not alter the glorious reality of what we once agreed to. You are accountable for those things which long ago were expected of you just as are those we sustain as prophets and apostles!²⁶⁰

Church leaders have not only taught of premortal callings and assignments, but also have discussed the perfect organization of the human family in the eternal world.²⁶¹ For example, on 17 February 1847, Brigham Young had a dream in which he saw the Prophet:

Joseph stepped toward me, and looking very earnestly, yet pleasantly said, "...Be sure to tell the people to keep the Spirit of the Lord; and if they will, they will find themselves just as they were organized by our Father in Heaven before they came into the world. Our Father in Heaven organized the human family, but they are all disorganized and in great confusion." Joseph then showed me the pattern, how they were in the beginning. This I cannot describe, but I saw it, and saw where the Priesthood had been taken from the earth and how it must be joined together, so that there would be a perfect chain from Father Adam to his latest posterity. Joseph again said, "Tell the people to be sure to keep the spirit of the Lord and follow it, and it will lead them just right."²⁶²

In Hosea Stout's report of the dream, Brigham quoted Joseph as saying:

"When the small still voice speaks, always receive it, and if the people will do these things, when they come up to the Father, all will be as in the beginning, and every person stand as at the first." I saw how we were organized before we took tabernacles and every man will be restored to that which he had then, and all will be satisfied.²⁶³

In a passage that sheds further light on this eventual reorganization of the human family, President Young said:

I want to tell you a thing with regard to parents, wives, brothers and sisters, etc. The time will come when it will be told you where this man, and that woman shall be placed. The real blood of Joseph will be selected out from among the tribes of Israel, and every man, and woman will be put in their places, and stand in their order where the Lord designs them to be.²⁶⁴

Then, explaining that the highest blessings can come to all "who have behaved themselves, and proved faithful to their calling," he taught that those of the true blood of Israel will be known by their fruits.²⁶⁵ "What does gentile signify? Disobedience. What does Israel signify? Obedience."²⁶⁶

The now discontinued practice of priesthood adoption (i.e., the sealing of living Church members into the families of prominent Church leaders) seems to have been meant, at least in part, to anticipate such a reorganization of the human family as it was then understood. Today, however, children are sealed only to their biological or legally adoptive parents.²⁶⁷

260 S. W. Kimball, Righteous Women, p. 102.

261 H. C. Kimball, 4 December 1856, pp. 135-136; J. F. Smith, Jr., Way 1945, 1931, pp. 50-51; B. Young, 6 April 1862.

262 B. Young, History 1847-1850, 23 February 1847, pp. 35-36.

263 J. Brooks, Stout, 1:238.

264 B. Young, 8 October 1854, p. 100.

265 Matthew 7:16.

266 B. Young, 8 October 1854, p. 100. See Endnote E-6, p. 704.

267 L. J. Arrington, Brigham Young, p. 102; R. E. Bennett, Missouri, pp. 186-194; R. E. Bennett, Line; D. B. Horne,

Excursus 10

The Great Chain of Being

THE Great Chain of Being was a prominent feature of the worldview of the majority of educated people from antiquity until relatively recent times.²⁶⁸ The essence of its classic form is succinctly captured by Lewis:

According to this conception degrees of value are objectively present in the universe. Everything except God has some natural superior; everything except unformed matter has some natural inferior. The goodness, happiness, and dignity of every being consists in obeying its natural superior and ruling its natural inferiors. Hierarchy is destroyed either by ruling or obeying natural equals or by failing to obey a natural superior or to rule a natural inferior.²⁶⁹

Extracanonical sources attest to the fascination of the ancients with the names and ranks of angels present at the dawn of Creation,²⁷⁰ strikingly yet imperfectly paralleling the book of Abraham's descriptions of the gradations of intelligence among preexistent spirits.²⁷¹ From this perspective, Satan's premortal rebellion pits his thirst for purloined glory against the very economy of a world where superior intelligence—in the divine sense of the word²⁷²—determines the natural order of things. His appeal to Eve that the forbidden fruit would make her and Adam as the gods plays to similar effect on human vanity. We see this process at work in the writings of Milton, in whose time the idea of natural hierarchies was less foreign than it is to our own. Thus, as described in Lewis' preface to Paradise Lost, Satan's rebellion:

... begins with talk about liberty, but very soon proceeds to "what we more affect, Honour, Dominion, glorie, and renoune" (VI, 421). The same process is at work in Eve. Hardly has she swallowed the fruit before she wants to be "more equal" to Adam; and hardly has she said the word "equal" before she emends it to "superior" (IX, 824).²⁷³

To Milton, the natural order of heaven is a buttress against the tyranny of evil. Paradoxically, it:

... exists for the sake of what seems its very opposite—for freedom, almost for extravagance. The pattern deep hidden in the dance, hidden so deep that shallow spectators cannot see it, alone gives beauty to the wild, free gestures that fill it, just as the decasyllabic norm gives beauty to all the licenses and variations of the poet's verse.²⁷⁴

Cannon, 5 April 1894, pp. 311-314; G. Irving, Adoption; B. K. Packer, Holy Temple, p. 194; W. Woodruff, Adoption. For more on the general topic, see H. L. Andrus, Perfection, pp. 299-330; H. L. Andrus, Doctrines, pp. 159-160, 490-567; R. E. Cooper, Promises, pp. 100-131; L. A. McKinlay, Patriarchal Order; L. A. McKinlay, Life Eternal, pp. 268-297. For additional discussion on the scope and limitations of foreordination, see H. L. Andrus, God, pp. 286-296; M. B. Brown, Plan, pp. 40-46.

268 See Endnote E-51, p. 716.

269 C. S. Lewis, Preface, XI, p. 73. See, e.g., W. Shakespeare, Troilus, 1:3:85-110, p. 455.

270 E.g., Pseudo-Dionysius, Hierarchy; O. S. Wintermute, Jubilees, 2:2, p. 255.

271 Abraham 3:16-19.

272 D&C 93:36.

273 C. S. Lewis, Preface, XI, p. 78.

274 Ibid. XI, p. 81. See also Commentary 4:11-b, p. 253 and Excursus 8: The Origin and Premortal Existence of Human Spirits, p. 540.

Excursus 11

The Sacred Circle

THE symbol of the sacred circle appears in a large number of ancient sources. Sometimes such references are very subtle and can be easily overlooked. For instance, in Abraham 3:23, God is described as standing “in the midst” (i.e., “in the center”) of the premortal souls.²⁷⁵ Nibley clarifies this description by observing that: “He’s surrounded on all sides.”²⁷⁶ Likewise, Lehi describes God upon his throne “surrounded with numberless concourses of angels in the attitude of singing and praising their God,”²⁷⁷ a pattern that was reenacted in ancient prayer circles. Nibley again points out: “A concourse is a circle. Of course [numberless] concourses means circles within circles and reminds you of dancing. And what were they doing? Surrounded means ‘all around’... It was a choral dance.”²⁷⁸

Note that the center of the sacred circle does not represent some abstract epitome of goodness, nor merely a ceremonial altar or throne, but God Himself. The Gnostic Acts of John records that a prayer circle was formed by the apostles, with Jesus at the center: “So he told us to form a circle, holding one another’s hands, and himself stood in the middle.”²⁷⁹ Brown likewise observes how, at Jesus’ first appearance to the Nephites, He “stood in the midst of them,”²⁸⁰ and cites other Book of Mormon passages associating the presence of the Lord “in the midst” to the placement of the temple and its altar.²⁸¹

The center is the holiest place, and the degree of holiness decreases in proportion to the distance from it.²⁸² Brown noted such a configuration when Jesus blessed the Nephite children:

As the most Holy One, [the Savior] was standing “in the midst,” at the sacred center.²⁸³ The children sat “upon the ground round about him.”²⁸⁴ When the angels “came down,” they “encircled those little ones about.” In their place next to the children, the angels themselves “were encircled about with fire.”²⁸⁵ On the edge stood the adults. And beyond them was what we might term profane space which stretched away from this holy scene... Was there not a visual message to the adults about the special status of children in Jesus’ eyes?²⁸⁶

Hence, Jesus’ instructions: “Behold your little ones.”²⁸⁷ C. S. Lewis observes: “From Christianity itself we learn that there is a level—in the long run the only level of importance—on which the learned and the adult have no advantage at all over the simple and the child.”²⁸⁸

275 Cf. Commentary 3:9-h, p. 167; 4:9-a, p. 252; 4:14-e, p. 260. See also D&C 88:13, 41.

276 H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the PGP, 17, p. 213.

277 1 Nephi 1:8.

278 H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the PGP, 17, p. 211; cf. B. R. Bickmore, Restoring, pp. 304-306; F. M. Huchel, Cosmic, pp. 6-9, F. M. Huchel, Cosmic (Book). See Endnote E-52, p. 717.

279 E. Hennecke et al., Acts of John, 94, p. 227.

280 3 Nephi 11:8.

281 E.g., 2 Nephi 22:6; 3 Nephi 11:8, 21:17-18; cf. Isaiah 12:6; Jeremiah 14:9; Hosea 11:9; Joel 2:27; Micah 5:13-14; Moses 7:69; Zechariah 3:5, 15, 17. See S. K. Brown, Voices, pp. 150-151; R. D. Draper et al., Commentary, pp. 150-151.

282 Such symbolism illuminates the cosmology of the book of Abraham, where the planet Kolob is “set night unto the throne of God” (Abraham 3:9) with other planets in increasing distance from the center. Indeed, the term Kolob may be related to the idea of “center” or “heart”—see Excursus 18: Kolob, p. 565. See also F. M. Huchel, Cosmic, pp. 10-11.

283 3 Nephi 17:12, 13.

284 3 Nephi 17:12.

285 3 Nephi 17:24; cf. D&C 137:2; Ezekiel 1:4.

286 S. K. Brown, Voices, pp. 147-148.

287 3 Nephi 17:23.

288 C. S. Lewis, Pain, p. 70. See Figure 3-6, p. 139.

The flames encircling the angels, the children, and the Lord recall the imagery of the “empyrean heaven,”²⁸⁹ where the highest heaven is represented as a circular realm of pure fire.²⁹⁰ The concept of heaven as a series of concentric circles can be contrasted to the figure of the intersecting circle and square—the latter symbolizing the coming together of heaven and earth in both the temple and in the soul of the seeker of Wisdom.²⁹¹

When associated with the forward movement of time, the symbol of the circle is often represented as a spoked wheel rotating around a fixed center point or axis.²⁹² In this sense, early LDS writings speak of the “great wheel of the kingdom” that represented the rolling forward of the work of God,²⁹³ the “great wheel of fortune” that will soon reverse the situations of favored and unfavored peoples,²⁹⁴ and the “great wheel of nature” that demonstrates the march of time and the “over-ruling hand” of God in the course of events.²⁹⁵ “It’s the wheel that goes round and round but never moves,” Nibley explains, corresponding to the Roman quadrata, which “represents the four corners of the earth, and the center of everything.”²⁹⁶

Nibley also observes that the:

... central pole of the tent... is often identified with the pole (the polestar) of the heavens.²⁹⁷ “The tent itself is the Weltenmantel, the expanse of the firmament. Other tent poles sometimes represent the four cardinal points or the two turning points of the sun in the summer and winter solstice.” The tent pole theme is carried over into the pillars of the temples and palaces, even into the columns of medieval churches and the stately facades of our own public buildings.²⁹⁸

Humphrey and Vitebsky further explain:

In vertical space the center is the point of opening from one level to another and is often represented in architecture as a pillar, stupa, mountain or ladder to heaven. Altars similarly constitute a center, as the point at which a sacrifice can move between the plane of the earth and that of the gods. A center can also lead downward. As well as reaching up to heaven, the Rock in Jerusalem holds down the chaotic waters in the abyss under the earth....

Many traditions make it clear that the center is not so much an absolute concept as a relational one, the point toward which a community’s life, thought, and activity are oriented. In these cultures there can be multiple centers, with each city, temple, and house having its own pillars, altars, and shrines.²⁹⁹

289 Greek empyros = fiery, derived from pyr= fire—and not to be confused with the unrelated term “imperial.” See, e.g., R. Giorgi, Anges, pp. 63–65.

290 See M. Barker, Holy of Holies, p. 185, Commentary 4:31–d, p. 280.

291 See Excursus 20: The Circle and the Square, p. 571. See R. Guénon, Symboles, pp. 83–93, 110–111 for additional discussion of the symbolism of the center and surrounding circumferences.

292 R. Guénon, Symboles, pp. 86–92.

293 J. M. Grant, 13 July 1855, p. 60; Orson Hyde, 24 October 1841, p. 459; B. Young, 17 April 1845, p. 401; Times and Seasons, April 1840, 1:91; 15 December 1840, 2:249; 1 March 1841, 2:340; 22 November 1841, 3:741.

294 W. B. Pace, Autobiography; J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 16 December 1838, 3:233; cf. T. G. Madsen, Sacrament, p. 132; Wheel of Fortune; A. J. Heschel, Heavenly Torah, pp. 209–210.

295 E. Snow, 13 March 1878, p. 268; B. H. Roberts, God Glorified, p. 18; Times and Seasons, 13 December 1841, 3:758. See Endnote E-53, p. 717.

296 H. W. Nibley, Circle, p. 144.

297 Cf. the imagery of Zion as a tent expanding outward from a center stake (Isaiah 53:2; D&C 57:3; 101:21).

298 H. W. Nibley, Circle, p. 145. See also N. Isar, Dance of Adam, pp. 196–199.

299 C. Humphrey et al., Sacred Architecture, p. 140.

FIGURE E12-1. The Flight of the Little Prince, 1943
Antoine de Saint Exupéry, 1900-1944

“What! So you fell from the sky?... Which planet are you from?”¹
Saint Exupéry’s drawing of the flight of the Little Prince is a fitting companion to ancient accounts of the descent of Adam to Earth.²
The drawing, which was not included in the published book, bears “the marks of having been crumpled into a ball by the author.”³

- 1 A. de Saint Exupéry, Prince, p. 12.
- 2 Aux Sources, p. 55; A. de Saint Exupéry, Dessins, p. 461.
- 3 S. Schiff, Saint-Exupéry, inserted between pp. 180-181.

Excursus 12

Saint Exupéry and Genesis

SAINT Exupéry’s drawing of the flight of the Little Prince is a fitting companion to ancient accounts of the descent of Adam to Earth.³⁰⁰ It is without question that the important elements of his most famous book can be traced to sources in his own life and experience.³⁰¹ Although Saint Exupéry would have already been familiar with the story of Adam and Eve from his Catholic upbringing, it is not out of the question that he may have also drawn consciously or unconsciously from Islamic traditions about Adam learned through his contacts with Bedouins in North Africa.

The Little Prince—reputed to be the fourth best-selling book in the world after the Bible, the Qur’an, and Das Kapital, and translated into more than a hundred languages—describes un petit bonhomme tout à fait extraordinaire who fell to earth after leaving his “Eden” on another planet. Described as a prince, the context of the story makes it clear that, like Adam, he plays the role of an Everyman—unnamed, of uncertain age, and seemingly having always existed. Abandoning his role as the sole gardener for his unique rose, and having failed upon six other planets to find a suitable occupation, he lands in the dreary desert and is first initiated into knowledge of the earth by a serpent, who also eventually becomes the means of his returning as an immortal to his home planet. Though often seen exclusively as a fairy tale, de Galembert argues that it is better described as a semi-autobiographical myth that strives to recapture a lost sense of the sacred:

300 Aux Sources, p. 55; A. de Saint Exupéry, Dessins, p. 461.

301 J. Dupuis et al., Saint-Ex; M. Quesnel, Naissance

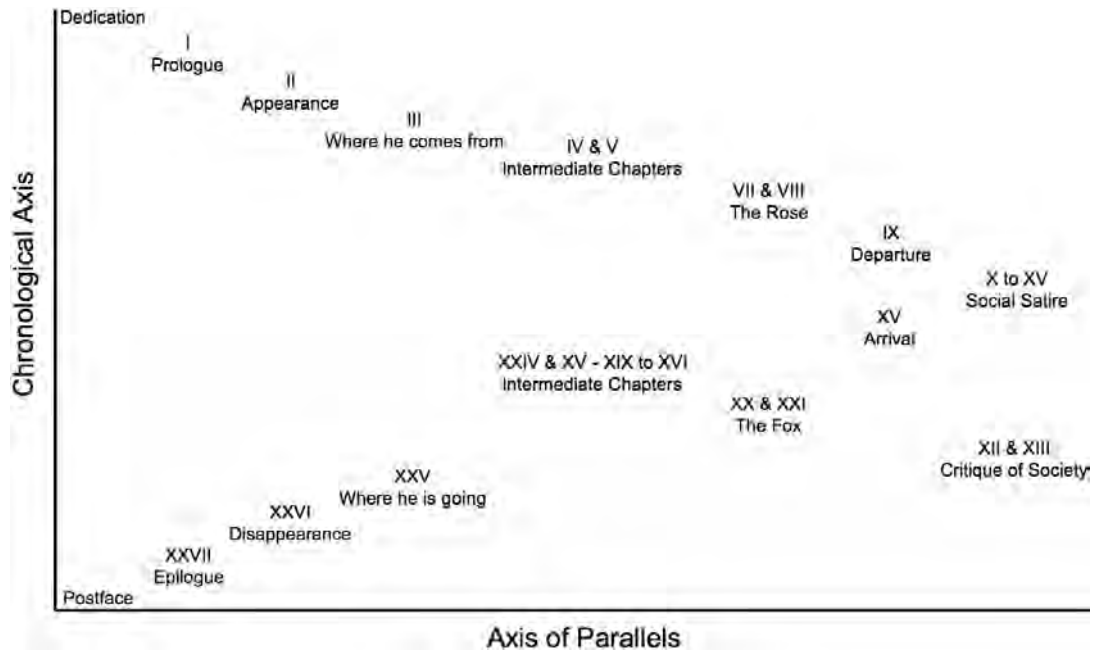

FIGURE E12-2. *Chiastic Structure of The Little Prince, 2001*³⁰²
Laurent de Bodin de Galembert, 1977-

Fairy tales are degenerate myths, myths profane and desacralized. They describe a world of disillusionment, where magic and marvels have replaced the sacred. Myths, on the other hand, elevate stories to a level of transcendence in an effort to understand great mysteries and revelations of highest import... In a world that has lost its feel for the sacred, in a world intellectualized and dehumanized to the point of barbarism, Saint Exupéry's work seeks to counter the movement of the prevailing current that leads to the degeneration of myth into fairy tale. Because an environment rationalized to the point of absurdity leaves no place for wonder and childish innocence, Saint Exupéry seeks to rediscover the sense of the sacred in a return to a myth-form that better suits its direction and purpose.³⁰³

In the book, Saint Exupéry's series of parables illustrating the complexities of human love reveal mankind's universal and poignant longing for deep and enduring relationships, "a dream of things as they might have been lived had not reality prematurely destroyed them."³⁰⁴ However, in The Little Prince, "[e]very religious symbol, especially those having to do with eternity, immortality, and the survival of love, becomes nothing more than nostalgic memories of lost hope... too weak to call forth the reality they evoke."³⁰⁵ Like Citadelle, a posthumously published work, the text of The Little Prince "represents a piece of spiritual ground marked out by a weary man with a vestigial sense of Catholicism and an innate sense of responsibility who has lived a life thirsting for the values but free of the bounds of both... What is surprising... [in reviewing Saint Exupéry's literary output throughout his life is] that his themes could remain constant throughout a novel of aviation, a book of personal essays, a children's allegory, and a succession of philosophical dialogues spoken at the desert court of an imaginary ruler."³⁰⁶

302 Translated from L. de Galembert, Grandeur 2001, p. 52.

303 L. de Galembert, Grandeur 2001, p. 46; L. de Galembert, Grandeur 2003, p. 70.

304 E. Drewermann, Parabole, p. 283.

305 Ibid.

306 S. Schiff, Saint-Exupéry, p. 444.

The effortless journey through the air of the Little Prince to and from his home planet can be contrasted with the mechanically-aided flight of the adult pilot, whose predicament in the story parallels Saint Exupéry's 1935 plane crash in the Sahara Desert.³⁰⁷ Matheme observes that sometimes Saint Exupéry himself "flew without his flying machine... when, lying on his back in the Saharan night, he felt himself falling upward."³⁰⁸ Of such an experience, Saint Exupéry wrote:

When I opened my eyes I saw nothing but the pool of nocturnal sky, for I was lying on my back with outstretched arms, face-to-face with that hatchery of stars. Only half awake, still unaware that those depths were sky, having no roof between those depths and me, no branches to screen them, no root to cling to, I was seized with vertigo and felt myself as if flung forth and plunging downward like a diver.³⁰⁹

He interpreted this experience figuratively as the realization that even the canopy of heaven itself must not be seen as absolute protection nor as an invitation to enjoy the sedentary comfort induced by gravity and inertia, but rather should serve to reinforce in each of us the human imperative to fly onward toward the stars, despite our fears. Of the surprise and discomfort brought on by this realization, he wrote: "I have pity for the soul... who awakes in the great patriarchal night believing itself sheltered under the stars of God, and suddenly realizes that he is in the midst of a journey."³¹⁰

The closing sentence of Saint Exupéry's Wind, Sand, and Stars, a book that poignantly describes the adventures and dangers of early aviation, illuminates the metaphor of transcendent longing hidden in its simple title. Matheme comments: "Saint Exupéry conjures up the creation story of God breathing life into Adam. It has the power to remind us that this story is played out whenever a human spirit, an emigré, searching for its homeland, enters a physical body at birth: 'Only the Spirit, if it breathe upon the clay, can create Man.'"³¹¹ In his works, Saint Exupéry repeatedly "directs our eyes to the stars—we are souls carried on the wind in bodies of sand, and we look up longingly to the stars, our homeland."³¹²

307 J. Dupuis et al., Saint-Ex, p. 30; M. Quesnel, Naissance, p. 8.

308 B. Matheme, Wind.

309 A. de Saint Exupéry, Terre, 4:4, pp. 62-63.

310 A. de Saint Exupéry, Citadelle.

311 A. de Saint Exupéry, Terre, 8:4, p. 182.

312 B. Matheme, Wind.

Excursus 13

Some Perspectives on Historicity

NON-MORMONS are often initially attracted to (or repelled from!) the Church because of the distinctive lifestyle of its active members. For many, the promise of health and happiness for individuals, families, and communities is a welcome antidote to the angst and alienation of the age. Yet, perhaps counterintuitively at first glance, these aspects of personal and social well-being do not constitute the central nor usually the first message of the missionaries. Instead, they typically begin their series of lessons by reciting the historical events of the Restoration. The case for obedience to the doctrines and practices of the Church explained in subsequent lessons is thus made, not as an appeal to the common sense of the investigator or to some body of empirical evidence, but primarily on the basis that these commandments were given by divine revelation. In other words, potential converts are not asked to consider whether their lives will be happier as a result of accepting the Gospel (though, of course, this is implied), but rather to find out for themselves whether the historical events of the Restoration and the teachings revealed by modern prophets are true.³¹³

Summarizing this perspective, Richard L. Bushman has observed that:

...stories of sacred occurrences formed the substance of Mormon belief as early as 1830. What distinguished Mormonism was not so much the Gospel Mormons taught, which in many respects resembled other Christians' teachings, but what they believed had happened—to Joseph Smith, to Book of Mormon characters, and to Moses and Enoch.³¹⁴ Mormons ever afterward were unable to take much interest in formal theology or systematizing treatises like [Alexander] Campbell's. No such attempts achieved the place in Mormon faith that creeds assumed in other churches. The core of Mormon belief was a conviction about actual events. The test of faith was not adherence to a certain confession of faith, but belief that Christ was resurrected, that Joseph Smith saw God, that the Book of Mormon was true history, and that Peter, James, and John restored the apostleship. Mormonism was history, not philosophy.³¹⁵

By way of contrast, consider the following from the writings of Joseph Campbell, who was concerned with establishing the primacy of the recurrent symbolic content of worldwide religious themes over any question of historicity:

We do not particularly care whether Rip van Winkle, Kamar al-Zaman, or Jesus Christ ever actually lived. Their stories are what concern us: and these stories are so widely distributed over the world... that the question of whether this or that local carrier of the universal theme may or may not have been a historical, living man can be of only secondary moment. The stressing of the historical element will lead to confusion; it will simply obfuscate the picture message.³¹⁶

Not surprisingly, the historical aspects of Genesis are considered of great importance in the LDS tradition, even down to the matter of specifying of the actual physical location of where Adam and Eve lived after the Fall.³¹⁷ Nevertheless, the LDS people have successfully avoided both the extremes of literalism and liberalism with respect to the historicity of

313 See Endnote E-54, p. 717.

314 See Endnote E-55, p. 717.

315 R. L. Bushman, Beginnings, pp. 187-188. See also G. B. Hinckley, Foundation, p. 80.

316 J. Campbell, Hero, pp. 230-231. See also the discussion of the similar attitude of Paul Tillich, as described in T. G. Madsen, Mormonism and Philosophy. See Endnote E-56, p. 718.

317 See Figure 6-2, p. 457 and Excursus 39: The Location of Adam-ondi-Ahman, p. 623.

the Bible.³¹⁸ Although the belief that the characters mentioned in Genesis are actual historical figures who underwent something that was somehow like the events described in the biblical account has always been held firmly by the Saints, Nibley observes that we also bring ridicule and disillusionment upon ourselves when we fail to pursue scriptural understanding beyond the initial level of vivid picture images inculcated upon the minds of young children:

The stories of the Garden of Eden and the Flood have always furnished unbelievers with their best ammunition against believers, because they are the easiest to visualize, popularize, and satirize of any Bible accounts. Everyone has seen a garden and been caught in a pouring rain. It requires no effort of imagination for a six-year-old to convert concise and straightforward Sunday-school recitals into the vivid images that will stay with him for the rest of his life. These stories retain the form of the nursery tales they assume in the imaginations of small children, to be defended by grown-ups who refuse to distinguish between childlike faith and thinking as a child when it is time to “put away childish things.”³¹⁹ It is equally easy and deceptive to fall into adolescent disillusionment and with one’s emancipated teachers to smile tolerantly at the simple gullibility of bygone days, while passing stern moral judgment on the savage old God who damns Adam for eating the fruit He put in his way and, overreacting with impetuous violence, wipes out Noah’s neighbors simply for making fun of his boat-building on a fine summer’s day.³²⁰

In the same vein, Brigham Young used the term “baby stories” to dismiss overly simplistic interpretations of the Genesis account of man’s creation.³²¹ In a discourse given on October 8, 1854, he stated:

When the Lord had organized the world, and... filled the earth with animal and vegetable life, then he created man.... Moses made the Bible to say his wife was taken out of his side—was made of one of his ribs. As far as I know my ribs are equal on each side. The Lord knows if I had lost a rib for each wife I have, I should have had none left long ago.... As for the Lord taking a rib out of Adam’s side to make a woman of, it would be just as true to say He took one out of my side. “But, Brother Brigham, would you make it appear that Moses did not tell the truth?” No, not a particle more than I would that your mother did not tell the truth when she told you that little Billy came from a hollow toadstool. I would not accuse your mother of lying any more than I would Moses. The people in the days of Moses wanted to know things that [were] not for them, the same as your children do when they want to know where their little brother came from, and he answered them according to the level of their understandings, the same as mothers do their children.³²²

The Prophet Joseph Smith cautioned against the products of a “fanciful and flowery and heated imagination” and explained by way of contrast that:

... the things of God are of deep import; and time, and experience, and careful and ponderous and solemn thoughts can only find them out. Thy mind, O man! if thou wilt lead a soul unto salvation, must stretch as high as the utmost heavens, and search into and contemplate the darkest abyss, and the broad expanse of eternity—thou must commune with God.³²³

318 Reverence for the Bible. See Endnote E-57, p. 718.

319 1 Corinthians 13:11. See Endnote E-58, p. 718.

320 H. W. Nibley, Before Adam, p. 63. See D. E. Jeffery, Noah’s Flood and C. M. White et al., Noachian Flood Story for considered LDS perspectives on reconciling current scientific findings with the Genesis flood story. See also J. A. Widtsoe, Flood; Morris S. Petersen, Earth, p. 432.

321 B. Young, 23 October 1853, p. 6.

322 As cited in L. J. Arrington, Brigham Young, pp. 197–198. Compare B. Young, 8 October 1854, pp. 94–95.

323 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 25 March 1839, p. 137.

Both childish misunderstandings and adolescent disillusionment are swept away when the “veil [is] taken from our minds, and the eyes of our understanding [are] opened,”³²⁴ providing a direct vision of those things to which the inevitably limited words of scripture³²⁵ are intended to point the mind and heart. Thus, the personal value of scripture is not merely in that it gives a more or less accurate account of God’s relationship with various peoples throughout history, but more fundamentally in the fact that it provides a means for individuals to recognize how God acts continually in their own lives.³²⁶ Said Joseph Smith: “He that can mark the power of Omnipotence, inscribed upon the heavens, can also see God’s own handwriting in the sacred volume: and he who reads it oftenest will like it best, and he who is acquainted with it, will know the hand wherever he can see it.”³²⁷

The relationship between scriptural history and personal experience operates in both forward and backward directions: not only do the stories of scripture guide daily life, but our daily life conditions our understanding of scriptural accounts. Indeed, it is through direct participation in repeated experiences of God’s power and help in the present that the histories reported by scripture become both intelligible and credible to modern believers. As Timothy Luke Johnson expresses regarding the immediate nature of the sources for one’s personal conviction of the historical authenticity of New Testament scripture:

For those living in a community where “signs and wonders” done in the name of Jesus are a regular occurrence, hearing of such deeds attributed to Jesus in the Gospel narratives is no surprise or scandal...

For those living in a community where the “Word of the Lord” [is] proclaimed through [men and women of God],... it is no surprise or scandal to hear... words [spoken in the same spirit] attributed to Jesus in the Gospels, for it is the same Jesus who speaks in both places...

For a community that lives in the presence of the resurrected [Christ], it is beside the point to debate whether Jesus “back then” predicted His death and resurrection, for His death and above all His resurrection are confirmed as real precisely by this community that lives by His power [today]. It is equally silly, in this context, to debate whether Jesus “back then” predicted His return, for that return is predicated on His being the living and powerful Lord, and it is in the light of that truth that we await God’s final triumph through Him.³²⁸

324 D&C 110:1-2. See also Ether 3:6; D&C 76:12, 19; 138:11.

325 See, e.g., Moroni’s lament about the difficulty in reducing revelation to writing (Ether 12:23-27).

326 J. E. Faulconer, Incarnation, p. 38.

327 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 22 January 1834, p. 56.

328 L. T. Johnson, Real Jesus, p. 145; c.f., J. H. Charlesworth, DSS and NT, pp. 142-143. See also Excursus 1: Speech, Writing, and Revelation, p. 512 and Excursus 6: The Authority and Power of Scripture, p. 531.

Excursus 14

The Garden of Eden as a Prototype for the Temple

IN his broad overview of this literature, Parry concluded that the Garden of Eden “served as the prototype, pattern, and/or originator of subsequent Israelite temples... The Garden was not a sanctuary built of cedar or marble, for it is not necessary for a temple to possess an edifice or structure; but rather it was an area of sacred space made holy because God’s presence was found there....”³²⁹ Parry lists eleven prototypical aspects of the Garden of Eden:

1. The Tree of Life was located both in the Garden and in the temple.
2. Both the Garden and the temple were associated with sacred waters.
3. Eastward orientations played a role in the Garden story and in subsequent Israelite temples.
4. The cosmic mountain was symbolically affiliated with the Garden and temple.³³⁰ [The first land to arise from the waters became the Mountain of the Lord, where the Lord created Adam. It is from this divine center that Creation begins and extends out in all directions].
5. The account of the earth’s creation is closely connected with the Garden of Eden pericope [i.e., Genesis 2-3] and the temple.
6. Cherubim, or heavenly beings, function as guardians of the Garden and the temple.
7. Revelation was an essential part of the Garden and the temple.
8. Sacrifice existed in the Garden and in subsequent temple systems.
9. Similar religious language existed in both the Garden and the temple.
10. Sacred vestments were associated with Adam and Eve in the Garden and with the priesthood in the Jerusalem temple.³³¹
11. Abundance was associated with the Garden and the temple.³³²

Barker also describes several specific features of the Garden of Eden that were represented in the temple:

The debir, the Holy of Holies, was the place of the Lord’s throne, but the hekal, the great hall of the temple, was the Garden of Eden. The decorations of the temple were those of Eden (trees, pomegranates, lilies, cherubim), the seven branched lamp was described in later tradition as the tree of life, a bronze serpent was removed from the temple by Hezekiah, and Ezekiel saw the river of life flowing from the temple.³³³ Just as the debir represented heaven (“represented” is a concession to our way of thinking), so the hekal represented the completed Creation. This again suggests that the rituals of the temple were Creation rituals.³³⁴

A key difference between the architecture of Israelite temples and the features of the Garden of Eden is that the latter had no veil hiding the heavens from the earth: “I created for [Adam] an open heaven, so that he might look upon the angels, singing the triumphal song. And the 329 D. W. Parry, Garden, pp. 126-127; cf. H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 293; H. W. Nibley, Return, p. 47.

330 E.g., Isaiah 2:2.

331 See the overview of Moses 4, p. 234.

332 D. W. Parry, Garden, pp. 126-127. For additional discussion of these aspects, see J. L. Carroll, Reconciliation.

333 1 Kings 6:14-36; Exodus 25:31-37; 2 Kings 18:4; Ezekiel 47:1-12.

334 M. Barker, Atonement.

light which is never darkened was perpetually in paradise.”³³⁵ The Lectures on Faith asserts that Adam and Eve “were [later] separated from the presence of God by a veil” when they were driven out of the Garden of Eden.³³⁶ Indeed, some ancient sources speak of two such “veils” which create three heavens, symbolically corresponding to the three divisions of the temple.³³⁷ The separation between heaven and earth will end at some future time “when the veil of the covering of my temple, in my tabernacle, which hideth the earth, shall be taken off, and all flesh shall see me together.”³³⁸

Garden of Eden symbolism was not only associated with the temple, but also preserved in the synagogue: “In synagogue mosaics in Palestine, two Menorot flank the scroll shrine. This was a representation of the temple (= Garden of Eden) with the two trees, of Life and of Knowledge, as in Genesis 2-3.”³³⁹ Also note that both Catholic and Orthodox church buildings were patterned after the Jewish temple in many respects.³⁴⁰

Citing an article by Volluz, Potter describes similarities between the Garden of Eden, Lehi’s dream of the Tree of Life, and the wadi Tayyib al-Ism, a plausible site for the Valley of Lemuel where the family was camped at the time:

The upper valley would seem to contain a number of attributes that would make it a possible candidate for a type of the Garden of Eden. It is a garden situated in a “lone and dreary world.” It has only one entrance and that is on the east end. It is fertile compared to the surroundings, seeming “terrestrial” among the “testial.” It is enclosed by high mountains making it separate from its surroundings, “as if it had been a world.”³⁴¹ It contains several hundred palm trees, which are intimately associated in the culture of the Middle East, with the Tree of Life.³⁴² Moreover, it contains a continually flowing stream, something of a rarity in this dry region.³⁴³

335 F. I. Andersen, 2 Enoch, 31:2, pp. 152-153.

336 L. E. Dahl et al., Lectures, 2:25, p. 43.

337 See A. S-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, pp. 118-121. See also C. R. A. Morray-Jones, Divine Names, pp. 305-307.

338 D&C 101:23. See Isaiah 25:6-9; H. W. Nibley, Treasures, pp. 185-186; Commentary 2:3-a, p. 99. See also J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore, p. 179 n. 26 and Excursus 17: The Veil of the Temple, p. 564.

339 N. Wyatt, Space, p. 169.

340 W. J. Hamblin et al., Temple, pp. 103-116, 172-175; M. von Wellnitz, Liturgy, pp. 7-8, 13-18, 21-28. For discussions of the role of the temple in the development of Christian thought and liturgy, see M. Barker, Temple Roots; W. J. Hamblin et al., Temple, pp. 113-116; H. W. Nibley, Envy.

341 1 Nephi 8:20.

342 G. Potter et al., Lehi, p. 45. See also C. T. Volluz, Lehi’s Dream.

343 G. Potter et al., Lehi, pp. 37-38. See also Commentary 1:1-c, p. 43.

Excursus 15

Description of the LDS Temple Endowment

SINCE the introduction of the LDS endowment to selected individuals in 1842, the Church has taught that certain aspects are not to be discussed in detail outside the temple itself.³⁴⁴ Some reliable descriptions of a general nature are included below.³⁴⁵

Of the modern temple endowment, Elder James E. Talmage writes that it:

... comprises instruction relating to the significance of past dispensations, and the importance of the present as the greatest and grandest era in human history. This course of instruction includes a recital of the most prominent events of the creative period, the condition of our first parents in the Garden of Eden, their disobedience and consequent expulsion from that blissful abode, their condition in the lone and dreary world when doomed to live by labor and sweat, the plan of Redemption by which the great transgression may be atoned, the period of the great apostasy, the restoration of the Gospel with all its ancient powers and privileges, the absolute and indispensable condition of personal purity and devotion to the right in present life, and a strict compliance with Gospel requirements....

The ordinances of the endowment embody certain obligations on the part of the individual, such as a covenant and promise to observe the law of strict virtue and chastity, to be charitable, benevolent, tolerant and pure; to devote both talent and material means to the spread of truth and the uplifting of the race; to maintain devotion to the cause of truth; and to seek in every way to contribute to the great preparation that the earth may be made ready to receive her king—the Lord Jesus Christ. With the taking of each covenant and the assuming of each obligation a promised blessing is pronounced, contingent upon faithful observance of the conditions.

No jot, iota, or tittle of the temple rites is otherwise than uplifting and sanctifying. In very detail the endowment ceremony contributes to covenants of morality of life, consecration of person to high ideals, devotion to truth, patriotism to nation, and allegiance to God. The blessings of the House of the Lord are restricted to no privileged class; every member of the Church may have admission to the temple with the right to participate in the ordinances thereof, if he comes duly accredited as of worthy life and conduct.³⁴⁶

President Brigham Young gave the following description:

Let me give you a definition in brief. Your endowment is to receive all those ordinances in the House of the Lord, which are necessary for you, after you have departed this life, to enable you to walk back to the presence of the Father, passing the angels who stand as sentinels, being able to give them the key words, the signs and tokens, pertaining to the Holy Priesthood, and gain your eternal exaltation in spite of earth and hell.³⁴⁷

Elder John A. Widtsoe wrote:

The temple ordinances encompass the whole plan of salvation as taught from time to time by the leaders of the Church, and elucidate matters difficult of understanding. There is no warping or twisting in fitting the temple teachings into the great scheme of salvation. The philosophical completeness of the endowment is one of the great arguments for the veracity of the temple ³⁴⁴ See K. Flake, Oral Canon for a discussion of some of the ways in which the preservation of temple ordinances as an oral tradition may help to maximize their effectiveness.

³⁴⁵ An useful set of articles describing the many facets of temples and temple work can be found in D. H. Ludlow, Encyclopedia, 4:1444-1468.

³⁴⁶ J. E. Talmage, House of the Lord, 4, pp. 54, 55.

³⁴⁷ B. Young, 6 April 1853 - B, p. 31.

ordinances. Moreover, this completeness of survey and expounding of the Gospel plan, makes temple worship one of the most effective methods of refreshing the memory concerning the whole structure of the Gospel....

The endowment and the temple work as revealed by the Lord to the Prophet Joseph Smith... fall clearly into four distinct parts: the preparatory ordinances, the giving of instructions by lectures and representations; covenants; and, finally, tests of knowledge. I doubt that the Prophet Joseph, unlearned and untrained in logic, could of himself have made the thing so logically complete. The candidate for the temple service is prepared, as in any earthly affair, for work to be done. Once prepared he is instructed in the things that he should know. When instructed, he covenants to use the imparted knowledge, and at once the new knowledge, which of itself is dead, leaps into living life. At last, tests are given him, whereby those who are entitled to know may determine whether the man has properly learned the lesson. The brethren and sisters who go through the temple should observe all these things and recognize the wonderful coherence and logical nature of the carefully worked out system, with a beginning and an end, fitting every known law of God and nature, which constitutes temple worship....

The holy endowment is deeply symbolic. "Going through the temple" is not a very good phrase; for temple worship implies a great effort of mind and concentration if we are to understand the mighty symbols that pass in review before us. Everything must be arranged to attune our hearts, our minds, and our souls to the work. Everything about us must contribute to the peace of mind that enables us to study and to understand the mysteries, if you choose, that are unfolded before us....

If we are correct in believing that the blessings obtained in the temples of the Lord are a partial fulfillment, at least, of the promise made when the Holy Ghost, who is a Revelator, is conferred upon man, it would be expected that temple ordinances would be in the nature of a revelation to those who participate... [R]evelation always comes; it is not imposed upon a person; it must be drawn to us by faith, seeking and working. Just so; to the man or woman who goes through the temple with open eyes, heeding the symbols and the covenants, and making a steady, continuous effort to understand the full meaning, God speaks his word and revelations come.

The endowment is so richly symbolic that only a fool would attempt to describe it; it is so packed full of revelations to those who exercise their strength to seek and see, that no human words can explain or make clear the possibilities that reside in the temple service. The endowment which was given by revelation can best be understood by revelation; and to those who seek most vigorously, with pure hearts, will the revelation be greatest. I believe that the busy person on the farm, in the shop, in the office, or in the household, who has his worries and troubles, can solve his problems better and more quickly in the house of the Lord than anywhere else. If he will leave his problems behind and in the temple work for himself and for his dead, he will confer a mighty blessing upon those who have gone before, and quite as large a blessing will come to him, for at the most unexpected moments, in or out of the temple will come to him, as a revelation, the solution of the problems that vex his life.³⁴⁸

Glen M. Leonard wrote that the endowment given in the Nauvoo temple:

... consisted of the ordinances of washing and anointing, followed by instructions and covenants setting forth a pattern or figurative model for life. The teachings began with a recital of the creation of the earth and its preparation to host life. The story carried the familiar ring of the Genesis account, echoed as well in Joseph Smith's revealed book of Moses and book of Abraham. The disobedience and expulsion of Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden set the stage for an explanation of Christ's Atonement for that original transgression and for the sins of the entire human family. Also included was a recital of mankind's tendency to stray from 348 J. A. Widtsoe, Temple Worship, pp. 192, 193-194, 195-196. See Endnote E-61, p. 719.

the truth through apostasy and the need for apostolic authority to administer authoritative ordinances and teach true gospel principles. Participants were reminded that in addition to the Savior's redemptive gift they must be obedient to God's commandments to obtain a celestial glory. Within the context of these gospel instructions, the initiates made covenants of personal virtue and benevolence and of commitment to the church. They agreed to devote their talents and means to spread the gospel, to strengthen the church, and to prepare the earth for the return of Jesus Christ. Through personal promises to their Heavenly Father made in the Nauvoo temple, the Saints expanded the meaning of being a covenant people.³⁴⁹

Hugh Nibley gave the following description of the LDS temple endowment and its relationship to rituals in other religions and cultures:³⁵⁰

The word "endowment" that was chosen to designate the temple ordinances contains, historically and legally, two main ideas: that of the bestowal of something valuable on a person and "the permanent usufruct³⁵¹ of such goods in installments and upon the fulfillment of certain specified conditions."³⁵² It is the greatest of gifts, but we cannot cash it in this life—it is only for the "spiritual minded,"³⁵³ "having nothing to do with temporal things";³⁵⁴ it pays off only at certain times and places and upon the exact fulfillment of certain conditions.³⁵⁵

Latter-day Saints believe that their temple ordinances are as old as the human race and represent a primordial revealed religion that has passed through alternate phases of apostasy and restoration which have left the world littered with the scattered fragments of the original structure, some more and some less recognizable, but all badly damaged and out of proper context.³⁵⁶ The early fathers of the church gave such an explanation for the disturbingly close resemblances between Christianity and other, notably Egyptian, beliefs and practices—all are the remnants of another age. Beginning in the twentieth century, an army of scholars, following the lead of Sir James Frazer, has been diligently at work, first collecting thousands of scattered pieces of earlier customs and folktales and then trying to put them together, like the pieces of jigsaw puzzles, to see whether they all come from a few basic systems or even go back to a single, all-embracing "pattern." Whatever the end result may be, it is perfectly clear by now that the same sort of thing has been going on for a very long time and in virtually all parts of the world.

Offhand, one may say that Joseph Smith could have gotten his ideas from any or many of a great number of sources, ancient and modern... There are, in fact, countless tribes, sects, societies, and orders from which he might have picked up this and that, had he known of their existence. The Near East in particular is littered with the archaeological and living survivals of practices and teachings which an observant Mormon may find suggestively familiar... He has actually been charged with plundering some of the baggage brought to the West by certain fraternal orders during the Middle Ages³⁵⁷—as if the Prophet must rummage in a magpie's nest to stock a king's treasury! Among the customs and religions of mankind there are countless parallels, many of them very instructive, to what the Mormons do. But there is a world of difference between Ginzberg's *Legends of the Jews*³⁵⁸ and the book of Isaiah, or 349 G. M. Leonard, Nauvoo, pp. 258-259.

350 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. xxviii. Lengthier summaries of the history, significance, and teachings of ancient and modern temple ordinances can be found in H. W. Nibley, Meanings and Functions, and in many others of Nibley's articles.

351 I.e., usage rights.

352 Source unidentified.

353 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 4 May 1842, p. 237.

354 Ibid., 8 April 1844, p. 362.

355 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 30.

356 See Endnote E-62, p. 719.

357 See Endnote E-63, p. 720.

358 L. Ginzberg, Legends.

between the *Infancy Gospels*³⁵⁹ and the real Gospels, no matter how many points of contact one may detect between them. The Latter-day Saint endowment was not built up of elements brought together by chance custom, or long research; it is a single, perfectly consistent, organic whole, conveying its message without the aid of rationalizing, spiritualizing, allegorizing, or moralizing interpretations.

Describing the endowment itself, Nibley wrote:³⁶⁰

The Mormon endowment... is frankly a model, a presentation in figurative terms. As such, it is flexible and adjustable; for example, it may be presented in more languages than one, and in more than one medium of communication. But since it does not attempt to be a picture of reality, but only a model or analogue to show how things work, setting forth the pattern of man's life on earth with its fundamental whys and wherefores, it does not need to be changed or adapted greatly through the years; it is a remarkably stable model, which makes its comparison with other forms and traditions, including the more ancient ones, quite valid and instructive... Those who have been to the temple hundreds of times know that "age cannot wither... nor custom stale [its] infinite variety."³⁶¹ What [the] few bits of information [about parallels in other religions and cultures] do is to supply a new dimension to the experience, along with the assurance that a wealth of newly found records confirms the fundamental thesis of its antiquity and genuineness.

Regarding the aspect of genuineness, Nibley says elsewhere:

[O]rdinances are more than just symbols—they go beyond that... They always have a double nature: they are or mean something that is real. You see that as soon as you try, in music and art, to give religious experience a third dimension. The Gospel actually has that third dimension, of course... Once you know the real thing, everything else is an anticlimax.³⁶²

The temple ordinances are classed among "the mysteries of the kingdom, even... of the knowledge of God" in which "the power of godliness is manifest."³⁶³ In its broadest religious meaning, a mystery is a truth that can be known and understood only by divine revelation.³⁶⁴ Among the most important of the truths that are learned in the temple is a knowledge of "who we are, and who God is, and what our relationship to Him is."³⁶⁵ Giving his own summary of temple ordinances, the Prophet Joseph Smith wrote that they concerned:

... washings, anointings, endowments, and the communication of keys pertaining to the Aaronic Priesthood, and so on to the highest order of the Melchizedek Priesthood, setting forth the order pertaining to the Ancient of Days, and all those plans and principles by which anyone is enabled to secure the fulness of those blessings which have been prepared for the Church of the First Born, and come up and abide in the presence of the Elohim in the eternal worlds.³⁶⁶

359 See, e.g., M. Barker, Infancy Gospel of James; W. Barnstone, Gospel of Pseudo-Matthew.

360 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. xxix.

361 W. Shakespeare, Antony, II:ii:234-235, p. 1357.

362 H. W. Nibley, Conversation, p. 66.

363 D&C 84:19-20.

364 H. B. Lee, Light, July 1961, p. 211; D. A. Bednar, Pray Always, p. 41; H. W. Nibley, Conversation, p. 67. See Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations of the Mysteries, p. 663.

365 C. Broderick, Adversity, p. 129.

366 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 4 May 1842, p. 237.

Excursus 16

The Role of Revelation in Temple Building

WITH respect to the surprising degree of commonality in the layout and ritual of temples throughout the world, Nibley commented:

In ancient times the world was covered with temples. What was done in them? Surprisingly, all followed the same general pattern... “In extremely diverse cultural contexts, we always find the same cosmological pattern and the same ritual scenario,” writes Eliade, and as “man progressively occupies increasingly vast areas of the planet, ... all he seems to do is to repeat indefinitely the same archetypal gestures.”³⁶⁷ He pointedly observes that “man would not know these tales if they were not revealed to him. Consequently a myth is the story of what happened... at the beginning of time.”³⁶⁸

Similarly, Lundquist describes the ancient expectation that temple plans are to be received by revelation:

Central to temple covenant systems all over the ancient Near East is the idea that the temple plan is revealed to the king or the prophet by deity. Again, many examples could be enumerated. Gudea of Lagash was visited in a dream in a temple of Lagash and shown the plan of the temple by a goddess, who gave him a lapis lazuli tablet on which the plan of the temple was written. Perhaps the best example of this aspect of temple building is the Sinai episode itself, in which, according to D. N. Freedman, “this heavenly temple or sanctuary with its throne room or Holy of Holies where the deity was seated on his cherubim throne constituted the tabnît or structure seen by Moses during his sojourn on the same mountain.”³⁶⁹

Berlin notes that:

... the creation of the world in [Genesis] 1:1-2:3 bears several striking resemblances to the construction of the Tabernacle mandated in Exodus 25-31 and executed in Exodus 35-40³⁷⁰—the prototype of the Jerusalem Temple and the focus of the priestly service of the Lord. Note that other ancient Near Eastern creation stories conclude with the construction of a temple for the creation god. In the Tanakh, the world is sometimes seen as the Lord’s temple, and the temple as a microcosm.³⁷¹

Nibley explains differences among LDS temple designs today as follows:

In a speech in the 1880s in St. George, Brother Erastus Snow said that every temple has a slightly different design, because it performs a different purpose³⁷²... The St. George Temple was built after the pattern of the Kirtland Temple, to emphasize certain things. Our Provo Temple is built in a different way entirely. It functions with a different thing in mind—efficiency in getting a lot of work done in a hurry, but also as a teaching tool... Though temples generally face east, Joseph built the Nauvoo temple facing west, where it would be seen to its best advantage from the river.³⁷³

367 M. Eliade, Cosmogonic Myth, p. 9.

368 Ibid., p. 1 and H. W. Nibley, Drama, pp. 8-9.

369 J. M. Lundquist, Temple, Covenant, and Law, p. 302. See Exodus 25:8.

370 See, e.g., Genesis 2:1-3; Exodus 39:32, 42-43.

371 A. Berlin et al., Jewish, p. 13 and, e.g., Isaiah 66:1-2. See also G. A. Anderson, Perfection, pp. 200-202 and the overview of Moses 3, p. 146.

372 Source not given.

373 H. W. Nibley, Meaning of Temple, pp. 35, 36. Note also that neither the Provo, Oakland, Los Angeles, nor Stockholm temples face east (Do temples; H. W. Nibley, Drama, pp. 12, 13). For a historical summary of the orientation in Jewish and Christian practice, see J. H. Emminghaus, Eucharist, pp. 47-50.

In a similar vein, Elder Orson Pratt expressed the following:

... the Lord is not confined to an exact pattern in relation to these temples building in the different stakes any more than He is confined in the creation of worlds to make them all of the same size. He does not make them all of one size, nor does He set them rolling on their axes in the same plane, nor does He construct any in many respects alike; there is variation as much as there is in the human form. Take men and women. There are general outlines that are common to all, but did you ever see two faces alike among all the millions of the human family? What a great variety, and yet all are constructed in general outline alike—after the image of God. So in regard to the building of temples. The Lord will not confine Himself to any one special method to be so many feet long, so many feet wide, and so many places for the Priesthood to stand, but He will construct His temples in a great variety of ways, and by and by, when the more perfect order shall exist we shall construct them, through the aid of revelation, in accordance with the temples that exist in yonder Heaven.³⁷⁴

The size of the Kirtland Temple was given by revelation in D&C 95, followed by a vision in which were provided details about its structure and design. Frederick G. Williams later recounted to Truman Angell a conversation he had with workers building the temple:

Carpenter Rolph said, “Doctor [Williams], what do you think of the house?” [Williams] answered, “It looks to me like the pattern precisely.” He then related the following: “Joseph [Smith] received the word of the Lord for him to take his two counselors, Williams and Rigdon, and come before the Lord, and He would show them the plan or model of the house to be built. We went upon our knees, called on the Lord, and the building appeared within viewing distance, I being the first to discover it. Then we all viewed it together. After we had taken a good look at the exterior, the building seemed to come right over us, and the makeup of the Hall seemed to coincide with that I there saw to a minutiae.”³⁷⁵

Joseph Smith also saw the Nauvoo Temple in vision. Replying to a difference of opinion with temple architect William Weeks about the shape of the windows, he said: “I wish you to carry out my designs. I have seen in vision the splendid appearance of that building illuminated, and will have it built according to the pattern shown me.”³⁷⁶ John Pulsipher recalled that the Nauvoo Temple had been “built according to the pattern that the Lord gave Joseph”³⁷⁷ and Parley P. Pratt said that “‘angels and spirits from the eternal worlds’ had instructed Smith ‘in all things pertaining to ... sacred architecture’”³⁷⁸

As early as January 1846, Brigham Young foresaw the building of a larger temple in the West once the Saints left Nauvoo:

We can’t stay in this house³⁷⁹ but a little while. We have got to build another house. It will be a larger house than this, and a more glorious one. And we shall build a great many houses, we shall come back here and we shall go to Kirtland, and build houses all over the continent of N[orth] America.³⁸⁰

Later, with respect to the overall design for the Salt Lake Temple, President Young said:

374 O. Pratt, 26 October 1879, p. 25.

375 E. C. Robison, Kirtland, pp. 8, 24n. 3.

376 J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 5 February 1844, 6:196-197.

377 J. Pulsipher, Autobiography, pp. 8-9.

378 M. McBride, Nauvoo Temple, pp. 8-9. See P. P. Pratt, 6 April 1853, p. 44. See Endnote E-64, p. 720.

379 I.e., the Nauvoo Temple.

380 W. Clayton, Chronicle, 2 January 1846, p. 252.

I scarcely ever say much about revelations, or visions, but suffice it to say, five years ago last July³⁸¹ I was here, and saw in the Spirit the Temple not ten feet from where we have laid the Chief Cornerstone. I have not inquired what kind of a temple we should build. Why? Because it was represented before me. I have never looked upon that ground, but the vision of it was there. I see it as plainly as if it was in reality before me. Wait until it is done. I will say, however, that it will have six towers, to begin with, instead of one. Now do not any of you apostatize because it will have six towers, and Joseph only built one. It is easier for us to build sixteen, than it was for him to build one. The time will come when there will be one in the center of Temples we shall build, and on the top, groves and fish ponds. But we shall not see them here, at present.³⁸²

The Provo and Ogden, Utah temples were the first to feature a design with a single steeple in the center of the building.³⁸³ Notably, the idea of “groves and fish ponds” on top was also proposed for the LDS Conference Center in Salt Lake City before those involved became aware of Young’s prophecy.³⁸⁴

On the same day that Brigham Young related his vision of the Salt Lake Temple, he also reviewed the history of temple building in ancient Israel and during the ministry of Joseph Smith, stressing that a “revelation-pattern” was always required to direct such work. He also realized, however, that revelatory precedent was sufficient for certain aspects of Joseph Smith’s temple program in Nauvoo, since it “is only where experience fails, that [new] revelation is needed.”³⁸⁵ Such was the case in July 1992 when, as a member of the First Presidency, President Gordon B. Hinckley looked at candidate sites for a future temple in Hong Kong. He later recounted to a group of members in New York City:

We went back to our hotel room after that very long and difficult day. I could not sleep. I prayed very earnestly, asking the Lord to bless us, to let us know what should be done. In the middle of the night I awoke. There was on my mind an impression of something that could be done. We owned a very choice piece of property in Kowloon. We had been there for years. It was the location of the mission home. I got up and took a piece of paper and sketched out a structure with a temple on the top, the baptistry down underground—to follow the instruction found in the Doctrine and Covenants that the baptistry should be beneath “where the living are wont to assemble.”³⁸⁶ We could put also in that building a chapel and a temple president’s residence. I just drew it out in rough form... That resulted in the construction of the Hong Kong Temple. The temple which we have built here in New York [City] is patterned after that same edifice.³⁸⁷

381 I.e., July 1847.

382 B. Young, 6 April 1853 - A, p. 133.

383 C. S. Hawkins, Temples, pp. 46-51.

384 W. D. Halverson, Conference Center, pp. 26, 201-210; G. B. Hinckley, Testimony; K. Sorvig, Learning, p. 107; Zimmer Gunsul Frasca Partnership, Conference Center, pp. 11, 30-35.

385 B. Young, 6 April 1853 - B, p. 32.

386 See D&C 128:13.

387 G. B. Hinckley, Manhattan, p. 423. See also M. J. Brough et al., Temple; S. L. Dew, Hinckley, pp. 481-482; S. Tiffany, City Saints, pp. 96-119.

Excursus 17

The Veil of the Temple

BARKER describes the nature and function of the veil in Israelite temples:

The veil marked the division between the visible and the invisible creation. It represented matter, and was woven from red, blue, purple, and white threads, to represent the four elements from which the material world was made: earth (white), air (blue), fire (red), and water (purple). It was embroidered with cherubim, the winged heavenly beings found throughout the temple—in the Holy of Holies, on the walls of the great hall, and on the veil between them. They could move between the two states of creation, and transmitted heavenly knowledge to earth.³⁸⁸

Anciently, the veil was also identified with the mantle worn by the high priest, “bearing on it the cosmic marks of the compass, the square, the omphalos or universal center, and the eben shatiyyah or solid earth on which a man kneels to praise God.”³⁸⁹ According to Philo, the “priest in the cosmic robes... is the Logos clothed in the material elements.”³⁹⁰ As Barker writes:

Veil and vestments were complementary imagery: the veil symbolized all that stood between human perception and the vision of God, and the vestments symbolized the clothing of the divine in that same material world which also concealed it. Thus the veil and the priestly vestments provided the first Christians with ready imagery to convey what they meant by the incarnation.³⁹¹

At the final stage of temple rites, “the temple is [itself] considered as a person and the veil of the temple as a garment that is worn, as a personification of the sanctuary itself.”³⁹² Gaskill comments:³⁹³

... the book of Hebrews teaches that the veil of the temple represents the flesh of Jesus Christ.³⁹⁴ This being the case, when in [LDS temples] we ceremonially act out our ascent back to God, at the final stages of the endowment a person representing our Savior stands between us and the Father. Jesus Christ is, of course, our Mediator, or go-between.³⁹⁵ Since it is Christ through whom we communicate with our Father (both at the veil and in prayer)—and through whom we enter the celestial kingdom—then it is also Christ who is symbolized by the sacred clothing we receive at the conclusion of the temple initiatory ceremonies. This clothing represents the crucified flesh of Christ and should be received with a covenant and a reminder to always live in accordance with what that newly procured covering represents. This should give new meaning to the idea of taking upon ourselves the name³⁹⁶ or image³⁹⁷ of Christ.

388 M. Barker, Angels, p. 14; cf. M. Barker, Gate, pp. 109-111; M. Barker, Hidden, pp. 18-19.

389 H. W. Nibley, Return, p. 80. See also H. W. Nibley, Vestments, pp. 106-109.

390 E. R. Goodenough, Light, p. 104; cf. M. Barker, Gate, pp. 115-118; M. Barker, Hidden, p. 19.

391 M. Barker, Gate, p. 104; cf. pp. 104-132.

392 H. W. Nibley, Return, p. 81. See also M. Barker, Gate, p. 105; H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 439-440; J. A. Parry et al., Temple in Heaven, pp. 528-529.

393 A. L. Gaskill, Lost, p. 71. See also B. T. Ostler, Clothed; J. W. Welch et al., Gammadia; H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 440.

394 See Hebrews 10:19-22. See also W. Williams, Shadow.

395 See 1 Timothy 2:5; 2 Nephi 2:27.

396 See 2 Nephi 31:13; Mosiah 5:8. See Commentary 3:19-b, p. 177; D. H. Oaks, Taking Upon Us; D. A. Bednar, Name, pp. 98.

397 See Alma 5:19; 1 John 3:1-3.

Excursus 18

Kolob

THE term Kolob “may derive from either of two Semitic roots with the consonants QLB/ QRB. One has the meaning ‘to be near,’ as in Hebrew qarob...³⁹⁸ The other meaning is ‘center, midst,’ as in Hebrew qereb...³⁹⁹ In Arabic, qalb [heart, center]⁴⁰⁰ forms part of the names of several of the brightest stars in the sky, such as Antares... the constellation Scorpio... and Regulus... in the constellation Leo.”⁴⁰¹ Hamblin sees the possibility of a reference in Jewish literature to a governing star named KLB:⁴⁰² “Assuming...an Ethiopic scribal error of za for ka for the admittedly corrupt reading of Zelebsa’el, we arrive at KLBS’L,⁴⁰³ which in Arabic would translate as the ‘KLB of God’ (sha’el meaning simply ‘of God’ in Aramaic).”⁴⁰⁴

Some also see a possible connection with Sirius (the dog star)⁴⁰⁵ or Venus (the morning star⁴⁰⁶), commonly represented in antiquity by the inverted pentagram-shaped star, a symbol occasionally found in Mormon architecture, though lacking authoritative explanation.⁴⁰⁷ The so-called Saturn stones, located directly below the parapet on each of the towers of the Salt Lake Temple,⁴⁰⁸ are also thought by some to represent Kolob, though this interpretation is not without its difficulties.⁴⁰⁹ Given the enigmatic nature of the cosmology of the book of Abraham, it may well be that Kolob is not intended to be given a literal interpretation as a specific celestial body in the visible universe.

For a discussion of various attempts to harmonize theories about the nature and location of Kolob with scientific thinking, see Hansen⁴¹⁰ and Rhodes.⁴¹¹ However, to quote Rhodes and Moody: “The bottom line is that we simply do not have enough information to be able to say with any confidence where Kolob is or what its characteristics are.”⁴¹² 398 F. Brown et al., Lexicon, p. 898.

399 Ibid., p. 899.

400 For a translation of a Sufi text comparing the heart with the throne of God, see J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions, p. 511. See A. at-Tabataba’i, Al-Mizan, 2:225, 4:6-8 for a discussion of the meaning of “heart” in the Qur’ān. See Endnote E-65, p. 720.

401 R. D. Draper et al., Commentary, pp. 289-290. See also M. D. Rhodes, Twenty Years, p. 8. See Endnote E-66, p. 720.

402 See G. W. E. Nickelsburg et al., 1 Enoch, 82:17, p. 115.

403 According to Hamblin, “many of the star names in the book bear recognizable Aramaic names: for example, Berkeel, ‘the Lightning of God,’ and Narel, the ‘light of God’” (W. J. Hamblin, Joseph or Jung?, p. 91).

404 Ibid., p. 91.

405 W. V. Smith, JS Commentary, p. 80.

406 See Revelation 22:16. See Endnote E-67, p. 721.

407 R. G. Oman, Symbolism, p. 60. See Endnote E-68, p. 721.

408 J. E. Talmage, House of the Lord, p. 108.

409 R. G. Oman, Symbolism, pp. 62-63.

410 H. K. Hansen, Astronomy, pp. 181-188.

411 M. D. Rhodes et al., Astronomy.

412 Ibid., p. 21. See also the overview of Moses 3, pp. 137, 139.

FIGURE E19-1. William W. Phelps (1792-1872), Author of “If You Could Hie to Kolob”
FIGURE E19-2. Ralph Vaughan Williams (1872-1958), Arranger of “Kingsfold,” 1935

Excursus 19

“If You Could Hie to Kolob”

*IF you could hie⁴¹³ to Kolob in the twinkling of an eye, And then continue onward with that same speed to fly, Do you think that you could ever, through all eternity, Find out the generation where Gods began to be?*⁴¹⁴

PRESIDENT Boyd K. Packer called the words of this LDS hymn “a great, great revelation that came from William W. Phelps,”⁴¹⁵ and Elder B. H. Roberts praised it as being one of the “strong, stalwart” songs that ought to be preferred to the “namby, pamby, childish hymns that sometimes find their way into [our] repertoire.”⁴¹⁶ Noting the expansiveness of the unique LDS cosmological and theological ideas that it affirms, one musician wryly observed that “[u]nlike such ecumenically inspiring hymns as Come, Come Ye Saints,⁴¹⁷ this is not a hymn that will likely be adopted by other Christian hymnbooks!”⁴¹⁸

The verses not only express the core tenets of what Elder Roberts called “Eternalism,”⁴¹⁹ but, in the view of Elder Harold B. Lee, also raise “a profound question” for those “who would seek to penetrate that curtain of revealed truth.”⁴²⁰ Recalling the perennial hubris of humanity, cosmologist Edward R. Harrison cautioned: “The history of cosmology [and science 413 “Hie” means “to hasten” (D. Harper, Dictionary).

414 Hymns (1985), #284.

415 B. K. Packer, PBS Interview.

416 B. H. Roberts, Seventy’s Course 1 (1907), p. viii. See Endnote E-69, p. 721.

417 Hymns (1985), #30.

418 Return to Nauvoo. See Endnote E-70, p. 721.

419 B. H. Roberts, Comprehensive History, 2:387-388.

420 H. B. Lee, Know, p. 104.

generally] shows us that in every age devout people believe that they have at last discovered the true nature of the Universe, whereas in each case they have devised a world picture—merely a universe—that is like a mask fitted on the face of the still unknown Universe.”⁴²¹

Or see the grand beginning, Where space did not extend? Or view the last creation, Where Gods and matter end? Methinks the Spirit whispers, “No man has found ‘pure space,’ Nor seen the outside curtains, Where nothing has a place.”

Kolob, the place mentioned in the first stanza of the hymn, is described as the “first creation,” a great star that Abraham learned was “nigh unto the throne of God.” Strictly speaking, however, it is not the “celestial, or residence of God” itself⁴²²—as mortals, we live exclusively in time, whereas God’s permanent “residence” is in eternity.⁴²³

Phelps’ question is rhetorical, asserting that no amount of searching, even in Kolob or beyond, will ever reveal an ultimate grand beginning to the process of Creation, for it is eternal—without beginning or end from a human perspective.⁴²⁴ Emerging cosmological theories likewise argue that a correct view of the origins of space and time as we know them must include not only the “big bang” with which our universe began, but also the comprehensive multiverse where “universes continually pop into existence.”⁴²⁵ Such a multiverse “almost certainly [would have] no beginning,” but rather could be “continued indefinitely into the past”⁴²⁶—whatever “past” may mean in a context outside of the “time” of the universe to which we belong.⁴²⁷

The works of God continue, And worlds and lives abound; Improvement and progression Have one eternal round. There is no end to matter; There is no end to space; There is no end to spirit; There is no end to race.

This stanza speaks to the Mormon doctrine of “eternal progression”—the idea that each of us are enjoined to become partners with God in “bring[ing] to pass the immortality and eternal life of man.”⁴²⁸ The text implies that this “eternal round” of “improvement and progression” will continue forever as we move onward toward the perfection of God, in imitation of Jesus Christ.⁴²⁹ Even God Himself continues to “progress” through His endless works and ever-expanding glory.⁴³⁰ President Brigham Young further elaborated: “How many Gods there are, I do not know. But there never was a time when there were not Gods and worlds, and when men were not passing through the same ordeals that we are now passing through. That course has been from all eternity, and it is and will be to all eternity.”⁴³¹

Bushman wrote:

In this cosmology, God does not dominate existence as the conventional Christian God does. He does not make the world out of nothing; He does not make human intelligence; He does not impose His law on His subjects. He invites them to join Him in seeking the fulness of 421 E. R. Harrison, Cosmology, p. 1, cited in E. R. Paul, Science, p. 230; cf. W. E. Evenson, Science, pp. cxiii–cxiv.

422 See Abraham 3:2–10; Abraham, Facsimile 2, Figure 1; Commentary 1:6–g, p. 48; Excursus 7: Time and Eternity, p. 537; Excursus 18: Kolob, p. 565.

423 N. A. Maxwell, Things, p. 29.

424 See D&C 29:33.

425 H. R. Johnson, Big Bang, pp. 202–203. See also K. D. Hagen, Multiverse; M. E. McDonald, Cosmology; cf. D&C 88:37.

426 Cited in H. R. Johnson, Big Bang, p. 298.

427 See Excursus 7: Time and Eternity, p. 537.

428 Moses 1:39.

429 Matthew 5:48, 3 Nephi 12:48.

430 Moses 1:39.

431 B. Young, 8 October 1859, p. 333.

FIGURE E19-3. Generations, 2005. Valeriano Ugolini, 1948-

SEE COLOR PLATE E19-3.

*And Adam knew his wife, and she bare unto him sons and daughters, and they began to multiply and to replenish the earth.*¹ Valeriano Ugolini spent his childhood in the tiny village of Montalbo in northern Italy. At the age of eleven, he went to Rome to study to become a Catholic priest. His interest in art was nurtured during his five-year stay at the Seminario Minore in the Vatican, surrounded by masterpieces of religious art. Ugolini was baptized a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in 1971, and immigrated to the United States in 1991.

Ugolini has developed a unique way of conveying scriptural messages through symbolic renderings. His art conveys invisible visions of spiritual worlds that whisper esoteric messages through essential forms and brilliant colors. His careful juxtapositions of recurring symbols represent the relationship between the human and the divine. Ugolini's pieces emerge as "alchemical compositions," distilling eternal truths from deft combinations of "primary pigments such as red, blue and gold."²

In Ugolini's words: "Generations depicts the endlessness of our ascendancy, beginning with the individual tree in the center, its parents to the left and grandparents to the right. The checkerboard symbolizes the spiritual plane where mankind, experiencing both good and evil, may commune with Deity. At the horizon are preceding generations. Alternatively, if visualized from within the painting itself looking out, one sees the individual facing the unknown, with a myriad of ancestors standing behind him. They form a powerful protective shield around this newest family member who is venturing out into the future. God appears in His glorious golden sky in human form (red), symbolizing His interest and active participation in human events, as if He were one of us. The arch of golden spheres represents ancestors who have been perfected in Christ, and who now dwell with Him and with our Father in Heaven. They are shown in the form of an upside-down arch to represent their closeness to our world."

1 Moses 5:2.

2 Valeriano Ugolini.

existence which He Himself enjoys. [Joseph] Smith's theology did not simplify the Universe as conventional Christian theology does. Traditionally, God is the all-encompassing being that makes and comprehends everything; the Universe is essentially unitary, a manifestation of a single divine mind. [Joseph] Smith's universe, filled with loads of unorganized matter, all manner of independent intelligences, and millions of earths, is profoundly pluralistic, made up of lots of things. God advances through the realms of unorganized matter, bringing order to this pluralistic universe, but not everything can be reduced to His mind and will.⁴³²

Though there are many gods in eternity, LDS worship is directed only to the Father and the Son. Recalling the words of the apostle Paul, Joseph Smith explained that while "there are Gods many and Lords many[,]... there is but one God"⁴³³—that is pertaining to us."⁴³⁴ Moreover, it is important to understand that "the Mormon God is as unified as the trinity of Christian theology. These Gods do not contend with one another like the gods in the pagan pantheon. They have agreed on the same principles and work for the same end. They are one as Christ and the Father are one. God invites humans to join in this grand alliance, much as Christ prayed that His disciples would be one in Him as He is one with the Father."⁴³⁵

A potential source of misunderstanding is the word "race" at the end of this stanza, which might be erroneously interpreted as implying that "that the superficial racial divisions of the human race will persist eternally."⁴³⁶ Orson Scott Card clarified: "[Race] is a word whose meaning and context have radically changed since [the time of] W. W. Phelps... He meant, 432 R. L. Bushman, Mormonism, pp. 73-74.

433 See 1 Corinthians 8:5-6.

434 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 16 June 1844, p. 370.

435 R. L. Bushman, Mormonism, p. 74. See John 17:21.

436 O. S. Card, Sharing.

by ‘race,’ the ongoing propagation of an individual’s progeny” in eternity—yet another doctrine peculiar to Mormonism.⁴³⁷

*There is no end to virtue; There is no end to might; There is no end to wisdom; There is no end to light. There is no end to union; There is no end to youth; There is no end to priesthood; There is no end to truth. There is no end to glory; There is no end to love; There is no end to being; There is no death above.*⁴³⁸

These final stanzas reflect a shift in perspective from the cosmological to the personal. Elder Bruce R. McConkie saw them as teaching “very effectively the endless nature of all good things.”⁴³⁹ In Eternity, every true joy of mortality will be continued, expanded, and intensified, while every source of earthly sorrow will have disappeared forever.

Having received a superior education for his day, early convert William W. Phelps was almost immediately pressed into service as an author, editor, and publisher for the Church, and quickly became an intimate of the Prophet. Later, during the Missouri troubles, however, he became disaffected (1837), was excommunicated (1838),⁴⁴⁰ and proffered damaging testimony against the Saints (1839). Notwithstanding all this, he was generously forgiven by the Prophet upon receipt of a letter evidencing his sincere repentance. Joseph Smith’s letter of reconciliation closed with the touching words: “Come on, dear brother, since the war is past, / For friends at first, are friends again at last.”⁴⁴¹ Phelps was zealous in his faithfulness to the Church for the remainder of his life, writing many hymns—including the heartfelt *Praise to the Man*⁴⁴² in honor of the martyred Prophet. The words of If You Could Hie to Kolob are inscribed on the modern stone monument that now marks his grave site.

Among the last of Phelps’ many hymn texts, the verses appeared in the Deseret News in 1856.⁴⁴³ Historian Lynn Carson argues that the “ideas and language mirror [the] speculative theology and language” of Elder Orson Pratt, and were doubtless inspired by his “astronomical and cosmological writings and lectures of the early 1850s.”⁴⁴⁴ In the 1889 Latter Day Saints’ Psalmody,⁴⁴⁵ the words were given a musical setting by Joseph Daynes in which he borrowed, note for note, the opening line of a waltz from George Careless’ play Cinderella.⁴⁴⁶ The 1985 Hymns of the Church retained the words while newly adopting the more meditative English folk tune that Vaughan Williams called Kingsfold, after the name of a town in which he found and recorded the song in one of its variants.

The same year that Phelps died, Ralph⁴⁴⁷ Vaughan Williams was born into a family of lawyers and country clergymen on his father’s side, and a line of scientists (Darwin⁴⁴⁸) and craftsmen (Wedgwood) on his mother’s side.⁴⁴⁹ His music can be described as quintessentially English, a genre that he not only reflected but also helped shape and refine.⁴⁵⁰

437 Ibid.

438 See Endnote E-71, p. 721.

439 B. R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, s.v. Endless, p. 225.

440 See Endnote E-72, p. 721.

441 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 22 July 1840, pp. 166, paraphrasing C. Wesley, Epistle to Whitefield, p. 3: “Come on, my Whitefield! (Since the strife is past, / And friends at first are friends again at last).” D. Jarratt, Life, p. 32, like Joseph Smith, uses “war” in place of “strife.” Cf. G. B. Hinckley, Kindness, p. 60; B. K. Packer, Mantle, pp. 15-16.

442 Hymns (1985), #27.

443 W. W. Phelps, There Is No End.

444 Cited in Return to Nauvoo. Note, however, that the poem was dedicated to “President Brigham Young.”

445 G. Careless et al., Psalmody.

446 M. Hicks, Music, p. 123.

447 See Endnote E-73, p. 721.

448 See Endnote E-74, p. 721.

449 J. E. Lunn et al., Pictorial Biography, p. 1; U. Vaughan Williams, R.V.W., p. 1.

450 See Endnote E-75, p. 721.

Vaughan Williams began his personal collection of over 800 English folk songs in 1903.⁴⁵¹ Several were adapted and harmonized for inclusion in The English Hymnal, for which he was the primary musical editor.⁴⁵² Besides If You Could Hie to Kolob, the 1985 LDS hymnbook⁴⁵³ credits Vaughan Williams as the arranger of I Saw a Mighty Angel Fly (#15) and All Creatures of Our God and King (#62), and as the composer of For All the Saints (#82). Vaughan Williams also composed several longer religious works, including the requiem-like Dona Nobis Pacem,⁴⁵⁴ a cantata for mixed chorus on the Nativity (Hodie), a ballet inspired by William Blake's illustrations for the book of Job, and an opera based on John Bunyan's The Pilgrim's Progress. One of his final works, still incomplete at the time of his death, was a set of carol tunes and incidental music for a Christmas play.⁴⁵⁵ "Despite the religious subject-matter of many of his works, he was described by his wife Ursula as 'an atheist ... [who] later drifted into a cheerful agnosticism.'"⁴⁵⁶ Like Thomas Hardy, whose lyrics Vaughan Williams selected for inclusion in his 1954 Hodie, he deeply doubted the existence of God, yet sometimes seemed to write as if he were still "hoping it might be so."⁴⁵⁷

Vaughan Williams had first discovered a version of Kingsfold in 1893, published as Dives and Lazarus in a book entitled English County Songs.⁴⁵⁸ He later described the event: "I had that sense of recognition — 'here's something which I have known all my life—only I didn't know it!'"⁴⁵⁹ Indeed the tune, whose form is AABA, with subtle naturally-flowing variations on A, seems to sing "as if known before the singer knew it."⁴⁶⁰ "It has that strain of heroic melancholy and profound peace that is religiose without being religious; it is an evocation of the ancient rhythms of the English countryside and English life, stripped of sentiment and romanticism,"⁴⁶¹ yet capable of echoing Vaughan Williams' personal mysticism. Unquestionably attested by 1639, the tune has been paired with a surprisingly wide range of lyrics—both sacred and secular.⁴⁶² Indeed, its popularity led an 1859 editor to observe: "If the reader should meet any half a-dozen men perambulating the streets of London together, and singing, the probabilities are great that they sing to this tune."⁴⁶³

In a small ceremony attended by close friends, Vaughan Williams was laid to rest in Westminster Abbey. Kennedy described the scene: "Into the silence of the Abbey came the first notes of the Five Variants of 'Dives and Lazarus'[, his moving orchestral arrangement of Kingsfold]."⁴⁶⁴ It was as if Vaughan Williams himself had spoken. The tune which he had loved all his life, which came from the soil of England, ageless and anonymous, which he had used in so many of his own compositions, was the perfect choice to create a mood of remembrance which will haunt those who experienced it to the end of their days."⁴⁶⁵

451 R. Vaughan Williams, Music, pp. 252-253.

452 P. Dearmer et al., Hymnal. See Endnote E-76, p. 721.

453 Hymns (1985).

454 See Endnote E-77, p. 721.

455 See Endnote E-78, p. 722.

456 Ralph Vaughan Williams, Vaughan Williams.

457 T. Hardy, Oxen.

458 L. E. Broadwood et al., County Songs.

459 M. Kennedy, Works, p. 19; cf. R. Vaughan Williams, Music, p. 252; S. Heffer, Vaughan Williams, p. 23.

460 P. Westermeyer, People, p. 331.

461 S. Heffer, Vaughan Williams, pp. 23-24.

462 See Endnote E-79, p. 722.

463 W. Chappell, Ballad, pp. 747-748, cited in Dives and Lazarus, Carols.

464 See Endnote E-80, p. 722.

465 M. Kennedy, Works, p. 392.

Excursus 20

The Circle and the Square

ALLUSIONS to the symbols of the square and the compass can be found in several places in the Old Testament.⁴⁶⁶ The intersection of the circle and square represents the coming together of heaven and earth, in both the sacred geometry of the temple and the soul of the seeker of Wisdom.⁴⁶⁷ Lyon notes that, in a personal sense, these symbols “can represent the goal of making spiritual aspirations (the compass) triumph over physical passions (the square), as well as other moral principles.”⁴⁶⁸ The fully-rendered figures of the circle and the square manifest in their completeness what the tools of the compass and the square symbolize only in anticipation.

In Hindu and Buddhist thought, a similar concept is represented in the mandala. The center of the mandala may be seen as an undimensioned point of origin, the divine “essence” toward which the outer circumferences of the figure grasp.⁴⁶⁹ “The shape, with its focus on the circle (referring to the heavens) and the square (referring to the earth), forms the foundation of the traditional view that the cosmic ritual structure brings heaven and earth together. In this place the initiate confronts and achieves union with the divine realm.”⁴⁷⁰

In a temple context, these symbols establish the building “as the center, with the world tree at its axis, uniting the three main levels of the universe and sanctifying the four world regions.”⁴⁷¹ A succinct list of examples from Nibley evidences the ubiquity of the symbol of the circle and the square in ancient design: “The Roman quadrata represents the four corners of the earth, and the center of everything... But it’s also the picture of a wheel. The Babylonians combined the two very neatly in their cosmic design. It’s the wheel that goes round and round but never moves. For the nomads, it’s a qubba—a dome; the Latin word is cupola: a cap, cup. It represents the dome of the heavens, and you find it everywhere as the common shape of churches. And the square church accompanies it [e.g., as in the common form of the basilica of the Roman Catholic Church]. The dome, like a stupa in India, is mounted over a perfect cube. To the nomads the qubay, or domed red leather tent of the chief, is the qubba.”⁴⁷²

The compass and square also can be seen as representing the covenants that bind together the process of Creation, a work initiated by God and continued in partnership with man.⁴⁷³ French workers’ guilds were known as compagnonnages, a term derived from Latin roots connoting the sharing of bread (cum + panis), but which Agricola Perdiguer also linked to the idea of the “compass.” Note the following dictum: “Who was Compagnon (= Journeyman) at the beginning? The One who transformed matter with the help of the compass and the square.”⁴⁷⁴ Consistent with this symbolism, Frye notes:

466 E.g., Proverbs 8:27; Job 26:10; Isaiah 28:7, 40:12, 22; Ezekiel 27:1; Amos 7:8.

467 J. M. Lundquist, Fundamentals, pp. 666-671; cf. Matthew 6:10. See the discussion of heaven as a circular realm of pure fire in Excursus 11: The Sacred Circle, p. 547.

468 M. P. Lyon, Set Design, p. 272. See also Excursus 50: Fu Xi and Nü Gua, p. 654 and J. E. Seach, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 992-997.

469 M. G. Rje, Buddhist, p. 270.

470 J. M. Lundquist, Fundamentals, p. 666.

471 J. M. Lundquist, Meeting Place, p. 16.

472 H. W. Nibley, Circle, p. 144. See also B. J. Petersen, Nibley, p. 359.

473 See the overview of Moses 4, pp. 216-220.

474 J.-C. Peretz, L'outil, p. 51. The French reads: Qui est Compagnon à l'origine? Celui qui transforme la matière à l'aide du compas et de l'équerre.

An early fourteenth century illustration from the great English Holkham Bible shows Christ in the center circumscribing the visible universe by use of a compass. It is interesting to note that the fourteenth century artist... placed the realm of Satan entirely outside the created Universe, ...indicated by the circle which the Son's compasses inscribe upon space: in the upper segment we see Satan seated upon his throne and honored by the rebel angels or deplored by faithful angels, whereas in the segment beneath we see the flaming jaws of Leviathan which represent Satan's kingdom in Hell. Milton's placing of Hell entirely outside the Universe⁴⁷⁵ has often been remarked upon as one of his most brilliant metaphors, as indeed it is, but the way was prepared for it by the visual arts."⁴⁷⁶

In early Christian contexts, the symbols of the square and the circle or compass evince the conceptual tie between altar cloths, temple veils, and sacred clothing. For example, patterns with variants of these symbols appear on portrayals of altar cloths and temple veils in the churches of St. Vitale and St. Apollinare in Classe in Ravenna,⁴⁷⁷ and in a strikingly similar depiction of the Tabernacle in the Pentateuch de Tours.⁴⁷⁸ In his catalogue of textiles from Greco-Roman times found at Egyptian burial grounds, Kendrick notes the prominence of the symbol of the square in various contexts, including clothing, and explicitly links these decorations to the Ravenna mosaics:

An outstanding feature of the decoration of a number of large cloths... is the characteristic border composed of four ornamental right-angles. This ornamentation would be very suitable for floor-coverings; and it is easy to show that it was applied to curtains and hangings; but that it was also used on cloaks is made clear by the decoration of certain mummy-cases, where it is seen on the shoulder. Early altar-coverings, as represented in mosaics and illuminated manuscripts, often had this form of decoration, and it is also to be found quite frequently in reliefs and stone carvings. The resemblance to the Greek letter gamma has given to cloths thus ornamented the name of gammadion, gammadije, or gammidae....

With regard to the form and decoration of the garments, comparisons with representations in mosaics, paintings, and carvings prove conclusively that those worn in Egypt were not peculiar to that country... The early Christian monuments of the city of Ravenna, as would be naturally expected, provide abundant material for comparison with the Egyptian stuffs....

The two famous mosaics in the church of S. Vitale, representing the Emperor Justinian (d. 565) and his queen Theodora, with attendants, are a very valuable record of the costume and ornaments of the time... The tunics and mantles of the women on the Empress's left have square, star-shaped and circular panels, and some are covered with small diaper patterns...⁴⁷⁹ A mosaic in S. Vitale, representing the Sacrifices of Abel and Melchizedek, shows an altar-covering with angular ornaments, and a large eight-pointed star in the middle. Numerous ornamental details of the mosaics at Ravenna also resemble in a remarkable way the more elaborate patterns of the stuffs from Egypt... It should also be remembered that, although none of the Ravenna mosaics are earlier than the fifth century, many of the ornamental details were survivals of patterns used at an earlier date.⁴⁸⁰

In a Hellenistic Jewish context, Goodenough discusses the appearance of gammadia at Dura Europos. These symbols were not only depicted in murals of holy figures, but also were found in a cache of white textile fragments discovered at the site that "may well have been the contents of a box where sacred vestments were kept, or they may have been 475 Cf. the concept of "outer darkness" (D&C 101:91, 133:72-73).

476 R. M. Frye, Paradise.

477 See Figures E20-1 and E20-2, p. 573.

478 See Figure E53-3, p. 671.

479 = repeating small patterns, e.g., interlocked diamonds.

480 A. F. Kendrick, Textiles 1, pp. 32, 36, 37, 38-39. Thanks to Bryce Haymond for pointing out this reference.

FIGURE E20-1. Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Vitale, presbytery, left wall, central lunette, ca. 538-545 CE.

FIGURE E20-2. Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Apollinare in Classe, apse, right side, ca. 520 CE. Photos: Val Brinkerhoff.

SEE COLOR PLATES E20-1 AND E20-2.

These beautifully-rendered mosaics from churches in Ravenna, Italy connect the Old Testament stories of the sacrificial offerings of Abel, Melchizedek, and Abraham to the “great and last” sacrifice of Jesus Christ.¹

Michael P. Lyon describes the mosaic at right as showing “the priest-king Melchizedek in a purple cloak, offering bread and wine at the altar.”² The white altar cloth is decorated with two sets of gammadia,³ as well as . . . two interlocked squares in gold. Abel offers his lamb as Abraham gently pushes Isaac forward. The hand of God reaches down to this sacred meeting through red veils adorned with golden gammadia on either side. The theme is the great sacrifice of Christ, which brings together the righteous prophets from the past as well as the four corners of the present world, thereby uniting all time and space.”⁴

Though the name of Melchizedek is usually associated with the higher or “Holy Priesthood,”⁵ of whom Jesus Christ Himself was a “similitude,”⁶ there is no contradiction in his officiating in ordinances of sacrifice associated with the Aaronic or Levitical priesthood,⁷ in this case, the sacrifice of the Son of God. Relating the symbol of the square to ancient Jewish practice, Welch has noted the Talmud’s demands “that priests execute their most sacred religious duty, that of sacrifice, by applying the blood of the sacrificial animal to the altar in a gamma pattern.”⁸

In Roman Catholic tradition, the linen altar cloth, called the corporal (Latin corpus = body), is said to be modeled after the burial garment of Christ. Thus, both literally at the Redeemer’s death and figuratively in the sacrament of the Lord’s supper, the cloth was meant “to cover and enfold the Body and Blood of Christ.”⁹

The symbol of the interlocked squares shown in these altar cloths has become commonly known in LDS circles as the “seal of Melchizedek,” though actually very little can be reliably said about the meaning, derivation, and antiquity of the term.¹⁰ By analogy to the symbolism of the circle and the square, one might speculate that the coming together of the gammadia in the symbol of two interlocking squares represents in completion or fullness what the separated gammadia signify in anticipation. In His Atonement, represented here by the sacrificial and sacramental altar, Jesus Christ fulfilled the law of Moses.¹¹

1 Alma 34:10.

2 Genesis 14:18-20.

3 See Figure E53-3, p. 671 for a similar example of gammadia on an altar cloth and temple veil.

4 In H. W. Nibley, Vestments, p. 109. Lyon has confirmed that he was the author of this caption, not Nibley (M. P. Lyon, 8 September 2008).

5 D&C 107:1-4.

6 Hebrews 7:15.

7 D&C 107:10.

8 J. W. Welch, Gammadia, p. 254. Welch cites Talmud, Zebahim 53b.

9 H. Thurston, Corporal, p. 387.

10 For example, a caption by Lyon in an article by Nibley labels the symbol of the interlocked squares the “seal of Melchizedek.” Lyon recalls the term being mentioned a Catholic commentary on symbols that called it that because of the Ravenna mosaics, but qualifies his statement with the assertion that it is a rare term with no contemporary explanations (M. P. Lyon, 8 September 2008). Recollections of the architect of the San Diego temple, where the symbol was extensively used, attribute the term to Nibley himself (B. Haymond, Seal of Melchizedek 4). See Endnote E-289, p. 783.

11 3 Nephi 15:2-10.

FIGURE E20-3. Linen Cloth, ca. 300-400

This cloth comes from burying grounds in the low sandhills east of “Akmim, in Upper Egypt, on the right bank of the Nile, 315 miles above Cairo, and 140 miles below Thebes... It was one of the chief seats of the linen manufacture for which Egypt was famous throughout the civilized world.” The cloth is very large, measuring 9 ft. 6 in. by 6 ft. 3 in.

Kendrick gives the following description: “Linen cloth, faced with long loops, with woven ornament in smaller purple woolen loops. The border consists of four deep angular bands of simple geometrical ornament; between these, in the middle of each side, is a small panel connected with the cornerbands by narrow stripes, thus forming a continuous border. The panels consist of interlaced ornament forming squares: three are of the same design; the fourth is larger and different. Within each angle is an ornamental circle; there are two designs, those in opposite corners being the same. A large circle of similar character occupies the middle of the cloth. At each end are two parallel stripes of running-wave pattern.”¹

See Plate 19 in Kendrick’s volume for another example of a cloth with four gammadia at the corners enclosing a large roundel. Plates 3, 4, and 22 include examples of interlocked squares, sometimes with a circle in the interior.

1 A. F. Kendrick, Textiles 1, pp. 9, 42.

fetishistic marks, originally on sacred robes, that were preserved after the garments had been outworn.”⁴⁸¹ Goodenough points to similar findings on Christian robes, in hellenized Egypt, Palmyra, and on Roman figures of Victory which “so commonly appears as a symbol of immortality.”⁴⁸² Welch discusses Goodenough’s conclusions, and reports similar findings at Masada and elsewhere.⁴⁸³

Differences between symbolic markings on the robes of individuals are evident in mosaics depicting processions of saints in the Basilicas of St. Apollinare Nuovo and St. Vitale in Ravenna. It is conceivable that these differences might correspond to gradations in status or authority.⁴⁸⁴ Goodenough, following hints from Philo, discussed the possibility of distinctions of this kind linked to initiation rites among mystical Jews.⁴⁸⁵ For example, besides the more common clavi and gams, Goodenough describes an ornament in “the form of a stripe ending in an arrow, which also is represented in the synagogue.”⁴⁸⁶ Moreover, a photograph by Griggs of well-preserved clothing at an Egyptian burial site showed an “early Christian garment... made of wool [that] was placed next to the body. The garment has a woven rosette over each breast, a hemmed cut on the abdomen, and a rosette above the right knee.”⁴⁸⁷ Griggs also found that some burials included “one or more robes with linen strips wrapped around the upper half of the body and gathered into a knot on either the left... or, more commonly, on the right shoulder,” indicating priestly authority.

481 E. R. Goodenough, Garments, p. 225; cf. E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 9:127-129.

482 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 9:163.

483 J. W. Welch et al., Gammadia.

484 Perhaps paralleling this concept in modern times, Brigham Young raised the possibility that a given individual might be limited to receiving an Aaronic Priesthood portion of the temple endowment only (B. Young, 10-13 June 1864, p. 309; also cited in J. Smith, Jr., Words, p. 304, n. 21). See also Excursus 3: Temple Blessings in the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood, p. 519.

485 See Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations of the Mysteries, p. 663.

486 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 9:127. See also the dress of the last person on the lower row of E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 11, fig. 339. An arrow, of course, can easily be seen as representing movement leading toward a desired destination. The point of the arrow may also symbolize the compass that points the correct way, aptly complementing the meaning of the square gammadia.

487 C. W. Griggs, Evidences, p. 227.

Excursus 21

The Power and Premortal Status of Satan

IN his poetic rendition of D&C 76, Joseph Smith wrote that Lucifer had once been “an angel of light, in authority great,” and had initially attained a “Godified state.”⁴⁸⁸ Elder William W. Phelps wrote that, after his rebellion, Satan “lost the glory, the honor, power, and dominion of a god, and the knowledge, Spirit, authority and keys of the priesthood of the Son of God.”⁴⁸⁹ Patristic writers held a similar view of Satan’s former preeminence.⁴⁹⁰

Both the Prophet Joseph Smith and William W. Phelps more specifically stated that Lucifer was “the next heir to Jesus Christ,”⁴⁹¹ and Brigham Young is recorded as saying that Satan was “third in power, prince of the air, [but] had a spirit like Cain.”⁴⁹² Likewise, a Coptic text asserts that Satan formerly was the supreme archangel,⁴⁹³ and that Michael assumed the title of “General-in-Chief of all the hosts of the heavens” following Lucifer’s rebellion.⁴⁹⁴

Finding the idea that Lucifer was a spirit child of God repugnant, some non-Mormon groups have publicly caricatured and ridiculed this doctrine in the media. For an official statement explaining this belief, see Answering Questions: Jesus and Satan. See also Jesus Christ is the Brother, where a statement by Lactantius is cited as one example of how this idea was not foreign to the orthodoxy of early Christians.⁴⁹⁵

Now operating on the earth, the Devil retains much power. Summarizing the Prophet’s teachings on this topic, Andrus writes:⁴⁹⁶

In the work of deception, Lucifer is a master artist. His power, Joseph Smith contended, “has been and still is much underrated.”⁴⁹⁷ He said: “The Devil has great power to deceive; he will transform things as to make one gape at those who are doing the will of God.”⁴⁹⁸ The Prophet referred to Lucifer as a skillful orator and as a being of great power,⁴⁹⁹ who currently manifests a “smooth, sophisticated influence” among men.⁵⁰⁰ Exclaimed the latter-day seer: “Think of a spirit who was sufficiently courageous to measure strength with his Father and Elder Brother, defying their authority, and when cast from heaven for his rebellion could have a retinue of one-third of its innumerable hosts follow him.”⁵⁰¹ So great is Satan’s power that “his influence can only be rebuked by the great Jehovah, who restrains his power only when attempting a greater destruction than was allowed his majesty.”⁵⁰² 488 J. Smith, Jr. (or W. W. Phelps), A Vision, 1 February 1843, stanza 21, p. 82, cited in L. E. Dahl, Vision, p. 298.

489 W. W. Phelps, Answer, p. 758.

490 G. A. Anderson, Ezekiel, pp. 140-141.

491 J. Smith, Jr., 6 April 1843, as reported in E. England, Laub, p. 22; W. W. Phelps, Answer, p. 758.

492 B. Young, December 1844, as reported in E. England, Laub, p. 28; cf. Ephesians 2:2.

493 In one Christian text, Satan makes the following claim: “Michael told me that I would be foremost of all” (M. Herbert, Irish Apocrypha, p. 10).

494 E. A. W. Budge, Rebellion, pp. 294-295; cf. W. L. Lipscomb, Creation, 5, 9, p. 119, G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, 47(39):2, p. 86E; W. L. Lipscomb, Creation, 5, p. 261; A. Kulik, Retroverting, Apocalypse of Abraham 13:14, p. 20. See Excursus 23: The Roles of Christ, Adam, and Michael, p. 582.

495 Lactantius, Institutes, 2:9, pp. 52-53. For a later example of this concept in Bogomilism, see I. Couliano, Tree, p. 201, citing, among others, M. Psellus, Daemons, pp. 19-20; Cosmas, Traité, 13, p. 77.

496 H. L. Andrus, God, p. 284.

497 As related by John Bernhisel in R. C. Gemmell, Early, pp. 8-11; cf. W. F. Anderson, Bernhisel, p. 3. See Endnote E-81, p. 723.

498 J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 28 April 1842, 4:605; J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 28 April 1842, p. 227.

499 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 2 July 1839, p. 162; J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 2 July 1839, 3:392; cf. Jacob 7:4.

500 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 2 January 1843, p. 270; J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 2 January 1843, 5:218.

501 As related in R. C. Gemmell, Early, pp. 8-11; cf. W. F. Anderson, Bernhisel, pp. 3-4.

502 See R. C. Gemmell, Early, pp. 8-11; cf. W. F. Anderson, Bernhisel, p. 4.

Bushman describes Satan as a “magnetic figure. He draws followers who become angels to the Devil.”⁵⁰³ In fact, in Paradise Lost, the figure of Satan is drawn so compellingly that William Blake became convinced that Milton identified with him. King’s analysis of the relevant passages, however, convinced him that Milton knew the distinction between magnificence and manipulation:

Blake was speaking as a romantic when he said that the Devil is the hero of Paradise Lost. Milton knew exactly what he was doing with the Devil’s speeches. If we analyze Paradise Lost with care, we will find that the Devil’s speeches are all political speeches, carefully made, carefully crafted, but entirely devoid of feeling because they are intended to manipulate the other devils, humanity, and the Devil himself. (One of the worst things that rhetoricians do is to manipulate themselves.) The Devil’s speeches are clever, but they are devilish, they are not magnificent.⁵⁰⁴

Charles Williams similarly concluded by observing that Milton’s critics missed the point “that Satan [was] supposed to be Satan, and therefore a tempter.”⁵⁰⁵

503 R. L. Bushman, Rough Stone, p. 457.

504 A. H. King, Anglo-Saxon, p. 170.

505 Cited in W. Hooper, Lewis Companion, p. 461. See Endnote E-82, p. 723.

Excursus 22

The Nature of Satan's Premortal Proposal

Because relatively few details about the “war in heaven”⁵⁰⁶ have been revealed, it is not surprising that Mormons have gradually filled in certain particulars of the story as best they can on their own. In doing so, a set of basic assumptions about Satan's premortal plans and doings have become widely accepted. In this Excursus, we explore three questions relating to these commonly-held assumptions:⁵⁰⁷

1. What did Satan mean when he proposed to “redeem all mankind”?⁵⁰⁸
2. By what means did Satan seek to “destroy the agency of man”?⁵⁰⁹
3. Why was it essential that premortal spirits be given the opportunity to receive a body?

A close examination of Joseph Smith's statements regarding these issues raises the question as to whether all of the traditional assumptions should continue to be taken for granted.

1. What Did Satan Mean When He Proposed to “Redeem All Mankind”?

Describing the contrast between Lucifer's proposal and the plan of the Father that was advocated by the premortal Jesus Christ, Joseph Smith taught:

The contention in Heaven was—Jesus said there would be certain souls that would not be saved; and the Devil said he could save them all, and laid his plans before the grand council, who gave their vote in favor of Jesus Christ. So the Devil rose up in rebellion against God, and was cast down, with all who put up their heads for him.⁵¹⁰

The most common understanding of this statement is that it implies a difference in the consequences of the two plans for mankind in general. In other words, it is assumed that according to the plan advocated by Jesus, only the righteous would be saved, whereas in the Devil's plan, “all generations of man... would be returned into the presence of God.”⁵¹¹ However, if we can trust the accuracy of a retrospective summary of a discourse by the Prophet from the journal of George Laub, the controversy highlighted in this statement more specifically concerned the fate of the “sons of perdition”.⁵¹²

Jesus Christ... stated [that] He could save all those who did not sin against the Holy Ghost and they would obey the code of laws that was given.⁵¹³

Laub's version of the statement emphasizes the limits of the guarantee of salvation promised by Jesus Christ. While, of course, allowing for the possibility of exaltation for the obedient, its burden in context was to lay out the major differences with Satan's proposal. The statement implies that Jesus' Atonement could only provide absolute assurance of a minimal form of ⁵⁰⁶ Revelation 12:6.

⁵⁰⁷ An expanded discussion of this topic can be found in J. M. Bradshaw et al., Mormonism's Satan.

⁵⁰⁸ Moses 4:1.

⁵⁰⁹ Moses 4:3.

⁵¹⁰ J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 7 April 1844, p. 357.

⁵¹¹ D. Williams, Idiot's Guide, p. 24.

⁵¹² D&C 76:32-43.

⁵¹³ J. Smith, Jr., cited in E. England, Laub, discourse apparently given 7 April 1844, p. 22, spelling and punctuation standardized. This statement is consistent with John 6:39-40.

salvation, namely, that every soul, except those who sinned against the Holy Ghost, would be “resurrected to [at least] a telestial glory, escaping the second, i.e., spiritual death.”⁵¹⁴

Satan, on the other hand, was reported in Laub’s recollection of the Prophet’s statement to have countered with an absurdly unconditional proposal:

Send me, I can save all, even those who sinned against the Holy Ghost.⁵¹⁵

Apparently trying to do away with the need for an Atonement, Satan is here portrayed as having “sought... to redeem... all in their sins.”⁵¹⁶ It is at the very least questionable whether or not such a “redemption” really would “save” anyone in any sense of the word worth caring about. Be that as it may, however, it is certain that without the empowering Atonement, none could hope to ever attain the degree of righteousness and virtue required for exaltation and a return to the presence of God⁵¹⁷—for, as President Brigham Young said, “if you undertake to save all, you must save them in unrighteousness and corruption.”⁵¹⁸ Following the logic of Laub’s account, this option presumably would have been most appealing to those spirits who would stand to benefit most from it; namely, those who had already manifested a proclivity toward the unpardonable sin and, preeminently, Satan himself.

2. By What Means Did Satan Seek to “Destroy the Agency of Man”?

The book of Moses states that Satan “sought to destroy the agency of man.”⁵¹⁹ The means by which this would have been accomplished has not been authoritatively explained. However, a common LDS assumption is that, as part of the Devil’s premortal proposal, an element of compulsion was required—the idea that Satan advocated “the assertion of raw power to coerce moral sanctity from humanity.”⁵²⁰ For example, in an article in the Encyclopedia of Mormonism, Riddle writes:

Lucifer’s plan proposed to “save” all of the Father’s children by forcing each to obey the Father’s law in all things.⁵²¹

Similarly, Ludlow states that:

Lucifer... wanted to modify our agency so that there would be no opportunity at all to sin, thus enabling all God’s children to return to their celestial existence.⁵²²

Yet, at least insofar as an analogy can be drawn between this proposal and life on earth today, there are at least two reasons why such a proposal could not have succeeded:⁵²³

1. The principle of agency is part of mankind’s eternal nature, and continues to operate even in the most coercive situations imaginable. Elder Dallin H. Oaks draws “the distinction between agency (the power of choice), which is God-given, and freedom, the right to act upon our choices.”⁵²⁴ He argues that “no person or organization can take away our 514 B. R. McConkie, Promised Messiah, pp. 271-275; cf. D&C 76:43-44, J. F. Smith, Gospel Doctrine, June 1918, p. 434; J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 10 March 1844, p. 339; 7 April 1844, p. 358.

515 J. Smith, Jr., apparently 7 April 1844, reported in E. England, Laub, p. 22. See Endnote E-83, p. 726.

516 O. Pratt, 18 July 1880, p. 288; cf. S. J. Condie, Agency, p. 6, Helaman 5:10-11.

517 See Endnote E-84, p. 723.

518 B. Young, 30 October 1870, p. 282.

519 Ibid.

520 J. M. McLachlan, Modernism Controversy, p. 62. See Endnote E-85, p. 726.

521 C. C. Riddle, Devils, p. 379. See Endnote E-86, p. 726.

522 V. L. Ludlow, Principles, p. 148.

523 See Endnote E-87, p. 724.

524 See D&C 101:78.

free agency in mortality”—“what can be taken away or reduced by the conditions of mortality is our freedom.”⁵²⁵ And even if every vestige of freedom to act outwardly in accordance with one’s choices were revoked, we would still retain, in the famous words of Frankl, “the last of the human freedoms—to choose one’s attitude in any given set of circumstances, to choose one’s own way.”⁵²⁶ In this sense, agency can be primarily conceived, in the words of Joseph Smith, as “free independence of mind.”⁵²⁷

2. Exaltation cannot be obtained through mere abstinence from sin, nor from the completion of some number of good acts. About this misperception, C. S. Lewis wrote: “We might think that God wanted simply obedience to a set of rules; whereas He really wants people of a particular sort.”⁵²⁸ Consistent with this view, Elder Oaks has taught that the final judgment does not consist of “just an evaluation of a sum total of good and evil acts—what we have done. It is an acknowledgment of the final effect of our acts and thoughts—what we have become. It is not enough for anyone just to go through the motions.”⁵²⁹ Hugh Nibley explains that, for the same reason, even the saving ordinances, as necessary as they are, in and of themselves “are mere forms. They do not exalt us; they merely prepare us to be ready in case we ever become eligible.”⁵³⁰ In short, even if there were a way that people could be continually compelled to “do the right things,” they could not qualify to enter God’s presence without a concomitant transformation of their natures.⁵³¹ Such a change, effected throughout the duration of an individual’s probation, is predicated on the righteous exercise of agency coupled with the atoning power of Jesus Christ.⁵³²

In light of these considerations, should the element of compulsion as the central feature of Satan’s premortal proposal be assumed without question? Such a plan seems thoroughly unworkable, if not impossible. Could there be some alternative to the traditional view on the nature of Satan’s efforts to “destroy the agency of man”?⁵³³

3. Why Was It Essential That Premortal Spirits Be Given the Opportunity to Receive a Body?

Joseph Smith taught:

We came to this earth that we might have a body and present it pure before God in the celestial kingdom. The great principle of happiness consists in having a body. The Devil has no body, and herein is his punishment.⁵³⁴

In LDS discussions of the purpose of the body in mortality, the necessity of being able “to experience the pleasures and pains of being alive” and to seek “perfection and discipline of the spirit along with training and health of the body”⁵³⁵ are the kinds of reasons frequently mentioned. However, the teachings of Joseph Smith also included the idea that the clothing

525 D. H. Oaks, Free Agency.

526 V. Frankl, Meaning, p. 86. See Endnote E-88, p. 724.

527 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 22 January 1834, p. 49.

528 C. S. Lewis, Mere, 3:2, p. 77. Muggeridge ironically observes that the commandments “are, after all, relatively easy to keep, especially if, as an Anglican bishop once suggested, they are regarded as an examination paper, with eight only to be attempted” (M. Muggeridge, Jesus, p. 114).

529 D. H. Oaks, To Become, p. 32. See also J. E. Faulconer, Self-Image.

530 H. W. Nibley, Meaning of Temple, p. 26. See Endnote E-10, p. 705.

531 1 Corinthians 13:1-3, Moroni 7:47.

532 Alma 42:15-26.

533 Moses 4:3.

534 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 5 January 1841, p. 181.

535 K. M. Van de Graaf, Body, p. 1080.

of spirits with bodies would provide power⁵³⁶ and protection for them. As Matthew Brown succinctly summarizes:⁵³⁷

“All beings who have bodies have power over those who have not,” said the Prophet Joseph Smith.⁵³⁸ The “spirits of the eternal world” are as diverse from each other in their dispositions as mortals are on the earth. Some of them are aspiring, ambitious, and even desire to bring other spirits into subjection to them. “As man is liable to [have] enemies [in the spirit world] as well as [on the earth] it is necessary for him to be placed beyond their power in order to be saved. This is done by our taking bodies ([having kept] our first estate) and having the power of the resurrection pass upon us whereby we are enabled to gain the ascendancy over the disembodied spirits.”⁵³⁹ It might be said, therefore, that “the express purpose of God in giving [His spirit children] a tabernacle was to arm [them] against the power of darkness.”⁵⁴⁰

Consistent with this view, Nephi taught that if disembodied spirits who had lost their bodies through death did not regain a physical body in the resurrection, the Devil would have all power over them.⁵⁴¹

8 O the wisdom of God, his mercy and grace! For behold, if the flesh should rise no more our spirits must become subject to that angel who fell from before the presence of the Eternal God, and became the devil, to rise no more.

9 And our spirits must have become like unto him, and we become devils, angels to a devil, to be shut out from the presence of our God, and to remain with the father of lies, in misery, like unto himself...⁵⁴²

The reasons for the importance of a body that Joseph Smith most often emphasized are frequently forgotten in Mormon discussions of the purpose of earth life, yet they seem vital to the LDS understanding of Satan’s efforts to undermine God’s plan.

In recap, the three issues discussed above bring into question core features of popular Mormon assumptions about Satan’s premortal role and objectives. It is difficult to achieve theological precision in these matters, but closer examination of the writings of Joseph Smith and his successors leads to new possibilities. The significance of these possibilities goes beyond their potential value in revealing questionable assumptions about what the Prophet taught about these topics, providing, in addition, a cogent rationale for Satan’s actions in the Garden of Eden.

Assuming there is some truth to the analysis above, the Devil’s efforts in the Garden of Eden might be seen as furthering his premortal agenda in at least three ways:

1. His original proposal to “save” all mankind “in unrighteousness and corruption”⁵⁴³ seems to have been briefly put into motion through his efforts to get Adam and Eve to take of the fruit of the Tree of Life immediately after taking of the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge. As Alma explains: “For behold, if Adam had put forth his hand immediately,

536 See Endnote E-89, p. 727.

537 M. B. Brown, Plan, p. 33. See Endnote 4-15, p. 303.

538 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 5 January 1841, p. 60.

539 Ibid., 21 May 1843, p. 208.

540 Ibid., 19 January 1841, p. 62.

541 The idea that the Fall without the Redemption would have allowed Satan to take the souls (i.e., spirits) of men captive is a “common theme” in the ancient Adam literature (M. E. Stone, Adamgirk, p. 110 n. 280).

542 2 Nephi 9:8-9. See also Alma 34:35 regarding the fate of the wicked in the resurrection.

543 B. Young, 30 October 1870, p. 282.

and partaken of the tree of life, he would have lived forever,⁵⁴⁴ according to the word of God, having no space for repentance; yea, and also the word of God would have been void, and the great plan of salvation would have been frustrated.”⁵⁴⁵ Just as Satan’s rejected premortal plan had proposed to provide a limited measure of “salvation” for all by precluding the opportunity for exaltation, so it seems plausible that his unsuccessful scheme in the Garden was intended to impose an inferior form of immortality that would have forestalled the possibility of eternal life.⁵⁴⁶

2. His intent to “destroy the agency of man,”⁵⁴⁷ as we have argued above, should not be seen as a doomed effort to compel people to “do right.” Rather, it might be more appropriately conceived as an effort to eliminate the possibility of a period of probation whereby individuals could exercise their agency. Modern scripture teaches that in preparation for eternal life, mankind must have their days “prolonged” and undergo a “state of probation” on earth while in mortality.⁵⁴⁸ Otherwise “the great plan of salvation would be frustrated” because there would be “no probationary time”⁵⁴⁹ before the spirits of Adam and Eve would be forever united with an immortal body.⁵⁵⁰ Only they “who are of a celestial spirit” can receive a body quickened with celestial glory,⁵⁵¹ thus it is essential that each person be given sufficient opportunity to use their agency to “repent while in the flesh.”⁵⁵² If Adam and Eve had taken the fruit of the Tree of Life immediately after having eaten from the Tree of Knowledge, they would have been “forever miserable,”⁵⁵³ having become “immortal in their fallen state.”⁵⁵⁴
3. Satan’s ultimate objective in tempting Adam and Eve was to thwart the Father’s plan that they and His other spirit children could take on mortal bodies and eventually be resurrected in glory. On the one hand, the Devil sought to preclude Adam and Eve from the possibility of providing bodies for children in mortality by cutting short their earthly probation. On the other hand, he planned to have them immediately take of the Tree of Life, which would have prematurely brought their bodies into a state of immortal immutability. Since only those who inherit celestial glory are promised a “continuation of the seeds,”⁵⁵⁵ it seems that this would have also prevented them from bearing children in eternity. Not implausibly, there may also have been the idea that a group of disembodied (or unembodied) spirits could be subjected to his power.⁵⁵⁶

544 See Endnote E-90, p. 725.

545 Alma 42:5; cf. Alma 12:26.

546 R. J. Matthews, Probationary Nature, pp. 56-57.

547 Moses 4:3.

548 2 Nephi 2:21.

549 Alma 42:4.

550 See also Alma 12:21-27; D&C 132:19; W. C. Skousen, First 2,000, pp. 42-44, 66-68; R. J. Matthews, Probationary Nature, pp. 56-57.

551 D&C 88:28.

552 2 Nephi 2:21. See Endnote E-91, p. 725.

553 Alma 12:26.

554 W. C. Skousen, First 2,000, p. 68.

555 D&C 132:19.

556 2 Nephi 9:8-9.

Excursus 23

The Roles of Christ, Adam, and Michael

THE roles associated with the names of Christ, Adam, and Michael have been a source of confusion in Judaism and Christianity. Central to the controversy has been the story of Satan's refusal to honor the newly-created Adam. Besides the story's appearance in Jewish and Christian sources,⁵⁵⁷ it appears in the *Qur'an*⁵⁵⁸ and elsewhere in Islamic tradition.⁵⁵⁹

Barker concludes that this incident:

... must be the context for Deuteronomy 32:43: "Rejoice with him heavens, bow down to him, sons of God. Rejoice with his people, nations, confirm him all you angels of God, because he will avenge the blood of his sons..." This is the longer text as it appears in the Greek Old Testament⁵⁶⁰ and the pre-Christian Hebrew text (4QDeut⁹) found among the Dead Sea Scrolls⁵⁶¹ is almost identical. The italics show what is missing from the shorter form of the text, the Masoretic Hebrew—all reference to heavenly beings, anything to link this to the story of Adam and the angels worshipping him.⁵⁶²

Thus, the Old Testament citation given in our version of Hebrews 1:6 says that it was the "angels of God" rather than the "sons of God" who were to bow to him; the Masoretic Text of Deuteronomy 32:43 similarly substitutes "blood of his servants" for "blood of his sons," a change no doubt made for theological reasons.⁵⁶³

The original setting of the scripture in Deuteronomy clearly refers to Jehovah rather than to Adam,⁵⁶⁴ and its application in Hebrews 1:6 is to show the superiority of the embodied Jehovah, Jesus Christ, to the angels. Bruce concludes that the occasion referred to by the phrase "when he bringeth in the firstbegotten into the world" is "probably neither the incarnation nor the second advent of Christ: it is not so much a question of His being brought into the world as of his being introduced to it as the Son of God, and we may think rather of His exaltation and enthronement as sovereign over the inhabited universe, ... including the realm of angels, who accordingly are summoned to acknowledge their Lord."⁵⁶⁵ Hence, Hebrews 1:6 should be seen as a Messianic parallel to accounts of Adam's premortal exaltation and enthronement. Note that similar motifs were also developed in accounts of the angels' objections to the exaltation of Moses and of Enoch.⁵⁶⁶

557 E.g., G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, 16:2, p. 49E; E. A. W. Budge, Cave, pp. 55-59; E. A. W. Budge, Rebellion; L. Ginzberg, Legends, 1:62-64, 5:84-86 n. 35; M. Herbert, Irish Apocrypha, pp. 2, 10-11; H. W. Nibley, Sacred, p. 557; M.-A. Ouaknin et al., Rabbi Éliézer, 13, pp. 87-88; M. E. Stone, Fall of Satan, pp. 44-45; Timothy of Alexandria, Abbaton, p. 199.

558 Qur'an 2:34, 7:11, 15:30-31, 17:61, 18:50, 20:116, 38:73-74.

559 E.g., N. J. Dawood, Koran, p. 13; M. al-Kisa'i, Tales, pp. 27-28; al-Tabari, Creation, I:54, p. 224; A. al-Tha'labi, Lives, p. 45; G. Weil, Legends, p. 22. See Endnote E-92, p. 725.

560 See L. C. L. Brenton, Septuagint, p. 277; C. Dogniez et al., Pentateuque, pp. 850-851.

561 See M. Abegg, Jr. et al., Scrolls Bible, p. 193.

562 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 24. Nibley cites Jewish sources which "insist that the glorification of Adam was 'a tragic mistake,' in spite of such passages as Psalm 8:6 and Ezekiel 28:12-14, which probably arose from Christian 'deification of man.' It was this Adam of the Jews which appealed to the Christians" (H. W. Nibley, Sacred, p. 582).

563 C. Dogniez et al., Pentateuque, p. 844 n. 32:8. See also M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek and Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations of the Mysteries, p. 663.

564 F. F. Bruce, Hebrews, p. 57.

565 Ibid., pp. 57-58.

566 M. E. Stone, Fall of Satan, pp. 45, 47, 83-110. See Endnote E-93, p. 725.

Later Christian commentators were uncomfortable with traditions recounting the heavenly homage given to Adam in the premortal life, and thus de-emphasized these stories and their implications. Explains Anderson, “By having the entire angelic host venerate Adam at his creation, there is nothing the second Adam [Christ] can do that could go beyond this glorious moment. The angelic veneration which will be due the resurrected Christ is simply a return to what was offered Adam at creation’s origin... Like the Rabbis, the Church Fathers were unhappy with such a scenario. Adam was to be the subject of considerable glory but not apart from the revelation of Jesus Christ.”⁵⁶⁷ Milton’s solution in Paradise Lost was to substitute Christ for Adam in a similar version of the story, drawing scriptural support from several sources.⁵⁶⁸

In this context, it is perhaps noteworthy that the Hebrew meaning of the name Michael is “Who is like God?” a phrase that brings to mind the account of one among the premortal noble and great ones “that was like unto God” and who proposed making an earth as part of a test of obedience for the spirits of mankind.⁵⁶⁹ Note also the title of “one... like unto the Son of Man” which appears in v. 27 in the context of the Lord’s choice of one to be “sent” and another spirit—no doubt Lucifer—who was “angry, and kept not his first estate.” Both the one who is “like unto God” and the one who is “like unto the Son of Man” are usually taken to refer to the premortal Jesus Christ.⁵⁷⁰ On the assumption that the story of the veneration of Adam might be a somewhat distorted elaboration of an authentic record of some actual premortal event, the question arises as to whether the protagonist of the original was Jehovah, the premortal Jesus Christ, rather than Adam.⁵⁷¹ On the other hand, one might instead conjecture that the individual who was “like unto the son of Man” was Michael/Adam who, having been chosen as head of the human race in preference to Lucifer, provoked the latter’s rage and jealousy, consistent with the story of the veneration of Adam in rabbinic and early Christian sources. A Coptic text describes how the staff, armor, girdle, crown, and office as “General-in-Chief of all the hosts of the heavens” was taken from Satan and given to Michael following the rebellion.⁵⁷² In a related scenario, Lutwin’s Eva und Adam attributes the following prayer request to Adam: “Give me the joy and the status which he [Lucifer] lost in heaven.”⁵⁷³ An Irish text relates that “Lucifer was jealous of Adam, being certain that it was Adam who would be brought to heaven in place of himself.”⁵⁷⁴ Alternatively, since similar stories were told in connection with Moses and Enoch,⁵⁷⁵ it is also possible that the original event became a recurrent type.

The identity of Michael and Adam have been conflated in the context of other roles that have been attributed to one or another of these two names. For example, in extracanonical sources Michael is often portrayed as one who plays a key role in the Judgment and in leading the dead to the places of their habitation.⁵⁷⁶ In other such texts, the same themes are 567 G. A. Anderson, Fall.

568 Psalm 2:6-7; Philippians 2:9-10; Colossians 1:16; Hebrews 1:6. See G. A. Anderson, Fall; cf. G. A. Anderson, Perfection, pp. 30-41.

569 Abraham 3:23-25.

570 R. D. Draper et al., Commentary, pp. 279-280.

571 In one strain of Bogomil thought, Jesus as one of God’s two sons (Satan being the other son—either older than Jesus or younger (see Cosmas, Traité, 13, p. 77), depending on the account) is specifically “identified with the archangel Michael” (I. Couliano, Tree, p. 201).

572 E. A. W. Budge, Rebellion, pp. 294-295.

573 M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam, p. 262.

574 M. Herbert, Irish Apocrypha, p. 3.

575 M. E. Stone, Fall of Satan, pp. 45, 47, 83-110.

576 J. Cabanot, Thèmes, p. 24.

associated with Adam. Consistent with this role, Elder Heber C. Kimball reported that the Prophet Joseph Smith had a vision where: “He saw Adam open the gate of the Celestial City and admit the people one by one. He then saw Father Adam conduct them to the throne one by one, when they were crowned Kings and Priests of God.”⁵⁷⁷ On another occasion, Elder Kimball gave the following summary of the vision:

He (Joseph) saw until they had accomplished their work, and arrived at the gate of the celestial city; there Father Adam stood and opened the gate to them, and as they entered he embraced them one by one and kissed them. He then led them to the throne of God, and then the Savior embraced each one of them and kissed them, and crowned each one of them in the presence of God. He saw that they all had beautiful heads of hair and all looked alike. The impression of the vision left on Brother Joseph’s mind was of so acute a nature, that he never could refrain from weeping while rehearsing it.⁵⁷⁸

Roper,⁵⁷⁹ has pointed out that this account parallels a scene in the Testament of Abraham where Abraham observes Adam sitting on a throne before the gates of Paradise and Hell:

“And outside the two gates of that place they saw a man seated on a golden throne. And the appearance of the man was terrifying, like the Master’s.” According to Abraham, whenever this glorious and enthroned figure saw men and women going through the broad gate he wept, but when he saw many others entering through the strait gate he rejoiced. In this text Abraham asked his angelic guide, “Who is this most wondrous man, who is adorned in such glory?” The angel informs Abraham, “This is the first-formed Adam who is in such glory, and he looks at the world, since everyone has come from him.”⁵⁸⁰

Notwithstanding the consonance in roles and identity between Adam and Michael in these references, sometimes they are explicitly portrayed as being two different individuals. For example, although Joseph Smith explicitly taught from at least 1834 onwards that Adam and Michael were one and the same individual,⁵⁸¹ an earlier revelation had described them as distinct characters.⁵⁸² Michael and Adam are also explicitly portrayed as separate beings in several ancient sources.⁵⁸³ Just as there seems to be more than one individual who can fill the roles of Adam⁵⁸⁴ or Elias,⁵⁸⁵ perhaps it may be possible for two different personalities to rightfully bear the name of “Michael” as a title, each in their own context and setting.

The entire topic warrants additional study by LDS scholars.

577 H. C. Kimball, 17 March 1861, p. 41.

578 O. F. Whitney, Kimball, p. 106.

579 M. Roper, Adam.

580 See E. P. Sanders, Testament of Abraham, 11:1-9, p. 888, Allison explains: “The narrow way, of course, leads to paradise, ‘Adam’s first dwelling, from which he was exiled after his disobedience. His righteous descendants are allowed to return’ to it” (D. C. Allison, Testament, 11:10, p. 250; cf. Matthew 7:13-14). See also P. B. Munoa, Four Powers, pp. 94-98. See Endnote E-94, p. 725.

581 Letter of Oliver Cowdery to John Whitmer, 1 January 1834, cited in H. M. Marquardt, Revelations, p. 278.

582 The relevant phrase reads: “I saw Father Adam and Abraham and Michael” (L. W. Cook, Revelations, p. 303)—the words “and Michael” have been dropped from the corresponding text of the canonized version of this revelation found in D&C 137:5.

583 E.g., G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, Armenian, 12:1-14:3, pp. 15-17; E. A. W. Budge, Rebellion.

584 See Excursus 30: Adam-God Theory and the Heavenly and Earthly Adam, p. 603.

585 E.g., J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 2 July 1839, p. 159.

Excursus 24

The Watchers

BOTH the identity of the Watchers and the nature of the knowledge they were said to have possessed have been the matter of much speculation. Elements of the story seem so fantastic that the entire account might be easily dismissed were it not for a series of enigmatic links between the pseudepigraphal texts and scripture.

The best-known accounts of the Watchers, outside of brief allusions in scripture, are found in *1 Enoch*⁵⁸⁶ and Jubilees.⁵⁸⁷ Many scholars see 1 Enoch 6-16, called the Book of the Watchers, merely as “the author’s explanation of an oppressive political situation that Israel is facing,” however Wright persuasively argues that the text is primarily the author’s account “of the origin of evil spirits based on his interpretation of Genesis 6:1-4.”⁵⁸⁸

The Animal Apocalypse in 1 Enoch 85-88 is written in a code that represents key individuals (and their righteous and wicked descendants) as animals of different colors: Adam is a white bull and Eve a young heifer (85:3); Cain and Abel are black (cf. Moses 7:22) and red (“like blood” (89:9)) calves respectively (85:3-4); Seth is, like Adam, a white bull and his posterity are “white cattle, which were like them,” while Adam and Eve’s later children are portrayed as black bulls and cows (85:8-9). The stars that then fall from heaven are the Watchers, who began “pasturing among those cattle” while “those large and black cattle,” the lascivious posterity of Adam, “exchanged their pens and their pastures and their calves and began to moan one after the other” (86:1-3). Pasturing “in the midst of those calves,” the Watchers “became bulls” and, mating with the “cows of the bulls,” produced offspring that were “elephants and camels and asses” (86:3-4)—the “particular species may be used as symbols because of the similarities between two sets of Aramaic words... In any case the appearance of a new species suggests the bastardly mixture..., and at least the elephants and camels conjure up an image of grotesqueness.”⁵⁸⁹ Filled with violence and terror, the beasts “began to gore... and devour one another” until heavenly beings, “with the appearance of white men”—“four came forth from that place and three with them”—“bound all [the great stars] by their hands and their feet, and threw them into an abyss of the earth” (87:1-2, 88:3).⁵⁹⁰ Eventually, a white bull is born, a new Adam, and all the unclean creatures as well as the sheep are transformed into white bulls. In other words, Eden is restored.⁵⁹¹

Though the book of the Watchers is usually dated no earlier than the third century BCE, Wright concludes that “the Watcher tradition (in either oral or written form) [may be] much older.”⁵⁹² Olson agrees with this latter view, giving two reasons to favor the idea that “the elaboration [of the story in 1 Enoch] is faithful to the original myth truncated in the Genesis account.”⁵⁹³ Not only, he says, do both texts “draw independently on some of the same ancient Mesopotamian material in their portraits of the patriarch Enoch himself,” but also the fact that “the Genesis account is clipped to the point of near incoherence” argues:

586 1 Enoch 6-16, 85-88, 106-107.

587 See citations in the overview of Moses 4, pp. 226-227.

588 A. T. Wright, Evil Spirits, p. 9. See also pp. 49, 138-165.

589 G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, pp. 373-374 n. 86:1-87:1; cf. M. Barker, Hidden, p. 46.

590 G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 87:1-2, 88:3, p. 364; cf. pp. 370-375.

591 Ibid., 90:37-38, p. 402; cf. pp. 406-407 n. 37-38; M. Barker, Hidden, p. 46. See Endnote E-95, p. 725.

592 A. T. Wright, Evil Spirits, p. 28. See A. Y. Reed, Fallen, for a history of the reception of this literature in Judaism and Christianity.

593 D. C. Olson, 1 Enoch, p. 909. See also J. J. Collins, Sons of God, p. 260.

... that its readers know the story well enough to be satisfied with a mere allusion, while the Enochic elaboration is by far the oldest 'full' version we have and apparently enjoyed unqualified acceptance for at least three centuries before a rival interpretation of the Genesis passage is even known to have come into existence... We have in Genesis 6:1-4, and elaborated fully in Enoch, the Jewish form of an international myth, perhaps influenced by Greek models at the time of written composition, but not a new creation of the Hellenistic age.⁵⁹⁴

Besides the well-known accounts in 1 Enoch and Jubilees, two later and less-familiar versions of the stories should also be cited. The first account, of Christian origin and found in the Ethiopian Kebra Nagast, tells the story of a group of angels who complained about Adam's transgression in the Garden of Eden and boasted that, had they been made flesh and blood, they never would so have done, saying:⁵⁹⁵

"We will not transgress thy commandment... And now try us well, and put us to the test so that Thou mayest know whether we are able to keep Thy word." And when they had vaunted themselves in this manner God, the Lover of men, said unto them, "If now ye go astray so far as this in transgressing My word, the wrong will be upon your own heads... Now Satan hath no power whatsoever, for... he cannot beat, and he cannot drag, and he cannot seize, and he cannot fight; he can only make thoughts to germinate silently in the mind. And him who is caught by the evil mind he prepareth for destruction; and if [a man] hath conquered the evil mind he findeth grace and hath a reward which is everlasting. And to you, according to what ye wish, there shall be upon you the mind of a man and the body of a man. But take good heed to yourselves that ye transgress not My word..." And they were content to leave the height of heaven, and they came down to earth, to the folly of the dancing of the children of Cain with all their work of the artisan,... and to their... loud cries of joy and noisy songs.⁵⁹⁶ And their daughters were there, and they enjoyed the orgies without shame... And straightway God was wroth with them, and He bound them in the terror of Sheol until the day of Redemption, as the Apostle saith, "He treated His angels with severity. He spared them not, but made them to dwell in a state of judgment, and they were fettered until the Great Day"...⁵⁹⁷ And the daughters of Cain with whom the angels had companied conceived... And when [their children] were grown up and reached man's estate they became giants;⁵⁹⁸ and for their sakes and the sakes of sinners the wrath of God became quiet, and He said, "My spirit shall only rest on them for one hundred and twenty years, and I will destroy them with the waters of the Flood."⁵⁹⁹

A similar story appears in midrash.⁶⁰⁰

R. Joseph said: The angels noticed that the Holy One, blessed be He, was perturbed because He had created human beings. Immediately two of the angels, whose names were Shemhazai and 'Azael, stood before the Holy One, blessed be He, and said to Him: "Master of the Universe! Did we not say to You at the time You created Your world, 'do not create human beings,' as Scripture attests: 'what is man that You are mindful of him, etc.'?"⁶⁰¹ The Holy One, blessed be He, answered them: "And the world? What will happen to it?" They said to Him: "We will prove sufficient for it." He said to them: "It is revealed and known to Me that if you were to be in their world, the evil impulse would gain control of you just as it has gained control of human beings, [and] you would be worse than them." They said to Him: "Grant us the power to live with the 594 D. C. Olson, 1 Enoch, p. 909.

595 E. A. W. Budge, Kebra, pp. 186-188. For another late Ethiopic account of the story of the Watchers, see B. Mikael, Mysteries, pp. 26-29.

596 See Endnote E-96, p. 726.

597 2 Peter 2:4.

598 See Endnote E-97, p. 726.

599 See Genesis 6:2-4.

600 C. Albeck, Midrash, translated in J. C. Reeves, Shemhazai and Azael. See Endnote E-99, p. 728.

601 Psalm 8:5.

created beings, and You will see how we sanctify Your name.” The Holy One, blessed be He, said to them: “I have already granted you such power.”

Immediately they descended [to earth], and the evil impulse gained control of them. When they beheld the beauty of mortal women, they went astray after them, and were unable to suppress their lust, as Scripture attests: “and the sons of God saw, etc.”⁶⁰² Shemhazai beheld a maiden whose name was Asterah. He fixed his gaze upon her [and] said to her: “Obey me!” She answered him: “I will not obey you until you teach me the Inexpressible Name,⁶⁰³ the one which when you pronounce it you ascend to Heaven.” He immediately taught her, she pronounced it, and she ascended to Heaven. The Holy One, blessed be He, said: “Since she has kept herself pure from sin, I will make her an example so that she might be remembered in the world.” Immediately he fixed her [in the heavens] among the seven stars of the Pleiades. When Shemhazai and Azazel saw this, they arose, married women, and engendered children.

Rabbi said: Has it occurred to you that corporeal beings would [not] have been able to come into contact with the angels? Behold, it is written that “his servants are flaming fire!”⁶⁰⁴ However, this teaches that when the angels fell from their holy stations in heaven, the evil impulse gained control of them as it does of human beings, and their size was made consonant with that of humans, and they were garbed with a mass of dirt, as Scripture says: “My flesh is clothed with worms and clods of dirt etc.”⁶⁰⁵ R. Zadok said: The Anaqim [later descendants of the *Nefilim*⁶⁰⁶] were born from them, those who were insolent and arrogant and who deliberately engaged in robbery, violent behavior, and the shedding of innocent blood, as Scripture attests: “and there we beheld the Nefilim, etc.”⁶⁰⁷ and it says: “the Nefilim were in the land.”⁶⁰⁸

It is taught that Shemhazai fathered two sons whose names were Hayya and Hiyya. They in turn took wives and engendered Sihon and Og. R. Joseph said: At the time that the decision for the coming of the Deluge into the world was reached, the Holy One, blessed be He, dispatched Metatron⁶⁰⁹ as a messenger to Shemhazai. He reported to him: “The Holy One, blessed be He, is planning to destroy the world.” Shemhazai arose and loudly wept and lamented, and grieved for the world and for his sons, “for each of them would eat one thousand camels, one thousand horses, and one thousand of every kind of cattle [daily]. How now will they survive?”

It is taught that one night [when] Hayya and Hiyya, the sons of Shemhazai, were asleep, they both dreamed dreams. One of them beheld in his dream a large stone spread out over the earth like a table, and the whole of it was chiseled and inscribed with many rows [of characters]. Then an angel descended from heaven with a type of knife in his hand, and scraped and effaced all of those rows [of characters], leaving only one row containing four words. And the other saw in his dream a large and flourishing garden, and that garden was planted with every type of tree and all sorts of delightful [plants], and then angels came bearing hatchets and cut down the trees, leaving only one tree which had three branches. When they awoke from their slumber, they arose in terror and came to their father and recounted the dreams to him. He said to them: “My sons, the Holy One, blessed be He, is planning to bring a Deluge into the world to destroy it, and nothing will be left in it except for one man and his three sons.”⁶¹⁰ They immediately [began] crying and weeping, saying: “Then what will become of us? How will our name be remembered?” He said to them: “Do not be anxious or perturbed, for your names will not

602 Genesis 6:2.

603 See Commentary 3:19-b, p. 177.

604 Psalm 104:4.

605 Job 7:5.

606 Hebrew “giants.”

607 Numbers 13:33.

608 Genesis 6:4.

609 I.e., the postmortal Enoch.

610 See Endnote E-98, p. 726.

FIGURE E24-1. The Primaeval Giants Sunk in the Soil, 1824-1827
William Blake, 1757-1827

SEE COLOR PLATE E24-1.

“Go, Michael, bind Shemihazah and the others with him, ...bind them... in the valleys of the earth, until the day of their judgment... Then they will be led away to the fiery abyss, and to the torture, and to the prison where they will be confined forever.”¹

The conclusion of the story of the rebellion of the Watchers is their terrible binding and imprisonment. Blake’s drawing illustrates Canto 31 of Dante’s Divine Comedy. After seeing what he mistakenly thinks is a ring of towers surrounding a central deep, Dante is told by Virgil about the Giants who are sunk to their waists in a well whose massive drop leads to Cocytus, a great frozen lake of the lowest region of hell. Their defiant rebellion, born of the same envy and pride that ruled the fallen angels who “rained down from heaven” in the beginning,² was the more terrible and destructive because of the coupling of their evil will with the brute force of their mighty stature. Now reduced to pale mountainous shapes amidst the chaos, they stand eternally unmoved by the sharp fires of lightning above and the rude blasts of icy storm winds swirling upward from below.

In Enoch’s vision, God laments that “among all the workmanship of my hands there has not been so great wickedness as among thy brethren... Satan shall be their father, and misery shall be their doom; and the whole heavens shall weep over them... [T]hese shall perish in the floods; and behold, I will shut them up; a prison have I prepared for them.”³ In addition, Nickelsburg sees a likely connection between the Enochic accounts of the punishment of the Watchers and the account in 1 Peter of the “spirits in prison; Which sometime were disobedient, ... while the ark was a preparing.”⁴ If such is the case, then Peter’s writings also imply the hope that God’s mercy will be extended even to these mighty fallen ones such that, through eventual repentance and the power of the Atonement, they might eventually “live according to God in the spirit.”⁵

1 G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 10:11-13, p. 215. See also Job 22:11, 15-16; 2 Peter 2:4; Jude 1:6.

2 D. Alighieri, Commedia, Canto 8. See Commentary 2:4-c, p. 101.

3 Moses 7:36-38.

4 1 Peter 3:19-20; cf. G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, p. 560; J. C. VanderKam, Enoch, p. 172. See Endnote E-100, p. 728.

5 1 Peter 4:6.

disappear from the created order. Every time that [men] drag or lift stones and logs [for] their needs, they will always shout ‘heave!’ and ‘ho!’” Immediately their anxieties were calmed.

They have said about him; i.e., Shemhazai, that he repented and suspended himself upside-down between heaven and earth because he had no excuse for his behavior before the Holy One, blessed be He, and to this very day he remains suspended between heaven and earth in repentance. Azael however did not repent, and he was appointed chief over all types of coloring agents and cosmetics for women which entice men to sexual immorality, and he still persists in his corruptive activity. Therefore Israel brings offerings and casts one lot for the Lord, so that He might accept atonement for all the sins of Israel, and one lot for Azael, so that he might bear the burden of the sins of Israel.

Though many ancient traditions such as those cited above see the wicked husbands referred to in stories of the Watchers as “fallen angels,”⁶¹¹ another plausible reading, taking into account clues from the book of Moses and other ancient texts, is that they were ordinary mortals.⁶¹² Such a group would seem to have initially included the “sons of men” (i.e., Cainites and their associates “outside the covenant”⁶¹³) who married the female descendants

611 See Endnote E-101, p. 726.

612 R. D. Draper et al., Commentary, pp. 161-164.

613 Ibid., p. 163.

in Seth and Noah's line.⁶¹⁴ Later, it is claimed that the "sons of God" (i.e., Sethites, Noachites, and their associates—men of the covenant specifically called "angels" or "watchers" in some ancient sources⁶¹⁵) also united with the wicked "daughters of Cain"⁶¹⁶—a practice that was divinely condemned.⁶¹⁷

In light of these accounts, the possibility that some or all of the wicked husbands mentioned were immortals might be definitely ruled out were it not for a retrospective journal entry summarizing a 13 April 1843 discourse by Joseph Smith:

Now the history of Josephus,⁶¹⁸ in speaking of angels came down and took themselves wives of the daughters of men, See Genesis 6th chapter, 1-2 verses. These were resurrected bodies, violated the celestial laws.⁶¹⁹

At face value, the last phrase could be taken as asserting that the angels, possessing resurrected bodies, violated celestial laws in taking wives of the daughters of men.⁶²⁰

Perhaps the only way to reconcile the statement attributed to Joseph Smith regarding Josephus' description of the Watchers as resurrected beings with previously-cited evidence of their being mortals is to interpret the Prophet's comment "These were resurrected bodies, violated the celestial laws" as an argument for the falsity of Josephus' description. In other words, the phrase might be conjecturally reconstructed to give a sense something like the following: "Since angels have resurrected bodies, Josephus' account of them taking mortal wives cannot be true, for such a union would have violated celestial laws." Unfortunately, apart from dismissing the statement altogether, that is as far as such speculation on how to harmonize these different ideas can take us.

Regarding the kind of knowledge that the Watchers were said to have possessed, Nibley summarizes accounts that describe their era as being:

... the time of great intellectual as well as material sophistication...⁶²¹ The leaders of the people devoted most of their wealth to all kinds of engineering projects for controlling and tempering nature. But the Lord altered the order of creation, making the sun rise in the west and set in the east, so that all their plans came to naught.⁶²² The idea of controlling the environment independently of God was not so foolish as it sounds, says the Zohar, "for they knew all the arts... and all the ruling chieftains [archons] in charge of the world, and on this knowledge they relied, until at length God disabused them by restoring the earth to its primitive state and covering it with water."⁶²³ Rabbi Isaac reports: "In the days of Enoch even children were acquainted with these mysterious arts [the advanced sciences]. Said R. Yesa: If so, how could they be so blind as not to know that God intended to bring the Flood upon them and destroy them? R. Isaac replied: They did know" but they thought they were smart enough to prevent it. "What they did not know was that God rules the world.... God gave them a respite all the time that the righteous men Jered, Methuselah, and Enoch were alive; but when they departed from the world, God let punishment descend..., 'and they were blotted out from the earth.'"⁶²⁴

614 Moses 8:15 and, e.g., M. E. Stone, Question, 4, p. 119.

615 E.g., M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, p. 150 n. 4:2; A. S-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, p. 74.

616 See Moses 8:13, 21, and e.g., M. E. Stone, Question, 9, p. 121.

617 Moses 8:22. See Endnote E-102, p. 727.

618 See F. Josephus, Antiquities, 1:3:1, pp. 27-28 and T. W. Franxman, Genesis, p. 81.

619 J. Smith, Jr., 13 April 1843, as reported in E. England, Laub, p. 25.

620 See Endnote E-103, p. 727.

621 See G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 8:1-3, p. 188.

622 See D. C. Matt, Zohar 1, Be-reshit 1:56a, pp. 315-316 and n. 1545.

623 Ibid., Be-reshit 1:56b, pp. 318-319.

624 H. W. Nibley, Enoch, pp. 184-185. See D. C. Matt, Zohar 1, Be-reshit 1:56b, p. 319; Genesis 7:23.

Nibley infers that the knowledge of the Watchers also included information about sacred ordinances (or, perhaps, devilish imitations of them⁶²⁵) that was not to be divulged to others. For example, an Ethiopian text states that:

In the days of Cain and his sons, evil and deceitful practices increased. Those who gloried [in their bodies] before Adam are the wicked angels. Having received bodies, they learned a great sin. They therefore openly exposed all the work they had seen in heaven.⁶²⁶

Likewise, a Greek fragment of 1 Enoch (Gizeh) has:

... the Great Angels returning from earth to report to God that they had found 'Azael teaching all manner of unrighteousness upon the earth, and he has laid bare those mysteries of the age which belong to heaven, which are [now] known and practiced among men; and also Semiazas is with him, he to whom thou gavest authority [over] those who go along with him.⁶²⁷

Moreover,

Clement of Alexandria attributed to Musaeus, the founder of the Greek Mysteries, an account of "how the angels lost their heavenly heritage through the telling of the secret things [mysteria] to women," things, Clement observes, "which the other angels keep secret or quietly perform until the coming of the Lord."⁶²⁸

Islamic tradition teaches that the most important of these mysteria, taught without authorization to a woman who was their accomplice in sin,⁶²⁹ was knowledge of the "Name of God" by means of which the Watchers were able to "ascend to Heaven."⁶³⁰ Commenting on such texts, Nibley observes:

The ordinances are not secret, and yet they are, so to speak, automatically scrambled for those not authorized to have them... This is the classical account of the Watchers, angels who came to call the human race to repentance, but who, being tempted by the daughters of men, fell and gave away the covenants and the knowledge they possessed. This was their undoing, and was always treated as the most monstrous of crimes, divulging the pure ordinances of heaven to people unworthy to receive them, who then proceeded to exercise them in unrighteousness while proclaiming their own righteousness on the grounds of possessing them.⁶³¹

Olson highlights a vivid contrast in methods for the acquisition of knowledge in 1 Enoch:⁶³²

The difference is that the Watchers teach techniques,⁶³³ putting the adept in the role of initiator, whereas Enoch's wisdom, including his knowledge of the future, comes by revelation with God as the initiator.⁶³⁴ Nowhere in the Enochic corpus does Enoch practice any kind of theurgy in order to coax the mysteries of heaven out of the extant cosmos; rather, he is taken, he is shown, and holy angels interpret for him.

For a discussion of the meaning and derivation of the term "Watchers" see Nickelsburg.⁶³⁵ ⁶²⁵ See Commentary 5:53-a, p. 398.

⁶²⁶ S. Grébaud, Computs, p. 431; cf. B. Mikael, Enoch, pp. 141-142; B. Mikael, Mysteries, pp. 26-27. See also H. W. Nibley, Enoch, pp. 182-183; J. J. Collins, Sons of God, p. 269; Job 4:18, 15:8, 15; Matthew 24:36-37; 1 Peter 1:12. See Endnote E-104, p. 727.

⁶²⁷ H. W. Nibley, Enoch, p. 183; cf. R. H. Charles, Enoch, 9:6-7, p. 283; G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 9:6-7, p. 202.

⁶²⁸ H. W. Nibley, Enoch, p. 184; cf. Clement of Alexandria, Stromata, 5:1:10, p. 446.

⁶²⁹ See Endnote E-105, p. 727.

⁶³⁰ A. al-Tha'labi, Lives, p. 88; cf. C. Albeck, Midrash, translated in J. C. Reeves, Shemhazai and Azael (see p. 587).

⁶³¹ H. W. Nibley, Return, p. 63; cf. Genesis 6:4-6; Commentary 5:53-a, p. 398.

⁶³² D. C. Olson, 1 Enoch, p. 909.

⁶³³ See Endnote E-106, p. 727.

⁶³⁴ Cf. Moses 1:2.

⁶³⁵ G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, pp. 140-141. See also J. J. Collins, Sons of God, pp. 263-264.

Excursus 25

The Tree of Life as the Hidden Throne of God

WESTERMANN discusses at length the curiosity that although two trees are mentioned in Moses 3:9, the main body of the narrative “is concerned with one tree only.”⁶³⁶ He sees Tree of Life as having been attached later to the beginning⁶³⁷ and the end⁶³⁸ of the story. An alternate explanation for this anomaly, consistent with other clues in the text,⁶³⁹ is that although the presence of both trees was, of course, previously known to God (and deliberately disclosed to the reader⁶⁴⁰), the Tree of Life was initially hidden to Adam by the Tree of Knowledge.⁶⁴¹ This is expressed in some rabbinical commentary by the idea that the two trees shared a common trunk, had branches that were intertwined, or that the first tree encircled about or formed a hedge around the second one to shield it from view.⁶⁴²

Ephrem the Syrian gives a similar opinion, citing parallels with the division of the animals on Noah’s ark and the demarcations on Sinai separating Moses, Aaron, the priests, and the people.⁶⁴³ He depicts Paradise as a great mountain, with the Tree of Knowledge providing a boundary partway up the slopes: “this Tree acts as a sanctuary curtain [veil] hiding the Holy of Holies which is the Tree of Life higher up.”⁶⁴⁴ Thus, the story of the Fall, in analogue to the stories of the Tower of Babel and of the Watchers, can be conceived as a violation of boundaries that separated mankind from the dwelling place of Divinity.⁶⁴⁵ That a difference in splendor between the two trees paralleled their separate locations is affirmed by a Gnostic text that describes the “color” of the Tree of Life as being “like the sun” and the “glory” of the Tree of Knowledge being “like the moon.”⁶⁴⁶ Supporting the same concept, an Armenian Christian text asserts that “the Tree of [Knowledge of] Good and Evil is the knowledge of material things”—referring to the kind of knowledge that was made possible when Adam and Eve partook of the fruit—“and that the Tree of Life is the knowledge of divine things, which were not profitable to the simple understanding of Adam”—at least not until after he had successfully passed through the experience of mortality.⁶⁴⁷

The story of Noah’s family after the Flood has often been compared to the first chapters of Genesis.⁶⁴⁸ Significantly, it also culminates with an unauthorized transgression of sacred boundaries. Note, first, that the ark itself “was designed as a temple”⁶⁴⁹—in this case, a mobile sanctuary like the later Tabernacle that was constructed in the likeness of God’s portable pavilion.⁶⁵⁰ Immediately after their debarkation, God established his covenant with them, 636 C. Westermann, Genesis 1-11, p. 212.

637 Moses 3:9.

638 Moses 4:28-31.

639 See, e.g., Commentary 3:9-h, p. 167, 3:19-b, p. 177, 4:5-b, p. 246, 4:9-a, p. 252, and 4:14-e, p. 260. For a survey on the question of one or two trees, and related textual irregularities, see T. N. D. Mettinger, Eden, pp. 5-11.

640 Moses 3:9.

641 G. A. Anderson, Perfection, p. 214.

642 R. M. Zlotowitz et al., Bereishis, pp. 96, 101. See Endnote E-107, p. 727.

643 Brock in Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, p. 53. See also C. Buck, Paradise, pp. 259-288.

644 Ibid., p. 52. See Endnote E-108, p. 728. See also Figure 4-19, p. 235. For an extended discussion of this topic, see J. M. Bradshaw, Tree of Knowledge.

645 R. S. Hendel, Demigods, p. 23. Cf. D. H. Oaks, Plan, p. 73, where Adam and Eve’s actions are also seen as a transgression of the limits of Eden but, in contrast to Hendel, this transgression is characterized in relationship to the barrier between the Garden and mortal life, as opposed to the Garden and divine life. See Endnote E-109, p. 731.

646 H.-G. Bethge, Origin, 110:14, 20, p. 179. Compare B. C. Hafen, Disciple’s Journey.

647 Shelemon, Book of the Bee, 15, p. 21. See also J. E. Seach, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 568-577, 660-661.

648 E.g., H. W. Nibley, Sacred, pp. 577-579. See further parallels in W. A. Gage, Gospel; J. M. Bradshaw, God’s Image 2, pp. 297-311.

649 C. H. T. Fletcher-Louis, Glory, p. 41.

650 See Endnote 3-57, p. 210.

Temple	Eden	Ark	Sinai
Holy of Holies	Summit/Heights - God-Tree of Life - The Victorious	Upper Deck - Deity - Noah	Summit/Heights - The Glorious One - Moses
Veil	Tree of Knowledge
Holy Place	Slopes - Adam and Eve - The Righteous	Middle Part - Birds	Halfway Up - Aaron Round About - Priests
Outer Courtyard	Lower Slopes - Animals - Penitent Sinners	Lower Part - Animals	Below - People

FIGURE E25-1. *The Divisions of the Temple Compared to Eden, Noah's Ark, and Mt. Sinai*¹
Ephrem the Syrian, fl. 363-373

1 Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, p. 53. See also A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, p. 208.

outlining dietary instructions and giving the commandment to “multiply and replenish” the renewed earth, in similitude of what He originally told Adam and Eve.⁶⁵² The ever-obedient Noah also imitated the example of the first parents by beginning at once to till the earth.⁶⁵³ Then comes the scene of a “Fall” and consequent judgment.⁶⁵⁴

Often, the instigator of this “Fall” is wrongfully seen to be Noah who, it is reported, succumbed to the intoxicating influence of wine from his vineyard and retreated to the privacy of his tent.⁶⁵⁵ Note, however, that the scriptures omit any hint of wrongdoing by Noah, and instead reserve all condemnation for his son Ham and his grandson Canaan.⁶⁵⁶ And what was their sin? If we have understood the situation in Eden correctly, it is a perfect parallel to the transgression of Adam and Eve. Without proper invitation, Ham approached the curtains of the “tent of Yahweh”⁶⁵⁷ without authorization and looked upon the glory of God as Noah was “uncovered within”—literally, ‘in the midst of’⁶⁵⁸—the tent while in the course of revelation.⁶⁵⁹

Following the same motif, Ephrem compares the transgression of Adam to that of King Uzziah, who, though not a priest, entered the sanctuary and, as a result, was smitten with leprosy.⁶⁶⁰ Ephrem writes that when “Adam snatched the fruit, casting aside the commandment... he beheld that Glory within, shining forth with its rays... Adam made bold to touch and was smitten like Uzziah: the king became leprous,⁶⁶¹ Adam was stripped... both kings fled and hid in the shame of their bodies... [The trees] all blushed at Adam, who was suddenly found naked.”⁶⁶²

651 Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, p. 53. See also A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, p. 208.

652 Genesis 9:1-77, cf. JST Genesis 9:1-25.

653 Genesis 9:20. See Endnote E-112, p. 729.

654 Genesis 9:21-27.

655 See Endnote E-113, p. 732.

656 See Endnote E-114, p. 732.

657 Koler and Greenspahn, as discussed in W. Vogels, Cham Découvre, pp. 566-567. Cf., e.g., D. C. Matt, Zohar 1, 1:73a-b, p. 434 n. 700.

658 Cf. Moses 3:9; 4:9, 14. See Commentary 3:9-h, p. 167.

659 See Endnote E-115, p. 733.

660 2 Chronicles 26:16-21.

661 Barker speculates on a possible connection to the leprosy of Miriam (M. Barker, Hidden, pp. 57-61).

662 Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, 3:13-15, pp. 95-96.

FIGURE E25-2. Adam and Eve Enthroned in Paradise, 16th-century

SEE COLOR PLATE E25-2.

*In the midst of Paradise there stood a green silken tent, supported on golden pillars, and in the midst of it there was a throne, on which Adam seated himself with Eve, whereupon the curtains of the tent closed around them of their own accord.*¹ An Islamic legend maintains that Adam and Eve reigned, as God's vice-regents, from a throne in Eden. Significantly, its location parallels the central position of the Tree of Life: "The scene takes place in a green and blossoming Garden of Eden, its center accentuated by a single cypress² immediately behind the throne on the vertical axis of the composition, probably representing the Tuba tree of paradise."³ Although the idea of a second co-located tree is not usually mentioned in Islamic tradition,⁴ note that the function of the curtains in the written description was, of course, to screen the throne from public sight, just as the Tree of Knowledge veiled the view of the Tree of Life in Ephrem's depiction of Eden. Following the transgression of Adam and Eve, the "throne which had been erected for them in the tent thrust them away and cried, 'Rebels, depart!'" God's judgment then came upon them through "a voice from the tree."⁵

- 1 G. Weil, Legends, pp. 25.
- 2 See Endnote E-110, p. 731.
- 3 R. Milstein, Stories and Illustrations, p. 107.
- 4 See Endnote E-111, p. 731.
- 5 G. Weil, Legends, p. 32. See also R. Milstein et al., Stories.

Sounding a similar theme, a petitioner in the Islamic mystical text, The Mother of Books, is warned by God that if someone were to move "the curtain and the veil the slightest bit [to] make the high king visible... their spirit would leave their body."⁶⁶³ By way of contrast, the Armenian Descendants of Adam says that the righteous Enoch refrained from looking at the heavens—which is equated to the fact that he did not eat of the:

... tree of meat⁶⁶⁴ ... And he drew linen over his face, and did not look at the heavens, on account of the sin of Adam. And he said, "When of the servant, there is trouble, the servant does not to look at the crown. And he quickly becomes sweet. And I, on account of the sin of Adam, I dare not look at the heavens, that God may have mercy upon Adam." And God had mercy upon Enoch and transferred him to immortality.⁶⁶⁵

In some respects, the fall of Satan, who said, aspiringly, "I will ascend into heaven... I will be like the most High"⁶⁶⁶ and "sought that [God] should give unto him [His] own power,"⁶⁶⁷ parallels the Fall of Adam. The fifteenth-century Adamgirk text has Satan saying: "I fell, exiled from the heavens, Without fruit,⁶⁶⁸ like Eve."⁶⁶⁹ Nibley remarks that "dire consequences" may result from transgression of divinely-set bounds: "Pistis Sophia went beyond her 'degree' and, becoming ambitious, 'looked behind the veil' [and] fell from glory."⁶⁷⁰

- 663 W. Barnstone et al., Mother, p. 672.
- 664 I.e., the Tree of Knowledge.
- 665 M. E. Stone, Descendants, 14-22, p. 85; in some texts Enoch is seen as having reversed the Fall of Adam (A. Orlov, Enoch-Metatron, p. 248). For a discussion of a wider redemptive role attributed to Enoch, see A. A. Orlov, Redeeming Role and A. A. Orlov, Polemical Nature.
- 666 Isaiah 14:13, 14.
- 667 Moses 4:3.
- 668 This phrase only makes sense if the fruit referred to is the fruit from the Tree of Life, now eternally unattainable for the Devil but reserved at a future time of readiness for Adam and Eve.
- 669 M. E. Stone, Adamgirk 3:7:3, p. 65.
- 670 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 443. See C. Schmidt, Pistis, 1:29-30, pp. 83-91; G. R. S. Mead, Pistis, 1:29-30, pp.

For those who took the Tree of Life to be a representation within the Holy of Holies, it was natural to see the tree itself as the locus of God's throne:⁶⁷¹ "[T]he Garden, at the center of which stands the throne of glory, is the royal audience room, which only those admitted to the sovereign's presence can enter."⁶⁷² Recall the book of Esther, which recounts the law of the Persians that "whosoever... shall come unto the king into the inner court, who is not called, [shall be] put... to death."⁶⁷³ Properly dressed in her royal apparel as a "true queen"⁶⁷⁴ however, Esther is, against all odds, granted safe admission to the presence of the king.⁶⁷⁵

According to Brock, Ephrem's answer for "why God did not from the very first grant to Adam and Eve the higher state he had intended for them... illustrates the very prominent role which he allocates to human free will."⁶⁷⁶ In his Commentary on Genesis, Ephrem writes:

God had created the Tree of Life and hidden it from Adam and Eve, first, so that it should not, with its beauty, stir up conflict with them and so double their struggle, and also because it was inappropriate that they should be observant of the commandment of Him who cannot be seen for the sake of a reward that was there before their eyes. Even though God had given them everything else [in the Garden of Eden] out of Grace, He wished to confer on them, out of Justice, the immortal life which is granted through eating of the Tree of Life. He therefore laid down this commandment. Not that it was a large commandment, commensurate with the superlative reward that was in preparation for them; no, He only withheld from them a single tree, just so that they might be subject to a commandment. But He gave them the whole of Paradise, so that they would not feel any compulsion to transgress the law.⁶⁷⁷

How should one regard Eve's decision to eat of the forbidden fruit? In light of the LDS understanding that the Fall was a divinely foreseen and necessary prerequisite for mankind's further progression and their rejection of the generally negative portrayals of Eve in historical Christianity, Mormon exegetes typically emphasize Eve's perspicacity and interpret her role as ultimately constructive. A few, however, have taken this view to an extreme, not only rightfully exonerating her from full accountability for her transgression and honoring her subsequent faithfulness (as would every Mormon), but in addition arguing that, for various reasons, she was not actually "beguiled" by Satan in her decision to eat of the forbidden fruit.⁶⁷⁸ Such a view goes well beyond the settled LDS doctrines that the Fall was an essential part of the divine plan from the beginning and that Adam and Eve did not commit a sinful or otherwise blameworthy act.⁶⁷⁹ A full discussion of this issue is given in a separate article.⁶⁸⁰

For Ephrem, the crucifixion of Christ both "fulfills and abolishes" the terms of the Old Covenant,⁶⁸¹ dismantling the barrier of enmity that had separated mankind from God since 33-36. For a general discussion of such dangers, see J. Dan, Mysticism, 1:261-309.

671 Revelation 22:1-3, G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, Greek 22:4, p. 62E. See Endnote E-116, p. 731.

672 G. B. Eden, Mystical Architecture, p. 22; cf. the idea of "the luxuriant sacred tree or grove... as a place of divine habitation" in D. E. Callender, Adam, p. 51; cf. pp. 42-54. See also T. Stordalen, Echoes, pp. 173, 293, Commentary 4:31-c, p. 280. See Endnote E-117, p. 731.

673 Esther 4:11.

674 As opposed to her former appearance as a "beauty queen"—see A. Berlin, Esther, pp. 51-52.

675 Esther 5:1-2.

676 Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, p. 59.

677 Ephrem the Syrian, Commentary, 2:17, p. 209.

678 See, e.g., V. M. Adams, Eve (2010); B. Campbell, Eve, pp. 70-73; A. L. Gaskill, Savior and Serpent; C. F. Olson, Women, p. 13; J. T. Summerhays, Wisdom.

679 J. E. Talmage, Jesus the Christ, pp. 18, 29.

680 J. M. Bradshaw, Was Eve Beguiled?

681 K. E. McVey, in Ephrem the Syrian, Hymns, p. 297.

the Fall:⁶⁸² “Very sad was the Tree of Life / that saw Adam hidden from him. / Into the virgin earth he sank and was buried, / but he arose and shone forth from Golgotha.”⁶⁸³ “In His love there came to us the blessed Tree: the one wood undid the work of the other, the one fruit was annulled by the other, that which brought death by that which is alive.”⁶⁸⁴ “As the source of immortality, ‘the Tree of Life is the symbol of the Son of the Living One,’⁶⁸⁵ whose Eucharistic fruit is plucked daily in the Church.”⁶⁸⁶ In verse, Ephrem expresses gratitude that the sweet fruit forbidden to Adam is available again to the Saints, and that the sword that prevented man’s return to the Garden of Eden was “removed by the lance” that pierced Jesus’ side as He hung on the cross:⁶⁸⁷

With the blade of the sword of the cherub was the path to the Tree of Life shut off, but to the Peoples has the Lord of that Tree given Himself as food.

Whereas Eden’s other trees were provided for that former Adam to eat, for us the very Planter of the Garden has become the food for our souls.

Whereas we had left that Garden along with Adam, as he left it behind, now that the sword has been removed by the lance,
 we may return there.

682 Ephesians 2:14; Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, p. 63.

683 Ephrem the Syrian, Virginity, 16:10, p. 332.

684 Hymn on Virginity 8:1, cited in Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, pp. 60-61; cf. Ephrem the Syrian, Virginity, 8:1, p. 297.

685 Ephrem the Syrian, Hymn on the Church 49:16, cited in Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, p. 61.

686 Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, p. 61.

687 Commentary on the Diatessaron 49:9-11, cited in Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, pp. 61-62, also pp. 64-66.

Excursus 26

Justification and Sanctification

SMITH and Sjodahl explain that:

Justification is a judicial act, whereby God declares that the sinner who repents and by faith accepts the sacrifice of the Lamb of God, and who is baptized according to the Word of God, is acquitted and received into His Kingdom... Sanctification is the work of the Holy Spirit by which he who is justified is enabled to keep the Commandments of God and grow in holiness.⁶⁹³

Elder Bruce C. Hafen further explains:

We may become “just” or justified (as when a printer lines up the edges of crooked margins; when all the lines are straight, the printing is “justified”) when we demonstrate sufficient repentance to receive the Savior’s mercy. The demands of justice are then satisfied. This may be the “justification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ,” which “is just and true.”⁶⁹⁴ Then, as a second stage, we may be “made perfect” or sanctified (in addition to receiving forgiveness of our sins) as a further manifestation of the Savior’s mercy: “And we know also, that sanctification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is just and true, to all those who love and serve God with all their mights, minds, and strength.”⁶⁹⁵ Sanctification is thus the process by which we become holy following baptism.⁶⁹⁶

Moses 6:59-60 explains these concepts as a process of rebirth: “For by the water ye keep the commandment; by the Spirit ye are justified, and by the blood ye are sanctified.”

The blessings of justification and sanctification promised to us when our discipleship begins are realized through lifelong persistence in a process of engagement and reengagement in sincere repentance and faithfulness to covenants—covenants that must be frequently renewed by participation in the ordinances of the Gospel. Because we repeatedly violate our covenants, failing to “retain a remission of [our] sins,”⁶⁹⁷ we must be regularly cleansed and recommitted. Only when we are again made “just” can the Spirit dwell with us to continue the ongoing work of sanctification. As Riddle has written:

... [Human] beings may be saved only by binding themselves to Christ. It is as if our task were to stand straight and tall before Father, but because of the Fall, we are broken and twisted. The Savior is our straight and tall splint. If we bind ourselves to Him, wrap strong covenants around us and Him that progressively draw us up into His form and nature, then we can become righteous as He is and can be saved. But without Him we are nothing.... The New and Everlasting Covenant is our detour whereby our Savior strengthens us until we can tread the narrow way of justice and mercy on our own.⁶⁹⁸

A similar concept is supplied by the imagery of the disciple who takes upon himself the yoke of Christ.⁶⁹⁹ This yoke is “not simply imparted by Him, but shared with Him.”⁷⁰⁰ Eventually, by enduring to the end in covenantal union, we are truly “born again... by the Spirit of God through ordinances.”⁷⁰¹

693 H. M. Smith et al., Commentary, p. 104; cf. Helaman 3:35. See Endnote 5-43, p. 441.

694 D&C 20:30.

695 D&C 20:31.

696 B. C. Hafen, Broken, p. 166; cf. D. A. Bednar, Clean Hands.

697 Mosiah 4:12; cf. Mosiah 4:26; Alma 4:14.

698 C. C. Riddle, New, pp. 241-242. See Endnote E-126, p. 734.

699 Matthew 11:29.

700 W. E. Vine et al., Dictionary (1996), s. v. yoke, p. 692.

701 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 2 July 1839, p. 162; cf. D&C 84:19-22. See also D. O. McKay, Cherished, pp. 101-102—for

Excursus 27

Diligence, Obedience, and Friendship

IN contrast to Satan's plan for compulsion and domination, the Father's whole "work and glory"⁷⁰² is to draw us to Him voluntarily through His love. As Lewis wrote:

God turns tools into servants, and servants into sons, so that they might at last be reunited to Him in the perfect freedom of love offered from the height of the utter individualities which He has liberated them to be.⁷⁰³

The scriptures teach that God is "more intelligent than they all"⁷⁰⁴ because of His "diligence and obedience."⁷⁰⁵ The coupling of the term "diligence" with "obedience" is significant, suggesting that eternal progression is not a matter of mechanically "following orders," but rather is an active process that requires us to maximize the wise exercise of agency within the bounds prescribed by revelation.

The word "diligence" denotes "careful and persistent work or effort," its meaning closely allied with the Latin assiduus, from assidere "be engaged in doing."⁷⁰⁶ Thus, the implication of the instruction to be diligent is that we are not simply to wait to be explicitly told what to do in a given situation, but rather that we must be "anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of [our] own free will," positively and prayerfully exercising our minds and wills to gain both the increase in sincere desire and the necessary growth in understanding needed to act aright.⁷⁰⁷ Thus each person who is given a stewardship in the Church is required both to "learn his duty" as generally outlined in the revelations⁷⁰⁸ and also "to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence."⁷⁰⁹

To be exalted, men and women must not only be perfectly obedient to the Father in imitation of Jesus, but they must also, like the Christ, and through their firm reliance on Him, progress through their experience to the point that their will conforms to that of the Father because both their desires and their understanding perfectly match His own.⁷¹⁰ To those for whom that day comes, He will be able to say: "Ye are my friends, [since] ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I [call] you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you."⁷¹¹

Two different Greek words for "love" are used in John's report of Jesus' words.⁷¹² The first word (agape) is the one Jesus characteristically used to teach his disciples to value, serve, and esteem all men; the other (philo) is the commonest Greek word describing a relationship more on the historical context, see H. J. Cannon, David O. McKay, p. 108.

702 Moses 1:39.

703 C. S. Lewis, Screwtape, 1961 Preface, p. 9; cf. ch. 8, p. 41. See D&C 121:34-46; Commentary 4:28-s, p. 276 and 4:28-b, p. 276.

704 Abraham 3:19.

705 D&C 130:19. See Endnote E-118, p. 731.

706 New Oxford American Dictionary.

707 D&C 58:26-28; cf. 1 Corinthians 14:15, Commentary 2:10-b, p. 105.

708 E.g., D&C 107:38-39, 58, 73, 85-87, 89, 91.

709 D&C 107:99.

710 Matthew 6:10, 26:39; John 5:30, 6:38-39, 7:17; 1 Corinthians 13:12; 1 John 3:2-3; D&C 19:18-19. See Endnote E-119, p. 731.

711 John 15:14-15. Of course, Jesus' apostles had only reached a stage of relative perfection at this point.

712 John 15:13-15.

of affection between devoted friends, conveying “the thought of cherishing the Object above all else, of manifesting an affection characterized by constancy, from the motive of the highest veneration.”⁷¹³ Thus, paralleling the way He earlier called out His special use of the term shalom,⁷¹⁴ Jesus is not merely describing the esteem He has for His disciples in a general way, He is rather affirming a special tender relationship of this highest kind that now existed between them.

After His resurrection, when Jesus appears to the twelve at the Sea of Galilee, He takes Peter aside and teaches him something of what it means to be His friend. An alternate reading of John 21:15-17 given by the translators of the New English Bible preserves in English the distinction between the two kinds of love in the original Greek text:⁷¹⁵

So when they had dined,
 Jesus saith to Simon Peter
 Simon, son of Jonas,⁷¹⁶ lovest thou me more than these?⁷¹⁷
 He saith unto him,
 Yea, Lord; thou knowest that [I am thy friend].⁷¹⁸
 He saith unto him,
 Feed my lambs.⁷¹⁹
 He saith to him again the second time,
 Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?
 He saith unto him,
 Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I [am thy friend].
 He saith unto him,
 Feed my sheep.
 He saith unto him the third time,
 Simon, son of Jonas, [art thou my friend?]
 Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, [Art thou my friend?]
 And he said unto him,
 Lord, thou knowest all things;
 thou knowest that I [am thy friend].
 Jesus saith unto him,
 Feed my sheep.

In this passage, Peter meets Jesus’ question about whether his love for the Lord surpassed the love of the other disciples with a passionate affirmation of his special relationship as a friend of the Lord. When Jesus fails to confirm Peter’s assertion of a special status of intimacy and throws doubt the nature of his love a second time, Peter reiterates his claim 713 W. E. Vine, Dictionary, p. 694. For more on OT, Greco-Roman, and Johannine concepts of friendship, see G. K. Beale et al., NT Use of the OT, p. 493; C. S. Keener, John, 2:1006-1015; C. R. Koester, Symbolism, pp. 267-268, 274-275.

714 John 14:27. See H. N. Ridderbos, John, p. 511; A. E. Harvey, Companion 2004, p. 359.

715 S. Sandmel et al., New English Bible, p. 137 nn. r, s, t. See Endnote E-120, p. 731.

716 See Endnote E-121, p. 731.

717 Meaning, “more than the other disciples (H. N. Ridderbos, John, p. 665); cf. C. R. Koester, Symbolism, pp. 136-137. See Endnote E-122, p. 732.

718 See Endnote E-123, p. 732.

719 See Endnote E-124, p. 732.

of friendship, no doubt more urgently and emphatically. The third time, when Jesus at last directly questions Peter's friendship ("Art thou my friend?"), Peter, in grief, makes a final heartfelt appeal: "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I am thy friend."

Each time Jesus replies to Peter's professions of friendship, we hear the echo of the earlier passage in John: "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you."⁷²⁰ From one who claimed to be His friend, the Lord would not be satisfied with loving words alone, no matter how eloquent and impassioned. Jesus seems to be teaching Peter that being His friend means from henceforth wholly consecrating himself through his actions to his pastoral role over the Church, feeding the flock of God—and eventually demonstrating the completeness of his consecration through martyrdom.⁷²¹ The Prophet Joseph Smith has written, "A man filled with the love of God, is not content with blessing his family alone, but ranges through the whole world, anxious to bless the whole human race."⁷²²

In considering the Lord's use of the term "friend," a caution is in order. Elder M. Russell Ballard has warned us against allowing the intimate terms with which we sometimes refer to Christ (including the theologically accurate but potentially misleading term "elder brother") to delude us into viewing Him as merely a somewhat advanced "spiritual peer."⁷²³ In a similar vein, Martins describes the reverent distance that even Jesus and his chosen Twelve maintained throughout His ministry. He makes it clear that "it is the Lord who initiates the use of the term 'friend'" with His disciples, and this only after they "had dedicated their entire lives and livelihoods to the service of the kingdom."⁷²⁴

Thus, it is evident that the sort of "knowledge and intelligence" that qualifies God's children for the "fulness" here described does not come all at once, but rather "grace for grace,"⁷²⁵ through a lifetime of diligence and obedience.⁷²⁶ Only the Lord's friends can bear to have "all things that [Jesus Christ has] heard of [His] Father... made known unto [them]."⁷²⁷

⁷²⁰ John 15:14; cf. John 14:15.

⁷²¹ John 21:18-19.

⁷²² J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 19 October 1840, p. 174.

⁷²³ M. R. Ballard, Bridges, cited in M. H. Martins, False.

⁷²⁴ M. H. Martins, False; cf. James 2:23; D&C 45:52; 84:63; 88:3; 93:45-46; 94:1; 97:1; 98:1; 103:1; 104:1; 105:26. See Endnote E-125, p. 732.

⁷²⁵ D&C 93:12.

⁷²⁶ Cf. B. C. Hafen, Broken, pp. 202-204.

⁷²⁷ John 15:15. See H. N. Ridderbos, John, pp. 520-521; D. K. Ogden et al., Gospels, p. 574.

Excursus 28

Ritual Aprons in Ancient Times

WHILE Adam and Eve made their original fig-leaf apron without authorization from the Lord, it should be noted that a similar article has been used in ritual contexts to represent true power and authority. The authentic apron, unlike the one that Adam and Eve made to cover their nakedness, was to be put on only when authorized for priesthood purposes.

Both Elijah⁷²⁸ and John the Baptist⁷²⁹ were noted for their leather girdles or aprons. Israelite temple priests wore an ephod, which has not been positively identified, but may also have included a kind of apron. The wearing of sacred aprons also seems to be an element of some New Testament worship.⁷³⁰ At the Last Supper, Jesus himself “took a towel, and girded himself... and began to wash the disciples’ feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.” Brown observes that the word “towel” in this verse “can also be translated as ‘servant’s apron.’”⁷³¹

Kings in the Middle East were often represented as various sorts of trees,⁷³² and there is evidence that foliated aprons were used both in Egypt and Mesoamerica. Related symbology can be found at the time of the eighth-century Christian king Charlemagne who wore the image of a sacred tree on his apron.⁷³³ Brown notes that whereas in some contexts the king was associated with the Tree of Life, “ancient Hebrew legends... taught that the Tree of Knowledge of good and evil was a fig tree and it was from this tree’s leaves that Adam constructed his apron... [It] is interesting to note that the personified Tree of Life motif can be seen in Alma 32:28-43.”⁷³⁴ The fruit of the fig tree is known for its abundance of seeds, thus an apron of green fig leaves is an appropriate symbol for Adam and Eve’s ability to procreate, to “be fruitful and multiply” after the Fall.

The apron or girdle was sometimes used as an article of clothing worn in battle. “The astute reader of the Book of Mormon has no doubt also noticed that in 3 Nephi 4:7, and in other places where the skin girdle is mentioned, the context is that of war. In this regard it is interesting to note that as part of his special war regalia the Maya king girded himself with the world tree apron.”⁷³⁵

Brown cites an “ancient account of the priestly investiture ceremony [that] says that the apron was symbolic of ‘prophetic power.’ This connection can be seen in the belief that the ephod originated as the apparel of Deity and was worn on the earth by those who represented and spoke in Deity’s behalf. The tools that were employed among the Israelites to facilitate this spokespersonship were the Urim and Thummim, which, of course, were attached directly to the apron of the high priest.”⁷³⁶

728 2 Kings 1:8.

729 Matthew 3:4; Mark 1:6.

730 M. B. Brown, Girded, pp. 141-143.

731 Ibid., p. 141.

732 Cf. Commentary 3:9-g, p. 163.

733 M. B. Brown, Girded, p. 137. See Figure 4-20, p. 237.

734 Ibid., p. 137.

735 Ibid., p. 137.

736 Ibid., pp. 131-135.

Excursus 29

The Development of Extracanonical Literature on Adam and Eve

LIPSCOMB gives a concise overview of the development of extracanonical literature on Adam and Eve:⁷³⁷

The earliest indications of this fascination with the antediluvians are found in Jewish apocryphal works dating from as early as the third pre-Christian century and into the first two centuries of the common era. Such works as the Book of Jubilees, Pseudo-Philo, the Life of Adam and Eve, and the Apocalypse of Moses employed the techniques of midrash to expand the legends of Genesis and to provide new insights about Adam and his earliest descendants... In the midrashic literature of the rabbis, this growth of interest in Adam continues. Adam is commonly described as a man of physical and intellectual perfection, but whose Fall brought untold disaster to humanity. Additional non-biblical details are introduced in works which served primarily homiletical purposes.

While the importance of Adam in Jewish apocryphal and rabbinic works is reflected primarily in the growth of extra-biblical legendary materials, the early Christian community found Adam to be the focal point for theological discussions about Christ. In the New Testament, Paul identified Christ as the last Adam who made possible for mankind the salvation which the first Adam had forfeited through disobedience. These notions of Adam's Fall and his relation to Christ are taken up in the Greek and Latin fathers, where they serve as the point of departure for discussions of original sin and the nature of Christ in the Christological controversies of the first five centuries.

Although these theological emphases were central to the early church's understanding of Adam, it is also to the early and medieval church that we are indebted for the preservation of the earliest midrashic materials about the antediluvians contained in Jewish apocryphal texts. Much of this material is believed to have been written in Hebrew and Aramaic by Jewish communities, but for reasons which are not entirely clear it was abandoned by ongoing rabbinic Judaism. It was the early Christian communities which translated and transmitted these works; thus most of the books of the Apocrypha owe their survival to their appearance in the Old Greek collection of Jewish scriptures, which became the official Christian version (Old Testament), and most of the books of the pseudepigrapha have survived only in Christian translations and in Christian forms. The Life of Adam and Eve, for example, is frequently thought to be a Jewish work originating in a semitic language in about the first century CE. The work is known to us, however, in Latin, Slavonic, and Greek recensions, and all the surviving manuscripts contain clear signs of Christian editing.⁷³⁸ The same may be said of Jubilees, which was composed in Hebrew but which survives in full only in Ethiopic,⁷³⁹ and of Pseudo-Philo, most likely composed in Hebrew, but surviving in full only in Latin translation.⁷⁴⁰

The early Christians did not act simply as translators and interpolators in preserving Jewish apocryphal traditions about Adam and his progeny. It is also clear that they produced haggadic compositions of their own while drawing heavily on Jewish sources. The Cave of Treasures,⁷⁴¹ composed in Syriac perhaps as early as the fourth century and surviving also in Arabic, Ethiopic, and Georgian, claims to contain mysteries which Jesus committed to his disciples and discusses the typological relationship between Adam and Christ at length. But these materials are accompanied by Adam traditions bearing close affinities with much older 737 W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian, pp. 1-6.

738 G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis.

739 O. S. Wintermute, Jubilees.

740 D. J. Harrington, Pseudo-Philo.

741 E. A. W. Budge, Cave.

Jewish sources. The Ethiopic *Book of Adam and Eve*⁷⁴² attempts to survey the course of human history from the first Adam until the coming of the second Adam (Christ) and is Christian throughout, but again draws on traditions known to be of Jewish origin in recounting the earliest history of humanity. Similar haggadic materials were preserved in the Armenian and Georgian churches⁷⁴³ and became widespread in Christian medieval literature.⁷⁴⁴ Writing in a different genre and with different purposes, Byzantine Christian historians sought to catalogue the annals of human history beginning from the creation, and drew heavily upon Jewish and earlier Christian texts to reconstruct the history of biblical times.⁷⁴⁵ Although most of these Christian Adam books are medieval compositions and do not derive directly from earliest Christianity, their great importance lies in the antiquity of some of the traditions they contain, the uniqueness of some of their larger contribution to the development and understanding of Adam materials and of medieval Christianity.

Ri gives a useful summary of parallels and divergences between traditions in the Life of Adam and Eve vs. the Cave of Treasures.⁷⁴⁶ See the Annotated Bibliography for descriptions of Zoroastrian, Mandaean, Manichaean, and Islamic sources relating to the life of Adam and Eve.

742 S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve.

743 W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian; M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996.

744 E.g., E. A. W. Budge, Kebra; B. Mikael, Book; Shelemon, Book of the Bee.

745 Byzantine.

746 A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, pp. 198-201.

Excursus 30

Adam-God Theory and the Heavenly and Earthly Adam

JOSEPH Fielding McConkie cites several reasons why Adam can be seen as a type of his Heavenly Father: “All men have both Adam and God as their father. Each had a son renowned for righteousness and obedience (Christ and Abel), and each had a son who became Perdition (Lucifer and Cain). Both righteous sons were martyred by the shedding of blood at the hands of one called Perdition.”⁷⁴⁷

Munoa cites sources giving support to the idea that Adam and God were not only identical in appearance, but “could be thought to share the same name, even Adam... Lacocque, when discussing how Gnostic speculations about ‘Man’ were anchored in the ‘older Israelite mentality,’ quotes Corpus Hermeticum 10:25 to illustrate how God could be understood as a man: ‘Man on earth is a mortal god; God in the heavens is an immortal man.’”⁷⁴⁸

Kabbalistic teachings concerning Adam Kadmon,⁷⁴⁹ comparable in some ways to the Anthropos of Gnosticism and Manichaeism, and Adam Kasia of Mandaism⁷⁵⁰ are summarized by Cazenave:

Adam Kadmon [is the] “primordial man,” the archetype of the rest of humanity, and the one to whom we must look to rediscover spiritual truths about our own existence. In a temporal union of opposites, this Adam Kadmon is also the anthropos teleios, the final man toward whom we aspire, who will restore us to our glory and true condition.”⁷⁵¹

Kent Brown cites Gnostic texts that describe “the nature or quality of the Father: he is called ‘the Man,’⁷⁵² ‘the Man of the Greatness,’⁷⁵³ and ‘the Man of Truth’;⁷⁵⁴ also ‘Man,’ ‘First Man,’ and ‘Immortal Man’...⁷⁵⁵ Compare the titles ‘Man of Holiness’ and ‘Man of Counsel’ in Moses 6:57 and 7:35, the former name having been revealed to Adam, father of Seth.”⁷⁵⁶

Several cryptic statements by Brigham Young included references to what later became known as the “Adam-God” doctrine. As Bailey summarized:

President Brigham Young expressed the idea in 1852 and later years that Adam “is our Father and our God, and the only God with whom we have to do.”⁷⁵⁷ This remark has led some to conjecture that Brigham Young meant that Adam, who was on earth as our progenitor, was in 747 J. F. McConkie, Symbolism, p. 147. See Moses 5:24, 32; John 17:12.

748 Cited in P. B. Munoa, Four Powers, p. 102. Cf. W. Blake, Natural Religion, p. 41; G. B. Hinckley, Don't Drop, p. 46; L. Snow, Teachings 1984, 15 June 1901, p. 1. See also the comprehensive study of the anthropomorphic conception of God in old rabbinic thought by Marmorstein (A. Marmorstein, Doctrine, Vol. 3), Kugel's more recent study (J. L. Kugel, God of Old), E. L. Cherbonnier, Anthropomorphism, Commentary 1:12-c, p. 53, and 2:26-c, p. 113. For additional LDS statements about how God came to be God, see J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 7 April 1844, pp. 345-346; B. Young, 12 June 1860-a, p. 81; 5 January 1860, p. 102; 17 June 1866, p. 249; G. Q. Cannon, 6 January 1884, p. 26; J. E. Talmage, 6 April 1915, p. 123; B. R. McConkie, New Witness, p. 64.

749 I.e., Primeval Adam.

750 E. S. Drower, Adam.

751 M. Cazenave, Encyclopédie, p. 7. See also, e.g., E. S. Drower, Mandaeans, p. 153; H. Schwartz, Tree, pp. 124-126.

752 J. A. Gibbons et al., Great Seth, 52.36, p. 364. In A. Böhlig et al., Egyptians, 3.59.3, p. 215, the same title appears but may refer to Adam.

753 J. A. Gibbons et al., Great Seth, 53.3-5, p. 364.

754 Ibid., 53.17, p. 364.

755 Eugnostos, Sophia 103.22-104.9, 105.5, 109.5, 112.7, etc., pp. 230-232, 237, 238.

756 S. K. Brown, Nag Hammadi, p. 279 n. 66.

757 B. Young, 9 April 1852, p. 50.

reality God the Father. However, this interpretation has been officially rejected as incorrect.⁷⁵⁸ Later in the same speech Brigham Young clearly stated “that the earth was organized by three distinct characters, namely Elohim, Jehovah, and Michael.”⁷⁵⁹

Consistent with some of Brigham Young’s teachings about Adam, early leaders of the Church who conjectured that Adam and Eve already had resurrected bodies when they were placed on earth were necessarily also of the opinion that they did not die in the ordinary sense, but rather were taken up directly to heaven. For example, Elder Heber C. Kimball said that: “Adam offered sacrifices and blessed his sons and then left them and went to heaven.”⁷⁶⁰ Bailey continued:

Additional information about Brigham Young’s feelings on Adam can... be found in a conference speech given October 8, 1854, clarifying somewhat his earlier statement.⁷⁶¹ It is there implied that through a process known as divine investiture, God delegates his power to his children.⁷⁶² Adam was the first on earth to receive this authority, which includes all essential keys, titles, and dominions possessed by the Father.⁷⁶³ Thus, he had conferred upon him all things that were necessary for the accomplishment of his manifold responsibilities, and Adam is a name-title signifying that he is the first man and father of all.⁷⁶⁴

Concerning Brigham Young’s use of the name “Adam” for two distinct individuals, we read:⁷⁶⁵

It is argued that Brigham Young often distinguished between “Father Adam,” referring to the God of the Universe, and “Adam” or “our father Adam,” referring to Adam, the first mortal man. In many of Brigham Young’s controversial discourses, including the alleged “Adam-God” discourse, he attempted to make that distinction that there were two Adams. For example, on 28 December 1845 Brigham Young made an explicit reference to a “more ancient” Adam after whom Michael received the name Adam. “Adam’s name was more ancient than he was. It was the name of a man long before him, who enjoyed the Priesthood.”⁷⁶⁶ On 25 April 1855 Brigham Young spoke of Adam (Michael) as having lived for a long time with another Being whom Brigham Young explicitly calls “father Adam.” “Well, you see from this that when you and I have been with and lived with the Lord, we shall know his voice. If father Adam were to come into this house and you were to see him go back and forth, would you know him? No, you would [ever] mistrust it was him unless he revealed himself. But by the time that you have lived with him [father Adam] as long as Adam had before he came here, you will know him and recognize his footsteps, but reading the history will not teach you these things.”⁷⁶⁷

Brigham Young did not find it necessary to elaborate beyond his previous statements, saying at one point: “Whether Adam is the personage that we should consider our heavenly Father, or not, is considerable of a mystery to a good many. I do not care of one moment how that is; it is no matter whether we are to consider Him our God, or whether His Father, or His Grandfather, for in either case we are of one species.”⁷⁶⁸ Observed Nibley: “Brigham Young 758 S. W. Kimball, Liahona, p. 77.

759 A. A. Bailey, LDS Adam, p. 17; B. Young, 9 April 1852, p. 51.

760 H. C. Kimball, 12 April 1868, p. 188. Although Brigham Young once taught that Adam and Eve died and were buried (8 October 1854), he eventually adopted the view expressed here (L. John Nuttall, Journal 2, 7 February 1877).

761 B. Young, 8 October 1854, pp. 91ff.

762 See Commentary 1:3-a, p. 44.

763 D&C 84:38; cf. 88:107.

764 A. A. Bailey, LDS Adam, p. 17.

765 Adam-God Theory.

766 W. Clayton, Chronicle, 28 December 1845, pp. 238-239.

767 Brigham Young Addresses, 25 April 1855.

768 B. Young, 8 February 1857, p. 217. See also B. Young, 8 March 1857, p. 271; B. Young, 9 October 1859, p. 285; B.

recognized that many people were not prepared to understand the mysteries of God and godhood. ‘I could tell you much more about this,’ he said, speaking of the role of Adam, but checked himself, recognizing that the world would probably misinterpret his teaching.”⁷⁶⁹

Robinson has called the Adam-God doctrine a “classic example of an anomaly in the LDS tradition” that the Church has now “set aside”:

On occasion my colleagues and I at Brigham Young University have tried to figure out what Brigham Young might have actually said and what it might have meant, but the attempts have always failed. The reported statements simply do not compute—we cannot make sense out of them. This is not a matter of believing it or disbelieving it; we simply don’t know what “it” is. If Brigham Young were here we could ask him what he actually said and what he meant by it, but he is not here, and even expert students of his thought are left to wonder whether he was misquoted, whether he meant to say one thing and actually said another, whether he was somehow joking with or testing the Saints, or whether some vital element that would make sense out of the reports has been omitted.⁷⁷⁰

Matthew B. Brown interprets Brigham Young’s teachings to be a misunderstanding about the nature of ancient Israelite enthronement rites and a misapplication of doctrines connected with exaltation.⁷⁷¹ See Hale⁷⁷² for another helpful perspective on Adam-God teachings.

Young, 1 September 1859, p. 238; B. Young, 8 January 1865, p. 43; B. Young, 19 August 1866, p. 268.

769 H. W. Nibley, BY Teachings, p. 1610. See B. Young, 9 April 1852, p. 51.

770 S. E. Robinson, Are Mormons Christians?, pp. 19–20.

771 M. B. Brown, 12 August 2009. See also M. B. Brown, BY Teachings.

772 V. Hale, Adam-God.

Excursus 31

The Hospitality of Abraham

OF Abraham's hospitality, Nibley wrote:⁷⁷³

In the most inhospitable of worlds, Abraham was the most hospitable of men. It was said that charity was asleep in the world, and Abraham awakened it.⁷⁷⁴ Even before he went to Canaan, he held continual open house near Haran, to try to counteract the evil practices of the time. Then when he was forced to move, he dug wells and planted trees along his way, leaving blessings for those he would never see.⁷⁷⁵ Arriving and settling in Beersheba, he built a garden and grove and put gates on each of the four sides of it as a welcome to strangers from all directions, "so that if a traveler came to Abraham he entered any gate which was in his road, and remained there and ate and drank... for the house of Abraham was always open to the sons of men that passed and repassed, who came daily to eat and drink at the house of Abraham.

In his hospitality, Abraham was always careful to direct the honor and praise of his guests toward God as the source of all blessings:

Our father Abraham would bring people into his home, give them food and drink, befriend them, and thus attract them, and then convert them and bring them under the wings of the Presence.⁷⁷⁶

After travelers [whom he made his guests] had eaten and drunk, they stood up to bless him. He said to them: "Was it of mine that you ate? You ate of that which belongs to the [everlasting] God of the world. Thank, praise, and bless Him who spoke and the world came into being."⁷⁷⁷

But if [the traveler refused to thank God], Abraham would say "Pay what you owe me." When the wayfarer asked, "How much do I owe you?" Abraham would reply, "A jug of wine—so much; a pound of meat—so much; a loaf of bread—so much. Who do you suppose is giving you wine in the wilderness? meat in the wilderness? bread in the wilderness?" The wayfarer, now aware that he must either pay or thank God by saying grace, would say "Blessed be the everlasting God of the world, of whose bounty we have partaken." This is the meaning of the description of Abraham as one who "bestows free bounty and justice"⁷⁷⁸—first bounty, then justice.⁷⁷⁹

The story is told of the visit of an idol worshipper who refused to honor the Lord for the bread he had received. Abraham "grew enraged at the man and rose and drove him away into the desert." Seeing this, God rebuked him, saying: "Consider, one hundred and ninety-eight years, all the time that man has lived, I have borne with him and did not destroy him from the face of the earth. Instead I gave him bread to eat and I clothed him and I did not have him lack for anything... How did you come to... drive him out without permitting him to lodge in your tent even a single night?" At that, Abraham "swiftly brought [the man] back to his tent... and sent him away in peace the next morning."⁷⁸⁰

773 H. W. Nibley, Abraham 2000, pp. 198-199. See also J. L. Kugel, Traditions, pp. 334-336; M. M. Noah et al., Jasher, 22:11-12, p. 44; W. G. Braude, Midrash on Psalms, 110:1, p. 205; E. D. Clark, Blessings, pp. 199-204.

774 W. G. Braude, Midrash on Psalms, 110:1, p. 205.

775 F. I. Andersen, 2 Enoch, 24:18, p. 103.

776 H. N. Bialik et al., Legends, 15, p. 33. See Genesis 12:5; J. Neusner, Genesis Rabbah 2, 39:14, pp. 73-74.

777 H. N. Bialik et al., Legends, 17, p. 34.

778 See Genesis 18:19.

779 H. N. Bialik et al., Legends, 18, p. 34. See J. Neusner, Genesis Rabbah 2, 49:4, 43:7, 54:6, pp. 199-200, 120-121, 264-265.

780 M. J. B. bin Gorion et al., Mimekor, 23, 1:63-64.

Excursus 32

Freedman's Analysis of the Primary History

FREEDMAN'S analysis of the Primary History is briefly described in the overview of Moses 5, p. 343. He outlined the sequence of violations in the nine books of the "Primary History" as follows, the last commandments following the order specified in the abbreviated Decalogue in Jeremiah 7:9, in preference to the one found in Exodus 20:

- apostasy and idolatry⁷⁸¹
- blasphemy⁷⁸²
- Sabbath observance⁷⁸³
- parental respect⁷⁸⁴
- stealing⁷⁸⁵
- murder⁷⁸⁶
- adultery⁷⁸⁷
- false testimony.⁷⁸⁸

The fact that two violations (apostasy and idolatry) are presented in Exodus is explained as a necessary constraint imposed by the source material itself:

Because the editor is working with existing literary works and not just a collection of bits and pieces, he is naturally limited in the degree and extent to which he can arrange or rearrange, organize and reorganize, or manipulate his material. Hence we can expect certain deviations and adjustments as we go along. For example, the fact that the story of covenant-making and covenant-breaking properly begins with the book of Exodus presents him with something of a problem. Since the Ten Commandments are not yet set forth in Genesis, he cannot make Israel reprehensible for violating them in that book. He therefore must double up the commandments violated in the book of Exodus.⁷⁸⁹

Freedman admits that the theme of the violation of the Ten Commandments should be seen as only one of several organizing principles used by the editor:

The fact that this particular device or pattern has never been observed before—at least to my knowledge—should caution against supposing that it was the major or central objective of the redactor. It was simply another, if dramatic, way of showing and stressing the central theme of the history of Israel, and illustrating or reflecting the unity of the account comprising the nine books of the Primary History.⁷⁹⁰

With respect to its relevance for the first chapters of the Bible, he argues that precisely because the links between Genesis and Kings are so far apart historically, they:

... are especially indicative of the work of the redactor or compiler. Consider, for example, the apparent, if superficial, link between the first stories in Genesis (Adam and Eve, Cain and 781 Exodus 20:3-4 vs. Exodus 32:4.

782 Exodus 20:7 vs. Leviticus 24:10-16.

783 Exodus 20:8-10 vs. Numbers 15:32-36.

784 Exodus 20:12 vs. Deuteronomy 21:18-21.

785 Exodus 20:15 vs. Joshua 7:1.

786 Exodus 20:13 vs. Judges 19-21.

787 Exodus 20:14 vs. 2 Samuel 11-12.

788 Exodus 20:19 vs. 1 Kings 21.

789 D. N. Freedman, Nine 2001, p. 5.

790 Ibid., p. 11.

Abel), both of which deal with punishment for sin or crime, and the fate of the nation at the end of Kings. In both the Adam and Eve story and the Cain and Abel story,⁷⁹¹ the outcome of disobedience is banishment or exile, precisely the fate of the presumed readers of those stories, who are themselves the subjects of the final chapters of Kings, the exiles in Babylon. Moreover, Babylon itself is the subject of the story of the Tower of Babel,⁷⁹² the first narrative after the renewal of life on earth following the Flood. The Tower of Babel story supplies the transition to the account of Abraham's family and the beginning of the patriarchal narrative. So what began in Babylon more than a millennium before ends in the same place for his remote descendants: from Babylon to Babylon provides a neat summary or envelope for the whole of the Primary History. Only a compiler-editor would have achieved explicitly what was only implicit in the separately authored blocks of material.⁷⁹³

791 Genesis 1-4.

792 Genesis 11.

793 D. N. Freedman, Nine 2001, pp. 2-3.

Excursus 33

The Restoration of Sacrifice

JOSEPH Smith observed that the fact that Adam began to offer sacrifices implied not only that he had received “revelations, commandments, and ordinances” but also that he had received the priesthood “by ordination.”⁷⁹⁴ Unlike the “rites and variety of ceremonies” performed under the law of Moses, these ordinances were “sacrifices after the order of the Melchizedek Priesthood.”⁷⁹⁵ These latter sacrifices, along with all “those things which existed prior to Moses’ day,” will be, along with “every ordinance belonging to the priesthood,” “fully restored and attended to” when “the temple of the Lord shall be built and the sons of Levi be purified.” Even though “the great sacrifice” of Jesus Christ has already been offered, this restoration of the ordinance of sacrifice is just as “necessary to salvation” as “repentance, baptism, and faith,” which also “existed prior to the days of Christ.” The offering of sacrifice “will be continued until after the coming of Christ from generation to generation.”⁷⁹⁶

Diverse opinions have been offered on the question of whether or not the predicted restoration of this ordinance would require at least a temporary renewal of the practice of animal sacrifice at some time in the future. For example, Elder Joseph Fielding Smith wrote:⁷⁹⁷

Who are the sons of Aaron and Levi today? They are, by virtue of the blessings of the Almighty, those who are ordained by those who hold the authority to officiate in the offices of the priesthood. It is written that those so ordained become the sons of Moses and of Aaron. Also: “And the sons of Moses and of Aaron shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, upon Mount Zion in the Lord’s house, whose sons are ye; and also many whom I have called and sent forth to build up my Church.”⁷⁹⁸ So the Lord has spoken, and this was said to those who held the Melchizedek Priesthood.

What kind of offering will the sons of Levi make to fulfill the words of Malachi⁷⁹⁹ and John⁸⁰⁰? Logically such a sacrifice as they were authorized to make in the days of their former ministry when they were first called. Will such a sacrifice be offered in the temple? Evidently not in any temple as they are constructed for work of salvation and exaltation today. It should be remembered that the great temple, which is yet to be built in the City Zion, will not be one edifice, but twelve.⁸⁰¹ Some of these temples will be for the lesser priesthood.

When these temples are built, it is very likely that provision will be made for some ceremonies and ordinances which may be performed by the Aaronic Priesthood and a place provided where the sons of Levi may offer their offering in righteousness. This will have to be the case because all things are to be restored. There were ordinances performed in ancient Israel in the Tabernacle when in the wilderness, and after it was established at Shiloh in the land of Canaan, and later in the temple built by Solomon. The Lord has informed us that this was the case and has said that in those edifices ordinances for the people were performed.

⁷⁹⁴ J. Smith, Jr., Words, 5 October 1840, p. 40.

⁷⁹⁵ A. Ehat et al., in ibid., p. 55 n. 29. See Mosiah 13:27-35.

⁷⁹⁶ J. Smith, Jr., Words, 5 October 1840, pp. 43-44. See also Brigham Young in W. Clayton, Chronicle, 2 January 1846, p. 250.

⁷⁹⁷ J. F. Smith, Jr., Doctrines, 11 August 1945, 3:93-94.

⁷⁹⁸ D&C 84:32.

⁷⁹⁹ Malachi 3:3.

⁸⁰⁰ D&C 13:1.

⁸⁰¹ See Endnote E-127, p. 733.

These temples that we now have, however, the Lord commanded to be built for the purpose of giving to the saints the blessings which belong to their exaltation, blessings which are to prepare those who receive them to “enter into his rest,... which rest is the fulness of his glory,”⁸⁰² and these ordinances have to be performed by authority of the Melchizedek Priesthood, which the sons of Levi did not hold.

We are living in the dispensation of the fulness of times into which all things are to be gathered, and all things are to be restored since the beginning.⁸⁰³ Even this earth is to be restored to the condition which prevailed before Adam’s transgression.⁸⁰⁴ Now in the nature of things, the law of sacrifice will have to be restored, or all things which were decreed by the Lord would not be restored. It will be necessary, therefore, for the sons of Levi, who offered the blood sacrifices anciently in Israel, to offer such a sacrifice again to round out and complete this ordinance in this dispensation. Sacrifice by the shedding of blood was instituted in the days of Adam and of necessity will have to be restored.

The sacrifice of animals will be done to complete the restoration when the temple spoken of is built; at the beginning of the millennium, or in the restoration, blood sacrifices will be performed long enough to complete the fulness of the restoration in this dispensation. Afterwards sacrifice will be of some other character.

A different point of view is offered by Matthew B. Brown, who observes that Malachi 3:3:⁸⁰⁵

... does not say that blood sacrifices would be offered to the Lord... The Hebrew word used to designate the “offering” in this passage is minchah, which is commonly used in Old Testament temple texts to designate a “bloodless” sacrifice...⁸⁰⁶ [Moreover, the] Lord helped to clarify the meaning of the Prophet’s teachings when he revealed on 19 January 1841 that within the walls of the Nauvoo Temple he would restore “the fulness of the priesthood,”⁸⁰⁷ and there the latter-day “sons of Levi” would offer sacrifice in the manner of a memorial, meaning in symbolic fashion.⁸⁰⁸ On 6 September 1842, shortly after the Nauvoo temple ordinances were first bestowed, Joseph Smith quoted Malachi 3:2-3 and clearly stated that it was the “Latter-day Saints” who were to “offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness” in the “holy temple.”⁸⁰⁹ He also indicated that the offering he was referring to was of a bloodless nature.⁸¹⁰

See also Alma 34:13-14 and 3 Nephi 9:19-20 where it is made clear that after the “great and last sacrifice” of the Savior, there is to be “a stop to the shedding of blood”⁸¹¹ and that the nature of sacrifice instead would be “a broken heart and a contrite spirit.”

802 D&C 84:24.

803 See D&C 128:18.

804 Articles of Faith 1:10.

805 M. B. Brown, Gate, p. 242. See D&C 128:24.

806 Cf. The Testament of Levi, where angel priests offer bloodless sacrifices in the heavenly temple (H. C. Kee, Testaments, Levi 3:4-6, p. 789).

807 D&C 124:28.

808 D&C 124:39.

809 D&C 128:24.

810 Ibid.

811 For more on the cessation of the practice of animal sacrifice in early Christianity, see M-Z. Petropoulou, Animal Sacrifice. See especially pp. 290ff. where the author attempts to answer the question as to why “Jewish Christians in Jerusalem did not immediately stop offering sacrifices in the Temple.”

Excursus 34

The Law of Consecration

ALTHOUGH the law of consecration is sometimes described as if it were something to be lived only at some future time, Hugh Nibley argues that it is in the here and now that “everything you have must be set apart to the everlasting benefit of all.”⁸¹²

I don’t have to wait for anyone’s permission to observe the law of consecration... Everything you consider surplus you can give to the bishop and he will gladly accept it right now.⁸¹³ And he’ll give it to the poor where it is supposed to be. What’s better than that?⁸¹⁴

Nibley’s biographer Boyd Petersen elaborates:

True, the law of consecration and the United Order are not the same thing. We cannot live the United Order until the Church returns to such planned communities. But we can consecrate all that we have to the Lord. Hugh flung down a personal challenge to every temple-going Saint by asking, “What is there to stop me from observing and keeping the law of consecration at this very day as I have already covenanted and promised to do without reservation?” “The plain fact is,” Hugh reminds the Saints, “that I have promised to keep a law, and to keep it now. I know exactly when I am supposed to consecrate, exactly how, exactly why, exactly when, and exactly where.” We often assume that external events will motivate the change in our individual practices—that the establishment of Zion will bring about the revival of the Law of Consecration. Hugh stands the equation on its head: It is by living the Law of Consecration that we will establish Zion. “We do not wait until Zion is here to observe [the law of consecration]; it is rather the means of bringing us nearer to Zion”...

Hugh’s words seem confirmed by the vision of the General Authorities when they speak of Zion. Elder Marion G. Romney once stated that we would establish Zion only when we start living its laws:

From the very beginning I felt that the [welfare] program would eventually move into the Law of Consecration and that this is the trial pattern. Until I can pay my tithing and make liberal contributions of my money and labor... I will not be prepared to go into the United Order, which will require me to consecrate everything I have and thereafter give all my surplus for the benefit of the kingdom. I think the United Order will be the last principle of the gospel we will learn to live and that doing so will bring in the millennium.⁸¹⁵

Of course, the law of consecration concerns more than material means—first and foremost it demands that we consecrate ourselves and our time completely and irrevocably. About the way in which the law of consecration is meant to be lived, Elder Robert D. Hales has said:

I have learned from Joseph Fielding Smith... about the law of consecration. It is not one particular event; it is a lifetime, day by day, in which we all strive to do our best that we might live honorable lives, that we might live the best we can in the service of others... I will say this: It is not in death or in one event that we give our lives, but in every day as we are asked to do it.⁸¹⁶

⁸¹² H. W. Nibley, Drama, p. 37.

⁸¹³ See Endnote E-128, p. 733.

⁸¹⁴ H. W. Nibley, Foundation, from an unpublished transcription of an audio recording by Michael B. James of the speech and Q&A session in the possession of Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, pp. 1, 7.

⁸¹⁵ B. J. Petersen, Nibley, pp. 393-394. See Oral interview with Marion G. Romney, 4 January 1973, LDS Church Archives, cited in Peterson. See also M. G. Romney, Welfare Services; S. C. Harper, Consecration, pp. 221-226.

⁸¹⁶ R. D. Hales, Agency, p. 44.

Excursus 35

Lamech's "Sword Song"

HUGH Nibley, who wrote extensively on the subject, saw in Lamech's "sword song" an analogue to the kind of events that once took place as part of widespread annual new-year rites. In a few cultures, these have survived from ancient times up to our own.⁸¹⁷ Nibley points out that Lamech's two wives, Adah and Zillah, would be ideal participants in an antiphonal chorus representing "the competition of the maidens" singing for the king, so much the more because they have been given names that "may respectively mean 'dawn' and 'dusk.'"⁸¹⁸ "There is always the light one and dark one here," as in the stories of Sarah ("a raving [i.e., ravishing] blonde") and Hagar ("a dark Egyptian woman"⁸¹⁹), Miriam and Zipporah (Miriam was smitten with a whitening leprosy for having mocked the dark Zipporah⁸²⁰), and the Song of Solomon ("I am black but comely"⁸²¹).⁸²²

Notice each line is a parallelism; he repeats the same thing twice each time. He says, "Hear you [two of them] my voice, oh wives of Lamech."⁸²³ In the second half of the verse, he says, "And give ear to what I say"... "I have sacrificed a man for wounding me"... If we look up these words that are used here for killing and slaying, we will find what they mean. This [petza]⁸²⁴ for "wounding me"... doesn't mean wound. It means "to place a cut or mark upon, to put a ritual mark." The other, [chabburrah],⁸²⁵ we are told, is the mark or stroke of a wound on the skin. There's a conflict in which ritual wounds are inflicted. We are told that Satan showed Cain the blows of death...⁸²⁶ He taught them to him before he could have his showdown with Abel...

It says, "Since[—not if—]Cain is avenged seven times, Lamech will be avenged seventy times seven." Remember, whoever killed Cain would be avenged sevenfold. Lamech has done the same sort of thing, and he goes out. But it's a ten to one here, seventy times seven. And here is the ritual contest, what the women sing back and forth.... When David and Saul were competing, Saul was murderously envious of David and tried to kill him. When David came back from war, the women divided into two choruses and sang. One would sing, "Saul has slain his thousands. But David has slain his ten thousands" would be replied.⁸²⁷ It's ten to one preference for David. The same thing is Cain versus Lamech... It was the same thing in Rome. When the emperor came back, the only way he could be recognized was for the girls to divide into antiphonal choruses. The Arval brethren do the same and the Salian brethren. They would say, "A thousand, a thousand, a thousand we have beheaded." (In order to become emperor, you had to have slain 5,000 in the field.)... And among the Celtic people there's Era and Ethna led by the white maid and the red maid... When I went to school in the early days..., we had the Maypole. We went around in opposite directions, the red streamers and the white streamers. We had to choose a king and queen of the May... In a common wall design in Egyptian palaces, you will find the tall Maypole, the red throne and the white throne. You will find the priests going in opposite directions. It's the Troy game that was done with horses. That's what a carousel is. The horses move in opposite directions. But again it was the red and the white...

817 H. W. Nibley, Hierocentric; H. W. Nibley, Assembly, pp. 121-126. See Commentary 1:25-e, p. 60, 5:47-a, p. 395, and the overviews of Moses 4 and 6, pp. 221, 458. See Endnote 4-4, p. 298. See Endnote 4-21, p. 304.

818 N. M. Sarna, Genesis, p. 37.

819 Genesis 16.

820 Numbers 12:1, 10.

821 Song of Solomon 1:5.

822 H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the PGP, 20, pp. 253-256.

823 Moses 5:47.

824 F. Brown et al., Lexicon, p. 822d.

825 Ibid., p. 289a.

826 See Commentary 5:29-b, p. 377; 5:47-b, p. 396; overview of Moses 4, p. 237.

827 See 1 Samuel 18:7.

Now let's look at the account in Moses. What was this all about? Lamech was the candidate. He became Cain's successor. "For Lamech, having entered into a covenant with Satan after the manner of Cain, wherefore he became Master Mahan..."⁸²⁸ He is now "the big cheese," and Cain is his rival... The common Jewish legend is that Lamech, who was jealous and wanted to become successor to Cain, lay in wait for him... That's the story they made up to explain this garbled thing in which we only have two lines in the whole Old Testament to explain what's going on. But here [in Moses] we get a pretty good picture... And Lamech became "master of that great secret which was administered unto Cain by Satan; and Irad... the son of Enoch, having known their secret, began to reveal it unto the sons of Adam."⁸²⁹ Ah, somebody's giving the secret away; and, of course, they had sworn by their heads that they wouldn't do that. Since Lamech was the head of the society, it was up to him to see that the proper punishment was administered. "Wherefore Lamech, being angry, slew him [Irad]... not like unto Cain his brother Abel, for the sake of getting gain, but he slew him for the oath's sake [for his ritual obligation]."⁸³⁰ He had taken it and Irad had taken it, so he had to do this, not to get gain... "And it was among the sons of man, and among the daughters of men these things were not spoken, because that Lamech had spoken [now we come to a very important thing] the secret unto his wives, and they rebelled against him, and declared these things abroad, and had not compassion."⁸³¹ This is the [femme] fatale, namely the woman who gives away the secrets. You know about Pandora, but this goes all the way down the line. This is like Lilith...⁸³² The wife gives it away, and it becomes a very important pattern... Not only do we have evil coming into the world, we see the forms it takes here.

828 Moses 5:49.

829 Moses 5:49.

830 Moses 5:50.

831 Moses 5:53.

832 See Commentary 3:23-c, p. 183.

Excursus 36

The Legend of the True Cross

THE medieval Legend of the True Cross⁸³³ consists of five scenes from different time periods: 1. The Death of Adam, 2. The Queen of Sheba, 3. Constantine's Dream, 4. The Discovery of the True Cross, and 5. The Battle between Heraclius and Chosroes. Baldwin gives the following background and summary of this elaborate story:⁸³⁴

According to legend, the cross came from a branch from the Tree of Knowledge in the Garden of Eden. An angel gave the branch to Seth, the son of Adam, telling him to plant the branch on his father's grave and when the resulting tree bore fruit (i.e. the crucified Christ), Adam would again be made whole.⁸³⁵ [The dead Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil shown [in the center of Piero's depiction] underlines the theme of death as the punishment for sin while hinting at the resurrection and new life which will eventually come through the second tree transplanted by Seth near the grave of Adam, the tree which will become the Tree of Life bearing the fruit of the crucified Christ.⁸³⁶ The dead tree also suggests the spiritual death of Judaism, contrasted to the Tree of Life, amplifying the conflict between Judaism and Christianity that plays out in this Christian world history.]

The legend continues with King Solomon building the Temple of Jerusalem. His carpenters are struck by a magnificent beam of wood cut from the tree growing over Adam's grave but they are unable to use the wood in building the temple and cast it aside as a bridge over a stream. Arriving on a visit to Solomon, the Queen of Sheba recognizes the importance of the wood and refuses to step on it, telling Solomon the wood will bring the destruction of the Jewish people. He has it buried secretly. Centuries later, a miraculous pond develops at the site of the buried cross and when the wood floats to the surface, the Romans use it to crucify Christ.

The cross then lay forgotten in the earth with the other two crosses used to crucify the two thieves for more than three hundred years until the time of Constantine. On the night of a decisive battle against a rival emperor, Maxentius, Constantine had a dream in which an angel held up a cross and said, "Conquer in the name of this sign." Marching under the banner of the cross, Constantine's forces triumphed the next day. Constantine then went on to proclaim Christianity the official Roman state religion...

Constantine's mother, St. Helena, traveled to Jerusalem to search for the original cross and discovered a local Jew named Judas who knew its secret location. She tortured him until he revealed his secret. Judas dug up the three crosses and tested each one on a dead person, discovering the true cross when it revived the corpse. Judas was converted and went on to become bishop of Jerusalem.... St. Helena... left most of [the cross] there in a new chapel. The rest she brought back to Constantinople. When the Persian army of King Chosroes conquered Jerusalem in the early 7th century, [the king] took the cross as a trophy back to his court. He was later defeated in 629 CE by the Byzantine Emperor, Heraclius, whose army marched under the banner of the Cross like that of Constantine. Heraclius offers Chosroes a choice of conversion or death. He chooses the latter and is beheaded near his throne. Heraclius recovers the cross and returns it to Jerusalem. Just outside the city gates, Heraclius is stopped by a miraculous collapse of the city gate and an angel who appears, chiding him for his pride and reminding him of the humility of Christ who entered Jerusalem on an ass. Heraclius dismounts, strips off his courtly robes and shoes, and carries the cross into Jerusalem, barefoot...

833 Cf. the related Golden Legend and the Legends of the Holy Rood. See also J. E. Hanauer, Folklore, pp. 39-41.

834 R. W. Baldwin, Legend.

835 See the overview of Moses 6, p. 460.

836 Cf. Figure 6-1, p. 454. See Endnote E-129, p. 733.

FIGURE E36-1. Elevation of the Cross, 1948

This preliminary design was created by a Russian iconographer for the Holy Trinity Church in Vanves (Paris). It depicts the festival of the Raising of the Cross, which was instituted in Jerusalem and associated both with the dedication of the basilica of the Resurrection¹ and with the finding of the true Cross.

In the image shown here, “the bishop is seen raising the Cross in the upper part..., while below, St. Helen is shown near a cave at the foot of Golgotha before the three crosses that she has just discovered... The simplest composition shows us the bishop (St. Macarius of Jerusalem) standing on an *ambo*² holding a large cross in his two hands: it is the true Cross of the Lord which he is showing to the people. The bishop is supported on either side by subdeacons. Generally, one sees at his side St. Constantine and St. Helen. Sometimes the emperor and his mother are placed together to the right of the bishop, while to his left is shown some miracle (the healing of a sick or the resurrection of a dead person) produced by the virtue of the Cross... The architectural background behind the bishop elevating the Cross must represent the basilica of the Resurrection built by Constantine.”³

Elaborating on the meaning of the festival, Ouspensky writes: “The festival of the Raising is a glorification of the Cross of Christ by the totality of the universe which recognizes that ‘the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men.’⁴ ‘Seeing the Cross raised by the hands of the bishop,’ the Church glorifies the weapon of Christ.... If Christ is the New Adam, His Cross is the New Tree of Life, giving back to the fallen world the incorruptibility of Paradise. Raised above the earth the Cross, which embraces the whole of heaven with its two extremities, puts to flight the demons and pours forth grace to the four corners of the universe.”⁵

1 See Endnote E-132, p. 735.

2 A raised platform serving the function of lectern and pulpit in Orthodox liturgy.

3 L. Ouspensky et al., Icons, pp. 149, 151.

4 1 Corinthians 1:25.

5 L. Ouspensky et al., Icons, pp. 148-149.

Parts of the true cross (or pieces of wood described as such) were distributed as political gifts to rulers, monastic orders, and politically-connected churches in the West.⁸³⁷ By the mid-thirteenth century, the Franciscans managed to gain control over two sites which greatly boosted their political importance within the competing factions of the church: the chapel outside Jerusalem where the cross was supposedly discovered by St. Helena... and the church at the site of the crucifixion. Capitalizing on their own considerable influence, the Franciscans of Florence managed to acquire a piece of the true cross in the early fourteenth century. To honor this major relic, encourage a steady stream of pilgrims, and proclaim their special ties with the Savior and the Holy Lands, the Franciscan order in Florence built the church of San Croce (Holy Cross). In the 1360s, they commissioned Agnolo Gaddi to decorate it with a fresco cycle on the history of the cross. Other Franciscan churches followed suit with similar fresco cycles including Cenni di Francesco’s History of the Cross in the church of San Francesco in Volterra (1410) and Piero’s cycle at San Francesco in Arezzo (ca. 1447-1466). Though no documentation survives, it is likely the church of San Francesco in Arezzo also had a relic of the true cross.

... While the merchant family which commissioned Piero’s frescoes were hardly proponents of a courtly ideology of global rule and triumph, the frescoes tied directly to the major military 837 In 347, only seven years after the finding of the relic, Cyril of Jerusalem could already write that “the whole world has... been filled with pieces of the wood of the Cross” (First Catechetical, 4:10, p. 21).

FIGURE E36-2. The Chapel of Adam, ca. 1167
Photo: Laura E. Hoffman, 1961-

The place where our Lord was crucified is called Calvary,¹ because the skull of the primitive man [Adam] was buried there. So it came to pass that the second Adam, that is the blood of Christ, as it dropped from the cross, washed away the sins of the buried protoplast, the first Adam.²

Legends recount the fate of Adam's remains after their burial. Before the Flood, Noah is said to have retrieved Adam's skull from the Cave of Treasures so it could be preserved on the ark. According to Christian stories that claimed Jewish precedents: "When Noah the righteous left the ark... he came with his sons first to Mount Moriah... On a nearby hill, Shem, the son of Noah, interred the skull of Adam, which he had taken with him into the ark and guarded during the flood. Since then the hill is called [Golgotha] – the Skull."³ Similar Muslim traditions about the reburial of Adam can be found in Ibn Kathir.⁴

Christian tradition, supposing that the NT term *Golgotha*⁵ referred to the place where Adam was buried, inferred that Jesus Christ was later crucified over the exact spot of the ancient grave. For this reason, the figure of Adam is frequently represented in depictions of the crucifixion, either as a skull in a cavelike tomb beneath the cross (often superscripted with "SA" for "Skull of Adam"; at times also depicted with the rib from which Eve was created nearby) or, more dramatically, as ascending from his tomb as the effects of the Atonement raise him from the dead.

Today, pilgrims to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre⁶ in Jerusalem can still visit, beneath the traditional spot of crucifixion on Golgotha, what became known as the "church and tomb of Adam."⁷ The chapel surrounds the cavity where tradition says that Adam's bones were deposited to await the redeeming blood of Christ.⁸ A small window at the back of the chamber displays a fissure said to have been created at the moment when the earth shook and the temple veil was rent. The general symbolism, though not the speculative elements regarding the skull of Adam, is echoed in the words of the Apostle Paul: "For as in Adam all die [i.e., through Adam's eating of the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge], even so in Christ shall all be made alive [i.e., through the "tree" on which Christ was crucified]."⁹

1 Latin calvaria = skull.

2 Jerome, Letter 46, 3, p. 61, after Origen's Commentary on Matthew 27:33; cf. R. E. Brown, Death, 2:937 n. 9; C. W. Wilson, Golgotha, pp. 2-7.

3 Z. Vilnay, Sacred Land, p. 70, cf. p. 213; cf. E. A. W. Budge, Cave, pp. 104-110, 122-129; W. L. Lipscomb, Repentance, 99-103, p. 233; S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 2:8, p. 115; 3:5-7, pp. 149-153; 3:13-19, pp. 161-169; H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the PGP, 21, p. 259; Shelemon, Book of the Bee, 21, p. 35.

4 Ibn Kathir in B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, p. 34; I. Ibn Kathir, Stories, p. 54. For competing traditions about the place of Adam's burial, see Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations, The Cave of Treasures, p. 669. See Endnote E-130, p. 735.

5 Matthew 27:33; Mark 16:22; Luke 23:33; John 19:17. See Endnote E-131, p. 735.

6 See Endnote E-132, p. 735.

7 A. Parrot, Golgotha, p. 77.

8 Z. Vilnay et al., Vilnay Guide, pp. 99, 104; cf. A. Parrot, Golgotha, p. 77; Z. Vilnay, Sacred Land, pp. 212-213.

9 1 Corinthians 15:22, cf. vv. 46, 47, 49. See Endnote E-133, p. 736.

threats facing a universal Christian religion in the mid-fifteenth century: the Moslem army threatening the Christian Byzantine empire in the east, and the black Muslim empire in Moorish Spain. The Franciscan order also had important ties to the chapels of the Cross in the threatened Holy Land. Despite the lack of a direct tie to court culture, it is not difficult to explain the appearance of a cosmic world history, geared around the theme of the cross, in a Franciscan church in Arezzo.

See Excursus 45: Impact of the "Black Death" on Art and Literature, p. 640, and Figure 6-3, p. 461.

Excursus 37

Traditions About the Role of Abel

THE shedding of Abel's blood naturally was seen as a type of the atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ.⁸³⁸ With respect to his place among the biblical canon of martyrs, Hamilton writes: "Abel is coupled with Zechariah⁸³⁹ as the first⁸⁴⁰ and the last⁸⁴¹ victims of murder mentioned in the OT... Understandably Abel is characterized as 'innocent...'"⁸⁴²

Unfortunately, the death of the righteous Abel—the beloved son of the Adam and Eve, whose story has always been linked with the idea of proper sacrifice⁸⁴³—seems to have also given rise to an anomalous ordinance of sprinkling blood coupled with "washing" or "baptism" for little children that was denounced in JST Genesis 17:4-7:

4. My people have gone astray from my precepts, and have not kept mine ordinances, which I gave unto their fathers;
5. And they have not observed mine anointing, and the burial, or baptism wherewith I commanded them;
6. But have turned from the commandment, and taken unto themselves the washing [the words "or baptism" are crossed out at this point in OT1] of children, and the blood of sprinkling;
7. And have said that the blood of the righteous Abel was shed for sins; and have not known wherein they are accountable before me."⁸⁴⁴

To counteract this practice, the Lord established the covenant of circumcision at the age of eight days,⁸⁴⁵ "that thou mayest know for ever that children are not accountable before me until they are eight years old."⁸⁴⁶ D&C 68:25-28, received later in the same year that JST Genesis 17 was translated, also emphasizes that children are not accountable until eight years old.⁸⁴⁷

Significantly, the figure of Abel (Hibil Ziua = Abel Splendor) is associated with the washing rituals of baptism among the Mandaean. ⁸⁴⁸ Along with Sitil (Seth) and Anus (Enos, Enosh), he is one of the three celestial uthra (= angelic dwellers of the realm of light) "who can substitute or stand beside Manda d-Hiia in the function of revealer and savior" and can function "as intermediaries between the divinity and humankind."⁸⁴⁹ Indeed, Hibil, who is often identified with Manda d-Hiia himself, was said to have performed the first baptism, that of Adam, who prefigures every later candidate for this ordinance.⁸⁵⁰ Even today, as ⁸³⁸ Hebrews 12:24; M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam, pp. 270-271.

⁸³⁹ Matthew 23:35. See discussion of the identity of Zechariah in M. Barker, Christmas, pp. 149-150.

⁸⁴⁰ Genesis 4.

⁸⁴¹ 2 Chronicles 24:20-22. Chronicles is the last book in the Hebrew canon.

⁸⁴² V. P. Hamilton, Genesis, p. 244.

⁸⁴³ J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 22 January 1834, pp. 58-59.

⁸⁴⁴ See OT1 text in S. H. Faulring et al., Original Manuscripts, pp. 131-132. These verses were probably received between February 1 and March 7, 1831 (see Figure 0-2, p. 3). Note that D&C 74, now known to have been received "sometime in the last part of 1830, and not January 1832 as found in all editions of the Doctrine and Covenants," "probably stemmed from discussions about infant baptism" (R. J. Woodford, Discoveries, p. 31).

⁸⁴⁵ Genesis 17:12.

⁸⁴⁶ JST Genesis 17:11. See Endnote E-134, p. 734.

⁸⁴⁷ L. E. Dahl, Plain, p. 126.

⁸⁴⁸ E. S. Drower, Mandaeans, pp. 100-123.

⁸⁴⁹ E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, p. 46.

⁸⁵⁰ W. Barnstone et al., Gnostic, p. 533; E. S. Drower, Prayerbook, p. 30.

the Mandaean priest “prepares for the baptism, he might conjure up the image of the prototypical priest, who is Hibil Ziua.”⁸⁵¹

Recalling the idea of a redemptive role falsely attributed to the “blood of the righteous Abel,” the practice of swearing “by the holy blood of Abel” is portrayed in both early Christian and Islamic accounts of the efforts of the antediluvian patriarchs to dissuade their posterity from leaving the “holy mountain” and associating with the children of Cain.⁸⁵² Eisenbaum emphasizes that “by virtue of his being killed by Cain, Abel was removed from the earth and the downward spiral of human history that followed.”⁸⁵³ Hebrews 12:24, the author of which “may have been familiar with some extra-biblical Enochic and Noachic traditions”⁸⁵⁴ speaks of the saints coming “to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.”⁸⁵⁵ With reference to this scripture, Koester cites the possibility that the author of Hebrews may be suggesting that, consistent with the idea in 4 Maccabees that martyrs’ blood atoned for sins,⁸⁵⁶ “Abel’s blood brought a limited atonement, while Jesus’ blood brought complete Atonement.”⁸⁵⁷ With reference to Hebrews 11:4, Joseph Smith said that Abel “holding still the keys of his dispensation... was sent down from heaven unto Paul to minister consoling words, and to commit unto him a knowledge of the mysteries of godliness.”⁸⁵⁸

In their wider narrative context, the pseudepigraphic references to Abel are interpreted by Ruzer as depicting a group that looked to Abel rather than to Christ for salvation. He concludes that the “emphasis here [is] on the salvific quality of Abel’s blood... Swearing by Abel’s blood... is presented in our text as sufficient for the salvation of the sons of Seth; those who dwell—thanks to swearing by Abel’s blood—on the holy mountain do not need any further salvation.”⁸⁵⁹ Such a concept is reinforced by a 1 Enoch description of Abel as a “red calf,” which Tiller sees as an allusion to the red heifer⁸⁶⁰ of Numbers 19:1-10,⁸⁶¹ and whose ritual Maimonides saw, not merely as law of purity, but rather as a matter “of transcendent, even salvific weight and meaning.”⁸⁶² The red heifer was a pointedly young animal used in purification rites, comprising a washing and a sprinkling of blood,⁸⁶³ for those who had come into contact with “one... found slain” and “lying in the field,”⁸⁶⁴ as was Abel. A widely-varying set of Islamic accounts attempt to explain the origin of a related Qur’anic story⁸⁶⁵—what these accounts have in common is the idea that the murderer denied his crime but was identified by the voice of the dead man who was touched by the sacrificial animal.⁸⁶⁶ Could this be an echo of the voice of the righteous Abel whose “blood cries unto [God] from the ground”⁸⁶⁷—“he being dead yet speaketh”?⁸⁶⁸

851 J. J. Buckley, Mandaeans, p. 132.

852 See Endnote E-135, p. 734.

853 P. M. Eisenbaum, Hebrews 11, p. 149; cf. Genesis 6-11.

854 A. A. Orlov, Heir, p. 58; cf. P. M. Eisenbaum, Hebrews 11, pp. 148-149.

855 See Endnote E-136, p. 735.

856 Fourth Maccabees, 6:28-29, p. 192; 7:20-21, p. 195.

857 C. Koester, Hebrews, p. 546 n. 12:24a; cf. H. W. Attridge, Hebrews, p. 377.

858 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 5 October 1840, p. 169; cf. E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, p. 46. See also Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations of the Mysteries, p. 663. See Endnote E-137, p. 735.

859 S. Ruzer, Abel’s Blood.

860 See Endnote E-138, p. 735.

861 P. A. Tiller, Animal, p. 226; cf. G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, p. 371 n. 8; cf. 85:3-6, 89:9, pp. 364, 365.

862 J. Neusner, Without Myth, p. 99.

863 Cf. JST Genesis 17:6.

864 Deuteronomy 21:1.

865 Qur’an 2:67-71.

866 M. M. Ayoub, Qur’an (Vol. 1), p. 117. See also B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, pp. 216-217. See Endnote E-139, p. 735.

867 See Commentary 5:35-b, p. 383.

868 Hebrews 11:4; cf. G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 22:5-7, p. 300; 9:2, 10, p. 202; pp. 305-306 n. 5-7.

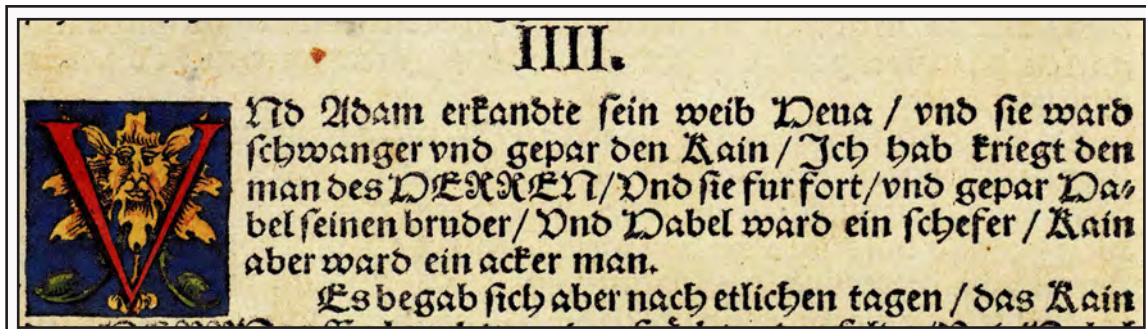

FIGURE E37-1. Luther's 1534 German Translation of Genesis 4:1

*Ich hab kriegt den man des HERREN.*¹ Although Luther translated the Hebrew term 'eth as des HERREN (= of the Lord) in 1534, he later concluded on both grammatical and contextual grounds that it should be rendered as a marker of the direct object of the verb (den HERREN = the Lord). This change, which appeared in the posthumous 1546 edition of his Bible, could be given in English as "I have gotten the man, [namely or even] the Lord."²

1 Genesis 4:1.

2 T. Gallus, Der Nachkomme 1, p. 124.

Another possible clue to the mistaken identification of Abel as a savior might be found in a close reading of Eve's words at the birth of Cain. The words are usually translated: "I have gotten a man from (= Hebrew 'et) the Lord" or "with the Lord," which, as Kaiser observes, "doesn't make too much sense"—either linguistically or contextually.⁸⁶⁹ For this reason, some have argued that 'et should be taken straightforwardly in its grammatical role as the marker of the definite direct object of the verb,⁸⁷⁰ as in the revised Wittenberg edition of Luther's Bible published posthumously in 1546: "I have gotten a man, [namely or even] the Lord."⁸⁷¹ "This rendering suggests," in Hamilton's words, "that in the birth of Cain Eve thought, mistakenly, that the divinely promised seed⁸⁷² of [Moses 4:21] had now come in Cain. The child, whose birth is so welcomed, could be looked on as God himself."⁸⁷³ Also concluding that Eve "thought the deliverer had been sent by God," Boice renders her exclamation as "Here he is" or "I've gotten him."⁸⁷⁴

That Eve could have been so deceived in thinking the promised Redeemer had already come in the person of Cain seems doubtful. However, in a more general sense, her words might be taken as foreshadowing her hope that, in contrast to her wayward progeny,⁸⁷⁵ Cain would "not reject [God's] words" and would become the progenitor of the righteous branch of her family through whom the promise of Moses 4:21 would eventually be fulfilled. As in subsequent patriarchal tradition, "a representative child continued to be God's visible guarantee for the present and a pledge for the future. Also, he was representative of the interests and spiritual and material fortunes of the whole lot who were joined to him."⁸⁷⁶

869 W. C. J. Kaiser, Toward, p. 37. From the standpoint of functional grammar, Bandstra admits that the "transitivity structure seems to have as its goal et-Yahweh" but rejects this idea "for logical reasons" (B. J. Bandstra, Genesis 1-11, p. 228).

870 See Endnote E-140, p. 735.

871 T. Gallus, Der Nachkomme 1, p. 124; V. P. Hamilton, Genesis, p. 221. See Endnote E-141, p. 736. Since 1544, Luther had been working on a completely revised version of the New Testament. The posthumous edition was prepared by Luther's friend Röhrer and contains numerous alterations that he traced to Luther himself.

872 Besides the divine promise, one account has Satan telling Eve that, as a consequence of eating the forbidden fruit, she would "become the Mother of God" (M. E. Stone, Adamgirk, 3:10:10, p. 73).

873 V. P. Hamilton, Genesis, p. 221. See also Commentary 4:21-d, p. 266; T. Gallus, Der Nachkomme 1, pp. 116-132; W. C. J. Kaiser, Toward, p. 37; G. J. Wenham, Genesis 1-15, p. 102. See Endnote E-142, p. 736.

874 J. M. Boice, Genesis 1-11, p. 250. See Endnote E-143, p. 736.

875 Moses 4:13.

876 W. C. J. Kaiser, Toward, p. 37.

Additional support for the idea of Cain's special potential can be found in traditions of unusual circumstances surrounding the birth—the hoped-for blessing resulting from Adam and Eve's continued calling upon the Lord—that may have aroused great expectations. In some accounts, the newborn Cain is described as “a glorious person,”⁸⁷⁷ being “like the color of stars,”⁸⁷⁸ “a designation which associates Cain with the angels.”⁸⁷⁹ It is said that Adam loved Cain and Abel “the most of all his children.”⁸⁸⁰ Perhaps as Abel's righteousness began to overshadow that of Cain, the high hopes once held for the elder brother were transferred to the younger sibling, and mistakenly carried forward by a group attributing a salvific role to him after his murder.

In a related vein, there also exists a separate tradition relevant to the theme of Abel's role in the overall plan of salvation. It may be found in an analysis of Armenian texts presenting a variant of the story of the cheirograph of Adam,⁸⁸¹ along with elaborate speculations on its relevance for Christ's victory over death and hell:

Then Satan brought a stone and set it before Adam, and he said to Adam, “Put [your] hand upon the stone and say thus: ‘Let all my offspring be your servants.’ And if you do not say so, I will bring deep darkness upon you.”

Then Adam put his hand upon the stone and said, “Until the unbegotten is born and the immortal dies, we and all our offspring will be your servants.”⁸⁸²

In this variant of the story, the agreement is called a cheirograph, not because it is a handwritten document, but “because of the ‘writing of hands,’ i.e., the hand-prints, left on the rock by Adam's bloody hands.”⁸⁸³ Because the death of the “unbegotten” and “immortal” Jesus Christ fulfills the expiration clause of the contract,⁸⁸⁴ He, “in his descent into Hades erased the cheirograph, bound the Devil, and freed the souls from Hades.”⁸⁸⁵ At the triumphant entry of the Savior, Death “runs forward to open his gates” and begs for mercy, since “[i]t was Christ who was the true first-born [vs. Satan who had falsely claimed to be so⁸⁸⁶], and through Him everything in creation had its ground.”⁸⁸⁷ Relating this event to the deaths of Adam and Abel, Anderson summarizes the logic of Ephrem the Syrian in interpreting this tradition:⁸⁸⁸

The issue at hand... [is] a conflict between mercy and justice. Abel, the victim of a brutal murder, dies first in order to precede Adam to the grave.⁸⁸⁹

The logic of this interpretation, though compressed, is clear and compelling. Had Adam gone to Sheol first, Ephrem reasons, he could never have been redeemed. For he had violated a command that had attached to it a clear and unalterable penalty: “The day you eat of that fruit 877 H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the PGP, 19, p. 241; cf. G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 106:2, p. 536. See J. C. Reeves, Heralds, p. 103 n. 109.

878 G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, Armenian 21:3a, p. 24E. See Endnote E-144, p. 736.

879 J. Tromp, Cain, pp. 290-291. See Endnote E-145, p. 736.

880 M. al-Kisa'i, Tales, p. 77.

881 See the overview of Moses 5, p. 332.

882 W. L. Lipscomb, Expulsion, 17-19, pp. 138-139, 268-269; cf. M. E. Stone, Legend, p. 156.

883 M. E. Stone, Legend, p. 160; cf. S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 1:23, p. 23; Revelation 13:16; Commentary 5:4-a, p. 355; 5:5-b, p. 359. See Endnote 4-32, p. 308. See Endnote E-146, p. 736.

884 W. L. Lipscomb, Expulsion, 23-26, pp. 139-140.

885 Turdeanu, cited in M. E. Stone, Legend, p. 159.

886 See Excursus 8: The Origin and Premortal Existence of Human Spirits, p. 540.

887 G. A. Anderson, Perfection, p. 173.

888 G. A. Anderson, Perfection, pp. 174-175.

889 See Endnote E-147, p. 737.

you shall certainly die.”⁸⁹⁰ But history did not work out this way. Instead, Abel died first, and consequently the mouth of Hades was opened for the first time unjustly. Henceforth the legal foundation of the underworld rested on shaky grounds. Since Abel died first and unjustly, God has full authority to evacuate those held prisoner there at the end of time.

A further irony is the salvific role played by the innocent death of Abel. Since Abel was considered by Ephrem, and nearly all early Christians, as a type of Christ, the miracle of the incarnation was inscribed into the very beginning of Genesis. Because the innocent Abel (a.k.a Christ) dies unfairly, Adam (all humanity) will be justly cast forth from Sheol.

890 See Moses 3:17.

Excursus 38

The Meaning of “Adam-ondi-Ahman”

NIBLEY derives the meaning “Adam (or man) in the presence of God” by reference to Egyptian: Atum (“Adam” or “man”⁸⁹¹), ondi (i.e., “in the presence of,” “at,” “by,” “around”⁸⁹²), Amen (also “Amun,” or “Amon”).⁸⁹³

Marquardt points out that the Kirtland “Grammar and Alphabet of the Egyptian Language,” in the handwriting of William W. Phelps, contains a reference to “The place appointed of God for the residence of Adam; Adam ondi= Ahman.”⁸⁹⁴ Adam-ondi-Ahman has also been described as “the place where Adam shall come to visit his people, or the Ancient of Days shall sit,”⁸⁹⁵ “the place where Adam dwelt,” or “Valley of God where Adam dwelt.”⁸⁹⁶ Matthews also mentions the following interpretations or descriptions: “Adam’s consecrated land,”⁸⁹⁷ “Adam’s grave”⁸⁹⁸ and “Valley of God in which Adam blessed his children.”⁸⁹⁹ He also cites the following from Elder Alvin R. Dyer, which relates the name “to the priesthood and revelatory experience of Adam in being the first man to hold the spiritual blessings of the gospel”:

The very word itself speaks of the manner in which Adam has received the “Keys of Salvation” under the counsel and direction of the Holy One, who is Jesus Christ the Lord.

The word “Adam” refers directly to Adam. The word “ondi,” means nearby or connected with. The word “Ahman” means the Lord himself. Therefore a literal translation of the words “Adam-ondi-Ahman” means The Lord Jesus Christ, through Adam unto mankind.⁹⁰⁰

Elsewhere, President Dyer remarks:

In conferring the “keys of salvation” upon Adam, the revealing and unlocking of the conditions of salvation were made known to them and through them to mankind. In this we can understand the true meaning of the term “Adam-ondi-Ahman,” or simply: from “Ahman,” who is the Lord, “ondi,” meaning through Adam unto mankind.⁹⁰¹

With respect to the term “Ahman,” Orson Pratt cited a revelation by Joseph Smith saying that it “signifies God... in the original language spoken by Adam.”⁹⁰² Tvedtnes conjectures that since: “Joseph Smith is said to have indicated that... Jesus is called ‘Son Ahman,’⁹⁰³ Old Testament prayers end simply with the word ‘Amen’ (= confirmed, true), and hence in the name (title) of Jesus Christ.”⁹⁰⁴

891 See Commentary 1:34-a, p. 66.

892 Nibley, cited in L. C. Berrett et al., Missouri, p. 380; cf. H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the Book of Mormon, 53, 2:321.

893 See also H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the Book of Mormon, 26, 1:338; 7, 1:79.

894 Kirtland Egyptian Papers, 1, p. 23, cited in H. M. Marquardt, Revelations, p. 198 n. 38.

895 D&C 116.

896 O. Pratt, 25 February 1877, pp. 342-343; cf. O. Pratt, 18 May 1873, p. 48.

897 Signboard of the Missouri State Historical Society, Courthouse Square, Gallatin, MO, cited in R. J. Matthews, Adam-ondi-Ahman, p. 30.

898 Heman Smith, RLDS Journal of History, 9:140, cited in R. J. Matthews, Adam-ondi-Ahman, p. 30.

899 John Corrill, Brief History, 11 February 1839, cited in R. J. Matthews, Adam-ondi-Ahman, p. 30.

900 A. R. Dyer, The Lord Speaketh, 1964, p. 216, cited in R. J. Matthews, Adam-ondi-Ahman, pp. 30-31.

901 A. R. Dyer, Destiny, p. 44.

902 O. Pratt, 25 February 1877, p. 343; cf. O. Pratt, 18 February 1855, p. 342. See also J. Smith, Jr. in D. M. Quinn, Prayer Circles, p. 83. For the original revelation, see J. Smith, Jr., Papers 2008-, Revelations and Translations, Manuscript Revelation Books, A Sample of Pure Language, ca. March 1832, BCR 144, p. 265.

903 See O. Pratt, 18 February 1855, p. 342. See J. Smith, Jr., Papers 2008-, Revelations and Translations, Manuscript Revelation Books, A Sample of Pure Language, ca. March 1832, BCR 144, p. 265.

904 J. A. Tvedtnes, Faith, p. 114.

Excursus 39

The Location of Adam-ondi-Ahman

GRAHAM W. Doxey wrote in the Encyclopedia of Mormonism that:

Neither biblical records nor secular history and archaeological research identify the dimensions or the location of the Garden [of Eden] in terms of the present-day surface of the earth.⁹⁰⁵ Latter-day revelation specifies that, as a mortal, Adam lived at Adam-ondi-Ahman in what is now Daviess County, Missouri.⁹⁰⁶

Although the term “Adam-ondi-Ahman” had been publicly mentioned by the spring of 1835,⁹⁰⁷ a specific location was not identified until sometime after May 1838, when Joseph Smith “accepted Lyman Wight’s invitation to visit a two-square mile valley at a horseshoe bend of the Grand River in Daviess County, Missouri, located a few miles north of Far West.”⁹⁰⁸ Here the Prophet declared that “Spring Hill is named by the Lord Adam-ondi-Ahman.”⁹⁰⁹ On 21 October of the same year, the Prophet descended to the valley of Adam-ondi-Ahman and pointed out the place where Adam gave a blessing to his posterity.⁹¹⁰ Regarding the circumstances surrounding the Prophet’s identification of these locations, Cook writes:⁹¹¹

The date of reception for section 116 is uncertain. The original source for the revelation is “The Scriptorium Book of Joseph Smith,”⁹¹² but the journal entries in this document for May and June 1838 (in the handwriting of George W. Robinson, the Prophet’s scribe) were recorded after the fact (probably July 1838), and therefore cannot be taken at face value to interpret historical events as they developed. The 19 May 1838 entry strongly implies that Joseph Smith revealed the name “Adam-ondi-Ahman” subsequent to that date. George Robinson’s journal entry details the Prophet’s activities in “laying claims to [a] city plat” near Lyman Wight’s ferry. Robinson noted that Wight and others had named the place “Spring Hill,” but the location was “afterwards named by the mouth of the Lord and was called Adam Ondi Awmen [sic]”... William Swartzell, a temporary Mormon convert, assisted Church leaders in the surveying of Spring Hill or Adam-ondi-Ahman in 1838. Swartzell, who kept regular diary entries during this period, recorded that the ancient name was given by the Prophet on 11 June 1838:⁹¹³ “[I] observed to Joseph Smith that this city should have a new name. Brother Joseph placed his back against a small shady tree near the spring, and then said, ‘We shall alter the name of this stake’... and looking towards heaven for a short time, said, ‘It does not take me long to get a revelation from heaven, and this stake, or city, shall be called Adam-on-Diammon [sic].’”

The early Saints responded enthusiastically to news about Adam-ondi-Ahman. William W. Phelps, who would have encountered the term while he was helping to prepare the new edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, recorded in his journal on 3 June 1835: “Com[posed] a hymn – Adam-ondi-Ahman.”⁹¹⁴ The text was included in the hymnbook he assisted

905 See Endnote E-148, p. 737.

906 G. W. Doxey, Eden, p. 534. See D&C 107:53-56; 116:1; 117:8.

907 See Excursus 40: Dating Joseph Smith’s Vision of Adam-ondi-Ahman, p. 625.

908 M. A. Scherer, Mists, p. 8.

909 D&C 116. See also D&C 117:8-11.

910 L. C. Berrett et al., Missouri, pp. 392-393.

911 L. W. Cook, Revelations, p. 333.

912 J. Smith, Jr., The Scriptorium Book of Joseph Smith, 19 May 1838, pp. 43-44, cited in J. Smith, Jr., Papers 1989-1992, pp. 244-245.

913 William Swartzell, Mormonism Exposed, Being a Journal of a Residence in Missouri from the 28th of May to the 20th of August, 1838... (Pekin, Ohio: By the Author, 1840), cited in L. W. Cook, Revelations, p. 308.

914 William W. Phelps Journal, LDS Archives, cited in H. M. Marquardt, Revelations, p. 198. See Hymns (1985),

Emma Smith in publishing later that same month, and also appeared in the next issue of the Messenger and Advocate.⁹¹⁵ The hymn was later sung at the Kirtland Temple dedication on 27 March 1836.⁹¹⁶ In the early Church, “Adam-ondi-Ahman” was “recorded as being used in more meetings and appears in more journal references than any other hymn.”⁹¹⁷

With respect to the modern response to this revelation, Matthews reports: “In reading the literature available about the place now called Adam-ondi-Ahman, one finds a difference in the veneration that is held concerning it. The spectrum runs from an acceptance of the place as the very spot on which Adam dwelt to the opposite view that there is nothing particularly significant about the location either anciently, currently, or in the future.”⁹¹⁸ For example, disavowing claims of a historical connection between the site and the story of Adam and Eve, Mark Scherer, the Community of Christ Church Historian, writes: “For us today, Adam-ondi-Ahman remains a place of historical curiosity and exemplifies Joseph Jr.’s penchant to link land and theology.”⁹¹⁹ Consistent with this view, Phelps’ hymn was removed from the 1870 RLDS Hymnal “due to dramatic theological differences.”⁹²⁰

Not surprisingly, the literal nature of LDS beliefs with regard to these locations often invites ridicule—to which members have tried to respond with good-humored understanding. A typical story—most likely apocryphal but not completely out of character⁹²¹—has President Spencer W. Kimball being confronted by a hostile reporter who asked, “I hear you Mormons believe that the Garden of Eden was in the state of Missouri. Is that true?” President Kimball is reported to have replied in straightfaced irony, “No, we do not believe that the state of Missouri existed at the time of the Garden of Eden.”⁹²²

Today, although the area of Adam-ondi-Ahman remains as a relatively undisturbed pastoral landscape, “in verbal stance and land acquisition the area has become quietly important” to the LDS Church.⁹²³ Consistent with the scriptural description of the earth after the Fall, the area is still “known for its thick and thorny vegetation”⁹²⁴ and, appropriately echoing the experience of Adam and Eve who were commanded to “till the earth,”⁹²⁵ “[m]ost of the valley acreage is currently farmed.”⁹²⁶

#49.

915 W. W. Phelps, Adam-ondi-Ahman; “probably not published until July” (H. M. Marquardt, Revelations, p. 198 n. 38).

916 J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 27 March 1836, 2:417.

917 M. D. Poulter, 1835 Hymnbook, p. 42.

918 R. J. Matthews, Adam-ondi-Ahman, p. 31.

919 M. A. Scherer, Mists. See also R. J. Matthews, Adam-ondi-Ahman, p. 28 n. 3.

920 M. A. Scherer, Mists.

921 Edward L. Kimball, a son and biographer of President Kimball, commented as follows on the question of this story’s authenticity: “I have not previously heard the anecdote. If the statement were made to a reporter in the presence of others, I think I would have heard about it. He was capable of such a quip, but I think I would want the word of someone who was there before asserting it actually happened. Generally he was anxious about press conferences and cautious in what he said” (E. L. Kimball, 3 January 2009).

922 Although it is not expected that it would ever be possible to “identify the dimensions or the location of the Garden [of Eden] in terms of the present-day surface of the earth” (G. W. Doxey, Eden, p. 534; see the overview of Moses 3, p. 141), Mormons do identify Adam-ondi-Ahman, and possibly other sites in Missouri (see Figure 6-2, p. 457), with the story of Adam and Eve. See also Excursus 13: Some Perspectives on Historicity, p. 552.

923 C. S. Campbell, Images, p. 175.

924 See Moses 4:23-24.

925 See Moses 3:5, 4:29, 5:1.

926 C. S. Campbell, Images, pp. 177, 175. For more on the history and geography of Adam-ondi-Ahman, see L. C. Berrett, Adam-ondi-Ahman; L. C. Berrett et al., Missouri, pp. 358-456; A. R. Dyer, Fire, pp. 6-27, 158-188; R. N. Holzapfel et al., Kirtland, pp. 171-173, 232-238; R. J. Matthews, Adam-ondi-Ahman. The first chapter of a book by Cottle is also valuable as a description of the current status and condition of the site (T. D. Cottle, Adam-ondi-Ahman, 1-17). For an excellent in-depth study of the history, meaning, ownership of, and attitudes toward

Excursus 40

Dating Joseph Smith's Vision of Adam-ondi-Ahman

WILLARD Richards reported the Prophet as saying: "I saw Adam in the valley of Adam-ondi-Ahman. He called together his children and blessed them with a patriarchal blessing. The Lord appeared in their midst, and he (Adam) blessed them all, and foretold what should befall them to the latest generation."⁹²⁷ About the possible date and setting of this vision, Matthews writes:⁹²⁸

The Prophet did not specify the circumstances or the date when these things were communicated to him, but it is possible that it was part of the accumulation of knowledge and spiritual experience that came to him in connection with the translation of the Bible...

The subject matter of section 107—concerning Adam, the ancient patriarchs, a council at Adam-ondi-Ahman, Melchizedek, latter-day councils, and priesthood quorums—seems entirely consistent with this hypothesis. That the pattern of councils and Church organization was shown to the Prophet by vision is claimed in D&C 107:93, where it is said that the order of the Seventy (and presumably the other quorums also) was "according to the vision." Likewise Parley P. Pratt has quoted the Prophet as saying to the Twelve:

"I have now finished the work which was laid upon me, by committing to you all things for the building up of the kingdom according to the heavenly vision, and the pattern shown to me from heaven."⁹²⁹

Although section 107 was recorded [in] 1835, it is certain from the translation of the early chapters of Genesis in 1830 and from the Prophet's instructions to the elders about ancient councils in 1831... that he knew about these things long before 1835. It is certain that much of the information contained in this section on Priesthood was revealed to the Prophet several years before the formal writing of section 107 in [April] 1835... A logical time would be during the translation of the Bible.

The same hypothesis could link the translation of the Bible to the instructions given at the organization of the first high council at Kirtland, Ohio (February 17, 1834), as recorded in D&C 102. These connections are reasonable and possible—even probable.

As to more specific dates for the reception and recording of vision(s) and revelation(s) relating to D&C 107:40-52 and 53-56, four plausible time frames present themselves:

1. December 1830. The mention that "These things were all written in the book of Enoch, and are to be testified of in due time"⁹³⁰ could indicate that a vision was given as early as December 1830, when Moses 6 and 7 were received.

2. August 1831-June 1832. Sometime between August 1831 and July 1832 Oliver Cowdery wrote in several changes to the ages of the patriarchs in OT1.⁹³¹ Moreover, additional insertions of previous revelations into the last part of D&C 107 were dated 11 November 1831 in Manuscript Revelation Book 1 (BCR 122-123) and Book 2 (KRB 84-86).⁹³² D&C 66-68, which sacred sites in Missouri by various churches with roots in the LDS tradition, see C. S. Campbell, Images. See also Commentary 3:8-b, p. 160.

927 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, before 8 August 1839, p. 158.

928 R. J. Matthews, Plainer, pp. 259-260. See also L. E. Dahl, Plain, p. 126; G. A. Horton, Jr., Insights, pp. 66-67.

929 Statement by Parley P. Pratt in New York, January 1, 1845, printed in Millennial Star, March 1845, p. 151, cited in R. J. Matthews, Plainer, p. 259.

930 D&C 107:57.

931 S. H. Faulring et al., Original Manuscripts, pp. 97-98, 110; K. P. Jackson, Book of Moses, p. 102.

932 J. Smith, Jr., Papers 2008-, Revelations and Translations, Manuscript Revelation Books, pp. 217-219, 585-589.

were received in a context of discussions regarding the publication of the revelations and the manner of conducting ancient councils, were also given during this period.

3. Near the end of 1833. Identical phrasing to D&C 107:53-56 was apparently later inserted into an account of a blessing given on 18 December 1833 to the father of the Prophet, Joseph Smith, Sr., outlining his role as a patriarch. However, an argument could be made that the addition was a restoration of words or ideas originally in the blessing but somehow omitted from the original transcription.

4. February 1834-April 1835. It is not out of the question that the vision was received either at the same time that D&C 107 was recorded or during the few months previous. The first high council at Kirtland was organized on 17 February 1834.⁹³³ The Lord had also given revelations encouraging the publication of the JSR in April 1834.⁹³⁴ It is possible that this led to some discussion of the ages of the patriarchs and times of their ordinations, leading to Joseph inquiring for revelation to resolve questions. A precedent for such an event had occurred a few years earlier when Oliver Cowdery and Joseph Smith had passionately disagreed on the text of a verse in D&C 20.⁹³⁵ In the case of D&C 107, Brigham Young's notation may be of relevance: "Joseph was two hours laboring with O[liver] C[owdery] to get him to write the Rev[elation] in humility."⁹³⁶ Robin S. Jensen of the Joseph Smith Papers project notes the fact that the ages of the patriarchs are presented in D&C 107:40-52 in the context of priesthood ordination, consistent with the additional unfolding of doctrines on the two priesthoods after early 1835.⁹³⁷ He sees the gathering of Adam's posterity described in D&C 107:53-56 as a simple continuation of the preceding verses. Finally, it should be noted that a mention of "Adam-ondi-Ahman" appears in the 1835-1836 Kirtland Egyptian Papers.⁹³⁸

933 D&C 102.

934 D&C 104:58; cf. J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 11 January 1834, 2:3.

935 J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, July 1830, 1:104-105.

936 Minutes of the School of the Prophets, 15 April 1868, Provo, Utah, copy at Utah State Historical Society, Salt Lake City, UT, cited in L. W. Cook, Revelations, p. 328 n. 5.

937 R. S. Jensen, 20 July 2009.

938 Kirtland Egyptian Papers 1, Grammar and Alphabet, p. 23, cited in H. M. Marquardt, Revelations, p. 198 n. 38.

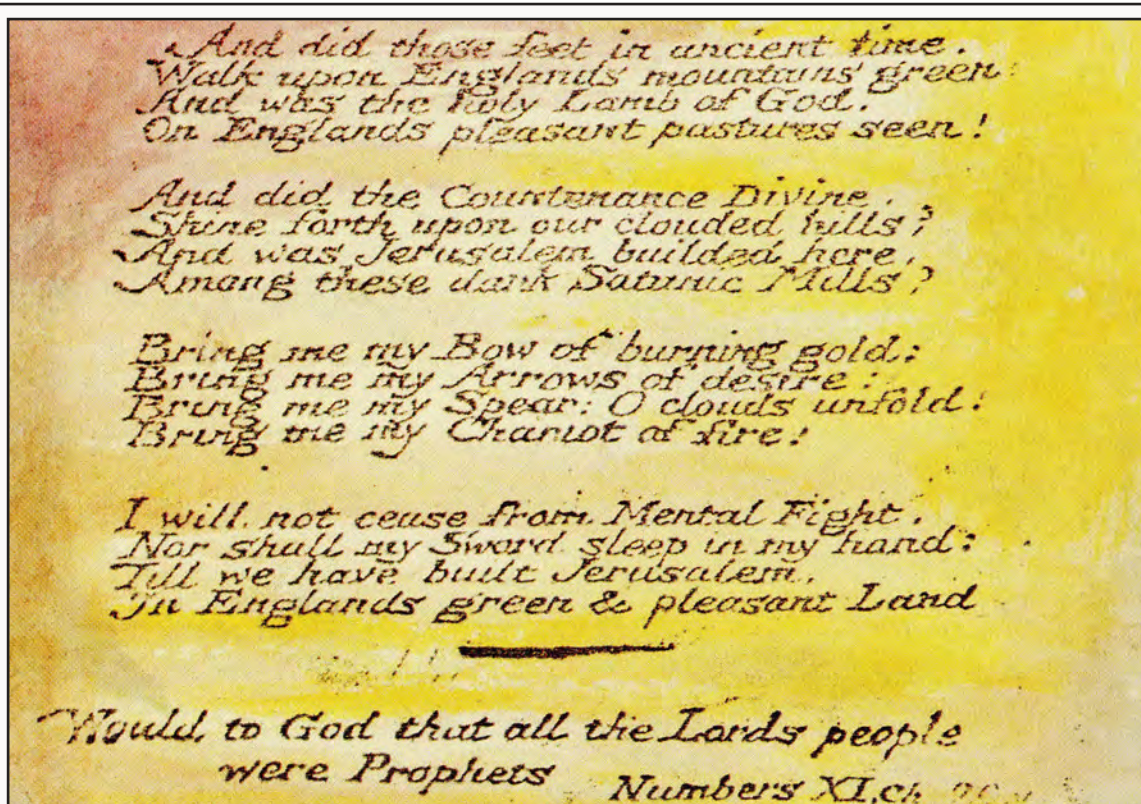

FIGURE E41-1. Excerpt from the Preface to Milton, Copy B, ca. 1804¹
William Blake, 1757-1827

¹ For a facsimile of the entire Preface, see W. Blake, Illuminated Blake, p. 216; W. Blake, Illuminated, p. 295; W. Blake, Milton, p. 94.

Excursus 41

William Blake's "Jerusalem": A Vision of the Kingdom

THE Tenth Article of Faith speaks of the time when "Zion (the New Jerusalem) will be built upon the American continent," a day when "Christ will reign personally upon the earth," "the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory," and mankind at last will be prepared to live in the manner of Adam and Eve before the Fall. Said the Prophet Joseph Smith: "The building up of Zion is a cause that has interested the people of God in every age; it is a theme upon which prophets, priests and kings have dwelt with peculiar delight; ...fired with heavenly and joyful anticipations they have sung and written and prophesied of this our day."⁹³⁹

Among those whose imaginations were fired by a vision of the millennial age was William Blake, who wrote the verses reproduced above as part of a preface to a work entitled Milton.⁹⁴⁰ The verses depict the building up of a heavenly Jerusalem on earth not as some new thing, but as having had a precedent in "ancient time." The Prophet Joseph Smith had discovered just such a precedent for a New Jerusalem in the Americas in the book of Moses account of the city of Enoch. Moreover, his translations of the records of Adam and Eve and of Lehi's family revealed a wider scope of action for the sacred past of the New World than anyone could have previously supposed. In a similar spirit, Blake's verses suggest, in the words of Bishop Robert D. Hales, "divine origins for the unique faith developed in England."⁹⁴¹ Prophetic evidence of such origins is provided by an incident in the life of Elder Heber C. Kimball. As he concluded his missionary labors among the people in Chatburn, Elder Kimball was deeply touched by the tender devotion of those who had gathered to wish him farewell. He wrote:

⁹³⁹ J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 2 May 1842, p. 231.

⁹⁴⁰ See Endnote E-149, p. 737.

While contemplating this scene I was constrained to take off my hat, for I felt as if the place was holy ground. The Spirit of the Lord rested down upon me and I was constrained to bless that whole region of country.

Attesting the genuineness of Elder Kimball's feelings, the Prophet:

... told him in after years that the reason he felt as he did in the streets of Chatburn was because the place was indeed 'holy ground,' that some of the ancient prophets had traveled in that region and dedicated the land, and that he, Heber, had reaped the benefit of their blessing.⁹⁴²

Milton is the first of Blake's final two epics, written at a time when he was turning from a somewhat human-centered theology to a more Christ-centered one.⁹⁴³ Milton serves as a prelude to Jerusalem, a longer work that concerns the sanctification and resurrection of Albion, and "the building of a continuing city in the England of the Satanic Mills."⁹⁴⁴ The opening plates of Milton and Jerusalem prepare the reader for their complementary themes:

We plunge, or are drawn into [Milton] following the striding poet of the title, naked amid flames (of prophetic wrath), as he pushes... his way... through a vortex of billowing smoke... The clothed traveler of the Jerusalem frontispiece, who is Blake/Los stepping into the door of a walled city or garden, is in symmetrical contrast.⁹⁴⁵

"The lyric 'And did those feet in ancient time,' which opens Milton is connected even more closely with the theme of Jerusalem, and [Anglican] hymnbooks have rechristened it accordingly."⁹⁴⁶ Bloom calls these verses "The Dedicatory Quatrains."⁹⁴⁷ Virtually forgotten in the century following its composition, these verses have been widely sung in England as a patriotic hymn since 1916, when they were first set to music.⁹⁴⁸

And did those feet in ancient time — Essick explains:⁹⁴⁹ "The 'feet' are those of Jesus.⁹⁵⁰ [In 1137,] William of Malmesbury record[ed] the legend that when the first Christian missionaries arrived in Glastonbury they found a church already there, 'constructed' by God himself.⁹⁵¹ This statement may have given birth to the myth of Christ having visited England." "In the course of the next hundred years, however, William's original work was altered and extended by the monks to suit their own purposes, and the additional material of the legends of King Arthur [and of Joseph of Arimathea] transformed the story even more."⁹⁵²

941 R. D. Hales, British Contribution, p. 2.

942 O. F. Whitney, Kimball, pp. 187-188.

943 N. M. Williams, Ideology, p. 141.

944 N. Frye, Symmetry, p. 355.

945 W. Blake, Illuminated Blake, pp. 217-218.

946 N. Frye, Symmetry, p. 323.

947 H. Bloom, Commentary, p. 910.

948 See Endnote E-150, p. 737.

949 R. N. Essick et al., in W. Blake, Milton 1998, p. 214 n. 27-28. See L. S. Lewis, St. Joseph, pp. 51, 162-163; A. W. Smith, Legend. For a thoroughly-researched LDS view that accepts this unlikely story, see V. G. Swanson, Grail. See Endnote E-151, p. 740.

950 Cf. Isaiah 52:7.

951 See L. S. Lewis, St. Joseph, p. 86.

952 R. Dunning, Christianity, p. 2. For more on this transformation, see R. F. Treharne, Glastonbury, pp. 26-113.

Blake's words, however, should not be taken too literally. He was not only thinking of the possibility of a visit of Christ to Britain, but also of the feet of godly men and women who had walked England's mountains and pastures from the earliest times—making of the isle in its former eras of blessedness a veritable Holy Land and a “demi-Paradise.”⁹⁵³ Explained Blake: “The antiquities of every Nation under Heaven, is no less sacred than that of the Jews... All had originally one language, and one religion, this was the religion of Jesus, the everlasting Gospel. Antiquity preaches the Gospel of Jesus.”⁹⁵⁴

Holy Lamb of God — “The notion that Jesus visited Britain may have been reinforced by Blake by the name ‘Lambeth’ (house of the lamb...).”⁹⁵⁵ Though only poetically true, the name provided, at least, a ready image for him of the decay and corruption into which his native land had fallen. “Blake and his wife lived in Lambeth for ten years, and by the time they left in 1800 it was already acquiring the characteristics of a peculiarly repellent urban slum with wretchedly built and undrained houses. Beth-el was in Hebrew the name for a sacred place, as Blake would have known from Genesis, but this place of the Lamb was soon degraded. And then there came Bethlem⁹⁵⁶ [sic] itself, when the madhouse was moved to Lambeth from Moorfields in 1815. Yet this area became the ground or circumstance of some of Blake's greatest writing; it was the landscape in which his imagination continued to flourish and, as a result, he refers to it more often than to any other London region.”⁹⁵⁷ dark Satanic Mills — Blake's poem can be seen, in part, as a protest against Deism. He saw that Deism's cold abstractions repudiate imagination, revelation, and the doctrine of a personal intervening God. As a result, any notion of general Christianity it might still affirm “soon vanishes into a mere perpetual-motion machine of causation.”⁹⁵⁸ “Blake first wrote of [such a] mechanical model of the universe as a mill in There is No Natural Religion of ca. 1788: ‘The same dull round even of a universe would soon become a mill with complicated wheels.’”⁹⁵⁹ “In Milton, Satan is described as the ‘Miller of Eternity,’ whose mills represent the reductive intellect, grinding down and destroying the imagination. Blake may also have been thinking of the enslaved and blinded Samson, in Milton's Samson Agonistes, ‘eyeless in Gaza at the Mill with slaves.’”⁹⁶⁰ “Stern Philosophy,” the “Wheel of [false] Religion,” and “the dark Preacher of Death” are seen by Blake the forces that drive the “vast machinery” of a fallen universe as it “knead[s] the bread of knowledge,” thus “blotting out the light of divinity and inspiration.”⁹⁶¹ Blake argued that both the authority and rules of existing religious institutions and the rational thought of Enlightenment philosophy should be “subservient to intuition and imagination,”⁹⁶² which he equated with “the Spirit of Prophecy.”⁹⁶³

In light of the above, Bloom rightly asserts that the dark Satanic Mills “have nothing to do with industrialism.”⁹⁶⁴ However, the factory smoke of England's “clouded hills” surely played some part in the origins of Blake's inspired metaphor. In the words of Ackroyd: “Blake was the poet of eternity, but he was also the poet of late-eighteenth century London.

953 W. Shakespeare, Richard II, 2:1:42, p. 813. See Endnote E-152, p. 738.

954 W. Blake, Catalogue, 43-44, p. 543.

955 R. N. Essick et al., in W. Blake, Milton 1998, p. 214 nn. 27-28. See Endnote E-153, p. 740.

956 See Endnote E-154, p. 738.

957 P. Ackroyd, Blake, p. 129.

958 N. Frye, Symmetry, p. 66; cf. pp. 245-246, 290. See Endnote E-155, p. 738.

959 R. N. Essick et al., in W. Blake, Milton 1998, p. 118 n. 2. See W. Blake, Natural Religion, p. 35.

960 Jerusalem. See J. Milton, Samson, 41, p. 310.

961 P. Ackroyd, Blake, pp. 132-133.

962 H. Dubnick, Poet as Prophet, p. 84.

963 W. Blake, Natural Religion, p. 25.

964 H. Bloom, Blake's Apocalypse, p. 305.

And what could provide a more suitable emblem of that city than the famous automated Albion Mill?⁹⁶⁵ It had been built along the Blackfriars Road, a short distance north of Hercules Buildings; it was the first great factory in London, designed by John Rennie to run upon steam-engines and supposed to produce some six thousand bushels of flour a week. It was one of the 'sights' of the metropolis, which Erasmus Darwin described as 'a grand and successful effort of human art'. But in March 1791, just after Blake had moved to Lambeth, it was burnt down—some believe it to have been arson, and the rejoicing millers on Blackfriars Bridge made no secret of their feelings. 'Success to the mills of ALBION', one placard was inscribed 'but no Albion Mills'. The factory was destroyed, and remained as a black ruined shell until 1809. Blake passed it every time he walked into the City, with the hills of Highgate and Hampstead in the distant smoky air."⁹⁶⁶

Bring me my Bow... my Chariot of fire — While the overall passage relates to the theme of Ephesians 6:11 ("Put on the whole armour of God"), the specific "imagery suggests the battle in heaven,"⁹⁶⁷ as well as Eros ('Arrows of desire'), here turned to spiritual uses... 'Chariot of fire' is from the description of Elijah's vision...⁹⁶⁸ Blake portrayed Christ with an enormous bow in his Paradise Lost illustrations of 1807 and 1808,"⁹⁶⁹ "a deliberate contrast to the black bow of Urizen in The Book of Ahania, which will reappear as the black bow of Satan in Jerusalem."⁹⁷⁰

"There is not a disjunction between human activity and divine activity in bringing [the vision] about. God is involved through the imaginative and creative work of the artist. There is an application of the texts to the writer and his contemporaries. Elijah's chariot is not just part of past history or even future expectation, but something that can be the inspiration of a new Elijah in every generation who is willing to condemn the Baalism of a contemporary culture and politics, which, according to Blake, had led to the capitulation of Christianity to a religion of virtues, rules and the acceptance of war and violence."⁹⁷¹

Mental Fight — In the preface to The Four Zoas, Blake quotes Ephesians 6:10. Of relevance here are the subsequent verses of scripture, which detail the kind of battle that is implied by the term Mental Fight: "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."⁹⁷²

Till we have built Jerusalem — "Blake enters [the] chariot now..., to fight sword in hand the mental wars of the eternal world until the enduring City is built again in the pastoral land of his own childhood."⁹⁷³ Again, a merely literal interpretation misleads. The Jerusalem of Blake's vision is a city that first and foremost must be built in the hearts and minds of a people freed from mental and spiritual tyranny.

Note the shift from "I" to "we" in this stanza—the efforts of each of Blake's compatriots are required. Following the lead of Blake and Milton, fellow visionaries must take the

965 See Endnote E-156, p. 739.

966 P. Ackroyd, Blake, pp. 130-131.

967 J. Milton, Paradise Lost, 6, pp. 119-140.

968 2 Kings 2:11. See Endnote E-157, p. 739.

969 R. N. Essick et al., in W. Blake, Milton 1998, p. 214 n. 35-40; cf. N. Frye, Symmetry, p. 215.

970 H. Bloom, Blake's Apocalypse, p. 306.

971 C. Rowland, Blake, p. 171.

972 Ephesians 6:11-12. See also 2 Corinthians 10:4; R. N. Essick et al., in W. Blake, Milton 1998, p. 185 n. 25.

973 H. Bloom, Blake's Apocalypse, p. 306.

“Daughters of Imagination” or “Inspiration” of biblical example as their Muses, rather than the “Daughters of Memory” of classical tradition.⁹⁷⁴

Would to God — Numbers 11:29, used as the epigraph to the poem, “is a reproof of Moses to Joshua, who would have silenced an ‘unauthorized’ outburst of prophesying.”⁹⁷⁵ “Moses... is ‘redeemed’ in Milton as the mythic figure Palamabron, identified also with Blake himself... In Milton, two of the Lord’s people, Milton and Blake, join as one to create mutually the vision of an English prophet, and so prepare the way for the prophecy of Jerusalem, that supreme attempt on the part of an honest man to tell his nation that if it went on so, the result would be so, the yielding of creation to Satan the ‘Miller of Eternity,’ the reductive fallacy incarnate.”⁹⁷⁶

The biblical verse not only expresses Blake’s longing for a general revival of the spirit of prophecy, but also a firm declaration that the “spirit and power of Elijah [is] ever available for those who would exercise their imagination and contemplative thought. Prophecy is not a thing of the past, for it is the vocation of all people. The vision of the new Jerusalem is one that is open to all and the task of building belongs to all.”⁹⁷⁷

Summarizing the significance of these beautiful verses, Barker writes: “Building Jerusalem in England’s green and pleasant land makes no sense apart from the tradition of Jerusalem as the Kingdom of God. Jerusalem, for William Blake, was the vision of a world released from the horrors of the ‘dark Satanic Mills,’ with the ‘countenance divine’ shining in the midst. This was temple imagery, and Blake had seen the vision of the Kingdom.”⁹⁷⁸

974 H. Bloom, Commentary, p. 909; N. M. Goslee, England’s Green; N. M. Williams, Ideology, pp. 150-151.

975 H. Bloom, Commentary, p. 910. See Endnote E-158, p. 739.

976 H. Bloom, Blake’s Apocalypse, p. 306.

977 C. Rowland, Blake, pp. 171-172.

978 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 128.

Excursus 42

Nebuchadnezzar's "Fall"

Nibley connects the story of Nebuchadnezzar to the Egyptian story of Osiris who, like Adam,⁹⁷⁹ was said to have been freed from a split tree:

In the book of Daniel, the tree that was split was the king himself;⁹⁸⁰ however the stump was not destroyed but preserved for a seven-year period,⁹⁸¹ during which time the king was ritually humiliated....⁹⁸² only to resume his throne with all his glory greatly enhanced at the end of the seven-year period.⁹⁸³ This is the Egyptian seven-year throne period of the king... The splitting of the tree is plainly the substitute sacrifice, while its preservation against the time when the king shall be restored recalls the important role of the ished-tree in the coronation.⁹⁸⁴

Although nothing like this episode can be associated directly with the historic King Nebuchadnezzar (605-562 BCE), both Neo-Babylonian inscriptions and the Prayer of Nabonidus (4Q242) fragment of the Dead Sea Scrolls provide evidence of a pre-Danielic tradition associating a similar story with Nabonidus, the last ruler of the Neo-Babylonian Empire (556-539 BCE) and father of Belsharusur (biblical "King Belshazzar"—see Daniel 5:22, 7:1, 8:1).⁹⁸⁵ In his prayer, the king tells of his suffering with an "evil skin disease" for a period of seven years by the decree of God, and at least one scholar has proposed that a lacuna in the text "originally described Nabunay's state as comparable to that of a beast,⁹⁸⁶ or that he was 'set apart from human beings.'"⁹⁸⁷ After appealing to gods of silver, gold, bronze, iron, wood, stone, and clay, his sins were forgiven by a Jewish healer after he finally prayed to the Most High God.⁹⁸⁸

Rabbinical and early Christian exegetes formulated a reading of Moses 4:24-25 that saw a consignment of Adam and Eve to a period of humiliating penance after the Fall, to a certain degree in the likeness of Nebuchadnezzar.⁹⁸⁹ Having been banished from the fruit trees of the Garden of Eden, they then are thought to have been temporarily reduced to eating the herb of the field like the animals.⁹⁹⁰ Playing on the double meaning of veirdu in Moses 2:28, Rashi comments that instead of "having dominion" over the beasts, he now would "fall down" below and be with them.⁹⁹¹ The Targum Pseudo-Jonathan says that after hearing the consequences of his transgression, Adam pled that he might be spared: "I beseech by the mercy before you, O Lord, let me not be reckoned before you as cattle, that I should eat the grass of the surface of the field. I will arise and labor... and I will eat the food of the earth; and thus let there be a distinction before you between the children of men and the offspring

979 See Commentary 4:14-e, p. 260.

980 Daniel 4:13-15, 22.

981 Daniel 4:23.

982 Daniel 4:33; cf. Apis-bull and Horus-hawk.

983 Daniel 4:25, 31-34.

984 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 289. See Figure 4-14, p. 231; Commentary 4:14-e, p. 260; Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations of the Mysteries, p. 663. See Endnote 4-50, p. 312.

985 F. G. Martinez, DSS Translated, p. 289; L. T. Stuckenbruck, Daniel, pp. 104-106; J. A. Tvedtnes, Nebuchadnezzar; G. Vermes, Complete, p. 614; M. Wise et al., DSS, pp. 340-342.

986 Daniel 4:25b.

987 L. T. Stuckenbruck, Daniel, p. 105. See Daniel 4:25a.

988 A similar healing blessing performed by Abraham with the laying of hands upon the head is described in F. G. Martinez, Genesis Apocryphon, 20:28-29, p. 234.

989 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 289.

990 G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, 4:2, p. 5E; G. A. Anderson, Penitence, pp. 13-19; G. A. Anderson, Perfection, pp. 141-147. See Commentary 2:29-a, p. 117; 4:24-b, p. 271; 4:25-a, p. 272.

991 S. L. Della Torre, Anxiety, p. 7.

FIGURE E42-1. Nebuchadnezzar, 1795
William Blake, 1757-1827

*O king Nebuchadnezzar, ... The kingdom is departed from thee. And they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field: ...until thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will. The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar: and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws.*¹ In Blake's grotesque depiction of Nebuchadnezzar, "we see [the king] in exile, animal-like on all fours. Naked, he gazes with mad horror at his own reflection like some kind of anti-Narcissus."²

"This picture was painted in 1795. In France, Louis XVI had been executed two years before. Meanwhile, in England, George III, whose yoke the American colonists had recently thrown off, suffered from bouts of insanity[—thus] this picture of a degraded king [could] be an expression of Blake's republican sentiments..."³ "Beneath the horror of Nebuchadnezzar, Blake inscribed, as covering Proverb, the dying tyrant Tiriell's gasp of wisdom: 'One Law for the Lion & Ox is Oppression.' With this outcry against the imposition of any code of uniformity upon contrary individualities," Blake reminds society that "it tempts the fate of Nebuchadnezzar, a fall into dazed bestiality, if it will not heed the warnings of [the prophet's transforming] vision."⁴

1 Daniel 4:31-33. See Endnote E-159, p. 741.

2 William Blake Online. See also W. Blake, Illuminated Blake, p. 121; N. Frye, Symmetry, pp. 270-272. It has often been claimed that Blake himself struggled with madness. See Endnote 0-27, p. 27. See Endnote E-297, p. ?.

3 William Blake Online.

4 H. Bloom, Blake's Apocalypse, p. 96.

of cattle."⁹⁹² Once the period of penance was complete, wheat (along with instructions for sowing and reaping) is mentioned in various traditions as having been divinely provided in answer to Adam's cries of hunger. And, as one source recounts, "his descendants have lived on wheat ever since."⁹⁹³

992 M. Maher, Pseudo-Jonathan, 3:18, p. 28.

993 Coptic Apocrypha, cited in E. A. W. Budge, Cave, pp. 18-19 n. 1; cf. Commentary 3:9-i, p. 168; 4:25-a, p. 272; 5:2-a, p. 354; D&C 89:17. See Endnote 5-44, p. 441.

Excursus 43

Adam and Eve in Mozart's "Magic Flute"

LOVE'S exalted purpose clearly indicates that there is nothing more noble than a wife and a husband. Husband and wife, and wife and husband, reach to the heights of Godhood.⁹⁹⁴ One of Mozart's last works before his untimely death, The Magic Flute has been much maligned by those who judge its libretto shallow, confused, and filled with inexcusable misogyny. However, BYU Professor Alan Keele, who has done much to promote a modern appreciation of supernal idealism in German literature, opera, and cinema, has sought to rehabilitate its status by a more careful reading of this opera, whose central theme is, after all, the human tendency to mistake appearances for reality. Keele shows that, rather than upholding conventional practices that withheld membership in Freemasonry from women, the opera's brilliantly-crafted deep structure suggests that "Mozart perceived this misogynistic and celibate order—though righteous as far as it goes—should and would be replaced by a new and equal gender-neutral leadership, personified in Tamino and Pamina, deified in Isis and Osiris. Certainly that does not detract from the dignity and holiness of Sarastro,⁹⁹⁵ who apparently represents the last celibate high priest, destined to be replaced by the new, married high priest and priestess.... All the apparent confusion of this libretto, all its contradictory claims and behaviors flee as the darkness before the glorious structural clarity of this paradigm: The God-couple Isis-Osiris are to be the model for the new Adam-and-Eve couple Pamina-Tamino, who, if they prove their worthiness, will become like the Gods."⁹⁹⁶ As the "successor and antidote to Così fan tutte," Chailley notes that The Magic Flute restored "the ideal of true love which the society of the period scoffed at so readily; that Ideal Love which we are free to believe that Constanze's husband [Wolfgang] must often have sought."⁹⁹⁷

FIGURE E43-1.
Portrait of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, 1819
Barbara Krafft

Wolfgang's older sister Maria Anna (Nannerl) was a gifted musician in her own right and, during their years as touring child performers, Wolfgang wrote a series of piano duets that allowed them to play together. Hindered by her gender from pursuing composition, Maria eventually entered an unhappy marriage with a wealthy magistrate and, sadly, became estranged from her brother. Maria and Wolfgang began speaking again after their father's death in 1787, and in 1789 Wolfgang named a newborn daughter after his sister. Twenty-eight years after Wolfgang's death, Maria supervised a new portrait of her brother by an otherwise unknown Salzburg artist named Barbara Krafft. Based on an earlier image of Wolfgang at the age of twenty-five, this later portrayal seems more appealingly alive—the difference doubtless owing as much to the urgings of Mozart's sister as to the skill of the portraitist.

994 The Magic Flute 1:14: The German text reads: "Ihr hoher Zweck zeigt deutlich an, Nichts edlers sey, als Weib und Mann. Mann und Weib, und Weib und Mann, Reichen an die Gottheit an."

995 = Zoroaster—presumably modeled on Mozart's Masonic mentor, Ignaz von Born.

996 A. Keele, Zauberflöte, pp. 109-110; cf. A. Keele, Magic Flute, pp. 63-64; cf. M. P. Lyon, Set Design. See Commentary 4:22-c, p. 268 and Excursus 50: Fu Xi and Nü Gua, p. 654. See Endnote E-160, p. 739.

997 J. Chailley, Unveiled, p. 295. See Endnote E-161, p. 739.

FIGURE E44-1. Miranda — The Tempest, 1916
John William Waterhouse, 1849-1917

*If by your art, my dearest father, you have / Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them... / O, I have suffered with those I saw suffer... / O, the cry did knock / Against my very heart!*¹ Waterhouse, a retiring man whose personal life is somewhat of a mystery, is best known for his pre-Raphaelite portraits of women and classical scenes.² He “was noted for his ability to convey emotion through expression and gesture; here we cannot fully see Miranda’s face, but a single simple gesture—her left hand placed over her heart—displays her concern for the passengers.”³ One of Waterhouse’s last four works, this painting was exhibited at the Royal Academy a few months after his death.

1 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:1-2, 5-6, 8-9, p. 1612.

2 P. Trippi, Waterhouse.

3 Miranda.

Excursus 44

Shakespeare Creates a World: “The Tempest”

The “direful spectacle of the wreck, which touch’d / The very virtue of compassion” in the 15-year-old Miranda dominates the opening scenes of The Tempest.⁹⁹⁸ But soon thereafter, Miranda is informed that the deadly storm was a mere illusion, engineered through the godlike powers of Prospero, her father. “Be collected,” he tells her, “no more amazement. Tell your piteous heart / There’s no harm done... No, not so much perdition as an hair / Betid⁹⁹⁹ to any creature in the vessel.”¹⁰⁰⁰

998 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:26, p. 1612.

999 I.e., befallen, happened.

1000 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:13-15, 30-31, p. 1612; cf. Acts 27:34; Luke 12:7.

The Tempest has been called Shakespeare's "mystery play," meaning not only that it is replete with interpretive puzzles, but also that it is "a play dramatizing a mystery in the sense of a religious rite."¹⁰⁰¹ Indeed, Devereux notes that the play's "language of natural phenomena... functions as the sign of the mysteries":¹⁰⁰²

In its actions the play has run through a few hours; in its theme it has brought about reintegration; in its imagery it has run from Baptism [the storm], with which spiritual life begins, through Communion [the banquet], Penance [the ordeals], and Matrimony [the marriage of Ferdinand and Miranda], through finally to indulgence and prayers [Epilogue] for one who can no longer help himself.¹⁰⁰³

Note also that "the masque that Prospero conjures to celebrate the troth-pledging of Miranda and Ferdinand echoes the Eleusinian Mysteries, although it uses the Roman names for the deities involved—Ceres, Iris, Dis and others—instead of the Greek. It is interesting that a play which is so steeped in esoteric imagery from alchemy and hermeticism should draw on the Mysteries for its central masque sequence."¹⁰⁰⁴

Like The Magic Flute,¹⁰⁰⁵ the story begins with the violent near-death of the pure-hearted young champion and culminates in a marriage that will mark the end of the rule of an aging celibate spiritual leader (Prospero/Sarastro), supplanting it with the more perfect reign of a new Adam and Eve (Ferdinand and Miranda/Tamino and Pamina). The elaborate manipulation of events behind the scenes and the deliberate exposure of the hero and heroine to mortal danger are revealed as part and parcel of expressly designed tests intended to prove the worthiness of the couple.¹⁰⁰⁶ In final scenes that recall God's benediction on the renewed earth after the Flood, Prospero presents Ferdinand and Miranda "with the spectacle of a rainbow and a blessing of fertility"¹⁰⁰⁷ as they abandon the paradisiacal island¹⁰⁰⁸ to enter the "brave new world."¹⁰⁰⁹

Of Shakespeare's sources for this play, perhaps the least acknowledged and appreciated is the book of Genesis.¹⁰¹⁰ Rectifying this oversight, the perceptive Steven Marx and Harold Fisch have been foremost among the critics in demonstrating that many significant parallels and allusions to the opening book of the Bible have found their way into the first play of Shakespeare's First Folio.¹⁰¹¹ Comments Marx:

Just as the Bible's God makes the world he populates and then interacts with it. Prospero conjures up the world of The Tempest with his magical utterances and peoples it with his own offspring, along with [a spirit of the air and a demon of the earth] over whom he has taken control.... The Tempest, whose title signifies storm and time in early modern English,¹⁰¹² also progresses into temporality from a beginning that is both the timeless chaos of the storm and an Edenic preserve where father and child have remained in idyllic stasis. "The hour's now come..." says Prospero, for him to retrieve the story of his past from "the dark backward and 1001 N. Frye, Tempest, p. 171.

1002 R. Battenhouse, Dimension, p. 252.

1003 E. J. Devereux, Sacramental Imagery, p. 257.

1004 Eleusinian Mysteries. See Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations of the Mysteries, p. 663.

1005 See Excursus 43: Adam and Eve in Mozart's "Magic Flute", p. 634.

1006 See Endnote E-162, p. 739.

1007 S. Marx, Shakespeare, p. 25.

1008 See Endnote E-163, p. 740.

1009 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:183, p. 1634. See Endnote E-164, p. 740.

1010 See Endnote E-165, p. 740.

1011 See Endnote E-166, p. 743.

1012 J. A. Simpson et al., OED, p. 2023:751.

abyss of time.”¹⁰¹³ From then on he continually watches the clock.¹⁰¹⁴ His daughter’s awakening to the temporal processes¹⁰¹⁵ begins with repeated lapses into sleep,¹⁰¹⁶ but leads to a strong sense of her previous lineage and her future destiny... As time unfolds..., so does space. In Genesis the setting expands from the pastoral confines of the Garden of Eden through the Canaanite desert to the epic vistas of the Egyptian empire. In The Tempest the setting expands from the domestic compound of Prospero’s cell to the island’s varied landscapes and then to all of Mediterranean Europe and beyond.”¹⁰¹⁷

And just as the “overriding concern of the first book of the Bible [is] life-survival-offspring-fertility-continuity,”¹⁰¹⁸ so the “project” that Prospero has long prepared and that he sets in motion at the opening of the play... centers upon founding a chosen family... [through advancing the status of] the next generation... from [that of] children to progenitors.”¹⁰¹⁹

Ideas relating to the Fall, the Flood, and the Tower of Babel are prominent in the early scenes in The Tempest.¹⁰²⁰

Prospero re-establishes his dominance as a ‘God of power’¹⁰²¹ and ‘a prince of power’¹⁰²² by throwing Caliban out of his home, forcing him to live by the sweat of his brow, and reducing the language that he taught him¹⁰²³ into profitless cursing,¹⁰²⁴ by repeatedly storming at Ariel that he will be returned to the oak that imprisoned him,¹⁰²⁵ and by tormenting his countrymen with the prolonged ordeal of death by drowning.¹⁰²⁶

Though Prospero’s role might be compared to that of a god,¹⁰²⁷ it is perhaps more illuminating to see him as a figure resembling Joseph in Egypt.¹⁰²⁸ “Linguistically [Joseph and Prospero] are linked by the word ‘prosperity’—‘and the Lord was with Joseph and he was a man that prospered.... And his master saw that... the Lord made all that he did to prosper in his hand.’”¹⁰²⁹

Joseph starts out as “this dreamer,”¹⁰³⁰ a person with true visions but lacking enough prudence to anticipate the resentment of those who do not share his gifts. Like Prospero, who, “rapt in secret studies,”¹⁰³¹ “neglect[s] worldly ends, all dedicated / To closeness and the bettering of my mind,”¹⁰³² Joseph is at first oblivious to the reality of his political situation. Both he and Prospero “Awaked an evil nature”¹⁰³³ in their brothers and, as a result, suffered usurpation, 1013 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:37, 50, pp. 1612, 1613.

1014 See Endnote E-167, p. 743.

1015 See Endnote E-168, p. 743.

1016 E.g., W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:185, p. 1614.

1017 S. Marx, Shakespeare, pp. 19, 21-22.

1018 J. P. Fokkelman, Genesis, p. 41.

1019 S. Marx, Shakespeare, p. 22.

1020 See Endnote E-169, p. 743.

1021 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:10, p. 1612.

1022 Ibid., 1:2:55, p. 1613.

1023 See Endnote E-170, p. 744.

1024 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:334-336, 363-365, p. 1616; cf. Moses 2:16-18; Genesis 11:6-9.

1025 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:275-293, p. 1615. See Commentary 4:14-e, p. 260. See Endnote E-171, p. 744.

1026 S. Marx, Shakespeare, pp. 24-25. See W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:1:1-68, pp. 1611-1612.

1027 See Endnote E-172, p. 744.

1028 See Endnote E-173, p. 744. Speaking of the Bible’s concern for the reversal of Adam’s Fall, Brodie notes:

“Centuries before all things were restored in Christ (cf. Ephesians 1), they were, in a sense already restored in Joseph” (T. L. Brodie, Dialogue, p. 146; cf. pp. 116, 118, 519-522).

1029 S. Marx, Shakespeare, p. 30. See Genesis 39:2-3.

1030 Genesis 37:19.

1031 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:77, p. 1613.

1032 Ibid., 1:2:89-90, p. 1613.

1033 Ibid., 1:2:93, p. 1613.

exile, and imprisonment... Rudely awakened from innocence and forced to cope for survival in their places of exile, both Joseph and Prospero learn some practical wisdom.¹⁰³⁴

At every turn of events, Prospero tries to remain firmly planted in the center of the action, despite the disorder of his “beating mind,”¹⁰³⁵ whose unsettled motions mimic the rhythm of the tempest’s angry waves.¹⁰³⁶ He “controls nature, at least in the outward sense. [But, though] his art ought also to teach Prospero an absolute self-control, he clearly has not attained this even as the play concludes.”¹⁰³⁷ He displays “the vices that go with superior power and knowledge: impatience, self-righteousness, anger, cruelty, jealousy, and pride. It is possible that Shakespeare sometimes regarded his own role of playwright and performer as godlike, his own book as potent and capacious as ‘The Book’...”¹⁰³⁸ Both piety and prudence might convince him to retreat from that role when it felt most alluring, to take off his magician’s robe, and drown his book as soon as it was complete.”¹⁰³⁹ In the epilogue, “Prospero puts himself in the position of Ariel, Caliban, Ferdinand, and the other shipwreck victims throughout the play, threatened with confinement, pleading for release from bondage; and his magical powers are now invested in the audience.”¹⁰⁴⁰ He places hope in Divine response to his penitence: “And my ending is despair, / Unless I be reliev’d by prayer.”¹⁰⁴¹ “Outside the Gospel, there is nothing but despair.”¹⁰⁴²

The events of the play gradually disclose that the Providential purpose which originally brought about Prospero’s exile will now encompass others equally in need of moral tutoring. To this end, the primary movement of the play “is to cause people to recall forgotten things, to bring sins to remembrance, to reforge broken relationships between estranged brothers and between father and son”¹⁰⁴³—and ultimately to reveal “wonderful surprises.”¹⁰⁴⁴ “These revelations, recognitions, restorations, and reconciliations produce an ecstatic happy ending. They also produce a retrospective vindication of all previous confusion and suffering as purposeful contributions to the positive outcome—a theological assertion of the fortunate fall: ‘Now therefore be not sad... that ye sold me hither: for God did send me before you for your purification... to preserve your posterity in this land, and to save you alive by a great deliverance,’¹⁰⁴⁵ says Joseph.”¹⁰⁴⁶ In the culminating scenes of the drama, Prospero “presides as ‘Providence divine’¹⁰⁴⁷ over the ‘covenant’ of marriage, which in the play represents the final healing and redeeming moment in the lives of the characters—the ‘salvation’ to which the action of the play looks forward.”¹⁰⁴⁸ Shakespeare has used the themes of death and Arcadia “to bathe his comedy in the light of transcendence.”¹⁰⁴⁹

Writes Fisch:

1034 S. Marx, Shakespeare, pp. 31-32.

1035 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 4:1:163, p. 1630.

1036 J. Walter, Epilogue, p. 277.

1037 H. Bloom, Shakespeare, p. 666.

1038 See Endnote E-174, p. 745.

1039 S. Marx, Shakespeare, pp. 12-13.

1040 S. Orgel (ed.), in W. Shakespeare, Tempest, p. 205 n. 322-327.

1041 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, Epilogue 15-16, p. 1636.

1042 A. H. King, Religion, p. 159. See Endnote E-175, p. 745.

1043 H. Fisch, Covenant Pattern, p. 221. See Endnote E-176, p. 746.

1044 See Endnote E-177, p. 747.

1045 Genesis 45:5-7.

1046 S. Marx, Shakespeare, p. 35.

1047 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:159, p. 1614. See Endnote E-178, p. 748.

1048 H. Fisch, Covenant Pattern, p. 221.

1049 A. D. Nuttall, Shakespeare, p. 241.

Prospero... leads the troubled race of man back to paradise... [But the] paradise to which he beckons us... is not the magic island of medieval Christianity with its songs and sweet airs, its orderly subordination of spheres, its harmony of natural law. It is altogether more strenuous, more real, more close to our everyday problems. There is in it neither illusion nor enchantment... and their destination as we know is Naples, not Utopia... If [Ferdinand and Miranda's] discovery of mutual love in the covenant of marriage provides [them] with one essential key to this understanding, it is because behind this covenant stands a larger and more embracing covenant, that enacted on the great stage of the world from the beginning, and pointing forward by promise to the end of days."¹⁰⁵⁰

¹⁰⁵⁰ Ibid., p. 223

Excursus 45

Impact of the “Black Death” on Art and Literature

ASSAF Pinkus argues that sculptural programs on the exterior of medieval churches as well as contemporaneous religious literature were influenced by “new theological and moral perceptions, associated with the exegesis of the Genesis story, that emerged in southern Germany as a consequence of the Black Death”—an “attempt to understand the coherency of the divine plan in light of the plague and to change it by optimistically and mercifully re-writing human history and fate.” He holds that these concerns were also among those that motivated the 14th-century German poetic version of the Life of Adam and Eve by Lutwin.¹⁰⁵¹ In his analysis of selected scenes from Lutwin’s composition, Pinkus describes several interesting differences with pseudepigraphal accounts of Adam’s suffering and death:¹⁰⁵²

Seth’s voyage begins with a description of Adam and Eve’s children coming to support their dying father. The children, who have yet to experience death and sickness, are amazed by their father’s suffering and request an explanation. At this point the different sources are at odds. In a Greek text from early Christian times, the Apocalypsis Mosis,¹⁰⁵³ Adam replies that he is “crushed by the burden of trouble.”¹⁰⁵⁴ In a Medieval Latin text, Vita Adae et Evae,¹⁰⁵⁵ Adam’s reply is slightly different, and he says, “I am sick and in pain.” In all versions, Adam mentions maladies and epidemics that will plague man prior to death. Lutwin’s version expands upon the cruel nature of these. At the request of his sons, Adam describes what sickness and suffering are. While this description in the other sources takes up five lines at most, Lutwin’s text is much too long to be quoted here, continuing on for approximately 150 lines.¹⁰⁵⁶ Adam’s detailed explanation apparently relates to the arguments reasoning [about the causes of] the plague. Stating that death and diseases are punishment for the original sin, Adam quotes the words of God:

“You shall endure all kinds of misfortunes. I shall lay upon you seventy maladies which will plague you from head to foot. I shall spare you nothing, and without pity from me you will suffer in all your limbs sickness and torment... as will all those who come after you.”¹⁰⁵⁷

Afterward, at the request of Adam, Seth and Eve set out for Paradise, in quest of the Oil of Mercy, which is produced from the Tree of Life, so that Adam can be cured. In the Apocalypsis Mosis, the angel sent to speak with them denies their request.¹⁰⁵⁸ In the Vita, instead of the Oil of Mercy, they are given fragrant herbs to treat Adam’s body.¹⁰⁵⁹ Lutwin’s version also claims that no oil was received, but instead a branch from the Tree of Mercy, which is the Tree of Life, was given to them.¹⁰⁶⁰ This development is not found in any of the other sources. According to the Archangel Michael, on the very day that the branch bears fruit, the Oil of Mercy will flow for all mankind. This invention is a sharp digression from the traditional text. Other legends explaining the origin of the Tree of Crucifixion from the 12th century on mention seeds or a branch from the Tree of Knowledge, the symbol of death, that were delivered to Seth. Halford argues that Lutwin’s original supplement, the accomplishment of the Journey and granting of 1051 M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam.

1052 A. Pinkus, Impact, pp. 168-169. See also A. Pinkus, Workshops, pp. 74-84 and the overview of Moses 6, p. 460.

1053 = Apocalypse of Moses, a Greek version of the “Life of Adam and Eve.”

1054 See G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, 9:1, p. 39E.

1055 Latin “Life of Adam and Eve.”

1056 M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam, pp. 275-278.

1057 Ibid., p. 277.

1058 G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, 13:1-5, pp. 44E-45E.

1059 Ibid., 43:3, p. 46E; cf. Revelation 22:2.

1060 M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam, pp. 279-281. See Endnote E-181, p. 749.

the branch of the Tree of Life, the symbol of rebirth and hope, were intended to reinforce the role of the latter tree through contrast...¹⁰⁶¹ In Lutwin's version, after Eve's death Seth carried out a second journey to Paradise; it was only then that he received a branch from the Tree of Knowledge, on which the Savior would be crucified.

Which version of Seth's journey served as a departure point for the presentation at Schwäbisch Gmünd? The first allusion identifying this scene is the image of Eve lamenting Adam. Realizing that Eve is still alive, one can assume that this is the first voyage to Paradise. Reading the narrative from left to right could potentially mean a chronological narrative development: first the branch was given to Seth and later it was planted in Adam's skull, becoming a tree.¹⁰⁶² However, all the sources report that Eve accompanied Seth on his journey; moreover, the blossoming of the tree is only mentioned subsequent to her death! These contradictions between texts and image thus invalidate any possibility of reading the narrative as continuous. The late German Gothic sculptor does not hesitate to introduce the same figure a number of times during the same occurrence. Why then has Eve been omitted from Seth's journey? I believe that the omission was intended to suggest that this was Seth's second journey. The narrative should thus be understood as simultaneous rather than chronological; three events that occurred at different terms were merged into one image: Eve's lamentation, the blossoming of the branch from the Tree of Mercy that was planted on Adam's grave, and Seth's second journey to Paradise by himself, which is only mentioned in Lutwin's text. Quinn interprets Seth's journey as mankind's quest for divine mercy. She defines Seth as an almost abstract figure, existing exclusively to perform his mission: "to fetch for mankind the gift of God's mercy," which is the meaning of the image in Gmünd.

1061 M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam, p. 33.

1062 See Figure 36-1, p. 616.

Excursus 46

The Origin and Meaning of the Term “Atonement”

ABOUT the core meanings expressed by the term “atonement,” Elder Jeffrey R. Holland has written:

The literal meaning of the word “atonement” is self-evident: at-one-ment, the act of unifying or bringing together what has been separated and estranged. The Atonement of Jesus Christ was indispensable because of the separating transgression, or Fall, of Adam, which brought... both the physical and the spiritual death...[:] physical death bringing the temporary separation of the spirit from the body, and spiritual death bringing the estrangement of both the spirit and the body from God.¹⁰⁶³

Madsen emphasizes that the kind of union brought about through the Atonement does not result in a loss of individual identity:

Some mystics have supposed that the role of the Messiah is to make way for an ecstatic union with the Divine, that we are to be swallowed up, in a “flight of the alone to the alone,” as a drop of water merges into the oblivion of the sea.

But the outcome of the Atonement of Jesus Christ is not such a union. Rather, it is a reunion—a reunion of individuals and family members. Christ’s work will never be fully finished until He can present to the Father a family composed of families: healed from each other’s wounds and sealed to and for each other in everlasting kinship. This is the reunion of the separated. This is the restoration of broken harmonies. This is reconciliation at its zenith, the fulfillment of the human family’s ultimate yearning to come home and regain the presence of God in a transformed condition.¹⁰⁶⁴

Even though some commentators erroneously dismiss the obvious derivation of “atonement” as nonsense,¹⁰⁶⁵ the approach to translation that produced this new term was well-established at the time the English Bible was produced. Arthur Henry King explains:

In the Middle Ages, those who translated the Bible and other theological materials into English did so (as the Germans still do when translating into German) by translating the verbal components of a Greek or Latin word into English elements... A term people muddle themselves about, for they cannot believe its etymology, is at-one-ment; “to make one,” however is exactly what atonement means. “Ment,” a suffix from Latin, makes “atone” into a noun; that’s all “ment” does. But “atone” begins... with Wycliff; he had “one” as a verb: “to one,” which is daring. It then became “at one” (an adjectival or adverbial form) but retained its character as a verb; from “at one” came the abstract noun “atonement.” In the sixteenth century, Tyndale, a Bible translator, made the word equal to the Latin [adunare], which means “to unite” (ad is an intensifier here). This translation approach... mirrors the Germanic process of translating component parts.¹⁰⁶⁶

The use of the verb adunare was rare in Latin, though it was used by some early Christian writers. Variations of the term (adunata, adunavit, adunabo) occur three times in the Vulgate,¹⁰⁶⁷ though in contexts with no theological significance. The Oxford English 1063 J. R. Holland, Atonement, p. 83; cf. J. R. Holland, Christ, pp. 197-245.

1064 T. G. Madsen, Suffering, p. 243.

1065 E.g., “the explanation of this English word as being ‘at-one-ment’ is entirely fanciful” (W. E. Vine et al., Dictionary (1996), NT, p. 44).

1066 A. H. King, Wholeness, pp. 331-332. “The phrase perhaps is modeled on L. adunare ‘unite,’ from ad- ‘to, at’ + unum ‘one.’” (D. Harper, Dictionary, s.v., atone).

1067 2 Chronicles 24:27, 29:20; Ezekiel 11:17.

Dictionary points to occurrences of the phrase “to be made/set at one” (meaning “to be reconciled”) as early as 1300, an expression that was gradually replaced by the verb “to atone.”¹⁰⁶⁸ An early example comes from Sir Thomas More, an innovator with the English language who was, ironically, Tyndale’s enemy. He wrote in 1513, referring to a reconciliation of a conflict in his History of King Richard III: “Having more regarde to their olde variaunce than their new attonement.”¹⁰⁶⁹

Tyndale’s use of the term in his Bible translation was consistent with his theological view that the central mission of Jesus was:

... to make us one with God: “One God, one Mediatour, that is to say aduocate, intercessor, or an atonemaker, between God and man.” “One mediatour Christ, ... and by that word understand an attonemaker, a peacemaker.”¹⁰⁷⁰

Gallagher further explains:

The original meaning also comes through in the various early Bible commentators. Note Udal’s comment on Ephesians 2:16 which makes the intended meaning of “atone” crystal clear: “And like as he made the Jewes and Gentiles at one betwene themselves, euen so he made them bothe at one with God, that there should be nothing to break the attonement, but that the thynges in heauen and the thinges in earth should be ioined together as it wer into one body.”¹⁰⁷¹

Atonement also connotes wholeness in body, mind, and spirit, as still reflected in the modern use of the French term salut, referring both to health and salvation, and frequently used as a greeting. Observes Rey: “Like fides, a former religious term that has come into everyday usage, salus has been taken up into the language of the Christian church and given a new meaning. The word was originally a derivation of salvus (whole, intact).”¹⁰⁷² The close association of health and salvation are equally apparent in other languages, as explained by King:

The words “heal” and “whole” are etymologically akin. The sense of “wholeness” and the sense of “healing” are held together in the New Testament expression “the man was made whole.”¹⁰⁷³ These words go back to the same root in Indo-European, and in the Germanic languages, they are close. Furthermore, “heal” and “whole” developed apparently separate significances of “curing” and “uniting” but while we take them as separate, we realize ways that these senses are clearly linked.

One variant of the two is the word Heiland (Old English Heliand), the main German word for “Savior.” It is the translation of “Savior,” yet Heiland also means “the Healer,” so the Savior is a healer as well. In fact, saving is healing and healing is saving; the dictionary’s definitions of salve and “salvation” illustrate this fact. Furthermore, Heilig and “holy” are from the same root, meaning “holy,” “heal,” or “whole.”¹⁰⁷⁴ Consider also the greeting words “hail” (English), heil (German), and hell (Scandinavian); all of these greetings mean “may you be well and whole.”¹⁰⁷⁵

While atonement is the preferred English term in the LDS Church for both the process and the result of Christ’s sacrifice on our behalf, it has naturally been difficult to find terms

1068 J. A. Simpson et al., OED, p. 754.

1069 Cited in ibid.

1070 W. Tyndale, Works, pp. 158, 431, cited in W. Skeat, Dictionary, p. 40, s.v., atone.

1071 J. Gallagher, Atoning.

1072 A. Rey, Dictionnaire, 2:2009, s.v., salut.

1073 John 5:9.

1074 For cautionary arguments against, e.g., the equating of “holy” and “heal” (vs. “whole” and “heal”) on an etymological basis, see J. Barr, Semantics, pp. 111-114.

1075 A. H. King, Wholeness, p. 331.

with similar connotations in other languages. The only solution in many cases has been to leave out any explanation of the English term when the passage is translated. For example, the following paragraph in Elder Talmage's Jesus the Christ is simply omitted in the French translation:

This basal thought is admirably implied in our English word, "atonement," which, as its syllables attest, is at-one-ment, "denoting reconciliation, or the bringing into agreement of those who have been estranged."¹⁰⁷⁶

In other cases, even though there was no attempt to explain atonement to French readers, relevant differences in the English translation required an explanation from the translator.¹⁰⁷⁷

Attempts to directly substitute the French terms expier/expiation for the English terms "to atone/atonement" are fraught with challenges. For example, consider the following statement in the True to the Faith gospel reference manual:

The word "atone" means to reconcile, or restore to harmony. Through the Atonement of Jesus Christ, we can be reconciled to our Heavenly Father.¹⁰⁷⁸

The corresponding statement in French does not convey as effectively the whole range of meaning of "atonement," the term expier (= English "expiate") having shifted so far from its roots. This fact has led the French translators of the Septuagint to replace it by apaisement (= English appeasement). They explain:

"Appeasement" is not the traditional word used in Bible translations to describe the Hebrew rite that "covers" sins and obtains God's forgiveness (the ordinance called kippurim, is usually read as "Expiation") but it does precisely render the Greek term used by the Alexandrian translators to signify that the major purpose of the ritual is to appease God: the words "appeasement" or "propitiation" better emphasize the positive aspects of the ordinance than the term "expiation" which has come to possess, in current usage, different connotations....

[In continuing to use the term "expiation," the] original idea of a reconciliation that is obtained through the offering has been lost. As a result, a whole set of Christian teachings have developed around the idea that man must "expiate" his sins, i.e., pay for them through chastisement or suffering, in order to receive forgiveness of his sins by their "expiation." Such terms are no longer suitable for expressing hilasmós-exiláskomai.¹⁰⁷⁹

In the translation of Doctrines of Salvation, the French word for reconciliation is substituted¹⁰⁸⁰—a better choice, yet unfortunately still not sufficient to adequately convey the idea of perfect unity that is felicitously found in the term "atonement."¹⁰⁸¹

1076 J. E. Talmage, Jesus the Christ, pp. 21-22; cf. J. E. Talmage, Jésus le Christ, p. 24.

1077 E.g., J. E. Talmage, Jésus le Christ, pp. 97-98. See Endnote E-182, p. 750.

1078 True to the Faith, p. 14, s.v., Atonement of Jesus Christ. See Romans 5:10-11; 2 Nephi 25:23; Jacob 4:11.

1079 C. Dogniez et al., Pentateuque, Glossaire, s.v. apaisement, pp. 868-870.

1080 Cf. J. F. Smith, Jr., Doctrines, 9 March 1935, 1:125 and 2 March 1935, 1:122.

1081 See the overview of Moses 6, p. 467.

Excursus 47

Islamic Perspectives Relating to Redemption

ALTHOUGH Islamic thought contains no explicit notion of redemptory sacrifice, vestiges of the idea can be seen in certain traditions and practices. For instance, some see parallels between Islamic and Jewish ideas in “the brief use of Jerusalem as the direction for daily prayers” in the early years of Islam and in “the development of fasting during the month of Ramadhan in opposition to, and part imitation of, the Day of Atonement (yom kippur).”¹⁰⁸²

One Islamic tradition records that “the angel Gabriel brought a lamb, and taught Adam to kill it in the name of Allāh.”¹⁰⁸³ Hajj pilgrims also are enjoined to “sacrifice some animal in the Name of God.”¹⁰⁸⁴ An explanation offered to modern Muslims of this practice is that such a pilgrim is “symbolically sacrificing himself and fulfilling the obligation of the covenant on the basis of which God has taught man this verse: ‘Say, Verily, my prayers, my sacrifice, my life and my death are for God, the Lord of the world who hath no peer.’”¹⁰⁸⁵

The concept of sacrifice as a substitutionary practice is also evident in the invoking of the example of Abraham’s offering of his firstborn son, where “God’s intervention legitimized the sacrifice of a life for a life—a ram for the son.”¹⁰⁸⁶ Though consistently avoiding any implication between the idea of sacrifice and that of atonement, Muslim commentary does emphasize God’s “forgiveness, turning mercifully to the servants, covering their mistakes, bestowing mercy on them, putting them in the shadow of His compassion and grace—these are some of the divine attributes which He has especially reserved for the sinners. Adam could not know and understand them without passing through the stages which Allāh had decreed for them.”¹⁰⁸⁷

Notwithstanding these ritual and doctrinal affinities, the difficulties for Muslims in accepting the idea of a messiah who atones for men’s sins include, among others, the following:

1. The Muslim view of Christ as an intercessor rather than a Redeemer: “The theory of atonement invalidates the system of reward and punishment, and consequently negates the absolute sovereignty of Allāh.”¹⁰⁸⁸ Whereas the “intercessor... requests the Master to exercise his right of pardon and forgiveness... without in any way affecting the Master’s ownership or authority,” the atonement “is a deal, a bargain, which transfers the Master’s authority from the sinner to the ransom given in his place, and removes the sinner from the Master’s power as soon as the Master accepts the ransom in his place.”¹⁰⁸⁹
2. The seeming absurdity of the incarnation of an immaterial God: “[T]here is no relationship between a thing that has a physical body with all its accidents and concomitants and a Being that has neither a body nor any of its concomitants or accidents (like time, space, movement, etc.). How can one even think of unity between the two in any way?”¹⁰⁹⁰

1082 R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 1:361.

1083 G. Weil, Legends, p. 45; cf. M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, p. 68; A. al-Tha’labi, Lives, p. 62; J. H. Sailhamer, Genesis, p. 58; Commentary 4:27-a, p. 274.

1084 S. A. Ashraf, Inner, p. 122.

1085 Ibid., p. 124.

1086 Ibid., p. 124. See Endnote E-183, p. 750.

1087 A. at-Tabataba’i, Al-Mizan, 2:37, 1:190.

1088 Ibid., 3:79-80, 6:150.

1089 Ibid., 3:79-80, 6:181.

1090 Ibid., 6:170. Hence also the Muslim rejection of the idea that Jesus could be the “Son of God” (see, e.g., M.

3. The notion of the consequences of Adam's original sin having fallen upon all men: "What is the use or benefit of believing in divinely-sent realities and doing good deeds [if] the problem of original sin has been solved, and the atonement has brought forgiveness and mercy to all men, believers and unbelievers, righteous and unrighteous, all alike, without any difference between the most impeccable righteous one and the most incorrigible impious one."¹⁰⁹¹
4. The idea of an atonement for personal sin that would benefit only Christians: "[A]nd not even all the Christians but only a certain group among all those widely differing denominations. I wish I knew what would happen to the honored prophets (who came) before Christ, and to the believers of their ummah"^{1092?}¹⁰⁹³
5. The sanctifying role of obedience to God's law as a necessary requirement accompanying the Christian emphasis on belief in God's mercy and grace: "When a man follows the laws of religion,... his soul becomes ready to receive Allāh's bounties; and he is qualified—in his self and in his actions—for the divine honor in the hereafter. All of this emanates from the light put in his heart, and the purity that is found in his self."¹⁰⁹⁴

Most of the above-listed inconsistencies for Muslims encountering traditional Christianity are dissolved when considered from the LDS point of view though, of course, some important differences still remain. For a more complete exposition of Muslim-Christian differences, see at-Tabataba'i.¹⁰⁹⁵

Islamic scholar Mahmoud Ayoub characterizes two different types of redemption in Eastern and Western traditions of Christianity, and contrasts them to his view of redemption in Islam:¹⁰⁹⁶

The first [type of redemption in Christianity] is a death on the cross, where the cross becomes a prototype of the biblical or more specifically the Jewish temple altar. That sacrifice was the final sacrifice, all others before it being only a prelude to it...

The other type is one that characterizes the Eastern Church most notably. It is redemption not by death and suffering so much as by victory.... [In this view,] Christ, the second Adam, came not to abolish an original sin by dying for Adam, but rather he came in order to make us divine... Hence that Christianity which lived on strongly and converted numerous people in the Syro-Aramaic area or what we now mainly call the Arab world, was that Christianity which has been characterized by Christian writers as the faith of the merciful, i.e., addin arrahamami. It is that faith which Islam breeds, and I think we cannot understand Islam fully unless we see it in that Christian ritualistic context. It may be argued that even though the prophet of Islam lived in closer proximity to the Jewish community in Medina and interacted with it far more extensively on a daily basis, the overall influence of the spirituality of Eastern Christianity and its idea of redemption played a greater role in the formative period of Muslim piety...

In the West the suffering of Christ developed into an idea of a Christ contorted with pain. (The gory images that we see in much of Western medieval literature characterizing the suffering Christ were the products of the first type of redemption; that is, redemption as death.) In Eastern Christian piety, on the other hand, the cross is not really an altar of suffering and death, but a throne of glory...

Barker, Christmas, pp. 164-167).

1091 A. at-Tabataba'i, Al-Mizan, 3:79-80, 6:176;

1092 Arabic "religious community."

1093 A. at-Tabataba'i, Al-Mizan, 3:79-80, 6:176.

1094 Ibid., 3:79-80, 6:173.

1095 Ibid., 3:79-80, 6:162-184.

1096 M. M. Ayoub, Redemption, pp. 159-168.

To understand... the two types [of redemption] which... Islam added to the Christian notion, is to look briefly at the Muslim idea of man... Like the biblical Adam, the Adam of the Qur'an sinned by disobeying the divine command, but here the comparison ends. The Qur'an does not tell us that Adam ate of the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge, because knowledge was given to him even before his sin.¹⁰⁹⁷ Knowledge was not the cause of his condemnation and damnation but of his salvation.¹⁰⁹⁸ Adam was saved because he received words from his Lord.¹⁰⁹⁹ He was declared higher than the angels because he knew language which they did not know.¹¹⁰⁰ So it is not knowledge that made Adam sin but disobedience. While the biblical Adam becomes the first sinner for Christians, for Muslims Adam is not the first sinner but the first prophet, because with him the history of revelation begins... Both [Iblis and Adam] rebelled. But while Adam repented and turned to God, Iblis persisted in his pride and would not accept that a creature of clay may be better than a creature of fire.

Redemption, then, in Islam begins with Adam, who was made for the earth. He descends to earth, and the battle between good and evil begins on its true stage, the earth. Redemption is when this battle is finally concluded with the divine victory, with the victory of the Good.

The Qur'an speaks not of ransom by sacrifice even though we do a commemorative sacrifice at the time of the hajj to commemorate the sacrifice of Abraham, but the Qur'an insists that then neither the fat nor the blood of the animals reaches God. What reaches him is our piety or righteousness. So expiation or takfir of sin must be done by the individual himself, and here, then, redemption is what men and women do with their own sin through repentance and through expiation through prayers, fasts, sharing their wealth with the poor, and so on. This is one type of redemption.

The other, and in a sense more important in that it has permeated Islamic life more deeply and is a type which may be considered as really the only legitimate type of Islamic redemption, is that of intercession—shafa'ah. Contrary to what many Muslims say, intercession is not denied in the Qur'an; rather, what is denied is that intercession will benefit those who are deep in sin. Any intercession must be a divine gift...¹¹⁰¹ Furthermore, if we take the large number of hadith known as ahadith ash-shafa'a, or the traditions of intercession, we find so clearly the idea that it will be Muhammad who will intercede on behalf not only of the Muslims but the entire world...

While Muhammad... plays a very important intercessory role, intercession is not limited to him.... In a comment on [Qur'an 2:251] by the sixth Shi'i imam, Ja'far al-Sadiq, we are told that God protects those who do not pray among the Muslims through those who do pray; those who do not fast through those who do fast; and those who do not go on pilgrimage through those who do go. Were they all to concur in neglecting the prayers, fasting, and pilgrimage, then they would all perish.... So, then, wholeness, redemption, salvation, restoration can be achieved through personal expiation and through intercession widely considered....

It appears that the religious concept [in Islam, as in Christianity and Judaism, and even in Buddhism] is that the world evolves downward from a golden age to a silver age to an iron age to a clay age and then the whole thing will be dark until someone comes to restore things to their natural and earlier purity. This, in Islam, is the Mahdi.

In the Mahdi idea, Islam and Christianity again meet. I... argue...that the first notion of the Mahdi was not that a person of the family of the prophet will be born, according to the Sunni Muslim view, or that he will appear at the end of time, according to the Shi'i Muslim view.

1097 Qur'an 2:31-33. See Commentary 4:3-a, p. 245.

1098 See the overview of Moses 4, p. 229.

1099 Qur'an 2:37. See M. M. Ayoub, Qur'an (Vol. 1), pp. 84-85. See Commentary 3:19-b, p. 177.

1100 Qur'an 2:33. See Commentary 3:19-b, p. 177.

1101 Qur'an 2:255.

Rather, it will be Jesus who will return. If we are to find any Qur'anic basis for this eschatological event, it will not be for a future, so to say, Islamic Mahdi, but for Jesus, who is declared to be a sign for the Hour.¹¹⁰² Muslim piety, in order to preserve itself and its own integrity, did not deny that Jesus will come to restore the world to its purity but affirmed that Jesus and the Mahdi will work together. Most of the hard work will be done by Jesus, who will kill ad-Dajjal, the anti-Christ.... and restore the reality of the universe to its pristine purity. Symbolically it is said that Christ, when He comes, will break the cross and kill the swine (these two being the symbols that divide Muslims from Christians), and Islam in its essential aspects will prevail. This is redemption....

There is, finally, one important aspect of redemption, whether it be Christian or Islamic. Redemption is only one side of the divine judgment. Redemption must also imply judgment and condemnation. Christ will return on the clouds of heaven, as the book of Revelation declares;¹¹⁰³ and those who have stabbed him will mourn him. He will come not as the meek lamb of God but as the man who has a sword of fire coming out of his mouth with every word he utters. Before the new earth and the new heavens will appear, ...judgment must be executed on the wicked. Similarly, with Islam, the Mahdi when he comes will avenge the blood of Husayn before he fulfills his main mission; on this both Shi'i and Sunni traditionalists agree...

The Mahdi will do his work and eventually die, but it will be Husayn who will return to rule the earth or the Muslim community...

What does [this] say to us today? I have said that redemption in its widest sense is a corporate, not an individual process. Whether it be the Church widely viewed or the Church of [Jesus Christ of] Latter-day Saints or the Muslim community, for redemption to be meaningful and real for us today, we all have to take part in it as an ongoing process...

We who are in an academic position, who are average in society but who are committed can yet also play a role. What we see today is the beginning of a new dialogue—to me, at least. I do not think, and I must tell you here and now, I do not think that you people will be any more successful in converting Muslims to Mormonism than any missionaries who were before you. But you could be successful in one important area: that is, to create an important dialogue that will lead to a fellowship of faith between you and us.¹¹⁰⁴ I think that the truth is bigger than any concept of the truth held by any nation or religious community or individual. And to the truth there are many ways. We can all meet along the way and learn, but his or her own way to God in the way he or she knows best. I myself was born in a Muslim community to a very devout family. But for fifteen years I was a fundamentalist Protestant; I was baptized and all of it, and I shouted more amens and hallelujahs than any of you. Why, then, did I return to Islam? Not because I feel that Christianity is not a redeeming process but because I felt that my roots are in that civilization, in that world, in that ethos, in that whole worldview, and I think it is better for both Islam and Christianity that I did that.

In conclusion, I would like to say that Christ redeemed and continues to redeem us, not simply and only by his divine act, but by his humanity, a humanity that cared. Muhammad redeemed and continues to redeem us as we follow his life, his sunna, as a model for our lives. But in the end we must heed the words, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling."¹¹⁰⁵ I pray that we will all be successful in that process and that we will strengthen each other as we traverse the weary way of this life into the life to come.

1102 Qur'an 43:61.

1103 Revelation 1:7.

1104 See Annotated Bibliography, Islamic Texts, p. 896.

1105 Philippians 2:12.

Excursus 48

The Nature and Scope of Premortal Covenants

THOUGH it seems reasonable to suppose that each person who was to come to earth made premortal covenants of some kind,¹¹⁰⁶ our knowledge of their nature and scope is currently limited. However, Elder Neal A. Maxwell wrote that: “our memories of the first estate will eventually be fully restored; and, upon regaining our premortal perspectives, we will acknowledge that we did indeed come here under certain conditions to which we earlier agreed—with the risks and rewards adequately explained beforehand.”¹¹⁰⁷ No doubt the primary reason for the light of Christ “that lighteth every man that cometh into the world”¹¹⁰⁸ is to enable all of God’s children to keep these premortal covenants, and to lead them toward the greater light and knowledge available to them through the Gift of the Holy Ghost.¹¹⁰⁹

Speaking of his personal beliefs about these covenants, Elder Orson Hyde said:

... if it be true that we entered into a covenant with the powers celestial, before we left our former homes, that we would come here and obey the voice of the Lord, through whomsoever he might speak, these powers are witnesses of the covenant into which we entered; and it is not impossible that we signed the articles thereof with our own hands—which articles may be retained in the archives above, to be presented to us when we rise from the dead, and be judged out of our own mouths, according to that which is written in the books.... But the question is, Did we subscribe to any such doctrine as this [at] the start? I will not say that we did; yet I have had such thoughts, and they whisper strongly in my heart.¹¹¹⁰

In addition to the idea of a general covenant of personal obedience presumed by Elder Hyde, Elder John A. Widtsoe has expressed the view that we entered into a partnership with the Lord to share a measure of responsibility for the carrying out of His overall plan. In essence, Elder Widtsoe expressed that just as the Savior agreed to make the unique sacrifice of His life in our behalf, so all premortal souls similarly expressed their willingness to make sacrifices for the happiness and salvation of others:

In our preexistent state, in the day of the Great Council, we made a certain agreement with the Almighty. The Lord proposed a plan, conceived by him. We accepted it. Since the plan is intended for all men, we became parties to the salvation of every person under that plan. We agreed, right then and there, to be not only saviors for ourselves but measurably, saviors for the whole human family. We went into a partnership with the Lord. The working out of the plan became then not merely the Father’s work, and the Savior’s work, but also our work. The least of us, the humblest, is in partnership with the Almighty in achieving the purpose of the eternal plan of salvation.¹¹¹¹

Note that it was in order to “plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers”¹¹¹² that Elijah came to the Kirtland temple in 1836.

¹¹⁰⁶ See the overview of Moses 5, p. 344.

¹¹⁰⁷ N. A. Maxwell, Prove, p. 57.

¹¹⁰⁸ D&C 93:2, John 1:9. See also Alma 28:14; Moroni 7:12-19; D&C 84:46; D&C 88:6-13, 41.

¹¹⁰⁹ D&C 84:46-48; C. K. Dunford, Light of Christ; V. L. Ludlow, Principles, pp. 58-59; L. Richards, Marvelous, pp. 122-128; LDS Bible Dictionary, s.v. Light of Christ. See Endnote E-184, p. 750.

¹¹¹⁰ O. Hyde, 6 October 1859, pp. 314-315.

¹¹¹¹ Elder John A. Widtsoe, cited in A. F. Bennett, Saviors, pp. 11-12; B. K. Packer, Holy Temple, p. 216.

¹¹¹² JS-H 1:39; cf. Malachi 4:5-6; Luke 1:17; 3 Nephi 25:6; D&C 27:9; 110:15; 128:17; J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 6 April 1844, p. 356; 2 July 1839, pp. 160-161; 27 August 1843, p. 323; 20 January 1844, p. 330; 10 March 1844, p. 337-

Islamic tradition also alludes to a covenant of obedience made between Allāh and all mankind.¹¹¹³ Al-Mizan comments:

Allāh says: “And certainly We had covenanted unto Adam before, but he forgot.”¹¹¹⁴ Which covenant does this verse allude to?... [T]he covenant means the general covenant which was made with the whole mankind and more particularly with the prophets[,] the covenant made with the souls of the human beings about the Mastership of Allāh and their own servitude.¹¹¹⁵ That covenant obliged the man that he should never forget that Allāh is his Lord, the Ruler and Master of his affairs; nor should he lose sight of the fact that he is a wholly owned slave of Allāh; that he has no authority whatsoever over his benefit or harm; nor does he have any control over his life, death or resurrection; in short he owns neither his person, his characteristics, nor his actions.¹¹¹⁶

Within the Islamic Stories of the Prophets collections are also found expansions on Qurʾān 7:172, such as the following:¹¹¹⁷

Allāh... made a covenant with the descendants of Adam. He touched Adam’s back,¹¹¹⁸ and lo! the whole human family which shall be born to the end of time issued forth from it, as small as ants, and ranged themselves right and left.

At the head of the former stood Muhammad, with the prophets and the rest of the faithful, whose radiant whiteness distinguished them from the sinners, who were standing on Adam’s left, headed by Kabil [= Cain], the murderer of his brother.

Allāh then acquainted the progenitor of man with the names and destinies of each individual....

Allāh then cried to the assembled human family, “Confess that I am the only God, and that Muhammad is my messenger.” The hosts to the right made their confession immediately; but those to the left hesitated, some repeating but one half of Allāh’s words, and others remaining entirely silent. And Allāh continued: “The disobedient and impenitent shall suffer the pains of eternal fire, but the faithful shall be blessed in Paradise!”

“So be it!” responded Adam; who shall call every man by name in the day of the resurrection, and pronounce his sentence according as the balance of justice shall decide.¹¹¹⁹

When the covenant was concluded, Allāh once more touched Adam’s back, and the whole human race returned to him.

Underscoring the importance of such accounts within Islam, Schimmel asserts that the “idea of this primordial covenant (mithaq) between God and humanity has impressed the religious conscience of the Muslims... more than any other idea.”¹¹²⁰

For a discussion of the New and Everlasting Covenant in LDS thought, see the overview of Moses 4, pp. 216-220 and the overview of Moses 5, pp. 340-350.

338.

1113 See Endnote E-185, p. 750.

1114 Qurʾān 20:115. A related Jewish tradition recounted that “the unborn souls of future generations... were present at Sinai to receive the Torah” (H. Schwartz, Tree, p. 164).

1115 Ibid., 7:172.

1116 A. at-Tabatabaʾi, Al-Mizan, 2:35, 1:181-182.

1117 G. Weil, Legends, pp. 39-40. See also Qurʾān 30:30, 33:7, 53:56; A. al-Thaʿlabi, Lives, pp. 67-68; B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, pp. 32-33; cf. M. al-Kisaʾi, Tales, pp. 73-74, 82; al-Tabari, Creation, 1:133-137, pp. 304-307. See Endnote E-188, p. 753.

1118 I.e., “his loins” (W. A. Graham, Divine, p. 161).

1119 See Endnote E-187, p. 751.

1120 A. Schimmel, Mystical, p. 24; cf. M. al-Kisaʾi, Tales, p. 345 n. 51.

Excursus 49

The People of the Book

MUSLIMS refer to Jews and Christians (along with themselves) as ahl al-kitab, meaning roughly “The People of the Book,” thus recognizing these groups as having faith rooted in genuine revelation from God.¹¹²¹ The “Book” in question is not the Qurʾān or any single work of scripture, but rather the complete and perfect heavenly archetype from which all authentically-revealed texts that have been sent down “gradually” since the time of Adam¹¹²² were originally derived.¹¹²³

Though Muslims believe that Jews and Christians have since embraced many errors because of subsequent corruption of their respective books of scripture,¹¹²⁴ their faiths are held in higher esteem than the faiths of those who do not accept Abraham, Moses, or Jesus.¹¹²⁵ Reciprocally echoing the spirit of this principle, Elder Boyd K. Packer acknowledged important affinities between Mormonism and Islam: “Knit together by world history and by Old Testament history and doctrine, the Church and the Islamic world can see each other as ‘People of the Book,’ indeed ‘Family of the Book.’”¹¹²⁶

Many students of the Qurʾān take the notion of the universality of God’s concern for all of his children very seriously. For example, a Sufi scholar writes critically of those who would deny God’s ongoing interest in the spiritual enlightenment of non-Muslims:

More than one exoteric outlook is based on the assumptions which, if pushed to their logical conclusions, would seem to imply that God has left large parts of the globe in spiritual darkness for long periods of time. The Qurʾān sweeps all such illusions aside: “For every nation there is a Messenger,”¹¹²⁷ and “Verily We have sent Messengers before thee, about some we have told thee, and about some We have not told thee.”¹¹²⁸ We may quote also, in this connection the following: “Verily the Faithful [Muslims] and the Jews and the Christians and the Sabaeans [i.e., Mandaeans]—whoso hath faith in God and the Last Day and doeth deeds of piety—their meed [= reward] is kept for them with their Lord, and no fear shall come upon them, neither shall they grieve.”¹¹²⁹ Finally, lest it be imagined that such declarations refer only to the past and that all other revelations have been superseded by itself, the Qurʾān expressly states: “For each We have appointed a law and a path; and if God had wished He would have made you one people.... So vie one with another in good works. Unto God is your return, all of you together, and He will then inform you of that wherein ye were at variance.”¹¹³⁰

Similarly, in explaining differences between the Jahil-e-Muqassir (= the “culpable ignorant” or “obstinate non-believers”) and the Jahil-e-Qasir (= the inculpable ignorant), a group of Shi’ite scholars express the view that:

1121 R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia. 1:27-29.

1122 A. at-Tabataba’i, Al-Mizan, 5:8-9; cf. Qurʾān 25:32.

1123 A. at-Tabataba’i, Al-Mizan, 5:79-80; J. Wansbrough, Qurʾānic Studies, pp. 83, 170; B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, pp. 3-4; Qurʾān 3:135-136, 85:21-22. See Endnote E-189, p. 751.

1124 A. at-Tabataba’i, Al-Mizan, 3:79-80, 5:10-11, 6:184-219; T. Khalidi, Muslim Jesus, p. 20.

1125 See Qurʾān 2:105; Z. Karabell, Peace, pp. 19-20; D. C. Peterson, Muhammad (2001), pp. 590-591. See Endnote E-190, p. 752.

1126 B. K. Packer, Bridges, p. 7.

1127 Qurʾān 10:47.

1128 Qurʾān 40:78.

1129 Qurʾān 2:62.

1130 A. B. S. Ed-Din, Sufism, p. 232. See Qurʾān 5:48. See Endnote E-186, p. 753.

... those who have not heard about the true message of Islam and are not blameworthy with regard to this will attain salvation if they are truthful to their own religion. This religion must be based on the *'fitrah*¹¹³¹—man's primordial, innate nature—and so the followers of such a religion, for example, abstain from lying and committing crimes against humanity. This rule is also applicable to the *Ahlus Sunnah*¹¹³² to whom the truthfulness of Shi'aism has not been explained correctly.¹¹³³

In explanation of the well-known verse in the Qur'an that there is “no compulsion in religion,”¹¹³⁴ al-Mizan comments:

Islam is not based on the sword and killing, and... does not allow Muslims to compel or coerce others to accept Islam. It is contrary to the view held by many Muslims and non-Muslims alike that Islam is the religion of the sword... We have already clarified, while writing the commentary on the verses of fighting, that the fighting ordained by Islam is not for the purpose of material advancement nor for spreading... religion by force. It was ordained only for reviving the truth and defending the most precious treasure of nature—the faith of monotheism. Where monotheism is accepted by the people—even if they remain Jew or Christian—Islam does not fight with them.¹¹³⁵

Although the term “People of the Book” has its origins in Islam, “it has become a common self-description used by Jews throughout the world” to emphasize their own attachment to the Torah.¹¹³⁶ Indeed, noted Jewish critic of secular and sacred literature Harold Bloom, citing Kushner, describes the Jewish people as having “tumbled from the pages of books: the Tanakh, the two Talmuds of Babylon and Jerusalem, and all the subsequent commentaries down to this moment.”¹¹³⁷ In a very fundamental sense, however, later generations of books are of a different nature and of lesser stature than their predecessors. For example, Mopsik laments the eventual completion of the Jewish Talmud, which relegated subsequent commentary to mere footnotes:

We can only imagine what the Talmud would have been had its writing been continued up to the present. Speaking in human terms, Jewish tradition became the rabbinic tradition, which has become one with the Talmud. Hebrew religious literature was henceforth diminished, its effort focused on providing the glosses, comments, and explanations found in small type in the margins of the main text—but in fact outside the book itself.¹¹³⁸

By way of contrast, Bloom sees the “entire argument” of the New Testament as being that “Jesus Christ [has been set] above Torah”¹¹³⁹ or, in other words, “that a man has replaced Scripture.”¹¹⁴⁰ Indeed, John 14:6, Jesus’ statement that He is “the way, the truth, and the life” (arguably the core statement of this entire gospel),¹¹⁴¹ is a startling challenge to the orthodoxy of His time. The sense of this assertion is that the ways of God, the truth of moral perfection, and eternal life itself are ultimately not to be found in the written record

1131 Arabic “The divine nature by which Allāh created mankind.”

1132 Roughly speaking, Sunni Muslims.

1133 Porch of Wisdom Cultural Institution, Faith and Reason, p. 91.

1134 Qur'an 2:256.

1135 A. at-Tabataba'i, Al-Mizan, 2:256, 4:172. For an illuminating view of world (and religious) history as seen through Islamic eyes, see T. Ansary, Destiny. For a western view, see B. Lewis, Islam in History.

1136 C. S. Ehrlich, Rivers, p. 13.

1137 H. Bloom, American Religion, p. 116. See Endnote E-191, p. 752.

1138 C. Mopsik, Zohar, 1:10; cf. P. Schäfer, Torah as Wisdom. See Endnote E-192, p. 752.

1139 H. Bloom, Names Divine, p. 23. See Endnote E-193, p. 752.

1140 Ibid., p. 14.

1141 H. N. Ridderbos, John, p. 493.

of the *Torah*¹¹⁴²—which Barker argues had been substituted for a more ancient concept of Wisdom¹¹⁴³—but rather in the person of Jesus Christ, the One who gave the Law.¹¹⁴⁴ Said Jesus Himself: “[Ye] search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: [yet] they are they which testify of me.”¹¹⁴⁵

Bloom attributes his own views about the “total incompatibility of Yahweh and Jesus Christ”¹¹⁴⁶ in part to his reading of the gospel of John, but perhaps more importantly to the image of Jesus as seen through the lens of later Christian theology, i.e., the fact that the “Trinitarian Jesus Christ is Greek, and Yahweh is precisely what forever resists Greek thought in Hebrew tradition.”¹¹⁴⁷ Indeed, in Bloom’s view, “Both Yeshua of Nazareth and Yahweh are irrelevant to the Trinity, since they were not just metaphorical and everything deposited in the Trinity is nothing but metaphor.”¹¹⁴⁸

However, it is precisely the contrast between the authentically ancient Hebrew conception of God¹¹⁴⁹ and its later philosophically-derived developments in normative Judaism and Hellenic Christianity that drew Bloom’s admiring attention to the founder of Mormonism,¹¹⁵⁰ who he calls the “greatest and most authentic of American prophets, seers, and revelators.”¹¹⁵¹ Speaking “on the authority of a lifetime spent in apprehending the visions of great poets and original speculators,” he finds no American equal to “the imaginative vitality of Joseph Smith’s revelation” which recaptured “crucial elements in the archaic Jewish religion.... that had ceased to be available either to normative Judaism or to Christianity, and that survived only in esoteric traditions unlikely to have touched Smith directly.”¹¹⁵²

See also Excursus 6: The Authority and Power of Scripture, p. 531.

1142 E.g., Psalm 19:7-9.

1143 M. Barker, Older, p. 83. See Excursus 2: Ancient Concepts of Wisdom, p. 516.

1144 W. Barclay, Gospel (Vol. 1), 2:157-159; A. H. King, Total, p. 187; N. A. Maxwell, Inexhaustible, p. 212; C. T. Warner, Truth, p. 1490; Alma 34:14; cf. Commentary 2:1-c, p. 93. See also E. R. Goodenough, Motif.

1145 John 5:39. See Endnote E-194, p. 753.

1146 H. Bloom, Names Divine, p. 6.

1147 Ibid., p. 70.

1148 Ibid., p. 109.

1149 See Endnote E-195, p. 753.

1150 H. Bloom, American Religion, pp. 79-128.

1151 H. Bloom, Millennium, p. 224.

1152 H. Bloom, American Religion, pp. 98, 99, 101.

Excursus 50

Fu Xi and Nü Gua

THE miraculously-born Emperor-god Fu Xi,¹¹⁵³ known as the “Heavenly Sovereign” is usually listed as the most ancient of the San Huang (Three August Ones) of Chinese legend.¹¹⁵⁴ Fu Xi owes most of his fame to an account recorded in an appended text of the I Ching,¹¹⁵⁵ whose earliest sections date to about 800 BCE.¹¹⁵⁶ Here, he is given credit as the one who brought moral and social order to society through his divinely-inspired creation of the Eight Trigrams,¹¹⁵⁷ in the process not only inventing writing, but also spawning a host of technological and cultural innovations.¹¹⁵⁸

In the well-known fourth-century BCE Chu silk manuscript, Fu Xi is portrayed as the creator who, with his female counterpart,¹¹⁵⁹ “separated (Heaven) above and (Earth) below” and then “engendered four sons, the seasons, who measured the year by pacing it out with their feet.”¹¹⁶⁰ A few centuries later, stories began to describe him more mundanely “as a partly human king of the remote archaic past”¹¹⁶¹ and to closely associate him with a wife and sister named Nü Gua.¹¹⁶² Earlier myths of Nü Gua as a goddess had also associated her with the process of creation, specifically the creation of the human race from the soil.¹¹⁶³ At this later period, Fu Xi and Nü Gua were associated with the institution of marriage and were seen as the progenitors of mankind—with some elements of their story resembling incidents in the account of the biblical Adam and Eve.¹¹⁶⁴

In a section of The Classic of Mountains and Seas dating to the first-century BCE various descriptions of an earthly paradise and themes of immortality can be found. Summarizes Birrell:¹¹⁶⁵

Like Mount Olympus, it is the place where the gods descend from the sky to that part of the human world which most nearly replicates the paradisiacal state of Heaven... The K'un-lun earthly paradise has a sky-ladder in the form of a giant tree, the “Tree Grain,” so that earthly beings who have achieved a near perfect state and the heavenly gods may commune¹¹⁶⁶.... This earthly¹¹⁶⁷ paradise is guarded from intrusion by a fierce array of mythical beasts [including a phoenix pair, and luan-birds that “carry a serpent on their head and tread a serpent underfoot”¹¹⁶⁸]... Besides the mythical birds and beasts, there are twelve fabled trees, including the “Never Die” tree, trees of precious jewels, and unknown trees with fabulous names....

1153 Alternately, Fu Hsi or Pao Xi

1154 A. Birrell, Mythology, pp. 44-47; K. G. Stevens, Chinese, pp. 35-36.

1155 Yi jing = Book of Changes, Classic of Changes.

1156 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 44.

1157 Chinese ba gua.

1158 M. E. Lewis, Writing, pp. 197-209; M. E. Lewis, Flood, pp. 116-119.

1159 See Endnote E-197, p. 753.

1160 M. E. Lewis, Writing, p. 202; T. Michael, Dao, p. 9. See also M. E. Lewis, Flood, pp. 21-23.

1161 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 46.

1162 Alternately, Nü Kua or Nü Wa. See Endnote E-198, p. 753.

1163 A. Birrell, Mythology, pp. 33-35, 163-165; M. E. Lewis, Writing, p. 202; K. G. Stevens, Chinese, pp. 30-32.

1164 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 34. See Endnote E-199, p. 753.

1165 Ibid., pp. 183-184; cf. J. S. Major, Heaven, pp. 47, 150-161.

1166 See Figure 3-8, p. 145; Figure 3-10, p. 147; Commentary 3:9-g, p. 166. See Endnote 3-48, p. 209. See Endnote E-200, p. 753.

1167 See Endnote E-201, p. 754.

1168 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 185. See Commentary 4:21-d, p. 266.

The narrative may represent the vestige of an archaic rite of inducing deathlessness which was enacted in the age of belief in immortality.

Lewis sees it as noteworthy that Fu Xi and Nü Gua “appear only in funerary art.”¹¹⁶⁹ He describes their role in tombs from the Han era as follows:

Fu Xi and Nü Gua are... significant because they embody among the divinities the formation of couples, which was central to the household... The tomb art treats them as high divinities, and depicts their central role in maintaining the order of the cosmos. The art does this through the symbolism of the carpenter’s square and compass that they hold, by treating them as reduced “charts” of the cosmos, and by using them as guardians for the inner doorways both of the tomb and the houses in tomb art.¹¹⁷⁰

While women had only a marginal role in the patriline, the underworld household of the tomb was in many ways defined by the link of husband and wife, who were ultimately buried together... Deities depicted in order to transform the tomb into a cosmos were also often women. In several tombs, one stands at a half-open door welcoming the deceased to the world of the dead... Fu Xi and Nü Gua were a spirit couple who... provided the divine model for both the household and the joint burial.¹¹⁷¹

Nü Gua and Fu Xi also appear in some versions of ancient Chinese flood myths. In Lewis’ brilliant comparative study, he concludes that although “there is no single feature or meaning common to all versions, certain topoi or ideas to which floods lend themselves do recur in many contexts”—including, in the Chinese case:

(1) the flood as a re-creation of the world within the human era, in which the world’s enduring survival is made possible by new institutions or practices; (2) the flood as a form of punishment or revenge by some powerful spirit; (3) the repopulation of the earth after the flood as a means of dramatizing kinship structures, incest taboos, or the origins of different peoples of the earth; (4) the relations of people and animals, who collaborate or compete for the purposes of rescue or repopulation; and (5) water as an image of formlessness and fertility.¹¹⁷²

“In ancient mythic geography the cosmos was believed to be a square earth vaulted by a round sky and surrounded by four seas.”¹¹⁷³ In the accounts of the second-century BCE Huainanzi (Huai-nan Tzu), the Black Dragon Gong Gong¹¹⁷⁴ is said to have stirred up “calamities of water” in a war with Zhuan Xu¹¹⁷⁵ to become the chief god.¹¹⁷⁶ The battle left the world in peril from fire and flood. Nü Gua corrected the earth’s limits, dried up the flood, and patched the portion of the sky damaged by Gong Gong when he had knocked down one of its pillars¹¹⁷⁷ in a fit of rage.¹¹⁷⁸ The “five-colored stones” smelted by Nü Gua to repair the sky¹¹⁷⁹ are associated by Lewis with the restoration of the phases of time, the cultivation of health and longevity, and fertility in the fusing of water and fire,¹¹⁸⁰ but to

1169 M. E. Lewis, Flood, p. 126.

1170 M. E. Lewis, Construction, pp. 129-130. See Figure 4-17, p. 233 and Excursus 20: The Circle and the Square, p. 571.

1171 M. E. Lewis, Early, pp. 190-191. See Endnote E-205, p. 755.

1172 M. E. Lewis, Flood, p. 5.

1173 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 46. See Endnote E-206, p. 755.

1174 Alternately, Kung Kung.

1175 Alternately, Chuan Hsu.

1176 A. Birrell, Mythology, pp. 97-98; M. E. Lewis, Flood, pp. 55-60.

1177 See Endnote E-207, p. 755. See also Excursus 55: Mesoamerican Stories of Creation and the Original Transgression, p. 697.

1178 See Endnote E-208, p. 755.

1179 I.e., renew the covenant.

1180 M. E. Lewis, Flood, pp. 111-113.

readers of the Bible perhaps more obviously suggest the rainbow as a token of all these blessings.¹¹⁸¹

A variety of historical factors have conspired to produce the fragmented, truncated, contradictory, “sprawling, disorganized confusion” of Chinese myths as we have them today.¹¹⁸² In considering this literature, it should be remembered that “[n]o ‘China’ as such existed in the ancient world. Cultural unity was only gradually constructed over long centuries.”¹¹⁸³ With these facts in mind, it is not surprising to learn, for example, that the major god T’ai Hao was “mistakenly identified as Fu Xi” in the latter Han era, leading to a confounding of their stories in subsequent texts.¹¹⁸⁴ Moreover, the merged identity of Nü Gua of the flood myth and Nü Gua the wife of Fu Xi may be the result of a conflation of separate traditions about originally distinct characters. Lewis puzzles over the fact that while Fu Xi and Nü Gua “were minor figures in the written tradition, in which they were not identified as a married couple,” the later iconographic tradition, “in which they appear only in tombs, bound them closely together. Indeed they can be identified with certainty only as a couple.”¹¹⁸⁵ Also throwing doubt on the wisdom of identifying the earlier Fu Xi and Nü Gua of legend exclusively with the primordial couple depicted in funerary art is the fact that although the Nü Gua of the later Han dynasty is always portrayed as a woman—indeed, “nü” is a Chinese term for a woman—the deity “appears to have been first recorded as a male, though not as a ruler.”¹¹⁸⁶ Nelson et al. observe that the name “Nü” “could have been [a] clan name since many of these were based on the feminine element,” intriguingly going out on a lexical limb to identify the pre-Han flood hero Nü Gua as the biblical Noah.¹¹⁸⁷ Finally, one might also profitably compare the story of how the smoke from a sacrifice made by Fu Xi and Nü Gua at K’un-lun mountain provided divine justification for their marriage as brother and sister¹¹⁸⁸ with pseudoepigaphal accounts of Cain’s passion for his twin sister and his anger when the rejection of his sacrifice was taken to indicate that God wished her to become Abel’s wife.¹¹⁸⁹

1181 JST Genesis 9:4-25; cf. J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 21 May 1843, p. 305; 10 March 1844, pp. 340-341. See Fletcher-Louis for a discussion of Noah’s “salvific atonement for cosmic rupture” (C. H. T. Fletcher-Louis, Glory, p. 48).

1182 A. Birrell, Mythology, pp. xi-xii. See Endnote E-209, p. 755.

1183 M. Nylan, Writing, p. 4.

1184 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 164, see also pp. 44-45; cf. J. Chamberlain, Chinese Gods, p. 13.

1185 M. E. Lewis, Construction, p. 130. See Endnote E-210, p. 755.

1186 K. G. Stevens, Chinese, p. 30.

1187 E. R. Nelson et al., Chinese, pp. 113-114.

1188 A. Birrell, Mythology, pp. 203-204.

1189 E.g., al-Tabari, Creation, 140-141, 1:310-311; A. al-Tha’labi, Lives, pp. 74-75; E. A. W. Budge, Cave, pp. 69-70; Shelemon, Book of the Bee, 18, p. 26. See also Commentary 5:28-a, p. 376.

FIGURE E50-1. Fu Xi with His Consort Nü Gua, ca. 689

Many images similar to this one have been found in tombs dating back to the second century BCE. Fu Xi and Nü Gua, are measuring the “squareness of the earth” and the “roundness of heaven” with their implements, the square with the plumb bob hanging from it, and the compass.”¹

With their human torsos and serpentine lower bodies “rotating around the invisible vertical axis mundi,”² “Fu Xi and Nü Gua are... hybrids who embody the division of the universe into ...three distinct levels and at the same time demonstrate the links between them. The paired deities move between the three realms, embody two of the three levels of the Han world, and lead upward to the third.”³ Such figures depict “a final stage in the journey” where, at the destination and “in the company of the hosts of heaven,” the individual sloughs off his or her “mortal coil as easily as a snake sheds the skin that he discards.”⁴

This banner found by Stein in central Asia and dated to the late seventh century was, according to Nibley, “found in position suspended from pegs on a north wall... near the body of a man dressed in Sassanian style. ‘Near the head lay also the crown-shaped paper hat’... A mixture of cultures is apparent—the Sutras, Sassanian art and Chinese elements (the Chinese having moved in quite recently—640 CE) and the ritual with which the parties are so much concerned may have been somewhat eclectic, with a foundation of Nestorian Christianity. In the veil in question, what first catches the eye are the signs of the square and the compass, boldly drawn as they are held up in the right and left hands respectively of the lady and her husband.”⁵ To quote the official description: “Silk... perhaps originally white... The bodies rise from a continuous flounce-like short white skirt—an apron, ‘their two inner arms stretched stiffly and horizontally towards each other... the hand of each appearing under the opposite armpit of the other shows that they are embracing... From below issue two intertwined serpentine bodies which coil around each other’⁶—the well-known caduceus of life and death, signifying that all things have their opposites.”⁷ Their shapes also recall the form of the multiply-entwined tree in the center of the paradisiacal garden of K’un-lun.”⁸

Nibley noted that “the garment draped over the coffin and the veil hung on the wall had the same marks; they were placed on the garment as reminders of personal commitment, while on the veil they represent man’s place in the cosmos.”⁹ “The whole design is completely surrounded with diagrams of the constellations[—including the Big Dipper¹⁰], while above the heads of the two figures ‘is the sun disc, white with red spokes,’ surrounded by twelve smaller circles,¹¹ each connected to the next by a straight line to form an unbroken circle except at the very top where it is left open—plainly the circle of the months of the year”¹²—“meaning... the navel of the universe.”¹³ The moon disk appears beneath the entwined bodies, also surrounded by twelve smaller circles. In the late Babylonian period, intertwining serpents represented the union of the sun and moon.”¹⁴

- 1 G. d. Santillana et al., Hamlet’s Mill, 20, p. 272; cf. E. S. Bradshaw, August 9, 1985; J. S. Major, Heaven, p. 27; H. W. Nibley, Prayer Circle, pp. 74-75. See Figure 4-2, p. 217, Excursus 18: Kolob, p. 565, and Excursus 20: The Circle and the Square, p. 571.
- 2 H. W. Nibley, Vestments, p. 115. See Endnote E-196, p. 755.
- 3 M. E. Lewis, Early, p. 128; cf. M. E. Lewis, Construction, p. 126.
- 4 M. Loewe, Ways, p. 59.
- 5 See Endnote E-202, p. 756.
- 6 S. M. A. Stein, Innermost Asia, 2:665-667. For an illustration of the burial room layout, see H. W. Nibley, Sacred, p. 575 Figure 47. See Endnote E-203, p. 756.
- 7 H. W. Nibley, Prayer Circle, pp. 73-74. See, e.g., John 3:14.
- 8 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 233. See Excursus 25: The Tree of Life as the Hidden Throne of God, p. 591.
- 9 H. W. Nibley, Vestments, p. 112.
- 10 Ibid., pp. 111-112; J. E. Talmage, House of the Lord, pp. 83, 108.
- 11 See Endnote E-204, p. 757.
- 12 H. W. Nibley, Prayer Circle, pp. 73-74; cf. R. Whitfield, Textiles, Description of Plate 86.
- 13 H. W. Nibley, Vestments, p. 111.
- 14 J. E. Seach, Ancient Texts 1995, p. 997.

Excursus 51

The Five Lost Things of the Temple

THE five covenantal laws of modern LDS temples¹¹⁹⁰ bring to mind Nibley's discussions of the fact that in "... both Jewish and Christian sources, one often reads of the five things, five tokens, etc.—which are an organic part of the temple: When prophecy ceased... the five things were gone."¹¹⁹¹ Clues reflecting different "remembrances" of these five things are scattered in ancient texts.¹¹⁹²

The most frequently cited source purporting to describe what was lost from the first temple¹¹⁹³ is Numbers Rabbah, which lists "the ark, the candlestick, the fire, the Holy Spirit, and the Cherubim."¹¹⁹⁴ The Babylonian Talmud lists "the true anointing oil..., together with the ark and the manna and the high priestly staff¹¹⁹⁵ it contained."¹¹⁹⁶ Barker comments:

Combining the two lists, we conclude that the remembered difference between the first and the second temples was represented by the oil and the spirit it imparted, by the manna and the high priestly staff—all associated with the high priesthood. The difference also concerned the ark and the cherubim, associated with the throne, and the Menorah, which represented the tree of life in the lost Eden. All except the Menorah had been in the Holy of Holies, and there is reason to believe that the Menorah, too, had originally stood there, and not in the great hall of the temple.¹¹⁹⁷ In John's vision, the Tree of Life and the throne stand together in the heavenly city.¹¹⁹⁸

With this meager evidence alone, we can begin to reconstruct what Josiah banished from Solomon's temple: the anointed ones who received the gift of the Spirit and became the high priests, the cherub throne of the Lord, on which the anointed one sat and was worshipped as the Lord, and Eden with its Tree of Life that gave wisdom and angel status to those who ate its fruit.¹¹⁹⁹ These... were the major elements of Christianity when it developed some six centuries later.¹²⁰⁰

Also probing the significance of the lost furniture "list of the schoolmen," Nibley, like Barker, specifically connects the missing "five things" to lost ordinances of the High Priesthood:¹²⁰¹

According to the Gospel of Philip, the five secret ordinances of the Lord are (1) baptism [washing], (2) chrism (anointing), (3) the eucharist, (4) the ordinance of salvation (sote—unexplained),¹²⁰²

1190 See the overview of Moses 5, p. 342.

1191 H. W. Nibley, Return, p. 54.

1192 See B. M. Wheeler, Mecca, pp. 22-23 for an overview of sources documenting the loss of items from the Jewish temple treasury, and pp. 19-46 for a discussion of the loss and recovery of items from the Islamic Ka'ba. See J. M. Smith, Beginning, for the argument that the designation of Adam as a priest in the Garden of Eden and the evident presence of a kingdom of priests in the New Jerusalem of the book of Revelation presupposes that communion with Deity, rather than sacrificial rituals per se, is the primary function of the priesthood.

1193 See Endnote E-211, p. 755.

1194 H. Freedman et al., Midrash, Numbers 15:10, 6:650-651.

1195 See Endnote E-181, p. 752. See Endnote E-253, p. 768. Regarding the oil, see M. Barker, Holy Anointing.

1196 Horayoth 12a and Hebrews 9:4, cited in M. Barker, Hidden, p. 6.

1197 See Endnote E-212, p. 755.

1198 Revelation 22:1-2.

1199 Proverbs 3:13-18.

1200 M. Barker, Hidden, pp. 6-7. See also M. Barker, Revelation, pp. 120, 205.

1201 H. W. Nibley, Return, p. 54; cf. H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, p. 310. Madsen discusses a sense in which "all of those things missing from the second Jewish temple were present" at the dedication of the Kirtland Temple (T. G. Madsen, Blessings, pp. 39-40).

1202 Irenaeus, criticizing the teachings of the Valentinian teacher Marcus, described the practice of "salvation/redemption" as "a kind of second initiation for those who have 'received perfect knowledge'" (Heresies 1:21:1-5, and (5) the bridal chamber or highest ordinance.¹²⁰³ In a very old Manichaean manuscript... we read, "These five things [ordinances] about which you asked me," says the Lord, addressing the apostles after the resurrection, "appear to the world to be small and foolish things, and yet they are great and honorable or exalted (eutaiat). I am he who will reveal to you its ordinances [mysteries]. These five tokens are the mystery of the first man Adam."¹²⁰⁴

What such Gnostic and Manichaean references reveal more than anything else is not the exact nature of the five items in question, but rather the keenness with which their loss was felt. Describing the misplaced efforts of scholars in focusing almost exclusively on the specific content of Gnostic claims, Nibley writes:

Nearly all studies of Gnosticism in the past have sought the key to its origin and nature in the original sources of various Gnostic doctrines... Opinions differ as widely today as ever. It is as if various parties called upon to describe the nature of a bucket were to submit careful chemical analyses of all substances carried in buckets: there would be a milk school, a water school, a bran school, etc., each defining buckets in terms of a particular content. The important things about the Gnostics is not that they adopted doctrines and practices from Iran or from Alexandria, but that they showed a desperate eagerness to latch on to anything that looked promising no matter where it came from. Irenaeus' survey of those practices and doctrines easily explains this urgency: the Gnostics had caused an immense sensation and gained a huge and growing following by the electrifying announcement that they had the gnosis, revealed knowledge, the wonderful things that the Lord taught to Peter, James, and John after the resurrection.¹²⁰⁵ Having made the claim, they were, so to speak, "on the spot." They had to deliver—they had to come through with something wonderful, supernatural, which at the same time would correspond in some degree to widespread rumors and traditions in the church as to what the gnosis really was.

And so they welcomed any teaching or practice that combined an air of mystery and superior knowledge with a cosmic sweep and scope. For them, God was something beyond the grasp of ordinary Christians; they gave secret lessons and charged money for them; they built up elaborate philosophical systems based on abstract and personified concepts; they practiced ordinary magic and specialized in trick miracles such as changing wine into blood (all this according to Irenaeus¹²⁰⁶); they tried to produce supernatural experiences by the use of drugs and stimulants; they cultivated a large vocabulary of fancy technical words to impress the public; they made a big thing of numerology; they brought forth libraries of faked apocryphal writings to cause a sensation; they parodied celestial marriage and baptism, while teaching that water baptism was not necessary since the spirit is everything; they said it was impossible for the body, since it is made of earth, to participate in salvation; they condemned marriage; they practiced extreme unction; they taught transmigration of souls; they venerated holy images, in particular a portrait of Christ.¹²⁰⁷

A similar drive to decode, by any means available, the clouded mirror of lost temple-related knowledge was manifest among the Manichaeans. In his notes to the Manichaean Kephalaia of the Teacher, Gardner writes that the:

... descent of the First Man from the land of light was a favorite theme. Full of the pathos of loss and estrangement, it is in a very real sense the story of each soul... Once the sacrifice of cited in R. Uro, Bridal Chamber, p. 460).

1203 W. W. Isenberg, Philip, 67:27-30, p. 150; 69:22-37, p. 151. See also S. K. Brown, Nag Hammadi, pp. 260-262, 275-277; H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 527-528; A. Roberts, Anointing, pp. 122ff. See Endnote E-213, p. 756.

1204 See I. Gardner, Kephalaia, 9 (38,5-9), p. 43.

1205 See Endnote E-214, p. 756.

1206 Irenaeus, Heresies, 13:2, p. 334.

1207 H. W. Nibley, Gnostics, pp. 67-68.

the First Man has been achieved, he is saved by the Living Spirit and returns to the kingdom. This establishes and sanctifies the process of Redemption; and, while it occurs at the beginning of the history, it also anticipates the triumphant return at the end of time of the collectivity of the divine, with the First Man at their head, to enter the new aeon. [Having established] the primordial archetypes..., Mani[, the founder of Manichaeism,] immediately relates them to the individual's experience and the practice of the church.¹²⁰⁸

The specific question that prompted the relevant section of the Kephalaia (37,28-42,23) relates to the meaning of “five lessons” (38,5) that were successively bestowed upon the First Man as he took his leave from the gods, the angels, and the Mother of Life during his descent. These five lessons include “a peace and greeting” that conveyed “power... blessing and fortification” (37,29; 38,17), “the right hand” (38,20), the “embrace... as he separates from them, accompanying him out, embracing him with the kiss of affection and love” (38,29), the “salutation with which the First Man made obeisance... bending his knees... entreating them for a power to escort him, as he comes forth” (39,1-2), and the “laying on of hands” by which he was “armed... and made... mighty... and sent... to the battle” (39,3-5).¹²⁰⁹ These “five signs and these five mysteries of the First Man came forth from the aeons of light against the enemy... He was victorious against the enemy by them. Also, when he ascended from the war, he came in to the kingdom of the household of his people by these [same] five mysteries,” performing each of them anew as he was “brought upward out from the struggle” (39,7-11; 39,21). Like the First Man, each disciple will perform these five things in the church, and “the last of these things shall be bequeathed upon them from the right hand of charity” (41,5).¹²¹⁰ In recapitulating the experiences of Adam, these ritual acts also prefigure the actions that Manichaean disciples will perform after death when, “at the time of their coming forth... the angel who holds the victory prize extends to him the right hand. And it draws him out of the abyss of his body, and accepts him in with the kiss and love. That soul shall make obeisance to its redeemer” (41,11; 41,17-21). He “shall be perfected and increased... in the household of the living ones, with the gods and the angels and all the apostles and the chosen. And he receives the crown [...] glory in the life for ever” (41,22-25).¹²¹¹

1208 I. Gardner, Kephalaia, p. 42.

1209 See Endnote E-215, p. 756.

1210 See Figure 5-13, p. 351 and Figure 6-13, p. 472.

1211 I. Gardner, Kephalaia, 9, pp. 43-46; cf. T. M. Compton, Handclasp, pp. 621-622; E. Hennecke et al., Pearl. See Commentary 1:25-c, p. 60, Figure 6-14, p. 473, Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations, Dexiosis, p. 681; the Mandaean Texts and Manichaean Texts sections of the Annotated Bibliography, pp. 870, 884; Figure B-1, p. 872. See Endnote 1-22, p. 79.

Excursus 52

Washing, Anointing, and Clothing Among Early Christians

THE book of Exodus recounts that Aaron was “wash[ed],” “anoint[ed],” and clothed in “holy garments... so that he [might] minister unto [the Lord] in the priest’s office.”¹²¹² Washing, anointing, and clothing ceremonies are also variously described in the records of the early Christian church. In these records, the distinction between baptism and other rites of washing is often unclear, and the order in which various ordinances were said to have been administered is not consistent from one source to another.¹²¹³

Hamblin discusses an early Christian initiation ritual in the purported Secret Gospel of Mark where a young man dressed only in a linen cloth was taught “the mystery of the kingdom of God” by Jesus.¹²¹⁴ Tertullian describes a practice in his day of anointing all newly “baptized” Christians, stating that this is “a practice derived from the old discipline, wherein on entering the priesthood, men were wont to be anointed with oil from a horn, ever since Aaron was anointed by Moses. Whence Aaron is called ‘Christ,’ from the ‘chrism,’ which is the unction.”¹²¹⁵ Likewise the Didascalia, a document from the early third century, describes an anointing for both women deacons and for men: “The bishop is to lay on hands and anoint the head only, ‘as of old priests and kings were anointed in Israel’—presumably on the crown of the head. After this, apparently, the candidates were anointed all over, and then were baptized with a formula or invocation. Instruction followed...”¹²¹⁶ The Gospel of Philip was written by “a community whose rite involves stripping naked, baptism in water [washing] followed by chrism [anointing], and possibly putting on a white garment representing light or enlightenment.”¹²¹⁷

Anointings are performed today by the Roman Catholic Church in the sacrament of “Extreme Unction,” now more often called the “Anointing of the Sick.” The rite includes anointing of “the organs of the five external senses (eyes, ears, nostrils, lips, hands), of the feet, and, for men (where the custom exists and the condition of the patient permits of his being moved), of the loins or reins.” In the Eastern Church, the “parts usually anointed are the forehead, chin, cheeks, hands, nostrils, and breast.”¹²¹⁸

Noting that “temple initiation eventually merged with the baptismal initiation,” Tvedtnes¹²¹⁹ gives the following summary of the five catechetical lectures delivered by the fourth-century bishop St. Cyril to newly-baptized Christians:

In the first lecture (19:10-11), he speaks of the converts being “clothed in the garment of salvation, even Jesus Christ.” And reminds them that “these things were done in the outer chamber. But if God will, when in the succeeding lectures on the Mysteries we have entered into the Holy of Holies, we shall there know the symbolical meaning of the things which are there 1212 Exodus 40:12-13. See Excursus 3: Temple Blessings in the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood, p. 519.

1213 See, e.g., B. D. Spinks, Baptism, p. 22. See Endnote E-216, p. 756.

1214 W. J. Hamblin, Initiation, p. 207. See M. Smith, Secret Gospel, pp. 15-16 for the story of the discovery of the document. See J. Dart, Decoding for subsequent research on the Secret Gospel.

1215 Tertullian, Baptism, 7, p. 672.

1216 B. D. Spinks, Baptism, p. 19.

1217 Ibid., p. 25. For arguments seeking to connect ordinances described in the Gospel of Philip (as well as anointings described in the canonical gospels) to Egyptian ritual, see A. Roberts, Anointing, pp. 86-126.

1218 P. J. Toner, Extreme Unction, p. 716.

1219 J. A. Tvedtnes, Rituals; cf. J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 878-879.

performed.”¹²²⁰ In the second lecture (20:2-4), he reminds his listeners that “those things, which were done by you in the inner chamber, were symbolical. As soon, then, as ye entered, ye put off your tunic; and this was an image of putting off the old man with his deeds. Having stripped yourselves, ye were naked... Then, when ye were stripped, ye were anointed with exorcised oil, from the very hairs of your head to your feet, and were made partakers of the good olive-tree, Jesus Christ... After these things, ye were led to the holy pool of Divine Baptism.”¹²²¹ In the third lecture (21:3-4, 6), he explains that the ointment is symbolically applied to the forehead and “thy other senses; and while the body is anointed with the visible ointment, the soul is sanctified by Holy and life-giving Spirit. And ye were first anointed on the forehead... Then on your ears; that ye might receive the ears which are quick to hear the Divine Mysteries... Then on the nostrils... Afterwards on your breast,” then he notes that the anointing is for the high priest and king, suggesting that the initiate becomes a priest and king.¹²²² In the fourth lecture (22:8), Cyril cites Ecclesiastes 9:8 (“Let thy garments be always white; and let thy head lack no ointment”) and adds, “But now, having put off thy old garments, and put on those which are spiritually white, thou must be continually robed in white: of course we mean not this, that thou art always to wear white raiment; but thou must be clad in the garments that are truly white and shining and spiritual.”¹²²³

Stressing the antiquity of these ordinances, Nibley¹²²⁴ says that:

Bishop Cyril further insists that Moses and Solomon had both been duly baptized in this manner: “After being washed in water, he [Moses] was anointed and called a Christ, because of the anointing which was a type. When Solomon came forth to be king, the High Priest anointed him, after a bath in Gihon. This again was a type. But with us these things are not a type but a reality.”¹²²⁵ From his last remark it is plain that the early Christians actually performed the rites described. The Jews once taught that when Michael and Gabriel lead all the sinners up out of the lower world, “they will wash and anoint them, healing them of their wounds of hell, and clothe them with beautiful pure garments and bring them into the presence of God.”¹²²⁶

1220 Cyril of Jerusalem, Five, p. 146.

1221 Ibid., p. 147.

1222 Ibid., p. 150.

1223 Ibid., p. 152.

1224 H. W. Nibley, What, p. 364.

1225 See Cyril of Jerusalem, Five, 3(21):6, p. 150.

1226 Rabbi Akiba, cited by Samuel Aba Horodezky in H. W. Nibley, What, p. 364. See Nibley’s more complete summary of Cyril’s lectures in H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 515-524. See the overview of Moses 4, p. 234; Commentary 4:21-d, p. 266; Excursus 3: Temple Blessings in the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood, p. 519.

Excursus 53

Comparative Explorations of the Mysteries

The Mysteries of Aaron, Moses, and Melchizedek	663
The Cave of Treasures.....	669
The Eleusinian Mysteries	675
Jewish and Christian Analogues to the Cista Mystica ?	679
Dexiosis	681
A View of Jewish Mysticism in the Cycle of Ezekiel at Dura Europos	687

The Mysteries of Aaron, Moses, and Melchizedek

In a theological sense, a mystery may be defined as “religious truth via divine revelation.”¹²²⁷ “The Romans translated myesis, the act of closing the eyes, with initiatio, from in-itia, ‘going into.’ Kerényi further explains: ‘A festival of entering into the darkness, regardless of what issue and ascent this initiation may lead to: that is what the Mysteria were, in the original sense of the word.’¹²²⁸ “The Greek word was used in [the] Septuagint for ‘secret counsel of God,’ translated in Vulgate as sacramentum.”¹²²⁹

Though in scripture the word “mystery,” when standing alone, is most often used in a general way to signify revealed knowledge and understanding,¹²³⁰ references to the “mysteries of the kingdom” in the Doctrine and Covenants clearly point to specific priesthood ordinances connected with the temple,¹²³¹ which the Prophet Joseph Smith said had been given to the righteous from the time of Adam.¹²³² When Jesus Christ spoke of the “mysteries of the kingdom,”¹²³³ He likewise alluded to these things. Writes Barker:

... Jesus’ parables were more than simple stories. “To you,” he said to his closest disciples, “has been given the secret of the Kingdom of God, but for those outside, everything is in parables.”¹²³⁴ Secrets and mysteries were characteristic of temple tradition, and were the exclusive preserve of the high priesthood, who were permitted to enter the Holy of Holies.¹²³⁵

Despite significant differences, initiation rites in Greco-Roman mystery religions and related traditions in Judaism and early Christianity shared the idea of “three stages of purification, illumination, and mystical unification.”¹²³⁶ As part of these stages, an upward physical movement often paralleled a ritual heavenly ascent from darkness to increasingly greater 1227 D. Harper, Dictionary. Harper further explains that the term is “from Anglo-French misterie (Old French mistere), from Latin mysterium, from Greek mysterion (usually in plural mysteria) ‘secret rite or doctrine’ from mystes ‘one who has been initiated,’ from myein ‘to close, shut,’ perhaps referring to the lips (in secrecy) or to the eyes (only initiates were allowed to see the sacred rites).” See also C. Kerényi, Eleusis, p. 46; M. W. Meyer, Mysteries, pp. 4-5.

1228 J. M. Lundquist, Fundamentals, p. 676.

1229 D. Harper, Dictionary.

1230 See H. B. Lee, Light, July 1961, p. 211; D. A. Bednar, Pray Always, p. 41; cf. Commentary 1:31-d, p. 65 and Excursus 2: Ancient Concepts of Wisdom, p. 516.

1231 D&C 63:23; 84:19-20; 107:18-19.

1232 See Endnote E-217, p. 756.

1233 E.g., Matthew 13:11. See also Pseudo-Clement, Homilies 19:20, p. 336; Clement of Alexandria, Stromata 5:10, pp. 458-460; Basil, Spirit, 66-67, pp. 40-43.

1234 Mark 4:11.

1235 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 2.

1236 H.-J. Klauck, Context, p. 99; cf. W. J. Hamblin et al., Temple, pp. 119, 121; J. Gross, Divinization, p. 271; Elder Orson F. Whitney, cited in L. T. Perry, Gospel, p. 46. See Endnote E-218, p. 757.

light. For example, Greek rites not infrequently required the initiate to sleep in the darkness of an underground room or cave before their period of instruction began, simulating the process of rebirth.¹²³⁷ Likewise, some Christian texts, possibly with Jewish antecedents, have Adam and Eve living in the darkness of a cave after their expulsion from Eden.¹²³⁸

The Greco-Roman mysteries were often presented as a series of separate initiations. For example, the Mysteries of Eleusis were composed of two rites: “the Lesser [Mysteries] were [usually] performed at Agrai in the month of Anthesterion (our February) and served as a preparation for the Greater Mysteries at Eleusis, [always] performed in the month of Boedromion (our September).”¹²³⁹ Similarly, in a discussion of late Second Temple Jewish mysticism, Goodenough summarized Philo’s descriptions of “two successive initiations within a single Mystery,” constituting:

...a “Lesser” Mystery in contrast with a “Greater”.... For general convenience we may distinguish them as the Mystery of Aaron and the Mystery of Moses. The Mystery of Aaron got its symbolism from the great Jerusalem cultus... The Mystery of Moses... led the worshipper above all material association; he died to the flesh, and in becoming reclothed in a spiritual body moved progressively upwards... and at last ideally to God himself...¹²⁴⁰ The objective symbolism of the Higher Mystery was the Holy of Holies with the ark, a level of spiritual experience which was no normal part of even the high-priesthood. Only once a year could the high-priest enter there, and then only when stripped of his distinguishing [multi-colored] robes, clad in simple white, and when so blinded by incense that he could see nothing of the sacred objects within. The Mystery of Aaron was restricted to the symbolism of the Aaronic high-priest... In a striking passage Philo contrasts this type of priest with Moses, who... became the true initiate..., *hierophant*¹²⁴¹ of the rites..., and teacher of divine things.¹²⁴²

Philo taught that the experience of Moses was not meant to be unique; rather, he exemplified a pattern that previously had been followed by Abraham and would continue afterward for all who belonged to true Israel.¹²⁴³ In his role as “teacher of divine rites,” wrote Philo, “[Moses] will impart to those whose ears are purified. He [i.e., the one who receives these rites] then has ever the divine spirit at his side, taking the lead in every journey of righteousness,”¹²⁴⁴ i.e., “to lead one along the ‘whole road,’ the entire way to perfection.”¹²⁴⁵

Goodenough’s work brings out the importance of temple themes in certain strains of Judaism contemporary with Jesus Christ, and in a form that made it very natural for some Jews to accept Christianity when it became known to them.¹²⁴⁶ In fact, he goes so far as to argue that “Christianity cannot be explained apart from the preparation within the form of 1237 D. Ulansey, Mithraic, pp. 35-36; cf. Commentary 3:21-a, p. 180. See also J. M. Lundquist, Fundamentals, pp. 655-659; R. Guénon, Symboles, pp. 209-243; Excursus 3: Temple Blessings in the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood, p. 519. See Endnote E-219, p. 757. The idea is also related to that of the labyrinth, where “only those who are ‘qualified’ arrive at their destination, while others are prevented from entering within, or lose their way” (R. Guénon, Symboles, p. 213).

1238 E. A. W. Budge, Cave, p. 69; S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 1:3:16, p. 5; H. Schwartz, Tree, p. 344. See Commentary 5:4-c, p. 357.

1239 J. M. Lundquist, Fundamentals, p. 677.

1240 See C. T. R. Hayward, Israel, pp. 156-219 regarding Philo’s explanation of the name Israel as meaning “the one who sees God. See Endnote E-220, p. 757.

1241 I. e., priestly revealer.

1242 E. R. Goodenough, Light, pp. 95-96. See Philo, Giants, 54, p. 473.

1243 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 7; cf. pp. 38-47.

1244 Philo, Giants, 54-55, p. 473. See E. R. Goodenough, Introduction to Philo, pp. 147-148.

1245 E. R. Goodenough, Light, p. 214 n. 105. See Endnote E-221, p. 757.

1246 E. R. Goodenough, Light; E. R. Goodenough, Introduction to Philo. See Endnote E-222, p. 760. See also J. M. Bradshaw, Ezekiel Mural.

Judaism that Philo reveals.”¹²⁴⁷ Barker¹²⁴⁸ and Seaich¹²⁴⁹ have since updated Goodenough’s mistaken conclusion that Philo’s distinctive assertions were due to the late influence of Hellenism with the idea that core elements of his teachings (with a less excessive degree of allegorizing and Platonism¹²⁵⁰) were a part of First Temple Judaism, and that Philo was primarily transposing these teachings into the language of the philosophers. Thus, Barker writes: “Philo was presenting the Judaism of his day in Greek terms, but what he was presenting was Judaism and not a vague syncretism. He used Greek terms for something which was essentially Jewish.”¹²⁵¹

Jewish sources allude to things pertaining to the First Temple that were later lost.¹²⁵² Earlier forms of such loss can be traced back to the time of Moses, when the Lord had intended to make the higher ordinances of the holy priesthood available to all of Israel. However, because of their rebellion,¹²⁵³ the higher priesthood, and its associated laws and ordinances, were instead generally withheld from the people.¹²⁵⁴ After that time, the higher priesthood and its ordinances were only given to select individuals.¹²⁵⁵ Relating to the JST Exodus account describing how Moses received a higher law at Sinai than what was eventually given to Israel, Kabbalah scholar Léo Schaya writes:

Now the descent or revelation of the first Tables of the Torah must be distinguished from the second. The Zohar teaches that the first Tables emanated from the Tree of Life; but that Israel, by worshipping the golden calf, “was judged unworthy of benefiting from them.” Therefore, Moses, following the divine command, gave the people other Tables, “which came from the side of the Tree of Good and Evil”.... The first Tables... were the light and doctrine of the Messiah, the outpouring of universal deliverance, the source of eternal life on earth. The second Tables represented the indirect or “fragmented” manifestation of this light; hokhmah, pure and redemptive wisdom, was no longer immediately accessible, but was hidden behind the ‘curtains’ of binah, the cosmic “intelligence” of God.¹²⁵⁶

The fragmentation of light and truth continued through the long periods of Israel’s apostasy, and was particularly evident during the time of Josiah, when sweeping reforms of temple practices were carried out.¹²⁵⁷ In its zeal to eradicate heretical beliefs and practices, the movement also anathematized those who had tried to remain faithful to the older priestly traditions and the religion of the patriarchs, in which Melchizedek and the worship of the El Elyon, the Most High God, had been central.¹²⁵⁸

Memories of what was lost continued to persist among those loyal to the original First Temple traditions,¹²⁵⁹ and it is significant that Philo’s writings were produced in the climate of rivalry of the late Second Temple period “when the various sacerdotal groups and clans 1247 R. S. Eccles, Pilgrimage, p. 41. See also pp. 37, 39; J. Gross, Divinization, p. 79.

1248 E.g., M. Barker, Angel, pp. 114-133; M. Barker, Beyond.

1249 E.g., J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1983, pp. 56-68; J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 848-853.

1250 J. M. G. Barclay, Diaspora, pp. 163-170, 177-178.

1251 M. Barker, Angel, p. 216; cf. M. Barker, Imagery. See Endnote E-223, p. 760.

1252 See Excursus 51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple, p. 658.

1253 Cf. JST Exodus 34:1-2; JST Deuteronomy 10:1-2.

1254 See Endnote E-224, p. 760.

1255 See Endnote E-225, p. 760.

1256 L. Schaya, Meaning, pp. 15-16; cf. p. 41. See also D. C. Matt, Zohar I, Noah 1:63b, pp. 369-370 and 369 n. 198; B. M. Metzger, Fourth Ezra, 14:4-6, p. 553; J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 670 n. 74; p. 757; J. E. Seaich, Mormonism, p. 132; H. Sperling et al., Zohar, 1:26b, pp. 1:101-102; 2:17b, p. 3:55; J. A. Tvedtnes, Laws, pp. 391-396. See Endnote E-226, p. 760.

1257 M. Barker, Josiah.

1258 M. Barker, Older, p. 257. See Endnote E-227, p. 760.

1259 M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek.

were competing for the primacy and authority of their priestly legacy.”¹²⁶⁰ Arguments among these factions also widened the distance between proto-rabbinical Judaism and Jewish converts to Christianity, who differed in their ideas about which writings should be accepted as canonical—texts such as those in the Enoch tradition being popular among the early Christians.¹²⁶¹ Similarities in this regard between the views of Jewish groups aligning themselves with First Temple traditions and those of early Christians were brought out in Goodenough’s study of the Apostolic Constitutions,¹²⁶² a Christian document that, following Bousset, he found to be drawn from a Jewish background.¹²⁶³ Indicating “the milieu in which such a Jewish liturgy might have originated, namely in Hellenistic-Jewish mysticism closely akin to that of Philo,” Goodenough cited two passages within this Jewish liturgical material that refer to Melchizedek. According to Eccles’ summary:¹²⁶⁴

The first is in the context of baptismal instruction which includes the injunction, “let him be taught how God... did glorify the saints in every generation—I mean Seth, and Enos, and Enoch, and Noah, and Abraham and his posterity, and Melchizedek, and Job, and Moses and Joshua, and Caleb, and Phineas the priest, and those that were holy in every generation.”¹²⁶⁵ Of this passage, Goodenough remarks, “The Patriarchs selected as ‘glorified’ are, except Job, precisely those of Philo... [W]hat is here is unmistakably the Judaism of the Mystery.”¹²⁶⁶ Another of the liturgical passages concludes the names of almost exactly the same list of patriarchs, including Melchizedek, and in the same order, except that Abel, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and Aaron are mentioned, and Caleb and Phineas are not.¹²⁶⁷ Most interesting of all is the inclusion of Melchizedek in a patriarch list comprising nearly all of the same names mentioned in the two preceding passages, in which all are described as priests.¹²⁶⁸ Goodenough declares that such a list could come only from the Mystery, by whose Judaism alone these patriarchs were accounted as priests.¹²⁶⁹

Drawing out the implications of Goodenough’s conclusions for an understanding of the Christian “mysteries” described in the book of Hebrews,¹²⁷⁰ Eccles continues:

... it is not unreasonable to suppose that while the author of Hebrews is undoubtedly influenced by the messianic interpretation of Melchizedek found in Psalm 110,¹²⁷¹ he is at the same time influenced by an exegetical tradition of mystical Judaism. Although Philo most fully exemplifies this tradition,¹²⁷² he is not its only spokesman as the liturgical fragments suggest.¹²⁷³

In Hebrews 11, the names of Abel, Noah, and Melchizedek¹²⁷⁴—respectively referred to as the “righteous,”¹²⁷⁵ the “heir of righteousness,” and the “king of righteousness”¹²⁷⁶—are 1260 A. A. Orlov, Heir, p. 46. See also M. Barker, Revelation, pp. 27-34; D. J. Larsen, Non-Levitical Priesthood.

1261 See, e.g., M. Barker, Text.

1262 A. Roberts et al., Apostolic Constitutions.

1263 E. R. Goodenough, Light, pp. 306-358.

1264 R. S. Eccles, Hebrews, p. 214.

1265 A. Roberts et al., Apostolic Constitutions 7:3:39, p. 476. See E. R. Goodenough, Light, p. 327.

1266 E. R. Goodenough, Light, p. 327.

1267 A. Roberts et al., Apostolic Constitutions 8:2:5, p. 482. See E. R. Goodenough, Light, p. 330.

1268 Ibid. See Endnote E-228, p. 761.

1269 E. R. Goodenough, Light, p. 331.

1270 Nibley gives a brief summary of temple teachings in Hebrews (H. W. Nibley, Sacred, pp. 597-599).

1271 See Endnote E-229, p. 761.

1272 See Endnote E-230, p. 763.

1273 R. S. Eccles, Hebrews, pp. 214-215.

1274 See Endnote E-231, p. 763.

1275 Cf. 1st Genesis 14:7, Matthew 23:35, 1 John 3:12; cf. D. C. Allison, Testament, 13:2-3, p. 274; cf. pp. 281-282;

G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 22:7-14, p. 300; E. P. Sanders, Testament of Abraham, 13, 1:889-890; P. M.

Eisenbaum, Hebrews 11, pp. 149-150.

1276 See Endnote E-232, p. 764.

highlighted as part of an argument that “the sacerdotal knowledge and initiations received by Enoch and Noah [and Abel and Melchizedek] from God in ante- and post-diluvian time were more ancient than the disclosures about sacrificial rites and sanctuary received by Moses many centuries later on Mount Sinai.”¹²⁷⁷ This view corresponds to the later claim of the Egyptian Christian Yahya ibn Jarir (d. 1089), who said that the plan of Christian churches “is that of the ancient Temple, which Melchizedek had built [in Jerusalem]¹²⁷⁸ before the Kings [of Israel] came to alter it... [Melchizedek] did not perform the rites of divine worship according to the law of Moses, but exercised his priestly office with other and more excellent [proto-Christian] symbols.”¹²⁷⁹

Note that in “pointing out the superiority of the way of salvation through faith in Christ over the supposed way of salvation through Moses and the earthly rites, the author of Hebrews does not distinguish, as Philo does, between a Lower and a Higher Mystery.”¹²⁸⁰ We should not allow, however, the difference in terminology to mislead us, for in both Philo and Hebrews a similar distinction is being made. In broad strokes, the significant contrast in both cases is between the lesser and the greater rites; between the priesthood of Moses (as described in Hebrews)¹²⁸¹—roughly corresponding to the Lower Mystery of Aaron (as described by Philo)—and the Melchizedek priesthood of Christ (Hebrews)—analogous to the Higher Mystery of Moses (Philo). In both cases, what characterizes the greater rites is that they bring the initiate beyond the veil into the presence of God, and there invest him with an eternal priesthood and kingship in the likeness of the Divine.¹²⁸²

Goodenough saw an explicit connection between the Higher Mystery of Moses and the figure of Melchizedek in the theology of Alexandrian Christianity.¹²⁸³ In a text “drawing almost exclusively upon Philo’s De Vita Mosis” (but also “drawing upon other sources”), Clement of Alexandria gave a description of a group of “Initiates” who had an account of the three names given to Moses: “Joachim, given him by his mother at circumcision; Moses, given him by Pharaoh’s daughter; and Melchi, a name he had in heaven which was given him, apparently by God, after his ascension”¹²⁸⁴—and suggesting the “eternal priesthood of Melchizedek.”¹²⁸⁵ In this sense, Melchizedek (Melchi-zedek = king of righteousness¹²⁸⁶) might be regarded as much a title as a name.¹²⁸⁷ Broadly surveying the evidence, Goodenough concluded that for the group of Jews who shared Philo’s understandings, it was a relatively small “step from this Judaism to the new Christianity.”¹²⁸⁸

Regarding this step, Seach relates:¹²⁸⁹

1277 A. A. Orlov, Heir, pp. 47, 61. See Endnote E-233, p. 764.

1278 See Endnote E-234, p. 764.

1279 W. J. Hamblin et al., Temple, p. 111. See Endnote E-235, p. 764.

1280 R. S. Eccles, Hebrews, p. 220.

1281 See Endnote E-236, p. 765.

1282 See, e.g., Philo, Giants, 54-55, p. 473; Philo, Exodus, 2:29, p. 70; Hebrews 6:18-20. See Endnote E-237, p. 766.

1283 Unfortunately, the passages in Questions from Genesis “which would have described Abraham’s ‘coming to Melchizedek for... spiritual development’ (E. R. Goodenough, Light, p. 151) are presently missing” (E. Seach, Mystery, p. 43). See Endnote E-238, p. 766.

1284 Clement of Alexandria, Stromata, 1:23, p. 335.

1285 E. R. Goodenough, Light, pp. 292-293.

1286 “Melchizedek” is written as two words in Genesis 14, Psalm 110, the Samaritan Pentateuch (S. Lowy, Principles, p. 320), the Targums (J. W. Etheridge, Onkelos, 14), and 11QMelchizedek (F. G. Martinez, Melchizedek, 2:9, p. 140).

1287 M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek.

1288 E. R. Goodenough, Introduction to Philo, p. 159; cf. E. R. Goodenough, Summary, p. 188; E. R. Goodenough, Paul, pp. 165-166. See Endnote E-239, p. 766.

1289 J. E. Seach, Ancient Texts 1983, pp. 56-57. See also M. B. Brown, Gate, pp. 180-204; R. S. Eccles, Hebrews; J. E.

This “Melchizedek Mystery” was also the basis for the Christian Temple Mystery, as described in the NT Epistle to the Hebrews. There we encounter the new Israel—or the Church—wandering again through the cultic wilderness¹²⁹⁰ in search of “rest.”¹²⁹¹ But this time the wanderers are prepared to follow Jesus, their “Joshua,”¹²⁹² permanently into the Promised Land, symbolized by the interior of the Holy of Holies. As we recall, the old Israel had been obliged to wait in front of the veil while the High Priest went inside alone to atone for Israel’s sins.¹²⁹³ The Church, however, was now allowed to pass directly through the veil with her heavenly High Priest,¹²⁹⁴ signifying her attainment of Mt. Zion, the city of God,¹²⁹⁵ or the Celestial Kingdom.

While by no means can they be simply equated, the teachings and revelations of the Prophet Joseph Smith regarding priesthood keys and temple ordinances¹²⁹⁶ parallel the general structure outlined in the writings of Philo and the book of Hebrews. The whole of D&C 84 is especially instructive in this regard. It contrasts the lesser or Aaronic Priesthood, which includes the Levitical priesthood,¹²⁹⁷ with the Holy or greater priesthood, elsewhere designated the Melchizedek Priesthood.¹²⁹⁸ Those who receive the Melchizedek Priesthood, called “the sons of Moses,”¹²⁹⁹ are told that this priesthood “holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God,” and that, without its “ordinances” and “authority,” “the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh; For without this no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live”.¹³⁰⁰

Philo	Hebrews	D&C 84:34	FIGURE E53-1. The Mysteries of Aaron, Moses, and Melchizedek
Lower Mystery of Aaron	Levitical Priesthood	Aaronic Priesthood
Higher Mystery of Moses	Melchizedek Priesthood	Moses
		Abraham
		Melchizedek “Priest and King”	Degrees of the Melchizedek Priesthood “FULNESS”

23 Now this Moses plainly taught to the children of Israel in the wilderness, and sought diligently to sanctify his people that they might behold the face of God;

24 But they hardened their hearts and could not endure his presence; therefore, the Lord in his wrath... swore that they should not enter into his rest while in the wilderness, which rest is the fulness of his glory.

Seach, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 870-875; M. C. Thomas, Hebrews. See Endnote E-240, p. 766.

1290 Hebrews 3:2-4:11; 11:8-10, 13-16; 12:8-24; 13:13-14.

1291 Hebrews 3:11; 4:11.

1292 Hebrews 4:8.

1293 Hebrews 9:7-8.

1294 Hebrews 6:18-20, 10:19-22.

1295 Hebrews 12:22-23.

1296 See, e.g., J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 4 May 1842, p. 237.

1297 D&C 107:1.

1298 D&C 107:1-6. D&C 76:57 makes it clear that the order of Melchizedek was patterned “after the order of Enoch, which was after the order of the Only Begotten Son.” See Endnote E-241, p. 767.

1299 D&C 84:6, 34.

1300 D&C 84:19-22. See Endnote E-242, p. 767. Living the law of consecration is the last qualifying step that prepares one to “see God” (D&C 97:16, 21, Matthew 5:8, 3 Nephi 12:8; cf. D&C 58:18).

25 Therefore, he took Moses out of their midst, and the Holy Priesthood also;

26 And the lesser priesthood continued, which priesthood holdeth the key of the ministering of angels and the preparatory gospel;

27 ...which the Lord in his wrath caused to continue with the house of Aaron among the children of Israel.¹³⁰¹

As we have seen, it is precisely the privilege of “seeing God,”¹³⁰² in likeness of Moses, that characterized true Israel in Philo’s description of the higher mysteries, and the blessing of “entering into God’s rest” that similarly represented the object of labor to which the author of Hebrews exhorted his readers. Moreover, just as in the “celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees,”¹³⁰³ so there are three degrees of temple blessings associated with the Melchizedek priesthood.¹³⁰⁴ Men and women who attain the first degree, associated with the name of Moses,¹³⁰⁵ are privileged to “behold the face of God,”¹³⁰⁶ those who then receive the blessings associated with the name of Abraham receive the patriarchal promise of eternal family relationships and a “continuation of the seed,”¹³⁰⁷ and, finally, those who receive the highest degree, “keeping all the commandments and obeying all the ordinances of the house of the Lord,” obtain the “fulness of the priesthood”¹³⁰⁸ through their becoming “kings and priests [or “queens and priestesses”¹³⁰⁹] of the Most High God” according to the “power of Melchizedek.”¹³¹⁰ Thus, they are “prepared for the enjoyment of a fulness [i.e., the highest degree] of the third heavens.”¹³¹¹

The Cave of Treasures

Several Jewish and early Christian sources associate the creation¹³¹² and the death¹³¹³ of Adam and Eve with temple-related sites, while differing as to their exact location.¹³¹⁴ By way of contrast, other Christian and Muslim traditions imply that Adam lived and was buried in what is called the “Cave of Treasures,”¹³¹⁵ and that only later were his bones brought to the temple mount in Jerusalem for reburial.¹³¹⁶

1301 D&C 84:23-27; cf. JST Exodus 34:1-2, cited above.

1302 See C. T. R. Hayward, Israel, pp. 156-219 regarding Philo’s explanation of the name Israel as meaning “the one who sees God.”

1303 D&C 131:1.

1304 D&C 84:34; cf. Excursus 3: Temple Blessings in the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood, p. 519. See Endnote E-243, p. 767.

1305 See Endnote E-244, p. 768.

1306 D&C 84:23.

1307 D&C 132:22. See Endnote E-245, p. 768.

1308 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 11 June 1843, p. 308; cf. J. Smith, Jr., Words, 11 June 1843, p. 213; A. F. Ehat et al., in J. Smith, Jr., Words, p. 286 n. 25.

1309 See G. M. Leonard, Nauvoo, p. 261; J. Smith, Jr., Record, 28 September 1843, p. 416.

1310 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 27 August 1843, p. 322; cf. D&C 76:56-59. See Endnote E-246, p. 769.

1311 W. Clayton, Diaries, 17 May 1843. For additional discussion of this subject, see M. Barker, Risen; M. Barker, Revelation; M. Barker, Great High Priest: Temple Roots; M. Barker, Temple Theology; M. Barker, Hidden; M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek; M. B. Brown, Gate; R. S. Eccles, Hebrews; E. R. Goodenough, Light; E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism; E. R. Goodenough, Introduction to Philo; W. A. Meeks, Moses; H. W. Nibley, Sacred; H. W. Nibley, What; H. W. Nibley, Message 2005; J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1983; J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995; M. C. Thomas, Hebrews; J. A. Tvedtnes, Laws; D. Winston, Logos. See also Excursus 3: Temple Blessings in the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood, p. 519.

1312 See Endnote E-247, p. 769.

1313 See Endnote E-248, p. 769.

1314 See Endnote E-249, p. 769.

1315 See Endnote E-250, p. 769.

1316 E. A. W. Budge, Cave, p. 35. See Figure 36-1, p. 616.

FIGURE E53-2. Adam and Eve Outside Paradise, Cain and Abel, 12th century

Several ancient traditions record that Adam and Eve were placed on a mountain top following their removal from Eden.¹ Here we see Adam and Eve, clad only in their fig-leaf aprons, “lamenting their Fall on a brown, bare hill.”² Tongues of flame adorn the upper part of the hill and the entrance to the cave,³ suggesting the glory of the Divine Presence—as well as the potential danger for those who approach it unprepared.

Cain and Abel offer their respective grain and animal sacrifices on the other hills portrayed on either side. God is shown consuming the sacrifice of Abel while rejecting that of Cain. At the bottom of the mountain, Cain has words with Abel, leads him out to the field, and then executes his murder.

In the heart of the mountain, an aged Adam and Eve, clad in robes of animal skins, confer within the Cave of Treasures, equated in some sources with the Holy of Holies within the temple.⁴ On the following page of the manuscript is “an image of the Garden of Eden, now empty, its door barred by three angels.”⁵

1 See, e.g., the overview of Moses 3, p. 143 and Figure 3-7, p. 143.

2 A. Eastmond, Narratives, p. 22.

3 S. Nes, Uncreated Light, p. 90. The frontispiece of an Armenian translation of Bartholomew of Maragha’s Treatise on the Work of the Six Days of Creation shows Adam and Eve within a cavelike structure, surrounded by a perimeter of angels, at the top of a beautiful illustration of the layout of Eden (A. Vernay-Nouri, Livres, p. 44).

4 G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, 30(5):3, p. 34E; cf. M. Barker, Christmas, p. 119; S. Ness, Uncreated Light, p. 90.

5 A. Eastmond, Narratives, p. 22.

And when I die, embalm me with myrrh, and cassia,¹³¹⁷ and stakte,¹³¹⁸ and deposit my body in the Cave of Treasures. And whosoever shall be left of your generations in that day, when your going forth from this country, which is round about Paradise, shall take place, shall carry my body with him, and shall take it and deposit it in the center of the earth, for in that place shall Redemption be effected for me and for all my children... At the same hour in which the Son of Man delivered up His soul to His Father on the Cross, did our father Adam deliver up his soul to Him that fashioned him; and he departed from this world.¹³¹⁹

Early Christian traditions about the “Cave of Treasures,” where Adam and Eve purportedly lived after the Fall,¹³²⁰ are of interest because of their rich symbolism. According to these sources, the specially prepared cave became a safeguard for gold, frankincense, and myrrh, retrieved by angels from the Garden of Eden.¹³²¹ In Old Testament times, gold was the symbol of kingship, frankincense the offering of priests, and the oil of myrrh—“known as the ‘dew of resurrection’¹³²²—had anointed the royal high priests after the order of Melchizedek and transformed them into sons of God.”¹³²³ The significance of the treasures—or “tokens” as they are sometimes described¹³²⁴—becomes more clear with the understanding that the 1317 A spice akin to cinnamon.

1318 See Endnote E-251, p. 770.

1319 E. A. W. Budge, Cave, pp. 72, 73. See also A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, p. 200.

1320 E.g., E. A. W. Budge, Cave; S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve.

1321 For a Jewish account of Seth’s cave, containing a “vault of gold” that held a book of knowledge and “precious spices,” see S. Savedow, Rezai, p. 4. See also A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, pp. 178-179.

1322 Compare Psalm 110:3. See Endnote E-229, p. 761.

1323 M. Barker, Christmas, p. 120; cf. pp. 138-139.

1324 See Endnote E-255, p. 771.

FIGURE E53-3. Mount Sinai and the Tabernacle
Tours Pentateuch, ca. 600

SEE COLOR PLATE E53-3.

The Tours Pentateuch (also known as the Ashburnham Pentateuch) is an elaborately illustrated version of the first five books of the Old Testament, probably originating in Rome.¹ Sadly, both the book of Deuteronomy and significant portions of other books are now missing. Originally part of the French national library collection in Tours, the manuscript was stolen in 1842 and sold to the famous book collector, Bertram Ashburnham, in 1847. "Since 1888, it has been housed at the National Library of France in Paris."²

The ostensible subject of this illustration is Moses who, in the top register, "accompanied by Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, approaches the Lord, whose head appears in a cloud at the top of Mount Sinai."³ In the middle scene, "Moses reads the covenant to the people of Israel, who gather to offer sacrifices," though the "items on the altar clearly indicate a Christian Eucharist" rather than those prescribed for Old Testament ritual.⁴ At the bottom, is a Christianized representation of the Tabernacle. "In the center of the tabernacle is a square wooden altar on a stone base. A jewelled crown hangs over an altar covered with a white cloth decorated in gold trim that matches the white curtain above. The altar has a square cavity in the front, indicating it is a reliquary altar."⁵ Note the prominent gammadia (squares) at the corners of the altar cloth, which strongly resembles the depictions of altar cloths in the Ravenna mosaics.⁶

In addition to the strong Christian interpretation given to the Exodus themes in the image, Ri⁷ points out several parallels to the Cave of Treasures story, with the paradisiacal glory of the people of Israel at Sinai⁸ recalling the similar situation of Adam and Eve and the righteous Sethites.⁹ Note especially the cave-like setting of the covenant scene within the holy mountain, the reliquary in the Tabernacle below providing a secure place for the "treasures," and what could be taken as tongues of flame on the top of the mountain ("... when the children of Seth wished to go up [again] to that holy mountain, after they had come down and fallen, the stones of that holy mountain became fire in their sight"¹⁰).

1 D. H. Verkerk, Manuscripts.

2 Ashburnham Pentateuch.

3 D. H. Verkerk, Pentateuch, p. 90. See Exodus 24:9-18.

4 Ibid., p. 90. See Exodus 24:4-8. This eucharistic scene takes place in the presence of presbyters [elders], deacons, "the canonical widows, and subdeacons and deaconesses and readers [and] those who have gifts" (J. Cooper et al., Testament 1:23, p. 70; cf. D. H. Verkerk, Pentateuch, pp. 90-97).

5 D. H. Verkerk, Pentateuch, p. 98.

6 See Endnote E-252, p. 770. See also Excursus 20: The Circle and the Square, p. 571.

7 A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, pp. 254-255. See also pp. 205-206.

8 Exodus 19:6.

9 E. A. W. Budge, Cave, p. 88.

10 Ibid., p. 90.

cave where Adam and Eve were made to dwell was a proto-temple,¹³²⁵ a sort of figurative replacement for the Garden of Eden.¹³²⁶ Though dark and dreary compared to their former surroundings, the cave was a place of instruction, affording the couple protection from the world in their state of vulnerability, and providing privacy and security for the treasures that were kept therein.¹³²⁷ But it was not meant to be mankind's final home. "Through the atonement of Christ" and "by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the gospel,"¹³²⁸ God had prepared a way for Adam and Eve to repent and move forward. Once their period of preparation was over, "the Lord took pity on them, and he sent his angel to take them out of 1325 See A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, pp. 179.

1326 E. A. W. Budge, Cave, p. 35.

1327 D. Wilson, Conflict, pp. 50-51. See also J. M. Lundquist, Fundamentals, pp. 655-659; cf. Moses 1:23, 42; 4:32.

1328 Articles of Faith 1:3.

FIGURE E53-4. The Nativity of Christ, 15th century

SEE COLOR PLATE E53-4.

This Nativity icon recalls the depiction of the three realms of activity in the holy mountains of Adam and Eve outside of Paradise and of Moses at Sinai.¹ It also foreshadows, in the portrayal of the cave and the swaddling clothes, the symbols of Christ's death and burial. Moreover, as Barker notes:² "No place in the inn³ could well have been an allusion... The Firstborn and the Glory, the Logos, was not 'born' in the Holy of Holies⁴ and did not appear in his garments of Glory in Jerusalem.⁵ He was swaddled in a manger elsewhere."

Ouspensky⁶ writes that, according to Gregory Nazianzen, the Nativity of Christ "is not a festival of Creation but a festival of re-Creation"⁷... So all Creation takes part in the event and round the Divine Child, newly born, we see representatives of the whole created world, ...each giving thanks in his own way...

In the cave, ... stand an ox and an ass. The Gospels do not speak of them. Yet in all the pictures of the Nativity of Christ, they are immediately beside the Divine Child. Their place in the very center of the icon points to the importance given by the Church to this detail. It is nothing less than the fulfillment of the prophecy of Isaiah which has the deepest instructive significance: "The ox knows his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel does not know Me, and the people has not regarded Me"⁸...

[I]n the great majority of images of Christ's nativity the Mother of God is lying down, showing in her posture a great lassitude, which should remind those who pray of the undoubtedly human nature of the Babe, 'in order that the incarnation should not be suspected of being an illusion'...

Angels perform a twofold service: they glorify and they bring good tidings. In an icon this is usually expressed by the fact that some of them turn upwards and sing glory to God, others lean downwards, towards men, to whom they bring good tidings. These men are the shepherds. They are shown listening to the angels' message; and often one of them is playing the reed-pipe, thus adding human art—music—to the angels' choir.

On the other side of the cave are the Wise Men, led by the star. They are represented as riding, or, as in our icon, walking with gifts. A long ray from the star points directly to the cave. This ray connects the star with a part of the sphere which goes beyond the limits of the icon—a symbolic representation of the heavenly world. In this way the icon shows that the star is not only a cosmic phenomenon, but also a messenger from the world on high, bringing tidings of the birth of 'the heavenly One upon earth'... It should be noted that the wise men are represented as being of different ages, which emphasizes the fact that revelation is given to men independently of their years and worldly experience.⁹

In a bottom corner of the icon two women are washing the Child. This scene is based on a tradition, which also is transmitted to us by the apocryphal Gospels of pseudo-Matthew and pseudo-James.¹⁰ The two women are the two midwives whom Joseph brought to the Mother of God. This scene from everyday life shows clearly that the Child is like any other new-born babe and is subject to the natural requirements of human nature...

[Joseph] is not part of the central group of the Child and His Mother; he is not the father and is emphatically separated from the group. Before him, under the guise of an old and bent shepherd, stands the Devil tempting him... Tradition, transmitted by the Apocrypha, relates how the Devil tempted Joseph telling him that a virgin birth is not possible, being opposed to the laws of nature... In the person of Joseph the icon discloses not only is personal drama, but the drama of all mankind—the difficulty of accepting that which is 'beyond words or reason'—the Incarnation of God. While in some icons the Mother of God is represented looking at the Babe, 'keeping in her heart'¹¹ sayings about Him, ...[here she] looks at Joseph as it were expressing by this look compassion for his state. In this the icon teaches a tolerant and compassionate attitude towards human unbelief and doubt."

1 See Figure E53-2, p. 670 and Figure E53-3, p. 671.

2 M. Barker, Christmas, p. 78.

3 Luke 2:7.

4 Psalm 110:3.

5 See Psalm 24:7-9; 104:1-2; M. Barker et al., Seeking, p. 157.

6 L. Ouspensky, Icons, pp. 157, 159-160.

7 Gregory Nazianzen, Oration 38, 4, p. 346.

8 Isaiah 1:3. Compare A. Pietersma et al., Septuagint, Habakkuk 3:2, p. 809. See M. Barker, Christmas, pp. 64, 76-77.

9 See also M. Barker, Christmas, p. 117.

10 Pseudo-Matthew, Gospel of Pseudo-Matthew, 13, pp. 374-375; M. Barker, Infancy Gospel of James, 19-20, pp. 158-159.

11 See Luke 2:51.

FIGURE E53-5. The Three Magi, Basilica of St. Apollinare Nuovo, sixth century.
Photo: Val Brinkerhoff.

SEE COLOR PLATE E53-5.

Matthew does not say how many “wise men” (magi) there were, only that they brought three kinds of gifts.¹ In this mosaic from Ravenna, Italy, their caps and dress mark them as Persian philosophers, presumably devotees of Zoroaster, and named Gaspar, Melchior, and Balthassar.

Barker has noted the possibility of wordplay in the phrase describing their origin: “The word miqqedem can mean ‘from ancient times,’ or ‘from the east.’”² Such wordplay, she concludes, may connect the story with the Garden of Eden, which was planted miqqedem,³ the mention by Habakkuk that the Lord, the Holy One was miqqedem,⁴ and the fact that the origin of the Great Shepherd of Israel who would be born in Bethlehem was miqqedem.⁵

Barker summarizes traditions associating the magi with Arabia, noting that the meaning of the word “Arabia” was different anciently—connoting, perhaps, Edom and the capital city of Petra. She notes traditions that “many priests of the first temple had settled in ‘Arabia’ after Josiah’s temple purges.” Such priests would have “held the Enochic view that the second temple was impure.” It is therefore possible that the magi in Matthew’s gospel were priests miqqedem, consistent with their representation in traditional nativity icons as three high priests.⁶ The Conflict of Adam and Eve with Satan mirrors the idea of three magi in its account of three angels (Michael, Gabriel, and Raphael) who brought gold, frankincense, and myrrh to Adam and Eve in the Cave of Treasures.⁷ Thus the depiction of winged magi in the Ethiopian church.⁸

Barker also considers the possibility that the magi were Essenes: “They were a conservative priestly group opposed to the current temple regime in Jerusalem, they studied prophecy and were themselves prophets, they were astronomers, and they were looking for the Messiah [or Messiahs]. They were respected by Herod and would have had easy access to him without fear of his wrath. But if they were Essenes, why did they need to ask him where the king of the Jews had been born? Herod was an Edomite and so did not know the Hebrew prophecies, but the Essenes were noted for their study of prophecy. One answer might be that they knew a different version of the Bethlehem prophecy in Micah 5:2. Instead of ‘from you shall come forth for me one who is to be the ruler in Israel’ the Hebrew text found at Qumran has ‘from you one shall not come forth to be the ruler in Israel,’ I instead of ly...”⁹ Between the monastery of Mar Saba and Bethlehem there is the monastery of Dosi (St. Theodosius), built on the site of an older foundation marking the cave where the magi stayed on their way home from Bethlehem. This suggests they were going to Arabia, rather than to Persia.”¹⁰

1 Matthew 2:1, 11.

2 M. Barker, Christmas, p. 119; Matthew 2:1. See Commentary 3:8-b, p. 160.

3 Moses 3:8. A Syrian manuscript explicitly asserts that they came from beyond the eastern borders of the world, from the place where Adam first lived (cited in A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, p. 71).

4 Habakkuk 1:12. Commentators acknowledge that there is “considerable debate on how to evaluate [the] tradition concerning v. 12, and accordingly, about the wording of the original text” (A. Berlin et al., Jewish, p. 1228 n. 12).

5 Micah 5:2.

6 M. Barker, Christmas, pp. 120-121.

7 S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve 1:29-31, pp. 31-34.

8 M. Barker, Christmas, p. 119.

9 M. Abegg, Jr. et al., Scrolls Bible, 4QXII^f Micah 5:2, p. 451.

10 M. Barker, Christmas, pp. 122-123; cf. pp. 162-163.

the darkness, and he guided and brought them into this bright world.”¹³²⁹ There, in answer to prayer, they continued to receive the additional light and knowledge they would need as they readied themselves and their children for a permanent return to God’s presence.¹³³⁰ Adam’s righteous descendants are said to have lived in the upper regions of the mountain, near the Cave and the Garden, until they were lured down to the plain by Satan.¹³³¹

1329 W. L. Lipscomb, Creation, 46-47, p. 126; cf. W. L. Lipscomb, Creation, 50-51, pp. 265-266; S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 1:4-16, pp. 5-18.

1330 E.g., Moses 5:4-8.

1331 H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the PGP, p. 261; cf. S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 2:17-2:21, pp. 125-140.

FIGURE E53-6. Funerary Chamber Adjoining the Grotto of the Teachings at Eleona

Photo: Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, 1956-

SEE COLOR PLATE E53-6.

Eusebius reports that it was in a grotto on the Mount of Olives where “the Savior of the Universe initiated the members of his guild in the ineffable mysteries.”¹ Additional reports claim that this grotto was also the location where he gave His final instructions to His apostles² before going down to Gethsemane.³

1 Eusebius, Constantine, 3:43:3, p. 138.

2 John 15-17.

3 O. Englebert, Grotto, p. 1.

The “treasures,”¹³³² given to comfort the sorrowing exiles from Eden, were seen as reappearing in the later gifts of the Magi to the Christ child—whose birth arguably also took place in a cave.¹³³³ “The cave is presented as the Holy of Holies”¹³³⁴ and the treasures are often characterized as a revelation to Adam or Seth containing “hidden mysteries.”¹³³⁵ Thus it is easy to see how, in a symbolic sense, the three gifts of the Magi constituted God’s promise of an eventual recovery of what mankind had lost when they were shut out from Paradise,¹³³⁶—including the restoration by Christ of the Melchizedek priesthood and its distinctive ordinances. Writes Barker:

Gold, frankincense, and myrrh were symbolic of the temple; the temple vessels were made of pure gold, the temple incense was compounded with frankincense and was burned to invoke the presence of the Lord,¹³³⁷ and myrrh was the perfumed anointing oil that imparted holiness and could not be used outside the temple...¹³³⁸ There is a related Jewish tradition that Jeremiah took the temple treasures when the Jews were being deported to Babylon, and hid them in a cave at the foot of mount Nebo.¹³³⁹ The location of the cave was then lost, because Jeremiah prophesied: “The place shall be unknown until God gathers his people together again and shows his mercy. And then the Lord will disclose these things, and the glory of the Lord and the cloud will appear...”¹³⁴⁰ Jesus was the new Adam, the new creation, opening the way back to Eden and restoring the true temple.¹³⁴¹

1332 See Endnote E-253, p. 770.

1333 R. E. Brown, Birth, pp. 166, 197, 401; E. A. W. Budge, Cave, pp. 35, 208; Justin Martyr, Trypho, 78, p. 237; Eusebius, Constantine, 3:41-43, pp. 137-138; J. E. Talmage, Jesus the Christ, p. 100 n. 2. At least one source, however, associates the birth with a paradisiacal garden rather than a cave. See Endnote E-254, p. 771.

1334 M. Barker, Christmas, p. 145; cf. pp. 145-147.

1335 A. S-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, pp. 84, 182-183.

1336 E. A. W. Budge, Cave, Introduction, p. 16; cf. p. 69. See also M. Barker, Hidden, p. 25; D. Wilson, Conflict, pp. 46-49.

1337 F. Josephus, Antiquities, 8:4:1, p. 176.

1338 Exodus 30:29.

1339 See B. M. Wheeler, Mecca, pp. 22-23 for an overview of sources documenting the loss of items from the Jewish temple treasury, and pp. 19-46 for a discussion of the loss and recovery of items from the Islamic Ka’ba.

1340 See S. Sandmel et al., 2 Maccabees, 2:7-8, p. 234.

1341 M. Barker, Christmas, pp. 118-119; cf. pp. 2-3, 89-90. See Endnote E-256, p. 771.

According to Eusebius, the Roman Emperor Constantine's mother Helena founded churches at the spot of three "mystic caves" associated with the life of the Savior."¹³⁴² One was located in Bethlehem at the supposed site of Jesus' birth, one in Jerusalem where the Church of the Holy Sepulchre now stands,¹³⁴³ and a third on the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem.¹³⁴⁴

Englebert argues that the site on the Mount of Olives is "the most easily shown to be authentic."¹³⁴⁵ He depicts the spot as a safe resort for the Savior during times of persecution,¹³⁴⁶ there being "no other place in Jerusalem where He could 'lay his head.'"¹³⁴⁷ After telling of a stormy scene that took place in the Temple, St. John writes: 'And they went each to his home, and Jesus to the Mount of Olives.'¹³⁴⁸ It would appear that, for Jesus, 'going home,' meant returning to this grotto, and that it was here that the Pharisee Nicodemus came for the nocturnal meeting he had requested."¹³⁴⁹ At this location, "a stone's throw from the place of His Ascension,"¹³⁵⁰ and from where, in the sight of the Temple, He foretold the ruin of Jerusalem and the end of the world,"¹³⁵¹ early traditions record that Jesus found a place "where He could teach His disciples those things that were beyond the understanding of His usual hearers."¹³⁵² More specifically, Eusebius passed on "a true report... that in that cave the Savior of the Universe initiated the members of his guild in the ineffable mysteries."¹³⁵³ An instance of such an initiation may have occurred on the night Jesus was arrested,¹³⁵⁴ He having perhaps repaired to the grotto to give His final instructions to His apostles¹³⁵⁵ before going down to Gethsemane.¹³⁵⁶ According to the Acts of John, these instructions were concluded with a choral prayer in which "he told us to form a circle, holding one another's hands, and himself stood in the middle."¹³⁵⁷ Initiation into the "ineffable mysteries" was also a prominent theme in accounts of the teachings of Jesus Christ to his apostles during the forty days following his resurrection.¹³⁵⁸

The Eleusinian Mysteries

The original cult at Eleusis probably began in some form during the Mycenaean period (ca. 1500 BCE)¹³⁵⁹ The environs of the original altar, gradually developing into the famous site of the Eleusinian Mysteries, became a center of worship that endured over a period of nearly two thousand years and, in later times, included pilgrims from throughout the ancient world.¹³⁶⁰

¹³⁴² Eusebius, Constantine, 3:43:3, p. 138.

¹³⁴³ See Figure 36-1, p. 616.

¹³⁴⁴ See Endnote E-257, p. 771.

¹³⁴⁵ O. Englebert, Grotto, p. 1.

¹³⁴⁶ Cf. 1 Kings 19:9.

¹³⁴⁷ See Matthew 8:20; Luke 9:58; cf. D&C 109:5; S. Rigdon, Kirtland Temple; J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 6 April 1841, 4:329; B. Young et al., in J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 12 October 1841, 4:436; B. Young, 6 April 1853 - B, pp. 29-31, 33.

¹³⁴⁸ John 7:53-8:1. See also Luke 21:37, 22:39.

¹³⁴⁹ O. Englebert, Grotto, p. 1. See John 3:1-5.

¹³⁵⁰ Acts 1:12.

¹³⁵¹ O. Englebert, Grotto, p. 1. See Matthew 24:1-26:2; cf. Egeria, Travels, 33:2, p. 152; Eusebius, Constantine, p. 294 n. 43-3; E. Hennecke et al., Apocalypse of Peter.

¹³⁵² O. Englebert, Grotto, p. 1; cf. A. Storme, Mont des Oliviers, pp. 24-27.

¹³⁵³ Eusebius, Constantine, 3:43:3, p. 138.

¹³⁵⁴ J. Dart, Decoding, pp. 102-116; W. J. Hamblin, Initiation, p. 207; M. Smith, Secret Gospel, pp. 15-16.

¹³⁵⁵ John 15-17.

¹³⁵⁶ O. Englebert, Grotto, p. 1.

¹³⁵⁷ E. Hennecke et al., Acts of John, 94, p. 227. Consistent with such symbolism, in ibid., 97, p. 232, John, during Jesus' sufferings on the cross, is said to have "fled to the Mount of Olives" where he was visited by the Lord, "who stood in the middle of the cave and gave light to it."

¹³⁵⁸ See Acts 1:1-3, H. W. Nibley, Evangelium; H. W. Nibley, Return, p. 66; cf. 1 John 2:27; Basil, Spirit 66, p. 41.

¹³⁵⁹ M. B. Cosmopoulos, Megaron B, pp. 18-20.

¹³⁶⁰ See Endnote E-259, p. 773.

FIGURE E53-7. Telesterion at Eleusis, ca. 450 BCE.

Photo: Stephen T. Whitlock, 1951-

SEE COLOR PLATE E53-7.

*Blessed of earthbound men is he who has seen these things, but he who dies without fulfilling the holy things, and he who is without a share of them, has no claim ever on such blessings, even when departed down to the moldy darkness.*¹

The Telesterion, the largest and most important building in Eleusis, was so named because here the telos (= purpose, end, goal) was at last attained by the initiates.² The location itself appears to have been sacred, as the Telesterion itself underwent several significant modifications over time while the Anaktoron, the original cult building where the Hiera [= sacred relics] were kept,³ was never demolished or moved. The ruins visible today, dating from about 450 BCE, were designed to hold up to three thousand people.

1 Hymn to Demeter 480-483, cited in M. W. Meyer, Mysteries, p. 30.

2 C. Kerényi, Eleusis, p. 47. See Endnote E-258, p. 772.

3 G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, p. 273.

The Temple of Demeter was located at the end of a sacred, processional way that connected the site to the Acropolis in Athens. Worship of Demeter is one of the earliest Greek traditions, and Homer hints that she was revered long before she was made part of the Pantheon. Her name means “Grain Mother.”¹³⁶¹ In addition to being the goddess of harvest, she also represented youth and fertility. According to Isocrates, her greatest gifts were grain (her Latin name is Ceres, the root of the English word “cereal”) and the Eleusinian Mysteries. The former differentiated man from the animals,¹³⁶² and the latter joined him to the gods.

The Telesterion was the largest and most important building in Eleusis. Its main function was to protect the sacred relics (Hiera) and to provide a place where they could be prominently displayed as part of a sacred drama associated with Demeter and her daughter Kore-Persephone. Sometimes being led to various places at the site and, at other times, sitting on the steps facing a dense forest of forty-two columns supporting the roof, the crowd participated in rites said to consist of legomena (= things recited), deiknymena (= things shown), and dromena (= things performed).¹³⁶³ Meyer writes:

Doubtless such productions were staged by priests or mystai... The actors produced and the audience witnessed a theatrical performance in which the hieroi logoi [= sacred myth] of the mystery religions came to life in liturgical drama. The company of initiates played the roles of mythological characters and sometimes donned masks or costumes in order to reenact the sufferings, sorrows, and joys of the gods and goddesses.¹³⁶⁴

According to Mylonas, “the climax of the rites” was “when the Hierophant standing in front of the Anaktoron and in the midst of a radiant light exhibited the Hiera to the initiates.”¹³⁶⁵ The 1361 Or, less plausibly, “Earth Mother.” See Endnote E-260, p. 773.

1362 Cf. Commentary 4:24-b, p. 271; 4:25-a, p. 272.

1363 See Endnote E-261, p. 773.

1364 M. W. Meyer, Mysteries, pp. 11-12. See Endnote E-262, p. 773.

1365 G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, p. 273. See Endnote E-263, p. 773.

objective of all this was “to prepare for and be allowed direct contact with a divinity”¹³⁶⁶ and later to achieve “a higher ‘status’ after death, that of initiate entitled to a happy afterlife.”¹³⁶⁷

Compton has explored the hypothesis that the interpretation of Greek recognition drama can be informed from the context of mystery rites such as those practiced at Eleusis. His findings and arguments can only be summarized briefly here. He explained the background of his study as follows:¹³⁶⁸

Greek recognition drama [is] a type of play in which a child is separated from its (aristocratic) parents at birth (often it is stolen, or saved by strangers after a shipwreck), and so grows up as a slave or prostitute; but later, when it becomes an adult, it finds or is found by its parents (the recognition scene) through the help of tokens¹³⁶⁹ left with the child, often insignia or jewelry on a necklace, sometimes a ring; sometimes a peculiar scar.¹³⁷⁰ Often the tokens are kept in boxes and are dramatically extracted from the boxes, one by one, in the recognition scene. Critics, I found, have usually looked at recognition drama with contempt; however, all Greek drama is bathed in religion, sometimes very alien, and I wondered if the structure of recognition was not linked with religion in some way; and if the critics were not doing these plays an injustice because of their modern, secular bias and insensitivity to the nuances of ancient Greek religion and ritual. The climaxes of these recognition dramas seemed to have great meaning for the Greek playwrights and audiences; surely the recognition drama with tokens was not just a rickety, mechanistic plot device used as a crutch by playwrights of the stature of Aeschylus and Euripides.¹³⁷¹ As my research progressed, I found that the Greek/Hellenistic mystery cults involved tokens revealed at the high point of the secret rituals. These tokens were always kept in a box/basket called the cista mystica; and as they were brought out, the initiate had to speak certain passwords (also called tokens). After the experience, the initiate enjoyed a new intimacy with the central god or gods of the mystery and was prepared for a better state in the next life.¹³⁷² Not much more was known about this token experience in the mysteries, but I thought the parallel was close enough to warrant a comparison of the climax of the recognition scene, with its crucial tokens, and the climax of the mystery ritual, with its tokens.

Thus supposing, on the other hand, that these parallels might also “come to throw welcome light on the final moments of Orphic or Eleusinian initiation,” Compton attempted an admittedly speculative reconstruction of such an initiation from recognition scenes in Greek drama, setting forth the following aspects, not as final conclusions, but as hypotheses to be explored:¹³⁷³

1. The initiate, seen as child of the god before parting and forgetfulness, learns the possibility of his true heritage (anamnesis, remembrance, re-knowing, recognition) and approaches the god to prove his identity and renew the ancient bond.
2. There was a cista mystica in which were kept the symbola of the god, tokens representing the presence, life and parenthood of the god, rebirth, and the initiate’s former and future bond with the god.
3. A hierophant in charge of the cista mystica acted as the judge of the initiate, the tester; as he challenged the initiate concerning every token, the initiate responded with the correct

1366 F. Graf, Lesser Mysteries, p. 255.

1367 C. Sourvinou-Inwood, Festival, p. 41.

1368 T. M. Compton, Handclasp, pp. 611-612.

1369 See Endnote E-264, p. 774.

1370 See Endnote E-265, p. 774.

1371 See Endnote E-266, p. 774.

1372 See Endnote E-267, p. 774.

1373 T. M. Compton, Token.

response. Perhaps the tokens were shown, as a proof of the initiate's correctness (so the hierophant is the shower of the hiera).

4. Among the tokens may have been necklaces, rings, representations of the cock, the bull, the goat, the serpent (this, of course, is widely attested as a mystery symbolon), the sword (perhaps equivalent to the phallus), the ax, the sickle. Perhaps new clothing was involved. The initiate was certainly crowned, as a symbol of his victory and of his new commonality with the divine. Perhaps a dexiosis [= handclasp] represented preliminary transition to the presence of the god.
5. The initiate may have been seen to be in great danger if he failed to pass the test...
6. Having passed the tests of the tokens and their passwords, the physical and verbal symbola, the initiate would have been admitted to the presence of the god, probably played by a priest; we know that a priest and a priestess represented Dionysus and Demeter in the Eleusinian mysteries, perhaps the same priest who has acted as judge of the tokens...
7. This recognition and unio mystica, culmination of the initiation, was represented by the initiate's ritual embrace with the priest representing the god. The initiate would have been recognized by the god as his former child; the embrace is the sign of acceptance, not necessarily of adoption, but of re-adoption after loss. The love of a maternal or paternal embrace is expressed, divine power is transferred, and the initiate moves across the liminal area between man and god.
8. The conclusion of the rite was marked by an emotional exaltation. The god is overcome with joy to have found his or her long-lost son; the initiate is overcome to have finally found his long-lost, divine parents, to regain his lost, high status, and to know that he can finally be released from his ordeals... This emotional exaltation... is widely documented in the mysteries, especially at Eleusis. Explanations for such heights of emotion at Eleusis have generally been very weak; one of the traditional explanations of the high emotion has been the showing of an ear of corn. While, by my hypothesis, this might have been one of the important symbola shown, it does not seem in itself an adequate explanation for the enormous emotion and comfort produced by the Eleusinian mysteries...
9. ... A hieros gamos [= sacred marriage] may have been connected with the initiation somehow.¹³⁷⁴ Frazerian interpreters may let their imaginations run wild on this aspect of a hypothetical mystery rite (as did some Christian fathers), but Menander and Plautus treat the marriages with sophisticated, even charming delicacy. The sincere love of the marriage partners is emphasized: the estranged Charisius refuses to sleep with the courtesan he has hired to make his wife jealous; Plesidippus tries to buy Palaestra out of prostitution before she is found to be a citizen of Athens.

Summarizing the significance of the Eleusinian Mysteries, Mylonas writes:¹³⁷⁵

Whatever the substance and meaning of the Mysteries was, the fact remains that the cult of Eleusis satisfied the most sincere yearnings and the deepest longings of the human heart. The initiates returned from their pilgrimage to Eleusis full of joy and happiness, with the fear of death diminished and the strengthened hope of a better life in the world of shadows: "Thrice happy are those of mortals, who having seen those rites depart for Hades; for to them alone it is granted to have true life there; to the rest all there is evil," Sophokles cries out exultantly.¹³⁷⁶ And to this Pindar with equal exultation answers: "Happy is he who, having seen these rites goes 1374 Avagianou likewise rejects agricultural and seasonal interpretations of hieros gamos in favor of "its conceptual pattern as a ritual of initiation and a rite of passage" (A. A. Avagianou, Hieros, p. 147).

1375 G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, p. 285.

1376 Sophocles, Tragoediae, 2, Fragmenta, 719, cited in G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, p. 285.

below the hollow earth; for he knows the end of life and he knows its god-sent beginning.”¹³⁷⁷ When we read these and similar statements by the great or nearly great of the ancient world, by dramatists and thinkers,... we cannot help but believe that the Mysteries of Eleusis were not an empty, childish affair devised by shrewd priests to fool the peasant and the ignorant, but a philosophy of life that possessed substance and meaning and imparted a modicum of truth to the yearning human soul. That belief is strengthened when we read in Cicero that Athens has given nothing to the world more excellent or divine than the Eleusinian Mysteries.¹³⁷⁸

FIGURE E53-8. King David Prays Before the Ark, Crusaders Bible, ca. 1250.

“The Ark... is imagined by the medieval illustrator to be something familiar in his world: a portable altar or reliquary.... placed on an altar to consecrate it for the Mass.”¹ In similitude of the tomb of Christ, a recess in the altar, the sepulchrum, was made to hold “three pieces of the sacramental Body of Christ, three grains of incense (in honor of the spices brought by the women and Joseph of Arimathea), and the relics of saints, all wrapped in silk and sealed by the stone.”²

In addition to identifying the sacramental altar and its stone with the Jewish temple ark and the foundation stone within the Holy of Holies of the first temple, Christians transformed the symbolism of the Ark to support a theological position: whereas the Tablets of the Covenant in the original ark represented the former covenant between God and His people, the new “Christian Ark” contained the tokens of Christ’s sacrifice, the new covenant between God and man. In the Coptic Church, this symbolism is carried further: “... while the old ark included Aaron’s rod which budded,³ the new ark symbolizes the Virgin Mary who gave birth to God... Finally, the old ark contained the golden pot of manna,⁴ whereas the new ark holds the true heavenly Manna which gives life everlasting.”⁵

1 G. R. Murphy, Gemstone, pp. 32, 34.

2 Ibid., pp. 182. See Matthew 27:59-60, 66.

3 Hebrews 9:4.

4 Exodus 16:32-34.

5 A. S. Atiya, Encyclopedia, 4:1064-1065, cited in S. Munro-Hay, Quest, p. 29. See John 6:57-58.

Jewish and Christian Analogues to the Cista Mystica?

Clement of Alexandria described a formulaic recital within the Eleusinian Mysteries, implying that initiates performed actions involving tangible tokens kept in a sacred chest: “I have taken from the chest [kiste]; having done the work, I have placed in the basket [kalathos], and from the basket into the chest.”¹³⁷⁹ Those for whom the idea of a chest or basket of sacred relics seems unfamiliar or strange might remember that such a container—the ark—was also part of the First Temple in Judaism.

The frequency with which the ark is mentioned in Exodus 25 and its primacy in the lists of temple furniture, not to mention its symbolic significance with respect to the rites of atonement, making it arguably “the heart of the theology of the Tabernacle and its purpose in Israel and now in the life of the church.”¹³⁸⁰ Most commentators have focused on the ritual function of the ark itself as a symbol of the throne of or presence of God, or on 1377 Pindar, Carmina, Fragmenta, 102, cited in G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, p. 285.

1378 M. T. Cicero, Legibus, 2 (14):36, cited in G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, p. 285.

1379 As cited in M. W. Meyer, Mysteries, p. 18; cf. Clement of Alexandria, Exhortation, 2:21, p. 177. See Endnote E-268, p. 775.

1380 W. C. Kaiser, Jr., Exodus, p. 454. See C. H. T. Fletcher-Louis, Glory, p. 41 for references to arguments that Noah’s ark, “a bulwark against the forces of chaos,” likewise “was designed as a temple.”

FIGURE E53-9. The Paradise Altar of Bamberg, twelfth century

SEE COLOR PLATE E53-9.

Von Eschenbach's Parzival recounts the quest for the Grail, here conceived as a green stone called the lapis exillis.¹ Brought down by angels during the War in Heaven, it showed its "highest power" by displaying the names of those worthy to be its keepers.² This description recalls the white stone with a new name written thereon that is given to each one who enters the celestial kingdom.³

Murphy describes a portable reliquary altar containing a green stone that he identifies with the Grail in Parzival. Of average size for such altars (9.8 inches long x 6.2 inches wide x 5.9 inches high), it features both sacrificial and paradisiacal decorations: "To the left of the green stone is Abel rushing forward toward the altar stone with a lamb in his cloth-covered hands, ready to make his offering. To the right of the altar stone is King Melchizedek hastening toward it with his offering of a round loaf of bread and a chalice of wine in his hands, as he reaches out to place them on the altar. This means that on the missing plaque below the altar stone would have been Abraham with the knife ready to offer his son Isaac on the altar.... The four evangelists... in the four corners of the tabletop point to the story of Christ recorded in the four Gospels." The four trees of Paradise stand near the evangelists.⁴ To the left of Abel on the edge is "a man pouring water. It was the personification of one of the rivers of Paradise, drawn as a man with an oriental cap and, in the classical manner, pouring a stream of blue water out of a large jar onto the earth. [A similar figure is to the right of Melchizedek, and personifications of the other two rivers would have been on the missing top and bottom panels. All these figures] are looking back to the green altar stone that covers the sepulchrum at the center of the altar table, their source, making the Sepulchre of Christ's Passion and Resurrection an analogue to the primal river rising in the middle of the Garden of Paradise."⁵

According to Murphy, Von Eschenbach's version of the Grail story "suggested that the Crusades were unnecessary, unseeing, fratricidal journeys. The Crusaders' quest was to reach and see the stone tomb of their Lord's Resurrection, the Holy Sepulchre, the Grail; but this sacred stone could be found, without the sword, in every altar on which the Eucharist was celebrated: the altar stone."⁶

1 Possibly a corruption of lapis ex coelis or stone from heaven

2 W. von Eschenbach, Parzival, 469-471, pp. 198-199.

3 Revelation 2:17; D&C 130:11. See Endnote 4-9, p. 299.

4 = 1. "pleasant to the sight"; 2. "good for food"; 3. tree of life"; 4. "tree of knowledge of good and evil" (Moses 3:9).

5 G. R. Murphy, Gemstone, pp. 181-184.

6 G. R. Murphy, Gemstone (excerpt), p. 8.

its purported military efficacy in Israel's battles.¹³⁸¹ By way of contrast, few seem to have reflected on what role, if any, the items within the ark may have had as part of temple ritual.

The number of items in the ark of the covenant seems to have been controversial. Hebrews 9:4 speaks of at least three things that were originally kept within it: "the golden pot that had manna,¹³⁸² and Aaron's rod that budded,¹³⁸³ and the tablets of the covenant." According to Koester, certain Jewish traditions linked these items, along with the incense altar, "with worship in heaven and the end times."¹³⁸⁴ However, other exegetes insist that the instructions in Exodus 25:16 specify that only a single item was to be placed therein, i.e., "[the tablets of] the Pact," though admitting that the bracketed words are only "implied."¹³⁸⁵ To bolster 1381 See, e.g., D. N. Freedman et al., Eerdmans, pp. 102-103.

1382 Revelation 2:17 calls this the "hidden manna." Barker cites references associating this with the "bread of angels," and the associated stone with a new name and the high priesthood (M. Barker, Revelation, pp. 105-106).

1383 According to Koester: "Aaron's rod marked God's call to legitimate priesthood, a pattern that Christ follows [see Hebrews 5:4]" (C. R. Koester, Hebrews, p. 402).

1384 Ibid.

1385 W. G. Plaut, Commentary, p. 605 n. 18; cf. N. M. Sarna, Exodus, p. 160 n. 16.

the argument that there was only one item in the ark, commentators often cite 1 Kings 8:9 (“There was nothing in the ark save the two tables of stone...”), though, as Franz Delitzsch points out: “The very terms of this statement seem to imply that other things had been there formerly.”¹³⁸⁶ In its translation of Exodus 25:16, the New English Bible explicitly commits itself to the idea that the original ark was potentially to receive other objects besides the tablets of the Law: “put into the Ark the Tokens that I shall give you,” explaining that the “Tokens of the Covenant included a copy of the Ten Commandments¹³⁸⁷ and relics of the Lord’s acts of salvation.”¹³⁸⁸

In addition to their basic commemorative purpose, could such items have served a role in ancient temple ritual? Consistent with the idea of these objects as “tokens,” Buber and Rosenweig, “seeking to connect ‘edut’ (‘Testimony’) with the sound of mo’ed (‘appointment’), translate these two terms as ‘representation’ and ‘presence.’”¹³⁸⁹ In addition, the close association between the “hidden manna,” the “white stone,” and the “new name” in Revelation 2:17 certainly is no coincidence.¹³⁹⁰ Moreover, the sacred relics believed in Orthodox tradition to have been kept in the proto-temple of the Cave of Treasures by Adam and Eve were described in terms that may have ritual significance. For example, in the Conflict of Adam and Eve with Satan, Adam is depicted, just prior to his death, as having described these “tokens” and their Messianic significance to his son, and then saying, “And now, O Seth, my son, behold I have revealed unto thee hidden mysteries, which God had revealed unto me.”¹³⁹¹

Dexiosis

Closterman describes dexiosis, the handclasp, as “the clearest expression” of family relationships and emotional ties in classical funerary iconography.¹³⁹² Concerning its wider significations, Davies writes: “The themes of meeting and parting were persistently associated with the handshake (especially parting from relatives at death, and reunion with ancestors in the Underworld), but various other themes were also related to it, especially marriage.”¹³⁹³ Compton finds the handclasp:

... a perfect symbolon image on a human, physical level: two separate hands, symbols of the separate identities of their possessors, are joined, and fingers intertwine to make a new unity, complex yet simple. Though its “secular” use—as a widespread token of recognition, friendship, and agreement—is obvious, it was also co-opted by the mystery religions for use as an emblem for many things: love, initiation, arrival, salvation, union with the god, apotheosis.¹³⁹⁴

Though best known as a funerary motif during and after the classical period, a study of its history by Davies cites its earlier use in mythological scenes:¹³⁹⁵

1386 Commentary on the Epistle to the Hebrews, p. 57, cited in Bruce, Hebrews, p. 203. See Excursus 51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple, p. 658. See W. L. Lane, Hebrews 9-13, p. 221 regarding “a tradition presupposed in certain strands of the rabbinic evidence” that “other objects were placed within the ark.”

1387 Exodus 31:18, Deuteronomy 10:1-5.

1388 S. Sandmel et al., New English Bible, p. 82, n. 26:16. See, e.g., Exodus 16:32-34. Likewise, Attridge translates the relevant phrase in Exodus 25:16 as “tokens of the covenant” (H. W. Attridge et al., Hebrews, p. 236).

1389 Cited in E. Fox, Books of Moses, p. 399 n. Exodus 25:16.

1390 Cf. D&C 130:4-11; S. Munro-Hay, Quest, pp. 195-199; Commentary 1:27-b, p. 62; Commentary 3:19-b, p. 177; and the overview of Moses 4, Figure 4-4, p. 219. See Endnote 4-9, p. 299. See Endnote 4-22, p. 304.

1391 S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 2:8, p. 116.

1392 W. E. Closterman, Ideology, p. 635.

1393 G. Davies, Handshake, p. 627; cf. S. D. Ricks, Dexiosis.

1394 T. M. Compton, Handclasp, p. 614.

1395 G. Davies, Handshake, pp. 627-628.

FIGURE E53-10. Plangon Exchanges Handclasps with Her Mother
Photo: Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, 1956-

A display outside the Eleusis sanctuary museum features this marble water vase (= Greek loutrophoros). Such funerary monuments have been found throughout Attica, the region including Athens and Eleusis.

This monument shows a deceased maiden with beautifully plaited hair who is dressed for a journey, presumably taking leave of her seated mother with a handclasp.¹ The name of the maiden, Plangon, is written in Greek characters above her head.

With her left hand, Plangon holds a corner of her mantlet over her face. A standing female behind the seated figure has completely worn away. Clairmont sees the presence of the young servant girl in the company of Plangon as “particularly noteworthy.” Moreover, “contrary to what one might expect,” he informs us, her hair is “not covered by a kerchief.”² She holds a large fan in her lowered right hand, and with her left holds a rectangular box near her shoulder.³

1 C. W. Clairmont, Tombstones, p. 480. See Endnote E-270, p. 775.

2 Ibid.

3 See Endnote E-271, p. 776.

Many such scenes of the late archaic period involve Herakles: he is shown shaking hands with Athena on both black- and red-figure vases, where the scene represents the acceptance of Herakles as an equal by the gods, and, in particular, his comradeship with Athena. Slightly later, as one might expect, the focus switches from Herakles to Theseus. On Early Classical red-figure vases Theseus is represented linking right hands with his father, Poseidon, again presumably to indicate Theseus' exalted status. The first use of the motif in an Underworld setting is on a lekythos (= vase for storing oil) by the Alkimachos Painter in Berlin which depicts Herakles' attempt to rescue Peirithoos from the Underworld. Peirithoos is linked with his would-be rescuer by a right handclasp. Although Herakles may be attempting to haul Peirithoos to his feet, the taking of right hands seems to me to be given an emphasis that is not required by the narrative.¹³⁹⁶ Around 450 BC it seems the motif began to be used in a variety of contexts and could now be applied to ordinary mortals. An important instance occurs on a large krater [= bowl used for mixing wine and water] in New York decorated with a scene set in Hades. Among the various traditional inhabitants are an unnamed couple—a woman, still wearing her grave clothes, shaking hands with a young man. The scene is best interpreted as one of greeting: one of the woman's deceased relatives, or at least one of the inhabitants of Hades, is greeting her as a new arrival.

After a study of dexiosis as a token of recognition in classic culture and in other mystery religions, Compton raised the possibility that the Eleusinian rite may have incorporated a handclasp.¹³⁹⁷ In the context of this assumption, the handclasp, in conjunction with other emblematic actions and sayings, would have served as a powerful symbol of reunion and glorification after death. Confirming the role of the mysteries as a preparation for the afterlife, Cole concluded that the promise of “special treatment after death” held out for 1396 Cf. Figure E53-12, p. 684.

1397 T. M. Compton, Handclasp, p. 615. On the use of the handclasp in Mandaean rites, see Mandaean Texts, p. 872. See Endnote E-273, p. 776.

FIGURE E53-11. Introduction of Adam into Paradise, thirteenth century

... there I put the man whom I had formed.¹ The Hebrew can be read as implying that the bodies of Adam and Eve were created outside the Garden of Eden and only later introduced within it.

This detail, from the Creation cupola in the Church of San Marco in Venice, is described by Jolly as follows: "With his right hand, God pulls Adam through the clearly labeled Porta Paradisi into his lush Garden, and with his left, gestures toward the two prominent trees... God acts as his guide, eagerly leading him forward, their two figures moving parallel to each other."²

1 Moses 3:8.

2 P. H. Jolly, Eve and Adam, p. 25.

initiates "was established by ritual and confirmed after death by recalling or reciting esoteric information that could have been learned only through that ritual experience."¹³⁹⁸ Noting how myth eventually came to represent the hoped-for experience of ordinary individuals after death, Compton writes:¹³⁹⁹

In the Hellenistic period, Herakles became allegorized as the soul; his myth served to illustrate the trials and victories of the soul.¹⁴⁰⁰ In the Igel monument, a remarkable piece of funerary art with Mithraic motifs, Herakles as soul is combined with the dexios motif; the handclasp is used to draw Herakles into heaven. The hero is in the quadriga (chariot), ascending into heaven; Athena emerges from a cloud and extends to him "a hand of succor,"¹⁴⁰¹ which Herakles grasps. This apotheosis scene "portrays the Heroisation of the personage laid in the tomb, or, in a more general fashion, the destiny of the soul, which, with the help of heavenly powers, reaches the abode of the blessed," according to Cumont.¹⁴⁰²

The handclasp also appears in early and medieval Christian art.¹⁴⁰³ Common to many of the settings is the theme of transition from one state or place to another. For example, a scene portrayed at the Church of San Marco in Venice shows God taking Adam by the wrist to bring him through the door of Paradise and to introduce him into the Garden of Eden.¹⁴⁰⁴ Another scene shows God taking Adam by the wrist as he and Eve received the commandment not to partake of the Tree of Knowledge.¹⁴⁰⁵ Likewise, Abraham is shown being taken by the wrist by the angel Yahoel as he ascends to heaven.¹⁴⁰⁶

The same motif is frequently depicted at the moment of resurrection, when Jesus takes waiting souls by the hand or wrist to bring them out of the dominion of death.¹⁴⁰⁷ In a 1398 S. G. Cole, Landscapes, pp. 200-201. This promise was also conditioned on the initiate meeting "standards for social behavior" (ibid., p. 199).

1399 T. M. Compton, Handclasp, p. 617.

1400 E. S. Strong, Apotheosis, p. 201.

1401 F. V. M. Cumont, Symbolisme, p. 174; cf. E. S. Strong, Apotheosis, pp. 222-232.

1402 F. V. M. Cumont, Symbolisme, p. 174. See Endnote E-272, p. 776.

1403 For an example from the Islamic tradition, see Figure 1-8, p. 39.

1404 See Figure E53-11, p. 683.

1405 See Figure 4-10, p. 228.

1406 See Figure E53-13, p. 684; cf. P. Alexander, 3 Enoch, 1:4, p. 256; 48A:1, p. 300; G. W. E. Nickelsburg et al., 1 Enoch, 71:3, p. 93.

1407 See Figure 6-12, p. 471. This recalls an account of Jesus' raising of Lazarus (M. Smith, Secret Gospel, p. 15).

FIGURE E53-12. The Angel Yahoel Takes Abraham by the Hand and Stands Him on His Feet, ca. 1300
FIGURE E53-13. Abraham and the Angel Yahoel Ascend on the Wings of Birds, ca. 1300. Photos: Stephen T. Whitlock.

SEE COLOR PLATE E53-13.

*I... fell down upon the earth, for there was no longer strength in me to stand... And the angel... took me by my right hand and stood me on my feet.*¹ The visionary experiences described in the Apocalypse of Abraham and Moses 1 are replete with striking parallels.² After their divine encounters, both Abraham and Moses “fell unto the earth” and were bereft of their “natural strength.”³ Then, in this weakened condition, they were each immediately tested by Satan. In the case of Abraham, we are told that an angel stood him on his feet prior to his encounter with Satan. This was accomplished through taking him by the right hand,⁴ as shown in this illustration from a fourteenth-century Slavonic manuscript.⁵ Nibley cites a parallel with Abraham 1:18 (“Behold I will lead thee by my hand”), and sees a corresponding theme in the book of Abraham when Abraham is delivered from the altar: “The expressions ‘loose the bands of Hades’ and ‘him who stareth at the dead’ signify the nature of the deliverance and are both typically Egyptian, the latter of which Box finds quite bizarre. Facsimile 1 [of the book of Abraham] is a very proper illustration to the story.”⁶

The second image relates to the statement that “Moses was caught up into an exceedingly high mountain.”⁷ A close parallel to Moses’ experience is found in 1 Nephi 11:1 where Nephi was “caught away in the Spirit of the Lord, yea, into an exceedingly high mountain, which [he] never had before seen.”⁸ Nephi later said that “upon the wings of his Spirit hath my body been carried away upon exceedingly high mountains,”⁹ just as the Apocalypse of Abraham records that Abraham and his angel guide were raised up to heaven on the wings of a turtledove and a pigeon.¹⁰ The angel Yahoel (Metatron or Enoch)¹¹ gestures upwards to heaven. He grasps Abraham firmly by the wrist as they ascend.¹²

1 A. Kulik, Retroverting, Apocalypse of Abraham 10:1-4, p. 17.

2 See Excursus 54: Table of Parallels with the Apocalypse of Abraham, p. 696 See also Figure 1-8, p. 38,

3 Moses 1:9-10.

4 Cf. the description of the rescue of Perithoos by Herakles, Excursus 53, p. 683.

5 P. P. Novickij, Otkrovenie Avraama.

6 H. W. Nibley, Abraham 2000, p. 16, see also p. 42.

7 Moses 1:1.

8 Cf. Exodus 19:3; Ezekiel 40:2; JST Matthew 4:8; Revelation 21:10; Moses 7:2; . B. Reynolds, Kingship, pp. 172-177.

9 2 Nephi 4:25.

10 R. Rubinkiewicz, Apocalypse of Abraham, 12:10, p. 695. See H. W. Nibley, Abraham 2000, p. 18; cf. Genesis 15:9ff.

11 The identification of Yahoel in Nibley’s article (and the illustration itself) reference G. Davidson, Angels, pp. 316-317.

12 Cf. H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, p. 278; cf. E. Isaac, 1 Enoch, 96:2, p. 76; J. Priest, Moses, 10:8-10, p. 932; Deuteronomy 32:11; Isaiah 40:31; Revelation 4:7, 8:13, 12:14.

notable depiction of this event discussed by Isar, “the center of the image coincides with the stigmata of Christ,¹⁴⁰⁸ which marks the meeting point between Christ’s hand and Adam’s hand. The diagonals formed by Christ’s hand and Adam’s stretched hand, the vertical line of the cross, which Christ holds, describe an invisible, but unmistakable sacred pattern, 1408 = the nail wounds of the Savior’s crucifixion.

Chi-Rho (XP),¹⁴⁰⁹ the first letters in the Greek name of Christ.¹⁴¹⁰ At the time of their glorification, the saints are portrayed similarly. For instance, Brown cites examples of sacred handclasps in portrayals of “a monk... being admitted through the gate of Paradise by the apostle Peter,” and “a resurrected Christian in a white robe being admitted through the gate of the New Jerusalem.”¹⁴¹¹ Stairways in some of these portrayals mark the scene as an ascension.¹⁴¹²

The handclasp was also used by Christians as part of ritual and prayer. For example, Brown describes a ritual where initiates simultaneously performed their renunciation of Satan and made a covenant “by clasping the left hand of the officiating priest. Then another covenant was made—this time to commit oneself to Jesus Christ—by a clasping of the right hand with the officiator.”¹⁴¹³ Sacred handclasps were also used in early Christian prayer circles. For example, according to the Acts of John, Jesus concluded His final instructions to the apostles with a choral prayer in which “he told [them] to form a circle, holding one another’s hands, and himself stood in the middle.”¹⁴¹⁴ In the account, the Lord specifically terms this ritual a “mystery,”¹⁴¹⁵ which, according to Isar, “might reflect some liturgical practices in use in the community of the Acts.”¹⁴¹⁶

Accounts of Christian prayer circles recall descriptions of Greek rituals performed in a sanctuary, with “the dancers standing in a circle...facing a center occupied by the vertical axis of the altar itself. By facing the central point on the earth occupied by the god’s altar, the chorus was thought to face the god himself. The altar was a means of establishing a connection between a particular point of earth and the divine”¹⁴¹⁷ while the participants expressed their oneness “in the gesture of solidarity by holding hands,”¹⁴¹⁸ or, to be more specific, “placing the ‘hand over the wrist.’”¹⁴¹⁹ Further describing the significance of this ritual, Isar argues that the verb associated with the Greek term choros:

had a specific meaning of ritual movement ascribed by Pindar specifically and exclusively to divine groups... The specificity of the antique concept stands in its rhetorical compound, combining speech, singing and bodily movement.¹⁴²⁰ Choros refers to a collective coordinated movement in orderly, circular disposition; it can define the place where one dances; the choir; a round dance; the group of personages; the song performed by the choir; the sense of order...

Choros was thought to be... an ordering force that could express in the highest sense the capacity of human creativity to reflect the divine order, and to bring it into the world.¹⁴²¹

1409 N. Isar, Dance of Adam, pp. 180-181.

1410 Isar notes that “Christ’s gesture... is strikingly similar to certain ritual gestures that can be identified in ancient Greek ritual performances” such as “the bond created by the nuptial ritual” and “the choral dance... of the Charities” as described in Homer’s Hymn to Apollo (ibid., p. 182). See also I. Mikael, son of Bakhayla, Godhead, p. 136; N. Isar, Dance of Adam, pp. 180-181; M. Lidzbarski, Ginza, GL 1:1, p. 429, cited in H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, p. 300; cf. Isaiah 49:16, Zechariah 13:6, Cyril of Jerusalem, Five, 2:5, p. 148). See Commentary 5:4-a, p. 355; 5:5-b, p. 359; Excursus 37: Traditions About the Role of Abel, p. 617.

1411 See a figure of John being thus admitted in the tenth century Bamberg Apocalypse (Das Neue Jerusalem).

1412 M. B. Brown, 9 August 2008.

1413 M. B. Brown, 9 August 2008.

1414 E. Hennecke et al., Acts of John, 94, p. 227. See discussion in N. Isar, Dance of Adam, pp. 193-194.

1415 E. Hennecke et al., Acts of John, 101, p. 234.

1416 N. Isar, Dance of Adam, p. 194.

1417 Ibid., pp. 185-186. The idea of an upward movement of the circle, essentially its transformation into a helix, is conveyed in the remarkable Anastasis of the Barberini Psalter: Cod. Gr. 372, fol. 181, where the “disposition of bodies is unfolding in dynamic spiral, an open circle which binds together Christ, Adam, Eve, and Abel. This movement ascends towards Christ and rests on His hieratic body, the center of a chiasmus. Christ’s gesture, grasping Adam’s hand, is emphatic” (ibid., p. 195).

1418 Ibid., p. 186.

1419 Ibid., p. 187.

1420 Pindar described these movements as “expressive figures” such as “holds” and “poses” (cited in ibid., p. 185).

1421 Ibid., p. 183.

FIGURE E53-14. Detail from the Robail-Navier Family Sepulchre, Cimetière de la Madeleine, Amiens, France, ca. 1832

Photo: Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, 1956-

Clasped hands have been a popular symbol of the marriage relationship since ancient times.¹ The earliest inscription on this family monument records that both Jean-Baptiste Robail, age 70, and his wife, Rose Duclocher, age 72, passed away on the same day, July 16, 1832. Though stained with age, the sleeves and hands remain remarkably lifelike. As a gesture now captured in perpetuity, the smooth fingers of the beloved wife rest calmly within the enclosing grasp of her husband.

1 S. D. Ricks, Dexiosis.

Mandaean¹⁴²² and Manichaean¹⁴²³ texts record the use of the handclasp in the context of rituals anticipating the manner of the soul's ascent after death. In addition, Drower compares the Mandaean rite of kushta to practices among the Parsis and Iraqi Jews¹⁴²⁴ and in Eastern Christian churches where the "handclasp accompanied by an embrace or kiss" is given by the priest and then passed on to the rest of the congregation.¹⁴²⁵ She further concludes that the ritual use of the handclasp is of "undoubted antiquity," citing the "hand-ceremony" at Mesopotamian Akitu festival of the New Year that goes back to the third millennium BCE:

This yearly placing of the king's hand into the hand of the god was probably a kind of pact: the king swore fealty to his divinity; the god engaged himself to protect king and people. The handclasp appears on ancient Persian coins as an emblem of peace and alliance.¹⁴²⁶

In an Old Testament context, Brown notes a depiction of a handclasp in a scene involving "the Israelite king standing at the veiled door of the Jerusalem Temple and being admitted by the Lord into an assembly."¹⁴²⁷ He also notes important allusions in the Psalms:

It is curious that in the King James translation of the Psalm 89 coronation text it is said that the Lord's right hand will be established with the king.¹⁴²⁸ ... Eaton renders this passage with these words (with the Lord speaking): "My hand shall hold him fast."¹⁴²⁹ This suggests a handclasp between the Heavenly King and His earthly vice-regent. Indeed, [Kraus and Anderson] state outright that a right-handed clasp between God and the king belonged to the Israelite enthronement ritual.¹⁴³⁰

At least one traditional Jewish exegete, ibn Ezra, recognized "similar mechanisms of human ascent" in Psalm 73:23-24: "for I am always with You; you grasped my right hand [and] led me into your [council], and afterwards granted me glory."¹⁴³¹

1422 See Figure B-1, p. 872.

1423 See Bibliography: Manichaean Texts, p. 884. See also Excursus 51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple, p. 658.

1424 E. S. Drower, Water, pp. 103-105.

1425 Ibid., pp. 106-110.

1426 Ibid., p. 102 n. 1.

1427 See Psalm 27; cf. D&C 76:67.

1428 Psalm 89:13, 21.

1429 J. Eaton, Psalms, p. 317.

1430 See A. A. Anderson, Psalms, p. 535; H-J Kraus, Psalms, p. 173.

1431 Cited in J. C. Reeves, Heralds, p. 123; cf. p. 137 n. 80.

*A View of Jewish Mysticism in the Cycle of Ezekiel at Dura Europos*¹⁴³²

One of the most stunning archaeological finds of the last century was the accidental discovery in 1920 of the ruins of Dura Europos,¹⁴³³ “a frontier town of very mixed population and traditions”¹⁴³⁴ located near the Euphrates river in what is now Syria. This Hellenistic city had been buried under mud and sand following a Sassanian siege in 256-257, which accounted for its unusual state of preservation.¹⁴³⁵ Among the buildings uncovered was a small Jewish synagogue with elaborately frescoed walls and a layout that, in Goodenough’s view, suggested a group with a “mystical” orientation.¹⁴³⁶ Neusner sees such a development at Dura as no surprise, given that in this region between ca. 220-250 “Babylonian Manichaeism, Rabbinic Judaism, and Mazdeism were all taking form.” Moreover, this period saw a “great expansion of cults within the Iranian idiom, in particular Mithraism,” which became “the single most popular religion on the Roman side of the frontier.”¹⁴³⁷ It should be remembered, however, that detailed descriptions of corresponding ideas relating to “Jewish mysteries,” not dependent on later syncretistic tendencies, were already to be found two centuries earlier in the writings of Philo—writings whose core elements (with a less excessive degree of allegorizing and Platonism¹⁴³⁸) go back at least to the First Temple period and arguably relate to its distinctive rites and theology.¹⁴³⁹

Goodenough’s studies of Philo and of Jewish mysticism were highly controversial at the time they were published, and have been largely forgotten in the more than forty years since his passing.¹⁴⁴⁰ Yet, more than two decades after his death, as part of a chapter that reviewed the arguments of his critics, Neusner could still speak of him as the “greatest historian of religion America has ever produced” and the “one towering figure” in the study of Judaism through art: “Goodenough provided for the artistic remains of the synagogue a complete and encompassing interpretation, and, to the present time, his view remains the principal theory by which the art of the synagogue is approached.”¹⁴⁴¹ As recently as 2007, specifically summarizing Goodenough’s interpretation of the Dura synagogue, Goldenberg noted the continued importance of his views, observing that “other leaders in the field have roundly disputed his proposals, but Goodenough’s arguments were weighty and his evidence was impressive. The matter remains unresolved.”¹⁴⁴²

1432 Further discussion of the mural of Ezekiel and other discoveries at Dura Europos can be found in J. M. Bradshaw, Ezekiel Mural. Frequently citing Goodenough, Nibley has also commented in several places about specific murals and themes (H. W. Nibley, Tenting, p. 74 n. 15; H. W. Nibley, Since, pp. 189-192, 238-239, 283, 289; H. W. Nibley, Rediscovery, p. 239; H. W. Nibley, Vestments, p. 110; H. W. Nibley, Atonement, pp. 564-566; H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the Book of Mormon, 1:135, 137, 152; 2:228-230; H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 489-490).

1433 = Fort Europos. The frequently-used hyphenated form of Dura Europos is a modern invention (R. M. Jensen, Dura Europos, p. 158).

1434 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:197.

1435 For an engaging account of the Dura excavations, see C. Hopkins, Discovery. Hopkins attended all the major discoveries at the site and was in charge when the discovery of the synagogue was made. For a presentation of the Dura synagogue in the context of findings from the remains of other diaspora synagogues, see L. I. Levine, Synagogue, pp. 250-309.

1436 See Endnote E-274, p. 776.

1437 J. Neusner, Foreword, p. xxix.

1438 J. M. G. Barclay, Diaspora, pp. 163-170, 177-178.

1439 E.g., M. Barker, Angel, pp. 114-133; J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1983, pp. 56-68; J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 848-853.

1440 Sandmel outlines some of the reasons why Goodenough’s work did not at first receive the attention it deserved. First, “the high importance of what he was doing never impressed itself on those who looked at only the first two or three volumes... Moreover, ...his books began to appear at about the same time that the Dead Sea Scrolls were exciting the biblical world, and possibly his work was a casualty of the mania that then developed over the Scrolls” (S. Sandmel, Appreciation, p. 13). Finally, as “[c]arefully as he wrote and ardently as he polished what he wrote, he seemed to be without the sense of needing to carry a reader along with him... He overestimated scholars, for he assessed them by reference to himself” (ibid., p. 14).

1441 J. Neusner, Synagogue, pp. 31-32. See also J. Neusner, Foreword; L. I. Levine, Judaism, p. 8.

1442 R. Goldenberg, Origins, p. 187.

FIGURE E53-15. The Cycle of Ezekiel from the Synagogue at Dura Europos, ca. 244

SEE COLOR PLATE E53-15.

*And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live?*¹ Running the entire twenty-five foot length of the north wall is a depiction of a story cycle of the Prophet Ezekiel, the “largest single painting in the synagogue... To have been given so much space it must have had great importance in the mind of the person who designed the decoration.”² The Ezekiel fresco is structured into three main panels, with stages of ascent and descent being indicated by differences in the background color.

1 Ezekiel 37:3.

2 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:179.

Goodenough's assessment of his own work still remains largely true: “Alternative interpretations have been suggested for details, but none attempted for the evidence as a whole.”¹⁴⁴³

The synagogue at Dura Europos constitutes the most important extant evidence that the Jewish mysteries described in Philo's writings may have had a tangible expression in ritual. Describing the sanctuary where the worshipers sat, Goodenough writes: “The whole room... was so painted that those worshiping in it were enclosed in a grape arbor” and “out of the Torah shrine beneath the painting grew the Tree of life and salvation which led to the supernal throne.”¹⁴⁴⁴ While the throne scene in the Tree of Life emphasizes the divine reward of Israel as a people, the theme of individual exaltation is seen by Goodenough as being carried forward in the four portraits that surround the Tree of Life panel and in the Ezekiel mural.¹⁴⁴⁵ Hinting at the possibility of an actual ritual for members of the Dura Synagogue, he writes: “In [a] side room were benches and decorations that mark the room as probably one of cult, perhaps an inner room, where special rites were celebrated by a select company... So far as structure goes, it might have been the room for people especially ‘initiated’ in some way.”¹⁴⁴⁶ With these and other features in mind, Goodenough concludes that the “Dura synagogue painting as a whole may well have been the product of Jews dedicated to some form of Merkabah mysticism, since the high point of the reredos¹⁴⁴⁷ shows the throne with the tribes of Israel about it, and the Closed Temple scene with its seven walls may reflect ascent.”¹⁴⁴⁸

Running the entire twenty-five foot length of the north wall is a depiction of a story cycle of the Prophet Ezekiel, the “largest single painting in the synagogue... To have been given so much space it must have had great importance in the mind of the person who designed 1443 E. R. Goodenough, Garments, pp. 222-223.

1444 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:199, 200.

1445 Ibid., 9:104.

1446 Ibid., 10:198; cf. E. R. Goodenough, Summary, pp. 190-197. See Endnote E-275, p. 778.

1447 I.e., the tall panel above the Torah niche in the Dura synagogue, from arere (behind) + dos (back), from Latin dorsum.

1448 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:193.

the decoration.”¹⁴⁴⁹ Kraeling also considers the work as “the greatest and most important composition” among all the murals.¹⁴⁵⁰

In Goodenough’s interpretation, the Ezekiel fresco is structured into three main panels, with stages of ascent and descent being indicated by differences in the background color: “The total design... emphasizes most conspicuously that the first three figures of Ezekiel and the broken mountain have a light background, as does the final scene of his arrest and execution, but that between these a central section stands sharply set off by its dark background. The contrast seems to tell us that the ordinary Ezekiel existed in the realm of death at each end,¹⁴⁵¹ a realm sharply different from that of heaven-given life where figures in the white dress of sanctity can and do come into their full exaltation.”¹⁴⁵²

The three types of clothing Ezekiel wears can be taken as representing three different degrees of existence, just as initiates following in his footsteps would be “identified at each stage with the spiritual existence of that stage.”¹⁴⁵³ The progression recalls accounts of rites corresponding to the threefold division of the Jerusalem temple¹⁴⁵⁴ as interpreted in the writings of Gnostic Christians,¹⁴⁵⁵ and the changing of the high priest from colored to white garb before entering the Holy of Holies.¹⁴⁵⁶

A prominent feature of the first two panels of the fresco is a series of five divine right hands, “the first clenched in the hair of the prophet,” and the remaining four that are open and extended toward him.¹⁴⁵⁷ This, of course, recalls the passage in Deuteronomy where the Lord was praised for saving Israel “with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm,”¹⁴⁵⁸ a motif frequently exemplified in other murals of Dura.¹⁴⁵⁹ Sometimes, additionally, the hand of God serves as a visual representation of the divine voice speaking from the heavens.¹⁴⁶⁰ Here, however, and in at least one other Dura panel, the “hand from heaven” is specifically associated with the “revivication of the dead.”¹⁴⁶¹ In a formula repeated throughout the rabbinical literature, the “Key of the Revival of the Dead” is mentioned as one that “the Holy one... has retained in His own hands”¹⁴⁶²—though this mural clearly shows that it can be delegated to others. As in Ezekiel accounts found elsewhere, the hand is extended to him “as if to give a command” and also “to give strength to perform his task”¹⁴⁶³—here evidently to bring the dead to a full measure of eternal life.

The two extended hands in the first panel are portrayed with “palms forward. In contrast over the scenes at the right the [two] divine hands are turned, still right hands, but with the 1449 Ibid., 10:179.

1450 C. R. Kraeling, Synagogue, p. 202.

1451 Gross notes Philo’s view that an ascent “does not prevent the initiates... ‘when they return from the divine things,’ from ‘becoming human again’ (Dreams, 2:233). But the day will come in which death will permanently confirm them in the state of bliss that they had known in ecstasy” (J. Gross, Divinization, p. 78).

1452 Ibid., 10:195-196.

1453 E. R. Goodenough, Light, p. 96.

1454 See Endnote E-276, p. 779.

1455 See Endnote E-277, p. 779.

1456 G. A. Anderson, Perfection, p. 123; M. Barker, 11 June 2007. See the overview of Moses 4, p. 239.

1457 See Endnote E-278, p. 779.

1458 Deuteronomy 26:8; cf. 4:34; 5:15; 6:21; 7:8, 19; 9:26; 11:2; 34:12.

1459 See discussions of this motif in D. R. Seely, Hand of God in Exodus Traditions, D. R. Seely, Hand of God in the Book of Exodus, and D. R. Seely, Hand of God in the Book of Mormon. Note that in the Dura mural of the parting of the Red Sea, like in the mural of Ezekiel, both a right hand and a left hand appear to be shown.

1460 H. W. Nibley, Atonement, p. 562.

1461 H. Riesenfeld, Resurrection, p. 34.

1462 Ibid., p. 12. Two additional keys reserved to God are mentioned in this context, namely, the “Key of Rain” and the “Key of Childbirth.” Riesenfeld observes that these functions are united in “the idea of Creation which is so characteristic of the New Year Festival,” and which were each represented in its rites (ibid., p. 12).

1463 Ibid., p. 33.

nails of each finger carefully indicated to make them certainly right hands, though their position is reversed.” Goodenough notes that he “cannot believe that this had no significance to the artist who so carefully showed the detail.”¹⁴⁶⁴ The reversal may suggest a change in the relationship of Ezekiel to God as he moves from the earthly to the heavenly realms, corresponding to the “well-known shifting of the garment from left to right in initiation ceremonies (e.g., of the tassel on the mortarboard at graduations)”¹⁴⁶⁵ or the Jewish prayer shawl or robe that “is draped over one shoulder and then over the other.”¹⁴⁶⁶ The imagery also recalls Philo’s description of “two successive initiations within a single Mystery,” constituting “a ‘lesser’ Mystery in contrast with a ‘Greater,’” which Goodenough labeled “the Mystery of Aaron and the Mystery of Moses.”¹⁴⁶⁷ The greater initiation allowed Moses, “when stripped of his distinguishing [multi-colored] robes, clad in simple white,”¹⁴⁶⁸ to abide in God’s presence “while he learns the secrets of the most holy mysteries,”¹⁴⁶⁹ and to be “changed into the divine, so that such men might become kin to God and truly divine.”¹⁴⁷⁰ Such a change was seen as a kind of second birth or resurrection.¹⁴⁷¹ Goodenough concluded that something like Philo’s “higher mystery” “played a highly important part in the Judaism of Dura.”¹⁴⁷²

The story cycle begins in the leftmost panel with a picture of a tree bearing prominent fruit or flowers and three drawings of Ezekiel in typical Persian costume. “The heavenly hand 1464 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:182-183 n. 85.

1465 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 443.

1466 D. Rona, Revealed, p. 194. In an excavation of a Coptic Christian burial site, Griggs found that some burials included “one or more robes with linen strips wrapped around the upper half of the body and gathered into a knot on either the left... or, more commonly, on the right shoulder,” indicating priestly authority (C. W. Griggs, Evidences, p. 227).

1467 E. R. Goodenough, Light, pp. 95-96.

1468 Ibid., p. 96.

1469 Philo, Giants, 54, p. 473.

1470 Philo, Exodus, 2:29, p. 70. See R. S. Eccles, Pilgrimage, pp. 60-61; E. R. Goodenough, Introduction to Philo, pp. 147-153; J. Gross, Divinization, p. 77. See Endnote E-221, p. 759.

1471 Philo, Exodus, 2:46-47, cited in J. Gross, Divinization, p. 77. See Endnote E-279, p. 780.

1472 E. R. Goodenough, Summary, p. 188.

lifts the first figure of Ezekiel by the hair of his head into this place of human fragments.”¹⁴⁷³ “The second figure of Ezekiel shows him fulfilling the command of God [to prophesy to the bones¹⁴⁷⁴]... In the painting the prophet’s right hand is open in a gesture of exposition toward the bones, his left pointing to a second hand of God above him.”¹⁴⁷⁵ “The third figure of Ezekiel turns to the right, pointing across his body with his right hand to a third hand of God above him. With his open left hand the prophet seems to call attention to a strange mountain beside him.”¹⁴⁷⁶ “The mountain is split down the middle,¹⁴⁷⁷ and a small tree with exaggerated fruit grows at the top of each half,”¹⁴⁷⁸ recalling either the prophesied destruction of groves used for idol worship¹⁴⁷⁹ or perhaps representing two of the trees of Eden.¹⁴⁸⁰ “A castellated citadel topples upside down from the crest of the hill at the right, a building with two openings, apparently a door and a window...”¹⁴⁸¹ The artist seems to be showing the [body] pieces going through the first half of the mountain,¹⁴⁸² crossing the chasm, and in the second half being miraculously reassembled as whole corpses, for three such corpses lie on their backs within it... Ezekiel stands at the right of the mountain, his left hand out as though he were preaching, or saying ‘Lo,’ his right hand again lifted up toward the hand of God. He still wears the Persian costume, but his elaborately embroidered red smock has become a relatively plain one in light pink.”¹⁴⁸³

“At the right of this figure of Ezekiel the three assembled corpses again lie one above another, and the Greek figure of Psyche with butterfly wings stands at their heads, her hands out as 1473 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:180. See Ezekiel 37:1; cf. Ezekiel 8:2, 28:13-19. See Endnote E-280, p. 780.

1474 Ezekiel 37:2-7.

1475 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:181.

1476 Ibid., 10:182. See Ezekiel 6:2-7; cf. 36:1-7.

1477 See Endnote E-281, p. 780.

1478 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:183.

1479 Ezekiel 6:13, 20:28, 47.

1480 Ezekiel 31:8-9, 16, 18. See Endnote E-282, p. 780.

1481 Ezekiel 37:7, 38:20.

1482 Ezekiel 32:5, 35:1-8.

1483 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:183.

though just about to grasp the head of the corpse at the top. Three other Psyche figures fly down from above. Scholars generally agree in identifying these figures with the four winds, which in the story breathe upon the corpses and give them the breath of life, so that they live.¹⁴⁸⁴ Supervising this miracle stands a fifth figure [of Ezekiel], this time in the full Greek robe, his right hand pointing with two fingers extended toward the descending Psyches... [T]hat the prophet has taken on a new status at this stage seems obvious from his change of robes. Just as important is the peculiar two-finger gesture, which appears only here in the Dura paintings...¹⁴⁸⁵ We... know that it was not only used for the hand of the god, but was probably a cultic gesture in his mysteries... ... [A]s Sabazius was a god who brought immortality to his followers,¹⁴⁸⁶ the gesture would seem to indicate that Ezekiel is working a comparable miracle by bringing life to the corpses...¹⁴⁸⁷ Behind him stand ten much smaller figures, all in the same Greek dress, who presumably represent the bones now fully restored to life.¹⁴⁸⁸ They raise their hands, palms forward at shoulder height... They are under the arm of still another heroic Ezekiel figure, again in the full Greek dress."¹⁴⁸⁹ "The ten who come into glory are the true Israel...[,] the mystic Jews... The point of the 'true Israel' is that it consists of people who 'see God.' They are ones who have become 'unwritten laws.'"¹⁴⁹⁰ Goodenough notes the special markings of "clavi" and "gams"¹⁴⁹¹ on the "Greek robe of chiton [= belted tunic] and himation [= cloak]" worn by the ten: "[O]nly those who appeared to be heavenly beings or the greatest saints of Judaism, mystic saviors, wear this clothing."¹⁴⁹²

1484 Ezekiel 37:9-10. See Endnote E-283, p. 780.

1485 In classic iconography, this gesture represented the spoken word. In medieval Christianity, the meaning later changed to that of blessing (H. P. L'Orange, Cosmic Kingship, pp. 171-183).

1486 See Endnote E-284, p. 781.

1487 Note the nearly identical gesture that Christ uses to raise the dead shown in E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 11, Figure 305. See Endnote E-287, p. 782.

1488 See Endnote E-288, p. 782.

1489 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:184.

1490 Ibid., 10:195. See Philo, Virtues, 194, p. 83; cf. Jeremiah 31:33, A. F. Ehat, Seems Like Heaven, pp. 5-6.

1491 See Excursus 20: The Circle and the Square, p. 571.

1492 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:205; see also 9:88-89, 126-129, 162-164; E. R. Goodenough, Garments. In describing the purple "outer garment of the high priest as depicted in the murals of the Dura Europos synagogue" (see, e.g., the figure of Aaron in E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 11, Plate 10), Nibley notes that

“At the right of [the sixth] figure of Ezekiel... towers another mountain with a tree on it; this time the mountain stands intact, not riven like the first one. The contrast will seem possibly to have meaning.”¹⁴⁹³ “Immediately beyond the mountain [Ezekiel, again in] Persian dress kneels and clings to the side of a large yellow altar... An armed soldier wearing a helmet grasps [him] from behind... The second painting shows [Ezekiel bending] over, his scabbard hanging down between his legs, while a standing figure in the same costume grasps his hair with the left hand and raises a sword, obviously in the act of beheading him.”¹⁴⁹⁴ “Such a tradition does not appear in either the Old Testament or the rabbinical writings, but does in Christian documents... [For example,] the writer to the Hebrews¹⁴⁹⁵ among other horrors that came to the prophets tells: ‘They were stoned, they were sawn in two, they were killed with the sword’... [I]t... looks as though the verse quoted from Hebrews might summarize a current Jewish tradition of the deaths of the three major prophets, Jeremiah, Isaiah, and Ezekiel.”¹⁴⁹⁶ Summing up his interpretation, Goodenough writes:

Merkabah mysticism... primarily centers in an ascent into a heavenly region, and then a descent or return to the sorry world of earthly reality, and when we have this conception in mind we see that here is what the painting really has told us. The heavenly hand comes upon the prophet to take him into the world of death and desolation. Here he preaches until the bones of human decay come together and pass through a great barrier to another realm—the realm where Psyches give men a new life, and where their new life means that they, like the now triumphant prophet, wear the great robe of sanctity. Ezekiel cannot stay there, however, but must go back to the other side of the mountain again, there in his earthly garb to meet his earthly and mortal fate, meet it from the very Jewish leaders whose apostasy he had bitterly upbraided.¹⁴⁹⁷

“the white undergarment is the proper preexistent glory of the wearer, while the other is the priesthood later added to it” (H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 489-490).

1493 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:185; cf. Ezekiel 17:22-24, 22:40, 28:14, 34:27, 36:30, 47:7, 12. See Endnote E-285, p. 781.

1494 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:187.

1495 Hebrews 11:37.

1496 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:187-188; cf. D. Satran et al., Ezekiel, pp. 95, 100; J. E. Wright, Ezekiel, pp. 104-105; W. L. Lane, Hebrews 9-13, pp. 390-391; P. Ellingworth, Greek Hebrews, pp. 630-631. See Endnote E-286, p. 782.

1497 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:193-194. See Endnote E-290, p. ?.

Excursus 54

Table of Parallels with the Apocalypse of Abraham

BELOW is given a table of parallels between the book of Moses and the Apocalypse of Abraham, with additional excerpts from the book of Abraham and other related works. From his own study, Hugh Nibley concluded: “These parallel accounts, separated by centuries, cannot be coincidence. Nor can all the others.”¹⁴⁹⁸

	Book of Moses	Apocalypse of Abraham ¹
PROLOGUE (vv. 1-2)
Setting	an exceedingly high mountain (1:1)	a high mountain (9:8)
Aretology	the Lord God Almighty, and Endless (1:3)	the primordial and mighty God (9:3)
Sacrifice	Cf. Abraham: ... revealed from God to Abraham, as he offered sacrifice upon an altar (Abraham, Facsimile 2, figure 2)	Go... and set out for me a pure sacrifice (9:5)
MOSES IN THE SPIRIT WORLD (vv. 3-8)
God to show a vision of eternity	I will show thee the workmanship of mine hands (1:4)	And in this sacrifice I shall set before you the ages (9:6)
Reason for God's favor	Cf. Abraham: Thy servant has sought thee earnestly (Abraham 2:12)	since you loved to search for me (9:6)
The prophet is commissioned	I have a work for thee, Moses, my son (1:6)	I called you my friend (9:6) ²
Vision of the spirit world	Moses... beheld the world upon which he was created... and all the children of men which are, and which were created (1:8)	And I saw there a great crowd of men, and women, and children... I gave them a command... and they came into being (21:7, 22:2; cf. 9:9)
Some of the spirits are chosen	Cf. Abraham: among all these there were many of the noble and great ones... These I will make my rulers (Abraham 3:22, 23)	half of them on the right side... and half of them on the left... Those on the right side... are the people set apart... to be born of you and to be called my people (21:7, 22:5)
MOSES FALLS TO THE EARTH (vv. 9-11)
Fall and loss of strength	Moses... fell unto the earth... And... it was for the space of many hours before Moses did... receive his natural strength (1:9-11)	I... fell down upon the earth, for there was no longer strength in me (10:1-3)
MOSES DEFEATS SATAN (vv. 12-23)
Satan disrupts the worship of God	Satan came tempting him, saying: Moses, son of man, worship me (1:12)	And the impure bird flew down on the carcasses... and said, “What are you doing, Abraham... Leave [Yahoel] and flee! (13:4-5)
Satan's identity is questioned	Moses... said: Who art thou? (1:13)	I said to the angel, “What is this, my lord?” And he said, “This... is [Satan]” (13:6)
Satan contrasted with the prophet	I am a son of God... and where is thy glory, that I should worship thee? ...I can look upon thee in the natural man (1:13, 14)	[Yahoel]: “Reproach on you, [Satan]! Since Abraham's portion is in heaven, and yours is on earth (13:7)
Satan told to depart and cease his deception	Get thee hence, Satan; deceive me not (1:16)	Depart from [Abraham]! You cannot deceive him (13:12-13)
The prophet has received the glory that Satan lost	God said unto me [Moses]: Thou art after the similitude of mine Only Begotten (1:16)	the garment which in heaven which was formerly yours [Satan's] has been set aside for him [Abraham] (13:14)
Satan told to depart a second time	Depart hence, Satan (1:18)	vanish from before me! (14:7)

1498 H. W. Nibley, To Open, p. 15. Nibley also cites extensive parallels between Moses 1 and S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve. For a more complete description of these parallels, see D. J. Larsen et al., Apocalypse of Abraham.

Satan's final attempt to gain the prophet's worship	Satan cried with a loud voice, ...saying: I am the Only Begotten, worship me (1:19)	He [Satan] said, "Abraham!" And I said, "Here am I, your servant!" And the angel said to me, "Answer him not!" (14:9-10)
Satan's frightening tantrum and final departure	Moses... commanded, saying: Depart from me, Satan... And now Satan began to tremble (1:20, 21)	Cf. Enoch: "And Enoch said to Azazel, Depart! ... Then he departed and spoke to all of them [i.e., his followers]... and trembling... seized them (1 Enoch 13:1, 3, Gizeh) ³
MOSES CALLS UPON GOD; HEARS A VOICE (vv. 24-26)
Ascent to heaven	Moses lifted up his eyes unto heaven (1:24). Cf. Nephi: upon the wings of his Spirit hath my body been carried away (2 Nephi 4:25)	the angel took me with his right hand and set me on the right wing of the pigeon and he himself sat on the left wing of the turtle-dove... and carried me up (15:2-3)
Voice at the veil	and he heard a voice, saying: Blessed art thou, Moses (1:25)	And while he was still speaking, behold a fire was coming toward us... (17:1)
Many waters	and thou shalt be made stronger than many waters... as if thou wert God (1:25)	and a sound [voice]... like a sound of many waters (17:1) ⁴
MOSES' VISION AT THE VEIL (vv. 27-30)
The prophet beholds the earth	as the voice was still speaking, Moses cast his eyes and beheld the earth (1:27)	And he said unto me, "Look now beneath your feet at the expanse and contemplate the creation (21:1)
The inhabitants of the earth	he beheld also the inhabitants thereof (1:28)	and those who inhabit it (21:1)
The prophet questions God	Tell me, I pray thee, why these things are so, and by what thou madest them? (1:30)	Eternal, Mighty One! Why did you ordain it to be so? (26:1). ⁵ Cf. Mother of Books : My Lord, how did the high king create all these spheres and palaces? From where did he make the spirits? What was the origin of his creation?" ⁶
MOSES IN THE PRESENCE OF THE LORD (vv. 31-40)
God's purpose is His own	For mine own purpose have I made these things. Here is wisdom and it remaineth in me (1:31) ⁷	As the will of your father is in him, as your will is in you, so also the will desired by me is inevitable (26:5)
Moses speaks with the Lord face to face	Moses stood in the presence of God, and talked with him face to face (1:31)	He whom you will see going before both of us in a great sound of qedushah [holiness, sanctification] is the Eternal One... whom himself you will not see (16:3) ⁸
Vision of the Creation, the Garden of Eden, and the Fall	Moses sees the creation of the earth (ch. 2), the Garden of Eden (ch. 3) and the Fall of Adam and Eve (ch. 4)	Abraham sees the creation of the earth (21:3-5), the Garden of Eden (21:6), and Satan inciting the Fall of Adam and Eve (23:1-14).
EPILOGUE (vv. 41-42)
Scripture to be lost and restored	... when the children of men shall ... take many of [my words] from the book which thou shalt write, ... I will raise up another... and they shall be had again among the children of men—among as many as shall believe. (1:41)	Cf. Enoch: And... another generation will arise, the last of many... And I shall raise up for that generation someone who will reveal to them the books in your handwriting... And he will have to point out to... truthful men. ⁹
Some scripture to be reserved for the righteous	These words were spoken unto Moses... Show them not unto any except them that believe. (1:42)	Cf. Ezra, certain books were to be read by the "worthy and unworthy" whereas others were to be only given "to the wise." ¹⁰

- 1 English translation from A. Kulik, Retroverting, Apocalypse of Abraham chs. 9-23, pp. 16-27. The first English translation of the Apocalypse of Abraham was made in 1898. Notably, this translation did not appear in a scholarly journal, but rather in the Improvement Era, an official publication of the Church (E. H. Anderson et al., Abraham). Nibley comments: "In 1898, just a year after the Apocalypse of Abraham was published to the world by Bonwetsch, two Latter-day Saint students made the first English translation of the writing, which appeared in the first volume of the Improvement Era.... It is significant that it was the Latter-day Saints who first made the Apocalypse of Abraham available to the world in English, as it was they who first recognized the Book of Enoch, in Parley P. Pratt's review of 1840 (P. P. Pratt, Enoch, cited in H. Nibley, Enoch, pp. 111, 289), not as a worthless piece of apocrypha, but as a work of primary importance... Brothers E. H. Anderson and R. T. Haag, who made an excellent translation of Bonwetsch's German—remarkably close, in fact, to Box's 'official' English version of 1919—detected in the text 'many things of a character both as to incidents and doctrines that ran parallel with what is

FIGURE E54-2. Noah Sees the Ark in Vision.
Photo: Stephen T. Whitlock, 1951-

SEE COLOR PLATE E54-2.

All generations to the end of time were printed on the curtain of the Omnipresent One. I saw them all with my own eyes.¹ Jewish and Christian accounts speak of a “blueprint” of eternity that is worked out in advance and shown on the inside of the veil to prophetic figures such as Abraham as part of a heavenly ascent.² Nibley gave the “great round” of the hypocephalus as an example of an attempt to capture the essence of such pictures of eternity among the Egyptians.³ Islamic tradition speaks of a “white cloth from Paradise” upon which Adam saw the righteous and wicked among all his posterity.⁴

In this figure, from a window of the Holy Trinity Church in Stratford-upon-Avon, England, God shows the plans for the Ark to Noah just as He later showed Moses the plans for the Tabernacle.⁵ The hands of Deity hold the heavenly curtain as Noah, compass in his left hand, regards intently.

- 1 P. Alexander, 3 Enoch, 45:6, p. 299.
- 2 See Commentary 1:27-b, p. 62.
- 3 H. W. Nibley, Abraham 2000, pp. 42ff.
- 4 M. al-Kisa'i, Tales, p. 82.
- 5 See Endnote 3-57, p. 210.

recorded in the Book of Abraham, given to the world by Joseph Smith' (E. H. Anderson et al., Abraham, p. 705). They wisely contented themselves, however, with printing the text without other commentary than three or four passages in italics, trusting the Latter-day Saint reader to think for himself" (H. W. Nibley, Abraham 2000, pp. 11-13).

- 2 Regarding the title given to Moses, see Barker for a discussion of Psalm 110 and the idea that priests after the order of Melchizedek became sons of God (M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek). In Arabic, Abraham is simply referred to as al-Khalil, “the Friend” (cf. Hebrew “Hebron” from haver = “friend”).
- 3 See R.H. Charles, Enoch, 13:1, 3, p. 288; English translation in H.W. Nibley, To Open, pp. 10-11; cf. R.H. Charles, Apocrypha, 2:196 n. 13:1. Nibley's reading is perfectly coherent. However, Nickelsburg does not see the logic of the Gizeh variant, calling it “nonsense” (G.W. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, n. 13:1a, p. 234).
- 4 “The same terms are used in the ‘Greater Hekhaloth’ in describing the sound of the hymn of praise sung by the ‘throne of Glory’ to its King—‘like the voice of the waters in the rushing streams, like the waves of the ocean when the south wind sets them in uproar’” (G. Scholem, Trends, p. 61).
- 5 In the Apocalypse, probably redacted in the first century, the dialogue centers on recent events (i.e., the destruction of Jerusalem and its temple) and the future of Israel, in contrast to the cosmic scope of, e.g., the Islamic Mother of Books and Moses 1.
- 6 W. Barnstone et al., Mother, p. 685.
- 7 Later, Moses will receive a partial answer about the Creation, limited to “an account of this earth” (Moses 1:35). He will also be told something about “why these things are so” (Moses 1:30, cf. 1:39).
- 8 Though other features of the ascent mirror similar accounts in 1 Enoch and Ezekiel, Orlov describes how the Apocalypse of Abraham explicitly rejects their visual anthropomorphism, and insists on the “revelation of the divine Voice” alone (A. A. Orlov, Gods of My Father, p. 53. See also A. A. Orlov, Praxis). The fourteenth century illustrator of the Codex Sylvester, on the other hand, had no qualms about representing God visually (see Figure 1-7, p. 38). See Endnote E-291, p. 781.
- 9 F. I. Andersen, 2 Enoch, 35:1-2, p. 158.
- 10 B.M. Metzger, Fourth Ezra, 14:4-6, p. 553.

Excursus 55

Mesoamerican Stories of Creation and the Original Transgression

GRAULICH summarizes Mesoamerican stories of Creation and the original transgression.¹⁴⁹⁹ He laments the fact that “modern authors, attributing these myths to Christian influence, often dismiss Mesoamerican allusions to the original paradise and to transgression even though they are very well documented.”¹⁵⁰⁰ Note that the ancient sources are diverse and complex, and many gods and goddesses of Mesoamerica overlap one another—the different names constituting a particular aspect of that god. For this reason brief sketches such as the following cannot really do them full justice:

[V]aluable allusions in the codices Telleriano-Remensis and Vaticanus A (3738)... tell of a kind of original paradise in which the breaking of a prohibition had disastrous consequences. The names of this paradise, Tamoanchan and Xochitlicacan, mean, respectively, “there is the house from which they descended” (that is, “Place of the Original House”) and “The Place Where Flowers Bloom.”¹⁵⁰¹ The gods who lived there cut the flowers and branches from a forbidden tree. To punish them, Tonacatecuhtli and Tonacacihuatl banished them to earth and to the underworld. Elsewhere, Ixnextli, a kind of Eve, “sinned by picking flowers.”¹⁵⁰² Ixnextli seems to be Xochiquetzal, “Quetzal Flower,” the “first sinner,” Cinteotl’s wife, who was seduced by Tezcatlipoca disguised as an animal. Xochiquetzal is identified as Tlazoteotl-Ixcuina, another name for the earth goddess, who “sinned by eating the fruit from the tree” before the flood and was the cause of all the world’s misfortunes and afflictions. Tlazoteotl is depicted opposite Tezcatlipoca, the latter transformed into a bird of ill omen because in this guise “he deceived the first woman who sinned.” Elsewhere, it is Huehuecoyotl, the “Old Coyote,” “equivalent to Adam,” Ixnextl’s “husband,” who “introduced the discord.” That is not all, because the guilty one was also called Itzpapalotl, the one who cut and ate “flowers” in a garden. The tree in that garden broke and shed blood,¹⁵⁰³ and the angry supreme couple expelled Itzpapalotl and the other gods, casting them down to earth.¹⁵⁰⁴ Regardless of the variety of names of the guilty parties, this is clearly the same event.¹⁵⁰⁵

Guilty	Seducer	Transgression	Consequence
Inextli		picks flowers
Xochiquetzal	Tezcatlipoca disguised as an animal
Tlazoteotl Ixcuina	Tezcatlipoca disguised as a bird	eats fruit from the tree	introduces evils and misfortunes
	Huehuecoyotl		introduces discord
Itzpapalotl		eats or cuts flowers	expelled to earth with other gods
Cihuacoatl		“sinned”
The gods		cut flowers and branches	expelled to earth and the underworld

FIGURE E55-1. *The Transgressions at Tamoanchan.*¹⁵⁰⁶

1499 M. Graulich, Myths, p. 53; cf. D. E. Wirth, Guide, pp. 47-49.

1500 M. Graulich, Myths, p. 266.

1501 See ibid., pp. 284-285 n. 21.

1502 See ibid., p. 285 n. 21.

1503 See E. Seler, Codex, 1:178, 2:269; E. Seler, Codex (German), 2:260-261, Figure 264-266 and p. 262.

1504 See Endnote E-292, p. ?.

1505 For a summary of the wider context of these stories and their astronomical associations, see M. Graulich, Myths, pp. 264-277. Linda Schele was the pioneer of Maya astronomy—for an assessment of her contributions in this regard, see A. Aveni, Stars. On creation, see M. E. Miller et al., Gods and Symbols, pp. 68-71.

1506 From ibid., p. 55. Wirth sees it as a “far stretch to say that Cihuacoatl ‘sinned’” (D. E. Wirth, 12 March 2009).

FIGURE E55-2. *The Broken Tree of Tamoanchan, Codex Telleriano-Remensis, 16th century*¹

FIGURE E55-3. *Itzpapalotl and the Broken Tree of Tamoanchan, Codex Borgia*²

SEE COLOR PLATE E55-3.

The broken tree of Tamoanchan at left sprouts both blossoms and knives. The tree is associated with the transgression of Itzpapalotl, the Obsidian Butterfly, who was said to have sinned either in “cutting roses and branches from trees” or, according to another annotator, eating the blossoms.³ “[T]he tree is depicted in the traditional indigenous fashion, in its entirety with its tentaclelike roots also visible. A stream of blood flows from the point of rupture.... This act greatly angered Tonacatecuhtli and Tonacacihuatl, who ejected [the gods] from the garden.”⁴ The broken tree also appeared in Aztec migration accounts, where it figured as an “evil portent.” “In the account of the origin of the Mexica in the Florentine Codex..., Tamoanchan is the place where certain sages abandoned the migrating group, taking their knowledge, crafts, and books with them. Tamoanchan was thus a complex concept, for it appears as a place of origin for the gods and for humans, and, as its name suggests, a place of departure rather than rest.”⁵

In the second figure, Itzpapalotl, at left, is pictured with the broken tree. According to Seler’s important, but now very dated, study, the broken tree “denoted for the learned the Tamoanchan, ‘the house of Descent,’⁶ or Xochitl icacan, ‘the place where the flowers are,’ the region of the mythical West, the home of maize, and the seat of the primeval gods, where, too, the wandering tribes made a long sojourn....⁷ [Other symbols are] a house with a dark entrance, then... a man with bandaged eyes, and lastly... a man tumbling down head foremost, and... from or with his chair... The house with the dark threshold is doubtless intended to denote the dark house of Earth, or perhaps the time of darkness... —the primeval time, the time before the birth of the Sun. But the other two pictures have an obvious relation to the myth which is here referred to by the interpreters, and so vividly recalls the biblical story of Adam’s transgression... The man plunging down is clearly the person cast out of heaven, out of his chair, and the other with the bandage on his eyes, the blindfold person, the one who sinned through ignorance.”⁸ Wirth suggests: “The blindfold may also have another meaning. The first man’s eyes were blinded from the smoke and ashes, so he could not see clearly.”⁹ In another interpretation, Graulich sees Itzpapalotl has having introduced “sin”¹⁰ (symbolized by the person with blinded eyes), ... death (the falling man), and... night (the house with darkness and a stellar eye”¹¹).¹²

1 See E. Q. Keber, Telleriano-Remensis, Folio 19r (misnumbered as 13r).

2 Restored rendering in G. Díaz et al., Codex Borgia, Plate 66.

3 E. Q. Keber, Telleriano-Remensis, pp. 182, 183.

4 Ibid., p. 183. See also p. 266 and the restored detail of the drawings on p. 292.

5 Ibid.

6 Wirth agrees with the connotation of “House of Descent,” but takes the literal meaning to be “The Place of Mists” or “Place of the Misty Sky” (D. E. Wirth, 12 March 2009; cf. M. E. Miller et al., Gods and Symbols, p. 160).

7 In one account, Tamoanchan is the name of a cave where humankind is created (cited in E. Q. Keber, Telleriano-Remensis, p. 183). See Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations, p. 669.

8 E. Seler, Codex, 2:269–270; cf. the figure from Codex Vaticanus 3773 in Explanatory Tables No. 63; cf. E. Seler, Codex (German), 2:260–262, 283.

9 D. E. Wirth, Guide, p. 49.

10 Or perhaps death. Gardner notes that the figure resembles a dead man prepared for burial, often done in seated position (B. Gardner, 13 March 2009).

11 Regarding what Seler called “the dark house of Earth,” Wirth writes: “It does represent primeval time, but it does not represent earth. It is a temple in the heavens (has a star-eye in the center)” (D. E. Wirth, 12 March 2009).

12 M. Graulich, Myths, p. 54.

Wirth notes another relevant story:¹⁵⁰⁷

In the Maya area of Quintana Roo, Mexico, there is a myth from the distant past about a rope, which was a pathway that joined the earth with the sky.¹⁵⁰⁸ It was a lifeline, almost like an umbilical cord that linked the two worlds, connecting the natural world to the heavens. This link was severed at the time of the Fall, when earth and heaven were separated from one another.¹⁵⁰⁹

One of the most important sources of information regarding the nature of Maya cosmology and the afterlife is the Popol Vuh, “still the only known pre-Columbian Maya text that has survived in a form that has been transcribed in a Western script.”¹⁵¹⁰ Its mythic sections contain many legends concerning “the creation of the world, the nature of life and death, and an extensive description of the underworld and its perils.” Christenson summarizes a tale of a “miraculous life-giving tree” that is a “focus of the mythic section”.¹⁵¹¹

The tale of this tree begins with the account of a hero named One Hunahpu who often spent his days playing an ancient Maya ball game with his brother. Unfortunately, the noise of the game disturbed the lords of the underworlds (a place called Xibalba), who lived beneath the ball court.¹⁵¹² The chief lords of the underworld, named One Death and Seven Death, were determined to destroy the brothers and therefore summoned them to their realm. After a number of trials, One Death and Seven Death overcame One Hunahpu and sacrificed him by beheading him. Although they buried the body in the underworld ball court, they placed his head in the branches of a dead tree. Immediately, the tree sprang to life and bore a white fruit resembling the fleshless skull of One Hunahpu....¹⁵¹³

The lords of the underworld were so astonished and fearful of the power of the tree that they forbade anyone to approach it. Eventually, tales of the miraculous tree and the sweetness of its fruit reached the ears of a daughter of one of the underworld lords.¹⁵¹⁴ She followed the path of the tree and was about to pluck one of its fruits when the skull of One Hunahpu spoke to her, cautioning her to partake of the fruit only if she was certain of her desire. She assured One Hunahpu that this was indeed her wish. Before she could touch the fruit, however, she became miraculously impregnated by a drop of One Hunahpu’s saliva, which he spat into her palm. The young woman was then admonished that by this action life would be renewed through her, never to be lost again. The maiden then climbed up to the world of the living where she bore twin sons, who eventually grew to maturity and defeated the lords of death¹⁵¹⁵ and rescued the bones of their father.¹⁵¹⁶

According to Christenson, the major elements of the Popol Vuh myth were in place “since before the birth of Christ.” In older versions of these stories, the head of Hun-Nal-Ye, the ancient lowland figure corresponding to One Hunahpu, was:

... hung in a flowering tree in the underworld. With the aid of his two sons, he was able to arise from the underworld through the cracked carapace of a great turtle, representative of the earth floating on the surface of the primordial sea.”¹⁵¹⁷

1507 D. E. Wirth, Guide, p. 49.

1508 A. M. Tozzer, Study, pp. 153-154. See also M. Graulich, Myths, pp. 59-61.

1509 See Excursus 50: Fu Xi and Nü Gua, p. 654.

1510 A. J. Christenson, Sacred Tree, p. 2.

1511 Ibid., pp. 2-4.

1512 See Endnote E-96, p. 728.

1513 See Endnote E-293, p. ?.

1514 See Endnote E-294, p. ?.

1515 See Endnote E-295, p. ?.

1516 See Endnote E-296, p. ?.

1517 A. J. Christenson, Sacred Tree, p. 4.

FIGURE E55-4. *Anthropomorphic Tree, Codex Boturini, ca. 1530-1541*¹

FIGURE E55-5. *Man Emerging from a Split Tree Trunk, Codex Vindobonensis, sixteenth century*²

At left, the “migration of original ancestors is depicted in the Boturini Codex by a humanized (human arms extend around the trunk) tree broken off across the trunk.”³ At right, recalling motifs associated with other heroes “reborn” from a tree,⁴ Norman⁵ notes that in some Mixtec depictions of the broken tree trunk symbol, one sees “a man emerging from a split tree trunk in symbolic birth.”⁶ This “tree of the Mixtec codices is a Tree of Life or World Tree extending above and below this earth, but principally a ‘tree of the heavens’ in Omeyocan guarded by the creator couple where it gives birth to humanity.”

1 V. G. Norman, Izapa Part 2, p. 202 Figure 4.13, b.

2 Ibid., Figure 4.13, c.

3 Ibid., p. 202.

4 See Commentary 4:14-e, p. 260.

5 V. G. Norman, Izapa Part 2, p. 202 text and Figure 4.13. Also cited in B. Gardner, Second Witness, 1:168.

6 For additional examples, see D. E. Wirth, Decoding, pp. 74-75, 84-85. See also D. E. Wirth, Parallels, p. 111.

Having been reborn to new life, Hun-Nal-Ye was then conveyed in a canoe across the sky to the center place of creation. There he oversaw the setting of three stones, the hearthstones of the celestial fire which would quicken the cosmos and allow the world to emerge. Having done so, Hun-Nal-Ye then “raised the sky” by erecting a great world tree to support the arch of the heavens.¹⁵¹⁸

In the Popol Vuh, the twins ascended to the sky after restoring their father. According to Graulich:

The heroes defeat darkness and death by voluntarily getting rid of their bodies and of the matter that prevents earthly beings from rising to heaven. Purified, they increase and free their inner fire. They show the gods exiled to earth and humans that one must sacrifice oneself to 1518 Ibid., p. 6. See ibid., pp. 7-23 for further discussion of the Maya World Tree, often conceived as a ceiba, as a representation of kingship and deification, and a symbol of the central locus of creation. See also D. E. Wirth, Parallels, pp. 94-115 and D. E. Wirth, Decoding, pp. 80-91.

reach the lost paradise. They open the way to the two realms of the afterlife, the House of the Sun and Tlalocan.¹⁵¹⁹

Following the ascent of the twins, the fifth, final, and only successful attempt to create humanity was undertaken. “Humankind is distinguished by having blood, in contrast to the [previous “fourth creation” of] the wooden effigies, which lacked it.”¹⁵²⁰ The first four men had miraculous vision, being able to see “that which was in the sky and that which was upon the earth... from wherever they were.”¹⁵²¹ Their Creators, however, realizing that in the extent of their knowledge “they [had] become like gods”¹⁵²² determined to limit their powers:

Their eyes were merely blurred by Heart of Sky [the Creators]. They were blinded like breath upon the face of a mirror. Thus their eyes were blinded. They could see only nearby; things were clear to them only where they were. Thus their knowledge was lost.¹⁵²³

1519 M. Graulich, Myths, p. 270.

1520 A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2003, p. 194 n. 461; cf. ibid., 664-665, p. 84.

1521 A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2003, 4991-4997, p. 197; cf. A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2000, 4991-4997, p. 131. Compare the rabbinical idea that the first light of Creation allowed God “to view all the universe simultaneously” (J. L. Kugel, Instances, p. 157).

1522 A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2003, 5087-5088, p. 200; cf. A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2000, 5087-5088, p. 133.

1523 A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2003, 5117-5123, p. 201; cf. A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2000, 5117-5123, p. 134.

Endnotes

- E-1. Although some aspects of Nibley's analysis of parallels between Egyptian religious texts and LDS temple concepts are now dated, Petersen cites Gee's assessment that his "scholarship on Egypt has been vindicated in one significant way":

Hugh argued in The Message of the Joseph Smith Papyri that the Book of Breathings and other Egyptian documents are ritual texts that were used to induct a novice into the religion. Gee stresses that few if any Egyptologists at the time read these texts as Hugh did but that is no longer the case. Egyptologists have discovered that the texts show up in temples as well as tombs and what were once classified as funerary objects actually have a broader cultic function.¹⁵²⁴

See, for instance, Roberts for an interpretation of the text of the Shabaka stone in the context of wider Egyptian temple architecture and ritual.¹⁵²⁵ Assman is also an advocate of the idea that Egyptian mystery rituals benefitted both the living and the dead:

Is it conceivable that initiation into the mysteries of the netherworld, as it was granted to the deceased by the Book of the Dead and the mortuary rituals, was modeled on the prototype of initiation into temple mysteries, as it was granted to the living? Here we touch upon one of the most controversial problems of Egyptology. Though esoteric circles cling to the notion of "Egyptian mysteries," academic Egyptology almost unanimously rejects this idea... [However, it] is difficult to believe that the mystery into which the deceased was initiated and the mystery into which the living priest was initiated could have been entirely unrelated to one another, considering that the concept of initiation played so great a role in both spheres. Might it not be that already during his lifetime, a priest experienced his introduction into the mysterious cultic presence of the divine as a sort of foretaste of his postmortem introduction to Osiris?

The critical point was the concept that actual, earthly priesthood opened a way to immortality, for already during life, it conveyed divine presence through service of a god, a presence that extended beyond death and came to full fruition only after death, for the deceased only then actually came "face to face" with the gods, whereas during his lifetime, he had only been able to relate to their images. Initiation into the temples and cults of Egypt anticipated and prefigured the ultimate initiation into the mysteries of the realm of the dead. This initiation did not benefit only the priests. The major festivals also enabled the laity to serve the gods by assuming certain roles, and thus to enter into a relationship with them during life, a relationship they could then call on in the afterlife....

Initiation into the mysteries of a deity entailed the deification of the mystic. "Conducting into the presence of" and "becoming" Osiris comprise precisely these two aspects of initiation into the mysteries of Osiris.¹⁵²⁶

As in the Greek mystery cults, the emphasis was on:

... the possibility of obtaining this redeeming knowledge while still alive on earth, a knowledge that will be beneficial later, in the afterlife. This was precisely the function of initiation in the Greek mystery cults. These initiations conveyed a knowledge that helped the living to enjoy a happy life, but above all, to enjoy a blissful destiny in the afterlife. Here, too, it was a matter of finding the right path in the world beyond... [Edward F.] Wente, Reinhold Merkelbach, and Maria Totti have concluded that in Egypt, living persons were inducted into knowledge about the afterlife and the course of the sun, knowledge that codified in the Books of the Netherworld. Referring to the verses cited above from the Book of the Dead of Queen Nedjmet, they write, "When the transfigured queen knew the language of the gods, she was inducted already during her lifetime."¹⁵²⁷

For a discussion of sacred marriage in the context of Egyptian ritual, see M. Rikala, Sacred.

- E-2. Charlesworth, among others, also argues that "the sages who produced the apocalypses were deeply influenced by many strands of traditions and from many cultures. It is obvious that one of these traditions was wisdom."¹⁵²⁸
- E-3. Noting a discontinuity between Second Temple and Rabbinic Judaism that parallels the break between First and Second Temple Judaism, Bloom concludes that "Something is curiously absent from any history we possess of the Second Temple period... Jacob Neusner, unmatched scholar of Judaistic 1524 John Gee, conversation with Boyd Petersen, 7 March 2002, cited in B. J. Petersen, Nibley, p. 369.

1525 A. Roberts, My Heart, esp. pp. 38-44. See also A. Roberts, Anointing.

1526 J. Assman, Death, p. 201, 204, 207-208.

1527 Ibid., pp. 400-401.

1528 J. H. Charlesworth, Lady Wisdom, p. 100.

origins, denies all scholarly myths of any early tradition that developed into ‘normative Judaism’—that is, what we now call rabbinical, talmudic Judaism.”¹⁵²⁹ With respect to the transmission of temple teachings, Nibley¹⁵³⁰ cites a study by Neusner where he reports that:

... “in the case of early Rabbinic Judaism,... we have a considerable corpus of laws which prescribe the way things are done but make no effort to interpret what is done. These constitute ritual entirely lacking in mythic, let alone theological, explanation.”¹⁵³¹ That is, no explanation whatever is offered for the ancient temple ordinances. Though fully one-third of the Mishnah is taken up with temple ordinances, none of the rabbis who wrote it (third century BCE to third century CE) ever participated in such a ritual... “[W]hat people are told to do is what they are supposed to think”¹⁵³²—think of themselves as performing the rite, but never trying to interpret it. The teachers of an early day explained that in the temple, “attentiveness leads to ritual cleaning,” which leads in turn to washing and anointing, which leads to holiness, hence to humility, hence to fear of sin, hence to piety, hence to the Holy Spirit, and finally to the resurrection of the dead, which culminates in the figure of Elijah. What does all this pointing to the resurrection and to Elijah have to do with the temple? Nothing at all, says Neusner, but such a sequence may suggest significant connections to a Latter-day Saint.

E-4 Scripture and temple teachings imply that a preliminary foreordination to sonship could have taken place in the premortal world. For example, Alma writes of those who:

... were ordained—being called and prepared from the foundation of the world according to the foreknowledge of God, on account of their exceeding faith and good works; in the first place being left to choose good or evil, therefore they having chosen good... are called with a holy calling... which was prepared with, and according to, a preparatory redemption for such.¹⁵³³

Of the “first and second sonships” described in the New Testament, Barker writes:¹⁵³⁴

Jesus, in a debate with the Jews and so presumably using arguments they would recognize and accept, said: “Do you say of him whom the Father consecrated and sent into the world, ‘You are blaspheming,’ because I said ‘I am the Son of God?’”¹⁵³⁵ This is the imagery of the ancient monarchy and high priesthood; a human being is consecrated and then sent out into the world as the Son of God. Paul said something similar: that God had sent forth his Son...¹⁵³⁶

The disciples were “in Christ”¹⁵³⁷ and so were the human presence of the Lord just as Jesus had been. Jesus knew he was returning to the presence of God, to “the glory which I had with thee before the world was made.”¹⁵³⁸ The implication of this is that all people can become sons of God, exactly what John and Paul said: “But to all who received him, who believed in his name, he gave power to become children of God; who were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, but of God”;¹⁵³⁹ “For all who are led by the Spirit of God are sons of God,”¹⁵⁴⁰ and these would share the image of the Son, so that he would be “the first-born among many brethren”¹⁵⁴¹—the image of the first-born among sons of God from Deuteronomy 32:8.

Human beings could become angels, and then continue to live in the material world. This transformation did not just happen after physical death; it marked the passage from the life in the material world to the life of eternity... This resurrection is often described nowadays as being “born again,” as in the words of Jesus to Nicodemus: “Unless one is born anew/born from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God.”¹⁵⁴² Seeing the Kingdom meant seeing the heavenly throne, that is, seeing 1529 H. Bloom, Names Divine, p. 181; cf. p. 233.

1530 H. W. Nibley, Sacred, pp. 591-592, 593.

1531 J. Neusner, Without Myth, p. 91.

1532 Ibid., p. 100.

1533 Alma 13:3; cf. J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 16 June 1844, p. 375. See also Commentary 1:6-a, p. 46

1534 M. Barker, Christmas, pp. 12-13.

1535 John 10:36.

1536 Galatians 4:4. See Galatians 3:25-4:7.

1537 See John 17:23.

1538 John 17:5.

1539 John 1:13.

1540 Romans 8:14.

1541 Romans 8:29.

1542 John 3:3.

beyond the veil into the invisible world. When you saw the angels you joined them. When you glimpsed the glory, you became a part of it.

... [S]ome human beings became angels in the temple ritual, and some angels took human form. Temple beliefs ritualized this by passing through the veil from the visible to the invisible world.

E-5. Hence, Moses 6:59-60:

59 ... by reason of transgression cometh the fall, which fall bringeth death, and inasmuch as ye were born into the world by water, and blood, and the spirit, which I have made, and so became of dust a living soul, even so ye must be born again into the kingdom of heaven, of water, and of the Spirit, and be cleansed by blood, even the blood of mine Only Begotten; that ye might be sanctified from all sin, and enjoy the words of eternal life in this world, and eternal life in the world to come, even immortal glory;

60 For by the water ye keep the commandment; by the Spirit ye are justified,¹⁵⁴³ and by the blood ye are sanctified.

E-6. Truman G. Madsen explained:

The Prophet taught we would one day discover that all of us, regardless of our present guesses and researchings as to origins and family, have in our veins the cumulative blood of Israel, and whether by actual birth or by adoption into the kingdom, or both, the Almighty intends that we shall belong literally to the family of Abraham... The kingdom is not a “closed shop.” It is not a powermongering super-race. It is an open family into which we are grafted, and through which probably most of us have a heavy genealogical debt.¹⁵⁴⁴

Who then is left out? No one. Except those who resolutely and finally choose not to be chosen.¹⁵⁴⁵

E-7. On 6 August 1843, Elder Brigham Young said that “if any in the Church had the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood, he did not know it.”¹⁵⁴⁶ However, on 22 November 1843, he finally received this much-awaited ordinance.¹⁵⁴⁷ In later instructions at the temple, President Young said: “Those who... come in here [i.e., the Nauvoo Temple] and have received their washing and anointing will [later, if faithful,] be ordained Kings and Priests, and will then have received the fulness of the Priesthood, all that can be given on earth. For Brother Joseph said he had given us all that could be given to man on the earth.”¹⁵⁴⁸

Emphasizing the anticipatory nature of these highest ordinances, Elder Young explained: “A person may have a portion of that priesthood, the same as governors or judges of England have power from the king to transact business; but that does not make them kings of England. A person may be anointed king and priest long before he receives his kingdom.”¹⁵⁴⁹ For example, the righteous dead in Old Testament times who received every blessing and promise of the Melchizedek priesthood during their lifetimes yet required the completion of Christ’s Atonement, resurrection, and ascension before they could be enabled to receive their full exaltation.¹⁵⁵⁰ Hence, the following passage from the Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah:

And he took me up into the seventh heaven... And there I saw all the righteous from the time of Adam onwards... But they were not sitting on their thrones, nor were their crowns of glory on them. And I asked the angel who (was) with me, “How is it that they have received these robes, but are not on (their) thrones nor in (their) crowns?” And he said to me, “They do not receive the crowns and thrones of glory... until the Beloved [i.e., Christ] descends in the form in which you will see Him descend... And when He has plundered the angel of death, He will rise on the third

1543 See D&C 20:37.

1544 T. G. Madsen, Joseph Smith, p. 108.

1545 T. G. Madsen, Chosenness, p. 139.

1546 B. Young, 6 August 1843, in J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 5:527.

1547 R. K. Esplin, Succession, p. 315. See also G. M. Leonard, Nauvoo, pp. 260-261.

1548 Heber C. Kimball Journal, kept by William Clayton, 26 December 1845, Church Archives, emphasis and brackets mine, cited in J. Smith, Jr., Words, p. 304 n. 21; cf. W. Clayton, Chronicle, p. 234. For descriptions of events surrounding the introduction of this ordinance, see R. L. Bushman, Rough Stone, pp. 490-499; L. W. Cook, Revelations, pp. 293-294, 347-349 nn. 4-11; A. F. Ehat, Ordinances, pp. 76-97; J. Smith, Jr., Words, pp. 303-307 nn. 21, 22, 29, 30, 38.

1549 J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 6 August 1843, 5:527.

1550 Cf. W. J. Hamblin, Temple Motifs, p. 459; H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, p. 310. See also C. Schmidt, Pistis, 3:135, pp. 701-705; G. R. S. Mead, Pistis, 4:135, pp. 293-294.

day... And then many of the righteous will ascend with Him, whose spirits do not receive (their) robes until the Lord Christ ascends and they ascend with Him. Then indeed they will receive their robes and their thrones and their crowns, when He has ascended into the seventh heaven.”¹⁵⁵¹

- E-8. Prior to the sealing of Benjamin F. Johnson to his wife, the Prophet Joseph Smith explained that “there were two seals in the Priesthood. The first was that which was placed upon a man and a woman when they made the [marriage] covenant and the other was the seal which allotted to them their particular mansion [i.e., the second anointing].”¹⁵⁵² Moreover, according to Cooper:

During his lifetime Joseph Smith taught that when a man and a woman were sealed, it established an eternal relationship, not only between them, but also between them and the children who were subsequently born to them. Existing sources, however, give no indication that he discussed the relationship between that couple and the children born prior to their being sealed as husband and wife. After ordinance work commenced in the Nauvoo Temple in December 1845, the Twelve Apostles introduced an ordinance by which offspring born to them prior to their matrimonial sealing, as well as individuals who were not their biological children, could be eternally linked to them as children. This ordinance was referred to as sealing or adoption.¹⁵⁵³

Later, this concept was extended so that children could be sealed to parents who were no longer living.¹⁵⁵⁴

- E-9. The fact that “Elias” is the Greek version of the transliterated Hebrew “Elijah” has created a point of bafflement for LDS scholarship.¹⁵⁵⁵ However, it need not be supposed that Joseph Smith was himself confused on the matter. Though one might disagree on particulars of some of Brown’s conclusions, he correctly adduces evidence to show that the Prophet probably understood “that the divine Hebrew suffix -jah is transliterated -as in Greek” in standard New Testament translations.¹⁵⁵⁶ Despite the potential for misunderstanding, however, in his discussion of the “spirit of Elias” and the “spirit of Elijah,” Joseph Smith chose nonetheless to use the names side-by-side as a means to draw a contrast between two distinct scriptural roles. “Elias,” the New Testament version of the name, was used to highlight parallels in the preparatory missions of various individuals to the Aaronic priesthood role exemplified by John the Baptist, while “Elijah,” the Hebrew version of the name, was used in allusions to the role of the Old Testament prophet who held and restored the sealing power of the Melchizedek priesthood. Had the Prophet rejected the name Elias for its “philological ambivalence,” he would have been obliged to find another name to describe the intended distinction.¹⁵⁵⁷
- E-10. Sometimes the idea of having one’s “calling and election made sure” is described in connection with receiving the fulness of the priesthood¹⁵⁵⁸ or in having otherwise being sealed up to eternal life by authorized holders of the priesthood.¹⁵⁵⁹ However, such promises are generally understood to be conditional.¹⁵⁶⁰ Elder Bruce R. McConkie also makes it clear that “these high blessings are not part of celestial marriage. ‘Blessings pronounced upon couples in connection with celestial marriage are conditioned upon the subsequent faithfulness of the participating parties.’”¹⁵⁶¹ Elder Melvin J. Ballard 1551 M. A. Knibb, Isaiah, 9:6-18, p. 170.

1552 Cited in R. E. Cooper, Promises, p. 113, spelling and punctuation modernized, brackets added by Cooper; cf. W. Clayton, Chronicle, 20 October 1843, p. 123.

1553 R. E. Cooper, Promises, p. 113.

1554 G. Irving, Adoption. See also Excursus 9: The Premortal Organization of the Human Family, p. 544. Johnson sees sealing as both an empowering and “imprinting” process (L. T. Johnson, Religious Experience, p. 78 and p. 78 n. 44; cf. Alma 5:14). See L. W. Cook, Marriages, pp. x-xiv; R. E. Cooper, Promises, pp. 64-65, 107-116 for discussions of the various meanings of the term “seal” in LDS doctrine and ordinances. Nibley gives a list of such meanings from non-LDS texts (H. W. Nibley, Evangelium, p. 37 n. 77).

1555 LDS teachings typically distinguish between the title of Elias, discussed here, and a prophet with the name of Elias, “presumably of Abraham’s time, who ‘committed the dispensation of Abraham’—which included the blessings of God’s covenant with Abraham—to the Prophet Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery on April 3, 1836, in the Kirtland Temple (D&C 110:12)” (G. A. Horton, Jr., Elias, p. 449).

1556 S. Brown, Elias, pp. 2.

1557 Ibid., p. 11.

1558 E.g., S. B. Kimball, Heber C. Kimball, p. 105.

1559 E.g., D&C 68:12, D. Q. Cannon et al., Far West, 25 October 1831, pp. 20-21. See also L. W. Cook, Marriages, pp. x-xiv; R. E. Cooper, Promises, pp. 114-115; J. Smith, Jr., Words, 13 August 1843, pp. 240-241.

1560 See R. E. Cooper, Promises, pp. 111-112 n. 2.

1561 B. R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, s. v. calling and election sure, pp. 109-110. See J. F. Smith, Jr., Doctrines, 1955, 2:46.

declared:

A man and a woman may by fraud and deception obtain admittance to the house of the Lord and may receive the pronouncement of the Holy Priesthood, giving to them, so far as lies in their power, these blessings. We may deceive men, but we cannot deceive the Holy Ghost, and our blessings will not be eternal unless they are also sealed by the holy spirit of promise... Then it is binding, efficacious, and of full force.¹⁵⁶²

Elder Marion G. Romney further explained:

[The] gift of eternal life in the world to come may not, of course, be fully realized during earth life. An assurance that it will be obtained in the world to come may, however, be had in this world. As a matter of fact, the blessings of the celestial kingdom are promised only to those who have such an assurance...¹⁵⁶³ These fruits of the Gospel—assurance that we shall obtain eternal life, peace in this world sustained by such an assurance, and finally eternal life in the world to come—are within the reach of us all. Sometimes, however, because of our lack of understanding and appreciation of them, I am persuaded that we take too much for granted. We assume that because we are members of the Church, we shall receive as a matter of course all the blessings of the Gospel. I have heard people contend that they have a claim upon them because they have been through the temple, even though they are not careful to keep the covenants they there made. I do not think this will be the case. We might take a lesson from an account given by the Prophet of a vision of the resurrection, in which he records that one of the saddest things he had ever witnessed was the sorrow of members of the Church who came forth to a resurrection below that which they had taken for granted they would receive.... A half-hearted performance is not enough... We must be willing to sacrifice everything. Through self-discipline and devotion we must demonstrate to the Lord that we are willing to serve Him under all circumstances. When we have done this, we shall receive an assurance that we shall have eternal life in the world to come. Then we shall have peace in this world.¹⁵⁶⁴

E-11 Explaining a related concept, William Clayton wrote in his journal:

“The g[rand] key word was the first word Adam spoke and is a word of supplication. [Joseph Smith] found the word by the Urim and Thummim—it is that key word to which the heavens [are] opened.”¹⁵⁶⁵

In the Targum Pseudo-Jonathan at Exodus 28:30 is written:

And you shall put into the breastplate the Urim, which illuminate their words and make manifest the hidden things of the House of Israel, and the Thummim, which perfect their deeds, for the High Priest who seeks instruction from the Lord through them. Because in them is engraved and exposed the great and holy Name by which the three hundred and ten worlds were created.... And whoever pronounces this holy Name in the hour of distress, shall be saved.¹⁵⁶⁶

Van Dam also cites Rashi’s commentary on Exodus 28:30,¹⁵⁶⁷ where he:

... considers the [Urim and Thummim] to have been an inscription of the Name (sem hamporas: YHWH) that was placed between the front and back of the doubled material forming the breastpiece by which the breastpiece illuminated its words and made its promises true. (Rashi referred to Yoma 73b for this explanation.) During the time of the Second Temple the divine Name was no longer within the breastpiece.¹⁵⁶⁸

See Fletcher-Louis for ancient examples of the reception of a new name.¹⁵⁶⁹

E-12. Christian astrophysicist David Wilkinson provides a very readable summary outlining why arguments from design, though suggestive of and consistent with the idea of a Creator to believers, are bound to fail as “proofs” of the existence of God.¹⁵⁷⁰ 1562 M. J. Ballard, Three Degrees 1949, pp. 236-237. Also cited in H. B. Lee, Lamp, p. 105.

1563 D&C 76:51-53.

1564 M. G. Romney, Assurance, pp. 41, 43-44.

1565 W. Clayton, Diaries, 15 June 1844; cf. W. Clayton, Chronicle, 15 June 1844, p. 134. Note that Chronicle does not contain the last phrase “it is that key word... opened.” Also cited in T. G. Hatch, Visions, p. 229.

1566 M. McNamara and M. Maher in A. D. Macho, Neophyti 1, 3:465-466, as cited with minor variation in C. Van Dam, Urim and Thummim, p. 23. Also cited in T. G. Hatch, Visions, pp. 229-230.

1567 Rashi, Exodus Commentary, 28:30, p. 393.

1568 N. M. Sarna, Exodus, Exodus 28:30, p. 182.

1569 C. H. T. Fletcher-Louis, Glory, pp. 188-189.

1570 D. Wilkinson, Hawking, pp. 135-167.

E-13. Unbelieving scientist Krauss expresses a related thought:

Carl Sagan... said that absence of evidence is not the same as evidence of absence. Would a world without God necessarily look any different than the world we live in? Most scientists would say no, and thus claim we do not need the God Hypothesis to explain anything about nature. On the other hand one might also ask: Would a world with a God necessarily look any different than the world we live in? People of faith would argue no, and in so doing feel vindicated in their faith. The problem is that both groups are correct, and nothing either can say is likely to influence the other.¹⁵⁷¹

E-14. Reynolds reports his informal observation that: “The overwhelming majority of LDS academics and intellectuals are active, faithful Latter-day Saints.”¹⁵⁷²E-15. Other groups specifically noted as being overrepresented were Jewish faculty, faculty espousing atheism or no religion, and Buddhist faculty.¹⁵⁷³ Note that 75% of the overall faculty said that religion was not important to them.

As a side note, 53% of university faculty hold unfavorable views of evangelical Christians, “leading Mormons as the least liked religious group by 20%.”¹⁵⁷⁴ Note also that faculty opinion about the LDS tended to be much more polarized than that of the general public, with significantly fewer reporting neutral feelings (20% vs. 42% of the general population) and 40% (vs. 33%) reporting favorable feelings.¹⁵⁷⁵

With respect to American scientists, a 1996 survey reported that “39 percent profess belief in God” and a 1997 survey found that “over half consider themselves ‘moderately spiritual’ to ‘very spiritual,’ and about a third hold formal religious affiliations.”¹⁵⁷⁶ By way of contrast, 94-96 percent of the public at large professes a belief in God.¹⁵⁷⁷

Unfortunately, there are many reasons why thoughtful people might be disinclined to take religion seriously. Among these is the fact that popular religious understanding often solely “rests on a caricature of religious fundamentalism” which is seen “as a reactionary movement bent on reversing all the progressive measures achieved over the last... decades.”¹⁵⁷⁸ Other people, according to sociologist Rodney Stark, may be put off in knowing “that many illusory or even fraudulent religious claims have been advanced” over the course of history.¹⁵⁷⁹ Moreover, “comparisons among religions can easily be corrosive to faith because one must confront the fact that, since they disagree, not all religions can be entirely true. From there it is a small step to conclude that all religions are false, that ‘all are refuted by all,’ as the renegade monk Jean Bodin put it in 1593.”¹⁵⁸⁰ Conversely, “similarities among the world’s religions... [sometimes may be] taken as ‘proof’ that they all are human inventions.”¹⁵⁸¹ Finally, some people are swayed by arguments that religious belief is nothing more than a combination of biological, psychological, and/or cultural imperatives.

While ultimate satisfaction of such concerns cannot be obtained by reasoned argument alone, perhaps at least a few fallacies can be swept aside. First, no serious believer would hold that each of the sundry 1571 L. M. Krauss et al., Science (online).

1572 N. B. Reynolds, Preface, p. x.

1573 G. A. Tobin et al., Religious Beliefs, p. 20.

1574 Ibid., p. 12.

1575 A September 2007 Pew opinion poll, taken of the general American public following a period of greater visibility of Mormonism during the Mitt Romney presidential campaign, gave the following Favorable-Unfavorable-No Opinion breakdowns: Jews (76-9-15%), Catholics (76-14-10%), Evangelical Christians (60-19-21%), Mormons (53-27-20%), Muslim Americans (53-29-18%), Muslims (43-35-22%), Atheists (35-53-12%). The poll also found that “having an acquaintance who is Mormon is linked with more positive opinions of Mormons and Mormonism. The large majority of those who know a Mormon (60%) express a favorable view of Mormons, compared with fewer than half (44%) of those who do not personally know a Mormon. And those who are acquainted with a Mormon are 11 points more likely than others to say that Mormonism and their own religion have a lot in common” (Public expresses mixed views of Islam, Mormonism).

1576 M. Shermer, Darwin, pp. 126-127.

1577 S. Atran, In Gods, p. 276.

1578 C. Lasch, Revolt, p. 215. See also D. Kinnaman et al., Unchristian. The authors of this book are evangelical Christians who think that it’s important to understand some of the stereotypes (all admittedly having some basis in reality) that people of the Mosaic (born 1984-2002) and Buster (born 1965-1983) generations have of religion. Some of the chapters are entitled: “Hypocritical,” “Get Saved!,” “Antihomosexual,” “Sheltered,” “Too Political,” and “Judgmental”—thus making clear many of the issues that make it difficult for religion to get a serious hearing among many today.

1579 R. Stark, Discovering, p. 8.

1580 Ibid., pp. 1-2.

1581 Ibid., p. 2.

and contradictory collections of spiritual beliefs and practices held at one time or another by individuals are rooted in divine revelation. “Some revelations are of God,” the Prophet Joseph Smith is remembered as saying, “some revelations are of man: and some revelations are of the Devil.”¹⁵⁸² Moreover, it should not be forgotten that even authentic revelations may be “subject to misunderstanding, exaggeration, and faulty transmission.”¹⁵⁸³ Regarding religious similarities among diverse groups, many believers are prepared to accept the possibility that “authentic revelations underlie many of the major faiths.”¹⁵⁸⁴ Finally, with respect to the “insufficiency of all biological approaches to explaining religion, or any other aspects of human culture,” the most important consideration in Stark’s view “is that they are unnecessary! The fundamental biological basis of all culture is general intelligence, and nothing more needs to be postulated.”¹⁵⁸⁵

“Thus,” writes Stark, “we reach the fundamental question: Does God exist? That is, have we discovered God? Or have we invented him? Are there so many similarities among the great religions because God is really the product of universal wish fulfillment? Did humans everywhere create supernatural beings out of their need for comfort in the face of existential tragedy and to find purpose and significance in life? Or have people in many places, to a greater and lesser degree, actually gained glimpses of God?”¹⁵⁸⁶ Once the possibility of authentic divine revelation is granted, attention can be turned to the “immense and humbling challenge” of determining “which ones are valid.”¹⁵⁸⁷

- E-16. Elder Neal A. Maxwell wrote: “For the disciple of Jesus Christ, academic scholarship is a form of worship. It is actually another dimension of consecration. Hence one who seeks to be a disciple-scholar will take both scholarship and discipleship seriously; and, likewise, gospel covenants.”¹⁵⁸⁸ Stott similarly concludes that “Latter-day Saint theology appears to negate the secularizing impact of education by sacralizing it.”¹⁵⁸⁹
- E-17. While national data indicate that, overall, the most educated are the least religious, among some denominations—and most dramatically among Mormons—there is a strong positive correlation. “Highly-educated Mormons are more likely to pray frequently, to have strong religious beliefs and to attend meetings, suggesting that devotion is even more important for those with higher levels of education than those with lower educations.”¹⁵⁹⁰ This is due at least in part to the fact that from its very beginning, the Church has placed significant emphasis upon education. “One result of this has been a standard of educational attainment that is significantly higher than the national average... For both males and females, the percentage of Mormons who have completed post-high-school education is significantly higher than is the case for the [U.S.] population as a whole. For Mormon males, 53.5 percent have some post-high school education compared to 36.5% for the U.S. population. For females, the figures are 44.3 for Mormons and 27.7 for the U.S. population generally.”¹⁵⁹¹
- E-18 While not intending to promote “unlicensed and irresponsible speculation” or “falling in love with one’s own reason,”¹⁵⁹² Madsen writes:¹⁵⁹³

Some problems are 100-percent guaranteed insoluble for now. Many others, though not insoluble, are not of particular interest. But there are some mysteries, which the scriptures call “the mysteries of godliness,”¹⁵⁹⁴ the deeper things, the richer things, and they are of which I suspect the Prophet spoke when he said, I beseech you go forward and “search deeper and deeper into the mysteries of Godliness.”¹⁵⁹⁵ These are the mysteries you are to pursue.

1582 Cited in D. Whitmer, Address, p. 31; cf. J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 16 May 1841, p. 189. See also B. H. Roberts, Comprehensive History, 1:162-163, J. Smith, Jr., Papers 2008-, Revelations and Translations, Manuscript Revelation Books, Canadian Copyright Revelation, circa early 1830, BCR 30-31, pp. 31, 33.

1583 R. Stark, Discovering, p. 52.

1584 Ibid., pp. 2-3.

1585 Ibid., p. 43.

1586 Ibid., p. 20.

1587 Ibid., p. 8. See, however, the findings of Consolmagno, who conjectured from his interviews that while younger scientists and engineers often saw religion as a source of truth, older ones, already settled in what they believe, tended to see it principally as a source of community (G. Consolmagno, God’s Mechanics, pp. 102-118).

1588 N. A. Maxwell, Disciple-Scholar, p. 7.

1589 G. Stott, Effect, p. 52. See also T. L. Givens, Paradox, pp. 65-99, 195-240; J. W. Welch, Thy Mind.

1590 S. L. Albrecht et al., Secularization, p. 308.

1591 Ibid., p. 302.

1592 President Joseph F. Smith described this danger as reading “by the lamp of [our] own conceit” (J. F. Smith, Gospel Doctrine, 1907, p. 373; cf. Colossians 2:8).

1593 T. G. Madsen, Nine Lessons, p. 114.

1594 1 Timothy 3:16; D&C 19:10.

1595 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 12 May 1844, p. 366; J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 12 May 1844, 6:363. “That the mysteries

In further explanation, he continues:¹⁵⁹⁶

But Joseph Smith counseled against futile and divisive speculation: “Let mysteries alone lest you be overthrown.”¹⁵⁹⁷ He adds: “A man can do nothing for himself unless God directs him in the right way; and the priesthood is for that purpose.”¹⁵⁹⁸ The context for these remarks is the temple,¹⁵⁹⁹ and temple learning requires more than abstract reflection. We are taught:¹⁶⁰⁰ “These revelations, which are reserved for and taught only to the faithful Church members in sacred temples, constituted what are called the ‘mysteries of Godliness.’¹⁶⁰¹ The Lord said He had given to Joseph ‘the keys of the mysteries, and the revelations which are sealed.’¹⁶⁰² As a reward to the faithful, the Lord promised: ‘And to them will I reveal all mysteries, yea, all the hidden mysteries of my kingdom from days of old.’”¹⁶⁰³

Nibley¹⁶⁰⁴ reinforces the same point:

Not everything is incomprehensible to everybody: “It is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given...”¹⁶⁰⁵ So we see that mystery is knowledge not known to some: “He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.”¹⁶⁰⁶ “Behold my beloved brethren, I will unfold this mystery unto you”¹⁶⁰⁷... A people are condemned who “will not search knowledge, nor understand great knowledge, when it is given unto them in plainness.”¹⁶⁰⁸ We make our own mysteries; we are not meant to be kept in darkness, and the mysteries of heaven will be unfolded to us as we make an effort to understand them.¹⁶⁰⁹

E-19. Erich Paul draws a similar conclusion:

Although the Darwinian redefinition of humanity’s place in nature has affected all of Western thinking in deep and lasting ways, Darwinism, rather than cosmology, had a far greater impact on Protestants than on Mormons. Although mainstream Christianity eventually made peace with Darwinism, in general Christians initially responded defensively to the emergence of organic evolution, partly because cosmology was never an integral part of Protestant theology, as it was (and is) for Mormonism, but also because Protestants before Darwin interpreted mankind’s origins exclusively from a literal reading of Genesis whereas Mormons strongly augmented their views from contemporary revelation and other prophetic sources.¹⁶¹⁰

Nibley points out that to Brigham Young “it was the economic and political rather than the scientific and biological implications of natural selection that were the real danger and the most counter to the gospel.”¹⁶¹¹

E-20. Of course, the various proponents of creationism vary widely in their fundamental assumptions (e.g., age of the earth, common descent) and in their stance with respect to scientific methodology. In contrast to Bailey’s view, Sherlock provides a controversial defense of the scientific viability of of godliness were a desirable subject of righteous pursuit is suggested by the following passages: Psalm 25:14; Daniel 2:28; Matthew 13:11; 1 Corinthians 4:1; 1 Nephi 2:16, 10:19; Alma 12:9-11; D&C 6:7, 19:8-10 (4-22), 42:61, 50:24-30, 76:5-10, 114-119, 84:19, 88:49-50, 63-69 (49-69), 93:1, 19-22, 26-28, 36-39, 107:18-19, 121:26-28, 132:23... Nevertheless, this important attribute of godliness is only part of the attribute of charity (1 Corinthians 13:2; 2 Peter 1:5-7)” (A. F. Ehat and L. W. Cook, in J. Smith, Jr., Words, p. 402 n. 3).

1596 T. G. Madsen, Nine Lessons, pp. 117-118.

1597 J. Smith, Jr., Words, 8 April 1843, p. 189.

1598 J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 12 May 1844, 6:363. T. Bullock’s notes vary slightly: “... the priesthood is reserved for that purpose” (J. Smith, Jr., Words, 12 May 1844, p. 366).

1599 See D&C 76:7, 128:7.

1600 H. B. Lee, Teachings 1996, July 1961, p. 575. Elder Lee continues: “In this sense, then, a mystery may be defined as a truth which cannot be known except by revelation.”

1601 1 Timothy 3:16, D&C 19:10.

1602 D&C 28:7.

1603 D&C 76:7.

1604 H. W. Nibley, Assembly, pp. 137-138.

1605 Matthew 13:11.

1606 Matthew 11:15.

1607 Jacob 4:18.

1608 2 Nephi 32:7.

1609 See H. W. Nibley, House of Glory, p. 330.

1610 E. R. Paul, Science, p. 2. For a highly readable overview on this topic from a Catholic perspective, see R. J. Clifford, Value.

1611 H. W. Nibley, Work, p. 207. See B. Young, Knight, 19 October 1876, p. 199.

“intelligent design” research and discusses its implications for an LDS audience.¹⁶¹² For additional reliable and accessible critiques of creationism and intelligent design that include respectful discussions of religious belief, see F. J. Ayala, Darwin; F. J. Ayala, Darwin’s Gift; R. M. Frye, Creationist; M. Shermer, Darwin.

- E-21. As a matter of scientific principle, Dawkins classes himself as a TAP (Temporary Agnostic in Practice), though he thinks the probability of a God is very small, and certainly in no sense would want to be “misunderstood as endorsing faith.”¹⁶¹³
- E-22. Though personally rejecting the notion of a personal God, Albert Einstein is an example of one whose deeply-held “vision of unity and order”¹⁶¹⁴—which throughout his life played an important role in shaping his scientific intuitions¹⁶¹⁵—was chiefly motivated by his profound sense of awe and humility in the face of the lawful and “marvelously arranged” universe: “Everyone who is seriously involved in the pursuit of science becomes convinced that a spirit is manifest in the laws of the Universe—a spirit vastly superior to that of man, and one in the face of which we with our modest powers must feel humble.”¹⁶¹⁶ Often more critical of the debunkers of religion than of naïve believers in God, he explained: “The fanatical atheists are like slaves who are still feeling the weight of their chains which they have thrown off after hard struggle. They are creatures who—in their grudge against traditional religion as the ‘opium of the masses’—cannot hear the music of the spheres.”¹⁶¹⁷
- E-23. Illustrating this attitude of meekness with an anecdote about his scientist father, Elder Henry B. Eyring wrote:

Some of you have heard me tell of being in a meeting in New York as my father presented a paper at the American Chemical Society. A younger chemist popped up from the audience, interrupted, and said: “Professor Eyring, I’ve heard you on the other side of this question.” Dad laughed and said, “Look, I’ve been on every side of it I can find, and I’ll have to keep trying other sides until I finally get it figured out.” And then he went on with his lecture. So much for looking as though you are always right. He was saying what any good little Mormon boy would say. It was not a personality trait of Henry Eyring. He was a practicing believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. He knew that the Savior was the only perfect chemist. That was the way Dad saw the world and his place in it. He saw himself as a child. He worked his heart out, as hard as he could work. He was willing to believe he didn’t know most things. He was willing to change any idea he’s ever had when he found something which seemed closer to the truth. And even when others praised his work, he always knew it was an approximation in the Lord’s eyes, and so he might come at the problem again, from another direction.¹⁶¹⁸

- E-24. In this spirit, Nibley famously responded to a reappraisal of his interpretation of one of the book of Abraham facsimiles:

I refuse to be held responsible for anything I wrote more than three years ago. For heaven’s sake, I hope we are moving forward here. After all, the implication that one mistake and it is all over with? How flattering to think in forty years I have not made one slip and I am still in business! I would say about four-fifths of everything I put down has changed, of course. That is the whole idea—this is an ongoing process...¹⁶¹⁹

- E-25. Nibley wrote about:

... the first rule of scholarship: You are never playing with a full deck. You never know how much evidence you may be missing, what it is, or where it is hiding. What counters that and saves the day for scholarship is what I have called the ‘Gas Law of Learning,’ namely, that any amount of knowledge, no matter how small, will fill any vacuum of ignorance, no matter how large. He who knows one or two facts can honestly claim to know at least something about a subject, and nobody knows everything. So it is with the schoolmen who make the rules and move the goalposts.¹⁶²⁰

1612 R. Sherlock, Intelligent Design.

1613 L. M. Krauss et al., Science (online).

1614 C. H. Townes, Convergence, p. 66.

1615 See, e.g., W. Isaacson, Einstein, p. 335.

1616 Ibid., p. 388.

1617 Ibid., p. 390.

1618 H. B. Eyring, Jr., Faith, p. 70.

1619 H. W. Nibley, Facsimiles, p. 49.

1620 H. W. Nibley, Not to Worry, p. 146.

See Taleb for many examples of how both experts and laymen have become “convinced that they understood what was going on” despite the fact that “[e]very single day brought occurrences that lay completely outside their forecast, [and that] they could not [even] figure out that they had not forecast them.”¹⁶²¹ One implication of his observations is that a person should “make an attempt not to treat his knowledge as a treasure, or even a possession, or even a self-esteem enhancement device,”¹⁶²² but rather should be more attentive to “what we do not know.”¹⁶²³ In the same spirit, “a private library is not an ego-boosting appendage but a research tool. Read books are far less valuable than unread ones. The library should contain as much of what you do not know as your financial means... allow you to put there.”¹⁶²⁴

E-26. Regarding this point, Erich Paul writes:¹⁶²⁵

The Mormon authorities B. H. Roberts, James E. Talmage, John A. Widtsoe, and Joseph F. Merrill, who were very positive about science otherwise, ultimately rejected science in any guise as the foundation for religion or moral science in general. Thus, although some Mormons came close to developing a natural theology, Roberts for example recognized that science by its very nature is epistemologically insecure and therefore metaphysically suspect... A more careful and less polemical discussion of Joseph Smith’s ideas, however, would have saved Roberts, Widtsoe, and other Mormons from making problematic and erroneous, but “faith promoting,” statements, such as that the ether of nineteenth-century physics is the physical embodiment of the Holy Ghost or that astronomy verifies the truth of the book of Abraham. In their defense, however, many non-Mormons—scientists and others—even to this day have made similar claims about the alleged truthfulness of science. Unwittingly, these individuals were laying the foundation for a full-fledged natural theology: the view that religion can be verified by association with the prevailing theories and findings of science... At the deepest, ontological level, science as philosophy is unable to reveal much at all. As the cosmologist Edward R. Harrison has expressed it: “The history of cosmology [and science generally] shows us that in every age devout people believe that they have at last discovered the true nature of the Universe, whereas in each case they have devised a world picture—merely a universe—that is like a mask fitted on the face of the still unknown Universe.”¹⁶²⁶

E-27 Nibley characterizes scientific prejudice as follows:

Is an open mind, then, a negative thing—an empty mind? It is, unless it is a searching mind. An oyster has few prejudices—in the field of astronomy it has, we may safely say, absolutely none. Are we then to congratulate the oyster for its open-mindedness? A first-rate and very broad-minded scientist, J. B. S. Haldane, defines prejudice as “an opinion held without examining the evidence.” Prejudice does not consist in having made up one’s mind—in defending an opinion with fervor and determination, ...it consists in forming an opinion before all the evidence has been considered. This means that freedom from prejudice whether in the field of science or any other field requires a tremendous lot of work—one cannot be unprejudiced without constant and laborious study of evidence; the open mind must be a searching mind. The person who claims allegiance to science in his thinking or who is an advocate of the open mind has let himself in for endless toil and trouble.¹⁶²⁷

E-28. This was exactly the perspective of LDS scientist Henry Eyring who was said to have “cared less about the explanation for every piece of his [Absolute Rate Theory] model than about using it to make new discoveries. He was confident that the unanswered questions would be solved in time, and he meanwhile wanted to apply the model to any subject it could usefully illuminate.”¹⁶²⁸

E-29 As Peterson expresses it:¹⁶²⁹

LDS Bible use combines an essentially traditional perspective with liberal (even radical) elements, some unique to Mormonism... Scripture was not untouchable. [Joseph] Smith subordinated it to 1621 N. N. Taleb, Black Swan, p. 10.

1622 Ibid., p. 2.

1623 Ibid., p. xxi.

1624 Ibid., p. 1.

1625 E. R. Paul, Science, p. 230.

1626 See E. R. Harrison, Cosmology, p. 1; cf. W. E. Evenson, Science, pp. cxiii-cxiv.

1627 H. W. Nibley, Open Mind, pp. 128-129.

1628 H. J. Eyring, Mormon Scientist, p. 29.

1629 D. C. Peterson, Review of Barlow, p. 78.

direct experience with God, and was willing to modify biblical texts to make them accord with the revelations he had received. Indeed, he produced new scripture—thus rejecting the Protestant principle of the all-sufficiency of the Bible.

Belief in continuous revelation both heightened and lowered the status of the Bible among Mormons. On the one hand, having themselves witnessed and indeed participated in a recommenced biblical drama, they knew the Bible to be true. Through a rebirth of prophetic tradition, ancient and modern Saints became contemporaries... On the other hand, Mormon prophets and apostles insisted upon their own limitations (easily observable by the Saints themselves). Thus, by analogy, the awesome distance between biblical figures and modern believers was reduced, and the Bible became “familiar.”

- E-30 Thus, Elder Neal A. Maxwell’s comment: “Today we carry convenient quadruple combinations of the scriptures. But one day, since more scriptures are coming, we may need to pull little red wagons brim with books.”¹⁶³⁰ He added, “Of course, computers may replace wagons.”¹⁶³¹
- E-31 In his characteristically forthright manner, Brigham Young expressed similar thoughts: “... compared with the living oracles those books are nothing to me.”¹⁶³² “I would not give the ashes of a rye straw for all those books... without the living oracles...”¹⁶³³ In contrast to this view, the doctrine of sola scriptura accepted by many Christians presumes a closed canon that precludes the possibility of any subsequent scriptural additions assuming the same authority of the Bible.¹⁶³⁴ In contrast to this view, Wright points out that: “The risen Jesus, at the end of Matthew’s Gospel, does not say, ‘All authority in heaven and on earth is given to the books you are all going to write,’ but [rather] ‘All authority in heaven and on earth is given to me.’”¹⁶³⁵ Elsewhere, he argues that “... in the Bible all authority lies with God himself” as wielded “through human agents anointed and equipped by the Holy Spirit.” He recalls “a well-known lecturer once insisting that ‘there can be no authority other than scripture,’ and thumping the tub so completely that I wanted to ask ‘but what about God?’”¹⁶³⁶
- E-32 Mourning the passing of the unique revelatory period at the death of the “last prophet,” a student of Islam writes: “While Muhammad still lived and prophecy and revelation in Islam continued, an order of existence prevailed that was unattainable in subsequent times... No other age could attain its perfection, no ensuing accomplishment equal its glories.... Bereft of the guidance of its charismatic prophet-founder and the ‘revealing,’ the ongoing revelation, which he brought, the Ummah [faith community] was now on its own.”¹⁶³⁷
- Ayoub points out, however, that though revelation “reached its technical culmination in the prophet Muhammad through a long period of what we call progressive revelation, nonetheless it may be said that revelation continues, not in the form of wahi (revelation technically considered) but in the form of ilham, or inspiration which is open to the friends and worshipful servants of God. This mode of revelation will not end.”¹⁶³⁸
- E-33 Note that “new” scripture being given under the influence of the Holy Ghost is often couched in terms identical to passages of previously revealed scripture.¹⁶³⁹ Explained Smith and Sjodahl: “When the Spirit of the Lord speaks through a human instrument, He acts independently, even when proclaiming truths formerly revealed. Strictly speaking, the Holy Spirit does not quote the Scriptures, but gives Scripture.”¹⁶⁴⁰ Elder Bruce R. McConkie once expressed a similar point:

1630 N. A. Maxwell, Flood, p. 18.

1631 N. A. Maxwell, Quote, p. 298. A range of questions associated with the idea of an open canon are considered by Elder Alexander B. Morrison in A. B. Morrison, Canon, pp. 6-10. See also W. D. Davies, Reflections, p. 64; T. L. Givens, Hand, p. 196. Robert L. Millet gives an accessible overview regarding the wider question of how one is to determine authoritative doctrine in the Church (R. L. Millet, Doctrinal Parameters). See also Approaching Mormon Doctrine; J. E. Faulconer, Coffee; N. B. Oman, Authority; N. B. Oman, Jurisprudence.

1632 Cited in P. L. Barlow, Bible, pp. 92-93.

1633 B. Young, Journal, 27 January 1860, p. 417; cf. P. L. Barlow, Bible, p. 93; B. Young, 7 October 1864, p. 339.

1634 See 2 Nephi 29:3.

1635 N. T. Wright, Last Word, p. xi. See Matthew 28:18. Cf. J. R. Holland, Words, p. 93; J. R. Holland, Words (Broken), p. 188.

1636 N. T. Wright, Authoritative. See also P. L. Owen, Anglo-Catholic, pp. 57-60.

1637 W. A. Graham, Divine, pp. 9-10.

1638 M. M. Ayoub, Redemption, p. 158.

1639 E.g., JS-H 1:36-41.

1640 H. M. Smith et al., Commentary, p. 350.

In speaking of these wondrous things I shall use my own words, though you may think they are the words of scripture, words spoken by other apostles and prophets. True it is, they were first proclaimed by others, but they are now mine, for the Holy Spirit of God has borne witness to me that they are true, and it is now as though the Lord had revealed them to me in the first instance. I have thereby heard his voice and know his word.¹⁶⁴¹

On another occasion Elder McConkie said:

If the Spirit bears record to us of the truth of the scriptures, then we are receiving the doctrines in them as though they had come to us directly. Thus, we can testify that we have heard his voice and know his words.¹⁶⁴²

Hence, just as scripture constitutes a report of an encounter with God's voice, an authentic experience with scripture invites God's presence anew, with the possibility of further revelation.¹⁶⁴³

E-34 Indeed, Peterson observes that: "The creation of a canon commences when revelation is thought to have come to a halt, and in turn the concept of a canon reinforces the notion that revelation has ceased."¹⁶⁴⁴

E-35 Joseph Smith himself corrected a member of the Church who thought that "a prophet is always a prophet" telling him that "a prophet is only a prophet when acting as such."¹⁶⁴⁵ Similarly, in response to an online essay, Bushman argued against current misguided efforts to apply a stereotype of fanaticism to Latter-day Saints:

The stereotype of fanaticism is essentially a logical construction. The seemingly airtight logic is that anyone who claims to speak for God must believe he possesses absolute truth with an implied commission to impose that truth on everyone else. Muhammad, to whom Joseph Smith was frequently compared, [is seen by those who use this argument as having] used violence. Joseph Smith, lacking the means, [is seen by them as having] tyrannized his own followers and refused to acknowledge the truth of any other doctrines but his own. [It is assumed] that Mormon leaders, by the same token, will want to commandeer... government to advance their cause. Nothing Mormons can do will ever alleviate these fears. It did not help that the right of individual conscience in religious matters was made an article of faith, or that the Nauvoo city council passed a toleration act for every conceivable religious group including Catholics, Jews, and "Muhammadans." Whatever they said, their neighbors could not believe that the Mormons' ultimate goal was not to compel everyone to believe as they did.

... [It is mistakenly thought that] Mormons have to be interested in world domination because their doctrine requires it of them. Furthermore, they are all [falsely depicted as] dupes of the chief fanatic and will willingly do anything he requires... That leap from assumption to conclusion in one bound is only possible if you are steeped in the logic of fanaticism. For Mormons themselves, it makes no sense.¹⁶⁴⁶

E-36 See Givens for a discussion of various models in the theology of revelation, and his own view of "dialogic revelation" within Mormonism.¹⁶⁴⁷ Elsewhere, Givens discusses the fact that, because the restoration is not yet complete, not only the Lord Himself, but also other religious traditions:

... have much to teach us... by way of... adding to the body of revealed doctrine we call precious and true... Our contemporary condescension in this regard was clearly foreign to a prophet who showed the world he could translate gold plates written in Reformed Egyptian, then hired a Jewish schoolmaster to teach him Hebrew.¹⁶⁴⁸

Elsewhere Givens observes that:

The real meaning of Joseph's School of the Prophets... is to be fathomed from its timing and growing direction in the context of his own prophetic career: after the youthful leader had established his 1641 D. B. Horne, McConkie, p. 205; B. R. McConkie, New Witness, p. xii.

1642 D. B. Horne, McConkie, p. 205; B. R. McConkie, Come, p. 59; B. R. McConkie, Sermons, p. 256.

1643 E.g., Joseph Smith—History 1:11ff.; D&C 76:15-19, 138:1-11.

1644 D. C. Peterson, Muhammad (2001), p. 597. See Excursus 49: The People of the Book, p. 651.

1645 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 8 February 1843, p. 278.

1646 R. L. Bushman, Mitt.

1647 T. L. Givens, Hand, pp. 209-239. See A. Dulles, Revelation for the broader context of this idea. See also B. T. Ostler, Spiritual Experiences.

1648 T. L. Givens, Dialectic.

credentials as Prophet and translator, after he had personally manifested his power to reveal the fullness of saving truth directly from heaven, and after he claimed receipt of authority to perform all saving ordinances in the new church. At that moment when he had powerfully demonstrated to his followers the irrelevance of priestly training, clerical degrees, and scholarly credentials, he changed modus operandi in midstream... It is to this two-pronged approach that we may trace the Mormon paradox of a culture of spiritual certainty—a group embrace of a rhetoric of absolute self-assurance about spiritual truths—coexisting with a conception of education as the endless and eternal acquisition of the knowledge that leads to godhood.¹⁶⁴⁹

- E-37 In this vein, the distinguished religious scholar Martin E. Marty concludes that Mormons, if one admits that they “do” theology at all, work from a “slightly broader definition of that term than the conventional ones. “Conventional” here means the Christian modes that combine the language of the Hebrew Scriptures with mainly Greek philosophical concepts as filtered through academic experiences in Western Europe.”¹⁶⁵⁰ “In general,” however, “LDS scholars are... at home with... Christian thought... They earn their doctorates at Harvard or other graduate schools permeated with the concepts of Christian theology, even if and though they often return ‘home’ to Brigham Young & Company.”¹⁶⁵¹

Faulconer notes the fact that, in the formal sense, “Mormonism does not even have a widely accepted theology, much less an official one, though it has and has had several practitioners.” He observes that one “obvious reason for the relative absence of theology among Mormons is that the Church is still young.” More important reasons, however, for the “dearth of theology among Latter-day Saints” include: “the belief in continuing revelation, the nature of scripture, and the fact that, like many Jews, Mormons understand their religion primarily in terms of practices and attitudes rather than in terms of beliefs.”¹⁶⁵² However:

... there is an important sense in which, without calling it theology, Latter-day Saints have practiced hermeneutical theology since shortly after the founding of the Church. They have been intensely interested in and written much about Church history, understanding Mormon history—the things we have done and experienced—as the key to understanding what it means to be a Mormon; understanding the interpretation of Latter-day Saint history as disciplined reflection on what it means to be a Latter-day Saint, or in other words as quasi-theological, even if only implicitly.¹⁶⁵³

- E-38 On this point, Wright comments:

I remember a well-known Preacher saying that he thought a lot of Christians used the Bible as an unsorted edition of Daily Light. It really ought to be arranged into neat little devotional chunks, but it happens to have got all muddled up... But to treat the Bible like that is, in fact, simply to take your place in a very long tradition of Christians who have tried to make the Bible into a set of abstract truths and rules—abstract devotional doctrinal, or evangelistic snippets here and there....

The problem with all such solutions as to how to use the Bible is that they belittle the Bible and exalt something else. Basically they imply—and this is what I mean when I say that they offer too low a view of scripture—that God has, after all, given us the wrong sort of book and it is our job to turn it into the right sort of book by engaging in these hermeneutical moves, translation procedures or whatever. They imply that the real place where God has revealed himself—the real locus of authority and revelation—is, in fact, somewhere else; somewhere else in the past in an event that once took place, or somewhere else in a timeless sphere which is not really hooked into our world at all [that] touches it tangentially, or somewhere in the present in “my own experience,” or somewhere in the future in some great act which is yet to come... My conclusion, then, is this: that the regular views of scripture and its authority... fail to do justice to what the Bible actually is—a book, an ancient book, an ancient narrative book. They function by turning that book into something else, and by implying thereby that God has, after all, given us the wrong sort of book.¹⁶⁵⁴

- E-39 On the strengths of regular rotation class study of the sacred works, and the problems in relying on selective lectionaries rather than readings of the whole book of scripture, Wright observes:

1649 T. L. Givens, Paradox, p. 74.

1650 M. E. Marty, Foreword, p. vii.

1651 Ibid., p. ix. See D. L. Paulsen, Interview, pp. 67–68 for a discussion of the place of theology in LDS scholarship.

1652 J. E. Faulconer, Tracy, pp. 472, 473–474. See also J. E. Faulconer, Coffee; B. Huff, Theology; J. Siebach, Response.

1653 J. E. Faulconer, Tracy, p. 476; cf. J. Shipps, Sojourner, 381–383, 385, 390 n. 40.

1654 N. T. Wright, Authoritative.

The church in her public worship uses lectionaries—at least, if she does not, she runs the grave risk of revolving, as C. S. Lewis pointed out, round the little treadmill of favorite passages, of “desert island texts,” and muzzling the terrible and wonderful things that scripture really has to say. But even in the lectionaries there are problems; because at least those that are common... today do their own fair share of muzzling, missing out crucial passages in order to keep the readings short, omitting verses that might shock modern Western sensibilities. The Bible is to be in the bloodstream of the church’s worship, but at the moment the bloodstream is looking fairly watery.¹⁶⁵⁵

E-40 On the power of stories, Wright observes:

Story authority, as Jesus knew only too well, is the authority that really works. Throw a rule book at people’s head, or offer them a list of doctrines, and they can duck or avoid it, or simply disagree and go away. Tell them a story, though, and you invite them to come into a different world; you invite them to share a world-view or better still a “God-view.” That, actually, is what the parables are all about. They offer, as all genuine Christian story-telling does, a world-view which, as someone comes into it and finds how compelling it is, quietly shatters the world-view that they were in already. Stories determine how people see themselves and how they see the world. Stories determine how they experience God, and the world, and themselves, and others. Great revolutionary movements have told stories about the past and present and future. They have invited people to see themselves in that light, and people’s lives have been changed. If that happens at a merely human level, how much more when it is God Himself, the creator, breathing through His word...

In the church and in the world, then, we have to tell the story. It is not enough to translate scripture into timeless truths. How easy it has been for theologians and preachers to translate the gospels (for instance) into something more like epistles! We must, if anything, assimilate the epistles to the gospels rather than vice versa. I would not actually recommend that, but if you were going to make a mistake that would be the direction to do it in. And as we tell the story—the story of Israel, the story of Jesus, the story of the early church—that itself is an act of worship...

We need to recapture a sense of scripture as a whole, telling and retelling stories as wholes. Only when you read Exodus as a whole (for example) do you realize the awful irony whereby the making of the golden calf¹⁶⁵⁶ is a parody of what God wanted the people to do with their gold and jewels... and only by reading Mark as a whole might you realize that, when the disciples ask to sit at Jesus’ right and left hand,¹⁶⁵⁷ they are indeed asking for something they do not understand.¹⁶⁵⁸

E-41 About this reductive approach to scriptural understanding, Wright laments:

We have, again and again, allowed ourselves to say—I’ve heard myself say it, over and over again—“What Paul is really getting at here is...” “What Jesus was really meaning in this passage...”—and then, what has happened is a translation of something which is beautiful, and fragile, and unique, into something which is commonplace and boring, and every other Christian in the pew has heard it several sermons before. I am reminded of that amazing line in Schaffer’s play Amadeus where Salieri sees on stage Mozart’s Figaro, and he says, “He has taken ordinary people—chambermaids and servants and barbers—and he has made them gods and heroes.” And then Salieri remembers his own operas and he says, “I have taken gods and heroes—and I have made them ordinary.” God forgive us that we have taken the Bible and have made it ordinary—that we have cut it down to our size. We have reduced it, so that whatever text we preach on it will say basically the same things.¹⁶⁵⁹

Teaching the scriptures in this trivializing manner performs what Neusner has called “a negative miracle”: it takes a subject, namely religion, which is “rich in life, and [makes] it dull.”¹⁶⁶⁰

E-42 Halpern and Wesson note that “to many physicists this explanation doesn’t seem physical enough, given that nobody can really travel in imaginary time,” and describe alternative suggestions for circumventing the necessity for an initial singularity.¹⁶⁶¹

Note that, concluding the impossibility of a complete description of the universe, Hawking has since ¹⁶⁵⁵ Ibid.

¹⁶⁵⁶ Exodus 32:1-4.

¹⁶⁵⁷ Mark 10:37-40.

¹⁶⁵⁸ N. T. Wright, Authoritative.

¹⁶⁵⁹ Ibid.

¹⁶⁶⁰ J. Neusner, Vocation, p. 118, cited in A. B. McCollum, Re-visioning, p. 178.

¹⁶⁶¹ P. Halpern et al., Brave, pp. 175-176.

relinquished his original quest for a “Theory of Everything.”¹⁶⁶²

- E-43 Some of those who espouse the view of an ex nihilo creation have eagerly embraced the “big bang” hypothesis as evidence that there must be a God who provided the “First Cause.” This is a very old theological argument whose roots can be traced back as far as Aristotle. Problems with this mode of reasoning and the related notion of a “god of the gaps” are summarized by Wilkinson.¹⁶⁶³ About the problem of defining a credible “god of the gaps” that is custom-tailored to fit the current shape of ignorance in scientific understanding, Hazen remarks: “The problem with this view is that as we learn more, the gaps narrow... [until] God’s role is squeezed down to ever more trivial variations and inconsequential modifications.”¹⁶⁶⁴
- E-44 Of course, in a view where time itself emerges out of the creation of a universe, the concept of “past” as applied to the idea of an eternally “self-reproducing eternal inflationary universe” cannot be interpreted in the commonsense way.¹⁶⁶⁵
- E-45 Scientists predict that the gradual disappearance of the afterglow of the big bang and all but what was once our local group of galaxies over many billions of years would not only diminish the awareness of any future generations concerning the universe as it would then exist, but also would preclude their ability to discover how it all began.¹⁶⁶⁶
- E-46 Such an idea is similar to Philo’s Platonic idea of the visible world being copied from its wholly conceptual heavenly prototype: “So when He willed to create this visible world He first formed the intelligible world in order that He might have the use of a pattern wholly God-like and incorporeal in producing the material world, as a later creation, the very image of an earlier... As then, the city which was fashioned beforehand within the mind of the architect... even so the universe that consisted of ideas would have no other location than the Divine Reason, which was the Author of this ordered frame.”¹⁶⁶⁷ Traces of a similar idea can be found in Colossians 1:15-17.¹⁶⁶⁸ Though advance planning of some sort doubtless took place before the foundations of the world, this process is never referred to in the scriptures as a form of spiritual creation.
- E-47 Note that Paul warns in Colossians 2:18 against the “worshiping of angels.”
- E-48 Schimmel expresses the view of Sufism about the superiority of Adam to the angels as follows: “Man is superior to the angels..., who have not been given the secret of the names and who do nothing but worship God in perfect obedience, whereas man enjoys—or suffers from—the choice between obedience and rebellion... Man was entrusted with the amana, the ‘trust’¹⁶⁶⁹ that Heaven and earth refused to carry—a trust that has been differently interpreted: as responsibility, free will, love, or the power of individuation.”¹⁶⁷⁰
- E-49 For Satan, the competition with Christ and Adam can be nothing but a win-lose proposition. Al-Tha’labi records that when Satan saw the veneration of Adam by the hosts of heaven, he said to himself: “By God, if He prefers this one [Adam] over me I shall rebel against Him [God], but if I am preferred over him I shall destroy him.”¹⁶⁷¹
- E-50 Barker associates the experiences of Isaac and Ishmael with the rites of the Day of Atonement: “The ritual involved two goats: one was sacrificed and its blood used to make atonement, the other—representing Azazel the leader of the fallen angels—was driven off into the desert, bearing the sins. This echoes in the story of Abraham’s two sons: Isaac who was sacrificed [on Mount Moriah]... and Ishmael who was driven out into the desert.”¹⁶⁷²
- E-51 An updated form of this style of thinking continues implicitly today, as an article published in Nature in 2005 attests. Nee observes:

1662 S. Hawking, Gödel.

1663 D. Wilkinson, Hawking, pp. 123-133.

1664 R. M. Hazen, Genesis, p. 80.

1665 D. Wilkinson, Hawking, pp. 118-119.

1666 L. M. Krauss et al., End.

1667 Philo, De officio mundi 16:20, cited in S. Ruzer, Reflections, p. 97.

1668 S. Ruzer, Reflections, pp. 99-100.

1669 Qur’an 33:72.

1670 A. Schimmel, Mystical, p. 188.

1671 A. al-Tha’labi, Lives, p. 45.

1672 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 36.

Although advocates of evolution may have stripped [the concept of the great chain of being] of its supernatural summit, this view is with us still. Common presentations of evolution mirror the great chain by viewing the process as progressive... [For example, Richard Dawkins, in his book The Ancestor's Tale,] cautions us against thinking that evolution is progressive, culminating with us. He emphasizes that with whatever organism we begin the pilgrimage back through time, we all are reunited at the origin of life. But by beginning the journey with us and looking backwards along our ancestry, Dawkins generates a sequence of chapter titles that would read like a typical chain to a medieval theologian, albeit with some novelties and the startling omission of God.¹⁶⁷³

- E-52 On the connection between the earthly and the heavenly realms in the quorum of ten men forming a Jewish minyan for prayer, Kogan writes: “On one level, the body that is formed below, the actual minyan, is entered by the Shekhinah (the supernal holiness), and is thus the point of contact between God and Israel. Simultaneously, the minyan formed in the proper manner below unifies the heavenly realm above.”¹⁶⁷⁴ Note the similarity to the Islamic haji, where pilgrims circumambulate the Ka’bah and offer prayer in likeness of the angels.¹⁶⁷⁵ Isar likewise notes the Easter custom still preserved in some Orthodox monasteries where, “during the singing of the troparion ‘Christ is risen!’, a special circular lighting device, specifically called a ‘choros,’ was presumably introduced in the Byzantine churches around the 12th century, carrying out an old custom reflecting the paradigm of the divine choral movement.”¹⁶⁷⁶

- E-53 Cf. Major’s description of ancient Huang-Lao cosmography: “The axis of heaven is usually taken to be the polestar, and the axis of earth a point lying directly beneath it, far to the north of China... [While] axial imagery varies, the fundamental importance of centrality does not.”¹⁶⁷⁷ Moreover, “the relationship of heaven to earth was that heaven covers earth ‘like the canopy of a chariot.’ This clearly defines a square within a circle... Wang Chong’s famous complaint in the Lunheng that if heaven were round and earth square ‘the corners would not fit’” is likewise germane in the context of the “circle within a square of the cosmograph.”¹⁶⁷⁸

- E-54 The conviction of truth is thus to be taken as prior to the question of whether conversion will increase personal happiness. Indeed, such a conviction has sustained many throughout history who have been compelled to embrace the gospel at the cost of great personal sacrifice. As C. S. Lewis puts it:

Christianity claims to give an account of facts—to tell you what the real universe is like... If Christianity is untrue, then no honest man will want to believe it, however helpful it might be: if it is true, every honest man will want to believe it, even if it gives him no help at all.¹⁶⁷⁹

Scientist and religious skeptic Richard Dawkins rightfully concurs with the tenor of Lewis’ remarks:

I recently had a televised encounter with the veteran British politician Tony Benn, a former minister of technology who calls himself a Christian. It became very clear in the course of our discussion that he had not the slightest interest in whether Christian beliefs are true or not; his only concern was whether they are moral. He objected to science on the grounds that it gave no moral guidance. When I protested that moral guidance is not what science is about, he came close to asking what, then, was the use of science...

Other examples include those people who think that whether religious beliefs are true or false is less important than the power of religion to comfort and to give a purpose to life. I... have no objection to people drawing comfort from wherever they choose and no objection to strong moral compasses. But the question of the moral or consolation value of religion—one way or the other—must be kept separate in our minds from the truth value of religion.¹⁶⁸⁰

As Lasch observes: “Culture may well depend on religion..., but religion has no meaning if it is seen merely as a prop of culture.”¹⁶⁸¹

- E-55 Indeed for the first generation of Latter-day Saints, as Givens convincingly argues, “the ‘message’ of 1673 S. Nee, Chain.

1674 In D. Blumenthal, Merkabah, p. 147.

1675 M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, p. 61. See Figure 4-4, p. 219.

1676 N. Isar, Dance of Adam, p. 202. See also F. M. Huchel, Cosmic, p. 9.

1677 J. S. Major, Heaven, p. 37.

1678 Ibid., p. 35.

1679 C. S. Lewis, Rabbit, p. 352.

1680 L. M. Krauss et al., Science, p. 91.

1681 C. Lasch, Revolt, p. 228.

the Book of Mormon was the manner of its origin,”¹⁶⁸² with the importance of the story of its coming forth as a sign of the Restoration overshadowing discussion of the content of the book itself.

- E-56 Updating Campbell’s view, Charlesworth summarizes how similar anti-historical arguments advanced by scholars such as Bultmann, Barth, and Tillich with respect to the New Testament have now been superseded.¹⁶⁸³ See also Givens¹⁶⁸⁴ for an excellent discussion of why the very notion of prophetic writings “grounded in artifactual reality”¹⁶⁸⁵ and:

... replete with the specificity of mundane details invites ridicule and censure from those wedded to modern conventions regarding the sacred. Joseph Smith’s unwavering insistence on the tie between his spiritual claims and historical occurrences has produced a body of scriptural text that, in the words of Mikhail Bakhtin, “enters our verbal consciousness as a compact and indivisible mass; one must either totally affirm it, or totally reject it. It is indissolubly fused with its authority—... and it stands and falls together with that authority.”¹⁶⁸⁶

Other models of inspiration might render “sacred discourse more elastic,” allowing:

... editorial and exegetical intrusion alike [to] be seen... as correctives in a human process, not profane meddling with a tottering ark. [However, by] not just emulating but actually invoking Old Testament modes of seership, Joseph Smith firmly precluded any such tampering at the same time that he foreshadowed a radically new paradigm for revelation and inspiration generally, one which would be fully fleshed out in the text he produced. True enough, the Lord indicated to Joseph that his commandments “were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language.”¹⁶⁸⁷ But as prophet, Joseph’s revelatory stance and range of expression are anything but “purely free.”¹⁶⁸⁸

- E-57 For example, Matthews describes his perspective on the events in the early chapters of the book of Moses:

We accept Adam and Eve as real persons who lived, transgressed, and brought about their own Fall and the consequent fall of all mankind. If we had a complete record, it would be possible to mark on the calendar the actual time that the Fall occurred. Likewise, if we had an adequate map it would be possible to mark the exact spot where the transgression occurred. The Fall is just that real and absolute. A real man and a real woman did, at a particular time and geographical location, transgress a commandment which brought about the Fall of man, an event which has affected not only all of mankind but also the whole Creation.¹⁶⁸⁹

Sherlock admits that:

Mormonism has not generally been sympathetic to... “mythic” reading[s] of key parts of scripture. Of course scripture has been written with moral or theological points in mind. But viewing scripture as history selected with a theological point is fundamentally different than viewing scripture as a mythic tale with a theological meaning.¹⁶⁹⁰

- E-58 LaCocque observes that:

... nothing can be more damaging...than when people entertain the illusion that they have heard so much of and about [a Bible story] that they do not need to hear it ever anew. For, when the mind ceases to be curious, a sort of immunity to the impact of the “Word” develops that is at times more detrimental than sheer ignorance. Thus, the universal knowledge enjoyed by the myth of Adam and Eve is also its curse. To consider the story of Adam and Eve as a tale for children is only possible when the story is vaguely known, when it is considered from a distance, and with a pre-

1682 T. L. Givens, Hand, p. 84.

1683 J. H. Charlesworth, Psychobiography, pp. 58-59; cf. J. H. Charlesworth, Archaeology.

1684 T. L. Givens, Hand, pp. 72-84.

1685 Ibid., p. 80.

1686 Ibid., p. 81.

1687 D&C 1:24.

1688 T. L. Givens, Hand, pp. 82-83.

1689 R. J. Matthews, Fall, pp. 43-44. For a range of LDS perspectives on the events of Eden, see the overview of Moses 3, p. 141.

1690 R. Sherlock, Response, p. 103.

conceived feeling that nothing can be learned from so “naïve” a tale. Naïve and hackneyed—those are formidable hurdles to overcome if we decide to read afresh the story of Adam and Eve!¹⁶⁹¹

E-59 See, e.g., Nibley:

The problem of the historicity of the Bible is exactly the same today as it has been since the days of the first apologists. One reads the Bible and decides for himself what is history in it and what is allegory, and what is myth, and what is legend, and what is interpolation. There are two main schools of thought on the subject. There are the fundamentalists, who believe that everything put forth in the Bible as history actually happened as they find it stated; and there are the [religious] liberals, who [have]... reached the general consensus that the historical value of the Bible is nil. The LDS people have always stood between these two extremes.¹⁶⁹²

E-60 Compare the Gospel of Philip: “The bridal chamber... remains hidden... The veil at first concealed how God controlled the creation, but when the veil is rent and the things inside are revealed, this house will be left desolate, or rather will be [destroyed].”¹⁶⁹³

E-61 Elder Widtsoe had personal experience with the principle of revelation in the temple concerning personal affairs. According to Madsen:

He often said, “I would rather take my practical problems to the House of the Lord than anywhere else.” In his book In a Sunlit Land he describes a day when, having been frustrated for months in trying to pull together a mass of data he had compiled to come up with a formula, he took his companion, his wife, to the Logan Temple to forget his failure. And in one of the rooms of that structure there came, in light, the very answer he had previously failed to find. Two books on agrarian chemistry grew out of that single insight—a revelation in the temple of God.¹⁶⁹⁴

Here is the direct quotation from Elder Widtsoe’s autobiography:

The temple is peculiarly a place of revelation. Many experiences have proved it. Perhaps the most impressive is this: For several years, under a Federal grant with my staff of workers we had gathered thousands of data in the field of soil moisture; but I could not extract any general law running through them. I gave up at last. My wife and I went to the temple that day to forget the failure. In the third endowment room, out of the unseen, came the solution, which has long since gone into print.¹⁶⁹⁵

E-62 Mormons differ in their understanding of claims that the origins of the endowment go back to antiquity. On the one extreme, Nibley flatly asserts that “The ordinances of the Egyptian temple were essentially the same as those performed in ours,”¹⁶⁹⁶ a view that he went to great pains to demonstrate in his publications. Nibley, of course, did not confine his discussions of such parallels to Egyptian sources, but also brought texts of Jewish, Christian, Muslim, and other origins as witnesses in behalf of his arguments. On the other hand, Kearney advocates a nuanced view that sees some of the details of the presentation of the endowment as an inspired appropriation of certain forms common in Masonic ritual:

The endowment is revealed doctrine necessary for the salvation of the Saints. It teaches us God’s relationship to man; our duties and our responsibilities. The endowment has never changed and if you think about it, what the endowment is are commitments to the law of sacrifice, to the law of consecration, to the law of chastity. These things are fixed and these things can be found throughout every dispensation of time. That is the endowment....

So we have the endowment and then we have the messenger: the ritual. How the endowment is taught and this is where I believe Masonry played a part. Joseph Smith sat in Lodge, he watched as humble farmers—most of whom he knew probably couldn’t read and write well-learned complicated, difficult ritual and he said in his mind, “Ah! This is how I’ll do it. This is how I’ll teach the endowment to the Saints.” Why? Because they already knew the ritual. They wouldn’t pay attention to the ritual; they’d pay attention to the message because they already knew the ritual. And so, 1691 A. LaCocque, Trial, pp. 10-11.

1692 H. W. Nibley, Historicity, p. 1; cf. D. H. Oaks, Scripture Reading, p. 7.

1693 W. W. Isenberg, Philip, 84:21-29, p. 159.

1694 T. G. Madsen, House, p. 277.

1695 J. A. Widtsoe, Autobiography, p. 177.

1696 H. W. Nibley, Meaning of Temple, p. 26.

there is that kind of genesis, that ritualistic form, that asking of questions back and forth that we get. All of that comes as Joseph Smith tries to communicate these truths.¹⁶⁹⁷

- E-63 See Carroll for a discussion of the possibility of a “continuity between the various religious expressions found in ancient Egypt that revolves around the ideas of initiation into the afterlife, and into the presence of the deity through ritual mystery reenactments similar to those likely found in the initiations of the ancient craft guilds of Egypt.” Carroll argues that this “illustrates the antiquity of the concepts found in the rites of medieval craft guilds, and of the initiation rites found in universities, fraternities, Freemasonry, and among the Latter-day Saints. This further indicates that such rituals were anciently connected with the temple, admittance into the afterlife, kingship, priesthood, and with becoming like the gods.”¹⁶⁹⁸

- E-64 In his comprehensive volume, McBride quotes Wandle Mace as saying that:

... the Book of Revelation served as inspiration for the design: ‘The order of architecture was ... a representation of the Church, the Bride, the Lamb’s wife. John the Revelator, in the 12[th] chapter [and] first verse of [the book of Revelation,] says, “And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars.” This is portrayed in the beautifully cut stone of this grand temple.’¹⁶⁹⁹

McBride also cites Joseph Smith as saying that the Nauvoo Temple was “built by direct revelation,” implying that this revelation was with reference to the temple’s architecture.¹⁷⁰⁰ However, the original quote says that the temple was “being built by the direct revelation of Jesus Christ for the salvation of the living and the dead”¹⁷⁰¹—perhaps better in line with the idea that Joseph Smith was speaking, in this context, more about the commandments he received on the necessity of building the temple¹⁷⁰² rather than about a revelation concerning the specifics of its architectural form.

- E-65 Highlighting another dimension of the connotations of the term, Gianotti observes that the “root meaning of ‘heart’ (al-qalb) in Arabic is to ‘turn over,’ ‘roll over,’ or ‘flip.’ Indeed, one of the modern words for ‘revolution’ in Arabic (inqilab) comes from the same root, as do a great many other words implying change, circularity, and fluctuation.”¹⁷⁰³

- E-66 In their discussion of Canopus,¹⁷⁰⁴ de Santillana and Von Dechend note that the “determinative sign for ‘heart’ [in Egyptian] often figures as the plumb bob at the end of a plumb line coming from a well-known astronomical or surveying device, the merkhet. Evidently ‘heart’ is something very specific, as it were the ‘center of gravity.’”¹⁷⁰⁵ Of the relationship between space and time associated with Kolob and described in the book of Abraham, Kerry Shirts writes:¹⁷⁰⁶

Joseph Smith ...noted that this Kolob idea is “The measurement according to celestial time, which celestial time signifies one day to a cubit.”¹⁷⁰⁷ One day in Kolob is equal to a thousand years according to the measurement of this earth.”¹⁷⁰⁸ ...In the late 1800’s decades after Joseph Smith was dead, the professional surveyor, W. F. Petrie found that the Egyptian cubit of 29.161 inches was found from a swinging pendulum which swung 100,000 times in 24 hours in the latitude in which Memphis lies. Now then we see that Joseph Smith said one day (notice this is time) and a cubit (this is space), Joseph Smith shows the relationship. The Egyptians make a cubit with relationship to the day. The Egyptians used an instrument called merkhet which is a stick with a plumb bob line. So Joseph Smith equates the number 1,000 to time and space, as the ancient Egyptians did! Most interestingly, the Egyptians took their measuring seriously, as we read “measuring rules were given a sacred meaning... the cubit rules... seem to be of the type used as sacred objects.”

1697 G. Kearney, Message. See also K. Flake, Oral Canon.

1698 J. L. Carroll, Initiations, p. 44.

1699 M. McBride, Nauvoo Temple, p. 9. See W. Mace, Autobiography, pp. 8-9.

1700 M. McBride, Nauvoo Temple, p. 9.

1701 J. Smith, Jr., Latter Day Saints, p. 409.

1702 E.g., D&C 124:25-55.

1703 T. J. Gianotti, Islamic View, p. 89.

1704 Arabic kalb at-taiman = heart of the south.

1705 G. d. Santillana et al., Hamlet’s Mill, Intermezzo, p. 73. See also Excursus 20: The Circle and the Square, p. 571 and Excursus 50: Fu Xi and Nü Gua, p. 654.

1706 K. A. Shirts, Chnum-Re.

1707 Kirtland Egyptian Papers, Grammar and Alphabet (KEPE 1), p. 26, cited in K. A. Shirts, Chnum-Re.

1708 Facsimile 2, Figure 1, book of Abraham.

- E-67 Some Mandaeans speak of “a star inhabited by men, the descendants of the Hidden Adam (Adam Kasia), but they are semi-spiritual and not gross like ourselves. This star is called Merikh, and is the star of the morning.”¹⁷⁰⁹
- E-68 Note that “No known graphical illustration associating the pentagram with evil appears until Lévi in [1851]... It is only in the later twentieth century, and the creation of the American Church of Satan, that the inverted pentagram has become a popular symbol for Satan.”¹⁷¹⁰
- E-69 For an unknown reason, the hymn was eliminated from the recommendation list given in the second edition.¹⁷¹¹
- E-70 Baker illustrates the limited contemporary appeal in other branches of Christianity for beliefs resembling the LDS idea of “eternal progression”:
- At the conclusion of their book, Heaven: A History,¹⁷¹² Colleen McDannell and Bernhard Lang observe that the idea of a progressive, social heaven has survived after the 1930s in only three ways: (1) in contemporary popular culture, (2) in glimpses of the afterlife in near-death experiences, and (3) in Latter-day Saint theology.¹⁷¹³
- “For the most part, ideas about what happens after death are only popular sentiments and are not integrated into Protestant and Catholic theological systems.”¹⁷¹⁴
- E-71 The last line of this stanza originally read: “Grim death reigns not above.”
- E-72 He was excommunicated again in 1839 and 1847, but each time was reconciled and rebaptized within a short period.
- E-73 “Ralph’s grandfather, Sir Edward Vaughan Williams, seems to have been the first member of the family to use the double-barrelled but unhyphenated name... Ralph’s name was pronounced ‘Rafe,’ any other pronunciation used to infuriate him.”¹⁷¹⁵
- E-74 Recalling an incident from Ralph’s childhood, his second wife and biographer wrote: “The publication of Charles Darwin’s The Origin of Species had shaken the family and the country to their foundations: echoes of the controversies it had aroused still surrounded Great Uncle Charles, who seemed an august but unpredictable person.... Ralph asked his mother about The Origin of Species, and what it meant. She answered: ‘The Bible says that God made the world in six days, Great Uncle Charles thinks it took longer: but we need not worry about it, for it is equally wonderful either way.’”¹⁷¹⁶
- E-75 Vaughan Williams’ music has been described as follows:
- If... Englishness in music can be encapsulated in words at all, those words would probably be: ostensibly familiar and commonplace, yet deep and mystical as well as lyrical, melodic, melancholic, and nostalgic yet timeless. Ackroyd quotes Fuller Maitland, who noted that in Vaughan Williams’ style “one is never quite sure whether one is listening to something very old or very new”... Vaughan Williams’ music expresses a deep regard for and fascination with folk tunes, the variations upon which can convey the listener from the down-to-earth (which he always tried to remain in his daily life) to the ethereal. Simultaneously the music shows patriotism toward England in the subtlest form, engendered by a feeling for ancient landscapes and a person’s small yet not entirely insignificant place within them.¹⁷¹⁷
- E-76 He also co-edited The Oxford Book of Carols.¹⁷¹⁸
- E-77 When Vaughan Williams’ Dona nobis pacem was selected by former Mormon Tabernacle Choir director Craig Jessop as the main feature of the program for the Carnegie Hall National High School Choral Festival in March 2006, he and his then assistant Choir director Mack Wilberg discussed the problems presented by the moods of the opening and closing of the work and by its relatively 1709 E. S. Drower, Mandaeans, p. 56.

1710 The Pentagram.

1711 B. H. Roberts, Seventy’s Course 1 (1931), p. xvi.

1712 C. McDannell et al., Heaven, pp. 307–308.

1713 J. T. Baker, Eternal Progression, p. 71.

1714 C. McDannell et al., Heaven, p. 308.

1715 U. Vaughan Williams, R. V. W., Note on Names.

1716 Ibid., pp. 12–13.

1717 Ralph Vaughan Williams.

1718 P. Dearmer et al., Carols.

short length. Since no suitable companion pieces could be found, Jessop eventually invited Wilberg to compose something. Vaughan Williams was one of Wilberg's favorite composers,¹⁷¹⁹ Dona nobis pacem was a piece that he loved, and, after some hesitation, he began to warm to the idea. Wilberg composed an Introit and an Epilogue that were, each in their own way, reminiscent of the work of the great English composer. The Introit, which opens with the traditional Requiem aeternam dona eis, Domine... ("Grant them eternal rest, O Lord..."), later became the beginning of a full requiem, performed for the first time at April 2007 as part of celebrations marking the reopening of the newly renovated Salt Lake Tabernacle. The Epilogue, "Let Peace Then Still the Strife," features the beautifully simple and direct lyrics of David Warner. Howard comments: "Vaughan Williams composed his cantata in 1936 as a warning against the global conflict that was at that stage a tragic inevitability; his pleas for peace are, therefore, more anxious than optimistic. But Wilberg's 'benediction' to the cantata is an affirmation that everlasting peace will indeed eventually triumph."¹⁷²⁰

E-78 "Simona Pakenham and her husband Noel Iliff bicycled over from Kensington to ask Ralph to provide music for a script Simona had made from medieval mystery plays. It was a short, Christmas piece, and needed carol tunes and incidental music. It had to be ready by November for the singers to learn in time for a December matinee at Drury Lane in aid of St. Martin-in-the-Fields. Ralph liked Simona's choice of episodes and immediately started thinking about tunes to fit. They suggested that he should take part, and double God and the eldest shepherd, but he said he'd stick to the music, and he went to the boxroom for carol books to start on it at once."¹⁷²¹ The work premiered the December following Vaughan Williams' death.¹⁷²²

E-79 The tune was mentioned in a comedy by Francis Beaumont and John Fletcher entitled Monsieur Thomas, first published in 1639. In Act 3, Scene 3 a fiddler informs the hero that he knows how to sing "the merry ballad of Dives and Lazarus." In 1906, Vaughan Williams collected the song in the town of Kingsfold, West Sussex as The Red Barn or The Murder of Maria Martin, recalling local events surrounding an 1827 murder trial.¹⁷²³ He also collected a version called John Barleycorn, its words recounting an allegory about the making of beer.¹⁷²⁴ In 1906, Vaughan Williams harmonized the tune and set it to the words of I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say in The English Hymnal.¹⁷²⁵ It was also used in other hymns and carols, including Led by the Spirit, O Sing a Song of Bethlehem, and Come All Ye Faithful Christians.

The most recognized variant of this song today is probably The Star of the County Down, originally an Irish ballad. A Scottish version is known as Gilderoy, "named for an infamous Irish highwayman who raided Scotland in the 13th century. Robert Burns, the national poet of Scotland, also used the melody for From Thee Eliza."¹⁷²⁶ Other variants include The Thresher, Cold Blows the Wind, and We Are Poor Frozen Out Gardeners.

About the problem of identifying the lineage of old tunes, Vaughan Williams wrote the following:

We folk song collectors are often asked "what is the original" of a particular song or "how old is it?" There is no answer to either of these questions; there is no original version of any particular tune; any given tune has hundreds of origins. Nor can we say how old it is; in one sense any particular tune is as old as the beginnings of music, in another sense it is born afresh with the singer of today who sang it.¹⁷²⁷

E-80 Five Variants of Dives and Lazarus was commissioned by the British Council for performance at the 1939-1940 New York World's Fair.¹⁷²⁸ It is ironic that a nostalgic work recalling the venerable English 1719 In the footsteps of Vaughan Williams and—to a degree—John Rutter, Wilberg's many arrangements of traditional music for choir and orchestra evidence his love for the genre. One reviewer writes: "Wilberg's aesthetic sensibilities seem to mesh perfectly with those of Vaughan Williams at his most lushly Romantic, particularly the plush, shimmering string writing of the Tallis Variations. In fact, there are few moments in [Wilberg's] Requiem where it wouldn't be possible to imagine that this was a newly discovered score by the English pastoralist" (S. Eddins, Requiem).

1720 L. Howard, Notes. See also Program Notes for The Carnegie Hall.

1721 U. Vaughan Williams, R.V.W., p. 397. See also M. Kennedy, Works, p. 344.

1722 M. Kennedy, Works, p. 432.

1723 Ibid., p. 278.

1724 U. Vaughan Williams, R.V.W., p. 67.

1725 P. Dearmer et al., Hymnal, #574.

1726 Return to Nauvoo.

1727 S. Finkelstein, Notes; cf. R. Vaughan Williams, Music, pp. 195, 231-232.

1728 U. Vaughan Williams, R.V.W., p. 230.

folk song Vaughan Williams had loved all his life was featured at an event that was boldly themed “The World of Tomorrow.”

Among the most frequently played of Vaughan Williams’ compositions, Kennedy describes the work as being “in the tranquil style of the Serenade, [recalling] an earlier and simpler style, matured by years of experience.”¹⁷²⁹ It was written “with that superb technical skill which enabled Vaughan Williams to extract the utmost nuances and sonorities from the instruments.”¹⁷³⁰ Music critic Steven Schwartz comments:

Constant Lambert, the British music critic and composer, once remarked that the only thing you could do to vary a folk song was to play it louder. Vaughan Williams, among others, proved him wrong. Delius, for example, used a simple variation technique. Vaughan Williams, more than any other British composer of his time, absorbed folk songs into his artistic psyche to such an extent, he not only wrote his own folk songs, but he was able to join them to large symphonic structures. Nowhere is this clearer than in the Five Variants. This work is not theme and variations in the conventional sense. The folk song Dives and Lazarus is taken for a winding walk, pulled, and turned until it becomes an eleven-minute symphonic movement, without a trace of artistic self-consciousness.¹⁷³¹

- E-81 I have been unable to locate the Gemmell reference in the Church Archives or at Brigham Young University. However, the source of these statements is surely Dr. Washington Franklin Anderson (1823-1903), the subject of R. C. Gemmell’s cited manuscript and presumably the husband of Anderson’s daughter, Dr. Belle Anderson Gemmell. The latter wrote a brief article about Utah’s early medical history that included brief life sketches both of her father and of Dr. John Milton Bernhisel (1799-1881).¹⁷³² Within Bernhisel’s papers at Brigham Young University, I found two life sketches for Bernhisel written by the same hand and marked “author unknown.”¹⁷³³ However, on one of the folders containing the manuscripts I found the following: “More than likely written by Dr. Washington F. Anderson, personal doctor of Brigham Young and close friend of grandpa,” which coincides with a statement in one of the sketches that it was prepared at the request of “the family of the late Jno. M. Bernhisel” by his “friend and associate”—probably at the time of Bernhisel’s death. Given circumstantial evidence and the close parallels in wording between statements in the life sketches and Andrus’ quotations from R. C. Gemmell’s manuscript, it seems safe to assume that Anderson heard something like these statements from Bernhisel, an intimate of the Prophet Joseph Smith in Nauvoo, on an occasion when Bernhisel and Anderson were “riding together, visiting a country patient.”¹⁷³⁴

- E-82 The reason why devilish characters in fiction generally stand out as more convincing than the virtuous ones is discussed by Lewis:

In all but a few writers the “good” characters are the least successful, and everyone who has ever tried to make even the humblest story ought to know why. To make a character worse than oneself it is only necessary to release imaginatively from control some of the bad passions which, in real life, are always straining at the leash; the Satan, the Iago [of Shakespeare’s Othello], the Becky Sharp [of Thackeray’s Vanity Fair], within each of us, is always there and only too ready, the moment the leash is slipped, to come out and have in our books that holiday we try to deny them in our lives. But if you try to draw a character better than yourself, all you can do is to take the best moments you have had and to imagine them prolonged and more consistently embodied in action... We do not really know what it feels like to be a man much better than ourselves... Heaven understands Hell and Hell does not understand Heaven, and all of us, in our measure, share the Satanic, or at least the Napoleonic blindness... The Satan in Milton enables him to draw the character well just as the Satan in us enables us to receive it.¹⁷³⁵

- E-83 William W. Phelps said that the Devil proposed to execute this plan of misery “on the honor of a God, or on his Father’s honor.”¹⁷³⁶

- E-84 “Had Satan succeeded,” wrote Elder Bruce R. McConkie, “the salvation he sponsored would in reality

1729 M. Kennedy, Works, p. 258.

1730 Ibid., p. 278.

1731 Vaughan Williams’ Orchestral Works.

1732 B. A. Gemmell, Utah Medical.

1733 W. F. Anderson, Life Sketch.

1734 W. F. Anderson, Life Sketch, p. 3.

1735 C. S. Lewis, Preface, 13, pp. 100-101.

1736 W. W. Phelps, Answer, p. 758.

have been damnation, for it would not have raised men to the high status enjoyed by the Eternal Father.”¹⁷³⁷

- E-85 Perhaps the most convincing fictional account of a world in which a plan of the same nature holds sway is in Arthur C. Clarke’s science fiction novel, Childhood’s End. The story concerns a race of intellectually- and technologically-superior extraterrestrials called the Overlords, who end poverty and war and create a worldwide utopia—though at the price of limiting what a clergyman in the novel called “Freedom to control our own lives—under God’s guidance.”¹⁷³⁸ After fifty years of physical concealment, the Overlords hold true to their promise to reveal their hidden form: “There was no mistake. The leathery wings, the little horns, the barbed tail—all were there. The most terrible of all legends had come to life.”¹⁷³⁹ Despite C. S. Lewis’ differences with Clarke,¹⁷⁴⁰ the book is reputed to be Lewis’ favorite work of science fiction, and he commented to Joy Gresham that he was happy to find “a modern author who understands that there may be things that have a higher claim than the survival or happiness of humanity.”¹⁷⁴¹

Themes from Genesis 1-3 and the work of Milton informed Lewis’ own ventures into science fiction. For example, in Perelandra,¹⁷⁴² he explored the question of “how... a totally free person, without unfair manipulation by God, [could] spontaneously carry out what God most desires, and find for herself a destiny which God fully intends.” Essentially, in this story, “the Woman needs to make her own free and spontaneous choice to do the Will of God, without being unduly influenced by God. Ransom [the hero of the novel], as another free agent, can help, but will not himself receive undue help... At one point Ransom himself asks why isn’t [God] doing anything, only to be answered by the fact that his own remarkable voyage to Venus is a pretty considerable contribution—‘he himself was the miracle.’”¹⁷⁴³ Thus Lewis posits that one of the reasons for Christ’s Atonement, which enabled mankind to become members of His body through their free choice, was to save others, not directly through Himself, but through Himself in each of us.¹⁷⁴⁴

- E-86 That any notion of compulsion is favored by God is explicitly repudiated in the stories of Genesis 1-11, which, as Gelander observes, “indicate that God preferred freedom of choice as the highest virtue, even above His own absolute goodness. The implication is that God’s morality is inherent in the idea that goodness which is compelled is neither good nor moral.”¹⁷⁴⁵
- E-87 Writes McLachlan: “There is a strong sense in LDS doctrine that Satan’s coercive plan is a lie from the beginning because it is a rejection of reality itself which is based on the agency, creativity, and co-eternality of intelligences.”¹⁷⁴⁶
- E-88 Ostler argues that the LDS view of agency:

... must be understood in a libertarian sense as opposed to a compatibilist model of agency. The libertarian view holds that persons cannot be caused to act as they do if they are free. Moreover, to be free a person must be able to choose otherwise in the actual circumstances that exist. The Book of Mormon teaches that for persons to be free agents in a significant sense they must: (1) be free “to act for themselves” and not merely “to be acted upon” by causes external to themselves;¹⁷⁴⁷ and (2) have a genuine choice in the actual circumstances to choose between opposing options of either good or evil, either of which is genuinely open to the agent in the moment of free decision.¹⁷⁴⁸ In contrast, the compatibilist holds that free agency is compatible with causal determinism and that persons need not be free to actually choose otherwise in the conditions that actually exist, but merely to choose otherwise had they so chosen. Given the compatibilist view, Satan’s plan was 1737 B. R. McConkie, New Witness, p. 657.

1738 A. C. Clarke, End, p. 9.

1739 Ibid., p. 61.

1740 A. C. Clarke et al., Narnia.

1741 C. S. Lewis, Letters 3, 22 December 1953, p. 391; cf. C. S. Lewis, Rabbit, p. 352.

1742 C. S. Lewis, Perelandra.

1743 Father Jerome Bertram, cited in W. Hooper, Lewis Companion, p. 222.

1744 See W. Hooper, Lewis Companion, p. 228; cf. Nibley’s principle of “maximum participation” (H. W. Nibley, Before Adam, p. 71).

1745 S. Gelander, Creator, pp. 9-10.

1746 J. M. McLachlan, Modernism Controversy, p. 62.

1747 2 Nephi 2:26.

1748 2 Nephi 2:11-29.

a genuine possibility because God could have guaranteed by his eternal decree that all persons would be saved.¹⁷⁴⁹

On the other hand, the view on agency adopted by Mormonism disallows the compatibilist option a priori.

- E-89 In the case of the exercise of this power by the righteous, Madsen clarifies that this is not “a dominating, exploiting, enslaving power. ‘Power over’ means more advanced, more Christ-like.”¹⁷⁵⁰ However, it seems that the fate of the never-embodied Satan and the resurrected Cain, for example, is to be eternally locked together in the utterly destructive embrace of unrighteous dominion.¹⁷⁵¹
- E-90 The means by which Adam and Eve, in their fallen state, could have received an immortal body and “lived forever” prior to the resurrection of Jesus Christ, the “firstfruits of them that slept,”¹⁷⁵² is not explained in scripture.
- E-91 This period of probation also extends for a time in the spirit world where repentance is also possible,¹⁷⁵³ possibly with more difficulty.¹⁷⁵⁴
- E-92 According to the teachings of the Kurdish Yazidi religion, it was the Peacock Angel (Melek Taus) who, as leader of the archangels, righteously refused to bow to Adam. This is understood as a test where he was forced to determine whether he would submit to anyone besides God. Having passed the test, he received God’s commendation. Due to their favorable view of the main character of this story, the Yazidi are sometimes accused of being Devil worshippers, a claim which the Yazidi themselves vehemently deny.¹⁷⁵⁵
- E-93 Additional confusion about the roles of Michael, Jehovah, and Christ is described by Seach:
- Late Judaism and “orthodox” Christianity both assumed Michael to be the leader of the Host of Heaven. N. Schmidt, however, correctly recognized that monotheistic Judaism had split the lone Yahweh into two halves, the higher remaining “God” (to replace El), and the lower becoming “Michael,” the new leader of Yahweh’s Host.¹⁷⁵⁶ That this late, intertestamental “Michael” was originally Yahweh, is further shown by the fact that the Church still frequently confused Michael with Christ.¹⁷⁵⁷ [John J.] Collins thus concludes that while the “Son of man” was thought by Jews to have been Michael, we are actually dealing with “an example of angelic Christology,” wherein “the role allotted to Michael... in Jewish texts is... allotted to Christ” by the Church.¹⁷⁵⁸
- E-94 An Islamic legend likewise records that Adam “shall call every man by name in the day of the resurrection, and pronounce his sentence according as the balance of justice shall decide.”¹⁷⁵⁹
- E-95 Barker concludes that transformations of an “animal” to a “man” in this story represent the acquiring of “angelic” status: “Noah [was] transformed from a bull into a ‘man’ after an archangel had taught him a mystery,¹⁷⁶⁰ and... Moses [was] transformed from a sheep into a man after he had been with the Lord on Sinai.”¹⁷⁶¹ On the other hand, “the traditional interpretation of 1 Enoch 8:1¹⁷⁶²—that the fallen angels taught ‘the changing of the world’—is that they taught how to change men into animals, that is, angels into mortals.”¹⁷⁶³

1749 B. Ostler, Theism, pp. 7-8.

1750 T. G. Madsen, LDS View, p. 101.

1751 See Commentary 5:23-c, p. 374.

1752 1 Corinthians 15:20.

1753 1 Peter 4:6; Alma 42:10.

1754 M. J. Ballard, Three Degrees 1949, p. 241.

1755 E. S. Drower, Peacock, p. 92; Yazidi. For more on this story, see Commentary 1:12-d, p. 53; the overview of Moses 4, p. 225; Excursus 8: The Origin and Premortal Existence of Human Spirits, p. 540; Excursus 21: The Power and Premortal Status of Satan, p. 575.

1756 N. Schmidt, Son of Man.

1757 E.g., C. Osiek, Shepherd, 8:3(69):3, p. 195, and 9:12(89):7-8, p. 230, where the “Michael” is explicitly identified as the Savior. See also Revelation 12:10, where “Michael” slays the dragon, but Christ receives the spoils.

1758 J. E. Seach, Ancient Texts 1995, p. 205 n. 309; cf. J. J. Collins, Son of Man, pp. 64-65. See also J. Daniélou, Theology, pp. 121-127 for early Christian confusion of Michael with Christ.

1759 G. Weil, Legends, p. 40.

1760 G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 89:1, p. 364.

1761 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 45.

1762 G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 8:1, p. 188.

1763 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 46; cf. Commentary 4:24-b, p. 271; 4:25-a, p. 272.

Continuing, she writes:

The Animal History distinguished between the religion of the patriarchs, the bulls, and the religion of Moses, the sheep, and Eden restored was to be the religion of the patriarchs. This imagery is ancient. In the sixth century BCE, when Ezekiel was predicting terrible punishment, he was told to summon every type of bird and beast to devour the rams, lambs, goats, and bulls, the lean animals who represented his own people.¹⁷⁶⁴ When Isaiah described the Kingdom of the Messiah, he foresaw the wolf, the leopard and the lion, the unclean carnivores, living alongside the lamb, the kid and the calf, the clean herbivores.¹⁷⁶⁵ In the Kingdom, then, these distinctions would disappear. Hence, perhaps Peter's vision of the clean and unclean animals as he learned to accept Gentiles into the Church.¹⁷⁶⁶

- E-96 Compare the account of the Cainites in Excursus, p. 586 to the Akkadian Atrahasis myth, where the noise of the humans disturbed the gods. Compare also a similar motif in the Mayan Popul Vuh account (see Excursus, p. 702). In the case of the Atrahasis myth, Mettinger accepts arguments by other scholars that the “noisy activities... marked a rebellious attitude on the part of the humans who were not content with their lot but wanted to encroach on the divine territory.”¹⁷⁶⁷ See also way the noise of the people is associated with sin in the account of Israel's rebellion during the golden calf incident.¹⁷⁶⁸
- E-97 The appearance of giants not only figures in stories about the Watchers in the time of Noah, but also in apocalyptic and rabbinic descriptions of godly figures such as Adam and Enoch (= Metatron).¹⁷⁶⁹ The idea of “giantness” was not always to be taken literally—rather, with respect to the patriarchs, large stature corresponds to the ideas of majesty and sublimeness and to the conferral of angelic status upon worthy mortals.¹⁷⁷⁰ Fletcher-Louis also suggests that the large size of the patriarchs is “perhaps related to the tradition according to which the high priest's garments represent the whole cosmos.”¹⁷⁷¹ Perhaps, from the shortened lifespans¹⁷⁷² and reduced stature of the generations after the Flood, we are meant to infer concomitant limitations on the mental and spiritual powers of mankind—precluding the possibility of a repetition of the terrible destruction blamed in the stories of the Watchers on the misuse of their great powers. See also discussion in B. M. Wheeler, Mecca, pp. 99-122.
- Possible relationships between these stories and Greek myths about the Titans are summarized by Wright.¹⁷⁷³
- E-98 The one man, of course, is Noah with his three sons Shem, Ham, and Japheth. Reeves has explored connections between Jewish, Qumranic, and Manichaean texts attesting to the theme of Noah's family being represented as a Tree of Life with three trunks.¹⁷⁷⁴
- E-99 Islamic tradition has preserved traditions about the Watchers in their tale of Harut and Marut.¹⁷⁷⁵
- E-100 In addition, Price connects the story with “Hesiod's myth of Uranos consigning his monstrous sons to underground caverns.”¹⁷⁷⁶
- E-101 Al-Tabari¹⁷⁷⁷ records a tradition that combines the fall of Satan with a variation on the story of the Watchers: “Iblis belonged to a tribal group of angels called the jinn... The first to dwell on earth were the jinn. They caused corruption and shed blood and killed each other... God sent Iblis to them with an army of angels... and [h]is success went to his head.”

1764 Ezekiel 39:17-20.

1765 Isaiah 11:6-7.

1766 M. Barker, Hidden, pp. 46-47. See Acts 10:9-16.

1767 T. N. D. Mettinger, Eden, pp. 126-127.

1768 Exodus 32:17-19.

1769 M. Idel, Hénoch; cf. A. al-Tha'labi, Lives, p. 58.

1770 C. Mopsik, Hénoch, pp. 208-210 n. Je fus exhaussé et allongé.

1771 C. H. T. Fletcher-Louis, Glory, p. 39.

1772 Moses 8:17.

1773 A. T. Wright, Evil Spirits, pp. 73-75, 79-89.

1774 J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore, pp. 95-102. See also Qumran Book of Giants fragments reporting the giant Ohya's dream vision of “a tree that is uprooted except for three of its roots” which, along with related dreams, “may symbolize the destruction of all but Noah and his sons by the flood” (M. Wise et al., DSS, pp. 293, 292). See Commentary 3:9-h, p. 167; Figure 5-3, p. 330; Excursus 25: The Tree of Life as the Hidden Throne of God, p. 591; Excursus 50: Fu Xi and Nü Gua, p. 654.

1775 E.g., A. al-Tha'labi, Lives, pp. 86-91.

1776 R. M. Price, Pre-Nicene, p. 828 n. u.

1777 al-Tabari, Creation, 1:81-86, pp. 249-257.

- E-102 Another possibility is that the men in Moses 8:21 are not really part of the covenant “sons of God” but are only falsely claiming to be. The most common ancient traditions, however, assert that it was not only the female descendants of Noah (and Seth) but also the men in that family line who were eventually drawn into forbidden relationships. For example, following what became the standard tradition in the Syriac Church that saw the “sons of God” as Sethites and the “daughters of men” as Cainites,¹⁷⁷⁸ Ephrem the Syrian also interpreted these traditions to mean that: “those who lived on higher ground,¹⁷⁷⁹ who were called ‘the children of God,’ left their own region and came down to take wives from the daughters of Cain down below.”¹⁷⁸⁰

An Islamic source likewise argues: “But one errs and misunderstands [if] he says that ‘angels’ descended to ‘mortal women.’ Instead, it is the sons of Seth who descend from the holy mountain to the daughters of Cain the accursed. For it was on account of their saintliness [chastity?] and dwelling-place upon the holy mountain that the sons of Seth were called banu ‘elohim; that is, ‘sons of God.’”¹⁷⁸¹ For valuable overviews of a range of different interpretations for the term “sons of God” in this context, see Wright¹⁷⁸² and Collins.¹⁷⁸³

- E-103 Of relevance is the fact that the major doctrinal themes that preceded this reference included the physical details of the resurrected body (“the Spirit of God flowing in the veins instead of the blood”) and the condemnation of “those who know the Gospel and do not obey” to “prison” as described in Isaiah 23.

- E-104 In place of Grébaut’s translation that these angels “openly exposed all the work they had seen in heaven,”¹⁷⁸⁴ Budge renders this to say that: “these made symbols of everything which they saw in the heavens.”¹⁷⁸⁵

The insertion of the phrase “in their bodies” in the translation from the French above was inferred from the subsequent lines: “The sin, they learned it because of their pride, because they received bodies. Therefore, it is not meet that man should glory in himself. Happy is he who conquers Satan while yet being in the body.”¹⁷⁸⁶ Budge gives his translation of the Ethiopic of this passage as: “... and they taught sin because of their pride and boastfulness, because they had clothed themselves with flesh, but it was unseemly for men to boast themselves because of this. Blessed is the man who having put on flesh conquereth Satan.”¹⁷⁸⁷

- E-105 Besides the unauthorized revealing of the mysteries, the three sins specifically mentioned in these texts are drunkenness, fornication, and murder.¹⁷⁸⁸

- E-106 In this context, Islamic tradition also speaks of “charms and incantations” written by demons “during the period of the decline of the reign of Solomon” and buried in a manner that they could later be found by the people.¹⁷⁸⁹

- E-107 For example, Ginzberg cites Rabbi Bahya as saying: “The Tree of Knowledge and the Tree of Life were both in the center of the Garden, for they formed one tree at the bottom, and branched out into two when they reached a certain height.”¹⁷⁹⁰ In some Jewish accounts, the Tree of Knowledge was seen as a grape vine entwining the Tree of Life.¹⁷⁹¹

A fifteenth-century Armenian Christian poem sees the Tree of Life as being hidden by the Tree of Knowledge:

1778 Brock in Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, p. 189 n. 1:11.

1779 Cf. Moses 7:17.

1780 Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, 1:11, pp. 81-82. See S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 3:4, p. 147; H. W. Nibley, Enoch, pp. 178-193; Commentary 5:41-b, p. 388.

1781 J. C. Reeves, Eutychii.

1782 A. T. Wright, Evil Spirits, pp. 61-75.

1783 J. J. Collins, Sons of God, pp. 260-263.

1784 French Ceux-ci ont donc fait voir toute l'oeuvre qu'ils avaient vue dans le ciel.

1785 B. Mikael, Enoch, p. 142.

1786 French Le péché, ils (l')ont appris à cause de leur orgueil, parce qu'ils avaient revêtu un corps. C'est pourquoi il ne convient pas à l'homme de se glorifier. Bienheureux est celui qui vainc Satan, tout en étant revêtu d'un corps.

1787 B. Mikael, Enoch, p. 142.

1788 A. al-Tha'labi, Lives, p. 88.

1789 Ibid., p. 86. See Commentary 5:51-a, p. 398.

1790 L. Ginzberg, Legends, 5:91 n. 50.

1791 J. A. Tvedtnes, Olive Oil, p. 430.

The tree that was planted in the garden,
Had two branches and one trunk,
The one the good fruit of life,
And the other evil, dealing death.

The serpent was grafted onto the tree,
Hiding the branches of the Tree of Life,
But leaving the one of death outside,¹⁷⁹²
To be revealed to the first one's eyes.¹⁷⁹³

The Manichaean Kephalaia describes the trunks of the Tree of Virtue and the Tree of Evil as twisting around each other in two places. A similar idea may have motivated the depiction of a tree with three trunks in a Manichaean wall-painting from Bāzāklīk, East Turkestan.¹⁷⁹⁴ This representation concords with other Manichaean ideas which see the Tree of Life as extending “over three regions of the cosmos—east, west, and north,” while the Tree of Death “exercises dominion over the south, a quarter depicted as the region below the Kingdom of Light.”¹⁷⁹⁵ The symbolism of the three trunks may also be connected to the three sons of Noah of whom “the whole earth [was] overspread.”¹⁷⁹⁶

Qur’anic commentator Wahb bin Munabbih is cited as saying with respect to the single tree of Paradise in Islamic tradition: “The tree’s branches were intertwined, and it bore fruit which the angels ate to live eternally. That was the fruit which God forbade Adam and his spouse to eat.”¹⁷⁹⁷

Ancient Chinese sources also describe a cosmic tree, the Chien-Mu, as featuring “nine tanglewoods, while underneath there are nine root twinings.”¹⁷⁹⁸ The male and female divinities Fu Xi and Nü Gua are depicted as humans in their upper torso, with their lower serpentine bodies intertwined, perhaps suggesting a link between their iconography and that of the cosmic tree.¹⁷⁹⁹ The association between the intertwined trees and the twisting serpent recalls the story of the caduceus of Moses.¹⁸⁰⁰

One strand of Jewish tradition holds that the branches of the Tree of Knowledge encircled the Tree of Life, and that “God did not specifically prohibit eating from the Tree of Life because the Tree of Knowledge formed a hedge around it; only after one had partaken of the latter and cleared a path for himself could one come close to the Tree of Life.”¹⁸⁰¹ Whitlock¹⁸⁰² suggests a possible association with the Pirke Avot admonition to make a “hedge” or “protective fence” for the Torah.¹⁸⁰³

E-108 Wrote Ephrem:

In the very midst he planted / the Tree of Knowledge, / endowing it with wonder, / hedging it with dread, / so that it might straightway serve / as a boundary to the inner region of paradise. / Two things did Adam hear / in that single decree: / that they should not eat of it / and that, by shrinking from it, / they should perceive that it was not lawful / to penetrate further, beyond that tree.... / When the accursed one [i.e., the serpent] learned / how the glory of that inner tabernacle, / as if in a sanctuary, / was hidden from them, / and that the Tree of Knowledge, / clothed with an injunction, / served as the veil / for the sanctuary, / he realized that its fruit / was the key of justice / that would open the eyes of the bold / and cause them great remorse.¹⁸⁰⁴

E-109 This reading of the Fall finds echoes elsewhere in scripture and tradition. In particular, Hendel makes the case that “the Primeval Cycle [Genesis 1-11] is characterized by a series of mythological transgressions of boundaries” between humans and God.¹⁸⁰⁵ For instance, the “same stress on a borderline between the divine and human spheres is found in... [the] passage on the Tower of Babel 1792 I.e., visible (M. E. Stone, Adamgirk, p. 74 n. 179).

1793 Ibid., 3:10:12-13, pp. 73-74

1794 J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore, front slipcover and p. 96ff.

1795 Ibid., pp. 98, 167-174; cf. A. S-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, pp. 120-121.

1796 Genesis 9:19. See J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore, p. 95-102 and Excursus 24: The Watchers, p. 585.

1797 Cited in al-Tabari, Creation, 1:106, p. 277; B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, p. 23.

1798 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 233.

1799 See Excursus 50: Fu Xi and Nü Gua, p. 654.

1800 Numbers 21:4-9; cf. Exodus 7:8-12; John 3:14-15. See Commentary 4:5-b, p. 246 and M. Fishbane, Myth, pp. 288-292.

1801 R. M. Zlotowitz et al., Bereishis, p. 101, cf. p. 96. See also L. Ginzberg, Legends, 1:70, 5:91 n. 50.

1802 S. T. Whitlock, 9 June 2008.

1803 M. Lieber, Pirke Avos, 1:1, p. 13.

1804 Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise, 3:3, 5, pp. 91, 92. See Excursus 51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple, p. 658.

1805 R. S. Hendel, Demigods, p. 23.

[which] presents ‘the tower whose top assaults the sky—a perfect and natural metaphor for the human assault on the divinely ordained cosmos.’¹⁸⁰⁶ A similar assault in an opposite direction is evident in the story of the Watchers.¹⁸⁰⁷

E-110 The Coptic Gnostic text On the Origin of the World compares the leaves of the Tree of Life to the cypress.¹⁸⁰⁸

E-111 Following a brief analysis of references in the Qurʾān, Ryen concludes the probability of a Tree of Life separate from the Tree of Knowledge in Islamic tradition.¹⁸⁰⁹ He associates the former tree with Sidrat Al-Muntaha located in the seventh heaven, from under whose branches Muhammad received one of his revelations.¹⁸¹⁰ In another Muslim tradition that assumes two special paradisiacal trees, Enoch was said to have avoided death by seizing branches of the Tuba tree that hung over the wall of Paradise. This tree, “which is planted in the midst of the garden, and is known to be after Sidrat Al-Muntaha, the most beautiful and tallest tree of paradise.”¹⁸¹¹

Brinner identifies the Sidrat (= lote-tree) as one of a “varying species of a tree found in the Middle East and North Africa of the genus Ziziphus, bearing fruits used for food and medicinal purposes.”¹⁸¹² Significantly, Wikipedia notes that “[t]he mythological lotus tree is often equated with Z. lotus, though the Date Palm is also a possible candidate.”¹⁸¹³ The term Al-Muntaha (= the farthest boundary), signifying the location of the Tree of Life, “is in Sufism a symbol of the point to which knowledge can take the mystic, beyond which true experience lies,”¹⁸¹⁴ that served as the point of departure for Muhammad’s ascent to heaven.¹⁸¹⁵ The idea also evokes the image of the temple veil as “the last barrier,” where ‘he who grasps the mysteries’ at last receives the crown.”¹⁸¹⁶

Ryen associates the Islamic Tree of Knowledge with the one from which Adam and Eve were forbidden to partake.¹⁸¹⁷ In addition, Ryen notes the mention of a curious tree springing out of Mount Sinai which produces oil,¹⁸¹⁸ suggesting the idea of an olive tree, separate from the Tree of Life.¹⁸¹⁹

Finally, Ryen notes two other special trees in Islamic tradition: the tree of Zaqqum in hell,¹⁸²⁰ and the later tradition of the Tuba tree in the heart of the paradisiacal garden.¹⁸²¹

E-112 Hamilton observes: “That Noah even was able to plant a vineyard that produced lush growth is testimony to the lifting of the curse on the ground.”¹⁸²² Noah is not pictured as eking out a miserable, hand-to-mouth existence as he works among thorns and thistles. Of course, in order for the vineyard to grow, there had to be rain. But the rain has been a life-producing one, not like the earlier life-taking one.”¹⁸²³

E-113 Nibley cites an account recording that Noah’s planting of the grape vine was commanded by the Lord and cites a parallel to “the most ancient of all recorded festivals, the wine feast of intoxication that celebrates the ending of the Flood”:¹⁸²⁴

1806 T. N. D. Mettinger, Eden, p. 127. Mettinger quotes from R. A. Oden, Jr., Divine Aspirations, p. 211.

1807 J. J. Collins, Sons of God, p. 263.

1808 H.-G. Bethge et al., Origin, 110:15-16, p. 179, quoted in Moses 3 Gleanings, p. 189.

1809 J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine, p. 220.

1810 See Qurʾān 53:14.

1811 G. Weil, Legends, p. 53.

1812 A. al-Tha’labi, Lives, p. 28 n. 44.

1813 Ziziphus, emphasis mine. See E. S. Drower, Adam, pp. 7-8 for a similar argument in favor of identifying the Mandaean sindirka as a date palm.

1814 A. al-Tha’labi, Lives, p. 28 n. 44; cf. the idea of the “furthest mosque” (al-masjid al-aqsa), understood as the site of Solomon’s Temple in Jerusalem.

1815 See Qurʾān 17:1.

1816 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 436.

1817 Qurʾān 2:35, 7:19ff.

1818 Qurʾān 23:20.

1819 See discussion of the tree bearing oil in Commentary 3:9-g, p. 163.

1820 E.g., Qurʾān 37:62, 56:52.

1821 E.g., W. Barnstone et al., Mother, p. 687.

1822 Genesis 8:21.

1823 V. P. Hamilton, Genesis, p. 321.

1824 H. W. Nibley, Sacred, pp. 578-579; cf. H. W. Nibley, Abraham 2000, pp. 475-476.

In the very old Christian Apocalypse of Baruch,¹⁸²⁵ we are told that Noah after the Flood hesitated to plant the vine, “for Adam was destroyed by it”—the grape being the forbidden fruit in many old Adam accounts;¹⁸²⁶ so he prayed for forty days with tears streaming down (an Enoch motif), until an angel appeared to reassure him: “Arise Noah, plant the vine; its bitterness shall be changed to sweetness, and its curse shall be changed to a blessing. What it yields shall be the blood of God.”¹⁸²⁷

In this instance, however, the vine is better understood as a representation of the Tree of Life than the Tree of Knowledge.¹⁸²⁸ Cohen, having explored the “symbolic meaning of wine in ancient cultures,” concludes that Noah’s actions in this regard have been completely misunderstood, the result of “biblical scholarship’s failure” in explaining the meaning of the enigmatic incident.¹⁸²⁹ Summarizing Cohen’s view, Haynes writes:

Cohen explores Israelite and other traditions to elucidate a complex relationship between alcohol, fire, and sexuality. Drawing on this connection, he surmises that Noah’s drunkenness is indicative not of a deficiency in character but of a good-faith attempt to replenish the earth following the Flood. Indeed, Noah’s “determination to maintain his procreative ability at full strength resulted in drinking himself into a state of helpless intoxication.” How ironic, Cohen notes, that in acceding to the divine command to renew the earth’s population, Noah suffered the opprobrium of drunkenness. In Cohen’s view, he “deserves not censure but acclaim for having played so well the role of God’s devoted servant.”¹⁸³⁰

See Endnote E-115, p. 731 for the view that Noah was not drunk, but in a vision.

E-114 Brodie insightfully observes:

There is no moral condemnation of [Noah’s] drunkenness and nakedness—any more than of [Adam and Eve’s] nakedness. The trouble starts therefore (both in Eden and here) not with the nakedness but with an intrusive visitor—the serpent... and now Ham...

Then the intrusive visitors, the serpent and Ham, spoke to others, enticing them. But the reactions are diverse. While the tree’s looks caused the couple to give way to the serpent, the two brothers, Shem and Japheth, resisted Ham/Canaan and his invitation to look...

As in the Garden, so here the emphasis on nakedness is followed quickly by judgment.¹⁸³¹

Though a variety of speculations have arisen to explain the severity of the condemnation received by Ham/Canaan, “there is no clear evidence that Ham actually did anything other than see the nakedness of his uncovered father.”¹⁸³² So concludes Hamilton:

We are on much safer ground in limiting Ham’s transgression simply to observing the exposure of the genitalia and failing to cover his naked father. Otherwise, the two brothers’ act of covering their father’s nakedness becomes incomprehensible. We deliberately entitled this section “The Nakedness of Noah” rather than “The Drunkenness of Noah.” Noah’s drunkenness is only circumstantial to his nakedness. It is Noah’s nudity, not his inebriated state, which Ham saw, and then passed on to his brothers. His sin would have been equally reprehensible had his father been sober.¹⁸³³

Nibley cites ancient accounts arguing that Ham’s disregard for this father was part of an effort to steal Noah’s priesthood garment and authority¹⁸³⁴—a further parallel to Satan’s attempts in the Garden of Eden. Because of the faithfulness of Shem and Japheth, they received the reward of special garments themselves.¹⁸³⁵ They had entered their father’s presence facing backward as they restored his covering.

1825 H. E. Gaylord, Jr., 3 Baruch, 4:13-15 (Greek), pp. 667, 669.

1826 E.g., L. Ginzberg, Legends, 1:168; M. Maher, Pseudo-Jonathan, 9:20, p. 45; H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 308. See Commentary 3:9-i, p. 168.

1827 H. W. Nibley, Abraham 2000, pp. 155-156. See H. E. Gaylord, Jr., 3 Baruch, 4:15 (Greek), p. 669.

1828 H. W. Nibley, Since, p. 189, 191-192; H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the Book of Mormon, 1:135, 137; E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:200. The fruit of the Tree of Life is described as being like a “white grape” in M. Barker, Joseph Smith, p. 76; H.-G. Bethge et al., Origin, 110:15-16, p. 179; R. Milstein, Stories and Illustrations, p. 107; R. Murray, Symbols, pp. 95-130; G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 32:4, p. 320. See Commentary 3:9-g, p. 163.

1829 S. R. Haynes, Curse, p. 188.

1830 Ibid., pp. 188-189. See H. H. Cohen, Drunkenness, pp. 8, 12.

1831 T. L. Brodie, Dialogue, p. 192.

1832 Ross in J. M. Boice, Genesis 1-11, pp. 397-398.

1833 V. P. Hamilton, Genesis, p. 323.

1834 H. W. Nibley, Lehi 1988, pp. 168-170; H. W. Nibley, What, p. 366; H. W. Nibley, Vestments, pp. 128-131; H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 309.

1835 H. W. Nibley, Vestments, p. 129; Rashi, Genesis Commentary, 9:23, 1:97; cf. Numbers 15:37-41, J. Neusner,

E-115 According to a statement attributed to Joseph Smith, Noah “was not drunk, but in a vision.” This agrees with the Genesis Apocryphon which, immediately after describing a ritual drinking of wine by Noah and his family, devotes nearly three columns to a divine dream vision that revealed the fate of Noah’s posterity. From their study of Genesis, Koler and Greenspahn concur that Noah was enwrapped in a vision while in the tent, commenting that “This explains why Shem and [Japheth] refrained from looking at Noah even after they had covered him, significantly ‘ahorannit [Heb. “backward”] occurs elsewhere with regard to avoidance of looking directly at God in the course of revelation.”¹⁸³⁶

E-116 Eden surmises: “No doubt the historical model closest to this is the apadâna of the Persian sovereign, the pavilion¹⁸³⁷ of the royal palace in which the King of kings sat in his throne to receive his subjects. In some texts of the Jewish tradition, the link which ties the description of the divine audience room to the earthly royal one is clearly shown. For instance, in the Pirkei De Rebbe Eliezer, an early medieval Midrash, we can read: ‘[God] let Adam into his apadâna, as it is written: And put him into the Garden of Eden to cultivate it and to keep it.’”¹⁸³⁸

E-117 A fifteenth-century Christian text speaks of the “royal seat of the High-king in Paradise, in the very center of Paradise, moreover, where the Tree of Life was situated.”¹⁸³⁹ Writes Barker:¹⁸⁴⁰

In the account of the life of Adam and Eve written at the end of the second temple period, when God returns to Paradise, the chariot throne¹⁸⁴¹ rests at the Tree of Life and all the flowers come into bloom.¹⁸⁴² The synagogue at Dura Europos depicts a king enthroned in a tree.¹⁸⁴³ The tree was inseparable from the throne itself. Reigning from the tree became a Christian theme, and the subject of controversy with Jews. Justin claimed that they had removed words from Psalm 96:10, which were important for Christians. The verse had originally been: ‘Say among the nations “The Lord reigns from the tree,” but he claimed, “from the tree” had been removed.

E-118 Compare the coupling of the terms “faith” and “faithfulness” with diligence in 1 Nephi 16:28-29, 17:15; Alma 32:41-43, and 38:3; and “heed” with diligence in Mosiah 1:16; Alma 7:26, 12:9, and 49:20.

Brock notes that the Syriac term for “diligence” is “regularly used by early Syriac writers in connection with the parables of the laborers in the vineyard... and of the talents.”¹⁸⁴⁴

E-119 The Prophet Joseph Smith wrote:

We consider that God has created man with a mind capable of instruction, and a faculty which may be enlarged in proportion to the heed and diligence given to the light communicated from heaven to the intellect; and that the nearer man approaches perfection, the clearer are his views, and the greater his enjoyments, till he has overcome the evils of his life and lost every desire for sin; and like the ancients, arrives at that point of faith where he is wrapped in the power and glory of his Maker and is caught up to dwell with Him. But we consider that this is a station to which no man has ever arrived in a moment: he must have been instructed in the government and laws of that kingdom by proper degrees, until his mind is capable in some measure of comprehending the propriety, justice, equality, and consistency of the same.¹⁸⁴⁵

E-120 Other interpreters have downplayed the significance of the distinction between the terms for love used in John 21, seeing them as mere rhetorical variations. The persuasiveness of such arguments is diminished when the passage is viewed in light of careful distinctions made elsewhere in John and reiterated in modern revelation.¹⁸⁴⁶

E-121 “In this use of Peter’s original name [i.e., Simon] some scholars see Jesus taking a certain distance from Peter. It seems that Jesus wants to make Peter feel that, before going further with him, he must first make a fresh beginning with him.”¹⁸⁴⁷ “Jesus is treating him less familiarly and thus challenging his Genesis Rabbah 2, 36:6:1B, p. 31.

1836 Joseph Smith, Jr., as reported by William Allen to Charles Lowell Walker (C. L. Walker, Diary, 12 May 1881, 2:554); J. A. Fitzmyer, Genesis Apocryphon, 13:8-15:20, pp. 89-93; Koler and Greenspahn, quoted in W. Vogels, Cham Découvre, p. 567 n. 31.

1837 See Endnote 3-57, p. 210.

1838 G. B. Eden, Mystical Architecture, p. 22; cf. M.-A. Ouaknin, et al., Rabbi Éliézer, 12, p. 82.

1839 M. Herbert, Irish Apocrypha, p. 6.

1840 M. Barker, Temple Theology, p. 89.

1841 See Endnote 3-57, p. 210.

1842 G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, 44(22):3-4, p. 62E.

1843 See E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 9:79-89, 101-104, 11:iv, 73-77, 323.

1844 Ephrem the Syrian, Poems, p. 15 n. 7.

1845 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 22 January 1834, p. 51.

1846 For views that downplay the distinction in John 21, see J. R. Holland, Lift, pp. 121-123; C. S. Keener, John, 2:1235-1236; T. W. Mackay, Resurrected Lord, pp. 464-467; H. N. Ridderbos, John, pp. 665-666. LDS authors have often discussed the significance of the titles “servant,” “son,” and “friend.” See Endnote E-125, p. 734.

1847 H. N. Ridderbos, John, p. 665.

friendship.”¹⁸⁴⁸ Does the Savior add the surname “son of Jonas [i.e., Jonah]” to the form of address to Peter as a subtle reminder of how he had temporarily abandoned his mission to again go fishing, just as Jonah had at first forsaken his mission to the Ninevites and taken to sea? Perhaps “Peter’s threefold profession of love for Jesus” in this passage is “intended to balance his threefold denial.”¹⁸⁴⁹

E-122 “The words... ‘more than these’ might refer to the way in which Peter has until now taken the lead in comparison to the other disciples, to Peter’s earlier statement that he was willing to give Jesus his all,¹⁸⁵⁰ and to what Peter will experience in the future.¹⁸⁵¹ In any case, thus formulated, this question is designed to let Peter know that loving and following Jesus can have more implications for him than he perhaps has thought and practiced in the past.”¹⁸⁵²

E-123 “Peter’s affirmative answer is without hesitation, and appeals to Jesus’ knowledge of him. The appeal does not have the sense of ‘Why ask me? You know me, don’t you?’ Jesus’ knowledge is, rather, the last thing on which Peter can base an appeal before Jesus. His own actions have witnessed against him, and ‘more than these’ seems to mock him more than justify him. All that is left to Peter is, ‘You know that I love you,’ an appeal to Jesus’ knowledge of him as one of his own.”¹⁸⁵³

E-124 Commenting to the sisters of the Nauvoo Relief Society, Joseph Smith said:

How mild the Savior dealt with Peter, saying, “When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.”¹⁸⁵⁴ At another time, He said to him, “Lovest thou me?” and having received Peter’s reply, He said, “Feed my sheep.”¹⁸⁵⁵ If the sisters loved the Lord, let them feed the sheep, and not destroy them. How oft have wise men and women sought to dictate Brother Joseph by saying, “O, if I were brother Joseph I would do this and that”; but if they were in Brother Joseph’s shoes they would find that men or women could not be compelled into the kingdom of God, but must be dealt with in long-suffering, and at last we shall save them. The way to keep all the Saints together, and keep the work rolling, is to wait with all long-suffering, till God shall bring such characters to justice. There should be no license for sin, but mercy should go hand in hand with reproof.¹⁸⁵⁶

E-125 Madsen observes:

It is interesting that the earlier revelations called Joseph [Smith] “my servant, Joseph.” Later—presumably as he grew spiritually and became more worthy—we find the Lord speaking of him as “Joseph, my son.” Finally, he spoke of the Prophet and others with him as “my friends.” Servant, son, friend: three beautiful relationships. Not, I take it, stages in spiritual progress so much as levels of it; for in the end, those of us who are thoroughly committed to Christ remain servants, sons or daughters, and friends.¹⁸⁵⁷

E-126 Riddle’s image recalls the Mandaean poem that imagines souls being “entwined” by the vine on their journey upwards.¹⁸⁵⁸

Millet also comments on the effects of the gradual refining process of sanctification on our personal judgments.¹⁸⁵⁹

Perhaps it is the case that over the years the Spirit of the Lord works in a quiet, consistent manner to educate our consciences, enhance our perspective, and polish our wisdom and judgment. After all, the Prophet Joseph explained that an important assignment of the Holy Ghost is to convey pure intelligence through “expanding the mind, enlightening the understanding, and storing the intellect with... knowledge.”¹⁸⁶⁰ It may be that one day we will look back on what we perceived at the time to be seasons wherein we believed we were required to make decisions on our own, only to discover that the 1848 Brown, Comm. II, p. 1102, cited in H. N. Ridderbos, John, p. 665.

1849 A. E. Harvey, Companion 1970, p. 393.

1850 John 13:37; Mark 14:29.

1851 John 21:18, 19.

1852 H. N. Ridderbos, John, p. 665; cf. John 21:18a.

1853 H. N. Ridderbos, John, p. 665; cf. John 10:14; Luke 22:32.

1854 Luke 22:32.

1855 John 21:15-16.

1856 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 9 June 1842, p. 241.

1857 T. G. Madsen, Joseph Smith, pp. 84-85. Compare Elder Hafen’s suggestion of the slightly different sequence of servant, friend, son (B. C. Hafen, Disciple’s Journey, pp. 299-301). A similar literary device involving an ascending set of titles applied to Jesus by the Samaritan woman in John 4 has been noted and discussed since early times (see e.g., Ephrem the Syrian, Diatessaron 12:16, 18, pp. 198-199).

1858 J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine, p. 108; cf. M. Lidzbarski, Ginza, GL 3:26, p. 551:16-19. See Endnote 4-66, p. 316.

1859 R. L. Millet, Alive, p. 108.

1860 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 27 June 1839, p. 149.

Lord had been, through the honing and refining processes in our souls, leading us along paths of his choosing. That is, maybe we will learn that our own wisdom and judgment were not really our own.¹⁸⁶¹

- E-127 In all there are twenty-four buildings indicated on the two squares in the middle of the “city plat of Zion,” including “temples” that will be used for “houses of worship, schools, etc.”¹⁸⁶²
- E-128 The principle according to which “the Christian is to keep only what is reasonably necessary... and give the rest to the needy”¹⁸⁶³ was a well-documented practice among the first Christians, as was the concept of the “true fast,” wherein the primitive Saints were counseled: “on the day you fast... calculate the price of the food you were going to eat, and give it to a widow or orphan or needy person.”¹⁸⁶⁴
- E-129 “The theme of reversal was developed by Irenaeus in a system known as ‘recapitulation,’ showing how Christ was the restored Adam, Mary the restored Eve—the virgin who obeyed, contrasted with the virgin who disobeyed—and the cross the remedy for the ills of the Tree of Knowledge.”¹⁸⁶⁵
- E-130 Islamic scholar Ibn Kathir also records the tradition that “Noah, when it was time for the Flood, carried Adam and Eve in the Ark and reburied them in Jerusalem.”¹⁸⁶⁶ The Ka’bah in Mecca was also said to have been preserved during the Flood.¹⁸⁶⁷
- E-131 Holzapfel and Wayment note that “the Joseph Smith Translation at Matthew, Mark, and John changes ‘skull’ to ‘burial,’ suggesting that the term [Golgotha] has nothing to do with the place’s appearance but with its function.”¹⁸⁶⁸
- E-132 The site of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre has a long and complex history.¹⁸⁶⁹ Following the Bar Kokhba revolt that ended in 135 CE, the Roman Emperor Hadrian expelled the Jews from Jerusalem and commenced a new building program for the Roman city of Aelia Capitolina. This move was seen by Eusebius to be motivated, at least in part, by the desire to eradicate remains of the Holy City’s sacred sites. Eusebius recorded that a cave at what later became the site of the Church, reputed to be the location of the Savior’s tomb, was covered over with a pagan temple until its re-excavation by Constantine:

It was this very cave of the Savior that some godless and wicked people had planned to make invisible to mankind, thinking in their stupidity that they could in this way hide the truth. Indeed with a great expenditure of effort they brought earth from somewhere outside and covered up the whole place, then leveled it, paved it, and so hid the divine cave somewhere down beneath a great quantity of soil. Then as though they had everything finished, above the ground they constructed a terrible and truly genuine tomb, one for souls, for dead idols, and built a gloomy sanctuary to the impure demon of Aphrodite; then they offered foul sacrifices there upon defiled and polluted altars. They reckoned there was one way alone and no other to bring their desires to realization, and that was to bury the Savior’s cave under such foul pollutions.¹⁸⁷⁰

The accounts of the Bordeaux Pilgrim¹⁸⁷¹ (333 CE) and Egeria¹⁸⁷² (381-384 CE) provide early firsthand perspectives from lay Christians about the site. Over time, “the church of the Holy Sepulchre would draw to itself all the symbolism, the cosmic symbolism, of the Temple itself, including the idea that the Temple was the Navel of the World, thus reestablishing Jerusalem as the pivot and center of the world, and distinctly downgrading the importance of the Temple Mount itself.”¹⁸⁷³ Armstrong observes:

When they visited Golgotha, pilgrims were now shown the place where Adam had been created by God at the beginning of time. Golgotha was thought to be on the site of the Garden of Eden. It had become a symbol which gave pilgrims that experience of returning to Paradise...¹⁸⁷⁴

1861 D&C 61:22, 62:8.

1862 J. Smith, Jr., Documentary History, 25 June 1833, 1:358-359. For more about the current state and future plans for the site of the temple complex, see L. C. Berrett et al., Missouri, pp. 22-36; R. O. Cowan, Dot, pp. 36-38, 199; R. O. Cowan, Great Temple.

1863 C. Osiek, Shepherd, p. 172.

1864 C. Osiek, Shepherd, 5:3 [56], p. 173.

1865 Irenaeus, Proof, 33-34, pp. 69-70; M. Barker, Hidden, p. 33.

1866 B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, p. 34. See also M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, p. 347 n. 69; al-Tabari, Creation, 1:162-163, pp. 333-334.

1867 al-Tabari, Creation, 1:164, p. 335.

1868 R. N. Holzapfel et al., Final Hours, p. 324.

1869 M. Biddle, Tomb; M. Biddle, History; C. Morris, Sepulchre to 1600; K. Armstrong, Jerusalem, pp. 153-193.

1870 Eusebius, Constantine, 3:26:2-3, p. 132.

1871 Included in Egeria, Travels, 594, p. 31.

1872 See ibid., 30:1ff., pp. 151ff.

1873 J. M. Lundquist, Temple of Jerusalem, pp. 156-157; cf. Wilkinson in Egeria, Travels, p. 11.

1874 K. Armstrong, Jerusalem, p. 213. See Endnote E-247, p. 769.

BYU Professor Jeffrey Chadwick argues against the possibility of a connection between the site of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre and the Crucifixion.¹⁸⁷⁵ After more than a decade of study, Chadwick adduced evidence favoring the “Golgotha” site (“Gordon’s Calvary”) near the Garden Tomb as the place of crucifixion.¹⁸⁷⁶ However, he also concluded that neither the “Garden Tomb” nor location of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre was a viable candidate for Jesus’ burial.¹⁸⁷⁷ For contrary opinions summarizing evidence supporting the plausibility of Constantine’s Church as the burial site, see Biddle, Morris, Shanks, and Gibson.¹⁸⁷⁸ Obviously, no historical connection can be made with any of these sites and the burial of Adam and Eve. For a collection of statements by LDS Church leaders about holy sites in Israel, see D. B. Galbraith et al., Jerusalem, pp. 500-507.

- E-133 For references to discussions of the veneration of “mystic caves” by pagans and Jewish Christians, see Eusebius.¹⁸⁷⁹ Cameron and Hall note that Eusebius’ narrative, “with its elaborate insistence on three caves, and his stress on victory and salvation, leads him to emphasize the resurrection rather than the death of Christ, which was in any case the eastern understanding.”¹⁸⁸⁰ Consistent with this emphasis (and perhaps the fact that the tradition had not yet taken hold), the cave of the tomb of Adam was not mentioned by Eusebius.

Although Jerome had earlier accepted the Church as the site of Adam’s burial, he later became critical of that view, no doubt being aware of the Jewish tradition that Adam was buried in Hebron.¹⁸⁸¹

I have heard somebody expound how the place of Calvary is where Adam was buried and that it was so called because the head of the first man was located there... It is a nice story and ordinary people like it, but it is not true. For outside the city and the gate were the places in which the heads of criminals were struck off and they took the name of Calvary, that is of the beheaded.¹⁸⁸²

Though Ambrose accepted the story of Adam’s burial at Golgotha, “the powerful influence of Jerome ensured that the Adam legend did not appear much in Latin literature before the time of the Crusades.”¹⁸⁸³

- E-134 Note that the number eight, corresponding to the age of baptism, has long been used as a symbol of renewal.¹⁸⁸⁴

- E-135 For example: “There was among [the children of Seth] neither envy, injustice, nor lying; and their bond (pledge or faith...) was, ‘No, by the blood of Abel.’”¹⁸⁸⁵ Also, Cainan on his deathbed is said to have blessed his children, and then declared: “I will make you swear by the holy blood of Abel that not one of you shall go down from this holy mountain into the camp of the children of Cain.”¹⁸⁸⁶ In The Cave of Treasures, Seth is depicted as saying: “I will make you to take an oath, and to swear by the holy blood of Abel, that none of you will go down from this holy mountain to the children of Cain, the murderer. For ye know well the enmity which hath existed between us and Cain since the day whereon he slew Abel.”¹⁸⁸⁷ An Islamic account records that when the news that some of the children of Seth were planning at last to descend from the mountain, “Yarad [Jared]... came to them and implored them—invoking God—to recall the injunction of their forefathers; he (also) adjured them by the blood of Hābil [Abel]. Akhnūkh b. Yarad [Enoch, son of Jared] then stood up before them and said, ‘Know that those of you who defy our father Yarad and violate the oath of our ancestors by descending from our mountain will never again re-ascend (it)!’ But they insisted on descending, and after they had descended, they consorted with the daughters of Qābil and as a result committed 1875 J. R. Chadwick, Golgotha. See S. Gibson, Final Days, pp. 116-122 for a view to the contrary.

1876 Cf. A. C. Skinner, Golgotha, pp. 122-123. For a critique of Chadwick’s conclusions, see J. M. Bradshaw, Adam, Eve, First Easter.

1877 J. R. Chadwick, Golgotha; cf. R. N. Holzapfel et al., Final Hours, pp. 372-376; A. C. Skinner, Tomb, pp. 21-30.

1878 M. Biddle, Tomb; M. Biddle, History, pp. 28-31; C. Morris, Sepulchre to 1600, p. 28-31; H. Shanks, Temple Mount, pp. 40-44; S. Gibson, Final Days, pp. 149-165.

1879 Eusebius, Constantine, p. 276 n. 25-8; pp. 277-278 n. 26-2.

1880 Ibid., p. 283 n. 30-1.

1881 See M. McNamara, Targum Neofiti, 23:2 and n. 1, p. 120; J. Neusner, Genesis Rabbah 2, 58:4, p. 297; M.-A. Ouaknin et al., Rabbi Éliézer, 20, pp. 127-128, 36, p. 224; H. Schwartz, Tree, 445, pp. 343-344; 639, pp. 504-506. A fifteenth-century Christian source has Adam being buried at Hebron, with his skull being washed to Calvary at the time of Noah’s flood (M. Herbert, Irish Apocrypha, p. 16).

1882 Jerome, Commentary on Matthew 27:33, cited in C. Morris, Sepulchre to 1600, p. 28.

1883 C. Morris, Sepulchre to 1600, p. 28.

1884 J. Cabanot, Thèmes, p. 46.

1885 Saïd Ibn-Bat., cited in S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, p. 227.

1886 E. A. W. Budge, Cave, p. 81.

1887 Ibid., p. 76.

shameless perversions.”¹⁸⁸⁸

- E-136 Paralleling the comparison between Abel and Jesus, the author of Hebrews had earlier compared the purifying power of “the ashes of an heifer” to that of the “blood of Christ.”¹⁸⁸⁹
- E-137 See Szink for an LDS perspective on the question of the authorship of the book of Hebrews.¹⁸⁹⁰ While the cited reference of the Prophet’s statement is evidence of “Joseph’s belief that at least one specific idea expressed in Hebrews, the knowledge of Abel’s sacrifice, came from Paul,” Szink nevertheless seems sympathetic to the likelihood that, based on a range of other evidences, the book was written by a disciple of Paul rather than by Paul himself.¹⁸⁹¹
- E-138 According to the book of Numbers, the sacrificial blood and ashes of a pure and perfectly formed red heifer were to be used for the purification of those who came into contact with a corpse. Believing that a qualifying red heifer has not been born since 70 CE when the Jerusalem temple was destroyed, some Jewish and Christian groups see the future sacrifice of such a red heifer as of much wider significance, heralding the messianic era and the rebuilding of the temple, and are actively working to breed such an animal¹⁸⁹²—an effort that has led to much controversy and dispute.¹⁸⁹³ Dismissing the need for such an effort, some Jews claim that, “owing to the non-existence of the ‘Sanctuary,’ there is now no justification for the ashes of the ‘red heifer’ or the ‘water of separation’... prepared from these ashes,” however others, including the Samaritans, insist upon the continued validity of these purification rites.¹⁸⁹⁴ From the perspective of Orthodox Judaism, because all Jews since temple times have “unavoidably been in contact with death,” none can set foot on the Temple Mount or “can begin even the most preliminary work [there] until they have been purified by the ashes of the Red Heifer.”¹⁸⁹⁵
- E-139 Significantly, in the Qur’an, the cow is not red but “intensely yellow, giving delight to the beholders,”¹⁸⁹⁶ inviting a comparison to the golden calf made by Aaron in the wilderness. Giving his perspective about the contrasting Jewish and Islamic expressions of these stories, Ali writes: “[A]s is clear from their worship of the golden calf, [the Israelites] were ordered to slaughter such cows as were usually let abroad and worshiped as sacred objects... the object being to root out cow-worship from among them. But whereas the biblical injunction to slaughter a heifer is a general injunction to be observed whenever an uncertain murder takes place or an unclean person is to be purified, the injunction as contained in the Qur’an points to the slaughter of one particular cow which was probably likely to become an object of worship. Indeed there is a striking resemblance between the color of the golden calf and the cow ordered to be slaughtered. The concluding words of the section show that, because of their reverence for that particular cow, the Jews were very averse to slaughter it.”¹⁸⁹⁷
- E-140 In English, the direct object is indicated, not by an explicit term as in Hebrew, but by word order. Gallus writes: “On purely philological grounds, Luther’s rendering of Genesis 4:1 cannot be disproved, and it became a guiding influence for the old Lutheran exegetes and theologians through the end of the 18th century.”¹⁸⁹⁸ Hamilton likewise concurs that et “can be used in two ways: as the preposition ‘with,’ or as the marker of the direct object.”¹⁸⁹⁹ Boice notes that “et also occurs in the 1888 J. C. Reeves, al-Yaqubi. See also S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 2:11, p. 119.

1889 Hebrews 9:13-14. See A. A. Orlov, Redeeming Role for a discussion of a redemptive role attributed to Enoch.

1890 T. L. Szink, Authorship.

1891 Ibid., p. 253. See also K. L. Barney, NT Footnotes, 3:53-55.

1892 K. Boren, Winepress; D. Rona, Revealed, pp. 155-158.

1893 Maimonides is frequently cited as a source of this belief: “Now nine red heifers were prepared from the time this commandment was received until the Temple was destroyed the second time... and a tenth will King Messiah prepare—may he soon be revealed” (Commentary on the Mishnah, Laws of the Red Heifer 3:4, cited in J. Neusner, Without Myth, p. 99. See also J. Neusner, Mishnah, 6 (Purities), Parah, 3:5, p. 1016).

1894 S. Lowy, Principles, p. 400.

1895 K. Boren, Winepress, p. 16. For LDS perspectives on events relating to the Jerusalem temple mount prior to the Millennium, see D. B. Galbraith et al., Jerusalem, p. 474-487; D. C. Peterson, Abraham, pp. 357-367. For Jewish perspectives, see W. J. Hamblin et al., Temple, pp. 199-203. See also D. N. Freedman et al., Dome. Note also the idea of the “pure heifer” as a title of honor applied to Mary in the Orthodox Church, as in their great hymn to her entitled “The Akathist.” (M. Barker, 11 June 2007).

1896 A. at-Tabataba’i, Al-Mizan, 2:68, 1:284.

1897 A. Ali, Qur’an, p. 33 n. 108.

1898 T. Gallus, Der Nachkomme 1, p. 124.

1899 V. P. Hamilton, Genesis, p. 221. The usual Hebrew term for “with” is im. When rendered as “with,” et implies a relationship of “subservience” between the two entities related by the term; whereas im indicates “full companionship” and “equal partnership.” See D. Fohrman, Beast, pp. 117-131.

front of the word ‘Cain’ earlier in the sentence, which puts the two parts in parallel construction. Together they read, ‘She bore et-Cain, and she said, ‘I have brought forth a man, et-Jehovah.’”¹⁹⁰⁰ Additional references to the literature surrounding various interpretations of the Hebrew of this verse are given in Westermann.¹⁹⁰¹

- E-141 Cf. Targum Pseudo-Jonathan: “I have acquired a man, the Angel of the Lord.”¹⁹⁰² No doubt “the Angel of” was substituted as a gloss because the idea of the child actually being “the Lord” was inadmissible to the author of the Targum. Maher discusses this statement in light of the development of a separate tradition that Cain was fathered by Sammael (Satan).¹⁹⁰³
- E-142 Thus, writes Gallus, “Luther finds a parallel in the confessions of Eve ‘I have the man, the Lord’¹⁹⁰⁴ and of Saint Peter ‘Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.’”¹⁹⁰⁵
- E-143 Taking Exodus 6:3 to imply that the name Jehovah was not revealed until the time of Moses, Boice sees Eve not as “claiming to have given birth to God but rather would have been using the word in a broader sense meaning perhaps ‘the one who brings into being,’ ‘gives life,’ or ‘delivers.’ In this case, the best translation of Eve’s words would be, ‘I have brought forth a man, even the deliverer.’”¹⁹⁰⁶
- E-144 Likewise, it was said that Abel’s “face... shone like the morning” as later did the face of Seth.¹⁹⁰⁷ Compare the description of Noah as a baby in the Genesis Apocryphon.¹⁹⁰⁸ Such a birth, as in the case of Noah, signifies the spiritual, priestly nature of the child as the “fully human bearer of God’s image.”¹⁹⁰⁹ Parallels in the 1 Enoch account of the birth of Noah to various biblical figures, including Jesus Christ, are summarized in G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 106:2, p. 536; cf. pp. 543-544 n. 1b-7. Parallels between Noah and Melchizedek in pseudepigraphal accounts are listed in A. A. Orlov, Heir, pp. 53-55.
- Mandaean tradition records that Abel was “born miraculously, leaving his mother intact and appearing suddenly at her side.”¹⁹¹⁰
- E-145 It was also recounted that “Cain grew in one year more than any other child does in two years” and that “God also gave him the good fortune of complete faculty of speech” when he was “not even a year old.”¹⁹¹¹
- E-146 A related sense of cheirograph is found in Colossians 2:14, where the Greek term should be translated “bond”¹⁹¹² or ‘bill of indebtedness’ but not ‘contract.’ The text does not mention Satan or Adam and seems to say that at the Crucifixion, Christ erased the bill of indebtedness that humans had incurred by sinning and nailed it to the Cross.”¹⁹¹³ In other words, just as in Roman times cancelled bills were nailed up for display to publicly announce that the charges had been paid, so Christ was nailed to the cross to make it known to all that He had satisfied mankind’s debt of sin. Symbolically, the handwritten bond of justice was annulled by the “writing” of the nails in the pierced hands of the Savior—Christ’s cheirograph of mercy. Likewise, the bloody contractual cheirograph portrayed as having been unscrupulously procured by Satan from Adam will hold no sway over the righteous who fully accept and qualify for the covenantal cheirograph required of them by the redeeming Lord, who provided a substitutionary sacrifice.¹⁹¹⁴

1900 J. M. Boice, Genesis 1-11, p. 250.

1901 C. Westermann, Genesis 1-11, p. 291.

1902 M. Maher, Pseudo-Jonathan, p. 31 n. 2.

1903 Ibid., p. 31 n. 2.

1904 Genesis 4:1.

1905 T. Gallus, Der Nachkomme I, p. 124. See Matthew 16:16.

1906 J. M. Boice, Genesis 1-11, pp. 250-251.

1907 M. al-Kisa'i, Tales, p. 78.

1908 1QapGen 5:12-13 in M. Wise et al., DSS, pp. 92-93. For more on this topic, see J. M. Bradshaw et al., God's Image 2, p. 198.

1909 C. H. T. Fletcher-Louis, Glory, p. 30; cf. pp. 33ff. and Philo, Questions on Genesis, 2:56, p. 141.

1910 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, p. 47; cf. the birth of Melchizedek in F. I. Andersen, 2 Enoch, 78:17-19, pp. 206-207.

1911 M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam, p. 269; cf. Noah in E. Isaac, 1 Enoch, 106:3, p. 86. See also C. H. T. Fletcher-Louis, Glory, p. 47.

1912 Cf. the fifteenth-century Christmas carol “Adam lay ybounden / Bounden in a bond” (Adam Lay Ybounden).

1913 M. E. Stone, Legend, p. 153. See also J. Chrysostom, cited in M. E. Stone, Legend, p. 155.

1914 I. Mikael, son of Bakhayla, Godhead, p. 136; cf. S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 1:69, pp. 83-84. See also Cyril of Jerusalem, Five, 2:5, p. 148; B. C. Hafen, Covenant, pp. 75-84; S. E. Robinson, Believing, pp. 24-25. See also T. G. Madsen, Suffering, p. 234; pp. 240-241; Romans 8:17; 2 Corinthians 4:10; Galatians 2:20, 6:17; 1 Kings 18:28; Zechariah 13:6. See J. C. Robison, Nails, for a study of the use of nails in Roman crucifixions. See also T. G. Madsen, Sacrament, p. 14.

Seach discusses participation in the sufferings of Christ with reference to the New Testament term koinonia (fellowship, communion, participation, sharing):

In 1 Corinthians 10:16-17... Paul says that we gain koinonia with the Body of Christ by “taking part” (metecho) in the symbols of his Sacrifice; and in 2 Corinthians 1:7, he adds that we must have koinonia with his suffering in order to have koinonia with his glory. 2 Peter 1:3-4 similarly promises that through the proper “knowledge” of Christ we might become “partakers (koinonoi) of the Divine Nature. In the New Testament, the marks of “the dying of the Lord Jesus”¹⁹¹⁵ were therefore said to be stamped upon the candidate, showing that he had been willing to “take up his cross and follow [Christ]”...¹⁹¹⁶

What this means in terms of Christian behavior is that the old cult of animal sacrifice had been replaced by personal sacrifice.¹⁹¹⁷ Thus Jesus, who was about to offer his life for the sake of his friends,¹⁹¹⁸ asked Peter: “Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake?”¹⁹¹⁹ The Law of Sacrifice thereby became an integral and important part of the Christian Temple-cult, though internalized as the giving of self, the highest sacrifice of all...¹⁹²⁰

E-147 In the Mandaean scriptures, not only Abel but also Seth precedes Adam to the grave.¹⁹²¹ In contrast to Abel, Seth dies willingly in place of his aged father.

E-148 Some relevant secondhand statements have been attributed to Joseph Smith,¹⁹²² though it is possible that these informants did not make a precise distinction between Eden and Adam-ondi-Ahman.

E-149 Goslee has written the most complete introduction to the words of the poem.¹⁹²³ Unfortunately, I was unable to obtain a copy of her article.

Strikingly absent from the preface are Blake’s characteristic illuminations. For unexplained reasons, he removed the preface from later versions (C and D) of Milton. Blake’s editors comment as follows:

The removal of the Preface... may have been motivated by something in its contents that no longer suited Blake’s conception of Milton. Fox suggests that the plate was omitted from copies C and D because its “stridency... contradicts the attitude of forgiveness and conversion that informs the poem itself” (26). Another possibility is that the Preface, with its appeal to “Young Men of the New Age” and call to “Painters!... Sculptors! Architects” (lines 12, 16-17), implies confidence in finding a wide readership for his poem, a confidence that Blake may have lost by the time he collated the two later copies.¹⁹²⁴

Bindman observes: “Whatever his reasons for doing so, it is ironic that Jerusalem, the one Blake poem that is universally known (if imperfectly understood), should form part of a page which its author felt able to discard.”¹⁹²⁵

E-150 The music was written by Sir C. Hubert H. Parry (1848-1918) in 1916, and is best known today in the version orchestrated in 1922 by Sir Edward Elgar (1857-1934). As a hymn, its common name is Jerusalem, though proponents of the traditions connecting the church of Glastonbury to Joseph of Arimathea call it The Glastonbury Hymn.¹⁹²⁶

“The Mormon Tabernacle Choir sang Blake’s ‘Jerusalem’ in London in June 1998. Craig Jessop, the Choir leader, had served a mission in Britain and chose this song.”¹⁹²⁷

1915 2 Corinthians 4:10.

1916 Matthew 16:24; cf. Alma 39:9: “cross yourself.”

1917 For more on the cessation of the practice of animal sacrifice in early Christianity, see M-Z. Petropoulou, Animal Sacrifice.

1918 John 15:13.

1919 John 13:38.

1920 J. E. Seach, Ancient Texts 1995, p. 888.

1921 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, GL 1:1, pp. 191-194.

1922 L. C. Berrett et al., Missouri, pp. 8, 387.

1923 N. M. Goslee, England’s Green.

1924 W. Blake, Milton, p. 40. For more on the background of Blake’s “appeal,” see H. Bloom, Blake’s Apocalypse, pp. 304-305; N. Frye, Symmetry, pp. 316-323.

1925 W. Blake, Illuminated, p. 245.

1926 L. S. Lewis, St. Joseph, front matter.

1927 V. G. Swanson, Grail, p. 48 n. 15.

- E-151 William Blake's first original work of art, produced in 1773 when he was 16, was a drawing entitled Joseph of Arimathea among the Rocks of Albion. When he re-engraved the drawing at a later date, Blake wrote the following about Joseph: "This is one of the Gothic artists who built the cathedrals in what we call the Dark Ages. Wandering about in sheepskins and goatskins, of whom the world was not worthy¹⁹²⁸—such were the Christians in all ages."¹⁹²⁹ Of the painting, Ackroyd writes: "It would be too easy to say that it is as much a portrait of Blake as of Joseph, but there is no doubt that the engraving does coincide with some of the dramatically isolated and embattled voices that emerge in the poetry he was now writing... Here... is an image of all his youthful aspirations and ideals—the prophet, the Gothic artist, the heroic proportions out of Michelangelo, the vistas of remote antiquity, and, somewhere brooding within them, the figure of Blake himself."¹⁹³⁰
- E-152 "All his life he spoke of 'lost originals,' as if he were reaching beyond his own civilization to the simplicity and grandeur of a remote past... Blake was entranced and persuaded by the idea of a deeply spiritual past, and he continually alluded to the possibility of ancient lore and arcane myths that could be employed to reveal previously hidden truths... These were also very much the preoccupations of his period, when comparative mythology was often aligned with the wilder speculations of various prophetic sects,"¹⁹³¹ such as the idea that the biblical patriarchs were incipient Druids.¹⁹³² Notwithstanding self-interested attempts by members of these movements to clothe him as a disciple of one or another of them, according to Bloom, Blake remained "a poet, a revolutionary moralist, and a profound rebel against social, religious, political, and psychological conventions," and not "an antiquarian, a mystic, an occultist or theosophist, [or] a scholar of any writings beyond the Bible and other poetry insofar as it resembled the Bible":
- His references to esoteric traditions are few, and tend to be superficial when they are not mocking... [What] zealots... took, absurdly, for a literal truth of identification between Britain and Israel, Blake takes as an imaginative truth. All religions are one, and there is no natural religion. It follows that Druidism, the impostures of historical and institutional Judaism and Christianity, and Deism must be one, and that all true religion must be one also. In the same way, the cabalistic tradition of the Adam Kadmon or Divine Man must be one with Blake's myth of Albion, though in fact the actual cabalists would have been outraged at the humanistic "impieties" of Blake's myth, for their God was altogether transcendent.¹⁹³³
- E-153 Blake's treatise All Religions are One presented his "concept of 'Poetic Genius,' which inhabits all men,"¹⁹³⁴ while being "adapted to the weaknesses of every individual."¹⁹³⁵ "The religions of all nations are derived from each nation's different reception of the Poetic Genius which is everywhere called the Spirit of Prophecy."¹⁹³⁶ Thus, the "Jewish and Christian Testaments are an original derivation" from that same Spirit, and "all religions" in their original uncorrupted purity "have one source."¹⁹³⁷
- For a concise overview of Blake's complex views on religion, see S. F. Damon et al., Dictionary, pp. 342-346. For a discussion of the Bible as "the single most important influence on Blake's life," see L. Tannenbaum, Biblical Tradition, pp. 3-24.
- E-154 Referring to "The Bethlem [sic] Royal Hospital of London, which has been variously known as St. Mary Bethlehem, Bethlem Hospital, Bethlehem Hospital and Bedlam, ...the world's oldest psychiatric hospital. The word 'Bedlam' has long been used for lunatic asylums in general, and later for a scene of uproar and confusion."¹⁹³⁸
- E-155 "The American and French revolutions were largely Deist-inspired, and both appeared to Blake to be genuinely imaginative upheavals. He wrote poems warmly sympathizing with both, hoping that they were the beginning of a world-wide revolt that would begin his apocalypse... [Yet, the] attitude to life implied by [Deism] can have no permanent revolutionary vigor, for underlying it is the weary 1928 See Hebrews 11:38.

1929 Spelling and punctuation modernized.

1930 P. Ackroyd, Blake, p. 42.

1931 Ibid., pp. 40, 51-52.

1932 W. Blake, To the Jews, p. 171. See also, e.g., P. Ackroyd, Blake, pp. 48-55, 98-104, 305, 327-328.

1933 H. Bloom, Commentary, pp. 934-935.

1934 H. Dubnick, Poet as Prophet, p. 87; cf. W. Blake, All Religions, p. 22.

1935 W. Blake, All Religions, p. 23.

1936 Ibid., p. 25, spelling and punctuation modernized.

1937 Ibid., pp. 26-27.

1938 Bethlem Royal Hospital.

materialism which asserts that the deader a thing is the more trustworthy it is; that a rock is a solid reality and that the vital spirit of a living man is a rarefied and diaphanous ghost. It is no accident that [Tom] Paine should say in [his Age of Reason] that God can be revealed only in mechanics, and that a mill is a microcosm of the universe.”¹⁹³⁹

E-156 “Albion” is a poetic name for ancient Britain or England, often used in Blake’s writings. Appearing in medieval writings that cited Ptolemy¹⁹⁴⁰ and Pliny the Elder,¹⁹⁴¹ it is related to the Latin albus (= white), a Roman allusion to the white cliffs of Dover. However, the origin of the term is Celtic, from a Proto-Indo-European root denoting both “white” and “mountain,” and related to the Welsh cognate elfydd (= earth, world).¹⁹⁴²

E-157 Bloom also sees in the “Chariot of fire” a “direct reference to Gray’s vision of Milton in The Progress of Poesy.”¹⁹⁴³

E-158 “Blake adds ‘to’ before ‘God’ in Moses’s exclamation.”¹⁹⁴⁴

E-159 Although nothing like this episode can be associated directly with the historic King Nebuchadnezzar (605-562 BCE), both Neo-Babylonian inscriptions and the Prayer of Nabonidus (4Q242) fragment of the Dead Sea Scrolls provide evidence of a pre-Danielic tradition associating a similar story with Nabonidus, the last ruler of the Neo-Babylonian Empire (556-539 BCE) and father of Belsharusur.¹⁹⁴⁵ In his prayer, the king tells of his suffering with an “evil skin disease” for a period of seven years by the decree of God, and at least one scholar has proposed that a lacuna in the text “originally described Nabunay’s state as comparable to that of a beast,¹⁹⁴⁶ or that he was ‘set apart from human beings.’”¹⁹⁴⁷ After appealing to gods of silver, gold, bronze, iron, wood, stone, and clay, his sins were forgiven by a Jewish healer after he finally prayed to the Most High God.

A similar healing blessing performed by Abraham with the laying of hands upon the head is described in the Genesis Apocryphon (1QapGen) 20:28-29.¹⁹⁴⁸

E-160 Kerry summarizes:

The Magic Flute redefines allegorically the transgression of Adam and Eve, as a positive Fall (felix culpa), for Tamino is reborn as an Adam figure who begins his quest to find Pamina (Eve) and then they proceed together on a ritual journey to discover new knowledge, truth, and light in a priestly temple community.”¹⁹⁴⁹

E-161 Kerry writes:

Mozart’s letters to Constanze at the time he was composing The Magic Flute are full of affection, at times playfully expressed through the words of the opera’s libretto, and they are often signed Ewig Dein (Eternally yours) or use ewig in other endearing formulations such as Dein Dich ewig liebender Mann (Your eternally loving husband).¹⁹⁵⁰

E-162 To Miranda, Prospero avers: “I have done nothing, but in care of thee / (Of thee my dear one, thee my daughter), who / Art ignorant of what thou art.”¹⁹⁵¹ By means of their trials, Prospero “must uneasy make” the couple, “lest too light winning / Make the prize light.”¹⁹⁵² At the conclusion of Ferdinand’s test, Prospero explains to him: “All thy vexations / Were but my trials of thy love, and thou / Hast strangely stood the test. Here, afore heaven, / I ratify this my rich gift.”¹⁹⁵³

1939 N. Frye, Symmetry, p. 66.

1940 ‘Alouion,’ (C. Ptolemy, Geography, ch. 2).

1941 Pliny the Elder, Natural History, 4:30 (16), p. 350.

1942 Albion.

1943 H. Bloom, Commentary, p. 910.

1944 W. Blake, Milton 1998, p. 214 n. 43. See Numbers 11:29.

1945 . G. Martinez, DSS Translated, p. 289; L. T. Stuckenbruck, Daniel, pp. 104-106; J. A. Tvedtnes, Nebuchadnezzar; G. Vermes, Complete, p. 614; M. Wise et al., DSS, pp. 340-342. This is the biblical “King Belshazzar” (Daniel 5:22, 7:1, 8:1).

1946 Daniel 4:25b.

1947 L. T. Stuckenbruck, Daniel, p. 105. See Daniel 4:25b.

1948 F. G. Martinez, DSS Translated, p. 234; G. Vermes, Complete, p. 487; M. Wise et al., DSS, p. 101.

1949 P. E. Kerry, Initiates, pp. 109-110.

1950 Ibid., p. 128.

1951 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:16-18, p. 1612.

1952 Ibid., 1:2:452-453, p. 1617.

1953 Ibid., 4:1:5-8, p. 1628. In this context, “strangely” denotes: “In an uncommon or exceptional degree, extraordi-

The Tempest, like other late plays of Shakespeare, both resembles and differs from the standard plot patterns to which audiences of his time had become accustomed:

Comedies typically traced the trials of young lovers at the hands of a blocking agent (usually her father) and ended with the celebration of their engagement and a parental blessing. The main plot was often paralleled in the comic subplot... The Tempest at first glance follows this pattern... The audience's attention is consistently focused on the father... [However, t]he darker themes of Shakespeare's tragedies—regicide, usurpation and vengeance—are always near this comedy's surface."¹⁹⁵⁴

- E-163 "Let me live here ever! / So rare a wondered father and a wise / Makes this place paradise."¹⁹⁵⁵ For "wise," others read "wife," arguing that "it made better sense for Ferdinand to acknowledge Miranda's importance and that [the Folio's] compositor had misread a long 's'."¹⁹⁵⁶ Countering, some critics observe that "biblical definitions of heaven excluded marriage..."¹⁹⁵⁷ If Miranda was also in Paradise—the test implicitly includes her in the place where Ferdinand wishes to live forever—she would not have been his, or anyone else's wife."¹⁹⁵⁸ Notwithstanding, Vaughan and Vaughan argue that the reading of "wife" is "syntactically and logically sound," while observing that the "'wise/wife' conundrum" fittingly illustrates the many unresolved issues of interpretation in the play. They conclude that: "While The Tempest masterfully probes these concerns, it tenaciously resists solutions."¹⁹⁵⁹
- E-164 "The chief expression in the play of astonishment and delight is not that of the visitors when they first see the island but of Miranda when she turns away from the island to gaze upon the real world."¹⁹⁶⁰
- E-165 For example, though Righter, Orgel, Frye, and Vaughan and Vaughan describe a range of literary, cultural, and historical affinities to the drama in great detail and cite near-contemporary stories of sea voyages and shipwrecks in their masterful introductions to the play, not one of them mentions any association between the play and the opening book of the Bible.¹⁹⁶¹ Battenhouse and Walter, however, briefly explore some of these associations.¹⁹⁶²

Battenhouse writes in astonishment that so many have failed to see Shakespeare's Christianity, "despite his burial in a church and a Last Will that names Christ his Savior."¹⁹⁶³ King observes:

Critics often don't see what there is to see in the greatest writers because they haven't the Gospel to see with... People look at Shakespeare and they find in him what they themselves are. So, if an agnostic looks at Shakespeare, he finds him an agnostic, and if a Roman Catholic looks at Shakespeare, he finds him a Roman Catholic, and so on. Nowadays, when most critics are non-Christian, they like to pretend that Shakespeare was not a Christian. But Shakespeare's plays exhibit all signs of being written in a Christian framework, with undisputed acceptance of such doctrines as were common to the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches: baptism, sin, repentance, forgiveness, the Atonement, and life everlasting."¹⁹⁶⁴

Some specific aspects of Shakespeare's faith will forever remain unknown. Marx explains: "Given the dangers involved in maintaining any religious position during a period of sudden and violent shifts in what was considered orthodox, [Shakespeare's] reticence [to detail the points of his faith] was only prudent."¹⁹⁶⁵ As a consequence of Shakespeare's caution in this regard, it has long been a matter of debate as to whether his sympathies were more Catholic or Protestant. As Batson wrote in the introduction to a book of essays on Shakespeare's Christianity:

Almost all of the authors see a Catholic or Protestant presence; most essayists think that Shakespeare depicts both positions in a given play, and others see either a decidedly Protestant narily, oddly, extremely" (C. T. Onions et al., Glossary, p. 269).

1954 V. M. Vaughan et al., Introduction, pp. 9-10.

1955 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 4:1:122-124, p. 1630.

1956 V. M. Vaughan et al., Introduction, p. 136.

1957 Mark 12:25, Luke 20:35. For evidence to the contrary, see J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 939-949, 1010.

1958 V. M. Vaughan et al., Introduction, p. 137.

1959 Ibid., p. 138.

1960 H. Fisch, Covenant Pattern, p. 217.

1961 N. Frye, Tempest; S. Orgel, Introduction; A. Righter, Introduction; V. M. Vaughan et al., Introduction.

1962 R. Battenhouse, Dimension; J. Walter, Epilogue.

1963 R. Battenhouse, Introduction, p. 1.

1964 A. H. King, Religion, p. 156.

1965 S. Marx, Shakespeare, p. 7. For historical background of these shifts, see N. Jones, England, esp. pp. 25-33, and P. Lake, Identities.

or Catholic thrust. An occasional writer portrays Shakespeare as one who, in his personal beliefs, lived and died a Catholic or a Protestant. For some of the essayists, Shakespeare as author provides insight into his culture (with the Catholic-Protestant struggle constituting a larger part of that culture). What is obvious is that not one fails to believe that the dramatist... is a consummate artist whose works reveal a Christian dimension.¹⁹⁶⁶

All this being the case, it should not be surprising that Shakespeare's plays are filled with biblical allusions—he refers to 61 of its 66 books (plus 11 of the deuterocanonical books) by one count,¹⁹⁶⁷ with the four gospels being “easily Shakespeare's most-referred-to biblical books.”¹⁹⁶⁸ In addition, references to the Book of Common Prayer and the Homilies are not uncommon.¹⁹⁶⁹ Since “most of the passages cited in the plays were not to those biblical books that were used in the liturgy or to the translation recited in church, but rather to the widely distributed Geneva Bible first published in 1560, [Shaheen] concludes that Shakespeare spent a good deal of time reading the Bible in private.”¹⁹⁷⁰ Though his use of scripture, of course, was made exceptional because of his unique gifts as an author, Shakespeare's level of familiarity with the Bible was not as unusual in his time as it would have been in our own. As Daniell writes:

Shakespeare knew the Bible with an understanding that is in most ways strange to us. So did his first audiences and readers....

Shakespeare quotes and refers extensively and with freedom, sometimes movingly... More interestingly, however, Shakespeare makes large assumptions about the biblical understanding of his ordinary hearers and readers: such assumptions have for a long time now been in another world from the modern. They allow him, for example, to follow New Testament thought into one of its sixteenth-century developments, that encapsulation of New Testament theology, particularly that of Paul, that became known as Calvinism, so that both Julius Caesar, to some extent, and Hamlet, certainly, written close together in 1599 and 1600, are in part Calvinist plays. That is a coloring that is invisible without the spectacles of ready familiarity with the Bible.¹⁹⁷¹

Portions of The Tempest show that Shakespeare was very familiar with the account of the Apostle Paul's shipwreck on the island of Melita, and with an impressive variety of Old Testament stories as well.¹⁹⁷² Prospero's reassurance to Miranda “is phrased in the words of St. Paul: ‘For there shall not an hair fall from the head of any of you;’¹⁹⁷³ and Jesus: ‘all the hairs of your head are numbered: fear not therefore...’”¹⁹⁷⁴ In both shipwreck stories “not a hair perish'd” of any passenger.¹⁹⁷⁵ Shakespeare's description of the island includes a description of the “kindness” of the inhabitants,¹⁹⁷⁶ the gathering of sticks,¹⁹⁷⁷ of adders,¹⁹⁷⁸ and of worshipping a man as a god.¹⁹⁷⁹

Other evident biblical allusions in The Tempest include the mention of a prophetic mantle¹⁹⁸⁰ and staff;¹⁹⁸¹ the miraculous preservation of the garments of the wanderers;¹⁹⁸² murder by knocking a nail into the head of a sleeping victim;¹⁹⁸³ and the name¹⁹⁸⁴ and role¹⁹⁸⁵ of Ariel. Regarding the latter, Vaughan and Vaughan observe that:

1966 B. Batson, Preface, p. xvii.

1967 N. Shaheen, References, pp. 769-826.

1968 D. Daniell, Mind, p. 10; cf. N. Shaheen, References, pp. 801-814.

1969 N. Shaheen, References, pp. 827-832.

1970 S. Marx, Shakespeare, pp. 3-4. See N. Shaheen, References, pp. 53-55.

1971 D. Daniell, Reading the Bible, pp. 158-159.

1972 J. Rees, Bible, pp. 34-39.

1973 Acts 27:34.

1974 S. Marx, Shakespeare, p. 21. See Luke 12:7.

1975 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:217, p. 16151 cf. 1:2:30, p. 1612. See Daniel 3:27, Luke 12:7, Acts 27:34.

1976 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 3:3:30-34, p. 1627. See Acts 28:3, 7, 10.

1977 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 2:2:160, p. 1624. See Acts 28:3.

1978 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 2:2:13, p. 1622. See Acts 28:3-5.

1979 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 2:2:115, p. 1623. See Acts 28:6.

1980 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:24-25, p. 1612. See 1 Kings 19:13, 19; 2 Kings 2:8.

1981 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:54, p. 1632. See Exodus 4:2-4; Exodus 7 passim; Exodus 14 passim.

1982 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:218-219, p. 1615; 2:1:61-65, 70-71, p. 1619. See Deuteronomy 8:4; Nehemiah 9:21; Daniel 3:27.

1983 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 3:2:58-59, p. 1626. See Judges 4:21-22.

1984 Isaiah 29:1, Ezra 8:16.

1985 Isaiah 29:4.

Ariel is... an appropriate appellation for the powerful magus's agent who contrives a storm and a disappearing banquet. In the Bishop's Bible, the prophet declares that the altar of Jerusalem 'shall be visited of the Lord of hostes with thunder, and shaking, and a great noyse, a whirlwinde, and a tempest, and a flame of devouring fyre.'¹⁹⁸⁶ The prophet Isaiah continues, 'And it shalbe like as an hungrie man dreameth, and beholde, he eateth: and when he awaketh, his soul is emptie... For the Lord hath covered you with a spirit of slomber and hath shut up your eyes'¹⁹⁸⁷—metaphors that are reified in [The Tempest]¹⁹⁸⁸ when a 'strange drowsiness' possesses the Neapolitans and in [the stage directions following 3:3:52¹⁹⁸⁹] when 'the banquet vanishes.' By 1611 Shakespeare probably had heard Isaiah 29 expounded in church and perhaps had read it at home; whether he turned directly to the Bible or drew on subconscious recollections while he wrote, the image of Ariel as the 'lyon of God' speaking through flood and fire reverberates in The Tempest.¹⁹⁹⁰

The "revels speech" is sometimes seen mistakenly as evidence for Shakespeare's nihilism:

Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air:
And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
As dreams are made on; and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep.¹⁹⁹¹

From a Christian point of view, however, these lines are wholly inoffensive: the theme of the passing of this world is no surprise to the New Testament reader,¹⁹⁹² "the great globe" puns on Shakespeare's own stage, where no 'racks,' or theatrical scaffolds, will remain,¹⁹⁹³ and belief in the resurrection assures Christians that "our little life is rounded not only in a sleep but also in awakening to a reality next to which the life we 'know' will appear as a dream."¹⁹⁹⁴

Commenting on some of the greatest passages in Shakespeare's other plays, King writes:¹⁹⁹⁵

Fundamental Christian themes in Shakespeare are very often given the 'go-by' nowadays, but even the non-Christian critics more or less agree with the Christian ones on what the supreme passages in Shakespeare are: the reconciliation of Lear and Cordelia in King Lear,¹⁹⁹⁶ the final scene of The Winter's Tale (the reconciliation of the family),¹⁹⁹⁷ the death of Cleopatra,¹⁹⁹⁸ the finding by Pericles of his long-lost daughter.¹⁹⁹⁹ In some plays, for example in Hamlet, there are only a few lines of this sort. And in that play those lines aren't the end at all—they are in the first scene: the description of what Christmas does to the world.²⁰⁰⁰ And in Measure for Measure, there are a few lines in which Isabella refers to the Atonement:

Why, all the souls that were were forfeit once,
And He that might the vantage best have took 1986 Isaiah 29:6; cf. W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:196-206, p. 1614.

1987 Isaiah 29:8, 10.

1988 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 2:1:199, p. 1620.

1989 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, p. 1627.

1990 V. M. Vaughan et al., Introduction, pp. 27-28. See also R. Battenhouse, Dimension, p. 253. Shaheen, very stringent in his criteria for inclusion, lists many additional allusions to the Bible in The Tempest (N. Shaheen, References, pp. 734-749), however, in contrast to most critics he doubts that Ariel should be among them (ibid., pp. 738-739).

1991 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 4:1:148-158, p. 1630.

1992 1 Corinthians 7:31; 2 Peter 3:10-11; Revelation 6:14.

1993 J. Walter, Epilogue, p. 276.

1994 G. Slover, Analogical Reading, p. 260; cf. J. Walter, Epilogue, p. 276.

1995 A. H. King, Religion, p. 158.

1996 W. Shakespeare, King Lear, 4:7:43-74, p. 1289.

1997 W. Shakespeare, Winter's Tale, 5:3, pp. 1602-1603.

1998 W. Shakespeare, Antony, 5:2:280-313, pp. 1385-1386.

1999 W. Shakespeare, Pericles, 5:1:84-235, pp. 1507-1509.

2000 W. Shakespeare, Hamlet, 1:1:158-164, p. 1143.

Found out the remedy. How would you be
 If He, which is the top of judgment, should
 But judge you as you are? O, think on that,
 And mercy then will breathe within your lips,
 Like man new made.²⁰⁰¹

In these passages the true, the good, and the beautiful all come together.

As a footnote to King's citation of this passage, there is an interesting 1632 Folio "which between 1641 and 1651 was censored for the Inquisition by an English Jesuit living in Spain." Doctrinal excisions were made in many places, but the one play that was "cut cleanly out of the volume" was Measure for Measure.²⁰⁰²

On the sources and history of the exceptional appeal of Shakespeare within Mormon culture since pioneer times, see Tanner.²⁰⁰³ During a commencement speech, President Gordon B. Hinckley spoke fondly of the days he spent as an undergraduate studying Shakespeare at the University of Utah, saying: "I brought with me today my old Shakespeare text from which I read so long ago in English 171. It is filled with wisdom..." After quoting Romeo and Juliet, he commended Miranda's words from The Tempest:

In Shakespeare's Tempest, Miranda, speaking of the wrecked ship and its passengers, sadly says, "O, I have suffered with those that I saw suffer" (act 1, scene 2). I hope each of us will suffer a little as we look about and see how many others are suffering.²⁰⁰⁴

Later, President Hinckley reiterated his love for Shakespeare at an occasion honoring the establishment of the Gordon B. Hinckley Endowment for British Studies by the College of Humanities of the University of Utah.²⁰⁰⁵

As an aside, most modern readers will find it surprising "that the great majority of Shakespeare's quotations, allusions, and references derive from the standard books and curriculum of an Elizabethan grammar school."²⁰⁰⁶

- E-166 "The Bible opens with the image of a stormy sea: 'In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the deep, and the Spirit of God moved upon the waters.'²⁰⁰⁷ Upon this buzzing, blooming confusion, onomatopoeically called tohu wa bohu in the original Hebrew, the speech of the Creator first imposes meaning on the polarities of light and dark, day and night, sea and land. Shakespeare's first words in the First Folio are: 'A tempestuous noise of thunder and lightning heard.' The universe of his plays comes into being as confused and desperate shouts hardly separable from the deafening roar of wind and sea out of which they arise. In the next scene a magical creator appears to give them meaning. The parallel may be accidental, since there is no evidence that Shakespeare himself planned the Folio, but it points to some essential similarities between the book of Genesis and The Tempest."²⁰⁰⁸
- E-167 "Lynette Black's essay calls our attention to the number symbolism in Prospero's several references to completing his work by six o'clock. God in Genesis completed his work of creating on the sixth day, and in the sixth age of history (according to Augustine) He became Man to reform us."²⁰⁰⁹
- E-168 As Adam was awakened to find Eve standing before him—having been created, like him, "in the image of God,"²⁰¹⁰ so Miranda is aroused from sleep to discover the "divine" form of Ferdinand²⁰¹¹—having recently averred that the subhuman Caliban was not in the least suited as a companion for her.²⁰¹²

E-169 Parallels to later chapters of Genesis are also apparent. Comments Fisch:

- 2001 W. Shakespeare, Measure, 2:2:73-79, p. 560.
 2002 D. Daniell, Mind, p. 2.
 2003 J. S. Tanner, Shakespeare.
 2004 G. B. Hinckley, Utah Commencement, p. 543.
 2005 G. B. Hinckley, British Studies, p. 433.
 2006 R. S. Miola, Shakespeare's Reading, pp. 3-4.
 2007 Genesis 1:1-3.
 2008 S. Marx, Shakespeare, p. 19.
 2009 R. Battenhouse, Dimension, p. 253.
 2010 Moses 3:21-24; 2:26-27.
 2011 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:410-420, p. 1617.
 2012 Ibid., 1:2:304-310, p. 1616; cf. Moses 3:20.

There are... echoes of the romantic matchmaking between Isaac and Rebekah,²⁰¹³ and between Jacob and Rachel,²⁰¹⁴ and there are strong echoes too of the story of Joseph and his brothers,²⁰¹⁵ and of Jacob's mourning for his son Joseph.²⁰¹⁶

- E-170 "Caliban will relapse at the first opportunity. Coincident with the Renaissance there will be a pagan reversion... No more will he serve his old master; he will turn back to the wildwood, to the dark primeval forest from which Prospero had painfully led him out into the light."²⁰¹⁷

In some interpretations of the play, Caliban is taken variously as an oppressed innocent or as some sort of hero. Bloom, having reviewed a range of such views, concludes that although "Caliban has his legitimate pathos, ...he cannot be interpreted as being somehow admirable."²⁰¹⁸

- E-171 In contrast with the biblical account of the Flood, Shakespeare's drama allows even the wicked to escape harm. It was Prospero's intent both to save their lives and to spiritually redeem them by bringing them to a state of sincere penitence.²⁰¹⁹

- E-172 "Prospero has more godlike attributes than any other Shakespearian character, reflecting that play's uniquely rich connection with the Bible. He is creator and destroyer, like the maker of Eden and the Flood; he is founder of a chosen line, like the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; he is the deviser of plagues and torments like the God of Exodus and Revelation, and like him the judge at the tribunal where all are brought for sentence."²⁰²⁰ The Prophet Joseph Smith's description of the conjunction of justice and mercy in the character of God reflects in a perfect degree the qualities that some find paradoxical in the flawed character of the ultimately well-intentioned but all-too-human Prospero:

Our heavenly Father is more liberal in his views, and boundless in His mercies and blessings, than we are ready to believe or receive; and, at the same time, is more terrible to the workers of iniquity, more awful in the executions of His punishments, and more ready to detect every false way than we are apt to suppose Him to be.²⁰²¹

- E-173 Prospero, like Joseph, is presented as one who has learned the magical arts ("wot ye not that such a man as I can certainly divine?"²⁰²²). Indeed, "The Tempest itself can be compared to one form of magic, the alchemical process. The title is the alchemical term for the boiling of the alembic to remove impurities and transform the base metal into purest gold...; if we see Prospero's goal as the transformation of fallen human nature—Caliban, Antonio, Sebastian, and Alonso—from a condition of sinfulness to a higher level of morality, the play's episodes mirror the alchemical process. Note particularly Prospero's alchemical language at the beginning of Act 5 ('My charms crack not'²⁰²³) to describe his project; by 'boiling' his enemies' brains,²⁰²⁴ he attempts to transform their characters."²⁰²⁵

Vaughan and Vaughan note that "Prospero's strange powers have provoked emphatic critical opinions about their nature—benign or evil, or a precarious balance of both."²⁰²⁶ They also correctly observe that "[o]ne's reaction to Prospero almost inevitably determines one's response to the entire play. In the eighteenth century, when the magus was perceived as an enlightened and benign philosophe, the play seemed a magical comedy; by the late twentieth century, when Prospero had come to be viewed as a tetchy, if not tyrannical, imperialist, the play itself seemed more problematic."²⁰²⁷ Any evaluation

2013 Cf. W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:428, 448, p. 1617 and Genesis 24:16. See also Genesis 24:27.

2014 Cf. W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 3:1:64-67, p. 1625 and Genesis 29:20. See also W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 3:1:75-76, p. 1625.

2015 Cf. W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:450-453, p. 1617 and Genesis 42:9; W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 3:3:18-82, pp. 1627-1628 and Genesis 43:25, 43-45, 44:4, 15; W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 3:3:96-102, p. 1628 and Genesis 42:21; W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:106-111, p. 1633 and Genesis 45:1-4, 12, 15.

2016 H. Fisch, Covenant Pattern, p. 217; cf. W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 3:3:101-102, p. 1628 and Genesis 37:35.

2017 H. Fisch, Covenant Pattern, p. 215.

2018 H. Bloom, Shakespeare, p. 665.

2019 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:28, p. 1632—" [t]he like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us" (1 Peter 3:21).

2020 S. Marx, Shakespeare, p. 10.

2021 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 27 August 1842, p. 257.

2022 Genesis 44:15. See also Genesis 44:5.

2023 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:2, p. 1632.

2024 Ibid., 5:1:60, p. 1632.

2025 V. M. Vaughan et al., Introduction, pp. 63-64.

2026 Ibid., p. 62.

2027 Ibid., p. 24.

of Prospero's art, of course, should take into account the fact that "[b]efore 1650... most magic... blended imperceptibly with orthodox Christian faith in the minds of common people."²⁰²⁸

Whatever else one might say about it, Prospero's quest for power and wisdom seems to have distracted him from his ducal duties in Milan and enabled him to vent his vengeful tendencies. We have nothing but his own words as grounds for an ethical distinction between his powers and those of the witch Sycorax. Indeed, "Sycorax's exile seems deliberately written in to the play to reflect upon Prospero's banishment. Her history contaminates Prospero's, to the extent that we might ask... whether Prospero was himself banished for practicing witchcraft."²⁰²⁹ Write Vaughan and Vaughan:

Prospero believes that just as his art is more potent than Sycorax's witchcraft, it is also morally superior. The distinction between the two types of magic is erased, however, in Prospero's speech of renunciation. As Jonathan Bate has argued, having his protagonist openly speak words that some in his audience would recognize from Medea's speech in Ovid's *Metamorphoses*²⁰³⁰ was Shakespeare's signal that the magician's power is not really benign and must be rejected... if he is to return to Milan and resume his ducal powers...²⁰³¹

Regarding the difference between magic and religion in the interpretation of images and other religious symbols, Kaplan writes:

The function of an image is magical rather than religious whenever it is responded to as itself a locus of Power, and not a symbol of a power which in fact may be elsewhere or omnipresent. For their proliferation of images, neither Hindus nor Roman Catholics worship idols; but in all faiths, religious symbols are often vulgarized to magical uses. The Devil not only quotes Scripture; he can also wear a prayer shawl and phylacteries.²⁰³²

E-174 Marx explains:

A creation myth represents genesis at several levels. The myth must both contain and be contained by the originating events it records. The creator it describes is prior to the creation, but also part of it, insofar as he is created by the text that describes him. The creator god, therefore, must be both the story's protagonist and its author. In its later passages and commentaries the Bible draws attention to this dimension of its opening. "In the beginning was the Word,"²⁰³³ writes John the Evangelist. The first midrashic comment on the first word of Genesis states that God created Wisdom, meaning the Scripture itself, before he made the world. Psalm 139 implies that his book is a script that exists before it is performed: "Thine eyes did see me, when I was without form: for in thy book were all things written, which in continuance were fashioned, when there was none of them before."²⁰³⁴

Likewise, there are suggestions that the character Prospero can be construed as the author of the script of The Tempest in which he is the subject. It is hinted by his proprietary anxiety about each scene, by his explicit role as author of plays within the play, by his farewell to his book in the last act, and by his direct address to reader and audience in the epilogue... That this character should be construed both as God and as author seems appropriate to a playwright's playful reflection upon biblical Creation.²⁰³⁵

E-175 King provides the following evaluation:

Shakespeare's The Tempest, which is his last [solo] play, summarized, to me as an old man, what he has done throughout his whole life and what he is there saying farewell to, for his magic in putting things on stage was like Prospero's, and Shakespeare was not certain of the validity from a religious point of view of everything he had done. He, too, like Prospero, had sins of which to repent. Prospero studied too much magic; Shakespeare perhaps exercised too much magic. But it was not his wand that he was waving when he was writing the passages that I am going to quote; he was writing those under the inspiration of the Gospel.

2028 R. L. Bushman, Beginnings, p. 71. See also R. L. Bushman, Family Background, p. 13; R. L. Bushman, Rough Stone, p. 50; cf. J. M. G. Barclay, Diaspora, pp. 120-121.

2029 J. Kingsley-Smith, Exile, p. 228.

2030 Cited in W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 7:179-219, pp. 239-241.

2031 V. M. Vaughan et al., Introduction, p. 66.

2032 A. Kaplan, Ritual, p. 41.

2033 John 1:1.

2034 . Psalm 139:16; cf. Jeremiah 1:5.

2035 S. Marx, Shakespeare, pp. 23.

Prospero repents. He repents at the prompting of Ariel, who is not even a human being.

Ariel. Your charm so strongly works 'em
That if you now beheld them, your affections
Would become tender.

Prospero. Dost thou think so, spirit?

Ariel. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Prospero. And mine shall.
Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling
Of their affections, and shall not myself,
One of their kind, that relish all as sharply
Passion as they, be kindlier mov'd than thou art?
Though with their high wrongs I am strook to th' quick,
Yet, with my nobler reason, 'gainst my fury
Do I take part. The rarer action is In virtue than in vengeance. They being penitent,
The sole drift of my purpose doth extend
Not a frown further. Go, release them, Ariel,
My charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore,
And they shall be themselves.²⁰³⁶

But the moral channel in The Tempest is not Prospero; Prospero is a sinner who has to repent. So is everybody else in The Tempest. So are we all. But old Gonzalo is the man who rescued Prospero and Miranda from death and who sums up the play in terms of Providence, saying as it were, "Yes, Prospero. You were a magician to a point. You couldn't bring the ship near the island, but you could cause a storm. You could cause Ferdinand and Miranda to meet, but you could not make sure that they would develop between them the affection that was needed. This was Providence"... Here, then, is old Gonzalo:

Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue
Should become kings of Naples? O, rejoice
Beyond a common joy, and set it down
With gold on lasting pillars: in one voyage
Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis,
And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife
Where he himself was lost; Prospero, his dukedom
In a poor isle; and all of us, ourselves,²⁰³⁷
When no man was his own.

"And all of us ourselves, / When no man was his own." Those words summarize... the essential point about the Gospel, about the Atonement, about the kind of language we ought to use, about the kind of attitude we ought to take to ourselves, because we find ourselves when we are not our own. There is more than one sense of that in the play. The obvious sense is that they were restored to their senses after having been put out of them for a while by Prospero's charm. But the deeper sense is that they had lost themselves to find themselves, and that is what the whole of the play is about.²⁰³⁸

Observes Slover:

Gonzalo catches sight of the true shape of a story—a story which is also, in part, his history, in which he himself has played and is playing a part. He perceives the meaning of his existence transformed by having been caught up all along in a design which mere human wisdom could never conceive—a design capable of drawing community from division, riches from poverty, clarity from confusion.²⁰³⁹

E-176 Marx comments:

2036 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:17-32, p. 1632.

2037 Ibid., 5:1:205-213, p. 1634.

2038 A. H. King, Style, pp. 223-225; cf. A. H. King, Language, pp. 478-479.

2039 G. Slover, Analogical Reading, p. 262.

The final reconciliation in The Tempest is... qualified. Apart from all the celebration stand Antonio and Sebastian. These unregenerate schemers never apologize, and retain their witty cynicism to the last. In his final judgment scene, Prospero distinguishes “Holy Gonzalo / honourable man... a loyal sir”²⁰⁴⁰ from the forgetful and frail Alonso, who is capable of contrition,²⁰⁴¹ and from Antonio, “most wicked sir, whom to call brother / Would even infect my mouth...”²⁰⁴² Though he forgives them all, he recognizes that there are people in whom self-interest, cruelty, and power-hunger remain ineradicable. His forgiveness of Antonio involves no expectation of Redemption or improvement. He, and others like him, must be continuously watched and controlled with tactics that appeal to their limited motives.²⁰⁴³

Orgel infers that “Prospero’s art is Baconian science and Neoplatonic philosophy, the empirical study of nature leading to the understanding and control of all its forces.”²⁰⁴⁴ However, the events of the play demonstrate that such art, whether it be magic or science, works only to a point, since “the great scheme is not to produce illusions and good weather, it is to bring about repentance and reconciliation”²⁰⁴⁵—objects that can only be brought about through the free exercise of moral agency. Like the acts of God himself, Prospero’s “transformations of will are never impositions; they presuppose a yearning for freedom in the will enslaved. As it is possible for Antonio and Sebastian to remain unresponsive to the ‘solemn music’ which gives the rest of the royal party comforting sleep; as it is possible for members of Shakespeare’s audience to withhold the childlike make-belief upon which the play’s power depends; so it is possible, apparently, to resist even the master magician.”²⁰⁴⁶

Prospero’s final abandonment of his art can be seen a concession to the masterful hand of Deity—though he has clumsily hewn with his “rough magic,”²⁰⁴⁷ the ultimate shaping of events is God’s alone.²⁰⁴⁸ Prospero may with no qualms drown his book,²⁰⁴⁹ because the book of Providence subsumes and mercifully overrules it.²⁰⁵⁰ He may now unreservedly break his staff,²⁰⁵¹ because he knows that God reigns with infinite wisdom in the heavens.

- E-177 Elder Marion D. Hanks is the source of the felicitous expression: “To believe in God is to know that all the rules will be fair, and that there will be wonderful surprises.”²⁰⁵² Note that “Miranda is... aptly named with the feminine form of the gerundive of the Latin verb mirror, ‘wonder,’”²⁰⁵³ and “Shakespeare puns throughout The Tempest on the name”.²⁰⁵⁴

But there is a less generally acknowledged, though commonplace, association between faith, love and the marvelous, for the redeeming, miraculous love of caritas is often conceived of as especially “wonderful,” and consequently (via the Latin pun) “admired.” St. Paul, for instance, writing to the Thessalonians, commends the faith and “charity of every one of you all towards each other,”²⁰⁵⁵ promising that Christ will “be admired in all them that believe.”²⁰⁵⁶ The Douai version renders this “made wonderful,” and the Vulgate has admirabilis. This grouping of words is conventional: in his universally read Of the Imitation of Christ, Thomas à Kempis has, for example, a chapter specifically “on the wonderful effect of divine love,”²⁰⁵⁷ and he engages in several deliberate plays on the relationship between caritas and mirabilis. “Behold love’s revelation!... O how admirable (admirabilis) is Thy work... for the charity (caritas) of Christ is never diminished.”²⁰⁵⁸ He commends the “admirable” grace of the sacrament which “enkindles... love (affectum)” earlier

2040 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:62, 69, p. 1632.

2041 See R. G. Hunter, Regeneration.

2042 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:130-131, p. 1633.

2043 S. Marx, Shakespeare, p. 38.

2044 S. Orgel, Introduction, p. 20.

2045 Ibid., p. 51.

2046 G. Slover, Analogical Reading, p. 261.

2047 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:50, p. 1632.

2048 See W. Shakespeare, Hamlet, 5:2:10-11, p. 1181; cf. 3:2:211-213, p. 1164.

2049 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:57, p. 1632.

2050 Isaiah 46:10; Psalm 139:16.

2051 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 5:1:54, p. 1632.

2052 M. D. Hanks, Loving, p. 65.

2053 V. M. Vaughan et al., Introduction, pp. 26-27.

2054 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:427-429, p. 1617; 3:1:37-38, p. 1624; 5:1:170, p. 1634; 5:1:181-183, p. 1634.

2055 2 Thessalonians 1:3.

2056 2 Thessalonians 1:10.

2057 See T. à Kempis, Imitation, 3:5, pp. 60-61.

2058 See ibid., 4:2, pp. 135-136.

described as “charity (caritas).”²⁰⁵⁹ In a similar vein we may recall John Donne’s discussion of charity in Holy Sonnet XI: “O let me then his strange love still admire”²⁰⁶⁰ or again Holy Sonnet XII, where he exhorts himself (and his readers) to “wonder at a greater wonder,”²⁰⁶¹ namely God’s redemptive love. Although the association I am suggesting extends to The Tempest by inference, it does nonetheless offer grounds for a coherency in the “Miranda-Wonder” wordplay by permitting us to see Shakespeare’s pun in context of a fuller meaning consistent with the play’s total action.²⁰⁶²

- E-178 The role of “Providence” is emphasized in the play—a word used only four times in all of Shakespeare, but twice in The Tempest.²⁰⁶³ King notes that “Providence” was “[n]ot a safe word to use on the stage in those days, with ears listening to make trouble at court or in the city.”²⁰⁶⁴

Superbly characterizing Shakespeare’s idea of Providence, Driver writes:²⁰⁶⁵

[In Shakespeare] the past does not, as in the Greek plays, dominate the present and bind it in the grip of necessity. The difference lies in the understanding of the future. In Shakespeare the future is open. It contains the possibility of the new, both as a result of action which man may take and as result of growth and the providential shaping of events which lie outside man’s control. The future is open in Shakespeare in the same way that it is in the Bible—not totally uncharted and free for any type of action whatsoever, but full of beneficent promise and tending toward a final culmination which robs the past of its terror and gives significance to the choices of the present. Shakespeare’s belief in history is not that of some present-day existentialists, to whom the moment of present choice is everything and an order in history nothing except anathema (and who therefore have no notion of history at all); rather he believes in an ordering purpose above the temporal process, indistinguishable in form from the Christian idea of Providence, which imposes the burden of choice upon man without abandoning history to chaos....

In Israel there developed a belief, in spite of one national calamity after another, that in history itself there was revealed a divine purpose which would in time be brought to fulfillment. When, in that tradition, the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ was declared to be the very center of history, the story of mankind was turned into an historical drama. This is the tradition which bequeaths to Shakespeare his basic understanding of man. He seldom expresses it in overt religious language. His plays are not to be read as models of Christian doctrine. Yet it is true that the form of his plays is consistent with the biblical interpretation of man and the universe. Shakespearean man is embedded in the ambiguities and moral demands of history, while the Shakespearean dramatic action seeks its resolution in the fulfilling events of time.

- E-179 Regarding the idea of a savior in Islamic thought, Ayoub writes further:²⁰⁶⁶

... Islam has no concept of sin and redemption analogous to the fundamental Christian view of fallen humanity and its need of Redemption. Yet Christ, as were all the messengers of God before and after him, was a savior in that he, by his message, helped to save humanity from error and to guide its steps further on the path to God, to whom we all belong and to whom we all shall return.²⁰⁶⁷

Moreover, Shi’i Islam... has developed its own quasi-soteriological christology in the doctrine and role of the imams, the spiritual heads of the community... The imams, for the Shi’i community, are the true mediators between God and man. They were with God from the beginning as His first act of Creation. With them, the primordial history of all Creation began, and through them it will be finally judged and consummated... The twelfth and last of the imams will return at the end of time as the awaited messiah (Mahdi) to establish divine rule over the earth. Jesus, son of Mary, will also descend from heaven to aid him in this task, thus playing some part in the imam’s final act of redemption and judgment.

- E-180 Although the rubric to illustration 23 supplied by Halford indicates that “Seth... receives... a branch 2059 See ibid., 4:1, p. 133.

2060 J. Donne, Holy Sonnets, 7:9, p. 176.

2061 Ibid., 8:11, p. 177.

2062 P. Grant, Charity, p. 268.

2063 W. Shakespeare, Tempest, 1:2:159, p. 1614; 5:1:189, p. 1634.

2064 A. H. King, Style, p. 224.

2065 T. F. Driver, History, pp. 37, 40.

2066 M. M. Ayoub, Christology 1, p. 137.

2067 Qur’an 2:156.

of the tree of knowledge instead of the oil of mercy,”²⁰⁶⁸ the fact that the branch in question is an olive branch that will eventually bear oil-rich fruit clearly implies that it was meant to represent a kind of Tree of Life. Likewise, in Islamic tradition, al-Kisa’i recounts that “[w]hen Seth had grown and come of age, God sent him a twig of the heavenly lote-tree (which is made of pearl), which had a fragrance like musk.”²⁰⁶⁹ “This tree, said to stand in the seventh heaven on the right hand of the Throne of God, is called al-muntaha, ‘of the limit,’ because it is the boundary beyond which even the angels do not pass. ‘Pearl’ (jawhar) can also be rendered ‘substance, essence (ousia).’”²⁰⁷⁰ One Muslim source recounts that Adam desired “the fruit of Paradise,” but that his sons returned empty-handed.²⁰⁷¹

In other elaborations on these ideas, a branch from the Tree of Knowledge—or more rarely, as in Lutwin,²⁰⁷² the Tree of Life—was said to have been planted on the grave site of Adam. Over one traditional site of “Adam’s Grave,” at the Tomb of the Patriarchs in Hebron, grows a date palm.²⁰⁷³ In some Eastern Christian sources, three trees (pine, cedar and cypress) are said to have grown at this spot, and Abraham’s nephew, Lot, is sometimes shown as tending them.²⁰⁷⁴ Eventually, according to legend, the wood of the saving cross of Christ was to be hewn from this selfsame Tree of Knowledge.²⁰⁷⁵ Note that restoring such a branch to its mother tree is the theme of Zenos in the Book of Mormon.²⁰⁷⁶

Jewish, Christian, and Muslim texts assert that Adam possessed a staff²⁰⁷⁷ made from the Tree of Knowledge that was passed down through the patriarchs, and eventually came to Moses. The staff was said to be the instrument by which Abraham smashed the idols in his father’s house, and later to have become the rod that Moses and Aaron used before Pharaoh.²⁰⁷⁸ Though missing from the second temple,²⁰⁷⁹ the staff was expected to reappear at a crucial moment in the last days: “Post-talmudic midrashim envision the royal Messiah engaged in a triumphal march to Jerusalem, endowed with the staff of Moses,²⁰⁸⁰ and the Qur’an affirms that divine approval of royal leadership will be expressed in the miraculous manifestation of the ‘ark (of the covenant)... and the relics (baqiyya) of Moses and the family of Aaron,”²⁰⁸¹ among which is numbered the marvelous staff.”²⁰⁸² The “Masoretic text of Isaiah 11:4b also mentions a ‘staff’... which the anticipated scion of ‘the stem of Jesse’²⁰⁸³ will use to smite the earth and to slay the wicked. The textual evocation in these particular passages of imagery conjoining messianic deliverance with a ‘staff’ readily encourages the ancillary idea that the future agent of deliverance, mirroring his ancient Mosaic prototype, will come equipped with a wonder-working ‘staff,’ perhaps even the very effective one previously wielded by Moses.”²⁰⁸⁴ In the meantime, the staff’s concealment and later revelation is associated with Elijah.²⁰⁸⁵

E-181 Some Gnostic sources see the cross as a Tree of Life rather than a Tree of Knowledge. Ryen writes: “The tree motif is found about 80 times in the Nag Hammadi codices, and quite many of these examples talk about the cross as a ‘tree.’ But only Sylvanus²⁰⁸⁶ says the cross is a Tree of Life. The Tree of Life is here connected to Christ who again is identified with wisdom.”²⁰⁸⁷ Ryen sees another possible

2068 M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam, p. 281.

2069 M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, p. 78; cf. pp. 82-83.

2070 Ibid., p. 347 n. 63.

2071 Ibn Damrah al-Sa-di in B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, p. 33.

2072 M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam, pp. 281-282.

2073 N. Arnon, Machpela, p. 13. See Figure 4-12, p. 230.

2074 Abraham’s oak of Mamre was also identified with the Tree of Life. See Endnote 5-41, p. 440.

2075 See Excursus 36: The Legend of the True Cross, p. 614.

2076 Jacob 5. See B. Gardner, Second Witness, 2:520-553.

2077 See Excursus 51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple, p. 658. See Endnote E-253, p. 770.

2078 See M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, p. 222; cf. pp. 78, 82-83, 347 n. 63. See also al-Tabari, Creation, 460-461, 464-465, 3:45, 50; A. al-Tha’labi, Lives, p. 294; S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, pp. 217-218 n. 30; M.-A. Ouaknin et al., Rabbi Éliézer, 40, p. 251; J. C. Reeves, Trajectories, pp. 187-199; Shelemon, Book of the Bee, 17, p. 24; Exodus 7:9-12. Compare the priestly staff of the Mandaeans (J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine, pp. 251-252).

2079 See Excursus 51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple, p. 658.

2080 H. Freedman et al., Midrash, Numbers 18:23, 6:744.

2081 Qur’an 2:247-248.

2082 J. C. Reeves, Trajectories, p. 187; cf. pp. 198-199. See also al-Tabari’s Commentary; Numbers 17:8, 24:17; Psalm 110:2.

2083 Isaiah 11:1.

2084 J. C. Reeves, Trajectories, pp. 198-199. See also Genesis 49:10.

2085 J. C. Reeves, Trajectories, pp. 197-198.

2086 M. L. Peel et al., Sylvanus, 106:21-23, p. 390.

2087 J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine, pp. 216-217; cf. Proverbs 3:18, 1 Corinthians 1:30.

example in the Gospel of Philip.²⁰⁸⁸

- E-182 For an unknown reason, the following passage giving a description of the central place of Atonement in the Old Testament temple was omitted from the French version of the LDS Old Testament Institute Manual:

The lid, or covering, for the ark is described in Exodus 25:17-22. The King James Version translates the Hebrew word kapporeth (which means ‘seat of atonement’) as ‘mercy seat.’ The covering was made of solid gold and on it were formed two cherubim with wings which came up and overshadowed the lid or mercy seat.²⁰⁸⁹

There are, however, corresponding paragraphs in the LDS English Bible Dictionary and its equivalent in French, the Guide des Écritures, concerning the mercy seat/propitiatoire in the article on the Ark of the Covenant/Arche de l’Alliance.

- E-183 Ibn Abbas traces the tradition of the ram back to Adam and Eve: “When God saw the nakedness of Adam and Eve, he commanded Adam to slaughter a ram... Adam took the ram and slaughtered it, then he took its wool and Eve spun it. He and Eve wove it. Adam made a cloak for himself and a shift and veil for Eve. They put on that clothing” in preparation for their departure to Mecca, where they were to build a House for Allāh.²⁰⁹⁰ Abel was also said to have sacrificed a ram which, according to Abdallāh bin Uthman bin Khuthaym, “remained penned with God until he released it as a ransom for Isaac.”²⁰⁹¹

- E-184 Truman G. Madsen writes:²⁰⁹²

I tend to the view of Parley P. Pratt—that if you will go far enough back in your memory, and this is difficult because you have closed it off, you will find that on the earliest approaches you made, age four or five (you are supposed to be completely innocent in those years, but I have some memories that are not particularly innocent...), if you go back, according to Parley P. Pratt,²⁰⁹³ you will find that your first approaches to temptation and sin were attended by a fantastic burning. “No,” was the sensation, “no.” And if you persisted, that became a fever. Then when you went ahead and did it (and you did), there was an after-burning of guilt. Had you hearkened to that, according to Parley P. Pratt, and honored it, you would have increased in light to the present day.

The Prophet Joseph Smith is said to have taught that: “If you will listen to the first promptings you will get it right nine times out of ten.”²⁰⁹⁴

- E-185 Note that in describing such a covenant the premortality of all mankind is implicitly assumed—though it is officially denied. The subtlety of this point is artfully expressed in Gianotti’s description of the story’s setting: “Prior to our very existence, save in the Divine mind, God is said to have summoned us all out of non-existence to stand before Him for a ‘moment’ that would mark us for all eternity.”²⁰⁹⁵ In this fashion, Gianotti affirms, “the knowledge of God is believed to have been woven into the very fabric of human nature.”²⁰⁹⁶

Because Adam and his progeny forgot their covenant, “God sent down the contract and called on the angels as witnesses.” For this reason, “God commanded that from that day on contracts be written and witnesses be called.”²⁰⁹⁷

- E-186 Islamic scholar Mahmoud Ayoub states similar views as follows:²⁰⁹⁸

...[In] accordance with the principle of the Oneness of God the Qur’an calls on all the people of the Book, Jews, Christians, and Muslims, to come together to a unity of faith in and worship of God

2088 W. W. Isenberg, Philip, 73:15-19, p. 153. See also Excursus 36: The Legend of the True Cross, p. 614.

2089 Old Testament Student Manual, 1:148 (13-5); cf. Église de Jésus Christ des Saints des Derniers Jours, Ancien 1, 1:148 (13-5).

2090 B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, p. 31; cf. A. al-Tha’labi, Lives, pp. 62-63.

2091 B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, p. 39.

2092 T. G. Madsen, Questions, p. 156.

2093 I have been unable to find the source for Madsen’s citation of Pratt.

2094 J. Smith, Jr., n. d., cited in T. G. Madsen, Joseph Smith, p. 103. Madsen cites C. L. Walker, Diary, p. 902 as his reference, but I am unable to find the quotation, or a similar statement, in that source.

2095 T. J. Gianotti, Islamic View, p. 89.

2096 T. J. Gianotti, Islamic View, pp. 88-89.

2097 A. al-Tha’labi, Lives, p. 81.

2098 M. M. Ayoub, Introduction, p. 3.

alone. It calls on them to repudiate all forms of idolatry, and particularly the idolatry of elevating other human beings to a level of equality with God.²⁰⁹⁹ Within this unity of faith and worship, the Qur'an calls for a community of Scriptures, revealed by God, the Lord of all the people of faith in Him. Thus, in quest of this interreligious unity of faith, the Qur'an commands the Muslims to engage the people of the Book in the “fairest dialogue,” and to say to them, “we accept faith in that which was sent down to us and that which was sent down to you. Our God and your God is One, and to him we are Submitters.”²¹⁰⁰

To this end, the Qur'an categorically condemns the arrogant boasting by any of the followers of all three monotheistic religions of the superiority of their faith over that of either of the other two communities.²¹⁰¹ ...[The] criterion for acceptance with God is neither religious identity nor class nor gender but faith and good deeds.

... [The] Qur'an came not to establish an Islamic empire but a community of faiths that would include Muslims, Jews, Christians, Sabaeans, and any other faith community that claims to live by the four principles [of religion enshrined in a divinely revealed scripture, God's absolute Oneness, a dynamic faith in God and the last day, and righteous living]. In other words, I am convinced that neither the Qur'an nor Muhammad demanded that Jews and Christians abandon their faiths for Islam in return for living in peace and harmony with Muslims.

- E-187 Al-Kisa'i has God describing the final judgment in terms that recall LDS teachings about the separation of righteous and wicked spirits until the time of their resurrection and final reward.²¹⁰²

As for Adam's progeny, they too shall taste death in accordance with their deeds, which will determine their reward or punishment. The souls of the faithful will be in Illiyin and the souls of the infidels in Sijjin until Doomsday [= the day of final Judgment], when all souls shall be sent back to their bodies to be resurrected and gaze upon me, all of them crowded together. Then they shall be dispersed to be rewarded or punished, every good deed tenfold and every evil deed singly.²¹⁰³

In this context, Illiyin (from Uluw = highness) and Sijjin signify respectively places of reward or punishment for the spirits awaiting reunification with their bodies, i.e., “the seventh heaven” (“paradise”) or its opposite “the seventh earth” (“an eternal prison”).²¹⁰⁴

- E-188 Jewish tradition also recounts an incident where Adam was shown all of his descendants, though no covenant is mentioned.²¹⁰⁵ However, the Dead Sea Scrolls Rule of the Community (1QS) 4:22-26 seems to convey a similar idea about mankind's premortal understanding of the Two Ways:²¹⁰⁶

For God has chosen [the upright] for an everlasting Covenant and all the glory of Adam shall be theirs... Until now the spirits of truth and injustice struggle in the hearts of men and they walk in both wisdom and folly. According to his portion of truth so does a man hate injustice, and according to his inheritance in the realm of injustice so is he wicked and so hates truth. For God has established the two spirits in equal measure until the determined end, and until the Renewal, and He knows the reward of their deeds from all eternity. He has allotted them to the children of men that they may know good [and evil, and] that the destiny of all the living may be according to the spirit within [them at the time] of the visitation.

Though Islamic and Dead Sea Scrolls exegetes often see these parallel accounts as implying predestination,²¹⁰⁷ LDS thought favors interpreting premortal covenants and assignments as being made in accordance with previously-evidenced but still-malleable individual predispositions, coupled with divine foreordination.

- E-189 Joseph Smith similarly referred to D&C 76 as a “transcript from the records of the eternal world.”²¹⁰⁸

2099 Qur'an 3:64.

2100 Qur'an 29:46.

2101 Qur'an 4:123-124.

2102 E.g., Alma 40:11-14.

2103 M. al-Kisa'i, Tales, p. 81.

2104 I. Ibn Kathir, Tafsir, 83, 30:70-77.

2105 See Commentary 1:8-b, p. 50; E. D. Clark, Prologue, p. 138; D. C. Matt, Zohar I, Be-Reshit 1:55b, pp. 310-311; Talmud, Avodah Zarah 5a, cited in R. M. Zlotowitz et al., Bereishis, p. 166.

2106 G. Vermes, Complete, p. 103; cf. F. G. Martinez, DSS Translated, pp. 7-8; M. Wise et al., DSS, p. 122.

2107 See, e.g., A. T. Wright, Evil Spirits, pp. 169-174.

2108 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, February 1832, p. 11; cf. Ezekiel 3:1-3; Revelation 10:9-10; D&C 7 (heading).

E-190 For an overview of the history of relations between Islam and other religions, see Martin.²¹⁰⁹

E-191 See Reeves for a discussion of how the “notion of Bible as ‘sacred scripture,’ as ‘written Torah,’ plays a crucial ideological role in the gradual shift in focus within early Judaism from a religion based on the sacrificial service of the Deity in the Temple to a religion which centers itself in the study and interpretation of a sacred scripture.”²¹¹⁰ Comments Bloom: “Unable any longer to walk in Eden or feast in his Temple, Yahweh resides in the Jewish Bible.”²¹¹¹

E-192 A haggadic passage cited by Rosenbaum “shows that [although] logical deduction had totally superseded any post-biblical prophecy which might be considered to be the direct word of God,” post-biblical Jewish law is holy and binding. “At the beginning of the second century C.E., Rabbi Eliezer ben Hyrcanus, the brother-in-law of the Patriarch Gamaliel II, was involved in an argument of law with his colleagues:

On that day, though Rabbi Eliezer brought forward every imaginable argument, they did not accept any of them. So he said to them, ‘If the halakah agrees with me, the [stream of] water will prove [it].’ [Immediately,] the stream of water turned around and flowed backwards.

They responded, ‘One cannot bring proof from a stream of water.’

Again, he said to them, ‘If the halakah agrees with me, the walls of the academy will prove [it].’

The walls of the academy tilted [and were about] to fall [when] Rabbi Joshua scolded them saying to them, ‘When scholars best one another in halakic debate [literally, ‘in halakah], how is it your right [to interfere]?’ [The walls thus] did not fall out of respect for Rabbi Joshua, but they also did not stand upright out of respect for Rabbi Eliezer. Indeed, they are still standing on an incline.

Again, he [i.e., Rabbi Eliezer] said to them, ‘If the halakah agrees with me, from heaven will come the proof.’

[Immediately,] the still, small, heavenly voice went out and said, ‘How can you have [a problem] with Rabbi Eliezer when the halakah in fact agrees with him in every case?’

Rabbi Joshua then rose to his feet and cried, “It is not in heaven.”²¹¹² What did he mean by this biblical quotation? Rabbi Joshua responded, ‘Since the Torah was already given at Mount Sinai, we may no longer rely on a heavenly voice, for you [i.e., God] have already written in the Torah at Mount Sinai.’ [Thus the rule is:] ‘According to the majority one must incline.’

Sometime later, Rabbi Nathan met Elijah [the Prophet]. He said to him, ‘What did the Holy One, Blessed be He, do at that hour’ [i.e., the hour of the dispute described above]?

[Elijah] responded to him, ‘He smiled and said, ‘My children have bested me, my children have bested me.’²¹¹³

While this aggadah is often quoted, the material, which follows it is not: Rabbi Eliezer was excommunicated for attempting to use prophetic means to prove his argument and thereby deny the authority of the majority.

In a modern epilogue the Hazon Ish [Abraham Y. Karelitz, 1878-1953], a leading halakic authority of the [twentieth] century, ruled that even if the actual Torah which Moses received were discovered and found to be different from the Masoretic Text, it would be halakically irrelevant and the developed law would require no emendation. Thus, we have definite support—ancient and modern—for the holiness of post-biblical Jewish law.²¹¹⁴

E-193 Significantly, in both Mandaean and Manichaean writings, the term “Tree of Life” was applied, not to characterize scripture, but rather to represent “exemplary bearers of revelation in salvation history (for example, Jesus or Mani... [or specially chosen individuals who receive their commissions as ‘apostles of light’]). One detects a subtle shift here from the Jewish conceptions of the ‘plant’ or ‘tree’ being nourished by revelation (Torah) to the ‘plant’ as an actual bearer of revelation, a ‘shoot’ or ‘fruit,’ 2109 R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:360-364.

2110 J. C. Reeves, Flowing Stream.

2111 H. Bloom, American Religion, p. 123.

2112 Deuteronomy 30:12.

2113 B. Mes 59b, cited in J. Rosenbaum, Judaism, pp. 18-19.

2114 J. Rosenbaum, Judaism, pp. 18-19.

so to speak, of the original heavenly Tree of Life transplanted among humanity to propagate more of its own kind.”²¹¹⁵

By way of contrast, a Sufi scholar writes that “Islam is based, like Judaism [and unlike Christianity], on a revealed message rather than on the messenger himself.”²¹¹⁶ Thus, Toronto’s observation that the “Islamic equivalent to the Christian sacrament... is the act of imbibing the word of God through seeing, hearing, or reciting the Qur’an.”²¹¹⁷ Bloom concludes: “Jesus as the incarnate Word replaced the Torah for Pauline Christianity; Muhammad voids that replacement, not by returning to Torah but by subsuming the Book within his own book.”²¹¹⁸

Schäfer argues that talmudic accounts of Jesus’ punishment in hell were specifically related to His setting His own pronouncements above the law of the Sages.²¹¹⁹

E-194 Note that the KJV translators were mistaken in rendering “search” as an imperative.²¹²⁰

E-195 Bloom cites the following from von Rad:

Actually, Israel conceived even Jahweh as having human form. But the way of putting it which we use runs in precisely in the wrong direction according to Old Testament ideas, for, according to the ideas of Jahwism, it cannot be said that Israel regarded God anthropomorphically, but the reverse, that she considered man as theomorphic.²¹²¹

Contrasting the ancient God of the Hebrew scriptures to His Middle East rivals, Bloom writes:

Yahweh is a person and a personality; the godlings of Canaan are bric-a-brac, while Yahweh is a Divine Man and beyond that, and his favorites—Abraham, Jacob, Moses, David—are also theomorphic.²¹²²

E-196 In related imagery from the Apocalypse of Abraham,²¹²³ Larsen notes Abraham’s vision of the Garden of Eden:

He sees there Adam and Eve “entwined” with each other, and Azazel between them. From this description, it [seems] that the text is trying to depict... a negative version of the divine kavod. Instead of having two cherubim entwined with the Lord between/above them,²¹²⁴ we have Adam and Eve (who were eating the fruit—transgressing) entwined with the Adversary between them.²¹²⁵

E-197 Although some scholars identify the wife with Nü Gua, others express “reservations about the correctness of the identification.”²¹²⁶ See p. 656.

E-198 The motivation for the theme of sibling incest as the means of populating the earth in primeval stories from many cultures is seen by Lewis as emphasizing “the theme of the shared substance out of which different beings emerged, with the brother-sister tie marking the extreme case of shared substance... out of which emerges all the different peoples who later occupied the earth.”²¹²⁷

E-199 Birrell notes in particular the “motif of shame and guilt” and the “fan covering brother and sister as the fig leaf covered Adam and Eve.”²¹²⁸

E-200 The Huainanzi (Huai-nan Tzu) says of this cosmic tree or pillar that “All the gods ascended and descended by it.”²¹²⁹ The significance of this “stairway to heaven” is, according to Major that: “ritually and under some circumstances, one can restore the conditions of the world before time, the world

2115 J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore, p. 102. A similar idea seems to animate messianic prophecies such as Isaiah 11:1, 10.

2116 A. B. S. Ed-Din, Sufism, p. 231.

2117 J. A. Toronto, Islam, p. 222.

2118 H. Bloom, Genius, p. 148.

2119 P. Schäfer, Talmud, pp. 82-94.

2120 H. N. Ridderbos, John, p. 203 n. 53.

2121 H. Bloom, Genius, p. 117.

2122 H. Bloom, American Religion, p. 132; cf. p. 99.

2123 R. Rubinkiewicz, Apocalypse of Abraham, 23:5-6, p. 700.

2124 J. E. Seaich, Mystery, pp. 5-23.

2125 D. J. Larsen, 6 December 2008.

2126 D. Harper, Warring, p. 846.

2127 M. E. Lewis, Flood, p. 109.

2128 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 34, cf. p. 203.

2129 Ibid., p. 233.

before cosmic disaster and engulfing flood severed the bonds between humans and the gods.”²¹³⁰ Summarizing a description of the sky-ladder from a first-century CE section of The Classic of Mountains and Seas, Birrell writes: “The Chien-Mu or Building-Tree is situated at the center of the world. It is an axis mundi where heaven and earth meet” conforming “in every respect with Eliade’s paradigm of archaic cosmological beliefs that are ‘invested with the prestige of the Center.’”²¹³¹ Both the roots and the branches are said to be intertwined,²¹³² and the text records that “T’ai Hao [whose identity later became confused with that of Fu Xi²¹³³] used to pass up and down by it.”²¹³⁴ Loewe writes that it was by means of this ladder that “Fu Xi and his sister ascended to heaven.”²¹³⁵

E-201 More precisely—and similar to religious traditions in other cultures²¹³⁶—K’un-lun “appears as a place not located on the earth, but poised between heaven and earth.”²¹³⁷

E-202 Lewis observes:

Many scholars... identify the tools as symbols of yin and yang. This argument, however, is not entirely persuasive, for the male Fu Xi holds the carpenter’s square, which would be identified with the square earth and hence yin, while the female Nü Gua holds the circular compass, which would be identified with Heaven and thus yang. However the pairing of the tools themselves, abstracted from the question of their placement, could certainly serve as an image of yin and yang, and by extension of all correlate pairs formed through the process of division... One text states that Fu Xi lived in a time when all was chaotic and undivided, that is, a time much like that of the flood [n.b.: or the Creation], and that he used the carpenter’s square to establish divisions and create the trigrams. The “Great Commentary” of the Yi states that the trigrams are square while the yarrow are round, thus making Yi divination a replica of the universe... While there is no explicit discussion of a link between Nü Gua and the compass, it could reflect the fact that her primary achievement in the flood myth... was to restore the circular heaven to its place.²¹³⁸

Nibley compares the idea of the divine couple measuring the universe with square and compass to Pharaoh and Lady Seshat who would “lay out the foundation of a new temple by taking direct bearing on the stars with the proper instruments. The Lady was his one indispensable assistant on the occasion.”²¹³⁹

E-203 An intriguing similarity can be seen between serpentine depictions of Fu Xi and Nü Gua and a bronze statue of Isis-Thermouthis and Serapis-Agathodaimon from the Greco-Roman era found in the ruins of the ancient city of Cyzicus, located in what is now northwestern Turkey.²¹⁴⁰ Lyon observes that the tails of the figures “are tied together in the Hercules knot, a symbol of their eternal marriage. The hybrid style, Hellenistic heads on Egyptian cobra bodies, is a result of the desire to combine the most important elements of the great religious traditions then in constant contact with each other.”²¹⁴¹

E-204 Sometimes various forms of a crow (the sun-crow or sun-chariot) appear on the face of the sun, in place of the twelve smaller circles.²¹⁴² Allan argues that the sun-crow can be identified with the black bird from which the Shang claimed their tribe had sprung.²¹⁴³ Note also a separate tradition, later conflated with other bird themes, that the divine Queen Mother of the West (Xi Wang Mu) was served by one or three messenger birds (Qing Niao).²¹⁴⁴

2130 J. S. Major, Heaven, p. 47.

2131 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 232; cf. S. Allan, Turtle, pp. 98-101; J. S. Major, Heaven, p. 37.

2132 “For one thousand feet upward... there are nine tanglewoods, while underneath there are nine root twinings”; cf. the Mu-lien-li “whose growth stems from a pair of trunks” (M. Loewe, Ways, p. 111). See Commentary 3:9-h, p. 167; Figure 5-3, p. 330; Excursus 25: The Tree of Life as the Hidden Throne of God, p. 591.

2133 See p. 656.

2134 A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 233.

2135 M. Loewe, Ways, p. 111.

2136 See Commentary 3:8-b, p. 160.

2137 J. S. Major, Heaven, p. 156.

2138 M. E. Lewis, Flood, p. 127.

2139 H. W. Nibley, Prayer Circle, p. 74.

2140 A. Mordtman Jr., Monuments, p. 260 and plate IX, fig. 2; cf., e.g., W56 Isis and Serapis.

2141 M. P. Lyon, Set Design, p. 272.

2142 M. Loewe, Ways, pp. 53, 127-130; J. S. Major, Heaven, p. 159.

2143 S. Allan, Turtle, pp. 25, 39.

2144 M. E. Lewis, Early, pp. 191-192; cf. M. Loewe, Ways, pp. 130-131. See also Commentary 1:1-b, p. 42, 3:9-g, p. 165; 4:5-b, p. 246; Figure 3-8, p. 145; Figure 6-14, p. 473.

- E-205 For more detailed descriptions of early customs related to the construction of Chinese tombs, see Lewis.²¹⁴⁵
- E-206 A passage from the Huai-nan Tzu (ca. 170-122 BCE) asserts “the most basic principle of Huang-Lao cosmography,”²¹⁴⁶ i.e.: “Heaven is round; earth is square.”²¹⁴⁷ Oriented to the four cardinal directions, a “ritual chamber, with sacred trees at the four corners,” represented the cosmos and served as a place where “shamans used such means as sacred animals, mountains and trees serving as an axis mundi, and music, dance, and hallucinogens to ascend to Heaven to meet with the deities and the ancestors.”²¹⁴⁸ For more on the early Chinese model of the world and the cosmos (and related rituals), see Lewis and Major.²¹⁴⁹
- E-207 In the Shujing, the motivation for the damage to the pillar is described as being to “break the communication between earth and heaven so that there was no descending or ascending.”²¹⁵⁰
- E-208 Separate accounts tell of how Fu Xi and Nü Gua became the ancestors of all humanity after the flood.²¹⁵¹
- E-209 Yuan K'o characterizes Chinese myths as having been “preserved in literary amber, a disorganized way in a number of miscellaneous books” but then observes that this may not be a “total misfortune” since, as a result, “they have not suffered a complete reworking at the hands of literary authors or others. One might argue that in their present fragmentary state, preserved in a large number of classical books, they must appear as Greek and Roman myths once did before Homer, Hesiod, or even Ovid transformed, reshaped, and rewrote them. It is possible to argue that by an accident of history, Chinese myths remain in a more or less pristine condition.”²¹⁵²
- E-210 See Lewis’ not wholly convincing attempts at a rapprochement between the textual and iconographic versions of these figures.²¹⁵³
- E-211 Barker cites evidence that both the location and the orientation of the second temple was different from the first.²¹⁵⁴
- E-212 As examples of such suggestions, Barker cites several converging traditions.²¹⁵⁵ For instance, despite the fact that a Menorah was part of the second temple, rabbinic sources promised that the true Menorah (= the Tree of Life?) would be restored in the time of the Messiah. Moreover, 1 Enoch said that the tree would be transplanted again to the sanctuary of the temple of the Lord, where it would feed the faithful after the judgment.²¹⁵⁶ Finally, in Orthodox Christian churches today one finds menorahs as tall as two meters in the sanctuary. Barker concludes that the Menorah was removed from both the temple and deprecated or ignored in later Jewish literature as the result of a “very ancient feud” concerning its significance.²¹⁵⁷

Although the trees of Eden have been associated with the Garden Room of LDS temples since the time of Nauvoo,²¹⁵⁸ representations relating to the eschatological Tree of Life are centered on the Celestial Room. For example, the Celestial Room of the Salt Lake Temple is “richly embellished with clusters of fruits and flowers.”²¹⁵⁹ The Celestial Room of the Palmyra New York Temple features a large stained-glass window depicting a Tree of Life with “twelve bright multifaceted crystal fruits.”²¹⁶⁰

2145 M. E. Lewis, Construction, pp. 119-130; M. E. Lewis, Early, pp. 189-200.

2146 J. S. Major, Heaven, p. 32.

2147 T'ien wen, SPPY 3:9b in A. Birrell, Mythology, p. 32.

2148 K.-c. Chang, Eve, p. 68.

2149 M. E. Lewis, Construction, pp. 245-305; J. S. Major, Heaven, pp. 32-43.

2150 J. S. Major, Heaven, p. 26. See also K.-c. Chang, Eve, pp. 70-71.

2151 M. E. Lewis, Flood, p. 123.

2152 Cited in A. Birrell, Mythology, p. xii.

2153 M. E. Lewis, Flood, pp. 131-133.

2154 M. Barker, Hidden, pp. 10-13.

2155 M. Barker, 11 June 2007. See also M. Barker, Christmas, pp. 85-86, 140.

2156 G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch, 25:3-6, p. 312. Mandaean scripture also describes a Tree of Life within the heavenly sanctuary: “They... lifted the great veil of safety upward before him, introduced him, and showed him that Vine,” i.e., the Tree of Life (M. Lidzbarski, Ginza, GL 1:1, p. 429:3-20; cf. E. S. Drower, Prayerbook, 49, pp. 45-46).

2157 M. Barker, Older, p. 221, see pp. 221-232. For more on the symbolism of the Menorah, see M. Barker, Gate, pp. 90-95. Fine gives a historical overview of the use of the Menorah as a Jewish symbol (S. Fine, Menorah).

2158 D. F. Colvin, Nauvoo Temple, p. 220; S. B. Kimball, Heber C. Kimball, p. 117; M. McBride, Nauvoo Temple, pp. 264-265.

2159 J. E. Talmage, House of the Lord, p. 134.

2160 G. E. Hansen, Jr. et al., Sacred Walls, p. 4.

Note the possibility that the first temple contained two kinds of lighted “trees,” one kind that was visible to those standing in front of the temple veil, and another kind that was hidden behind it in the Holy of Holies.²¹⁶¹ Such an arrangement would correspond with the successive gradations of light in the ordinance rooms of modern LDS temples, “each increasing in color, light and richness in their order to the climax in the Celestial Room.”²¹⁶² For example, in the Celestial Room of the Salt Lake Temple: “Eight electroliers [chandeliers] with shades of richly finished glass depend from the ceiling, and each of the twenty-two columns holds a bracket of lights in corresponding design.”²¹⁶³ According to Nibley,²¹⁶⁴ the idea that the most brightly-lighted part of the temple would be entered at the completing step of the rites would have been familiar in several ancient temple cultures:

[I]n the Jewish and Christian mysteries, ... you go from the [darkness] to the day. It was imitated in the ancient temples in Egypt. You would go through darkness and trials and through three levels. Then in the final stage you went through a veil into a sunlit courtyard at noon day. Everything was white alabaster and absolutely dazzling in this celestial room. It was the same thing in the epopteia with the Greeks. You went into a room that was brilliantly lighted after you had been in the dark. It's called the epopteia, “the seeing of the light,” the sudden vision that pops on you when you realize. This was dramatized in the Hellenistic Period under the Hermetic teachings. They adopted these things, mixed them up, imitated them, etc. That's another story. But [Alma's statement in the Book of Mormon is consistent with] the language they use: “I was in the darkest abyss; but now I behold the marvelous light of God.”²¹⁶⁵

E-213 Spinks also mentions “possibly putting on a white garment” as a rite that follows anointing.²¹⁶⁶

E-214 Barker concludes that the book of Revelation “resembles much in the Gnostic texts, not because it is a late text with Gnostic corruption apparent, but because the original ‘gnosticism’ and the earliest Christianity were one and the same.”²¹⁶⁷ The special knowledge imparted to the apostles, of course, disappeared very early from the body of the Christian Church itself.²¹⁶⁸ In light of this fact, it is not too much of an exaggeration for Lupieri to argue that “all cultured Christians at that time (according to the parameters of Hellenistic culture) were ‘Gnostics,’ the differences between them consisting in the content they each provided for the category ‘knowledge.’ Gnosticism, then, is the set of Gnostic doctrines declared to be heretical by the great Church, this Church being the one whose theology won out.”²¹⁶⁹

E-215 Nibley describes these “lessons” as follows: “These five things are the marks of his church and include the greeting of peace by which one becomes a son of peace, the grasp of the right hand which brings one into the church, followed by the embrace by which one becomes a son.”²¹⁷⁰

E-216 The confusion evident in the patterns and explanations offered in texts describing early forms of these rituals, the most basic of Christian ordinances, is striking. In his analysis of early sources (which bears the telling subtitle of “A Study in Diversity”), Paul Bradshaw concludes that:

... we cannot really talk of a standard or normative pattern of early initiation practice in primitive Christianity... What can be said to have emerged as common to rites by the time that the third century is reached, out of the apparent diversity of practice of earlier times, are certain fundamental ritual elements... but each of these still tends to take a different form and, at least to some extent, a different meaning in the various local or regional traditions, and they have been combined with one another in differing sequences, with the result that there are just too many variations in structure and theology to allow us to construct a single picture in anything but the very broadest terms. To emphasize what is common and to ignore what is distinctive of individual churches—or worse still, to force that evidence to fit some preconceived notion of a normative pattern—is seriously to distort our understanding of the variety of primitive Christian practice.²¹⁷¹

E-217 The Prophet Joseph Smith taught:

2161 See Commentary 3:9-g, p. 166 and Excursus 25: The Tree of Life as the Hidden Throne of God, p. 591.

2162 N. B. Lundwall, Temples 1968, p.193.

2163 J. E. Talmage, House of the Lord, p. 134.

2164 H. W. Nibley, Teachings of the Book of Mormon, 12 (41), 2:155.

2165 Mosiah 27:29.

2166 B. D. Spinks, Baptism, p. 25.

2167 M. Barker, Revelation, p. 403.

2168 H. W. Nibley, Passing; H. W. Nibley, Evangelium.

2169 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, p. 34.

2170 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 444-445; cf. p. 501.

2171 P. F. Bradshaw, Search, pp. 169-170. See also M. E. Johnson, Christian Initiation.

Some say that the kingdom of God was not set up on the earth until the day of Pentecost... but, I say in the name of the Lord, that the kingdom of God was set up on the earth from the days of Adam to the present time. Whenever there has been a righteous man on earth unto whom God revealed His word and gave power and authority to administer in His name, and where there is a priest of God—a minister who has power and authority from God to administer in the ordinances of the Gospel and officiate in the priesthood of God, there is the kingdom of God.... Where there is a prophet, a priest, or a righteous man unto whom God gives His oracles, there is the kingdom of God; and where the oracles of God are not, there the kingdom of God is not.²¹⁷²

On another occasion he said:

The Savior has the words of eternal life. Nothing else can profit us... I advise all to go on to perfection, and search deeper and deeper into the mysteries of Godliness.²¹⁷³

- E-218 The idea of three degrees of initiation within primordial traditions from other cultures is discussed by Lundquist.²¹⁷⁴

For arguments seeking to connect the Greco-Roman and Christian mysteries (as well as the practice of alchemy) to earlier precedents in Egypt, see, e.g., A. Roberts, Anointing, pp. 76-126. In the case of Christianity, she sees the Gospel of Philip as providing the strongest evidence for her arguments.

- E-219 Caves are associated with ritual uses throughout the world.²¹⁷⁵ For example, according to anthropologist Bassie-Sweet, a specialist in Maya culture:

The rites associated with caves were initiations related to social incorporation, such as baptisms or the entrance to adolescence or adulthood, and sociopolitical ceremonies, such as investitures and ascensions. Other rites involving exorcism and the cure of illness were also carried out in caves. As well, many mythological events were thought to have occurred at caves. A cave was the location of the birth of gods and races. The sun and moon were said to be born from a cave. The Aztec believed they originated from Chicomostoc (Seven Caves).²¹⁷⁶

- E-220 Observes Hayward: “Philo saw nothing improper... in describing Moses as a hierophant: like the holder of that office in the mystery cults of Philo’s day, Moses was responsible for inducting initiates into the mysteries, leading them from darkness to light, to a point where they are enabled to see,” i.e., to see God.²¹⁷⁷ Commenting on the idea of Moses as a hierophant and a representative (rather than idiosyncratic) figure of the wisdom seeker, Johnson points out that the story of the heavenly man in Joseph and Aseneth²¹⁷⁸ “shares the same sensibility” as Philo in this respect.²¹⁷⁹

- E-221 The extent to which Philo intended to imply a literal deification of Moses is a matter of scholarly dispute. Russell provides a useful history and overview of Jewish and early Christian beliefs relating to deification. While both admitting many evidences suggesting that Philo’s view of deification might be taken at face value and recognizing the influence of Philo’s teachings on later Christian teachings on the subject, he nevertheless agrees with the consensus of most modern scholars that “Philo is unwilling to say that Moses is a god except by title or analogy” and “maintains the biblical gulf between the human and the divine.”²¹⁸⁰ Russell, however, does see acceptance of more literal ideas of deification analogous to early Christian views in some strands of Palestinian Judaism and later rabbinic mysticism.²¹⁸¹ See Fletcher-Louis for a summary of the Dead Sea Scrolls literature pertaining to the deification of Moses.²¹⁸²

- E-222 Consistent with this view, Barker concludes that the “world of the first temple was the taproot of Christianity.”²¹⁸³

- E-223 Elsewhere, Barker writes: “Philo... was aware of the older priestly traditions of Israel, and much in 2172 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 22 January 1843, pp. 21-22.

2173 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 2 May 1844, p. 364.

2174 J. M. Lundquist, Fundamentals, pp. 677-678, 680-681.

2175 See A. S-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, pp. 180-182 for a discussion of possible associations between Adam’s Cave of Treasures and traditions from other cultures.

2176 K. Bassie-Sweet, Cave, p. 77, cited in B. Gardner, Second Witness, 2:66.

2177 C. T. R. Hayward, Israel, p. 192.

2178 C. Burchard, Joseph, 14-17, pp. 224-231.

2179 L. T. Johnson, Religious Experience, p. 90 n. 93.

2180 N. Russell, Deification, p. 64.

2181 Ibid., pp. 65-76.

2182 C. H. T. Fletcher-Louis, Glory, pp. 136-149.

2183 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 33.

his writings that is identified as Platonism, e.g., the heavenly archetypes, the second mediator God, is more likely to have originated in the priestly traditions of the first temple.”²¹⁸⁴ “Goodenough should have recognized that the ‘Moses’ mysteries were derived from the earlier Melchizedek mysteries, the original temple mysteries.”²¹⁸⁵

- E-224 JST Exodus 34:1-2 reads: “And the Lord said unto Moses, Hew thee two other tables of stones, like unto the first, and I will write upon them also, the words of the law, according as they were written at the first on the tables which thou brakest; but it shall not be according to the first, for I will take away the priesthood out of their midst; therefore my holy order, and the ordinances thereof, shall not go before them; for my presence shall not go up in their midst, lest I destroy them. But I will give them the law as at the first, but it shall be after the law of a carnal commandment; for I have sworn in my wrath, that they shall not enter into my presence, into my rest, in the days of their pilgrimage.”²¹⁸⁶
- E-225 Elder Joseph Fielding Smith wrote “that while Israel was restricted in the power of the priesthood from the days of Moses to the days of the ministry of our Savior, yet the prophets in Israel such as Elijah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel, were blessed with the Melchizedek Priesthood, but this priesthood was not given to others.”²¹⁸⁷
- E-226 Blumenthal explains how this idea fits in the larger context of kabbalistic thinking, where the Tree of Life:

... is constant, unified, having no internal split or dichotomy. In the sefirotic world of discourse, Tiferet [equated with the Tree of Life], which is the center of God’s personality, is unity. To reach the level of meditating on Tiferet is to experience the transcendent unity of the divine. Malkhut [equated with the Tree of Knowledge], on the other hand, is the confluence of all the conflicting elements, and hence contains within itself conflict and contradiction. It turns over and over [like the “flaming sword”²¹⁸⁸]; it changes its hues. One side of its nature is severity, war, evil, and death... Adam sat in the Garden, i.e., he meditated upon the sefirot. He saw unchanging Tiferet and changing Malkhut, and he was drawn to the latter. God warned him not to meditate on Malkhut, but he, following his wife, did so anyway. His sin consisted, first, in defying God’s warning. But, as we have seen, he appears to have been distracted by Malkhut even before God issued His warning... Adam... wanted to have... divine power... Reflecting upon the fact that it may well be man’s will to divine power (and not to divine unity) that motivates man, we can understand why meditating on Malkhut alone became the sin par excellence in the Zohar.²¹⁸⁹

- E-227 Barker notes that in:

... Genesis 14:22: “I have sworn by Yahweh God Most High...” Yahweh here is identified as God Most High, El Elyon, but this reading occurs only in the Masoretic Hebrew text and the Targums based on it.²¹⁹⁰ All the other ancient witnesses do not identify Yahweh and God Most High. Melchizedek’s God is simply “God Most High.” In the Old Greek there is just “God Most High.”²¹⁹¹ The Genesis Apocryphon has only “God Most High.”²¹⁹² Josephus says that Melchizedek was a priest of God—no detail.²¹⁹³ Jubilees has a gap in the text at the point where we expect Melchizedek,²¹⁹⁴ of which O. S. Wintermute says...: “There is an obvious lacuna in the text at this point.”²¹⁹⁵ Melchizedek is missing from the Ethiopic text, and also from the Syriac, which is otherwise extant for this portion. Philo says that Melchizedek was high priest of the Most High 2184 M. Barker, Revelation, p. 399; cf. M. Barker, Beyond.

2185 M. Barker, 11 June 2007.

2186 S. H. Faulring et al., Original Manuscripts, p. 701, spelling and punctuation modernized; cf. D&C 84 cited on p. 669. Compare also Exodus 33:2-3 vs. D&C 103:19-20. See J. A. Tvedtnes, Laws for additional support for these ideas from scripture, pseudepigrapha, and the Zohar.

2187 J. F. Smith, Jr., Answers, 1957, 1:117-118.

2188 Moses 4:31.

2189 D. Blumenthal, Merkabah, pp. 144-145.

2190 E.g., M. Maher, Pseudo-Jonathan, Genesis 14:22, p. 58; M. McNamara, Targum Neofiti, Genesis 14:22, p. 93.

2191 C. Dogniez et al., Pentateuque, p. 173 n. 14:18, p. 174 n. 14:22; J. W. Wevers, Notes, 14:18, pp. 197-198; 14:22, p. 200; cf. Clement of Alexandria, Stromata, 4:25, p. 439; Justin Martyr, Trypho, 33, p. 211; Tertullian, Jews, 2, p. 152; Theophilus, Autolycus, 2:31, p. 107.

2192 F. G. Martinez, Genesis Apocryphon 22:21, p. 236.

2193 F. Josephus, Antiquities, 1:10:2, p. 34.

2194 O. S. Wintermute, Jubilees, 13:25, p. 84.

2195 Ibid., p. 84 n. f.

God,²¹⁹⁶ but in his Allegorical Interpretation he hints at other aspects of Melchizedek.²¹⁹⁷ He was priest and Logos, an identification that he uses elsewhere for Yahweh when he appears in human form as the angel of Yahweh.²¹⁹⁸

Reviewing the textual evidence, Davila proposes that the divinity of Melchizedek “was not invented in the Second Temple period; rather it was [an older tradition that was] suppressed in the Hebrew Bible.”²¹⁹⁹ In considering the implications of the deification of Melchizedek, it should be remembered, however, that “Philo identified the Logos with both the Image (Urbild) and the Man after the Image (Abbild),”²²⁰⁰ thus an appearance of the Logos can signify either an appearance of the Divine Logos, or His human representative, remade in the rite of kingship in the temple “after the image of mine Only Begotten.”²²⁰¹

E-228 Regarding Melchizedek, Barker observes:

The Hebrew Bible describes him as a priest (kohen, Genesis 14:18), but the Targums avoid this term and say simply that he ‘served’ (mešammeš).²²⁰² This was anti-Christian polemic, denying the claim in Hebrews that Jesus was the great high priest like Melchizedek... Justin²²⁰³ and Tertullian²²⁰⁴ both claimed that Melchizedek was an uncircumcised priest, which meant that Christians could be priests without being circumcised, whereas the Jews claimed that he had been born circumcised.²²⁰⁵

E-229 The corrupted text of the verse 3 is an enigma for most commentators. For example, Alter implausibly takes “the womb of the morning” as an image of “an army sallying forth,” and “the dew of thy youth” as possibly referring to “the fresh energy of a young king,” since “the idea of giving birth to the king like (?) dew is puzzling.”²²⁰⁶ By way of contrast, Barker’s conjectures about a messianic interpretation of Psalm 110 are enlightening:

The Hebrew of Psalm 110 is notoriously difficult to translate, especially verse 3, where Yahweh makes someone a Melchizedek priest, but the process and the setting are obscured. The Greek text is a little clearer than the Hebrew: “In the glory of the holy ones... I have begotten you.” To this translator, and so to the early Christians who used the Greek text, becoming the Melchizedek priest meant being born as the Son among the angels. In temple terms, this implies a ritual in the Holy of Holies, the place of the angels, in which the human became divine. The Holy of Holies represented the state of being that was both beyond and before the material creation, and this was where the Melchizedek priest was “born,” as implied in Alma 13:3, the priests of the order of the Son were “called and prepared from the foundation of the world...,” and Alma 13:5: “this holy calling prepared from the foundation of the world.” The rest of Psalm 110:3 has become opaque in the Hebrew, and we have to ask why this might have happened. I suggest it was because this verse described the making of the ancient Melchizedek priests who were described as Sons of God. LDS scholars would recognise this, perhaps, as one of the plain and precious things that have been removed from the Old Testament we currently use...

Psalm 110:3, a key text for Christians, describes the process by which the Davidic king became the Son, the process by which a human became Yahweh. Becoming divine was described as birth, but the Hebrew yldtyk is ambiguous, and is usually rendered in English as “your youth” [i.e., reading as yalduteyka]. The Greek translator, and thus too the early Christians, read the letters differently [i.e., reading as yelidtika] and understood it to mean “I have begotten you,” exegénēsá se [corresponding to the Vulgate “genui te”]. The place of this birth is also unclear in the Hebrew: was it “in glorious array,” or was it “on the holy mountains.” (Was it behadrey or beharerey, as in Psalm 87:1?) The Greek and Latin, which reflect the Christian understanding of the verse, understood 2196 Philo, Abraham, 11 (235), p. 431.

2197 Philo, Interpretation 3, 25-26 (79-82), p. 59.

2198 M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek.

2199 J. R. Davila, Melchizedek, p. 224.

2200 W. Williams, Shadow.

2201 Moses 2:27.

2202 See, e.g., M. Maher, Pseudo-Jonathan, Genesis 14:18, p. 58; p. 58 n. 44.

2203 Justin Martyr, Trypho, 19, p. 204.

2204 Tertullian, Jews, 2, pp. 152-153.

2205 M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek. See J. Neusner, Genesis Rabbah 2, 43:6:4, p. 119.

2206 R. Alter, Psalms, 110, p. 397.

that the birth took place in the glory of the holy ones, that is, amidst the angel host in the Holy of Holies.²²⁰⁷

Here in Psalm 110 we have to envisage Yahweh and the human king becoming One, such that Yahweh was present in the king: Immanuel. Sonship meant unity, not separation. “A priest like Melchizedek” was the transformed human figure, an angel... It is the immediate background to the arguments in St. John’s Gospel, for example, where Jesus, debating with the Jews, asks: “Do you say of him whom the Father consecrated and sent into the world ‘You are blaspheming’ because I said I am the Son of God?”²²⁰⁸ The consecrated one was the high priest, consecrated in the Holy of Holies that represented heaven, and then sent out into the world. Using arguments that must have been acceptable to his Jewish critics, Jesus said that the consecrated one was the Son. “Do you say of him whom the Father consecrated and sent into the world ‘You are blaspheming’ because I said I am the Son of God?” He was the Melchizedek priest as described in Psalm 110.

The mysterious “dew” in Psalm 110, apparently part of the birth process, does not appear in either the Greek or the Latin versions. It could have been the anointing oil, which is described elsewhere as “like dew,”²²⁰⁹ where the oil that anoints and transforms Enoch into an angel is described as like sweet dew). Or it could have been yet another corruption in the text. The Latin understood the line to mean that the Son was born before Lucifer, which raises interesting questions about the title “the firstborn.” Was the psalm affirming that the Davidic king was the firstborn as stated in Psalm 89:27 “I will appoint him the firstborn,” bekor, rather than Satan who claimed that he was born first and so should take precedence. In the Life of Adam and Eve, Satan refused, for this reason, to worship the image of God.²²¹⁰ “Let all God’s angels worship him,” was part of the longer form of that disputed verse Deuteronomy 32:43, the part that does not appear in the Masoretic Hebrew, although it was in the Qumran text.²²¹¹ It was also one of the proof texts at the beginning of Hebrews to establish the identity of Jesus: he was Yahweh who came to atone the land, and all the angels were commanded to worship him. A human being united to Yahweh—being the Son—and union with the Father were the subjects of Jesus’ prayer for his disciples after the Last Supper: “that they may be one, even as we are one...”²²¹² The Melchizedek verse in Psalm 110, I suggest, became obscure because of its importance for Christian claims about Jesus and about themselves. The Christians were, were, collectively, the restored Melchizedek priesthood: one with Jesus, and their unity with Him was both the sign of their true identity as sons of God²²¹³ and also of Jesus’ divine origin. Melchizedek, then, was a priesthood of many people, not of just one individual.²²¹⁴

Barker also argues that the familiar KJV translation “a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek”²²¹⁵ could also be interpreted “a priest for ever in the likeness of Melchizedek.”²²¹⁶

In Hebrews, Melchizedek is said to have been:

... “raised up to his priesthood,”²²¹⁷ a word that also means was “resurrected,” in contrast to the sons of Aaron who had their priesthood by bodily descent. The contrast is clear: the Melchizedek high priesthood was due to the ascent of resurrection, the power of indestructible life,²²¹⁸ whereas the Aaronite high priesthood was by physical descent and ended with the death of each priest.²²¹⁹ Thus Melchizedek’s priesthood made him like the Son of God. The early Christians must have known what was in the now obscured lines of Psalm 110: the Melchizedek priest has been begotten as a son of God and raised up.²²²⁰

2207 Greek en tē lamprōtēti tōn hagion (L. C. L. Brenton, Septuagint, Psalm 110:3, p. 767; “among the splendors of the holy ones” (A. Pietersma et al., Septuagint, Psalm 109(110):3, p. 603)); Latin in splendoribus sanctorum or in saeculum saeculi (R. Weber, Vulgata, Psalm 110:3, p. 914).

2208 John 10:36.

2209 Psalm 133:3; cf. F. I. Andersen, 2 Enoch, 22:9, pp. 138-139.

2210 G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, 14:3, p. 17E.

2211 M. Abegg, Jr. et al., Scrolls Bible, p. 193. See M. Barker, Hidden, p. 24; M. Barker, Christmas, p. 20; Excursus 23: The Roles of Christ, Adam, and Michael, p. 582.

2212 John 17:22.

2213 John 1:13; Romans 8:14.

2214 M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek. See also M. Barker, Christmas, pp. 104-106.

2215 Psalm 110:4.

2216 M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek; cf. M. Barker, Hidden, p. 67.

2217 Hebrews 7:11, 15.

2218 Hebrews 7:16.

2219 Hebrews 7:23.

2220 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 65.

E-230 See also the discussion by Attridge, who likewise observes that “certain elements of Philo’s speculation... provide important evidence for the background of Hebrews’ christology, important because they illustrate that the tradition about angels functioning as intercessory priests was not confined to apocalyptic texts.”²²²¹ More generally, Koester also finds the “closest parallels for [the author of Hebrews’] exegetical statements and for his interpretive method... in the writings of Philo of Alexandria, [although] no direct dependence upon Philo can be demonstrated.”²²²²

E-231 Barker points out that the competing views of the “identity of Melchizedek [were] part of an ongoing dispute about claims to the true priesthood.”²²²³ On the one hand, the supposed identification of Shem with Melchizedek is supported by Jewish tradition and early LDS statements.²²²⁴ In modern scripture, Shem is also identified as “the great high priest.”²²²⁵ Elder Bruce R. McConkie argues against the identification of Melchizedek with Shem on the basis of D&C 84:14 (“Abraham received the priesthood from Melchizedek, who received it through the lineage of his fathers, even till Noah”), concluding that “there seem to have been at least two generations between Melchizedek and Shem.”²²²⁶ Terry has pointed out, however, that “the next verse... gives a key to understanding verse 14: ‘And from Noah till Enoch, through the lineage of their fathers.’ In other words, the phrase ‘through the lineage of the fathers’ refers to those preceding Enoch, not those between Enoch and Noah. If you read verse 14 in this light, it is talking about Melchizedek receiving the priesthood ‘through the lineage of his fathers [from Adam on down], even till Noah [his father].’²²²⁷ In the Encyclopedia of Mormonism, Satterfield²²²⁸ further questions the equating of Melchizedek with Shem because “Jewish sources²²²⁹ ... are late and tendentious.” Orlov concurs with Satterfield that the identification of Melchizedek with Shem in rabbinic sources “exhibits a strong polemical flavor.”²²³⁰

2 Enoch gives a different account of Melchizedek’s genealogy that can be seen as “evidence of a counter-claim to the true priesthood.”²²³¹ Here Melchizedek is portrayed as the son of Nir, the younger brother of Noah, born miraculously from the dead body of his mother as a fully-developed and dressed three-year-old in size. He had the glorious “badge of priesthood... on his chest... and they washed the child, and they dressed him in the garments of priesthood, and they gave him holy bread and he ate it.”²²³² He was taken to live in the “paradise of Eden” so that his life and priesthood would be preserved during the Flood.²²³³ Later, “another Melchizedek” would appear, who was to become the “first priest and king in the city Salim in the style [order] of this Melchizedek, the originator of the priests.”²²³⁴

E-232 Barker²²³⁵ also discusses an extracanonical passage where Enoch was declared to be “the son of man born to righteousness”:²²³⁶

What could be behind the words to Enoch, that he was the son of man born to righteousness? Perhaps he was “born”—in the temple sense of that word—as the Righteous One, the One who would restore righteousness... “Righteous,” sadiq, and “righteousness,” sedeq, are key concepts in temple tradition, most often linked to mispat, justice, and salom, peace. The fundamental bond of the covenant was the covenant of peace, b’rit salom, also described as the covenant of eternity, b’rit ’olam. Restoring “righteousness” meant restoring the creation to its original state, before the covenant had been broken by the rebel angels and their human agents. It meant renewing the covenant, which in temple tradition was the ritual of the Day of Atonement when the high priest entered the Holy of Holies. This 2221 H. W. Attridge et al., Hebrews, p. 100.

2222 H. Koester, New Testament 2, p. 278, cf; pp. 276, 277. See also H. Koester, New Testament 1, p. 271; K. Schenck, Understanding, p. 30.

2223 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 65.

2224 See, e.g., Ancient Ruins, p. 746.

2225 D&C 138:41.

2226 B. R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, p. 475.

2227 R. Terry, 31 July 2009.

2228 B. Satterfield, Melchizedek.

2229 E.g., W. G. Braude, Midrash on Psalms, 76:3, 2:15; H. Freedman et al., Midrash, 25:6, 4 (Leviticus):319 and 4:8, 5 (Numbers 1):102; L. Ginzberg, Legends, 5:225-226 n. 102; J. Goldin, Fathers, 2, p. 23; J. L. Kugel, Traditions, pp. 284, 289-290; M. Maher, Pseudo-Jonathan, 14:18, p. 58; M. McNamara, Targum Neofiti, 14, p. 92 and n. 22; J. Neusner, Genesis Rabbah 2, 56:10, p. 286; J. Neusner, Babylonian Talmud, Nedarim 32b; M.-A. Ouaknin et al., Rabbi Éliézer, 8, p. 59 and 27, p. 161.

2230 A. A. Orlov, Heir, p. 57; cf. M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek.

2231 M. Barker, Hidden, p. 65. See F. I. Andersen, 2 Enoch, 70-72, pp. 200-211.

2232 F. I. Andersen, 2 Enoch, 71:18-21, p. 206.

2233 Ibid., 71:1, p. 210.

2234 Ibid., 72:8, p. 210.

2235 M. Barker, Hidden, pp. 47-50.

2236 See G. W. E. Nickelsburg et al., 1 Enoch, 71:14, p. 95.

is probably the meaning of the Servant being called in righteousness and appointed “the covenant of the people.”²²³⁷ Thus the Servant, the Righteous One making many righteous, must have been the high priest....²²³⁸

When Enoch had been declared the Righteous One, the angel told him that the peace of the “world to come” would be his and would come forth (into the world) with him. Since “the world to come” was the Holy of Holies, the Kingdom, Enoch bringing this to earth would have made him Melchizedek, King of Righteousness, an appropriate name or title for him, too.

Note that the Qurʾān also uses the key term siddiq to describe Enoch (= Idris),²²³⁹ Abraham,²²⁴⁰ and Joseph.²²⁴¹

E-233 Similarly, Barker concludes:

What the Jewish and the Enochic traditions are saying is that the Melchizedek priesthood was the priesthood of Enoch and the generation before the Flood. The book of Jubilees claims that many of the prescriptions of the Torah were far older than Moses, and had been given to Noah by his ancestors, the ancient priests.²²⁴² We cannot just dismiss this as fiction. These are all claims to a more ancient religion than that of Moses, an ancient religion represented in the biblical texts by the figure of Melchizedek... Compare here the Joseph Smith [Translation of] Genesis, which has a significantly longer text for the Melchizedek episode, and links him to the covenant with Enoch which is not mentioned in Masoretic Hebrew text. Melchizedek “was ordained an high priest after the order of the covenant which God made with Enoch.”²²⁴³

Note that the importance of the early patriarchs is also stressed in Jewish and Christian apocalyptic and Gnostic literature, as well as among the Mandaean and the Manichaeans.

E-234 Genesis Rabbah interprets Melchizedek’s giving of bread and wine to Abraham as follows: “He handed over to him the laws governing priesthood” and “The bread stands for the show-bread, and the wine stands for the offerings.”²²⁴⁴

E-235 Barker writes:

The Jews traced their teachings through the elders back to Moses, whereas the Christians claimed to have the mysteries of the Righteous One who was described by Isaiah. Thus in the Mishnah we find: “Moses received the Law from Sinai, and committed it to Joshua, and Joshua to the elders, and the elders to the prophets, and the prophets committed it to the men of the Great Synagogue.”²²⁴⁵ No mention of priests or temple. The Christians, however, claimed teaching from their great high priest, “to whom the secret things of the Lord were committed.”²²⁴⁶ These secret things were the “mystery” of the Righteous One mentioned in Isaiah 24:16, and were understood as the teachings of Jesus to be kept for the Lord and the sons of his house.²²⁴⁷ The Isaiah Targum understood the passage in the same way as the Christians: the prophet saw the mystery associated with the Righteous One.²²⁴⁸

E-236 About the argument by some that the Aaronic priesthood was to be abolished at the time of Christ, Seach writes:

The “Melchizedek” exegesis of the Temple-cult which we find in the Epistle to the Hebrews gives its own expanded meaning to the rites of the Temple, whose ultimate purpose would henceforth be to “cleanse the heavenly things” through the eternal, one-time sacrifice of Christ.²²⁴⁹ But this did

2237 Isaiah 42:6, 49:8.

2238 See Isaiah 53:11.

2239 M. M. Ali, Qurʾān, 19:56, p. 603.

2240 Ibid., 19:41, p. 601.

2241 J.-L. Monneret, Grands, n. 24, p. 483. See M. M. Ali, Qurʾān, 12:46, p. 46; Genesis 41:38-39.

2242 O. S. Wintermute, Jubilees, 7:34-39, p. 71, 10:13, p. 76.

2243 M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek.

2244 J. Neusner, Genesis Rabbah 2, 43:6, pp. 119-120.

2245 M. Lieber, Pirkei Avos, 1:1, pp. 6-11.

2246 Ignatius, Philadelphians, 9, p. 84; cf. Clement of Alexandria, Stromata, 1:1, p. 302.

2247 Pseudo-Clement, Homilies, 19:20, p. 336.

2248 M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek. See Targum Isaiah 24:16, cited in Barker.

2249 Hebrews 9:23-28. Johnson notes: “[T]he author of Hebrews does not stand outside the original covenant that God established with the ‘seed of Abraham’...; rather, the author stands within the commitments and story of this covenanted people. Nowhere does the author suggest that God’s word through the Son is a disavowal of not automatically eliminate the Temple's lesser duties, which still included "cleansing the earthly copies of heavenly things."²²⁵⁰ Unfortunately, the KJV translation deliberately gives the impression that these are now discontinued by gratuitously adding the past copula, "was," to verse 23 ("It was therefore necessary..."), though they should actually be parallel to the present copula in verse 16. Much more accurately, the NEB leaves this entire passage in the present tense: "If, then, these sacrifices cleanse the copies of heavenly things, those heavenly things themselves require better sacrifices to cleanse them."²²⁵¹

In short, the Aaronic priesthood was still... in effect when the Epistle to the Hebrews was written, being the law under which Israel was to operate "until the time of reformation (diorthoseos)."²²⁵² Significantly, G. W. Buchanan understands this expression to be synonymous with the "time of refreshing (apokataseos)" prophesied for the end of time in Acts 3:20f.²²⁵³

Until then, the "sons of Levi" are to "receive the office of the Priesthood" and to "take tithes of the people according to the law,"²²⁵⁴ though this is now done under the supervision and authority of the Melchizedek "tribe"....²²⁵⁵

The people of the Book of Mormon, however, like most modern Mormons, had no hereditary Priesthood, being descended from the tribe of Joseph; thus they officiated in the ordinances of the Mosaic Law²²⁵⁶ directly through the Melchizedek Priesthood.²²⁵⁷ This situation lasted until the ministry of Christ,²²⁵⁸ whose full Law was finally restored to the Church, together with its lesser "Mosaic" or "Aaronic" portions. [For this reason, the Melchizedek Priesthood is said to be "without father, without mother, without descent,"²²⁵⁹ i.e., not confined to any tribal lineage; instead, it constitutes "another tribe," previously unmentioned in Jewish law,²²⁶⁰ i.e., the Priesthood which comes directly from Christ, and passes through anyone who has received it to others.²²⁶¹]

It is nevertheless argued by some that Christ's Priesthood "doth not pass (aparabatos) from one to another," i.e., cannot be possessed by men. But as W. E. Vine perceptively notes, the word aparabatos in Hebrews 7:24 should actually be translated "unchangeable, unalterable, inviolable." Thus the rendering: "that doth not pass from one to another"... is not only untenable, and contrary to the constant usage of the word, but does not adequately fit with either the preceding or the succeeding context."²²⁶²

To suggest that only Jesus possessed the Priesthood, then, and that he never intended to share it with his disciples, is not only grammatically incorrect, but contrary to the New Testament promise that men would be made "joint heirs" with Christ, and serve with him as "Kings and Priests" in the Heavenly Temple.²²⁶³

- E-237 While Eccles sees the author of Hebrews as dismissing "as inferior to the Christian way all mystic Judaism of whatever kind,"²²⁶⁴ the striking nature of the broad similarities between the Jewish and Christian mysticism must also be acknowledged. Attridge, for example, finds "significant parallels between Philo and Hebrews in the structure of their treatment [of the correspondence between earthly and 'heavenly' sanctuaries], parallels that point to their common Hellenistic Jewish background. Not only does Hebrews' language describing the earthly-heavenly dichotomy resemble that of Philo, but also the function of that dichotomy is strikingly similar."²²⁶⁵ See Barker for a discussion of how the the words spoken to 'our fathers' of old (Hebrews 1:1). Rather, the author makes a claim for a new covenant precisely for this people" (L. T. Johnson, Hebrews, p. 211).

2250 Hebrews 9:22-23.

2251 S. Sandmel et al., New English Bible, Hebrews 9:23, p. 283.

2252 Hebrews 9:10.

2253 G. W. Buchanan, Hebrews, p. 146.

2254 Hebrews 7:5.

2255 Hebrews 7:6-10.

2256 2 Nephi 5:10.

2257 E.g., 2 Nephi 6:2; Mosiah 29:42; Alma 4:20, 6:8, 13:1-20; D&C 107:17.

2258 J. F. Smith, Jr., Doctrines, 13 December 1950, 3:87; 2 Nephi 32:6.

2259 Hebrews 7:3.

2260 Hebrews 7:13.

2261 J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, p. 975 n. 1033.

2262 W. E. Vine et al., Dictionary (1996), p. 649.

2263 J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 973, 975. See Revelation 1:6, 20:6, 21:22, 22:3-4; cf. Exodus 19:6.

2264 R. S. Eccles, Hebrews, p. 220.

2265 H. W. Attridge et al., Hebrews, p. 223.

early Christians might have interpreted the arguments of Hebrews concerning the priesthood.²²⁶⁶

- E-238 Sterling notes the high regard given Philo's writings by early Christians, "who preserved about two-thirds of his known corpus."²²⁶⁷ Legends of contact between Philo and the Christian community were preserved by Eusebius,²²⁶⁸ and at least one pseudepigraphal document purported to relate his (extremely implausible) conversion.

For a largely negative analysis of possible influences of the Greco-Roman mysteries on Paul's baptismal theology, see Wedderburn.²²⁶⁹ Johnson is more open-minded in his exploration of possible relationships between Greco-Roman, Jewish, and Christian initiations. He acknowledges:²²⁷⁰

... four basic approaches to the study of earliest Christianity in the context of the mysteries. The first is to ignore them completely and pay attention only to Jewish antecedents... The second is to recognize the pervasiveness of mystery practice and language, but refuse to grant it any influence for nascent Christianity, reserving that for later "Catholic" development... The third is to subsume early Christianity into the mysteries more or less completely²²⁷¹... The fourth [Johnson's position] is to be fundamentally open to the ways in which the symbolic worlds of the mysteries and Christianity may have intersected, without demanding causal connections in the strict sense and respecting the distinctiveness of the diverse cults.

- E-239 Regarding the fate of Jewish mystical groups such as those found at Dura, Goodenough writes:

... from direct evidence we know nothing; but it would seem that the leaders of this Judaism from the sixth to the eighth centuries had a great change of attitude. They learned Hebrew... [and as] they did so, they could for the first time learn to pray in Hebrew, to read the Scriptures in Hebrew, and to study the rabbinical writings... At the same time, they not only stopped using the symbolic vocabulary... but, wherever possible, destroyed it by clipping out the offensive forms... Christians preserved Philo and many Jewish apocalyptic books, but the medieval Jews so neglected the great mass of literature that Greek- and Iranian-speaking Jews must have produced in the whole ancient world that from Jews we have no trace of it left at all... It remains to be seen whether medieval Jewish Kabbalah... represents a survival and amplification of this more general Jewish mysticism, or was freshly created by the influence of medieval Christian mystics, or came down from Merkabah beginnings, or, as I suspect, was in some way a mixture of all these.²²⁷²

- E-240 Ulansey characterizes Mark's account of the opening of the heavens at Christ's baptism²²⁷³ and the rending of the temple veil at his death²²⁷⁴ as constituting a powerful symbolic inclusio bracketing the entire gospel, and underscoring the message that the way opened by Christ is now available to all men.²²⁷⁵ In this connection, Nibley writes:²²⁷⁶

The Gospel of Philip depicts the rending of the veil not as the abolition of the temple ordinances, as the church fathers fondly supposed, but of the opening of those ordinances to all the righteous of Israel, "in order that we might enter into... the truth of it." "The priesthood can still go within the veil with the high priest (i.e., the Lord)." We are allowed to see what is behind the veil, and "we enter into it in our weakness, through signs and tokens which the world despises."²²⁷⁷

MacRae finds the Gospel of Philip passage Nibley cites:²²⁷⁸

... interesting for the way in which it weaves together biblical exegesis of many different passages from both the Old Testament and the New Testament. The guiding image of this picture is the notion of passing into the sanctuary of the temple, that is to say, passing into the heavenly presence of God, by crossing through the veil by accomplishing the rite of the bridal chamber. The Gospel of 2266 M. Barker, Who was Melchizedek.

2267 G. E. Sterling, Philo, p. 297.

2268 Eusebius, History, 2:17, p. 50.

2269 A. J. M. Wedderburn, Baptism, especially pp. 90-163.

2270 L. T. Johnson, Religious Experience, pp. 84-85 n. 72.

2271 See a refutation of this position in J. Z. Smith, Drudgery.

2272 E. R. Goodenough, Summary, p. 198.

2273 Mark 1:10.

2274 Mark 15:38.

2275 D. Ulansey, Heavenly Veil.

2276 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 444.

2277 See W. W. Isenberg, Philip, 85:1-20, p. 159.

2278 G. W. MacRae, House of Revelation, pp. 185-186.

Philip assumes throughout that the true spiritual realities are knowable only through images, as it calls them. Throughout the work words are presented as images of divine things, always imperfect images, never telling us the truth about divine things but only giving us some suggestions. The writer understands ritual action also to function in the same imagistic way.

Nibley discusses the way in which accounts of the temple-related doctrines and ordinances revealed by Jesus Christ to his apostles during the forty days following his resurrection, if acknowledged at all, have often been dismissed by Christian scholars as “a complete misunderstanding perpetrated by the Gnostics.”²²⁷⁹ Johnson goes further than most scholars by providing an ample, if somewhat selective, review of the pagan, Jewish, and Christian sources that provided a climate for stages of initiation beyond baptism, but then, incorrectly, presents Paul as one who opposed such rites.²²⁸⁰

- E-241 Notwithstanding this important distinction, the Prophet Joseph Smith taught that “[a]ll priesthood is Melchizedek, but there are different portions or degrees of it.”²²⁸¹ In this sense, the Aaronic priesthood is rightly characterized as being “an appendage to the greater, or the Melchizedek priesthood.”²²⁸²

- E-242 Summarizing sources that describe having “seen God” as an identifying attribute of true Israel among some Jews and early Christians, Barker writes:²²⁸³

When the Christians were emphasizing that they had seen the Glory,²²⁸⁴ the name “Israel” was said to mean “the one who has seen God,” and so the emphasis in the Christmas stories was a claim to be the new Israel. Philo often used the expression: it was fundamental to his Judaism. He never explained it nor argued for it; it was something he could assume. “The nation that sees, that is, Israel”,²²⁸⁵ “For Israel means seeing God.”²²⁸⁶ “The sons of Israel”²²⁸⁷ for him became “the sons of the seeing one.”²²⁸⁸ Almost all the early Christian writers adopted this explanation of Israel and claimed it for the Church.²²⁸⁹ It was used in prayers: “For by [Christ] thou hast brought home the Gentiles to thyself for a peculiar people, the true Israel beloved of God and seeing God”; “the God of Israel, Thy people which truly see and which have believed in Christ.”²²⁹⁰

- E-243 Though it is not uncommon to equate the attainment of the celestial kingdom with the blessings of exaltation, Elder John A. Widtsoe, among others, made it clear that “all who enter the celestial glory do not necessarily receive full exaltation therein.”²²⁹¹ Elder Orson Hyde explained that the blessing of exaltation is reserved for “kings and priests... [who] have received their washings and anointings in the temple of God on this earth; [and] have been chosen, ordained, and anointed kings and priests, to reign as such in the resurrection of the just. Such as have not received the fulness of the priesthood, (for the fulness of the priesthood includes the authority of both king and priest) and have not been anointed and ordained in the temple of the Most High, may obtain salvation in the celestial kingdom, but not a celestial crown.”²²⁹² As with every other ordinance of the gospel, those who live to merit the blessings of the fulness of the priesthood but do not have an opportunity to receive them in this life will receive them at some future time.²²⁹³

Regarding this subject, the Prophet Joseph Smith wrote:

2279 H. W. Nibley, Return, p. 66; cf. H. W. Nibley, Evangelium.

2280 L. T. Johnson, Religious Experience, pp. 69-103.

2281 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 5 January 1841, p. 180.

2282 D&C 107:14.

2283 M. Barker, Christmas, pp. 89-90.

2284 E.g., Luke 2:30-32, 3:6; John 1:14; cf. Isaiah 40:5, 49:6, 52:10, 56:12; Zechariah 2:10.

2285 See Philo, Dreams 2:44, p. 391; cf. 1:71, p. 380.

2286 Philo, Preliminary Studies 51, p. 308.

2287 Leviticus 15:31.

2288 Philo, Interpretation 3:15, p. 311.

2289 See C. T. R. Hayward, Israel, pp. 156-193.

2290 A Roberts et al., Apostolic Constitutions 7:1:36, p. 474 and 8:2:15, p. 491. See M. Barker, Temple Themes, pp. 154-160.

2291 J. A. Widtsoe, Are All Exalted, p. 278; cf. S. W. Kimball, Miracle, pp. 243-244; S. W. Kimball, Importance, pp. 5-6; B. R. McConkie, New Witness, pp. 144-145.

2292 O. Hyde, Diagram, p. 23. Reprinted in J. Smith, Jr., Words, pp. 298-299 n. 8.

2293 Cf. e.g., D&C 137:7-9. Moreover, President Brigham Young taught that some ordinances cannot be received in mortal life: “We will operate here, in all the ordinances of the house of God which pertain to this side the veil, and those who pass beyond and secure to themselves a resurrection pertaining to the lives will go on and receive more and more, more and more, and will receive one after another until they are crowned Gods, even the sons of God” (B. Young, 24 August 1872, p. 138).

In the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees; and in order to obtain the highest [i.e., exaltation as a priest and king after the order of Melchizedek], a man must [first, as a prerequisite,] enter into this order of the priesthood [meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage [i.e., Abrahamic degree]]; and if he does not, he cannot obtain it [i.e., exaltation]. He may enter into the other [i.e., celestial glory corresponding to the Mosaic degree], but that is the end of his kingdom; he cannot have an increase [i.e., posterity].²²⁹⁴

An alternate conception of the three degrees in the celestial kingdom could be imagined. In an 1843 discourse, the Prophet Joseph Smith referred to “three grand orders of priesthood” referred to in Hebrews chapter 7.²²⁹⁵ The three orders mentioned at that time were Levitical (“priests to administer in outward ordinance, made without an oath”), Patriarchal (Abrahamic), and Melchizedek (“kings and priests of the Most High God,” “power and authority over that of Abraham”).²²⁹⁶ (Incidentally, Seaich suggests that an enigmatic statement in the Testament of Levi (“your posterity shall be divided into three offices as a sign of the glory of the Lord who is coming”²²⁹⁷) may refer to these same three orders.²²⁹⁸) It could be argued that these three orders of the priesthood correspond to the “three heavens or degrees” in the celestial glory mentioned previously.²²⁹⁹ However, it is difficult to imagine that receiving the higher priesthood would not be a requirement for the inhabitants of even the lowest degree of the celestial kingdom “where God and Christ dwell,”²³⁰⁰ since without the higher priesthood, we are told, “no man can see the face of God, and live.”²³⁰¹

E-244 As in the writings of Philo, where selected characters from Genesis represent “a general type of... religious experience,”²³⁰² the fact that certain patriarchs (Moses, Abraham, Melchizedek) are associated in the Doctrine and Covenants with degrees of the higher priesthood does not, of course, deprive them of their primary status as important historical figures.²³⁰³

E-245 Cooper rightfully recognized the “far-reaching consequence” of the centrality of eternal family relations to Mormon temple theology. Contrasting the Puritan and LDS concepts of the Abrahamic covenant, he wrote:

The Puritan process of salvation ultimately required severance from one’s family. John Bunyan’s (1628-1688) Christian could not begin his quest for salvation without leaving behind his wife and children...²³⁰⁴ In contrast, a Mormon man would, according to Joseph Smith, take his wife and children with him in his search for eternal life, achieving salvation interdependently.²³⁰⁵

E-246 In his discourse of 27 August 1843, the Prophet implied that Moses received the fulness of the Melchizedek priesthood, saying that “God cursed the children of Israel because they would not receive the last law from Moses,” and also that the “law revealed to Moses in Horeb never was revealed to the children of Israel as a nation.”²³⁰⁶

E-247 Jewish tradition held that Adam was created out of earth taken from the temple site of Mount Moriah,²³⁰⁷ and that he returned to dwell on Mount Moriah when he was cast out of the Garden of Eden.²³⁰⁸ Some saw the land as the Garden of Eden itself.²³⁰⁹ Here also tradition records that Adam erected an altar and made offerings.²³¹⁰

2294 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 16 May 1843, 300-301, comments in italics are mine. See D&C 131:1-4.

2295 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 27 August 1843, p. 322.

2296 Ibid., pp. 322-323.

2297 H. C. Kee, Testaments, Levi 8:11, p. 791.

2298 J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, p. 877 n. 699.

2299 See, e.g., J. F. McConkie et al., Revelations, p. 1053.

2300 D&C 76:112.

2301 D&C 84:22.

2302 R. Goldenberg, Origins, p. 112.

2303 R. S. Eccles, Pilgrimage, p. 55.

2304 J. Bunyan, Progress, pp. 23-24.

2305 R. E. Cooper, Promises, pp. 115-116.

2306 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 27 August 1843, pp. 322-323; cf. J. Smith, Jr., Words, 27 August 1843, pp. 243-247; A. Ehat et al., in ibid., pp. 303-304 n. 21.

2307 W. G. Braude, Midrash on Psalms, 92:6, 2:113; J. Neusner, Genesis Rabbah 1, 14:8:1, p. 156; M.-A. Ouaknin et al., Rabbi Éliézer, 11, p. 78; cf. G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, Latin Addenda 36 [52], p. 96E.

2308 W. G. Braude, Midrash on Psalms, 92:6, 2:113.

2309 O. S. Wintermute, Jubilees, 8:19, p. 72.

2310 W. G. Braude, Rabbati, 43:2, 2:756.

There are “contradictory hadiths” in Islam about whether the Garden of Eden was earthly, heavenly, or something in between.²³¹¹ Of Muslim sources taking the first position, some regard Mount Moriah in Jerusalem both as the site of the Garden of Eden and of the final judgment:

Muslim tradition tells us that a black stone embedded in the floor beneath the Dome of the Rock is supposed to be the entrance to Paradise. The elaborate mosaics that fill the interior of the shrine feature repetitive trees, luxuriant foliage, bushes, jewels and floral motifs reminiscent of the Garden of Eden... A tree on the platform of the Haram is associated with God’s original work in the world. In Jewish and Muslim tradition, the rivers of Eden flow below the Temple Mount. Creation originated here, an idea reflected in the designation omphales mundi (“navel of the world”), referring to the notion that god created the world in the same way that a human being was created, beginning with the navel. Jubilees, too, set the navel of the world on Mount Zion, by that time identified as the Temple Mount. At the end of time, the Last Judgment will take place here and access to Paradise will be available here. Although Jerusalem is not mentioned by name in the Qur’an, the phrase “from a nearby place”²³¹² was interpreted early on to refer to the Holy City. The passage, literally “the day whereon the crier shall call from a nearby place,” was interpreted to refer to the archangel who, on the day of the Resurrection, will call from Jerusalem.²³¹³

At least one Christian source has Adam’s creation taking place on Golgotha,²³¹⁴ while an addendum to the Latin Life of Adam and Eve said that God “made and formed Adam in that place where Jesus was born, that is, in the city of Bethlehem, which is in the center of the earth.”²³¹⁵

In the Histoyre du Mechique, Tamoanchan, usually associated in Aztec sources with a primeval paradisiacal garden, is the name of a cave where humankind is created.²³¹⁶

- E-248 Latin and Greek versions of the Life of Adam and Eve, along with Jubilees, record Adam’s request to be buried “opposite the great Garden of God near his dwelling (opposite the Garden of God in the field of his dwelling?).”²³¹⁷
- E-249 Latter-day Saints associate various events in the postlapsarian life of Adam with temple sites—in this case, in the state of Missouri rather than in the Near East.²³¹⁸
- E-250 Traditions about Adam’s burial in the cave of Machpelah are preserved in Jewish sources²³¹⁹ that discuss the origin of these traditions in an early exegesis of Joshua 14:15, and are included in Wilkinson’s brief mention of other notables who were thought by some to have been buried there.²³²⁰ Note that the Bordeaux Pilgrim did not report the tradition of Adam’s burial in Machpelah in connection with a visit in 333.²³²¹ The Zohar reports both Adam’s discovery and Abraham’s rediscovery of the burial place:

What did Adam do? He dug a cave, and hid himself inside together with his wife. How did he know? He saw a ray of light glinting on that spot, gleaming from the Garden of Eden, and desired a desire for his grave. Right there is a site bordering the gate of the Garden of Eden.²³²²

“And Abraham ran after the calf.”²³²³ The calf had run away from Abraham and entered the cave of Machpelah. When Abraham entered after it, he saw Adam and his mate lying asleep on the couches, lamps burning above them, and their bodies giving forth a goodly odor, sweet in savor.

2311 Porch of Wisdom Cultural Institution, Faith and Reason, p. 161. See the overview of Moses 3, p. 143.

2312 Qur’an 50:41.

2313 H. Shanks, Temple Mount, pp. 22-23.

2314 M. D. Gibson, Rolls 1901, p. 111. See Endnote E-132, p. 735.

2315 G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis, Latin Addenda 38 [56], p. 96E.

2316 Cited in E. Q. Keber, Telleriano-Remensis, p. 183.

2317 Ibid., Latin 45:2, p. 74E; cf. Greek 40:6, p. 89E; O. S. Wintermute, Jubilees, 4:29, p. 63. There is a widespread tradition of Adam and Eve’s burial in the cave of Machpelah. See Endnote E-250, p. 769.

2318 See Figure 6-2, p. 457 and Excursus 39: The Location of Adam-ondi-Ahman, p. 623. About the Christian tradition of Adam’s burial beneath Golgotha, see Figure E36-2, p. 616.

2319 E.g., M. McNamara, Targum Neofiti, 23:2 and n. 1, p. 120; J. Neusner, Genesis Rabbah 2, 58:4, p. 297; M.-A. Ouaknin et al., Rabbi Éliézer, 20, pp. 127-128; 36, p. 224; H. Schwartz, Tree, 445, pp. 343-344, 639, pp. 504-506. See P. Van der Horst, Adam’s Tomb.

2320 J. Wilkinson, in Egeria, Travels, p. 92 nn. 6-7. See also A. S-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, p. 180.

2321 Bordeaux Pilgrim, in ibid., 599, p. 34.

2322 D. C. Matt, Zohar 1, Be-Reshit 1:57b, pp. 326-327; cf. D. C. Matt, Zohar 2, Be-Reshit 1:27b-1:128b, pp. 219-223; D. C. Matt, Zohar 4, Bo 2:39b, pp. 190-191.

2323 Genesis 18:7.

This is how it came about that Abraham was eager to have the cave of Machpelah as a burying place.²³²⁴

Today, within the edifice built by Herod the Great to commemorate the burial of the patriarchs (The Tomb of the Patriarchs, Ma'arat HaMachpela (Hebrew), or Haram al-Khalil (Arabic)), one can still see a palm tree adjacent to the northwest corner of the inner courtyard marking the spot of “Adam’s Grave.”²³²⁵ At that place also may be found “Adam’s footprint” (Makaam Adam), set in an unmarked niche within the chamber where Abraham’s cenotaph is viewed from the Muslim side of the monument (locals will sometimes point this out as “Muhammad’s footprint”). At present, no access to the caves beneath the monument is allowed, though very limited explorations took place in 1968 and 1981.²³²⁶

Some Muslim traditions say that, on account of his large stature, Adam’s head lies at Machpelah and his feet at the Dome of the Rock (or vice versa).²³²⁷ Other Muslim traditions have Adam buried in India, in a “Treasure Cave”²³²⁸ on Mount Abu Qabis in Mecca,²³²⁹ in Jerusalem, or alternately in a location “east of Paradise in a village which was the first village on the earth.”²³³⁰ At least one source reports Eve being buried at Jeddah, Saudi Arabia.²³³¹ This reputed site can still be visited today, though it was sealed in 1975 to prevent Muslims from inappropriately praying there.

E-251 Statke, a term related to the action of dripping, was probably a precious oil produced by pressing fresh myrrh.

E-252 Exodus 24:9 specifically names Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu going up with Moses, while Exodus 24:13 mentions Joshua. Schubert concludes that only “those five persons enter the Tent of Meeting who had experienced the epiphany on Mount Sinai according to Exodus 24:9-18.”²³³² However, I take the five to be entering the Tabernacle as forerunners, their poses suggesting an invitation to Christian believers to follow them.

Schubert notes that the “representation of the Tabernacle at the foot of Sinai recalls the fresco in the Via Latina catacomb where below the scene of Moses receiving the Law on Sinai is a portrayal of Moses leading the Israelites to a temple sanctuary. It is almost certain that this temple sanctuary is to be understood from the rabbinic interpretation which takes Isaiah 2:2 as a cipher for Mount Sinai.”²³³³

E-253 A fifteenth-century text mentions additional gifts beyond the three:

... outstanding purple [gems], shining brilliantly, a bright pearl, a crown of fresh grasses which would never wither, but would bear bright crimson flowers always, a wreath, also, in which were entwined various fresh grasses with crimson flowers, which seemed as if they had just been cut, and a shining new linen cloth, the equal or like of which was not to be found. The latter shone so brightly that people saw flashes of lightning rise from it as from a brilliant star, or as sparks from a mighty fire when its heat is at its most intense. They brought, furthermore, a royal scepter²³³⁴ with gems of crystal and of precious stones, the equivalent or like of which have never been found..., except, perhaps, the firmament with [its] many stars, and the sun and moon in it like precious stones. Fire-trailing sparks darted from them as from a brilliant constellation... And they gave other gifts, such as were never found in the world.²³³⁵

In an Islamic source, Adam placed two items in a coffer: “a white cloth from Paradise” on which Adam saw a vision of the descendants of Cain and Seth, and “a handful of hair from his beard” which, so long as it remained black, would be a portent of victory over their enemies. He gave the coffer along with his ring to Seth.²³³⁶

2324 H. N. Bialik et al., Legends, 3:37, p. 35, citing M.-A. Ouaknin et al., Rabbi Éliézer, 36, p. 224; cf. Zohar Chadash, Ruth 79:4.

2325 N. Arnon, Machpela, p. 13. See Figure 4-12, p. 230.

2326 N. Arnon, Machpela, pp. 8-9.

2327 J. E. Hanauer, Folklore, p. 12; Ibu Asakir in B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, p. 34.

2328 al-Tabari, Creation, 1:162, p. 333.

2329 I. Ibn Kathir, Stories, p. 54; G. Weil, Legends, p. 48.

2330 M. Ibn Ishaq ibn Yasar, Making, p. 41; cf. A. al-Tha’labi, Lives, p. 81.

2331 M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, p. 85.

2332 K. Schubert, Jewish Pictorial, p. 248.

2333 Ibid., p. 248.

2334 See Excursus 51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple, p. 658. See Endnote E-181, p. 752.

2335 M. Herbert, Irish Apocrypha, p. 39.

2336 M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, p. 82. See also p. 347 n. 69.

- E-254 Though the visit of the Magi is generally portrayed as having taken place later in Nazareth, the Magi in the *Protoevangelium of James*²³³⁷ “come to pay homage at the Bethlehem cave—an interesting mixture of Matthew and Luke”²³³⁸ and a subtle allusion to Adam’s Cave of Treasures.

The memory and significance of the visit of the Magi was preserved in the 15th-century French Christmas carol Noël Nouvelet.²³³⁹ When the three “kings” bring their gifts, the birthplace in Bethlehem—here portrayed as a small garden—is transformed into an earthly Eden:

L’un portait l’or, et l’autre myrrhe aussi. (One brought gold, and the other myrrh also.)
Et l’autre encens, qui faisait bon senti. (And the other incense, that gave off a good odor.)
Le paradis semblait le jardin. (Like Paradise seemed the little garden.)

- E-255 For example, just prior to his death, Adam is depicted as having described these “tokens” and their Messianic significance to his son, and then saying, “And now, O Seth, my son, behold I have revealed unto thee hidden mysteries, which God had revealed unto me.”²³⁴⁰

- E-256 The theme of the restoration of the true temple through Jesus Christ can also be seen in the purported reburial of Adam’s bones at the site of the Crucifixion, which then became “the second Cave of Treasures.”²³⁴¹ See Figure 36-1, p. 616.

- E-257 The “Church of the Disciples and of the Ascension” (later the “Church of Eleona,” from Greek elaion = “of olives”) was dedicated in 334. One year earlier, the Bordeaux pilgrim had written: “On the Mount of Olives, where the Lord taught before his passion, a basilica has been built by the command of Constantine.”²³⁴² By 390, a new basilica a short distance further up the hill had been dedicated to the Ascension alone. Both churches were set afire and razed early in the 7th century, but only the Ascension church was rebuilt at the time of the Crusaders. “All that remains of this second Church is a small shelter now in the possession of the El Tour mosque and called the Mosque of the Ascension.”²³⁴³

In the 12th century, based on late traditions associating Luke’s account of the Lord’s Prayer²³⁴⁴ with Mark’s record of Jesus’ teachings about prayer on the Mount of Olives,²³⁴⁵ the Crusaders erected the Pater Noster (“Our Father”) church near the original site of the Eleona church.²³⁴⁶ Crusader pilgrims reported having seen the Lord’s Prayer inscribed on plaques. Assisted by the French architect Eugène Viollet-le-Duc, the Princess of La Tour D’Auvergne (Aurélien de Bossi) built a new cloister and monastery on fifteen acres in 1870-1874. The site is now maintained by the French Carmelite sisters. Ceramic tile plaques on the walls of the grounds and the cloister feature translations of the Lord’s Prayer in more than 150 languages.

The Grotto of the Teachings had been buried underneath the ruins of the Eleona Church, and eventually the traces of both disappeared. In 1870, the location of the Byzantine church was found by Clermont-Ganeau, and in 1910 the archaeologist uncovered the partially collapsed grotto, which at some indeterminate date had been connected with a first-century tomb containing a series of funerary niches (kokhim).²³⁴⁷ The first stones for a new Eleona basilica were placed in 1920, which unfortunately caused severe damage to the grotto. Other construction difficulties, including a severe earthquake in 1927, eventually halted the work. Finally in 1972, an open-air basilica containing a simple altar and a stone chair was dedicated above the grotto.²³⁴⁸

- E-258 Most LDS commentators derive the word “telestial” from the Greek telos.²³⁴⁹ In the context of a description of the lowest kingdom of glory, Nibley explains that the Greek term “means farthest 2337 E. Hennecke et al., Protoevangelium, 18:1, 21:1-4, pp. 383, 386.

2338 R. E. Brown, Birth, p. 197; cf. E. A. W. Budge, Cave, pp. 35, 211.

2339 H. Keyte et al., Noël Nouvelet, p. 299, spelling modernized.

2340 S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 2:8, p. 116.

2341 S. Ruzer, Pilgrimage.

2342 Cited in Egeria, Travels, 595, p. 32; cf. Egeria’s account of his visits during Holy Week in 384 in Egeria, Travels, 30:3, p. 151; 33:2, p. 152. See also A. Storme, Mont des Oliviers, pp. 33-34.

2343 O. Englebert, Grotto, p. 3.

2344 Luke 11:1-4.

2345 Mark 11:25-26.

2346 A. Storme, Mont des Oliviers, pp. 35-38.

2347 Ibid., pp. 28-33.

2348 Ibid., pp. 42-43. For more on the history of Eleona, see O. Englebert, Grotto; A. Storme, Mont des Oliviers; L.-H. Vincent, Eléona.

2349 For an excellent discussion of the use of the term in Greek, Jewish (including Philo), and Christian settings, see H. W. Attridge, Hebrews, pp. 83-87.

removed, as distant as you can get, what the Arabs call the aqsa. Joseph Smith coined that word, and he couldn't have used a better one – the telestial, the farthest away of all the worlds [from God].”²³⁵⁰

In his explanation of the meaning of “telestial,”²³⁵¹ Miller emphasizes the sense in which telos may mean “end” or “completion” and applies it to scriptural descriptions of the resurrection:

[Telestial] is used in connection with the Telestial Kingdom because it is the last resurrection of the saved that happens at the end of the world when Jesus has completed and perfected his work. I think this is evident in the following verse from the New Testament:

22 For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

23 But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming.

24 Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power.²³⁵²

My commentary on these verses:

All be made alive] All will be resurrected just like Jesus was.

In his own order] The word for order refers to temporal order or rank. Each person will be resurrected in the order or according to their rank in salvation.

Christ the firstfruits] Christ is the first to be resurrected in time, he is also the highest in rank.

afterward they that are Christ's at his coming] The next to be resurrected are those who are resurrected at Christ's second coming. This is the first resurrection which consists of those who are resurrected in the morning (the heirs of the celestial kingdom) and those who are resurrected afterwards (the Terrestrial Kingdom).

Then cometh the end] “The end” is telos in the Greek. Then (after the other resurrections) comes the telos resurrection. This is where the word telestial comes from. It occurs after the millennium when Christ “shall have delivered up the kingdom to God.” It denotes completion, ending, perfection.

With this understanding, D&C 76 takes on a new meaning.

[Telestial inhabitants] are they who shall not be redeemed from the devil until the last resurrection, until the Lord, even Christ the Lamb, shall have finished his work.²³⁵³

[Telestial inhabitants] are they who are cast down to hell and suffer the wrath of Almighty God, until the fulness of times, when Christ shall have subdued all enemies under his feet, and shall have perfected his work; when he shall deliver up the kingdom, and present it unto the Father.²³⁵⁴

Raising the possibility of a Latin rather than Greek derivation of “telestial,” Tvedtnes writes:²³⁵⁵

In a private communication, John Gee has noted that, while the terms rendered celestial (“heavenly”) and terrestrial (“earthly”) are often paired in the New Testament, only in Philippians 2:10 do they form a trio of terms. The third term used in that passage is katachthonios, literally “under the ground.” Since the terms “celestial” and “terrestrial” derive from Latin rather than Greek (caelum, “heaven,” and terra, “earth”), Gee suggests that a Latin term may lie behind “telestial” as well. He proposes the Latin word tellus, “earth, globe, land, ground.”

E-259 Arguing that the rites themselves were relatively unchanging over the centuries, Sourvinou-Inwood writes: “Though we cannot unproblematically use evidence from late periods for reconstructing earlier practices, implicitly assuming there had been no change, the presumption here, I suggest, should be that the basic schema of the ritual had not changed. For at the very center of the Mysteries was the belief that these rites had been revealed by Demeter. Such divine revelation of ritual is extraordinarily rare in Greek religion, and created certain constraints on fundamental change and the construction 2350 H. W. Nibley, Three Degrees, pp. 308-309.

2351 A. I. Miller, Telestial.

2352 1 Corinthians 15:22-24.

2353 D&C 76:85.

2354 D&C 76:106-107; cf. 1 Corinthians 15:24.

2355 J. A. Tvedtnes, Three Degrees, n. 1.

of change-supporting mythopoea [= myth-making].”²³⁵⁶

E-260 Unfortunately, the English transliteration of the name obscures its meaning. The last two English “e’s” correspond to the Greek letter eta (long “e”) and not epsilon (short “e”); thus, the root matar relates to “mother” and not “measure.”

E-261 The requirement of secrecy imposed on initiates to the mysteries:

... was so rigorous that in 200 BCE, when two young men from the distant town of Akarnania innocently entered the sanctuary at Eleusis during the enactment of a mystery festival and betrayed themselves by asking questions about the rites, they were promptly executed.²³⁵⁷ Of the Eleusinian mysteries, George Mylonas writes that “the last Hierophant carried with him to the grave the secrets which had been transmitted orally for untold generations, from one high priest to the next.”²³⁵⁸

Controversy about the nature of the rites was an inevitable consequence of this secrecy. Brumfield writes:

The Eleusinian Mysteries have occasioned more scholarly debate than any other ancient festival. It is probably safe to assume that no possible theory or permutation of theories regarding the origin and significance of this rite remains to be discovered or invented. It seems that every possible avenue of explanation, no matter how outlandish or prosaic, has already been explored either in antiquity or in modern times.²³⁵⁹

In recent decades, much more has become known about the relationship between Eleusis and other sites developed for similar purposes.²³⁶⁰ See Meyer²³⁶¹ for a valuable anthology of sources describing the variety of ancient mystery religions.

E-262 Note that Kerényi takes exception to any suggestion that the rites of Eleusis included a drama,²³⁶² however more recent studies seem to confirm Mylonas’ general views on the matter.²³⁶³

E-263 “The importance of physical vision is indicated by the terms used: a mystes [i.e., first-time participant who received the Lower Mysteries] is one who closes his eyes, and epoptes [i.e., later participant in the Greater Mysteries] one who sees.”²³⁶⁴ For a detailed survey of the use of these and related terms, see Clinton.²³⁶⁵

Mylonas discusses evidence of purification rites enacted through “the sprinkling or pouring of water” that were to be performed prior to the receipt of the Mysteries for those who had been “tainted with blood.”²³⁶⁶

E-264 Regarding the term “token,” Compton writes:

There are a number of words in Greek and Latin that mean “token” in recognition drama—e.g., anagnosmata (“things for making known again”), spargana (the swaddling wrappings of the lost child, often figured), semeia (“signs, marks, signals”). But one of the most interesting token-words is the basis for our word “symbol”: symbolon (singular; plural: symbola), found as a name for tokens both in recognition and mystery. This word means “things thrown together” (i.e., something thrown together after it has been once broken apart, from ballo, “thrown,” and sun-, “with or together”). Liddell, Scott, and Jones, in their Greek-English Lexicon, define it thus: “tally, i.e., each of two halves or corresponding pieces of an astragalos [knucklebone] or other object, which two xenoi [guest-friends], or any two contracting parties, broke between them, each party keeping one piece, in order to have proof of the identity of the presenter of the other.” Both halves represent their two owners, and each is a symbol of identity, the individual, parted; the halves “thrown together,” unified, are the symbol of two separate identities merging into one. So the 2356 C. Sourvinou-Inwood, Festival, p. 28.

2357 See C. Kerényi, Eleusis, p. 118; G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, p. 225.

2358 S. D. Ricks et al., King, p. 240. See G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, p. 281.

2359 A. C. Brumfield, Festivals, p. 192.

2360 M. B. Cosmopoulos, Mysteries.

2361 M. W. Meyer, Mysteries.

2362 C. Kerényi, Eleusis, pp. 26-27.

2363 E.g., C. Sourvinou-Inwood, Festival, pp. 29-30.

2364 A. C. Brumfield, Festivals, p. 199.

2365 K. Clinton, Stages.

2366 G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, pp. 242-243.

symbolon is a precise image both for absolutely unique individuality and perfectly joined unity. No other parts would fit the two symbolon halves; paradoxically, their unique identity is what creates their complete unity as represented by the unified token. It is also significant that the perfect fitting together is dependent on a previous breaking.

Later in the semantic development of the word, it came to be applied to “any token serving as proof of identity”—in which category we find the dramatic recognition token—and then developed on to other abstract and technical ideas: treaty, symbol, allegory, warrant, ticket. In the recognition symbolon, there is no longer the actual two-part, physically broken token, but the token remains a symbol of dual identity, “thrown together” after a parting.²³⁶⁷

E-265 For example, “Theseus received his name from the ‘placing of the tokens’ (*dia ten ton gnorismaton thesin*²³⁶⁸). Odysseus received his name from the man in whose care he would later receive a wound that became a recognition token, the scar created by the wild boar,²³⁶⁹ and Oedipus received his name from the scars produced by his ankles being pierced when he was exposed.”²³⁷⁰

E-266 Compton also reports instances of the recognition token in Chinese and Japanese fiction.²³⁷¹

E-267 Compton reports:

Some later authors thought of Eleusis and the other mysteries in terms of the soul myth, the descent and ascent of the soul. Sallustius (circa 4th century CE) wrote that the rape of Proserpine [= Kore, Persephone] “signifies the descent of souls” (kathodos esti ton psukhon).²³⁷² If the Orphic poets believed that the incarnated spirit was imprisoned or entombed, and if there was significant Orphic influence at Eleusis by the time of Periclean Athens (and there is good evidence that the Eleusinian and the Orphic had interpenetrated some time before this, under the rule of Peististratos), it would be natural for them to see the “death” of Persephone as their “death”: incarnation.

So too Plotinus likens the soul, after a descent, approaching Good and the Godly to a mystery initiate descending and ascending:

To attain it is for those that will take the upward path, who will set all their forces towards it, who will divest themselves of all that we have put on in our descent—so, to those that approach the Holy Celebrations of the Mysteries, there are appointed purifications and the laying aside of the garments worn before, and the entry in nakedness.²³⁷³

Details about expectations of initiates with respect to the afterlife can be found on:

... Greek texts on gold designed to protect the soul after death [that] have been turning up in graves throughout the Mediterranean since 1835.... Certain repeated themes and images... stand out, especially the anticipation of a journey to the underworld, a confrontation with a divine gatekeeper, a landscape with trees and water, and formulae for ritual responses. The conclusion to be drawn from the total collection is that those who took such texts to the grave (or their relatives) had confidence in entitlement to special treatment after death. In one way or another, the texts assume that eligibility was established by ritual and confirmed after death by recalling or reciting esoteric information that could have been learned only through that ritual experience.²³⁷⁴

Texts combine... recitation of ritual phrases with assertions of identity. The soul engages in dialogue. Divine stewards of the other world question new arrivals and expect answers. They ask: “Why are you here?” “Who are you?” “How are you?” The tablets themselves also make pronouncements and give instructions[, e.g.,] “Blessed and most happy you will be god instead of mortal.”²³⁷⁵

Literary sources make it clear that, in addition to the initiation itself, “standards for social behavior were part of the preview of the Mysteries.”²³⁷⁶ For example, in Aristophanes’ Frogs, at the moment

2367 T. M. Compton, Handclasp, pp. 612–613.

2368 See Plutarch, Lives, Theseus 3–4, p. 3.

2369 See Homer, Odyssey, 19:392–466, pp. 322–325.

2370 T. M. Compton, Token, n. 16. See Sophocles, Oedipus Rex, 1031–36, cited in Compton.

2371 T. M. Compton, Token, n. 37.

2372 P. Sallustius, Gods, 4, pp. 10–11.

2373 T. M. Compton, Token. See Plotinus, Enneads, 1:7, cited in Compton.

2374 S. G. Cole, Landscapes, pp. 200–201. See also J. Assman, Death, p. 207.

2375 Ibid., p. 207.

2376 Ibid., p. 199.

when “Dionysos walks up to the door of Hades as he prepares to cross the last boundary between the living and the dead,” a chorus of initiates explains in song “the importance of acting with justice toward outsiders and fellow citizens.”²³⁷⁷

The same Dionysos, who arguably played an explicit role in the Eleusinian mysteries,²³⁷⁸ is sometimes portrayed as a mediator for later souls who take the same path:

He is the god for those critical transitional moments right up to and including the interchange at Pluto’s door. A fourth-century vase now in Toledo, in fact, depicts Dionysos at precisely this moment, stepping up to the entrance to the House of Hades and shaking hands with Hades himself... Dionysos seems to be negotiating here on behalf of his Theban cousins... Whatever the result, the important image is the gesture at the center, the handclasp, a gestural symbola that joins Dionysos and Hades. The two have come to an agreement.²³⁷⁹

E-268 One thinks also of Pandora, the Eve of Greek mythology, who brought death into the world when, curious about the contents of the box she had received from the Olympian gods as a gift, could not resist opening it to see the contents.²³⁸⁰

E-269 The theme of the ark/altar as a traveling repository carrying the remains of the righteous to their final resting place is reinforced by the Genesis account of Joseph’s request to have his bones carried back to the land of his fathers,²³⁸¹ and by the story of Adam’s request for interment in the Cave of Treasures and his later reburial at the place of Jesus’ Crucifixion, “the second Cave of Treasures.”²³⁸² As Ruzer observes, the significance of the story of Adam’s burial for Christian liturgy can be found in “the table-altar erected over the burial place of Adam in the Cave and ritual swearing by the blood of the slain Abel,” the innocent Abel being a type of Christ.²³⁸³

Although the Old Testament word for Noah’s ark (tebah) differs from the term used for the temple ark, the word used in the Greek New Testament (kibotos) is identical for both, leading Christians to draw parallels between the salvific roles of the two artifacts. Subtle allusions to such imagery can be found in Hebrews 9:4, 11:7; 1 Peter 3:20.

E-270 Davies observes that a given dexiosis scene often “can be interpreted by the viewer in a number of equally valid ways: as parting, reunion or communion, or perhaps in several different ways at once. The motif is ambiguous and flexible.”²³⁸⁴ Closterman highlights the difficulty in many cases of determining not only the family relationships among the individuals depicted, but even which among many figures on a particular monument represents the deceased.²³⁸⁵ In addition to noting the aforementioned problems, Davies describes the difficulties in determining the setting of a particular scene (e.g., the Underworld, the tomb).²³⁸⁶

E-271 Compton does not rule out the possibility that the fan and chest carried by the servant girl “might... be mystery symbols.”²³⁸⁷ A winnowing fan is depicted in the “Eleusis-influenced Lovatelli urn,”²³⁸⁸ and Clement of Alexandria claimed that a chest containing tokens figured in the Eleusinian rites.²³⁸⁹

E-272 Davies records that the earlier meanings continued long past the archaic period:

The handshake was also used in reliefs at Nemrud Dag to link Herakles with late Hellenistic Commagene kings, an indication that the sense of the motif used on late Archaic vases had not ²³⁷⁷ Ibid., pp. 198-199.

²³⁷⁸ E. A. Beach, Mysteries.

²³⁷⁹ S. G. Cole, Landscapes, p. 211.

²³⁸⁰ D. Leeming, World Mythology, pp. 306-307.

²³⁸¹ Genesis 50:24-26. Note that the Hebrew word for the Ark of the Covenant (aron), meaning chest or box, is the same word used for Joseph’s “coffin” (E. Fox, Books of Moses, p. 397 n. Exodus 25:10).

²³⁸² S. Ruzer, Pilgrimage.

²³⁸³ Ibid. See also S. Ruzer, Abel’s Blood.

²³⁸⁴ G. Davies, Handshake, p. 629.

²³⁸⁵ W. E. Closterman, Ideology, pp. 636-637.

²³⁸⁶ G. Davies, Handshake, pp. 628-629.

²³⁸⁷ T. M. Compton, 21 April 2008.

²³⁸⁸ T. M. Compton, Handclasp, p. 615. See discussion and photograph in G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, pp. 205-207, 242, 243, 297, and plate 83.

²³⁸⁹ Clement of Alexandria, Exhortation, 2:21, p. 177.

been forgotten; here, however, it is the monarch whose status is being enhanced by means of the handclasp with Herakles.²³⁹⁰

Compton further elaborates on the salvific nature of the gesture:

While the handclasp, often expresses complete equality (as in the marriage handclasp, one of the most unvarying of Roman marriage rituals, and as in the handclasp used for treaty), here it expresses salvation, the saving and the saved. It is diagonal, not level; Heracles reaches up, Athena reaches down. The goddess will draw the mortal up into heaven. However, the sense of equality is not entirely gone: Heracles enters heaven by having a goddess descend to his level; he has come up to her level, almost. The clasp here symbolizes entrance, liminality, ...but it also emphasizes apotheosis, the entrance into the divine type of life, as it simultaneously suggests the condescension of the god that makes the apotheosis possible.²³⁹¹

E-273 He notes, for example, that:

... in the culminating initiation scene in the Eleusis-influenced Lovatelli urn,²³⁹² there is perhaps a hint of the dexios. As the initiate approaches Demeter sitting on the cista, the goddess's snake rises from her lap to greet the initiate; he extends his right hand for the snake to touch. If, as I have argued, this scene reflects a high point of the mysteries, and if the touching of the snake and the right hand of the initiate is related to the dextrarum iunctio, we may conjecture that a handclasp as token (the snake represents the contents of the cista, the symbola, as well as the presence of the god) took place as part of the initiate's union with the god at Eleusis.²³⁹³

E-274 If not concurring with Goodenough's specific conclusions about the beliefs and practices of the Jewish group who built the synagogue, a majority of scholars would at least accept the more general idea that "[m]ost of the scenes at Dura have some connection to messianic redemption and resurrection."²³⁹⁴ According to Johnson, what neither supporters nor opponents of Goodenough can deny is the:

... pervasive use by Philo of language that takes its origin in the mysteries yet is employed with direct reference to the practice and self-understanding of Judaism. There is no question here of syncretism in the crude sense. Philo engages in the same sort of rejection of the pagan mysteries that we find in The Wisdom of Solomon....²³⁹⁵ What we find in Philo, then, is not a mingling of Judaism and the mysteries, but rather a conceptualization of Judaism as Mystery.²³⁹⁶

Among the very few comments of critics that Neusner deemed "important" is that Goodenough may have overemphasized the distinction between rabbinic and mystical Judaism, which he himself admits should have been represented more as a "confused gradation" than as a dichotomy.²³⁹⁷ Some critics also discount Goodenough's reliance on Philo, seeing the interpretations of the latter as "sui generis and not reflective of what was going on in most Jewish circles of antiquity."²³⁹⁸ While Collins failed to see sufficient evidence for distinctive Jewish mystic ritual, his extensive review of mystic Judaism and its literature largely substantiates and expands upon Goodenough's arguments regarding Jewish mystic philosophy.²³⁹⁹ Gutmann is "fairly certain that the popular Philonic 'mystic Hellenistic' Judaism which... Goodenough imposed on or read into the Dura synagogue paintings would have been totally incomprehensible to the small congregation of probably unsophisticated and unintellectual Jewish merchants and the other Jewish inhabitants residing at Dura."²⁴⁰⁰ Avi-Yonah disagrees with Goodenough's general interpretation of the Dura synagogue paintings as reflecting mystical Judaism, and outlines later findings that have in some cases substantiated and in others seemingly repudiated his arguments relating to specific interpretations.²⁴⁰¹ Additional assessments of 2390 G. Davies, Handshake, p. 630.

2391 T. M. Compton, Handclasp, p. 617.

2392 See G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis, pp. 206-207, and Fig. 83.

2393 T. M. Compton, Handclasp, p. 615.

2394 J. R. Russell, Ezekiel, p. 905.

2395 S. Sandmel et al., Solomon, 14:22-31, p. 109.

2396 L. T. Johnson, Religious Experience, pp. 90-91.

2397 Citing Morton Smith in J. Neusner, Synagogue, p. 56; cf. J. Neusner, Foreword, p. xxxiv. See also J. M. G. Barclay, Diaspora, p. 165 n. 90; J. Gutmann, Introduction, pp. xxiii-xxiv.

2398 L. I. Levine, Judaism, p. 8 n. 6.

2399 J. J. Collins, Athens, pp. 210-260.

2400 J. Gutmann, Introduction, pp. xxii-xxiii.

2401 M. Avi-Yonah, Critique.

Goodenough's methods and interpretation have been summarized elsewhere.²⁴⁰²

Neusner's article contrasting Goodenough's method with that of Kraeling shows how the two preeminent scholars of the Dura Synagogue of their generation were representative exemplars of the two scientific temperaments described by William James: "those that dread above all the risk of possibly mistaking falsehoods for truths, and those that fear even more the risk of missing potentially valuable truths."²⁴⁰³

Neusner observes that when Kraeling's monumental study was published, "it seemed that no substantial revision of earlier ideas on Judaism at this period would be required. Kraeling argued that the paintings might be interpreted for the most part by reference to the so-called rabbinic literature of the period.... [He] argues that the biblical references of the Dura paintings are so obvious that one may begin by reading the Bible... While he makes reference, from time to time, to comparative materials, Kraeling does not in the main feel it necessary to examine the broad iconographic traditions operating in Dura in general, ... for he holds that... the meaning of the synagogue art... can best... be understood within the context of the Judaism known to us from literary sources."²⁴⁰⁴

Goodenough, on the other hand, has persuasively argued "that literary traditions would not have led us to expect any such art as this. We may find statements in talmudic literature which are relevant to the art, but we must in any case after assembling the material determine 'what the art means in itself, before we begin to apply it as proof texts of any possible unrelated statements of the Bible or the Talmud.'"^{2405, 2406} His method in unraveling such enigmas has been aptly summarized as follows: "first with rigorous care to describe 'what one sees,' then with boldness and imagination to propose what may have been happening in the ancient circle that produced what one now sees from afar."²⁴⁰⁷ To be sure, what one sees is necessarily conditioned by everything one already has studied, however, in Goodenough's case, he is prepared to bring not only a deep understanding of Jewish tradition and history, but also what Neusner calls "a majestic array of comparative material"²⁴⁰⁸ that often provide striking illumination of features of the paintings that have been dismissed by other scholars as "mere ornament."²⁴⁰⁹ After an analysis of a series of side-by-side examples of interpretation from the two preeminent scholars of Dura of their generation, Neusner concludes:

... Goodenough demands explanation from a far greater number and variety of details; he sees more in the art and asks more about it. Kraeling uses, in the main, a single body of literature, while Goodenough ranges far and wide in his search for ideas and artistic conventions relevant to Dura synagogue art....

If Kraeling had considered and refuted the kinds of evidence Goodenough regards as relevant, one might be in a clearer position to evaluate his explanation. But where Goodenough provides an abundance of comparative material, both artistic and literary, on the basis of which to evaluate his interpretations, Kraeling provides only a single verse of the Targum, and that, to my way of reading it, by no means conclusive....

If we had begun with a statement of Kraeling's and Goodenough's views of Dura Judaism, without a preliminary examination of some specific problems of interpretation, it seems to me wholly likely that Kraeling's view, and not Goodenough's, would have prevailed. Having seen in... specific instances, however, adumbrations of the very solid basis upon which Goodenough bases his general assertions (in fact, the specific analysis of the art far outweighs the generalizations in both Kraeling's and Goodenough's studies), the reader will be more likely to take seriously a radical reinterpretation of the whole....

With [what we know about how pre-Amoraic Babylonian Judaism was deeply affected by Ezekiel and their probable engagement in the merkavah tradition] in mind, I find it very difficult to question the importance ascribed by Goodenough to mysticism in Dura. I do not argue that his 2402 E. J. Bickerman, Dura Symbolism; S. K. Neumiller, Isaiah; M. Smith, Goodenough's Symbols.

2403 E. A. Beach, Mysteries. See W. James, Will, pp. 26, 94-95n. It would, perhaps, be instructive to compare Goodenough's approach to the approaches of Hugh Nibley and Margaret Barker, both of which have received praise and criticism for similar approaches in their broad and deeply documented comparative studies.

2404 J. Neusner, Judaism at Dura, pp. 156, 157.

2405 E. R. Goodenough, Method, 4:10, cited ibid., p. 158.

2406 J. Neusner, Judaism at Dura, p. 158.

2407 W. A. Meeks, Moses, p. 371.

2408 J. Neusner, Judaism at Dura, p. 167.

2409 Ibid., p. 169.

interpretations are, in detail, correct, for I am not competent to make a judgment on that question. But I do think that the importance of Ezekiel in Dura, and the details, if correctly discerned, of various kinds of traditional mystical speculation, which Goodenough finds on the walls of Dura synagogue, are both wholly congruent to what we know of Babylonian Judaism before circa 220 A.D.²⁴¹⁰

- E-275 Often criticized for his interpretations, Goodenough showed ambivalence in his writings about the terms “initiation” and “mystery,” speaking in his early writings in ways that at least sometimes seemed to imply a literal sense, while in his last writings leaning toward a figurative one.²⁴¹¹ Despite the comprehensiveness of Goodenough’s arguments, the possibility of a literal mystery involving special rites is currently seen as doubtful by all but a small minority of scholars.

The discussion of Fletcher-Louis about how the Qumran community merged both realized and future eschatology in their liturgical concept of an “angelomorphic priesthood” seems relevant to Goodenough’s speculations about Jewish worship at Dura Europos.²⁴¹² At Qumran, Fletcher-Louis envisages the possibility of:

... a liturgical or cultic context for... apotheosis that could, in theory, be entirely compatible with... a real mystical or visionary experience... [I]t is... likely, given the cosmological significance attached to the cult, that the regular, even routinized, worship of a Jewish community which considers itself not heterodox but orthodox, would foster the belief in personal experiences of mystical transcendence and apotheosis.²⁴¹³

After a thorough analysis of their liturgical texts, he concludes that the Qumran community:

... believed that (1) in its original, true and redeemed state humanity is divine (and/or angelic). They also believed that (2) the attainment now, for the redeemed, of this true humanity was conceptually and experientially grounded in their “temple” worship in which ordinary space and time, and therefore human ontology, are transcended. They take for granted a cultic mythology which means that those who enter the worship of the community experience a transfer from earth to heaven, from humanity to divinity and from mortality to immortality... [T]his theological anthropology at Qumran was inherited from older, priestly, tradition which the sectarians carried with them into the wilderness. There is little evidence in the texts that this anthropology is a peculiar product of Qumran sectarianism... Before his Fall Adam was ontologically coterminous with God’s own Glory. His originally divine humanity is recovered when (the true) Israel worships her god in a pure cult—a restored cosmos in miniature. And, so, by the same token she, especially her priesthood, recovers the previously lost Glory of God in the same context. In worship, the boundary between heaven and earth is dissolved and the Qumran community are taken up into the life of that which they worship.²⁴¹⁴

Also supporting Fletcher-Louis’ arguments is the fact that “the stories of Genesis that were popular and utilized at Qumran constitute only a small portion of the biblical book... The heavy emphasis of most of the texts, almost regardless of type, is on the material from the Creation and the Garden of Eden, Enoch, the Watchers, and the Flood through the covenant with Abraham and the Akedah.”²⁴¹⁵

- E-276 This three-part scheme is reflected in temples throughout the ancient world. It was also symbolized in the gathering of Israel at Sinai in three groups: “the masses at the foot of the mountain, where they viewed God’s ‘Presence’ from afar; the Seventy part way up; and Moses at the very top, where he entered directly into God’s Presence.”²⁴¹⁶ Seaich describes this as:²⁴¹⁷

... the arrangement in the Temple, as well, with the mass of pilgrims assembled in the Forecourt, the Aaronic priests sacrificing in the Holy Place, and the High Priest entering the Holy of Holies each year to expiate for Israel’s sins. Philo accordingly thought of this recreated “Sinai experience” as a three-part “journey” along the “Royal Road” leading to God, but with unequal attainments having been

2410 Ibid., pp. 161-162, 169, 173-174, 186-187.

2411 R. S. Eccles, Pilgrimage, pp. 64-65. Goodenough showed the same ambivalence toward religion in general. Sandmel described him as “a deeply religious man... at war with organized religion.... [H]e had a quarrel with organized religion but not with God” (S. Sandmel, Appreciation, pp. 4-5).

2412 C. H. T. Fletcher-Louis, Glory, pp. 150ff.

2413 Ibid., pp. 212-213.

2414 Ibid., p. 476.

2415 M. J. Bernstein, Contours, p. 81.

2416 J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, p. 660; cf. pp. 568-577, 661, 807-809.

2417 J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 807-809; cf. J. Jeremias, Sermon, p. 6; Matthew 6:19-7:27; 1 Corinthians 3:10-15.

achieved by the participants: “At the top, Moses; then those who are capable of traversing the path to higher knowledge; and at the bottom the mass, which is entirely unorganized and must remain at the foot of the mountain, only a few of which will catch even a glimpse... of a path open to higher regions”....²⁴¹⁸ This three-stage spiritual journey was also reflected in the Dead Sea Scrolls by the division of the people into three levels of ecclesiastical attainment: the priests, the Levites, and the laity.... Indeed, Joachim Jeremias also finds this tripartite progress demonstrated by the disciples who approached Christ at the Sermon on the Mount, with the “legalists” at the bottom, castigated for their artificial righteousness,²⁴¹⁹ the self-satisfied “strivers” in the middle, destined for an earthly reward,²⁴²⁰ and the truly spiritual disciples exhorted to build on the foundation of God’s perfect righteousness, rather than the righteousness of men.

To enter the sacred precincts of the temple unworthily not only courts danger for the individual, but also endangers the holiness of the structure itself. Milgrom portrays the temple architecture in terms of three stages of graded power relating to the contamination of sin and its concomitant purification, and acknowledges parallels between the ancient scheme and modern LDS temples: “Like Israel of old, Mormons [hold that] man can, by his sin, defile the temple and force God to abandon his earthly residence.”²⁴²¹

E-277 For example, interpreting a passage from the Gospel of Philip,²⁴²² MacRae writes:²⁴²³

Apart from the details of which way the building faced and so on, the writer is talking about an outer court, a middle court, and the inner court which is the Holy of Holies. The allegory seems to identify these with three different sacraments in the sacramental system of the Valentinian Gnostics. But I think it is more than that. It is more than that because it builds on the concept that one moves toward the divine presence as one moves successively through the outer courts of the temple toward the inner Holy of Holies, to which only the priest has access. Consequently the order in which the courts are identified with sacraments becomes very important. The initiatory rite of baptism is the outermost one. The rite of redemption, whatever that may have consisted of, is the second one. And it is the bridal chamber, the rite of which was the supreme rite for the Valentinian Gnostic, which is the approach into the presence of God himself.

E-278 Recall the series of four kushta handclasps, corresponding to four rites leading to the presence of God, in Mandaean liturgy,²⁴²⁴ and the series of “five signs and five mysteries” expressed by the “right hand” and the “embrace” in Manichaean ritual.²⁴²⁵

E-279 Barker comments:

The idea of resurrection is certainly present; we do not know how resurrection was understood in the first temple, but resurrection was an expectation of the priests; i.e., that they were resurrected when they came into the presence of God at their consecration, and then returned to the world. This would explain Ezekiel returning to the world to face martyrdom.²⁴²⁶

E-280 The scattered bones may suggest the Persian practice of exposing rather than burying the dead, raising the question of correspondence to Zoroastrian resurrection beliefs.²⁴²⁷

E-281 The mountain is surely meant to represent the Mount of Olives, which is destined to cleave in two at a crucial moment in the last days.²⁴²⁸ The Targum to the Song of Songs 8:5 envisions the mountain as the site of the resurrection of all Israel: “When the dead rise, the Mount of Olives will open and all Israel’s dead will come up out of it, also the righteous who have died in captivity: they will come through a subterranean passage and come up from under the Mount of Olives.”²⁴²⁹ 2418 R. Wagner, Gnosis, p. 23.

2419 Matthew 5:21-48.

2420 Matthew 6:1-8.

2421 J. Milgrom, Kinships, pp. 63-64.

2422 W. W. Isenberg, Philip, 69:14-70:4, p. 151.

2423 G. W. MacRae, House of Revelation, pp. 184-185. Compare views in R. Uro, Bridal Chamber.

2424 E. S. Drower, Thousand, pp. 255-256. See Annotated Bibliography, Mandaean Texts, p. 870 and Figure B-1, p. 872.

2425 I. Gardner, Kephalaia, 9, pp. 43-46 See Excursus 51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple, p. 658 and Annotated Bibliography, Manichaean Texts, p. 884.

2426 M. Barker, 11 June 2007.

2427 N. T. Wright, Resurrection, p. 125 and p. 125 n. 169.

2428 Zechariah 14:4; cf. D&C 45:48, 133:20.

2429 Cited in H. Riesenfeld, Resurrection, p. 31; cf. H. Schwartz, Tree, 639, pp. 504-506; R. P. Gordon, Eschatologists,

A similar concept is found in the Scottish ballad Loch Lomond, which is said to be about two soldiers, one to be executed, and the other to be released. The refrain describes how the spirit of the dead soldier traveling by the “low road” of the underworld would reach Scotland before his comrade returning overland on the “high road”:

O ye'll tak' the high road and I'll tak' the low road,
An' I'll be in Scotland afore ye;
But me and my true love will never meet again
On the bonnie, bonnie banks O' Loch Lomond

- E-282 Barker asks: “Were they the trees of Eden? If so, then in the Enoch tradition, the Tree of Knowledge went to Babylon, but the Tree of Life went to ‘the south,’ and was destined to return to Jerusalem.”²⁴³⁰

Note that the date palm—the Tree of Life that was so prominent in Ezekiel’s temple vision²⁴³¹—is not represented in the painting.

Regarding the image of the two trees, observe that in Revelation 22:2, the Tree of Life “is rather ambiguously described in twofold aspect planted either side of the river of the water of life”.²⁴³² “Then he showed me the river of the water of life, sparkling like crystal, flowing from the throne of God and of the Lamb down the middle of the city’s street. On either side of the river stood a Tree of Life.”²⁴³³

Barker describes various approaches to the translation difficulties that surround the strange idea of a twofold Tree of Life in heaven:

One solution might be that the tree bears its fruits “on one side and the other,” but it is more likely that the branches of the tree extend a great distance, or that the tree has its roots in the river, as did Ezekiel’s great tree. The gist would then be that the tree stands in the middle of the city square and the river flows through the square and round the roots of the tree: “The Tree of Life is in the midst of the square with the river [which flows all round it] on this side and that, bearing twelve fruits...” Or perhaps the picture is of a huge tree in the midst of the river spreading out its branches on this side and that. Other first-century CE descriptions of the tree still emphasize the extent of its branches.²⁴³⁴

- E-283 The allusion to the four winds in this passage requires additional explanation. Chester rightly points out that the use of ruach in vv. 5-6, 9-10:

... with the apparent deliberate ambiguity of it as meaning breath, wind or spirit (and the deliberate further play on this in the climax of the section in v. 14, where [ruach] obviously must mean the [divine] Spirit)—can be understood as having deliberate echoes of the Genesis creation narratives...²⁴³⁵ Certainly it could be argued that in this case we should expect [ruach] here (as at v. 14). But that is not an insuperable objection, if, as I wish to argue, there is a deliberate ambiguity involved here in the exact sense of [ruach]: that is, that it can encompass both breath and (divine) spirit, and indeed ‘wind’ as well. This may in fact help us to make sense of 37:9 in relation to 37:5-6. It has been found puzzling that the [ruach] which the prophet is commanded to prophesy is supposed to come from the four [‘winds’]. A possible parallel has been seen with the Enuma Elish,²⁴³⁶ and it is indeed plausible that there is an underlying mythological point of reference. More immediately, however, it is evident that the ‘four winds’... denote the four corners of the earth. The point, then, will be that the [ruach] is given a specifically and deliberately cosmic scope: this would obviously fit also with a supposed link with the Enuma Elish... What is involved, on one level at least, is an allusion to the cosmic scope of the [ruach] of [Moses 2:2], along with its creative force.... Overall, then, the [ruach] of Ezekiel 37 contains at least hints of all these different—although overlapping—dimensions: the breath necessary for human life, the cosmic, creative divine Spirit, and the eschatological divine Spirit.²⁴³⁷

The implication is that, as Chester mentions specifically in reference to Daniel 12:1-3, but also with

p. 308.

2430 M. Barker, 11 June 2007.

2431 Ezekiel 40:16, 22, 26, 31, 34, 37; 41:18-20, 25-26.

2432 J. O’Reilly, Iconography, p. 176.

2433 S. Sandmel et al., New English Bible, Revelation 22:2, p. 332.

2434 M. Barker, Revelation, p. 330.

2435 E.g., Moses 2:2, 3:7.

2436 E. A. Speiser, Creation Epic, 114, p. 62.

2437 A. Chester, Messiah, pp. 125-127.

implication for other OT and Jewish texts cited by him, “those who are delivered..., and not just a few individuals, will take on a transformed and heavenly angelic state, in the end time, at the point of decisive eschatological intervention.”²⁴³⁸

- E-284 Koester admits the possibility that the cult of Sabazius, whose powers were associated with a similar gesture, had its origins in a form of mystical Judaism: “Possibly some Jews of Asia Minor who were Hellenized to a large degree had, in organizing their congregations and in understanding their religious services as mysteries, accepted religious forms and designations that were assimilated to their pagan neighbors.”²⁴³⁹
- E-285 On the face of it, the idea expressed in the Ezekiel mural seems to be that the mountain is first split to release the dead, and then once again made whole. This image, combined with panel image of the dead passing through the split mountain as they are resurrected, could be seen as an eschatological recapitulation of Mesopotamian and Mesoamerican creation traditions that speak of the primordial mound being cracked open by the storm god, “having the prime objective of allowing men to spring forth like vegetation.”²⁴⁴⁰ The image of the primordial mound being split in two was reflected both in Near Eastern art and temple architecture.²⁴⁴¹ All this imagery seems quite compatible with Jewish conceptions of resurrection as rebirth, “the earth being as a womb which shall give birth to them that are in their graves.”²⁴⁴²

One might also make a case that the panel represents the two trees as having been brought back together into one. If we take the trees as representing the special trees of Eden, the idea recalls passages in the Zohar that relate to the initial splitting of the originally-unified Tree of Life and the Tree of Knowledge. According to the Zohar:

... the *Sefiroth*²⁴⁴³ were revealed to Adam in the shape of the Tree of Life and the Tree of Knowledge, i.e., the middle and the last Sefirah; instead of preserving their original unity and thereby unifying the spheres of “life” and “knowledge” and bringing salvation to the world, he separated one from the other and set his mind to worship the Shekhinah only without recognizing its union with the other Sefiroth. Thus he... brought separation and isolation into the world... Only after the restoration of the original harmony in the act of redemption, when everything shall again occupy the place it originally had in the divine scheme of things, will “God be one and His name one,” in biblical terms, truly and for all time....²⁴⁴⁴

Sin always destroys a union, and a destructive separation of this kind was also immanent in the Original Sin through which the fruit was separated from the tree, or as another kabbalist puts it, the Tree of Life from the Tree of Knowledge.²⁴⁴⁵

In the context with the story of the prophet Ezekiel, it is also tempting to regard the trees as an allusion to the two “sticks” (literally: woods or trees) of Ezekiel 37:15-20²⁴⁴⁶ being reunited in token of the restoration of the House of Israel. This interpretation is consistent with the overall theme of the final design of the Dura Tree of Life mural,²⁴⁴⁷ with the separate blessings of the two divisions of Israel at the bottom of the tree and their joint exaltation near the throne at the top.

- E-286 Goodenough’s identification of this panel as the death of Ezekiel is controversial. Interpretation is made more difficult because of significant overpainting of some sections. As an example of other perspectives, Hopkins takes the panel to be an illustration of an event occurring near the beginning of the revolt of the Maccabees.²⁴⁴⁸ After considering several possibilities, Kraeling concludes that the scene represents the slaying of King Jehoiakim by Nebuchadnezzar.²⁴⁴⁹ However, Avi-Yonah, who has otherwise sharply criticized many of Goodenough’s interpretations writes: “Goodenough’s

2438 Ibid., p. 144.

2439 H. Koester, New Testament I, p. 187.

2440 D. E. Wirth, Parallels, p. 151. See also A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2003, p. 193 n. 454.

2441 D. E. Wirth, Parallels, pp. 151-154.

2442 H. Riesenfeld, Resurrection, p. 11; cf. e.g., Isaiah 26:19: “the earth shall cast out the dead.”

2443 = the ten mystical attributes of God.

2444 G. Scholem, Trends, p. 232.

2445 Ibid., p. 236. See also ibid., pp. 404-405 n. 105; G. Scholem, Kabbalah, pp. 112, 124-128, 166-168; D. C. Matt, Zohar I, Be-Reshit, 1:12b, p. 85. 1:35b, p. 222.

2446 C. H. Kraeling et al., Synagogue, p. 191.

2447 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 11, Figure 323.

2448 C. Hopkins, Discovery, pp. 171-172.

2449 C. H. Kraeling et al., Synagogue, pp. 194-202.

interpretation of the last scene in the Ezekiel series as representing the legendary story of the execution of the prophet, seems to us both logical and consistent, although there is as yet no textual proof for it.”²⁴⁵⁰

- E-287 It is significant that the power to raise the dead is delegated to Ezekiel, rather than the act being performed by God Himself.²⁴⁵¹ Riesenfeld suggests a parallel to God’s delegation of the key of resurrection to Ezekiel in Christ’s raising of Lazarus,²⁴⁵² and points out parallels in other instances from Jesus’ ministry to similar miracles by Elijah and Elisha. “It is perhaps more than chance that the miracles of revivification performed, according to Jewish belief, by Elijah, Elisha, and Ezekiel, each prefiguring the coming Messiah, in some way have reached fulfillment in the Messianic activity of Jesus Christ.”²⁴⁵³
- E-288 Block concludes that the number ten is “hardly coincidental” and represents “the ten tribes that had made up the northern kingdom prior to its collapse in the 8th century.”²⁴⁵⁴ Goodenough admits that they “may represent the restoration of the lost ten tribes, but in that case it is hard to think that Judah and Benjamin should still be the unassembled ‘bones’ beside them. Just what they represent I cannot say, but must suggest that the number ten may here have the significance of the ten columns of the inner shrine of the Closed Temple, which appeared to be the number of perfection, the highest presentation of immaterial reality and mystical achievement.”²⁴⁵⁵

Relating the ten columns of the heavenly temple to the ten resurrected men is the very plausible reminder by Schubert that ten was the “full number for a liturgical congregation.”²⁴⁵⁶ Since at least talmudic times, the number ten was fixed as a quorum for public prayer as part of a Jewish minyan (from Hebrew maneh = to count or number). One of the justifications for the practice is the story of Joseph in Egypt: “Just as the ‘children of Israel’ in [Genesis 42:5] refers to the ten sons of Jacob who descended to Egypt to obtain food during the famine, so too [Leviticus 22:32] refers to sanctification among the ‘children of Israel’ in the presence of ten.”²⁴⁵⁷ Echoing the symbolism of ancient prayer circles, Kogan writes: “On one level, the body that is formed below, the actual minyan, is entered by the Shekhinah (the supernal holiness), and is thus the point of contact between God and Israel. Simultaneously, the minyan formed in the proper manner below unifies the heavenly realm above.”²⁴⁵⁸ Schubert explains the nearby body parts that have not been rejoined as symbolizing “those groups of sinners, which according to Rabbinic understanding, have no part in the resurrection.”²⁴⁵⁹

Although himself convinced that Ezekiel had “no thought of a resurrection of individuals from the dead,” Zimmerli nevertheless concedes that this is exactly how the prophet’s vision is understood at Dura Europos.²⁴⁶⁰ Convincingly arguing against the current scholarly mainstream,²⁴⁶¹ Russell concludes that Ezekiel’s vision of the resurrection seemingly “owes much to Zoroastrian conceptions” and that the symbolism of the resurrection as a collective redemption of Israel does not exclude the idea of an individual bodily resurrection.²⁴⁶² Riesenfeld connects Jewish beliefs in the resurrection with Israel’s royal festival of the harvest and the new year: the Feast of the Tabernacles. Here, the rites of enthronement “culminated in the solemn exaltation or ‘resurrection’ which followed upon the king’s struggle against the powers of Chaos and Death and the dramatic representation of his humiliation and descent to Hades.... [T]he king’s resurrection and [enthronement] signified new life and new birth for the people within the frame of the covenant... [T]hat which was enacted annually

2450 M. Avi-Yonah, Critique, p. 119.

2451 H. Riesenfeld, Resurrection, p. 32.

2452 See ibid., p. 38 n. 7, where he notes a sarcophagus carved with a combination of these stories.

2453 Ibid., p. 38.

2454 D. I. Block, Ezekiel 25-48, p. 391.

2455 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 10:194; cf. 10:60, 63-69, 204, 207; E. R. Goodenough, Summary, p. 183.

2456 K. Schubert, Jewish Pictorial, p. 188.

2457 Minyan.

2458 D. Blumenthal, Merkabah, p. 147.

2459 K. Schubert, Jewish Pictorial, p. 188.

2460 W. Zimmerli, Ezekiel 2, p. 264; cf. N. T. Wright, Resurrection, pp. 120-121. Pseudo-Ezekiel likewise provides evidence that Jews at Qumran interpreted Ezekiel 37 in terms of individual resurrection (F. G. Martinez, Pseudo-Ezekiel, fragment 2, p. 286; cf. J. H. Charlesworth, Concept of Resurrection, p. 3; C. D. Elledge, Earliest Evidence, pp. 34-35). For a discussion of other early sources describing individual resurrection, see C. D. Elledge, Concept of Resurrection, pp. 12-17; C. D. Elledge, Earliest Evidence.

2461 E.g., J. H. Charlesworth, Concept of Resurrection, p. 3; C. D. Elledge, Earliest Evidence, p. 26.

2462 J. R. Russell, Ezekiel, pp. 903, 901; cf. D. H. Akenson, Surpassing Wonder, p. 384; H. Riesenfeld, Resurrection, pp. 3ff. and biblical passages such as Isaiah 36:19, 53:10-12; Hosea 6:2; Micah 7:8; and Psalm 27:15.

in the ritual drama was to take place in the future in a more marked or final way.”²⁴⁶³

- E-289 Goodenough discussed the finding of these marks not only in the Dura murals, but also in a cache of white textile fragments discovered at the site that “may well have been the contents of a box where sacred vestments were kept, or they may have been fetishistic marks, originally on sacred robes, that were preserved after the garments had been outworn.”²⁴⁶⁴ Goodenough points to findings on Christian robes, in hellenized Egypt, Palmyra, and on Roman figures of Victory which “so commonly appears as a symbol of immortality.”²⁴⁶⁵

Welch discusses Goodenough’s conclusions, and reports similar findings at Masada and elsewhere.²⁴⁶⁶ He observes that “the Talmud demands that priests execute their most sacred religious duty, that of sacrifice, by applying the blood of the sacrificial animal to the altar in a gamma pattern: ‘he made the single application in the shape of a Greek Gamma.’”²⁴⁶⁷ Nibley reports a “Ravenna mosaic, ca. 520 CE, [which] shows the priest-king Melchizedek in a purple cloak, offering bread and wine at the altar.”²⁴⁶⁸ The white altar cloth is decorated with two sets of gammadia, as well as... two interlocked squares in gold.²⁴⁶⁹ Abel offers his lamb as Abraham gently pushes Isaac forward. The hand of God reaches down to this sacred meeting through red veils adorned with golden gammadia on either side. The theme is the great sacrifice of Christ, which brings together the righteous prophets from the past as well as the four corners of the present world, thereby uniting all time and space.”²⁴⁷⁰

At least some Christians had additional ceremonial symbols woven into their clothing, perhaps reflecting further rites of the high priesthood, superior to those of Aaron.²⁴⁷¹ Moreover, besides the clavi and gams previously mentioned, Goodenough describes an ornament in “the form of a stripe ending in an arrow, which also is represented in the synagogue.”²⁴⁷² Moreover, a photograph by Griggs of well-preserved clothing at an Egyptian burial site showed an “early Christian garment... made of wool [that] was placed next to the body. The garment has a woven rosette over each breast, a hemmed cut on the abdomen, and a rosette above the right knee.”²⁴⁷³

- E-290 Russell notes that Ezekiel’s “vision of God in person”²⁴⁷⁴ was so vivid and explicit that the book was nearly suppressed altogether, and the study of the mysteries of the Merkabah, for which it is the primary source, was severely limited. Posterity took this first section of his book seriously and literally. Some of Ezekiel’s contemporaries did not receive his prophecies that way though, to his great displeasure.”²⁴⁷⁵

- E-291 Barker writes:²⁴⁷⁶

To see the glory of the Lord’s presence—to see beyond the veil— was the greatest blessing. The high priest used to bless Israel with the words: “The Lord bless you and keep you: The Lord make his face to shine upon you, and be gracious unto you: The Lord lift up his countenance upon you, and give you peace”...²⁴⁷⁷ 2463 H. Riesenfeld, Resurrection, pp. 5-6. For a recent summary of early Jewish and Christian interpretations of Ezekiel 37, see M. Greenberg, Ezekiel 21-37, pp. 749-751.

2464 E. R. Goodenough, Garments, p. 225; cf. E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 9:127-129.

2465 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 9:163.

2466 J. W. Welch et al., Gammadia.

2467 Ibid., p. 254. See Talmud, Zebahim 53b, cited in Welch.

2468 Genesis 14:18-20.

2469 See the caption and footnotes for Figures E20-1 and E20-2, p. 573.

2470 H. W. Nibley, Vestments, p. 109; cf. W. J. Hamblin et al., Temple, p. 53, fig. 46. See Nibley for a discussion and further examples of gammadia in Jewish and Christian garments, altar cloths, veils, and in Roman- and Egyptian-themed depictions (H. W. Nibley, Vestments, pp. 105-112).

2471 See Excursus 3: Temple Blessings in the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood, p. 519; R. S. Eccles, Hebrews. In modern times, Brigham Young raised the possibility that a given individual might be limited to receiving an Aaronic Priesthood portion of the temple endowment only (B. Young, 10-13 June 1864, p. 309; also cited in J. Smith, Jr., Words, p. 304, n. 21).

2472 E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 9:127. See also the dress of the last person on the lower row of E. R. Goodenough, Dura Symbolism, 11, fig. 339. An arrow, of course, can easily be seen as representing movement leading toward a desired destination, aptly complementing the meaning of the square gammadia.

2473 C. W. Griggs, Evidences, p. 227.

2474 Ezekiel ch. 1.

2475 J. R. Russell, Ezekiel, p. 900.

2476 M. Barker, Christmas, pp. 14-15.

2477 Numbers 6:24-26.

Seeing the glory, however, became controversial. Nobody knows why. There is one strand in the Old Testament that is absolutely opposed to any idea of seeing the divine. Two accounts of the story of Moses on Sinai will illustrate the point. In one, he saw the God of Israel, with a sapphire pavement at his feet;²⁴⁷⁸ in the other, the people were reminded that they had seen no form when the Lord spoke from the midst of the fire on the mountain: there was only a voice.²⁴⁷⁹ Moses spoke with the Lord face to face as a man speaks with a friend,²⁴⁸⁰ and yet when Moses asked to see the glory of the Lord, he was told he could not see the Lord: “You cannot see my face; for man shall not see me and live... my face shall not be seen.”²⁴⁸¹ Isaiah saw the Lord, enthroned in the temple,²⁴⁸² and Ezekiel saw the likeness of the glory of the Lord.²⁴⁸³ Jesus said: “Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God”;²⁴⁸⁴ and John saw “one seated on the throne.”²⁴⁸⁵ There can be no doubt where the early Christians stood on this matter. Peter, James, and John saw beyond the veil when they saw Jesus transfigured. They saw into the state of glory that was outside time, since Moses and Elijah were with Jesus in their vision.²⁴⁸⁶ When Peter told Cornelius the story of Jesus, he said that only a few people had seen the risen Lord, those who had been “prepared beforehand as witnesses.”²⁴⁸⁷ Those who had seen the transfigured Lord were able to recognize the risen, heavenly Lord. John began his Gospel by saying, “We have beheld his glory,”²⁴⁸⁸ and Luke said that the glory of the Lord shone around the shepherds at Bethlehem.²⁴⁸⁹ The veil between the two worlds had been opened.

- E-292 According to Marioano Veytia, Oxomoco was “the first woman to give birth in the world, and from whom all men are descended.”²⁴⁹⁰ However, Wirth argues that Oxomoco should not be considered “a prototype of our Eve, but more like the Heavenly Mother (the partner of the divine creator god).”²⁴⁹¹ Miller et al. write: “Together, Ometecuhli and his consort Omecihuatl were ever present progenitors, for they sent the souls of those about to be born to the surface of the earth. Ometecuhli and Omecihuatl may also have been identified with Cipactonal and Oxomoco, aged progenitors and perhaps divine grandparents.”²⁴⁹²

Veytia wrote that he saw a drawing illustrating the primeval garden in which the man and the woman lived. He said that this drawing contained “a single tree, from the foot of which a snake is twisting around, and in the middle of the crown of the tree it shows the head with a woman’s face.”²⁴⁹³

- E-293 This corresponds to the fruit of the calabash tree (Chrescentia cujete), which “yields a large, whitish to light-green gourd with a hard, bonelike rind that is sometimes dried and used to make bowls. It is approximately the size of a human skull.”²⁴⁹⁴

- E-294 In regarding the tree, the maiden, Lady Blood, exclaims: “Ah! What is the fruit of this tree? Is not the fruit borne of this tree delicious? I would not die. I would not be lost. Would it be heard if I were to pick one?”²⁴⁹⁵

- E-295 A major consequence of their defeat was that “the lords of Xibalba would no longer be allowed to receive human hearts in sacrifice but rather would have to accept the red sap of the croton tree,”²⁴⁹⁶ a condition previously prophesied by Lady Blood.²⁴⁹⁷

2478 Exodus 24:9-10.

2479 Deuteronomy 4:12, 15.

2480 Exodus 33:11.

2481 Exodus 33:20, 23.

2482 Isaiah 6:1.

2483 Ezekiel 1:28.

2484 Matthew 5:8.

2485 Revelation 4:2.

2486 Matthew 17:1-9; Mark 9:2-9.

2487 Acts 10:41, translating literally.

2488 John 1:14.

2489 Luke 2:9.

2490 D. M. F. de Echevarria y Veytia, Historia, p. 41.

2491 D. E. Wirth, 12 March 2009.

2492 M. E. Miller et al., Gods and Symbols, pp. 127-128; cf. pp. 40-41.

2493 D. M. F. de Echevarria y Veytia, Historia, p. 42.

2494 A. J. Christenson, Sacred Tree, p. 3 n. 3. For a Mayan illustration of this tree, see p. 5, Figure 2.

2495 A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2003, 2282-2287, p. 128; cf. A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2000, 2282-2287, p. 83.

2496 A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2003, p. 187 n. 431; cf. A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2000, p. 124 n. 293.

2497 A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2004, 2444-2445, p. 84; cf. A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2003, 2444-2445, pp. 132-133 and p. 132 n. 267.

E-296 In order to “restore” the face of their father, the sons asked him “to name everything—his mouth, his nose, and his eyes. He was able to recover the first name, but then little more was said. He did not say the corresponding names for that which is above the mouth. Still, this had been said, and thus they honored him.”²⁴⁹⁸ “The skull of One Hunahpu would have had a mouth, but not a nose or eyes, which would have been only empty holes and sockets.”²⁴⁹⁹

E-297 Chesterton offers perhaps the most perceptive and succinct analysis of the claim that Blake suffered from some form of mental malady:²⁵⁰⁰

“Was William Blake mad?” It is easy enough to say, of course, in the non-committal modern manner that it all depends on how you define madness. If you mean it in its practical or legal sense, ... if you mean was William Blake unfit to look after himself, unable to exercise civic functions or to administer property, then certainly the answer is “no.” Blake was a citizen, and capable of being a very good citizen... Again, if when we say “Was Blake mad?” we mean was he fundamentally morbid, was his soul cut off from the universe and merely feeding on itself, then again the answer is emphatically “no.” There was nothing defective about Blake; he was in contact with all the songs and smells of the universe... Yet again, if we mean by madness anything inconsistent or unreasonable, then Blake was not mad. Blake was one of the most consistent men that ever lived, both in theory and in practice...

When Blake lived at Felpham angels appear to have been as native to the Sussex trees as birds. Hebrew patriarchs walked on the Sussex Downs as easily as if they were in the desert. Some people will be quite satisfied with saying that the mere solemn attestation of such miracles marks a man as a madman or a liar. But that is a short cut of skeptical dogmatism which is not far removed from impudence. Surely we cannot take an open question like the supernatural and shut it with a bang, turning the key of the mad-house on all the mystics of history... you cannot take the region called the unknown and calmly say that though you know nothing about it, you know that all its gates are locked... We do not know enough about the unknown to know that it is unknowable...

[Finally, any imputation that his actions violated common decency] does not prove that he was a madman or anything remotely resembling one. Nor there is any reason to suppose that he was carried into any practice inconsistent with his strong domestic affections. Indeed, I think that much of Blake’s anarchy is connected with his innocence.

But when we have reached this point—that this ugly element in Blake was an intrusion of Blake’s mere theory of things—we have come, I think, very close to the true principle to be pursued in estimating his madness or his sanity. Blake the mere poet, would have been decent and respectable. It was Blake the logician who was forced to be almost blackguardly. In other words, Blake was not mad; for such part of him as was mad was not Blake. It was an alien influence, and in some sense even an accidental one; in an extreme sense it might even be called antagonist...

What was it that was eating away a part of Blake’s brain? I venture to offer an answer which in the eyes of many people will have nothing to recommend it except the accident of its personal sincerity. I firmly believe that what did hurt Blake’s brain was the reality of his spiritual communications... His inspired poems were not his good poems. His inspired poems were very often his particularly bad ones; they were bad by inspiration.

Whether Blake’s fits of “bad inspiration” were, as Chesterton suspected, due to the malevolent influence of “fallen angels,” or, as Youngquist believed, the result of a heroic and ultimately successful struggle against a descent into mental chaos²⁵⁰¹ is a question that I am not able to answer.

2498 A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2003, 4777-4787, p. 190; cf. Popol Vuh 2000, 4777-4787, p. 126.

2499 A. J. Christenson, Popol Vuh 2003, p. 190 n. 448.

2500 G. K. Chesterton, William Blake, pp. 71-74, 79-80, 93. See Endnote 0-27, p. 27.

2501 “For the critic, the more interesting question than the dubious one of diagnosis is why Blake remained healthy and wrote powerful verse throughout his long career. He alone among the Romantic poets lived and wrote great poetry into late adulthood, even though he seems also to have been the one most prone to mental distress. The reason lies in the therapeutic function of his mythological method” (P. Youngquist, Madness, p. 43).

APPENDIX

The Origin of Man

BYU Evolution Packet, 1992.....	786
The Origin of Man, 1909.....	786
Words in Season from the First Presidency, 1910.....	791
“Mormon” View of Evolution, 1925	791
Evolution (1991)	792
Background of the BYU Evolution Packet	794
William E. Evenson: Evolution Packet Defined, 1992	794
Context for Statements in the BYU Evolution Packet	795
Additional Material Relating to the Origin of Man.....	798
Improvement Era Editorial: Creation of Adam and Eve, 1910.....	798
President Joseph F. Smith: Philosophy and Church Schools, 1915.....	798
President David O. McKay: Design Permeating All Creation, 1952.....	799
President David O. McKay: Convictions Can Be Expressed, 1956.....	800
President Spencer W. Kimball: Creation of Adam and Eve, 1976.....	800
John L. Sorenson: Origin of Man, 1991	801
President Gordon B. Hinckley: Organic Evolution, 1997	802
President Gordon B. Hinckley: The Origin of Man, 2002.....	802
Endnotes	803

BYU Evolution Packet, 1992¹

October, 1992

Evolution and the Origin of Man

This packet contains, as far as could be found, all statements issued by the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on the subject of evolution and the origin of man, and a statement on the Church's attitude toward science. The earliest First Presidency Statement, "The Origin of Man," was issued during the administration of President Joseph F. Smith in 1909. This was followed by a First Presidency Message in 1910 that included brief comments related to the study of these topics. The second statement, "Mormon View of Evolution," was issued during the administration of President Heber J. Grant in 1925. Although there has never been a formal declaration from the First Presidency addressing the general matter of organic evolution as a process for development of biological species, these documents make clear the official position of the Church regarding the origin of man.

This packet also contains the article on evolution from the Encyclopedia of Mormonism, published in 1992. The current First Presidency authorized inclusion of the excerpt from the First Presidency minutes of 1931 in the 1992 Encyclopedia article.

Various views have been expressed by other Church leaders on this subject over many decades; however, formal statements by the First Presidency are the definitive source of official Church positions. It is hoped that these materials will provide a firm foundation for individual study in a context of faith in the restored gospel.

Approved by the BYU Board of Trustees

June, 1992

Improvement Era 13:1, pp. 75-81. Nov. 1909.

Editor's Table.

The Origin of Man.

By The First Presidency of the Church.

"God created man in his own image."

Inquiries arise from time to time respecting the attitude of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints upon questions which, though not vital from a doctrinal standpoint, are closely connected with the fundamental principles of salvation. The latest inquiry of this kind that has reached us is in relation to the origin of man. It is believed that a statement of the position held by the Church upon this important subject will be timely and productive of good.

In presenting the statement that follows we are not conscious of putting forth anything essentially new; neither is it our desire so to do. Truth is what we wish to present, and truth—eternal truth—is fundamentally old. A restatement of the original attitude of the Church relative to this matter is all that will be attempted here. To tell the truth as God has revealed it, and commend it to the acceptance of those who need to conform their opinions thereto, is the sole purpose of this presentation.

¹ See Endnote A-1, p. 803.

“God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.” In these plain and pointed words the inspired author of the book of Genesis made known to the world the truth concerning the origin of the human family. Moses, the prophet-historian, “learned,” as we are told, “in all the wisdom of the Egyptians,” when making this important announcement, was not voicing a mere opinion, a theory derived from his researches into the occult lore of that ancient people. He was speaking as the mouthpiece of God, and his solemn declaration was for all time and for all people. No subsequent revelator of the truth has contradicted the great leader and lawgiver of Israel. All who have since spoken by divine authority upon this theme have confirmed his simple and sublime proclamation. Nor could it be otherwise. Truth has but one source, and all revelations from heaven are harmonious with each other. The omnipotent Creator, the maker of heaven and earth—had shown unto Moses everything pertaining to this planet, including the facts relating to man’s origin, and the authoritative pronouncement of that mighty prophet and seer to the house of Israel, and through Israel to the whole world, is couched in the simple clause: “God created man in his own image” (Genesis 1:27; Pearl of Great Price—book of Moses, 1:27-41).

The creation was two-fold—firstly spiritual, secondly temporal. This truth, also, Moses plainly taught—much more plainly than it has come down to us in the imperfect translations of the Bible that are now in use. Therein the fact of a spiritual creation, antedating the temporal creation, is strongly implied, but the proof of it is not so clear and conclusive as in other records held by the Latter-day Saints to be of equal authority with the Jewish scriptures. The partial obscurity of the latter upon the point in question is owing, no doubt, to the loss of those “plain and precious” parts of sacred writ, which, as the Book of Mormon informs us, have been taken away from the Bible during its passage down the centuries (1 Nephi 13:24-29). Some of these missing parts the Prophet Joseph Smith undertook to restore when he revised those scriptures by the spirit of revelation, the result being that more complete account of the creation which is found in the book of Moses, previously cited. Note the following passages:

And now, behold, I say unto you, that these are the generations of the heaven and of the earth, when they were created, in the day that I, the Lord God, made the heaven and the earth;

And every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew.

For I, the Lord God, created all things of which I have spoken, spiritually, before they were naturally upon the face of the earth. For I, the Lord God, had not caused it to rain upon the face of the earth.

And I, the Lord God, had created all the children of men, and not yet a man to till the ground; for in heaven created I them, and there was not yet flesh upon the earth, neither in the water, neither in the air.

But, I, the Lord God, spake, and there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground.

And I, the Lord God, formed man from the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul, the first flesh upon the earth, the first man also.

Nevertheless, all things were before created, but spiritually were they created and made, according to my word (Pearl of Great Price—book of Moses, 3:4-7. See also chapters 1 and 2, and compare with Genesis 1 and 2).

These two points being established, namely, the creation of man in the image of God, and the two-fold character of the creation, let us now inquire: What was the form of man, in the spirit and in the body, as originally created? In a general way the answer is given in the words chosen as the text of this treatise. “God created man in his own image.” It is more explicitly rendered in the Book of Mormon thus: “All men were created in the beginning after mine own image” (Ether, 3:15). It is the Father who is speaking. If, therefore, we can ascertain the form of the “Father of spirits,” “The God of the spirits of all flesh,” we shall be able to discover the form of the original man.

Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is “the express image” of His Father’s person (Hebrews 1:3). He walked the earth as a human being, as a perfect man, and said, in answer to a question put to Him: “He that hath seen me hath seen the Father” (John 14:9). This alone ought to solve the problem to the satisfaction of every thoughtful, reverent mind. The conclusion is irresistible, that if the Son of God be the express image (that is, likeness) of His Father’s person, then His Father is in the form of man; for that was the form of the Son of God, not only during His mortal life, but before His mortal birth, and after His resurrection. It was in this form that the Father and the Son, as two personages, appeared to Joseph Smith, when, as a boy of fourteen years, he received his first vision. Then if God made man—the first man—in His own image and likeness, he must have made him like unto Christ, and consequently like unto men of Christ’s time and of the present day. That man was made in the image of Christ is positively stated in the book of Moses: “And I, God, said unto mine Only Begotten, which was with me from the beginning, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and it was so. * * * And I, God, created man in mine own image, in the image of mine Only Begotten created I him, male and female created I them” (Moses 2:26, 27).

The Father of Jesus is our Father also. Jesus Himself taught this truth, when He instructed His disciples how to pray: “Our Father which art in heaven,” etc. Jesus, however, is the first-born among all the sons of God—the first begotten in the spirit, and the only begotten in the flesh. He is our elder brother, and we, like Him, are in the image of God. All men and women are in the similitude of the universal Father and Mother, and are literally the sons and daughters of Deity.

“God created man in His own image.” This is just as true of the spirit as it is of the body, which is only the clothing of the spirit, its complement; the two together constituting the soul. The spirit of man is in the form of man, and the spirits of all creatures are in the likeness of their bodies. This was plainly taught by the Prophet Joseph Smith (Doctrine and Covenants, 77:2).

Here is further evidence of the fact. More than seven hundred years before Moses was shown the things pertaining to this earth, another great prophet, known to us as the brother of Jared, was similarly favored by the Lord. He was even permitted to behold the spirit-body of the foreordained Savior, prior to His incarnation; and so like the body of a man was gazing upon a being of flesh and blood. He first saw the finger and then the entire body of the Lord—all in the spirit. The Book of Mormon says of this wonderful manifestation:

And it came to pass that when the brother of Jared had said these words, behold the Lord stretched forth His hand and touched the stones one by one with His finger; and the veil was taken from off the eyes of the brother of Jared, and he saw the finger of the Lord; and it was as the finger of a man, like unto flesh and blood; and the brother of Jared fell down before the Lord, for he was struck with fear.

And the Lord saw that the brother of Jared had fallen to the earth; and the Lord said unto him, Arise, why hast thou fallen?

And he saith unto the Lord, I saw the finger of the Lord, and I feared lest he should smite me; for I knew not that the Lord had flesh and blood.

And the Lord said unto him, Because of thy faith thou hast seen that I shall take upon me flesh and blood; and never has man come before me with such exceeding faith as thou hast; for were it not so, ye could not have seen my finger. Sawest thou more than this?

And he answered, Nay, Lord, show thyself unto me.

And the Lord said unto him, Believest thou the words which I shall speak?

And he answered, Yea, Lord, I know that thou speakest the truth, for thou art a God of truth and canst not lie.

And when he had said these words, behold, the Lord showed himself unto him, and said, Because thou knowest these things ye are redeemed from the fall; therefore ye are brought back into my presence; therefore I show myself unto you.

Behold, I am He who was prepared from the foundation of the world to redeem my people. Behold, I am Jesus Christ, I am the Father and the Son. In me shall all mankind have light, and that eternally, even they who shall believe on my name; and they shall become my sons and my daughters.

And never have I shewed myself unto man whom I have created, for never hath man believed in me as thou hast. Seest thou that ye are created after mine own image? Yea, even all men were created in the beginning after mine own image.

Behold, this body, which ye now behold, is the body of my spirit, and man have I created after the body of my spirit; and even as I appear unto thee to be in the spirit, will I appear unto my people in the flesh. (Ether, 3:6-16.)

What more is needed to convince us that man, both in spirit and in body, is the image and likeness of God, and that God Himself is in the form of man?

When the divine Being whose spirit-body the brother of Jared beheld, took upon Him flesh and blood, He appeared as a man, having “body, parts and passions,” like other men, though vastly superior to all others, because He was God, even the Son of God, the Word made flesh: in Him “dwelt the fulness of the Godhead bodily.” And why should He not appear as a man? That was the form of His spirit, and it must needs have an appropriate covering, a suitable tabernacle. He came unto the world as He had promised to come (III Nephi 1:13), taking an infant tabernacle, and developing it gradually to the fulness of His spirit stature. He came as man had been coming for ages, and as man has continued to come ever since. Jesus, however, as shown, was the only begotten of God in the flesh.

Adam, our great progenitor, “the first man,” was, like Christ, a preexistent spirit, and like Christ he took upon him an appropriate body, the body of a man, and so became a “living soul.” The doctrine of the preexistence, —revealed so plainly, particularly in latter days, pours a wonderful flood of light upon the otherwise mysterious problem of man’s origin.

It shows that man, as a spirit, was begotten and born of heavenly parents, and reared to maturity in the eternal mansions of the Father, prior to coming upon the earth in a temporal body to undergo an experience in mortality. It teaches that all men existed in the spirit before any man existed in the flesh, and that all who have inhabited the earth since Adam have taken bodies and become souls in like manner.

It is held by some that Adam was not the first man upon this earth, and that the original human being was a development from lower orders of the animal creation. These, however, are the theories of men. The word of the Lord declares that Adam was “the first man of all men” (Moses 1:34), and we are therefore in duty bound to regard him as the primal parent of our race. It was shown to the brother of Jared that all men were created in the beginning after the image of God; and whether we take this to mean the spirit or the body, or both, it commits us to the same conclusion: Man began life as a human being, in the likeness of our heavenly Father.

True it is that the body of man enters upon its career as a tiny germ or embryo, which becomes an infant, quickened at a certain stage by the spirit whose tabernacle it is, and the child, after being born, develops into a man. There is nothing in this, however, to indicate that the original man, the first of our race, began life as anything less than a man, or less than the human germ or embryo that becomes a man.

Man, by searching, cannot find out God. Never, unaided, will he discover the truth about the beginning of human life. The Lord must reveal Himself, or remain unrevealed; and the same is true of the facts relating to the origin of Adam’s race—God alone can reveal them. Some of these facts, however, are already known, and what has been made known it is our duty to receive and retain.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, basing its belief on divine revelation, ancient and modern, proclaims man to be the direct and lineal offspring of Deity. God Himself is an exalted man, perfected, enthroned, and supreme. By His almighty power He organized the earth, and all that it contains, from spirit and element, which exist co-eternally with Himself. He formed every plant that grows, and every animal that breathes, each after its own kind, spiritually and temporally—“that which is spiritual being in the likeness of that which is temporal, and that which is temporal in the likeness of that which is spiritual.” He made the tadpole and the ape, the lion and the elephant but He did not make them in His own image, nor endow them with Godlike reason and intelligence. Nevertheless, the whole animal creation will be perfected and perpetuated in the Hereafter, each class in its “distinct order or sphere,” and will enjoy “eternal felicity.” That fact has been made plain in this dispensation (Doctrine and Covenants, 77:3).

Man is the child of God, formed in the divine image and endowed with divine attributes, and even as the infant son of an earthly father and mother is capable in due time of becoming a man, so the undeveloped offspring of celestial parentage is capable, by experience through ages and aeons, of evolving into a God.

Joseph F. Smith,
John R. Winder,
Anthon H. Lund,

First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Words in Season from the First Presidency

Deseret Evening News, Dec. 17, 1910, part 1, p. 3.

In this Christmas message, the First Presidency devoted several sentences to the Church's position with regard to questions raised by science:

Diversity of opinion does not necessitate intolerance of spirit, nor should it embitter or set rational beings against each other. The Christ taught kindness, patience, and charity.

Our religion is not hostile to real science. That which is demonstrated, we accept with joy; but vain philosophy, human theory and mere speculations of men, we do not accept nor do we adopt anything contrary to divine revelation or to good common sense. But everything that tends to right conduct, that harmonizes with sound morality and increases faith in Deity, finds favor with us no matter where it may be found.

Editors' Table: "Mormon" View of Evolution

Improvement Era, Vol. XXVIII September, 1925 No. 11

"God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him: male and female created he them."

In these plain and pointed words the inspired author of the book of Genesis made known to the world the truth concerning the origin of the human family. Moses, the prophet-historian, who was "learned" we are told, "in all the wisdom of the Egyptians," when making this important announcement, was not voicing a mere opinion. He was speaking as the mouth-piece of God, and his solemn declaration was for all time and for all people. No subsequent revelator of the truth has contradicted the great leader and law-giver of Israel. All who have since spoken by divine authority upon this theme have confirmed his simple and sublime proclamation. Nor could it be otherwise. Truth has but one source, and all revelations from heaven are harmonious one with the other.

Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is "the express image" of his Father's person (Hebrews 1:3). He walked the earth as a human being, as a perfect man, and said, in answer to a question put to him: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father" (John 14:9). This alone ought to solve the problem to the satisfaction of every thoughtful, reverent mind. It was in this form that the Father and the Son, as two distinct personages, appeared to Joseph Smith, when, as a boy of fourteen years, he received his first vision.

The Father of Jesus Christ is our Father also. Jesus himself taught this truth, when he instructed his disciples how to pray: "Our Father which art in heaven," etc. Jesus, however, is the first born among all the sons of God—the first begotten in the spirit, and the only begotten in the flesh. He is our elder brother, and we, like him, are in the image of God. All men and women are in the similitude of the universal Father and Mother, and are literally sons and daughters of Deity.

Adam, our great progenitor, “the first man,” was, like Christ, a preexistent spirit, and, like Christ, he took upon him an appropriate body, the body of a man, and so became a “living soul.” The doctrine of preexistence pours a wonderful flood of light upon the otherwise mysterious problem of man’s origin. It shows that man, as a spirit, was begotten and born of heavenly parents, and reared to maturity in the eternal mansions of the Father, prior to coming upon the earth in a temporal body to undergo an experience in mortality.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, basing its belief on divine revelation, ancient and modern, proclaims man to be the direct and lineal offspring of Deity. By his Almighty power God organized the earth, and all that it contains, from spirit and element, which exist co-eternally with himself.

Man is the child of God, formed in the divine image and endowed with divine attributes, and even as the infant son of an earthly father and mother is capable in due time of becoming a man, so the undeveloped offspring of celestial parentage is capable, by experience through ages and aeons, of evolving into a God.

Heber J. Grant,
Anthony W. Ivins,
Charles W. Nibley.
First Presidency.

Evolution

Encyclopedia of Mormonism, Vol. 2

William E. Evenson

The position of the Church on the origin of man was published by the First Presidency in 1909 and stated again by a different First Presidency in 1925:

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, basing its belief on divine revelation, ancient and modern, declares man to be the direct and lineal offspring of Deity.... Man is the child of God, formed in the divine image and endowed with divine attributes [see statement of the First Presidency above].

The scriptures tell why man was created, but they do not tell how, though the Lord has promised that he will tell that when he comes again (D&C 101:32-33). In 1931, when there was intense discussion on the issue of organic evolution, the First Presidency of the Church, then consisting of Presidents Heber J. Grant, Anthony W. Ivins, and Charles W. Nibley, addressed all of the General Authorities of the Church on the matter, and concluded,

Upon the fundamental doctrines of the Church we are all agreed. Our mission is to bear the message of the restored gospel to the world. Leave geology, biology, archaeology, and anthropology, no one of which has to do with the salvation of the souls of mankind, to scientific research, while we magnify our calling in the realm of the Church.

Upon one thing we should all be able to agree, namely, that Presidents Joseph F. Smith, John R. Winder, and Anthon H. Lund were right when they said: “Adam is the primal parent of our race” [First Presidency Minutes, Apr. 7, 1931].

Background of the BYU Evolution Packet

In response to student questions about the view of the Church on organic evolution and the origin of man, a packet was approved by Brigham Young University's Board of Trustees—consisting of the First Presidency, some members of the Quorum of the Twelve, and other General Authorities and officers. Following approval, the packet was made available to students and faculty of BYU, and in 1999 it was distributed to all teachers in the Church Education System. The following article, from p. 3 of the Nov. 12, 1992 issue of BYU's student newspaper The Daily Universe, explains the origins of the packet. The author of the article is William E. Evenson, who at that time was Dean of the College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences and Professor of Physics at BYU. Following this article, background material relating to the statements in the packet is provided.

William E. Evenson: Evolution Packet Defined, 1992

In the interest of clarifying the background and purpose of the library packet on evolution and the origin of man, which was announced in the Daily Universe on Thursday, Oct. 29, I provide the following information about the development of this packet and the motivation for it.

As appropriate at any university, the subject of organic evolution and the origin of man comes up in BYU courses in several departments. In these courses, students naturally wish to know the official position of the LDS Church on this subject. Some faculty members in the sciences and in Religious Education have gathered material on these topics to distribute to their students. Students might receive one set of statements by Church leaders from one professor and a different set from another professor.

Several faculty members and administrators felt the diversity of materials on these subjects, which were often selected to emphasize the views of the professor, tended to create confusion in the minds of the students and accentuate the potential for controversy about the Church's position. In 1991, in response to questions from students about the Church position on evolution, [BYU] President Rex E. Lee authorized that one of these packets be placed in the [Harold B. Lee Library] Reserve Library as a source for information about the Church's position on evolution and the origin of man.

Purpose of Packet. Because of my experience in preparing the evolution article for the Encyclopedia of Mormonism, I was asked by Provost Bruce Hafen to consider a packet that could be made available to students as the official and fundamental Church position on this subject. It was immediately clear that the selection of material for such a packet could not depend on the content of the statements. The goal is not to achieve some kind of "balance" among the views that have been expressed, but to give students the full range of official views so that they can judge the different positions they encounter. The full range of official views should provide the basis for the evaluation of other views that have been expressed but that do not have the status of official positions.

In line with this philosophical stance, I prepared an initial draft of the packet, which contained the First Presidency statements and all published statements made by presidents of the Church during the time they held that office. It also included the speech given in 1931 by James Talmage of the Quorum of the Twelve, which was reviewed and approved by the First Presidency and officially published by the Church. Finally, this draft packet included the Encyclopedia of Mormonism article because of the excerpt from the First Presidency Minutes in 1931 about the Church's stance toward scientific studies of evolution and the origin of man. This packet was made entirely of materials with official status and included all of the statements published by or with the authorization of the First Presidency.

The draft packet's contents were discussed amicably with Dean Robert Millet of Religious Education and Provost Hafen. After considerable discussion, we agreed that the official university packet should contain only those items that represent the official position of the Church, i.e., statements from the First Presidency. The encyclopedia article was kept because of the First Presidency Minutes item included in it, which is not otherwise available to the public. The final packet was then reviewed by BYU's Board of Trustees — consisting of the First Presidency, many members of the Quorum of the Twelve and other general authorities and officers. They approved the packet.

Balance not the issue. Again, I emphasize that balance was not the issue. The issue was providing only those materials that could clearly be said to be the official, declared position of the Church.

None of us involved in preparing this packet for Board review anticipate that professors will be limited from distributing other materials to their students. It is only requested that BYU faculty members refer students to the materials in this specific packet along with the other items they may choose to distribute. When other items are distributed, they should be clearly separated and given as a supplement to this material and include a fair sampling of the diverse viewpoints among LDS leaders. For example, if one included statements by LDS apostles in a handout on evolution, the range of views would include some statements against evolution, some sympathetic to evolution and several shades of opinion in between. We want to avoid the implication that a greater sense of unanimity or resolution of this topic exists than is actually the case, and we are eager to avoid contention. The university has also suggested that faculty members limit supplemental LDS material on the subject of evolution and the origin of man to published documents, avoiding private letters or other private material.

The process was one of constructive and harmonious effort to provide materials from which students could see clearly the foundation of LDS doctrine on this subject and distinguish it from the wide variety of opinions encountered in LDS literature.

Context for Statements in the BYU Evolution Packet

First Presidency Statement: The Origin of Man, 1909. The year 1909 was both the centennial of Charles Darwin's birth and the 50-year anniversary of the publication of his The Origin of Species. Regarding the circumstances of the issuance of this statement, James R. Clark writes:

What prompted the First Presidency to issue this definite statement on the Origin of Man at this particular time could not be determined by the writer of these notes.

However, there had appeared in the April, 1908, issue of the Improvement Era an article announcing the death of [British mathematical physicist] William Thompson or Lord Kelvin on December 17, 1907. The article was written by a prominent LDS scientist, Dr. John A. Widtsoe, President of the Agricultural College of Utah at Logan, now Utah State University.

Since the Improvement Era was an official organ of the LDS Church and widely read throughout the Church, some of the statements in the Widtsoe article may have been responsible for some of the ‘Inquiries... respecting the attitude of the Church...’ on the subject.

Pertinent to the subject of the Origin of Man are the following quotations from Widtsoe’s review of the views of Lord Kelvin on this subject:

Not only did Lord Kelvin believe that God lives and rules, but he had no sympathy with the idle notion of the day that life began upon this earth and will disappear with death. He believed in the eternity of life, and that life had come to this earth from other heavenly bodies. True, he did not understand the full philosophy of life’s beginnings on the earth, but certainly with all the power at his command as the great scientist of his day, he refuted many of the modern theories which teach the origin of life on this earth without the intervention of an overruling Providence (IE 11:402).

After quoting again from the writings of Lord Kelvin, Widtsoe comments:

Carefully read, this paragraph [from Kelvin] will be found to teach that life is eternal; that life on this earth came from other spheres, that the law of natural selection is imperfect, and does not account for the variety of living things; that the law of evolution is true only as it conforms to the law of progression; that the whole of nature teaches the existence of a great designer or great governing power; and that finally; the power of free agency encircles our lives (IE 11:403).

Widtsoe then quotes at length from the Presidential Address of Lord Kelvin to the British Association, Edinburgh, 1871, including Kelvin’s statement that he could not accept the hypothesis of the origin of species by natural selection, ‘because I have always felt that this hypothesis does not contain the true theory of evolution, if evolution there has been, in biology.’

Widtsoe’s final paragraph had said:

Does Mormonism agree with the same talks of Lord Kelvin? All who understand it will say, yes. The science of the world is, and can be no more than one phase of the everlasting gospel of Jesus Christ which embraces all truth...

This statement of the First Presidency in 1909 still remains perhaps the most thorough and complete statement on the subject issued by the First Presidency to date (1969). [The] statement by President Heber J. Grant and his counselors in the First Presidency in 1925 and entitled ‘The Mormon View of Evolution’ [included in this appendix] will be seen by comparison between the two to be a briefer version of the same statement in the identical language.²

First Presidency Statement: Words in Season, 1910. Nothing is known about the specific background of the 1910 statement, however its timing in light of other writings by President Smith and his associates in Church publications and of the controversies on curriculum content at Church schools seems to suggest a perceived need to reaffirm that “Our religion is not hostile to real science.”

First Presidency Statement: “Mormon” View of Evolution, 1925. James R. Clark writes:

The predecessor of this statement on the “Mormon View of Evolution” is the statement of the First Presidency on “The Origin of Man” published November, 1909.³ In fact, the present statement in paragraphs 1 through 5 constitutes extracts from paragraphs 3, 13, 14, 30, 34, and 35, respectively, of the 1909 statement, It therefore constitutes a shortened or condensed form of ² J. R. Clark, Messages, 4:199-200.

³ See ibid., 4:199-206.

the statement issued by the former First Presidency—Joseph F. Smith, John R. Winder and Anthon H. Lund.

The occasion prompting the issuance of this later condensed version by President Heber J. Grant and his counselors is not given in the Improvement Era where it was published.

However, in July, 1925, Darwinism had attracted international attention when John T. Scopes, a young high school teacher, had disobeyed the law of the State of Tennessee by teaching Darwinism or evolution. He was convicted and the results of the trial had national and international repercussions. Discussion was widespread in LDS circles. Under these circumstances, the title of the message itself is not without significance.⁴

Encyclopedia of Mormonism: Evolution, 1991. Regarding the background of this article, the author William E. Evenson has written:

Because of a fairly broad science background as a physics professor with research interests in evolutionary biology, I was asked to write the article on evolution for the Encyclopedia of Mormonism. This article went through a long process of refinement and review. It was originally to be 1,000 words long, then was revised to 2,500 words, to 3,500 words, and to 4,500 words. Finally, in the spring of 1991, the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve reviewed my last two versions, and a more anti-evolutionary revision of my article by someone else connected with the Encyclopedia. The Brethren decided that they wanted only a short article referring to the First Presidency statements on this subject, which are the only definitive sources of Church doctrine. The resulting entry in the Encyclopedia is only 258 words long.⁵

In this article is a quote from the 1931 minutes of the First Presidency, recorded at a time “when there was intense discussion on the issue of organic evolution.” Specifically, doctrinal issues relating to a decision about the publication of Elder B. H. Roberts’ manuscript *The Truth, the Way, the Life*⁶ were then under consideration. As Evenson points out, however, these discussions “were not centered on the scientific theories of origins of life forms. Rather, the central point of concern was whether death occurred on Earth before the Fall of Adam.”⁷ Roberts found evolutionary theory to be inadequate, and thus formulated his own theory as an attempt to reconcile the scriptures with science.

Though the 1931 First Presidency statement was specifically made in response to the question of death before the Fall that was raised by Roberts’ manuscript, its application to the broader context of evolution was deemed appropriate by later Church leaders. Writes Evenson: “It was at [the] initiative [of the First Presidency and members of the Twelve], and specifically by the action of then-First Counselor Gordon B. Hinckley, that the 1931 counsel was supplied to be used in the Encyclopedia to indicate the church’s position in 1992. This updates the 1931 counsel and gives it focus directly to modern conditions. The Encyclopedia and other writers are quite correct in citing it as a currently valid statement.”⁸

4 Ibid., 5:243.

5 W. E. Evenson, LDS Doctrine, p. xxxi.

6 B. H. Roberts, The Truth.

7 W. E. Evenson, in B. H. Roberts, The Truth, p. cxxiii.

8 W. E. Evenson, Counsel Valid.

Additional Material Relating to the Origin of Man

Improvement Era Editorial: Creation of Adam and Eve, 1910⁹

“In just what manner did the mortal bodies of Adam and Eve come into existence on this earth?” This question comes from several High Priests’ quorums.

Of course, all are familiar with the statements in Genesis 1: 26-27; 2: 7; also in the book of Moses, Pearl of Great Price, 2: 27; and in the book of Abraham 5: 7. The latter statement reads: “And the Gods formed man from the dust of the ground, and took his spirit (that is, the man’s spirit) and put it into him; and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul.”

These are the authentic statements of the scriptures, ancient and modern, and it is best to rest with these, until the Lord shall see fit to give more light on the subject. Whether the mortal bodies of man evolved in natural processes to present perfection, through the direction and power of God; whether the first parents of our generations, Adam and Eve, were transplanted from another sphere, with immortal tabernacles, which became corrupted through sin and the partaking of natural foods, in the process of time; whether they were born here in mortality, as other mortals have been, are questions not fully answered in the revealed word of God. For helpful discussion of the subject, see Improvement Era, Vol. XI, August 1908, No. 10, page 778, article, Creation and Growth of Adam; also article by the First Presidency, Origin of Man, Vol. XIII, No. 1, page 75, 1909.

President Joseph F. Smith: Philosophy and the Church Schools, 1915¹⁰

Some questions have arisen about the attitude of the Church on certain discussions of philosophy in the Church schools. Philosophical discussions as we understand them, are open questions about which men of science are very greatly at variance. As a rule we do not think it advisable to dwell on questions that are in controversy, and especially questions of a certain character, in the courses of instruction given by our institutions. In the first place it is the mission of our institutions of learning to qualify our young people for the practical duties of life. It is much to be preferred that they emphasize the industrial and practical side of education. Students are very apt to draw the conclusion that whichever side of a controversial question they adopt is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; and it is very doubtful therefore, whether the great mass of our students have sufficient discriminating judgment to understand very much about some of the advanced theories of philosophy or science.

Some subjects are in themselves, perhaps, perfectly harmless, and any amount of discussion over them would not be injurious to the faith of our young people. We are told, for example, that the theory of gravitation is at best a hypothesis and that such is the atomic theory. These theories help to explain certain things about nature. Whether they are ultimately true can not make much difference to the religious convictions of our young people. On the other hand there are speculations which touch the origin of life and the relationship of God to his children. In a very limited degree that relationship has been defined by revelation, and until we receive more light upon the subject we deem it best to refrain from the discussion of certain philosophical theories which rather destroy than build up the faith of our young people. One thing about this so-called philosophy of religion that is very undesirable, lies in the fact that as soon as we convert our religion into a system of philosophy none but philosophers can understand, appreciate, or enjoy it. God, in his revelation to man has made His word so simple that the humblest of men without especial training, may enjoy great faith, comprehend the teachings of the Gospel, and enjoy undisturbed their religious convictions. For that reason we are averse to the discussion of certain philosophical theories in our religious instructions. If our Church schools would confine their so-called course of study in biology to that knowledge of the insect world which would help us to eradicate the pests that threaten the destruction of our crops and our fruit, such instruction would answer much better the aims of the Church school, than theories which deal with the origin of life.

⁹ J. F. Smith et al., Editorial. See Endnote A-2, p. 803.

¹⁰ J. F. Smith, Philosophy. See Endnote A-3, p. 803.

These theories may have a fascination for our teachers and they may find interest in the study of them, but they are not properly within the scope of the purpose for which these schools were organized.

Some of our teachers are anxious to explain how much of the theory of evolution, in their judgment, is true, and what is false, but that only leaves their students in an unsettled frame of mind. They are not old enough and learned enough to discriminate, or put proper limitations upon a theory which we believe is more or less a fallacy. In reaching the conclusion that evolution would be best left out of discussions in our Church schools we are deciding a question of propriety and are not undertaking to say how much of evolution is true, or how much is false. We think that while it is a hypothesis, on both sides of which the most eminent scientific men of the world are arrayed, that it is folly to take up its discussion in our institutions of learning; and we can not see wherein such discussions are likely to promote the faith of our young people. On the other hand we have abundant evidence that many of those who have adopted in its fulness the theory of evolution have discarded the Bible, or at least refused to accept it as the inspired word of God. It is not, then, the question of the liberty of any teacher to entertain whatever views he may have upon this hypothesis of evolution, but rather the right of the Church to say that it does not think it profitable or wise to introduce controversies relative to evolution in its schools. Even if it were harmless from the standpoint of our faith, we think there are things more important to the daily affairs of life and the practical welfare of our young people. The Church itself has no philosophy about the modus operandi employed by the Lord in His creation of the world, and much of the talk therefore, about the philosophy of Mormonism is altogether misleading. God has revealed to us a simple and effectual way of serving Him, and we should regret very much to see the simplicity of those revelations involved in all sorts of philosophical speculations. If we encouraged them it would not be long before we should have a theological scholastic aristocracy in the Church, and we should therefore not enjoy the brotherhood that now is, or should be common to rich and poor, learned and unlearned among the Saints.

President David O. McKay: Design Permeating All Creation, 1952¹¹

“The most choice opportunity of the religious teacher should be to lead the child to see through the trouble and turmoil of a troubled world that,” note students, “in all His dispensation God is at work for our good. In prosperity he tries our gratitude, in mediocrity, our contentment, in misfortune, our submission, in darkness, our faith, under temptation our steadfastness, and at all times our obedience and trust in Him.” There is a perpetual design permeating all purposes of Creation. On these thoughts, science again leads the student up to a certain point and sometimes leads him with his soul unanchored. Millikan is right when he says, “Science without religion obviously may become a curse rather than a blessing to mankind.” But, science dominated by the spirit of religion is the key progress and the hope of the future. For example, evolution’s beautiful theory of the creation of the world offers many perplexing problems to the inquiring mind. Inevitably, a teacher who denies divine agency in Creation, who insists there is no intelligent purpose in it, will [infect] the student with the thought that all may be chance. I say, that no youth should be so led without a counter-balancing thought. Even the skeptic teacher should be fair enough to see that even Charles Darwin, when he faced this great question of annihilation, that the Creation is dominated only by chance wrote: “It is an intolerable thought that man and all other sentient beings are doomed to complete annihilation after such long, continued slow progress.”

¹¹ D. O. McKay, Message.

And another good authority, Raymond West, said, “Why this vast [expenditure] of time and pain and blood?” Why should man come so far if he’s destined to go no farther? A creature that travels such distances and fought such battles and won such victories deserves what we are compelled to say, “To conquer death and rob the grave of its victory.” The public school teacher will probably, even if he says that much, will go no farther. In the Church school the teacher is unhampered. In the Brigham Young University and every other church school the teacher can say God is at the helm. God is the Creator of the earth, He’s the Father of our souls and spirits. No question about it. You have your testimony — if you haven’t you shouldn’t be on the faculty. Fosdick said that “Perpetuation of personality is the highest thing in creation.” Church school teachers can add the Lord revealed to Prophet Joseph Smith the sublime truth: “This is my work and glory. To bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man.”¹²

President David O. McKay: Honest Convictions Can Be Expressed, 1956¹³

And now I have just time to comment on the opportunity of the BYU to teach these fundamental truths. This thought was expressed by Dr. Sidney B. Sperry in the opening prayer, that here in this school [BYU], destined to become the greatest in the world, opportunities are given to guide students in this higher quality of life, this guide, this anchor, this cord leading into the depths of the forest. Whatever the subject may be, the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ may be elaborated upon without fear of anyone’s objecting, and the teacher can be free to express his honest conviction regarding it, whether that subject be in geology, the history of the world, the millions of years that it took to prepare the physical world, whether it be in engineering, literature, art—any principles of the gospel may be briefly or extensively touched upon for the anchoring of the student who is seeking to know the truth.

President Spencer W. Kimball: Creation of Adam and Eve, 1976¹⁴

The Creators breathed into their nostrils the breath of life and man and woman became living souls. We don’t know exactly how their coming into this world happened, and when we’re able to understand it the Lord will tell us.

¹² Moses 1:39.

¹³ D. O. McKay, Anchor. See Endnote A-4, p. 803.

¹⁴ Church Educational System, Religion 327, p. 9; S. W. Kimball, Blessings.

John L. Sorenson: Origin of Man, 1991¹⁵

The view of the “origin of man” in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints differs significantly from that in most other modern traditions. Its prime concern is to affirm that humans were created as spirits by and in the image of God, which determined their form and nature long before they became earthly organisms. Questions about what biological or cultural mechanisms might have produced Homo sapiens and over what period of time that often dominate secular discussions are of limited interest for Latter-day Saints.

The clearest presentation of the Church position may be a 1909 statement by the First Presidency entitled “The Origin of Man,” where four essential points are made: (1) God created humans (Gen. 1:27-28); (2) God created Adam, “the origin of the human family” and “the first man”; (3) creation was sequential: first spiritual, later physical; and (4) each human body displays the characteristics of the individual premortal spirit that inhabits it. Other ideas included in the statement are that humanity was not “a development from the lower orders of creation” but a “fall” from a higher state of existence; that an understanding of all the details about the origin of man is not vital to one’s salvation, although the matter is related to several important truths; that the subject cannot be fully clarified by human learning alone; and that only certain relevant facts are now known, to which the Church adheres.

Subsequent official statements indicate that the details of how Adam became “the first man” are considered not to have been revealed clearly enough to settle questions of process. Emphasized instead is an eternal perspective wherein the individual as an “undeveloped offspring of celestial parentage is capable, by experience through ages and aeons, of evolving into a God” ([Improvement Era] 28:1091).

Since the rise of Darwinism in 1860, individual Latter-day Saints, both leaders and members, have occasionally participated in public discussion about evolution, since the official position of the Church on man’s origin is not definitive in all respects. Mormons have expressed a wide range of views that are reminiscent of the well-known debates among Christians. Since a large number of Latter-day Saints entered careers in science early in this century, some have attempted to reconcile scientific facts and ideas with statements from the scriptures and prophetic leaders that are emphasized in the LDS tradition. Others have argued that in this area science merely offers “theories of men” and should therefore be discounted.

Many sympathetic to science interpret certain statements in LDS scripture to mean that God used a version of evolution to prepare bodies and environmental surrounding suitable for the premortal spirits. For example, one scriptural description of creation says, “the Gods organized the earth to bring forth . . . every thing that creepeth upon the earth after its kind” (Abraham 4:25 [emphasis added]). Certain statements of various General Authorities are also used by proponents of this idea to justify their opinions.

Other Latter-day Saints accept a more literal reading of scriptural passages that suggest to them an abrupt creation. Proponents of this view also support their positions with statements from scripture and General Authorities.

While the current state of revealed truth on the LDS doctrine of man’s origin may permit some differences of opinion concerning the relationship of science and religion, it clearly affirms that God created man, that the fall of Adam was foreknown of God and was real and significant, and that the Atonement of Christ was foreordained and necessary to reverse the effects of the Fall. Perhaps because these claims embrace the main doctrinal issues relevant to the condition of man, the description of the actual creation process does not receive much attention from the general membership of the Church or from the authorities.

¹⁵ J. L. Sorenson, Origin.

Bibliography

Jeffrey, Duane E. “Seers, Savants and Evolution: The Uncomfortable Interface.” Dialogue 8, Nos. 3/4 (1973):41-75.

“Mormon View of Evolution.” [Improvement Era] 28 (Sept. 1925):1090-91; reprinted in [Messages of the First Presidency] 5:244.

“The Origin of Man.” [Improvement Era] 13 (Nov. 1909):75-81; reprinted in [Messages of the First Presidency] 4:199-206.

Packer, Boyd K. “The Law and the Light.” In The Book of Mormon: Jacob Through Words of Mormon, To Learn with Joy, eds. M. Nyman and C. Tate, pp. 1-31. Salt Lake City, 1990.

JOHN L. SORENSON

President Gordon B. Hinckley: Organic Evolution, 1997¹⁶

People ask me every now and again if I believe in evolution. I tell them I am not concerned with organic evolution. I do not worry about it. I passed through that argument long ago.¹⁷

President Gordon B. Hinckley: The Origin of Man, 2002¹⁸

What the Church requires is only belief “that Adam was the first man of what we would call the human race,” says Gordon Hinckley, the church’s living prophet. Scientists can speculate on the rest, he says, recalling his own study of anthropology and geology: “Studied all about it. Didn’t worry me then. Doesn’t worry me now.”¹⁹

¹⁶ See Endnote A-5, p. 803.

¹⁷ G. B. Hinckley, Ogden Institute, p. 379.

¹⁸ See Endnote A-6, p. 803.

¹⁹ G. B. Hinckley, 2002, cited in L. A. Witham, Darwin, p. 177.

Endnotes

- A-1 These and additional statements have also been published with commentary in W. E. Evenson et al., Evolution.
- A-2 This editorial was prepared in reply to questions from “several High Priests’ quorums,” where the 1909 statement of the First Presidency had no doubt been a subject of continuing discussion. Moreover, the 1910 Manual for the Priests Quorum prepared by Elder B. H. Roberts had contained the following statement, which also may have engendered questions: “Man has descended from God; in fact, he is of the same race as the Gods. His descent has not been from a lower form of life, but from the Highest Form of Life; in other words, man is, in the most literal sense, a child of God. This is not only true of the spirit of man, but of his body also.”²⁰
- Although the Improvement Era editorial is unsigned and could have been initially prepared by co-editor Edward H. Anderson, the other editor of the publication was President Joseph F. Smith, who normally would have at least reviewed such articles.²¹
- A-3 “In the latter part of 1910, the questions of academic freedom and curriculum content in the Church school system came into critical focus.... ‘Higher criticism’ and ‘evolution’ were the subjects of stated concern...., four professors were eventually terminated at BYU, and President Joseph F. Smith undertook to explain the matter to the Church in editorials in the April 1911 issues of the Era and the Juvenile Instructor.”²² The focus of President Smith’s statement is the observation that the preferred emphasis of Church schools at the time was to be the “industrial and practical side of education.” With respect to the topic of evolution, he makes it clear that “in reaching the conclusion that evolution would be best left out of discussions in our Church schools” it was a “question of propriety” and not a matter of saying “how much of evolution is true, or how much is false.... The Church itself has no philosophy about the modus operandi employed by the Lord in His creation of the world, and much of the talk therefore about the philosophy of Mormonism is altogether misleading.”
- Since 1911, the academic mission of Church schools has understandably broadened beyond its initial more wholly vocational focus. The first formal class in evolution was instituted at BYU in the fall of 1971 with the First Presidency’s approval, and is currently a required part of the core curriculum of all BYU students in the biological sciences. Evolutionary biology²³ has since become “one of the largest and most successful graduate programs at BYU,”²⁴ with professors publishing in major evolutionary conferences and journals. See Givens²⁵ for a brief summary of efforts of Mormon scientists that “not only incorporate evolutionary science, but break new ground in the field.”
- With respect to what should be taught in public school classrooms, the Church has declined to take part in any debate of the issue, and an effort to require the schools to teach that not all scientists agree about the origin of life was soundly defeated in the Utah legislature in 2006.²⁶
- A-4 During the previous two years, President McKay had responded to several inquiries about the official position of the Church regarding evolution and the age of the earth.²⁷
- A-5 On 15 April 1997, President Gordon B. Hinckley delivered a speech to students at the LDS Institute in Ogden, Utah. “The speech is a series of responses to students’ questions, exhorting them to good living and high commitments, building to a response about evolution, and then to personal testimony. A variety of interpretations can be sustained in the context of the overall speech; we suggest readers consult the speech in its entirety. The kernel statement about evolution is given here.”²⁸
- A-6 From an interview with Larry A. Witham, who assured authors Evenson and Jeffery that the statement “was accurately transcribed from his tape-recorded interview.”²⁹

20 B. H. Roberts, Divine Mission, Lesson 14 The Creation of Man, p. 35.

21 D. E. Jeffery, We Don’t Know, p. 32.

22 Ibid., pp. 32-33.

23 Biology.

24 M. R. Ash, Myth, pp. 32-33.

25 T. L. Givens, Paradox, pp. 209-210, 378-379 nn. 59-64.

26 E. Jarvik, Beliefs.

27 G. A. Prince et al., McKay, pp. 45-49.

28 W. E. Evenson et al., Evolution, p. 108.

29 Ibid., p. 110.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Annotated Bibliography of Ancient Texts Related to the Book of Moses and JST Genesis

Co-Authored with Stephen T. Whitlock

Introduction.....	805
Annotated Bibliography	806
Ancient Near Eastern Texts.....	806
Early Old Testament Manuscripts and Translations	813
The Old Testament Apocrypha.....	815
The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha.....	817
The Dead Sea Scrolls and Other Related Texts	822
Jewish Texts	830
Christian Texts	838
Nag Hammadi Codices and Various Gnostic Texts	849
Zoroastrian Texts	856
Mandaean Texts	863
Manichaean Texts	883
Islamic Texts	896
Endnotes	903

Introduction

This section provides an annotated bibliography of ancient texts related to the book of Moses and the rest of JST Genesis, with a guide to currently available English translations.¹ Occasionally, French, German, or Latin translations are included, especially where good English translations are not readily available. Ancient texts only tangentially related to JST Genesis are also sometimes included here if they are deemed relevant for other reasons, or if they have been specifically cited elsewhere in the book.

The texts are grouped into categories that reflect their presumed authorship. Exact or approximate dates of authorship are given where available, but note that these often vary widely and are frequently the subject of scholarly controversy. The following abbreviations are used in connection with information about dates: ca. = circa, b. = born, d. = died, fl. = flourished. As in the rest of the commentary, complete publication information for cited texts can be found in the References section of this book. Happily, much of this literature is also available online but, due to the rapidly changing nature of such collections, we do not attempt a comprehensive catalogue of these sources here. Because, in most cases, Zoroastrian, Mandaean, and Manichaean texts are not as readily available, well-known, or accessible as Jewish, Christian, and Islamic ones, we summarize the beliefs, rituals, and sources of these in more breadth and detail.

¹ See Endnote B-1, p. 903.

Ancient Near Eastern Texts

The diversity of the settings and ideologies that played their parts in the development of this complex and voluminous literature makes it impossible to do justice to the texts and their possible relationships to JST Genesis. Because of their importance to the book of Abraham and LDS temple teachings, a separate section on Egyptian funerary documents is given below. Following this section, we describe a selection of documents drawn from two standard collections of Ancient Near Eastern texts.

In addition to these texts, we note the Babyloniaca (History of Babylonia) of Berossus, published about 290-278 BCE for the Macedonian/Seleucid king, Antiochus 1.² It has not been preserved as a complete text, but exists only in fragments cited by Greek, Jewish, and Christian writers. Book 1 records the Babylonian creation account, Book 2 the history of the ante- and post-diluvian Babylonian kings, and Book 3 the history of Babylon from Nabonassaros to Antiochus 1. An English translation of the assembled fragments can be found in Berossus, History.

Egyptian Funerary Documents

From what has survived of their culture, one might assume that the ancient Egyptians were obsessed with death. When most people think of Egypt, the relics of death come immediately to mind: pyramids and other great tombs; mummies that have been preserved for thousands of years; amulets, jars, statues and other items recovered from tombs. Their obsession, however, was not with death, but with eternal life.³ As Budge has explained, “The resurrection was the object of every formula, every text, every ceremony of Egyptian life...”⁴ It is also now known that some portions of these documents “were used for religious purposes while the individual was still alive.”⁵ Going further, David writes: “There was no ancient division between the funerary customs and the religious practices of the living. In both spheres, the Egyptians sought to influence the gods and gain the benefits they desired.”⁶

David provides a helpful summary of literary sources for ancient Egypt.⁷ The oldest written sources are the Pyramid Texts, dating from the 5th through 7th Dynasties of the Old Kingdom, or approximately 2300 BCE. As indicated by their name, they were inscribed on the interior of pyramids at Saqqara, nine in number. These funerary inscriptions consist of short statements or sayings, usually identified as Utterances or Spells. Each pyramid contains a different selection of these spells that came from a common catalog. In total, over seven hundred separate spells have been preserved. These texts were written to give guidance to the deceased, to provide protection in the afterlife, and to enable the deceased to join the gods.

Originally discovered by Gaston Maspero in 1881, the Pyramid Texts were first translated into German by Kurt Sethe, into French by Louis Speleers, and into English by Samuel A. B. Mercer. In addition to the selections in collected works described below, English

2 Berossus.

3 H. W. Nibley, Greatness, pp. 299-300. Nibley’s article provides a unique perspective on the study of Egyptian history, culture, and religion.

4 E. A. W. Budge, Egyptian Religion, p. 7.

5 J. Gee, Guide, p. 62.

6 R. David, Experience, p. 21.

7 Ibid., pp. 43-47. For an anthology of the full range of ancient Egyptian literature, see M. Lichtheim, Readings.

translations of the entire set of Pyramid Texts are available in editions edited by Faulkner⁸ and, more recently, by Allen.⁹ Allen has also edited a volume of additional middle kingdom copies of fifth and sixth dynasty Pyramid Texts that were assembled over the years as part of the Oriental Institute's Coffin Texts project.¹⁰ An online edition of the texts from the pyramid of Unas is available at Pyramid.

The Coffin Texts began to replace the Pyramid Texts at the end of the Old Kingdom. However, most of the Coffin Texts date from the Middle Kingdom, about 2000-1700 BCE. Like the Pyramid Texts, these spells were selected from a larger catalog and customized to the individual. Most of the time they were painted on the inside of the coffins, and they were available not only to royalty but also those commoners who could afford to have them produced. Sometimes additional texts might be painted on the tomb wall and funerary furniture, or written on manuscripts.

The Coffin Texts expanded on the Pyramid Texts and included more information about the afterlife and the transformation of the soul through its various stages. They also began to include illustrations and maps of the underworld. Over 1100 of these texts have been collected and published by Faulkner.¹¹

In the New Kingdom, the Funerary Books introduced a format that both allowed for expansion of content and also for widespread purchase by ordinary individuals. The most important of these books is the Book of the "Coming Forth by Day," more commonly known as the Book of the Dead. The Book of Breathings is the title of another book of the same genre.

The earliest editions of the Book of the Dead date from the 18th Dynasty of the New Kingdom, or 1550-1295 BCE. They reflected a "shift from regarding the afterlife as being achievable only via the king to a situation in which individuals increasingly made their own provisions. There was also a gradual move towards the concept of righteous living as a qualification for the enjoyment of an afterlife."¹² Like previous funerary texts, each Book of the Dead was created for a particular deceased individual and contained chapters selected from a master set. These chapters or Spells were compiled and recorded on a papyrus roll. One well known copy of the Book of the Dead, written for a scribe named Ani, was originally nearly eighty feet long. Although no two versions of the Book of the Dead are alike, there are several different styles that developed regionally. Some editions follow a strict order of included chapters while others follow unique patterns.¹³ Some include hieroglyphic and hieratic writing, while others restrict themselves to hieroglyphs.

Most copies of the Book of the Dead include a judgment scene where the individual's heart is weighed on a balance against Maat, symbolized by a feather of truth. Any transgressions will add weight to the heart, unbalance the scale, and result in severe consequences. A set of 42 negative confessions must be truthfully made prior to one's joining the gods. These consist of a list of statements similar in spirit to the Ten Commandments, though in more detail (e.g., I have not lied, I have not robbed, I have not been a land grabber).

8 R. O. Faulkner, Pyramid.

9 J. P. Allen, Pyramid.

10 J. P. Allen, Coffin Texts.

11 R. O. Faulkner, Coffin.

12 I. Shaw et al., Dictionary, p. 122.

13 Gee notes: "Until Saite times (after about 672 BCE), the contents of the Book of the Dead were neither standardized in the selection of chapters nor in their ordering" (J. Gee, Guide, p. 62).

Budge published successive English editions of the Book of the Dead.¹⁴ He also produced a great quantity of translations of other Egyptian and Assyrian literature early in the late 19th and 20th centuries, most still readily available in reprint editions or online.¹⁵ However, Egyptian scholarship has advanced considerably since Budge made his translations. Allen¹⁶ and Faulkner,¹⁷ for example, have produced readily available modern translations. These typically begin with the spells included in well-known papyrus of Ani and then supplement the text with excerpts from other copies of the Book of the Dead to round out the collection.

To LDS readers, the Egyptian funerary texts of greatest interest are the ones included in the Joseph Smith Papyri: the Papyrus of Hor (a copy of the Book of Breathings Made by Isis, including Facsimiles 1 and 3 from the book of Abraham) and the Papyrus of Semmynis (which included portions of the Tshemmin Book of the Dead). The Papyrus of Hor has been scrutinized carefully since 1967, when lost portions were recovered by the Church from the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The most complete and up-to-date translation is by Rhodes.¹⁸ Nibley also published an extensive commentary on the Papyrus of Hor, comparing it to various aspects of the LDS temple endowment.¹⁹ A translation and commentary on the Tshemmin Book of the Dead by Michael D. Rhodes is also planned for publication.²⁰ For overviews of the history and composition of the Joseph Smith Papyri, perspectives on relevant studies by Egyptologists, and the relationship of the papyri to the book of Abraham and the Kirtland Egyptian Papers, see Gee.²¹ A detailed history of the papyri also can be found in Peterson.²²

From about 600 BCE until the Christian era, some Egyptian mummies included a small disk made of papyrus, linen, metal or clay under the head. This disk is referred to as a hypocephalus, from the Greek words meaning “under the head.” The hypocephalus symbolized the eye of Ra or Horus, representing the sun, and also included references to the afterlife and resurrection. More than a hundred hypocephali have been discovered and, like the other funerary documents described above, no two are alike. Spell 162 of the Saite versions of the Book of the Dead contain the instructions for constructing the hypocephali. Facsimile 2 in the book of Abraham, part of the Joseph Smith Papyri, is an example of a hypocephalus.

Rhodes has published a translation and commentary on the hypocephalus included in the book of Abraham as Facsimile 2.²³ The insights of Rhodes regarding Facsimiles 1-3 and the book of Abraham are also available as part of the verse-by-verse commentary on the Pearl of Great Price he co-authored with Richard D. Draper and S. Kent Brown.²⁴ Missing parts of Facsimile 2 have been reconstructed from similar hypocephali in the British Museum. Hypocephali are on display at various museums, including the British Museum, the Louvre, and the Pennsylvania Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology.

14 E. A. W. Budge, Book of the Dead.

15 E.g. E. A. W. Budget, Book of the Dead Online.

16 T. G. Allen, Egyptian; T. G. Allen, Book.

17 C. Andrews, Book of the Dead.

18 M. D. Rhodes, Hor. See also J. Gee et al., Astronomy; K. Muhlestein, Breathings; K. Muhlestein, Understandings.

19 H. W. Nibley, Message 2005.

20 M. D. Rhodes, Tshemmin.

21 J. Gee, Guide; J. Gee, Eyewitness; J. Gee, New Light.

22 H. D. Peterson, Story.

23 M. D. Rhodes, Hypocephalus Translation; M. D. Rhodes, Twenty Years.

24 R. D. Draper et al., Commentary.

Selections from ANET and COS

The classic collection of primary sources is Pritchard's Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament (ANET). This collection has now been superseded by a three-volume set edited by Hallo entitled The Context of Scripture (COS). COS was issued in three volumes: canonical works, inscriptions, and archival material. More than double the size of ANET, it contains up-to-date translations and more extensive commentary. Besides these two works, an invaluable survey of ancient Near East sources can be found in K. L. Sparks, Ancient Texts. The most up-to-date corpus of Sumerian texts in English translation is The Electronic Text Corpus of Sumerian Literature. Other useful descriptions of sources and readings can be found in M. W. Chavalas et al., Mesopotamia; R. J. Clifford, Creation; J. D. Currid, Egypt; R. S. Hess et al., Inscriptions; J. M. Roberts, Ancient Near East; J. H. Walton, Ancient.

The 1969 edition of ANET (Third Edition with Supplement) has been used in the table below. Texts are divided into ten categories and each category is divided by nation, culture or language. We have maintained the major categories and indicated the origins of the text by the column labeled "culture." As will be seen, only a few of the major categories are relevant, with most of the references coming from the first one that includes myths, epics and other legendary materials.

COS, published in 2003 also includes excerpts from the Egyptian Pyramid and Coffin Texts. The Pyramid Texts are listed after the Memphite Theology below, as they are generally the oldest Egyptian writings. These are followed by the Coffin Texts and the papyrus manuscripts.

Text Name	Date	Culture	Publication Reference and Comment	ANET	COS
Myths, Epics, and Legends
Memphite Theology	ca. 1300 BCE or ca. 710 BCE	Egyptian	While earlier studies placed the origin of the text in the Old Kingdom, prior to the Pyramid texts, more recent research posits a date no earlier than the 13 th century BCE, and possibly as late as 710 BCE (M. Lichtheim, Readings , 3:5). The text was recorded on the Shabaka Stone in about 710 BCE. A more complete English translation is available in M. Lichtheim, Memphite . For a photo and commentary, see Figure E1-1 , p. 514	4-6 (excerpt)	1:21-23
Pyramid Text, Spell 527	Late Old Kingdom – 2400 BCE	Egyptian	Description of the derivation of the first two elements of the world from a single source as symbolized by Shu and Tefnut coming from Atum.		1:7
Pyramid Text, Spell 600: Creation by Atum	Late Old Kingdom – 2400 BCE	Egyptian	Part of dedication ritual for royal pyramids that recounts the first creation. Carved inside two Sixth Dynasty pyramids. Description of the source of matter, evolution of the sun, and the waters during the beginning of creation. In this case, ANET includes more material than does COS.	3	1:7-8
Coffin Text, Spell 75	First Intermediate Period	Egyptian	Identification of the deceased with the first elements of the world.		1:8-9
Coffin Text, Spell 76	First Intermediate Period	Egyptian	Construction of the world from the initial creation of the atmosphere.		1:10-11
Coffin Text, Spell 78	First Intermediate Period	Egyptian	The origins of permanence and repetition as symbolized by Tefnut and Shu respectively. See Pyramid Text 527 .		1:11
Coffin Text, Spell 80	First Intermediate Period	Egyptian	Expansions of the roles of Tefnut and Shu to include death, rebirth, the creation of people and the order for the universe.		1:11-14
Coffin Text, Spell 160: The Repulsing of the Dragon	1300 BCE	Egyptian	Middle Kingdom coffin text, later used in the Book of the Dead . Describes the victory over a dragon or snake by Ra.	11-12	1:32

Text Name	Date	Culture	Publication Reference and Comment	ANET	COS
Coffin Text, Spell 261	First Intermediate Period	Egyptian	The deceased is identified with the primordial source of all matter.		1:17-18
Coffin Text, Spell 335: Creation by Atum	2000 BCE	Egyptian	Important creation text used in the 17 th chapter of the Book of the Dead from 2000 to 1000 BCE. The Coffin Text version is better preserved than the Book of the Dead version (Spell 17) referenced herein.		1:15-17
Book of the Dead, Spell 17: Creation by Atum	2000 BCE	Egyptian	Important creation text used in the 17 th chapter of the Book of the Dead from 2000 to 1000 BCE. This text is based on Coffin Text Spell 335.	3-4
Coffin Text, Spell 647	First Intermediate Period	Egyptian	The link between the statement of creation by fiat and the forces and elements that performed the creation.		1:18-19
Coffin Text, Spell 714	First Intermediate Period	Egyptian	The role of magic or divine force in the creation.		1:6-7
Coffin Text, Spell 1130: All Men Created Equal in Opportunity	2000 BCE	Egyptian	A divine declaration that all have equality of opportunity. The text is found only on four wooden coffins.	7-8	1:26-27
Book of the Dead, Spell 117	1500 BCE	Egyptian	Spell for taking the road to Rosetjau, the Netherworld. See Figure 4-11 , p. 230.
Book of the Dead, Spell 175: The Primeval Establishment of Order	1500 BCE	Egyptian	Chapter 175 of the Book of the Dead for Ani, this text describes the responsibility of Atum to bring order through the creation and the preservation of the dead.	9-10	1:27-30
Thebes as the Place of Creation	1300 BCE	Egyptian	Extract from a hymn glorifying Thebes as the center of the creation and Amon Ra as the creator.	8
Deliverance of Mankind from Destruction	1300 BCE	Egyptian	Recorded on the walls of several Theban tombs, this text records the sin of mankind (plotting against the gods), the disappointment of the creator and the narrow escape from destruction by the gods. There is an implication that individuals might be saved in the future from destruction.	10-11	1:36-37
The God and His Unknown Name of Power	1300 BCE	Egyptian	Isis plots to learn the secret name of Ra. It is recorded that this name was given to him before he came into being by his father and his mother.	12-14	1:33-34
Ramesside Stella	New Kingdom	Egyptian	Concise description of the first land created.		1:20
The Contest of Horus and Seth for Rule	1200 BCE	Egyptian	Horus and Seth fight for dominion as replacements for Osiris (Seth's brother and Horus' father)	14-17
Papyrus Bremner-Rhind: Repulsing the Dragon and the Creation	Ptolemaic Period	Egyptian	The evolution of the gods from Atum and an account of the triumph of Ra over Apophis and the creation by Ra.	6-7	1:14-15
Papyrus Leiden I 350	New Kingdom	Egyptian	Amon as the creator.		1:23-26
Story of Sinuhe	1800 BCE	Egyptian	Regarded by some as the greatest masterpiece of Egyptian literature, this is a popular story about a wealthy and successful official in exile who at last returns home. The story reflected a pattern for a common three-part literary pattern in ancient Near Eastern literature: trouble at home, exile abroad, and happy homecoming (A. Gileadi, Literary , p. 12; cf. J. Assman, Death , pp. 164-185). Nibley uses the story to point out resemblances to the patriarchal narratives (in particular, the book of Abraham and Moses 1) that evidence both historical and ritual elements in the story (H. W. Nibley, Message 2005 , pp. 81, 112-113; H. W. Nibley, Abraham 2000 , pp. 221-225, 243-244, 304, 419-420). Nibley also applies criteria for its historicity developed by Albright to the Book of Mormon (H. W. Nibley, Lehi 1988 , p. 3), and compares the desert flight of Sinuhe to that of Lehi (H. W. Nibley, Lehi 1988 , pp. 47-48).	18-22	1:77-82

Text Name	Date	Culture	Publication Reference and Comment	ANET	COS
The Story of Two Brothers	ca. 1225 BCE	Egyptian	A tale of a “conscientious young man... falsely accused of a proposal of adultery by the wife of his elder brother, after he had actually rejected her advances. This part of the story has general similarity to the story of Joseph and Potiphar’s wife” (J. B. Pritchard, Two Brothers , p. 23). The story pattern and the mixture of history and ritual is seen by Nibley as similar in many respects to that of Sinuhe. See H. W. Nibley, Abraham 2000 , pp. 219-222, 224, 244, 247, 368-371, 570.	23-25	1:85-89
Enki and Ninhursag: A Paradise Myth	1500 BCE	Sumerian	With many parallels to Genesis 2 and 3, the story, set in Dilmun, describes creation through impregnation by Enki, the growth and partaking of eight plants by Enki, his expulsion from Dilmun and his reconciliation and acceptance back.	37-41
Enki and Ninmah	1500 BCE	Sumerian	The creation of man from clay and a contest between Enki and Ninmah.		1:516-519
Dumizi and Enkimdu: The Dispute between the Shepherd-God and the Farmer-God		Sumerian	Initially paralleling the Cain and Abel story, this one ends peacefully, rather than in a murder. Nibley cites Assmann’s conclusion that “the perennial conflict between the farmer and the herdsman” is “most prominent in the Abraham legends” (H. W. Nibley, Abraham 2000 , p. 220).	41-42
Disputation between the Ewe and the Wheat		Sumerian	A disputation text, unusual for its lengthy cosmological preface. Paralleling aspects of Adam traditions, it also recounts how wool and wheat were divinely provided in primeval times.		1:575-578
The Eridu Genesis, or The Deluge		Sumerian	Brief account of a flood paralleling in several respects the story of Noah. It begins with the Creation and establishment of five cities. Only one fragmentary tablet survives.	42-44	1:513-515
The Death of Gilgamesh		Sumerian	Survives in two sections with an indeterminate break in the middle. The first part recounts the moment Gilgamesh is told he will not live eternally in mortality, his death, and the subsequent mourning. The second surviving part lists his family and other attendants and recounts his offerings to the deities of the nether world. One interpretation has him becoming the king of the world of the afterlife.	50-52
Inanna’s Descent to the Nether World	2000-1500 BCE	Sumerian	Account of Inanna’s visit to the nether world where she is stripped of all possessions, killed and left impaled on a stake for three days. She is revived and rescued by two messengers bringing the food and water of life, sent by her husband.	52-57
The Creation Epic or Enuma Elish	2000 BCE	Akkadian / Babylonian	Recited annually on New Year’s Day, this epic poem recounts the struggle between chaos and order and the resultant creation of the world and living things.	60-72, 501-503	1:390-402
The Epic of Gilgamesh	2000 BCE	Akkadian / Babylonian	Gilgamesh attempts to circumvent death by learning the secret of immortality, and in the process learns of the Great Flood from its hero and survivor, Utnapishtim. Well-preserved in several versions, the flood account has many parallels to that in the Old Testament including a snake who foiled Gilgamesh’s bid for immortality by carrying off the plant of life he had found on his quest. Although the flood account has been of most interest to scholars, the focus of the Epic itself is man’s quest for immortality. For a complete English translation of this work, see A. George, Gilgamesh .	72-98, 503-507	1:458-460
The Creation of Man by the Mother Goddess		Akkadian / Babylonian	Brief account of the creation of man out of clay that is mixed with the flesh and blood of a slain deity. An Assyrian version is appended in ANET.	99-100
A Cosmological Incantation: The Worm and the Toothache		Akkadian / Babylonian	Brief text to cure toothaches, taken from a more ancient source that recounts the creation of the world.	100-101

Text Name	Date	Culture	Publication Reference and Comment	ANET	COS
Adapa		Akkadian / Babylonian	Four variants of a brief text that describe man's squandered opportunity for obtaining immortality. Similarities and differences with the story of Adam are discussed in D. E. Callender, Adam , pp. 75-84.	101-103	1:449
Atrahasis		Akkadian / Babylonian	Four variant fragments of deluge texts.	104-106, 512-514	1:450-453
Descent of Ishtar to the Nether world		Akkadian / Babylonian	Similar to the Sumerian text describing Inanna's descent, this is not just a copy but an account of a similar experience from a Babylonian perspective. Shorter than the Sumerian text, this version is also more symmetrical (and possibly chiasitic) giving a more detailed account of Ishtar's return.	106-109	1:381-384
A Vision of the Nether World		Akkadian / Babylonian	A vision of the nether world including the family of gods reigning there.	109-110
The Theogony of Dunnu		Akkadian / Babylonian	Three incarnations of the City of Dunnu from a pristine heavenly city to an ancient capital.		1:402-404
The Myth of Zu		Akkadian / Babylonian	Zu, after claiming to be superior to the other gods, steals the Tablet of Destinies and eventually is subdued.	111-113, 514-517	3:327-334
Etana		Akkadian / Babylonian	Two versions (Babylonian and Assyrian) from several sources of Etana's visit to heaven.	114-118, 517	1:453-457
The Moon that Fell from Heaven		Hittite	Brief description of the moon god's fall and the reaction of the other gods.	120
Kingship in Heaven		Hittite	Origins and rivalries of gods in heaven.	120-121
The Song of Ullikum-mis		Hittite	Description of the rivalries of the gods from the perspective of the supreme god.	121-125
Legal Texts
Lipit-Ishtar Lawcode		Sumerian / Akkadian	The prologue describes how the laws that follow originated with the father of the gods.	159-161	2:410-414
The Code of Hammurabi	ca. 1760 BCE	Babylonian	An ancient code of laws preserved on a seven-foot stele now found in the Louvre. Hammurabi asserted that these laws came from the gods through the firstborn god, Marduk.	163-180	2:335-353
Instructions for Temple Officials		Hittite	Dress code and sacrifice instructions.	207-210	1:217-221
Rituals, Incantations and Festivals
Daily Ritual of the Temple of Amun-Re at Karnak: Papyrus Berlin 3055		Egyptian	Spells and recitations for the Karnak Temple.	325-326	1:55-57
Ritual for the Repair of a Temple		Akkadian	This ritual survives in three texts, two (A and B) from Uruk, and a third (C) from Babylon. Text C includes a description of the creation and its relationship to restoring temples.	339-342
Hymns and Prayers
A Hymn to Amon-Re	1800-1600 BCE	Egyptian	Reference to Amon-Re as the eldest in heaven and firstborn of earth.	365-367	1:37-40
Amon as the Sole God		Egyptian	Dating from the 19 th Dynasty, after the Amarna period, this hymn emphasizes Amon as the sole god.	368-369
The Hymn to Aten		Egyptian	Emphasis on Aton as the whole god during the Amarna period.	369-371	1:44-46
Berlin Hymn to Ptah	New Kingdom	Egyptian	Hymn describing the creative force of Ptah.		1:20-21
The Hymn to Osiris		Egyptian	Most complete Egyptian form of the Osiris myth.		1:41-43

Early Old Testament Manuscripts and Translations

The major groups of early Old Testament manuscripts and translations include a family of early Greek translations (Septuagint or LXX), translations and proto-Midrash of the Old Testament made so that Aramaic-speaking Jewish communities could also hear the words of the Hebrew scriptures in their own tongue (Targum), the Syriac Peshitta, the Latin Vulgate, and the Hebrew Masoretic Text (MT).

Metzger²⁵ and Pelikan²⁶ each provide a good overview of the history of ancient and English versions of the Bible. In-depth discussions of historical and theological issues relating to the formation of the biblical canon can be found in L. M. McDonald et al., Canon.

Text Name	Date	Description	English Publication Reference
Septuagint (LXX), or Alexandrian, Version	ca. 250-150 BCE	A family of early translations of the Old Testament into Greek deriving its name from a tradition that the translation of the Pentateuch was accomplished by seventy-two Jewish scholars. It includes not only the OT but also most of the Apocrypha and some interesting—and probably superior—variants from the MT on key passages. This was the version of the OT quoted in prophetic citations by the NT, and is still used by much of Eastern Orthodoxy. Overall the LXX shows wide agreement with the MT , and few variants are found in Genesis. However, several areas of agreement between the LXX and the Qumran bible texts where both differ from the MT provide evidence that a separate manuscript tradition was behind each of them.	An inexpensive, though now dated, one volume translation of the LXX from the Codex Vaticanus can be found in L. C. L. Brenton, Septuagint . Oxford University Press is in the process of publishing its multi-volume New English Translation of the Septuagint (NETS), based on the NRSV, for which a provisional text of Genesis has been made available online (R. J. V. Hiebert, Septuagint). A one-volume edition of NETS appeared in 2007 (A. Pietersma et al., Septuagint), and another English translation has been made (J. N. Sparks et al., Orthodox Study Bible). A superb French translation of the Pentateuch has also been published (C. Dogniez et al., Pentateuque). Jobes and Silva have written an excellent introduction to the LXX (K. H. Jobes et al., Septuagint), and Brayford has prepared a commentary highlighting the manner in which the Greek text altered the understanding of Genesis (S. Brayford, Septuagint Genesis).
Targum Onkelos (Bavli or Babylonian)	ca. 300-400	This Aramaic translation of the Old Testament got its name from a Roman convert to Judaism mentioned in the Talmud who at one time was thought to have composed it. It is the only one of the Targums that was given official status as a text to be read alternatively verse by verse with the Hebrew Torah in the synagogue. When Aramaic was no longer spoken, public use of the Targum ceased, except in Jewish communities in Yemen.	See B. Grossfeld, Onkelos . An inexpensive English version of Targum Onkelos can also be found in J. W. Etheridge, Onkelos .
Targum Yerushalmi II (Jerusalem or Palestinian or Fragmentary)	ca. 1100-1300	This family of Palestinian targums provides an Aramaic translation of selected verses or phrases from the Hebrew scriptures, possibly intended to supplement the Onkelos . Although the known manuscripts are late, much of their content may date to an earlier period. The Genizah fragments, first published in 1930, date to the eighth/ninth century or earlier.	Klein's valuable studies are out-of-print, but may sometimes be found in used bookstores (M. L. Klein, Fragment Targums ; M. L. Klein, Geniza). Portions of these fragments are included with Pseudo-Jonathan in J. W. Etheridge, Onkelos .

25 B. M. Metzger, Translation.

26 J. Pelikan, Whose Bible.

Text Name	Date	Description	English Publication Reference
Targum Pseudo-Jonathan (Yerushalmi 1)	ca. 150-900	In medieval times, this Palestinian Targum was also known as Yerushalmi , but through a printer's error was falsely attributed to Jonathan ben Uziel. It is a combination translation and commentary that includes material from the Talmud as well as from midrashic sources. Tvedtnes et al. write: "Although this targum reached its final form in the eighth or ninth century, because it is of Palestinian origin, it must date to before the mid-second century" (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 65).	See M. Maher, Pseudo-Jonathan . An inexpensive English version of Targum Pseudo-Jonathan can also be found in J. W. Etheridge, Onkelos .
Targum Neofiti 1	ca. 1504	A late though full copy of the earliest form of the Palestinian targum to the Pentateuch. The codex contains some censorship of what was seen as anti-Christian polemic.	See B. Grossfeld et al., Neofiti ; M. McNamara, Targum Neofiti , which incorporate variants from other Palestinian Targums in their notes.
Vulgate	ca. 405 (OT)	The Old Testament and Apocrypha of this influential Latin translation of the Bible were produced under the direction of Jerome. It became the official Bible of the Roman Catholic Church from the Council of Trent in 1546 until 1979. Since the OT was directly translated from the Hebrew, it is a witness of the manuscripts extant at the time of its translation.	The Vulgate is, of course, published only in Latin. Weber's one-volume critical edition of the text has become the standard reference (R. Weber, Vulgata).
Peshitta	ca. 200 (OT)	This Syriac translation shows similarities to the targums and the LXX but is thought to be based on an independent text resembling the proto-Masoretic. It remains important to churches that are part of the Syriac tradition.	An English translation of Peshitta Genesis is available (Peshitta Foundation, Bereshith Rabba). The Peshitta Institute at Leiden is preparing a new annotated English translation of the Peshitta Old Testament (NEATSB, or the New English Annotated Translation of the Syriac Bible) to be published by Brill. George Lamsa has also produced several volumes of English translation and commentary on the Peshitta , but his work is seen as theologically biased and inaccurate by most scholars.
Masoretic Text (MT)	800-1400	Over a period of several hundred years, a group of Jewish scholars (the Masoretes) compared, standardized, and added vowel points to the text of the Hebrew scriptures. The MT has been adopted as the standard scriptural text of Judaism, and has been widely used in English translations of the Old Testament. For an analysis of textual variants as discussed in rabbinic sources, see B. B. Levy, Fixing .	The Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia (BHS) is the unrivaled critical edition of this text (American Bible Society, Biblia). Kohlenberger has edited an interlinear Hebrew-English Old Testament combining the text of the BHS with the New International Version (NIV) English translation (J. R. Kohlenberger, III, Interlinear).
Samaritan Pentateuch	After 100 BCE	A sectarian redaction of the Pentateuch, with important parallels to the Septuagint .	No English translation exists. For background on the text, see J. D. Purvis, Samaritan Pentateuch . See also S. Lowy, Principles .

The Old Testament Apocrypha

Although the word is commonly used to refer to stories of any kind that are of doubtful origin or veracity, “apocrypha” comes from a Greek term meaning “those having been hidden away.” Here, we restrict the term to refer to the deuterocanonical (= Latin “second canon”) books of the Old Testament accepted by Roman Catholics but not by most Protestant churches.²⁷ Most of these writings were included in the Septuagint (LXX) and were valued by early Christians and some Jewish groups who spoke Greek. However, the apocryphal books were not extant in Hebrew when the canon of the Hebrew scriptures was formed during the first two centuries CE.

In March 1833, when Joseph Smith was engaged in the translation of the Bible, he prayed to know whether he should translate the Apocrypha and was told:

- 1 ... There are many things contained therein that are true, and it is mostly translated correctly;
- 2 There are many things contained therein that are not true, which are interpolations by the hands of men.
- 3 Verily, I say unto you, that it is not needful that the Apocrypha should be translated.
- 4 Therefore, whoso readeth it, let him understand, for the Spirit manifesteth truth;
- 5 And whoso is enlightened by the Spirit shall obtain benefit therefrom;
- 6 And whoso receiveth not by the Spirit, cannot be benefited. Therefore it is not needful that it should be translated. Amen.²⁸

The Apocrypha are readily available in many translations and editions. English translation page numbers for the following editions of the Apocrypha are given below:

LXX - The Septuagint with Apocrypha: Greek and English, edited by Brenton. Contains parallel columns of the Greek and English text. Apocrypha is at the end of the volume, with separate pagination.

APOT - The Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament in English, edited by R. H. Charles in 1913. Volume 1 contains the Apocrypha and Volume 2 the Pseudepigrapha. These are available in inexpensive paperback editions.

ARV - The Revised Version of the Apocrypha.

ARSV - The Oxford Annotated Apocrypha: Expanded Edition of the Revised Standard Version.

²⁷ Additional collections of ancient books, under the name of “New Testament Apocrypha,” have also been edited and published by modern scholars (e.g., E. Hennecke et al., NT Apocrypha; M. R. James, Apocryphal). However, these are not accepted as canonical by any major Christian denomination.

²⁸ D&C 91:1-6.

Text Name	Publication Reference and Comment	LXX	APOT	ARV	ARSV
2 Esdras (2, 4, 5, 6 Ezra)	Not found in the Greek, this work consists of three distinct parts (chs. 1-2, 3-14, 15-16), the most important being the second part, the Apocalypse of Esdras (4 Ezra in the Latin Vulgate), which contains seven visions. Possibly written during the reign of Domitian (91-96 CE), but in any case no later than 120 CE. A possibility for confusion is in the fact that some publications name the two “Christian additions” (i.e., chs. 1-2 and 15-16 of 2 Esdras) 5 Ezra and 6 Ezra respectively, while Latin manuscripts call them 2 and 5 Esdras.		2:542-624	21-60	23-62
The Wisdom of Solomon	A beautiful discourse on wisdom and immortality, written in Greek by an Alexandrian Jew, shortly before the Christian era.	56-73	1:535-568	96-121	102-127
Ecclesiasticus (Ben Sirach or the Wisdom of Jesus the son of Sirach)	This work was written in Hebrew by Joshua Ben Sira of Jerusalem a few years before the Maccabean revolt. Translated by his grandson into Greek. A Hebrew manuscript has also been discovered.	74-121	1:316-517	121-183	128-197
Baruch	Several disjointed texts modeled on the writings of the Hebrew prophets. Probably written in the first century BCE.	121-127	1:583-595	183-189	198-204
1 Maccabees	Contains a trustworthy history of the Maccabean revolt. Written by an orthodox Jew in the first or second decade of the first century BCE. This is the most valuable of the apocryphal texts from a historical perspective.	139-182	1:67-124	200-241	221-262
2 Maccabees	An abridgement of the larger five-volume history of the Maccabees by Jason of Cyrene. Probably written in the first century BCE.	183-213	1:132-154	241-272	263-293
4 Maccabees	“The book of 4 Maccabees is a homily or philosophic discourse praising the supremacy of pious reason over passion” (Fourth Maccabees (Wikipedia)). For an English translation, see Fourth Maccabees .

The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha

The Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament consist of fifty or more documents bearing some relation to the Hebrew canon and generally thought to have been written between 200 BCE and 200 CE. Additional works of a similar nature written at later periods are also sometimes classed as pseudepigraphal.

Generally, the writings of the OT Pseudepigrapha are of either Jewish or Christian origin. However in analyzing a given text, it is frequently difficult to trace the relative extent of each influence.²⁹ Describing the approach of early scholars to this difficult question, Kraft observes: “M. R. James would list page after page of alleged verbal reminiscences of New Testament writings, with the conclusion that the writing being examined had made use of the New Testament and thus was Christian in its present form. In contrast, Ginzberg would list at length the parallels to known rabbinic Jewish traditions and conclude that the basic core of the writing was Jewish. We have, hopefully, come a long way in our critical awareness if not in our actual practice from simple ‘parallelomania.’”³⁰ Pseudepigraphal writings are usually ascribed by a later author to a notable figure from the past, hence the designation pseudepigrapha (= Greek “false inscription”). Prominent among these are the books of Enoch, highly valued by the early Christian Church and by many of the Eastern Christian Churches today. Many of these texts contain important information, although they are generally considered less reliable than the books of the Apocrypha. A good number of these are of a genre called “apocalyptic” (= Greek “lifting of the veil”), a term also used to describe the New Testament book of Revelation and parts of the Old Testament book of Daniel. The apocalyptic writings of the pseudepigrapha purport to reveal the workings of the cosmos and the secrets of heaven, and are often expressed in the language of special types and symbols.

A comprehensive bibliography of pseudepigrapha research (though lacking annotated descriptions of the references) is available in L. DiTommaso, Bibliography. Stone supplies a useful overview of the primary and secondary literature relating to Adam and Eve in M. E. Stone, History of the Literature.

Page numbers for the following English editions of the Old Testament pseudepigrapha are given in the table below:

OTP - The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth in 1983. This definitive two-volume edition of the Old Testament Pseudepigrapha is organized by themes. The groupings are: apocalyptic works, testaments, Old Testament expansions, wisdom literature, prayers, psalms, odes, fragments of lost Judeo-Hellenistic works and histories. An introduction and commentary accompany each text.

APOT - The Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament in English, edited by R. H. Charles in 1913. Volume 1 contains the Apocrypha and Volume 2 the Pseudepigrapha. This was the standard reference collection until OTP appeared seventy years later. Now superseded by OTP, APOT is included here because it has been referenced extensively for many years and is now available in inexpensive paperback editions.

29 R. A. Kraft, Pseudepigrapha.

30 Ibid., pp. 60-61.

Text Name	Date	Publication Reference and Comment	OTP	APOT
Apocalyptic Literature and Related Works
1 Enoch (The Ethiopic Apocalypse of Enoch)	200 BCE- 100 CE	This is the oldest of three so-called books of Enoch. Portions of this work were found among the Dead Sea Scrolls. Over forty manuscripts of this work have survived in Ethiopic (Ge'ez) and fragments have been found in Aramaic, Greek and Latin. Barker observes: "The oldest text fragments are from the third century BCE, but Isaiah knew something like 1 Enoch , and so the tradition must be a lot older" (M. Barker, Hidden , p. vii). 1 Enoch may be divided into five sections and an appendix as follows: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Chapters 1-36: An introduction discussing the final judgment of the righteous and wicked and a narrative concerning the fallen angels, their corruption of men, and various visions of Enoch. • Chapters 37-71: The Similitudes (parables) of Enoch that deal with the coming judgment, the resurrection, and the Messiah. • Chapters 72-82: An astrological treatise concerning the reckoning of time. • Chapters 83-90: The Dream Visions, two visions concerning the future history of the world and Israel. • Chapters 91-104: Enoch's testament. • Chapters 105-108: Appendix containing fragments of the Book of Noah and editorial comments. Chapters 1-36 and 81-108 of 1 Enoch appear in an exhaustive commentary by Nickelsburg (G. W. E. Nickelsburg, 1 Enoch), and he and VanderKam have also produced a new translation of all the chapters, lacking commentary (G. W. E. Nickelsburg et al., 1 Enoch).	1:5-89	2:188-281
2 Enoch (The Slavonic Apocalypse of Enoch, The Secrets of Enoch)	100	Known from twenty Slavonic manuscripts, none of which is a complete text of 2 Enoch . In each case the manuscript is a different work that is quoting part of 2 Enoch . 2 Enoch is basically a midrash on Genesis 5:21-32 and can be divided into two parts: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Chapters 1-68 describe how Enoch was taken up through seven heavens and then returned to report on what he had learned. • Chapters 69-73 deal with the life of Enoch's successors and ends with the birth of Melchizedek shortly before the Flood. 	1:91-221	2:431-469
Treatise of Shem	100-1 BCE	This text, attributed to Shem, describes dependencies between the house of the Zodiac in which a particular year begins, and the characteristics of that year. It contains twelve chapters, one for each sign of the Zodiac. One fifteenth-century Syriac text has survived. The original language was probably Semitic.	1:473-486
3 Baruch (Greek Apocalypse of Baruch)	100-300	In this text Baruch weeps over the destruction of Jerusalem. The Lord sends an angel to comfort him and show him the mysteries of heaven. He is led through five heavens and then returned to earth. This work is preserved in three families of Slavonic manuscripts and a Greek manuscript that is the source of the Slavonic.	1:653-679	2:533-541
Apocalypse of Abraham	1-200	An ascension text with striking parallels to the book of Moses. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Chapters 1-8 describe Abraham's youth and encounter with his father's idolatry. • Chapters 9-32 describe Abraham's ascension and a series of seven visions ending with the victory of the just. "The author of the text seems to be using the narrative to explain why Jerusalem was destroyed in 70 CE" (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 52). Known from six Slavonic manuscripts, the original text was probably Hebrew. The first English publication of selections from this text was made in the Church's Improvement Era periodical in 1898 (E. H. Anderson et al., Abraham). Kulik has developed new readings for the text (A. Kulik, Retroverting). See D. J. Larsen et al., Vision of Moses for parallels with Moses 1 and reproductions of the beautiful color illustrations from the Codex Sylvester . Jared Ludlow and Hugh Nibley have also written about parallels with the LDS books of Abraham and Moses (J. W. Ludlow, Visions ; H. W. Nibley, To Open).	1:681-705
Apocalypse of Adam	1-400	An apocalypse narrated by Adam to his son Seth shortly before his death. Covers the story of the Fall, Flood and destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah from a Gnostic view. Preserved as the last part of Codex V of the Coptic Nag Hammadi Codices .	1:707-719
Testaments, Often with Apocalyptic Sections

Text Name	Date	Publication Reference and Comment	OTP	APOT
Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs	200-100 BCE	A document purporting to contain the final utterances of the twelve sons of Jacob modeled after the last words of Jacob in Genesis 49. Most include predictions of the future of Israel. Originally Jewish, with later Christian additions. Five Greek manuscripts.	1:775-828	2:296-367
Testament of Abraham	1-200	Abraham's tour of the world and vision of the judgment prior to his death. His soul is conducted to heaven after a reluctant departure from earth. "Although a Jewish text, it was only preserved by Christians" (M. Barker, Revelation , p. 396). Two recensions, the first and longer one in Romanian and the second in several Greek copies. Later versions also available in Slavonic, Romanian, Coptic, Arabic and Ethiopic.	1:871-902
Testament of Jacob	100-300	An angel takes Jacob on a tour of hell and heaven prior to his death. His soul is taken to heaven and Joseph embalms his body. Based on an Arabic text with some pieces from Coptic and Ethiopic texts.	1:913-918
Testament of Moses (Assumption of Moses)	1-100	Farewell exhortation from Moses to Joshua prior to his death. Contains a prediction of the history of his people. From one Latin Palimpsest (= manuscript with earlier writing effaced to accommodate later writing), with almost half of the manuscript lost.	1:919-934	2:414-424
Testament of Adam	100-500	This text is divided into three sections, an Horarium (hours of the day and night), prophecy and a list of nine different orders of heavenly beings. A Christian version of an earlier Jewish text (M. Barker, Hidden , p. vii), it is based on a Syriac text in its current form in three recensions, having survived in eight manuscripts.	1:989-995
Expansions of the Old Testament and Legends
Jubilees	200-100 BCE	The book of Jubilees , sometimes called Little Genesis , purports to be an account of revelations to Moses while he was on Mt. Sinai for forty days. It recounts much of the material found in Genesis and Exodus, but some of the differences are so striking that it has been called a "Rewritten Bible" (H. L. Strack et al., Introduction , p. 235). It covers the Creation, Adam, Noah, Abraham, Jacob, and the story of Moses himself. Barker observes: "Most summaries of history in the Hebrew scriptures focus on Moses and the Exodus but omit Sinai; they are the exact opposite of the Apocalypse of Weeks [in Jubilees]. Scholars have suspected for some time that Sinai and Exodus were originally distinct traditions, interwoven only after the destruction of the first temple, and with the Exodus narrative predominating... rather than temple tradition, which underlies the Sinai story" (M. Barker, Hidden , p. 38). Jubilees was originally written in Hebrew. The Hebrew text was translated into Greek and Syriac. The Greek text was translated into Latin and Ethiopic. No Hebrew (outside of Qumran), little or no Syriac and only fragments of the Greek texts have survived. About one-fourth of the Latin text is extant, the only complete text being the Ethiopic. Many small Hebrew fragments were found at Qumran. In addition two of the Dead Sea Scrolls (The Genesis Apocryphon and the Damascus Document) show influence from Jubilees . E. D. Clark, Prologue , looks at common influences in Jubilees and Moses 1.	2:35-142	2:11-82
Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah	200 BCE-400 CE	This is a composite work that divides easily into two parts. The first five chapters form a work now called The Martyrdom of Isaiah and the last six chapters another work containing an account of a heavenly Ascension or Vision of Isaiah. Inserted into the Martyrdom is yet another work (3:13-4:22) sometimes called the Testament of Hezekiah . There are a number of smaller additions and other changes to the text. The Martyrdom is a Jewish work. The Ascension and Testament sections are considered later Christian additions. The Martyrdom , originally written in Hebrew was translated into Greek, the language of the later additions. The entire text was translated from Greek to Ethiopic, Latin, Slavonic and Coptic. Only in Ethiopic has the entire text survived.	2:143-176	2:159-162

Text Name	Date	Publication Reference and Comment	OTP	APOT
Joseph and Aseneth (Joseph and Asenath)	100 BCE- 200 CE	A long tale attested in many manuscript sources that tells of how Joseph came to marry Aseneth, “a foreign Hamitic girl, daughter of an idolatrous priest” (C. Burchard, Joseph , p. 177). Sixteen Greek manuscripts have survived along with about seventy other manuscripts in Syriac, Armenian, Latin, Slavonic, Rumanian and Ethiopian. The Greek manuscripts fall into four distinct groups. For discussions about the possibility of ritual elements in the work, see R. D. Chesnutt, Food ; A. J. M. Wedderburn, Baptism , pp. 157-158. For example, Seaich notes that the three gifts given to Aseneth from Joseph as he kisses her three times “correspond to the three ‘tokens’ (ankh , djed , and was) bestowed in the Egyptian form of the Sacred Embrace” (J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, p. 858 n. 642).	2:177- 247
Life of Adam and Eve and the Armenian Adam literature (Apocalypse of Moses (Greek), Vita (Latin))	1-100	This is perhaps the most important and extensive work of the primary Adam literature. The Greek and Latin texts narrate events after Adam and Eve leave the Garden of Eden, focusing on their relationship with Seth including death-bed recollections about the Fall and instructions to their posterity. Twenty-three manuscripts have been located so far. These fall into five main variations. In addition to the Greek and Latin manuscripts there are more recently discovered texts in Armenian, Slavonic, and Georgian. The original text was most likely Hebrew with the Greek translated from the Hebrew and the Latin from either of these. Charlesworth includes parallel translations of the Greek and Latin texts, which have significant differences. Anderson and Stone, who have each published extensively about the Adam literature, have edited a parallel column edition of the Life with all five major recensions (G. A. Anderson et al., Synopsis). A variety of additional Armenian texts relating to the life of Adam and Eve can be found in W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian ; M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1982; M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996.	2:249- 295	2:134- 154
Pseudo-Philo (Liber Antiquitatum Biblicarum , Book of Biblical Antiquities)	ca. 135 BCE- 70 CE	This important Latin text expands upon biblical stories of Adam until the time of David. Jacob's comprehensive but expensive Latin text, English translation, and commentary is the best resource for scholars (H. Jacobson, Pseudo-Philo). See also B. N. Fisk, Remember ; F. J. Murphy, Pseudo-Philo .	2:297- 377
Ladder of Jacob	1-100?	The Ladder of Jacob has not survived as a separate text, but only as part of other Slavonic works, specifically the Tolkovaja Paleja or Explanatory Palaia . The Ladder of Jacob is an elaboration of Jacob's dream at Bethel. It includes visions and prophecies. The last chapter, now considered a separate work, contains messianic prophecies.	2:401- 411
Prayers, Psalms and Odes
Prayer of Joseph	1-100	The Prayer of Joseph maintains that the patriarch Jacob was the earthly incarnation of the angel Israel. Originally containing 1100 lines, only three fragments containing nine Greek sentences have survived.	2:699- 714
Prayer of Jacob	1-400	The Prayer of Jacob may be divided into four invocations, three petitions and one injunction. The only existing text is a fourth-century papyrus written in Greek, thought to be the original language.	2:715- 723
Odes of Solomon	80-120	Once thought to be Gnostic, the Odes of Solomon are now considered to be a collection of very early Christian hymns. Excerpts are found in the Pistis Sophia and in Lactantius. Partial copies of the Odes are found in a few manuscripts. Fragments of 42 (although none of Ode 2) have survived. The original language is probably Syriac although strong cases have also been made for Greek and Hebrew. Nibley cites lengthy passages from the Odes of Solomon that echo LDS temple themes (H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 477-485).	2:725- 771

The following pseudepigraphal works share these characteristics:

- They are of Jewish origin.
- They were composed in Greek and in literary forms known elsewhere in Greek literature.
- They are not truly pseudepigraphal, that is they were not written in another's name, although, by accident, some may now be falsely ascribed to another.
- They are only fragmentarily preserved, usually as a quotation in another work.
- Although the qualifications of some works are open for debate, Charlesworth in OTP has chosen to err on the side of acceptance, thus making them easily available for study.

Author Name	Date	Publication Reference and Comment	OTP
Philo the Epic Poet	300-100 BCE	Six fragments, containing 24 lines, of an epic poem that recounts the binding of Isaac (Genesis 22) and God's blessing towards Joseph. The last three fragments focus on Jerusalem and the city's water supply. The work is known to us only because of extracts cited by the Christian historian Eusebius.	2:781-784
Pseudo-Eupolemus	before 100 BCE	In the discussion of Abraham in Eusebius' Praeparatio Evangelica , he includes two fragments, one attributed to Alexander Polyhistor. Scholars have assigned these fragments, both from Polyhistor's On the Jews , to a Pseudo-Eupolemus. The first deals with Abraham as a teacher of astrology, with Enoch attributed as its inventor, and the second traces Abraham's lineage back to a race of giants.	2:873-882
Cleodemus Malchus	before 100 BCE	This work deals with the descendants of Abraham through Keturah (Gen 25:1-4). It has survived as a quotation in Josephus' Antiquities 1.239-241 and in Eusebius' Praeparatio Evangelica 9.20.2-4.	2:883-887
Artapanus	300-100 BCE	Three fragments that deal with exploits in Egypt of Abraham, Joseph and Moses. Abraham teaches the Egyptians how to study the stars, Joseph teaches measurement and organization of the land, and Moses is identified with Mousaeus the teacher of Orpheus. These fragments were preserved in Eusebius' Praeparatio Evangelica 9.18, 23 and 27.	2:889-903

The Dead Sea Scrolls and Other Related Texts

Dating from the first two centuries BCE, these texts include copies from almost all the books of the Old Testament, Hebrew copies of some of the Apocrypha, and some texts found nowhere else. They were discovered in a series of caves near the site of Qumran on the cliffs overlooking the Dead Sea. The first discoveries of Dead Sea Scrolls (DSS) came from caves, now numbered I through XI. Scholars now include among this collection writings from other areas around the Dead Sea. This includes texts found at Masada, Nahal Hever and Wadi Murabba'at. LDS perspectives on the Qumran texts are included in D. W. Parry et al., LDS Perspectives; D. W. Parry et al., Questions; and J. E. Seaich, Mormonism.

The Dead Sea Scrolls

The DSS recovered so far consist of seven nearly complete scrolls and about 25,000 fragments, many of which are smaller than a postage stamp. These fragments make up about 930 scrolls which, because there were sometimes multiple copies, yield about 500 distinct texts or documents. About 200 of the scrolls are copies of biblical texts. The latest inventory of the extant scrolls appears in E. Tov, Scribal Practices.

The official publication for the scrolls is the Oxford University Press series Discoveries in the Judean Desert, here abbreviated DJD. Unfortunately, the texts published in DJD are scattered in a non-systematic fashion among many volumes, making analysis difficult. The DJD series has now been superseded by The Dead Sea Scrolls Reader (DSSR), which presents for the first time all the non-biblical Qumran texts classified according to their genres, together with English translations, in six volumes. The DSSR is co-edited by Donald W. Parry of Brigham Young University and Emanuel Tov, editor-in-chief of the DSS publication team. Available both in hardback and in a relatively inexpensive paperback edition (D. W. Parry et al., Reader), the precisely-rendered Hebrew-Aramaic texts in DSSR were also the basis of the FARMS database of Brigham Young University. DSSR represents the most complete and up-to-date edition of the DSS, including twenty-five previously unpublished texts.

The following table lists the scrolls in order by series designation. Some of the publication reference information, especially for the biblical scrolls, is an abbreviated summary taken from M. A. Hoselton's detailed list of DSS contents.³¹ Each row of the table below contains the following columns:

- Series Designation - The official scroll designation.
- Abbreviation - The official abbreviation is shown in parentheses; other titles may also be listed.
- Publication Reference and Comment - The official publication for the scroll. Also contains explanations.
- Types - A symbol in this column indicates the type of scroll.
 - ⓑ - Biblical text (not usually included in the English editions of the DSS).
 - a - Apocryphal, that is, texts from the traditional OT Apocrypha.
 - p - Pseudepigraphal, that is, texts from or related to the OT Pseudepigrapha.
 - m - Messianic texts. Some references directly refer to a Messiah, some are oblique.

31 M. A. Hoselton, Inventory.

Y - Included in exhibition at BYU in 1997 and published in G. M. Bradford, Ancient Scrolls (ASDS).³²

Much of the value of the copies of biblical works is in the information that they shed on the textual development of the Old Testament. It was long thought that LXX suffered from translation errors where it differed from the standard MT. The DSS biblical texts contain Hebrew manuscripts that in some cases follow the LXX, showing that there was an independent Hebrew textual transmission behind the LXX translation. Similar Hebrew originals have been found for some of the variations in the Samaritan Peshitta. Frank Moore Cross believes that these three recensions are the result of geographical separation between different groups (F. M. Cross, Library). The Samaritan Peshitta was developed in Palestine, the LXX in Egypt, and the MT in Babylon. Thus the DSS appears to provide access to the roots of these three textual traditions.

English translation page numbers for the following editions of the scrolls are included in the table:

AFU – The Dead Sea Scrolls Bible, edited by M. Abegg, Jr. et al., combines multiple copies of scrolls containing biblical writings into a continuous text. There is no index, but each chapter has a footnote listing the scrolls by verse and indicating the source. Variant readings, including comparisons with the LXX and Peshitta, are shown in the footnotes. The text also includes references to some of the more important apocryphal and pseudepigraphal works.

MT – The Dead Sea Scrolls Study Edition, edited by Florentino Garcia Martinez and Eibert J. C. Tigchelaar, is the best reference for the identification of specific DSS documents. All texts are published separately in both Hebrew and English on facing pages. Nearly all of the small scraps and fragments are included. biblical texts are not included but a reference to each is placed in sequence. Some translations are newer than what appears in FGM. An index is provided at the end of the volume.

FGM – The Dead Sea Scrolls Translated, edited by Florentino Garcia Martinez, is the best English-only reference for the identification of specific documents. All texts are published separately. An extensive index (from which much of the information in the table below derives) is provided at the end of the volume.

GV – The Complete Dead Sea Scrolls in English, edited by Geza Vermes, has an excellent introduction. Multiple copies of texts are combined. Where texts represent amalgamations the page numbers are italicized. Significant variants are included as separate texts.

WAC – The Dead Sea Scrolls, A New Translation, edited by Wise, Abegg, and Cook, takes great care to reproduce all variants of liturgical texts. Multiple copies of texts are combined, but the sources are identified. Where multiple copies exist, the best fragments are pieced together to make a one serial text. Where texts represent amalgamations, the page numbers are italicized. This edition includes an introduction and some commentary on each work.

By purchasing AFU and MT one has the most complete English translation of all of the Dead Sea Scrolls that are printed for the general reader. In addition one also has a copy of the Hebrew text of the non-biblical Dead Sea Scrolls. FGM is listed because of its wide availability, but MT is superior to it. GV and WAC are competent translations for the reader who is interested in the text and message of the Dead Sea Scrolls but who is not as concerned about what text came from what specific scroll. These latter translations do provide some alternate readings based on different parallel manuscripts.

32 In 1997 the Kingdom of Jordan loaned Brigham Young University four Dead Sea Scrolls for an exhibit on Masada. These scrolls had previously been unavailable except through photographs. In addition the exhibit featured several other texts, four from Masada and a Bar Kokhba text. The translations and commentary are published in G. M. Bradford, ASDS.

For an illuminating survey and analysis of treatments of material from Genesis in the Qumran library, see M. J. Bernstein, Contours.

Series	Abbreviation	Publication Reference and Comment	T	AFU	MT	FGM	GV	WAC
1Q1	(1QGen) 1QGenesis	D. Barthélemy, DJD I, Oxford 1955, 49-50, pl. VIII. Nineteen fragments with remains of Genesis. Contains Genesis 1:18-21; 3:11-14; 22:13-15; 23:17-19; 24:22-24.	ß	6-8, 10
1Qap-Gen ar	(1Q20) 1QGenesis Apocryphon	Original publication in N. Avigad et al., Apocryphon . Rewritten version of Genesis in Aramaic that could rightly be called “the oldest prototype of both [Targum and Midrash] available to us” (H. L. Strack et al., Introduction , p. 236). One of the original group of seven manuscripts retrieved by the Tacámireh. 1QapGen ar is one of the four acquired by Athanasius Yeshue Samuel.			28-49	230-237
1Q21	(1QTLevi ar) 1QTestament of Levi	J. T. Milik, DJD I, 87-91, pl. XVII. Remains of an Aramaic work related to the Aramaic Testament of Levi from the Cairo Genizah, and to the Greek Testament of Levi , which forms part of the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs .	p		56-59	266	524-525
1Q23	(1QEnGiants ^a ar) 1QEnoch Giants ^a ar	J. T. Milik, DJD I, 97-98, pl. XIX. Published as remains of an Aramaic apocryphon, they were later identified by Milik as a copy of the Book of Giants in Milik, Books , 301-302.	p		62-65	260		247
1Q24	(1QEnGiants ^b ar) 1QEnoch Giants ^b ar	J. T. Milik, DJD I, 99, pl. XX. Aramaic apocryphon; according to Milik, Books , 309, possibly another copy of the Book of Giants .	p		64-65
1QS	(1QS) 1QRule of the Community (Community Rule, The ‘Son of God’ Text, and, occasionally still, The Manual of Discipline)	Published in M. Burrows (ed.), The Dead Sea Scrolls of St. Mark’s Monastery , New Haven, CN: The American Schools of Oriental Research, 1950, vol. II/2, (Manual of Discipline = 1QS). There is no II/1. This manuscript contains a description of a sectarian group whose beliefs and practices resembled those of an ancient pacifist sect known as the Essenes, as noted by Eliezer Sukenik of Hebrew University in 1948. When this cave was reexplored in 1949, fragments of many other scrolls were found including what seemed to be an appendage to this same Essene-like work. In the first century CE, Pliny the Elder located a group of Essenes on the western shore of the Dead Sea somewhere above En Gedi. This congruence, along with the seemingly obvious connection between the pottery found in the caves and in the nearby ruins, are what first led de Vaux to propose the hypothesis that the entire library and Qumran itself were products of the Essenes. One of the original seven manuscripts retrieved by the Tacámireh, 1QS is one of the four acquired by Athanasius Yeshue Samuel. Nibley cites lengthy passages of the Rule of the Community that echo LDS temple themes (H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 461-475).	m		68-69	3-19	126-143

Series	Abbreviation	Publication Reference and Comment	T	AFU	MT	FGM	GV	WAC
1Q28a	(1QSa) 1QRule of the Congregation (1QRule of the Community, Community Rule, The Sectarial Rule of the Community, The 'Son of God' Text, and, occasionally still, The Manual of Discipline)	D. Barthélemy, DJD I, 108-118, pls. XXIII-XXIV. Appendix to the Community Rule , 1QS, eschatological in content. Adjuncts to the Rule of the Community (1QS), published in DJD I as 1Q28a and 1Q28b. M. Burrows (ed.), The Dead Sea Scrolls of St. Mark's Monastery , vol. II, fasc. 2: The Manual of Discipline , New Haven, CN: The American Schools of Oriental Research, 1951. Community Rule , cols I-XI. 1Q28a and 1Q28b are usually assumed to be appendices to 1QS. They were discovered during subsequent digs in cave 1 conducted by Lankester Harding and Roland De Vaux several years after the first seven manuscripts were discovered there. By that time the cave had obviously been 'excavated' both by the Bedouin and by the monks of Syrian monastery of St Mark, or their agents. (G. M. Bradford, ASDS , pp. 18-21).	Y m		98-103	126-128	157-160	144-147
2Q21	(2QapMoses?) 2QApocryphon of Moses	M. Baillet, DJD III, 79-81, pl. XV. Remains of a dialogue of Moses with God.			214-217	281
4Q1	(4QGen-Exod ^b) 4QGenesis-Exodus ^a	J. R. Davila, DJD XII, 1-30, pls. I-V. Copy that contains combined remains of Genesis and Exodus. Contains Genesis chapters 8:20-21; 22:14; 27:38-39, 42-43; 34:17-21; 35:17-29; 36:1-13, 19-27; 37:5-6, 22-27; 39:11-23; 40:1; 45:23; 47:13-14; 48:2-4, 15-22; 49:1-5 and Exodus chapters 1:3-17, 22; 2:1-5; 3:8-16, 18-21; 4:4-9, 26-31; 5:1, 3-17; 6:4-21, 25; 7:5-13, 15-20; 8:24-26; 9:8.	ß	9-16, 20-22, 25-34, 36-37
4Q5	(4QGen ^c) 4QGenesis ^c	J. R. Davila, DJD XII, 47-52, pl. X. Copy of Genesis from a textual type similar to MT and the Samaritan text. Contains portions of Genesis chapters 36:43; 37:1-2, 27-30; 40:18-23; 41:1-8, 35-44; 42:17-19; 43:8-14; 49:6-8.	ß	15-19, 22
4Q6	(4QGen ^d) 4QGenesis ^d	J. R. Davila, DJD XII, 53-55, pl. XI. Remains of one column with Genesis 48:1-11.	ß	21
4Q7	(4QGen ^e) 4QGenesis ^e	J. R. Davila, DJD XII, 57-60, pl. XII. Two fragments of Genesis 1-2. Contains Genesis 1:1-11, 13-22; 2:6-7 or 18-19. Has a number of interesting variants from the MT.	ß	7
4Q9	(4QGen ^f) 4QGenesis ^f	J. R. Davila, DJD XII, 65-73, pl. XIII. Copy of Genesis of a textual type close to the Samaritan text. Contains portions of Genesis chapters 41:15-18, 23-27, 29-36, 38-43; 42:15-22, 38; 43:1-2, 5-8; 45:14-22, 26-28.	ß	17-20
4Q11	(4QpalaeoGen-Exod ^h) 4QGenesis-Exodus ^l	P. W. Skehan, E. Ulrich, J. E. Sanderson, DJD IX, 17-50, pls. I-VI. A manuscript in palaeo-Hebrew script with remains of Genesis 50:26 and Exodus 1-36. Contains Exodus 1:1-5; 2:10, 22-25; 3:1-4, 17-21; 8:13-15, 19-21; 9:25-29, 33-35; 10:1-5; 11:4-10; 12:1-11, 42-46; 14:15-24; 16:2-7, 13-14, 18-20, 23-25, 26-31, 33-35; 17:1-3, 5-11; 18:17-24; 19:24-25; 20:1-2; 22:23-24; 23:5-16; 25:7-20; 26:29-37; 27:1, 6-14; 28:33-35, 40-42; 36:34-36. Contains an additional 26 fragments too small or too poorly preserved to identify with certainty.	ß	22, 25-29, 36, 39-40, 42-44, 47, 49-51, 54-55, 57-58, 62-63, 65, 73

Series	Abbreviation	Publication Reference and Comment	T	AFU	MT	FGM	GV	WAC
4Q158	(4QRP ^a) 4QReworked Pentateuch ^a	J. M. Allegro, DJD V, 1-6, pl. I. Paraphrase of Genesis 32:25-32; Exodus 24:27-28; Genesis 32:31 (?); Exodus 3:12; 24:4-6; 19:17-23; 20:19-22; Deuteronomy 5:29; 15:18-20:22; Exodus 20:12, 16, 17; Deuteronomy 5:30-31; Exodus 20:22-26; 21:1, 4, 6, 8, 10; 21:15, 16, 18, 20, 22, 25, 32, 34, 35-37; 22:1-11, 13; 30:32, 34.			304-309	219-222	442-443	200-204
4Q180	(4QagesCreat A) 4Qages of Creation A	J. M. Allegro DJD V, 77-79, pl. XXVII. Commentary on salvation history and on the periods of sin, starting from the fall of the angels. J. T. Milik suggests that this and 4Q181 are part of a single work.			370-373	211-212	520	238-239
4Q181	(4QagesCreat B) 4Qages of Creation B	J. M. Allegro DJD V, 79-80, pl. XXVIII. Document which describes the destiny of the chosen and the damned.			372-375	212-213	229	239
4Q201	(4QEn ^a ar) 4QEnoch ^a ar	Originally published in J. T. Milik, Enoch , pp. 139-163, 340-343, pls. I-V. Copy of Book of Watchers from 1 Enoch . Remains of 1 Enoch 1:1-6; 2:1-5, 6; 6:4-8:1; 8:3-9:3; 9:6-8; 10:3-4, 21-11:1; 12:4-6; 14:4-6.	p		398-405	246-248	514
4Q202	(4QEn ^b ar) 4QEnoch ^b ar	Originally published in J. T. Milik, Enoch , pp. 164-178, 344-346, pls. VI-IX. Copy of the Book of Watchers from 1 Enoch . Remains of 1 Enoch 5:9-6:4; 6:7-8:1; 8:2-9:4; 10:8-12.	p		404-409	248-250
4Q203	(4QEnGiants ^a ar) 4QBook of Giants ^a ar	Originally published in J. T. Milik, Enoch , pp. 310-317, pls. XXX-XXXII, pp. 178-217, 346-353, pls. IX-XV. Copy of the Book of Giants .	p		408-411	260-261
4Q204	(4QEn ^c ar) 4QEnoch ^c ar	Originally published in J. T. Milik, Enoch , pp. 178-217, 346-353, pls. IX-XV. Copy of the Book of Watchers , the Book of Giants , the Book of Dreams and the Letter of Enoch from 1 Enoch . Remains of 1 Enoch 1:9-5:1; 6:7; 10:13-19; 12:3; 13:6-14:19; 14:18-20; 15:11(?); 18:8-12; 30:1-32:1; 35; 36:1-4; 89:31-37; 104:13-106:2; 106:13-107:2.	p		412-421	250-254	514-515
4Q209	(4QEnastr ^b ar) 4QAs-tro-nomical Enoch ^b ar	Originally published in J. T. Milik, Enoch , pp. 278-284, 340-343, pls. XXV-XXVII, XXX. Copy of the Astronomical Book from 1 Enoch . Remains of a synchronous calendar and of other passages corresponding to 1 Enoch 76:13-77:4; 78:9-12; 79:3-5 + 78:17-79:2; 82:9-13.	p		430-439	445-448	515
4Q210	(4QEnastr ^c ar) 4QAs-tro-nomical Enoch ^c ar	Originally published in J. T. Milik, Enoch , pp. 284-288, pls. XXVIII, XXX. Copy of the Astronomical Book from 1 Enoch . Remains of 1 Enoch 76:3-10; 76:13-77:4; 78:6-8.	p		438-441	448-449
4Q211	(4QEnastr ^d ar) 4QAs-tro-nomical Enoch ^d ar	Originally published in J. T. Milik, Enoch , pp. 296-297, 359, pl. XXIX. Copy of the Astronomical Book from 1 Enoch . Remains of three columns which would follow 1 Enoch 82:20.	p		440-443	449-450
4Q212	(4QEn ^e ar) 4QEnoch ^e ar	Originally published in J. T. Milik, Enoch , pp. 245-272, 360-362, pls. XXI-XXIV. Copy of the Letter of Enoch from 1 Enoch . Remains of 1 Enoch 91:10(?), 18, 19; 92:1-2; 92:5-93:4; 93:9-10; 91:11-17; 93:11-94:2.	p		442-445	258-259
4Q215	(4QTNaph) 4QTesta-ment of Naphtali	M. E. Stone, DJD XXII, 73-82, pl. V. A Hebrew Testament of Naphtali not related to the Testament of Naphtali that forms part of the Testaments of the XII Patriarchs .	p		454-457	270-271	528-529	260-261
4Q216	(4QJub ^a) 4QJubilees ^a	J. C. VanderKam, J. T. Milik, DJD XIII, 1-22, pls. I-II. The oldest extant copy of the book of Jubilees . Copied by two different scribes.	p		458-465	238-240

Series	Abbreviation	Publication Reference and Comment	T	AFU	MT	FGM	GV	WAC
4Q246	4QAramaic Apocalypse, 4QPsDan A ^a 4QSon of God	E. Puech, DJD XXII, 165-184, pl. XI. Fragment of an apocalyptic work in Aramaic which uses the titles Son of God and Son of the Most High , previously known as 4QPsDan A ^a , 4Q243 and 4QSon of God.	m		492-495	138	577	269-270
4Q249	(4QpapCryptA MSM) 4QCryptic A: Midrash Sefer Moshe	S. Pfann, DJD XXXV. Commentary on Genesis in Cryptic script, copied on papyrus. Many fragments have been preserved, but small in size. The title of the work, Commentary on the Book of Moses , is located on the back, not in the cryptic but in the square script.			496-497
4Q252	(4QcommGen A) 4QCommentary on Genesis A	G. Brooke, DJD XXII, 185-207, pls. XII-XIII. This fragment contains a commentary on Genesis 49:10. The first columns of the manuscript are a paraphrase of Genesis 6.	m		500-505	213-215	461-463	275-277
4Q364	(4QRP ^b) 4QReworked Pentateuch ^b	E. Tov, S. A. White, DJD XIII, 197-254, pl. XIII-XXI.			718-719	222-224	443	325-326
4Q368	(4QapocrPent A) 4QApocryphon Pentateuch A	D. Dimant, DJD XXX. Fifteen fragments, of which three are good-sized, of a narrative work related to the Pentateuch.			726-731
4Q369	(4QPE ^{nosh} ?) 4QPrayer of Enosh (?)	H. Attridge, J. Strugnell, DJD XIII, 353-362, pl. XXXVII. A good fragment with remains of two columns and other lesser fragments of an apocryphal composition related to the generations before the Flood.			730-733		511-512	329-330
4Q370	4QExhortation Based on the Flood	C. Newsom, DJD XIX, 85-97, pl. XII. 732-733. Exhortation based on the story of the Flood, of which only two columns have been preserved.			732-733	224-225	518-519	330-331
4Q414	(4QRitPur A) 4QRitual of Purification	E. Eshel, DJD XXXV. Baptismal Hymn, 4 fragments.			842-845	439		391
4Q422	4QParaphrase of Genesis and Exodus	T. Elgvin, E. Tov, DJD XIII, 417-444, pls. XLII-XLIII. Minute remains of a biblical paraphrase.			884-887		446-447	391-393
4Q424	4QSapiential Text	The Sons of Righteousness , two fragments of another wisdom composition.			888-891	393-394	414-415	393-394
4Q464	4QExposition on the Patriarchs	E. Eshel, M. Stone, DJD XIX, 215-230, pl. XXVIII. Fragments of an exposition on the patriarchs.			942-943			402
4Q471b	4QSelf-Glorification Hymn ^a	E. Eshel, DJD XXIX. Fragment containing the Song of Michael .			952-953
4Q502	(4QpapRitMar) 4QRitual of Marriage	M. Baillet, DJD VII, 81-105, pls. XXIX-XXXIV. Fragments of a ritual for a joyous celebration, interpreted by Baillet as a wedding ritual and by Baumgarten as a celebration in which the protagonists are old men and women.			994-997	440-441		407-408
4Q503	(4QpapPrQuot) 4QDaily Prayers ^a	M. Baillet, DJD VII, 105-136, pls. XXXV, XXXVII, XXIX, XLI, XLVIII, XLV and XLVII. Remains of a liturgical composition with prayers for each day of the month. Remains preserved of prayers for 15 days, between the 4 th and the 26 th .			998-1007	407-410	371-372	409-410
4Q504	(4QDibHam ^a) 4QWords of the Luminaries ^a	M. Baillet, DJD VII, 137-168, pls. XLIX-LIII. Copy of a liturgical work, of which the title, Words of the Luminaries , has been preserved on the back of fragment 8, and contains prayers for every day of the week (the beginning of the prayer of Wednesday and of the sabbath have been preserved).			1008-1019	414-417	364-367	411-414
4Q521	4QMessianic Apocalypse	E. Puech, DJD XXV, 1-38, pls. I-III. Wisdom text that exhibits belief in the resurrection, also called The Messiah of Heaven and Earth . Remains preserved in five fragments.	m		1044-1047	394-395	391-392	421-422

Series	Abbreviation	Publication Reference and Comment	T	AFU	MT	FGM	GV	WAC
4Q529	4QWords of Michael ar	Aramaic work with the title Words of the Book of which Michael spoke to the Angels . Two further copies have been preserved in 4Q to which belong the fragments from 6Q23.			1060-1063	125	523	427
4Q530	(4QEnGiants ^b ar) 4QBook of Giants ^a	Another copy of the Book of Giants . Parallel passage to Moses 6:40.	p		1062-1065	261-262	516-517	248-250
4Q531	(4QEnGiants ^c ar) 4QBook of Giants ^c	Another copy of the Book of Giants .	p		1064-1067	262	517	247-250
4Q540	(4QapocrLevi ^a ar?) 4QApocryphon of Levi ^a ar	Work described by Starcky as an Aramaic work of Aaronite content and edited by Puech as another copy of the Aramaic Testament of Levi .	p m		1078-1079	269		258
4Q577	4QText Mentioning the Flood	E. Puech, DJD XXV, 195-203, pl. XV. Small fragment.			1124-1125
6Q8	(6QpapEnGiants ar) 6QGiants ar	M. Baillet, DJD III, 116-119, pl. XXIV. Published as a Genesis apocryphon, it was identified by Milik, The Books of Enoch , 300-301, 309, as another copy of the Aramaic Book of Giants .	p		1148-1149	262		248-249
7Q4, 8, 11-14	(7QpapEn gr) 7QEnoch	M. Baillet, DJD III, 143-144, pl. XXX. Greek copy of the Book of Enoch . Many of these have also been ascribed to various biblical texts, many from the New Testament. The various authors are not always in agreement as to which fragment goes with which biblical text. Jose O'Callaghan claims, in a minority, that fragment 8 contains James 1:23-24.	β		1162-1163
11Q12	(11QJub) 11QJubilees	F. Garcia Martinez, E. J. C. Tigchelaar, A. S. van der Woude, DJD XXIII, 207-220, pl. XXVI. Copy of the book of Jubilees .	p		1204-1207	241-242
11Q13	(11QMelch) 11QMechizedec	F. Garcia Martinez, E. J. C. Tigchelaar, A. S. van der Woude, DJD XXIII, 221-241, pl. XXVII. Eschatological peshet (= Jewish interpretative commentary), based on Leviticus 28, with the angelic form of Melchizedek as the protagonist.			1206-1209	139-140	500-502	456-457
11Q19	(11QTemple ^a) (11QT ^b) 11QTemple Scroll ^a	Describes the features of an ideal temple to be established by God in the last days, and the laws and rites associated with it. This is the longest scroll in the collection. A complete edition of the Temple Scroll is published in Y. Yadin, Temple Scroll .			1228-1289	154-179	192-219	459-492

Other Related Texts

The following table lists documents that are either related to the DSS or that come from the surrounding area. They are sometimes also listed near the scroll they relate to, but are repeated here so that they can easily be identified as belonging to collections separate from the Dead Sea Scrolls. Seventeen scroll fragments have been found at Masada. A collection of texts from the Bar Kokhba period was found in the Cave of Letters at Nahal Hever. This cave is designated 5/6Hev because it has two entrances. Another collection was found in the Wadi Murabba'at.

Text Name	Related	Publication Reference and Comment	AFU	FGM	WAC
Mt. Athos MS	4Q213	Remains of an Aramaic work related to the Testament of Levi from the Geniza and the Greek Testament of Levi that forms part of the Testaments of the 12 Patriarchs .			251-258
(CTLevi ar) Cairo Geniza Text A Cambridge	4Q213	Remains of an Aramaic work related to the Testament of Levi from the Geniza and the Greek Testament of Levi that forms part of the Testaments of the 12 Patriarchs .		50-57 in MT	252-258
(CTLevi ar) Cairo Geniza Text A Bodleian	4Q213	Remains of an Aramaic work related to the Testament of Levi from the Geniza and the Greek Testament of Levi that forms part of the Testaments of the 12 Patriarchs .		50-57 in MT	253-258
Mas1^l Mas Gen, Mas Jub	Genesis or Jubilees	Two small fragments similar to part of Genesis or Jubilees . Includes the title Prince of Hatred . Photograph and translation in ASDS :30. Contains Genesis 46:7-11. Talmon believes it to be part of Jubilees , others Genesis.	20
Mur 1 Mur Gen		Fragments of Genesis, containing 32:3-5, 29-30, 32-33; 33:1; 34:5-7, 30-31; 35:1, 4-7. Probably from the same scroll as Mur Exodus and Mur Numbers described below.	11-13
Mur ? Mur(?)Gen		Contains Genesis 33:18-20; 34:1-3.	12
P. Fouad Gk 266 Rahlfs/Gottingen no 942		Discovered in Cairo. Contains Genesis 3:10-12; 4:5-7, 23; 7:17-20; 37:34-36; 38:1, 10-12.
Sdeir Gen		Contains Genesis 35:6-10, 24-29; 36:1-2, 5-17	13-14

Jewish Texts

Non-Mormon scholar Krister Stendahl noted that “there is no other Christian community or community out of the Judeo-Christian tradition which has as positive and non-anti-Semitic ways of speaking about the Jews as have the Mormons.”³³ Former Israeli prime minister David Ben-Gurion likewise said that “there are no people in this world who understand the Jews like the Mormons.”³⁴

Many of the writings below are considered to be part of the Oral Torah, a body of law and commentary that is said to have been handed down with the written Hebrew Torah from the time of Moses. Starting in about 200 CE parts of this material were written down in a series of works centered around the Talmud. The midrash constitutes a vast body additional commentary, reflections, and narrative. Medieval commentaries, philosophical writings, and mystical texts are included in separate sections below. All these writings, in addition to the scriptures, form the basis for modern Judaism, however different branches of Judaism vary in their understanding of how these texts should be interpreted and applied. For a comprehensive compendium summarizing classic talmudic and midrashic sources along with detailed bibliographic information, see Stemmerger’s update of Strack’s classic volume.³⁵ For a highly-readable overview of all these writings, see Holtz.³⁶ The “Jastrow Dictionary” is an invaluable aid to the study of the Talmud, targums, and midrash for English speakers.³⁷

Jewish Writers of the First and Second Centuries CE

Author	Date	Description	English Publication Reference
Philo Judaeus of Alexandria	20 BCE-50 CE	Tvedtnes et al. write: “Philo Judaeus, a Jewish priest of the first century CE, lived in Alexandria, Egypt, and excelled in both Greek philosophy and Jewish lore... Philo was largely ignored by Jews but was preserved because... Clement of Alexandria, quoted his work with such approbation.” Later Christians studied his work “as a means of reconciling the Old Testament with Greek philosophy” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 35; cf. W. J. Hamblin et al., Temple , pp. 57-60, 99-100). Not to be confused with Philo the Epic Poet or Pseudo-Philo. Barker makes a case that core elements of Philo’s teachings were a part of First Temple Judaism, and that he was primarily transposing these teachings into the language of the philosophers (M. Barker, Angel , p. 216; cf. M. Barker, Imagery).	The standard edition of Philo’s works is readily available as part of the Loeb Classical Library in ten volumes and two supplements. Volumes 1-6 deal with issues in the book of Genesis and volume 6 also contains a valuable Life of Moses (De Vita Mosis) . Volumes 7-10 deal with a variety of other topics, including a work On the Virtues (De Virtutibus) Philo, Virtues . Volume Supplement 1 contains Questions and Answers on Genesis , while Volume Supplement 2 contains Questions and Answers on Exodus . An inexpensive one-volume edition of nearly all of Philo’s writings is available in Philo, Works .
Flavius Josephus	37-ca. 101	“Flavius Josephus was a Jewish priest and general who witnessed the destruction of the Jerusalem temple in 70 CE. One of his major works was Antiquities of the Jews , which recounts stories known from the Bible and other Jewish (and some Greek) literature from the time of Adam until the mid-first century” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 47). Barker, however, warns that he was “hardly an impartial observer” (M. Barker, Revelation , p. 399), and Bloom cautions that the history, especially of events contemporary to his own times, is “suspect, because he had been Joseph ben Matthias, a leader of the Jewish Revolt, who saved his own life by fawning upon the Flavian emperors: Vespasian, Titus, Domitian... Josephus... looked on calmly as Jerusalem was captured, its Temple destroyed, its inhabitants slaughtered” (H. Bloom, Names Divine , p. 17).	The most common English translation of the works of Josephus is Whiston’s frequently-reprinted 1737 version—which has been updated by Maier. Maier also produced a condensation of Josephus’ works (F. Josephus, Essential Works). Another translation appears in the Loeb Classic Library series (F. Josephus, Antiquities). See the studies in T. W. Franksman, Genesis and L. H. Feldman, Hellenization for accounts of how the account of Genesis was reshaped by Josephus in its retelling.

33 K. Stendahl, Third Nephi, p. 151.
34 Cited in E. T. Benson, Message to Judah.
35 H. L. Strack et al., Introduction.
36 B. W. Holtz, Sources.
37 M. Jastrow, Dictionary.

Talmudic Literature

Text Name	Date	Description	English Publication Reference
Mishnah	ca. 200	A code of laws promulgated by Judah the Patriarch, and traditionally thought to comprise “the oral law that was given to Moses atop Mount Sinai as a complement to the written law or Torah ... given at the same time” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 62). The Mishnah is formed into six divisions that further comprise 63 tractates. The divisions are Agriculture, Appointed Times, Women, Damages, Holy Things and Purities. The Mishnah is the foundation for the two Talmuds and a primary source for Rabbinic Judaism. Next to the Hebrew Bible, the Mishnah is the major canonical document of Judaism.	The two most popular English translations are J. Neusner, Mishnah and H. Danby, Mishnah . Neusner’s translation holds more strictly to the Hebrew text.
Pirke Avot (Pirke Aboth , Pirkei Avos , The Sayings of the Fathers)	ca. 250	This work was produced about a generation after the Mishnah and it explains the origin of the Oral Torah at Mt. Sinai. It is usually published as part of the Mishnah .	Included with the Mishnah as part of the Damages division. A separate English translation with detailed commentary is available in M. Lieber, Pirkei Avos . A related text, compiled between the seventh and ninth century but probably composed in the third or fourth century, the Avot de-Rabbi Nathan (The Fathers According to Rabbi Nathan) is usually included in the collection of minor tractates of the Talmud (J. Goldin, Fathers ; J. Neusner, Rabbi Nathan). It is a haggadic work with many unique elements that constitutes a kind of homiletical exposition of Pirke Avot .
Tosefta	ca. 400	This work is a collection of supplements to the Mishnah . It contains commentary on 39 of the Mishnah ’s 63 tractates.	Neusner has produced a two-volume English translation (J. Neusner, Tosefta).
Talmud Yerushalmi (Jerusalem or Palestinian or Talmud of the Land of Israel)	ca. 400	This Talmud covers the first four divisions of the Mishnah : Agriculture, Appointed Times, Women and Damages.	The two available English translations of the Talmud Yerushalmi have been produced: one edited by Neusner (J. Neusner, Palestinian Talmud) and an extensively annotated version by ArtScroll/Mesorah, with some volumes still in publication (G. Zlotowitz, Talmud Yerushalmi). Neusner’s translation approach has met with mixed reviews.
Talmud Bavli (Babylonian)	ca. 600	The Bavli covers the second through fifth divisions of the Mishnah : Appointed Times, Women, Damages and Holy Things. In addition, the Bavli contains extensive exegetical commentary on the Torah and other scriptures. Written during a period of Jewish prosperity, the Bavli is considered more extensive and authoritative than the Yerushalmi .	Four English editions of the Talmud Bavli are available: Epstein’s 1948 30-volume Hebrew-English version for Soncino Press (CD-ROM version also available), Hendrickson’s 2006 reprint of Neusner’s 22-volume translation with an accompanying CD-ROM but no Hebrew or Aramaic text, the lavish 73-volume Schottenstein edition (G. Zlotowitz, Talmud Bavli), and the (incomplete) Steinsaltz edition that updates the traditional commentary layout. The Epstein and Neusner editions are the least expensive. Edited from a traditional Orthodox perspective, the Schottenstein edition is the choice of those with some knowledge of Hebrew, though it should be noted that its interpretation often follows tradition rather than a word-by-word translation of the text. The (out-of-print) Steinsaltz edition favors the needs of novices.
Gemara	ca. 400	The Aramaic part of the Talmud or commentary on the Mishnah . “ Gemara , the ‘completion’ of the study, was added to each section of the Mishnah and thus the Talmud ‘study’ was formed” (M. Barker, Revelation , p. 399).	Included in editions of the Talmud .

Midrash

Midrash has been defined by van der Heide as “a rabbinic statement coupled with a quotation from the Scriptures.”³⁸ The Exegetical Midrash is generally composed of short comments on individual verses of the Bible that have been collected from the teachings of the sages. The Homiletical Midrash is derived from sermons on a particular verse or passage. The Soncino Midrash Rabbah is the classic ten-volume source for rabbinic commentary of an exegetical and homiletical nature on the five books of the Torah and the five Megilloth (The Song of Songs, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther).³⁹ The works of Narrative Midrash recount and expand upon the biblical narrative with stories about scriptural characters or individual rabbis. Several excellent secondary collections of Aggadah are available in English. In such collections, various versions of narrative tales from primary sources are usually combined and the language is smoothed over in the interest of fluent storytelling.

Text Name	Date	Description	English Publication Reference
Exegetical Midrash
Asatir (Secrets)	Before 250-200 BCE	“A Samaritan document also known as the Secrets of Moses , known from both Samaritan and Arabic versions. A midrashic text, it combines biblical and traditional stories about the history of the earth, from the time of Adam to the death of Moses, and is thought to have been compiled no later than 250–200 BCE. The Samaritans also wrote a pitron , or commentary, on the Asatir in Arabic, but the date this commentary was composed is unknown” (J. A. Tvedtnes, Hidden Books , p. 230).	Gaster’s English translation is currently out of print (M. Gaster, Asatir).
Genesis Rabbah (GenR)	ca. 425	A collection of rabbinic commentaries on the book of Genesis, written in Israel. It incorporates a wide span of rabbinical and pseudepigraphal material relating to Jubilees , the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs , and the Life of Adam and Eve .	Volumes 1 and 2 of the Soncino Midrash Rabbah (H. Freedman et al., Midrash). Neusner has produced a more recent three-volume translation and commentary (J. Neusner, Genesis Rabbah).
Exodus Rabbah (ExoR)	900-1000	A collection of rabbinic commentaries on the book of Exodus.	Volume 3 of the Soncino Midrash Rabbah (H. Freedman et al., Midrash).
Numbers Rabbah (NumR)	800-1200	A collection of rabbinic commentaries on the book of Numbers.	Volumes 5 and 6 of the Soncino Midrash Rabbah (H. Freedman et al., Midrash).
Yalkut Shim’oni (Simon’s Selections)	1050-1300	A midrashic thesaurus on the entire Old Testament.	No English edition is available.
Homiletical Midrash
Pesikta de Rav Kahana (PRK)	ca. 400	This is a midrash for readings at festivals and special Sabbaths. Pesikta means “sections” or “chapters.”	Braude’s excellent English translation is available from the Jewish Publication Society (W. G. Braude et al., Kahana).
Pesikta Rab-bati (PesR) (Pesikta Gedolah or Pesikta)	ca. 200-600	This is a midrash for readings at festivals and special Sabbaths. It includes references to many items of biblical and post-biblical legend.	Braude’s fluent English translation is available from Yale University Press (W. G. Braude, Rab-bati).
Tanhuma or Yelammedenu	400-900	A homiletical midrash on the Pentateuch often ascribed to Rabbi Tanhuma. A variant version with a somewhat different textual history is named Yelammedenu , from the phrase “Let our master teach us.”	Excerpts are available in an inexpensive edition (C. F. Horne, Medieval). The full text can be found in a three-volume edition (J. T. Townsend, Tanhuma). Bregman has made an exhaustive comparison of the various versions of the Tanhuma and related texts (M. Bregman, Tanhuma-Yelammedenu).
Aggadot Bereshit	900-1000	Twenty-eight homilies on Genesis. Unfortunately, the beginning of the work, relating to Genesis 1:1-6:4, is missing.	No English edition is available.

38 A. van der Heide, Midrash, p. 44.

39 H. Freedman et al., Midrash.

Text Name	Date	Description	English Publication Reference
Narrative Midrash
Midrash Wa-Yissau	Before 130	Describes conflicts of the sons of Jacob with the Amorites and Esau (Genesis 35:5, 36:6).	No English edition is available. However, a partial translation of the last part of the midrash describing the events prior to the Messianic age can be found in J. C. Reeves, Wa-Yosha' .
Seder Olam Rabbah (SOR or Seder Olam or The Order of the World)	Before 600	A chronology of time from the beginning through Hadrian, though incomplete after the time of Alexander the Great. It may have been prepared as an aid for computing the time of the Creation. Ascribed to Talmudist Rabbi Jose ben Halafta, with later alterations.	Available in an inexpensive print-on-demand version from Xulon Press (K. Johnson, Seder Olam), and in an edition edited by H. W. Guggenheimer, (Seder Olam).
Seder Olam Zutta	500-800	Called zutta (= smaller) to distinguish it from SOR, this chronology seems to be intended to show that Jewish leaders during the exile were descendants of David.	No English edition is available.
Pirkei de Rabbi Eliezer (PRE)	650-900	A narrative midrashic text containing a collection of sayings attributed to Rabbi Eliezer, son of Hyrkanos, who lived in the first and second centuries CE. Many older traditions are included in the work.	The sole English translation of this work, G. Friedlander, Pirkei , is difficult to find. Ouaknin provides an up-to-date French translation (M.-A. Ouaknin et al., Rabbi Éliézer).
Leqah Tob	1079-1108	A midrash on the Pentateuch and five Megillot written by Tobiah Eliezer.	No English edition is available.
Sekhel Tob	1139	A midrashic anthology on the Pentateuch, possibly Italian in origin.	No English edition is available.
Chronicles of Jerahmeel	1100-1200	A medieval compilation “made by Jewish chroniclers, who drew upon the Bible, midrashic sources, and earlier chronicles, both Jewish and non-Jewish. It was purportedly written by Jerahmeel ben Solomon. It was certainly known by the fourteenth century: Rabbi Eleazar ben Asher the Levite, who lived in the Rhine provinces, included it in the compilation Sefer ha-Zikhronot ” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 129).	For an English translation, see Jerahmeel ben Solomon, Chronicles . “Some verses, or paragraphs, were incorrectly numbered in Gaster’s edition, mistakenly giving the appearance that parts of the text were omitted” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 129).
Sefer ha-Yashar (Toledot Adam or The Book of Jasher)	ca. 1000-1500	Pseudepigraphic history from Adam to the Exodus. This book should not be confused with other books of the same name (e.g., Sefer ha-Yahshar (Rabbenu Tam) (S. Shokek, Yashar)), with the Book of Jasher referred to in Joshua 10:13 and 2 Samuel 1:18, or with the fraudulent book of Pseudo-Jasher , purportedly written by the English monk Alcuin.	Inexpensive reprints of Noah’s 1840 translation (e.g., M. M. Noah, Jasher ; M. M. Noah et al., Jasher) are plentiful. Though this book has been frequently cited in LDS literature since the time of Joseph Smith, better sources exist for the material of greatest interest. For a history of its publication and of its use in LDS contexts, see E. J. Brandt, Jasher .
Bereshit Zutta	1200-1300	A compilation of midrashic commentary on the Pentateuch. Unfortunately, there is no commentary on Genesis 1:23-8:16, except for a single page on 3:6-8.	No English edition is available.
Midrash ha-Gadol (The Great Midrash) (MHG)	1200-1400	Of Yemeni origin, this aggadic midrash on the Pentateuch incorporates many otherwise lost sources.	No English edition is available.
Collections of Aggadah
Ein Yaakov (Ein Yisrael)	1516	A collection of all the aggadic material in the Babylonian Talmud , compiled by Rabbi Yaakov ibn Chaviv in the fifteenth century, and finished by his son Rabbi Levi ibn Chaviv.	A five-volume Hebrew-English version was prepared by Rabbi Shmuel Tzvi-Hirsch Glick in 1921. However, the only complete translation in English currently available is Y. i. Chaviv, Ein Yaakov .
The Book of Legends (Sefer ha-Aggadah)	1902	Contains a valuable collection of stories about biblical characters and rabbinic sages arranged by theme.	Collected and arranged by Bialik and translated into fluent English by Braude (H. N. Bialik et al., Legends).
Legends of the Jews	1909-1937	This monumental heavily-footnoted seven-volume work reveals the rabbinical thought process at work in the process of midrash as it traces multiple strands of detail in biblical stories in chronological arrangement.	Available in a reasonably priced paperback edition. Available by individual volume or as a set (L. Ginzberg, Legends).

Text Name	Date	Description	English Publication Reference
Mimekor Yisrael	1939-1945	In contrast to Bialik's and Ginzberg's focus on ancient texts, Bin Gorion gathers his tales from texts composed in the early Middle Ages and thereafter.	Unfortunately, the three-volume English translation of Bin Gorion's work is no longer in print (M. J. B. bin Gorion et al., Mimekor), though smaller collections of Bin Gorion's stories can be found in single volume editions (e.g., M. J. B. bin Gorion et al., Mimekor Abridged). An earlier German version of the larger work with an overlapping collection of stories was reprinted for many years as Die Sagen der Juden , which can often be found in used bookstores.
Hebrew Myths: The Book of Genesis	1964	The result of a collaboration between English poet and scholar Robert Graves and Jewish anthropologist Raphael Patai, the book goes beyond midrashic sources to explore other ancient associations to biblical stories.	The book is currently out of print but used versions can still be found (R. Graves et al., Myths).
The Bible As It Was	1997	This is a more limited and less expensive version of Traditions of the Bible .	J. L. Kugel, Bible As It Was .
Traditions of the Bible	1998	With a focus on some two dozen stories in the Pentateuch, Kugel shows how the early Bible interpreters shaped the meaning of the texts and passed these ideas to future generations. Unlike the other collections listed here, the author preserves the original wording of each source cited.	J. L. Kugel, Traditions .
Tree of Souls; The Mythology of Judaism	2004	In this eruditely commented and comprehensively-indexed collection of midrash organized by theme, Schwartz has assembled a copious selection of traditions into a highly-readable volume.	H. Schwartz, Tree .
Folktales of the Jews: Tales from the Sephardic Dispersion	2006-	Over a period of decades, Dov Noy assembled a collection of more than 20,000 tales from Israeli immigrants as part of the Israel Folktale Archives (IFA). Although some include biblical characters, very few relate directly to the Jewish scriptures.	The first volumes of a projected five-volume set of selections from the IFA collection with in-depth commentary have now appeared in English (D. Ben-Amos et al., Folktales).

Medieval Bible Commentators and Philosophers

The Middle Ages were a high point of scholarship and writing in Judaism. Fortunately, as Greenstein observes: "Sectarian schisms within the Jewish fold and external pressure, mainly Christian persecution, upon the Jews had the effect of stimulating, not repressing, Jewish expression."⁴⁰ At this time, the nature of scriptural commentary evolved from the characteristically homiletical mode of midrash to that of peshat, a way of understanding scripture in terms of its wider historical and literary context. During this same period, Jewish philosophers also attempted to harmonize faith and reason as they considered a broad set of problems in theology, science, and ethics. These scholars are often affectionately referred to by acronyms built out of initials from their names, e.g., Rasag = Rabbi SAadi Gaon. For excellent overviews of medieval Bible commentary and philosophy, see E. L. Greenstein, Commentaries and N. M. Samuelson, Medieval.

Consistent with the ancient reading formula of "two parts Scripture, one part targum," the traditional Jewish "Rabbinic Bible" or Mikraot (Miqrā'ot) Gedolot (= Great Readings) contains Masoretic notes, the Targum, Talmud citations, and extensive commentary by several of the most prominent medieval commentators—headed by Rashi. The first three volumes of A.

40 E. L. Greenstein, Commentaries, p. 214.

J. Rosenberg, Mikraot contain an English translation of this extensive work.⁴¹ Mesorah/ ArtScroll has also produced a two-volume edition of Genesis with extensive commentary.⁴² The Conservative movement has published a new edition and commentary called Etz Hayim (= Tree of Life),⁴³ and the perspective of the Reformed tradition is embodied in W. G. Plaut, Commentary. Also of value is the Jewish Publication Society's Jewish Study Bible, a one-volume work and commentary.⁴⁴

Name	Date	Description	English Publication Reference
Saariah Gaon (RasagI)	882-942	A defender of rabbinic tradition, Gaon was the first, besides Philo, to make a systematic attempt to integrate Jewish theology and Greek philosophy. He translated the Hebrew Bible into Arabic, adding his commentary. Gaon is a title that was given to the heads of two Babylonian academies beginning in 609 and continuing until 1040.	Gaon's commentary on the Torah is not available in English, though it is sometimes cited in compilations.
Abraham Ibn Ezra (Ibn Ezra)	1089-1164	More technical and less spiritual in orientation, this Spanish exegete excelled in so many fields that he was called The Wise , The Great and The Admirable Doctor .	See A. b. M. Ibn Ezra, Genesis .
Shlomo Yitzhaki (Rashi)	1040-1105	Rashi made his living in northern France growing grapes, but became a devoted scholar of the Hebrew scriptures. It is hard to overestimate the influence of his commentaries, which are still among the most widely read due to their learned style and sensitive spirituality. While his style is eclectic, he is restrained in the use of aggadah .	The impressive Sapirstein edition of Rashi's commentary has been published by Artscroll/ Mesorah both in an inexpensive and a lavish edition (Rashi, Genesis Commentary , Exodus Commentary).
Shmuel ben Meir (Rashbam)	ca. 1085-1174	French biblical commentator and son of Rashi's daughter, he was a pioneer in peshat . His views often contradicted those of Rashi (who sometimes amended his commentary accordingly) and those of his own time. He was often called on to defend Judaism in public debates.	For a translation of his commentary on Genesis, see S. Ben Meir, Meir .
Joseph ben Yitzhak Bekhor Shor (Bekhor Shor)	ca. 1100-1200	Though belonging to the same French exegetical tradition as Rashi, and a student of his grandson Rashbam, Bekhor Shor strove for rational explanations rather than creative midrash to account for duplicate stories and miraculous events in the scriptures.	No English edition of his commentary on Genesis is available.
Moses ben Maimon (Rambam or Maimonides)	1135-1204	Maimonides was a brilliant rabbi and physician who grew up in Spain and has become the most famous of the medieval Jewish philosophers. His tombstone states: "From Moses to Moses, there was no one like Moses."	Maimonides' writings are readily available in many editions. Although he wrote many volumes of talmudic and biblical commentary, his most well known work is Guide for the Perplexed (Moreh Nevuchim), an attempt to deal with conflicts between Aristotelian thought and theology. Controversial in its time, it is now highly esteemed, particularly in Orthodox Judaism. His 14-volume code of the Jewish oral law, the Mishneh Torah (Yad ha-Chazaka = 'The Strong Hand'), is considered his masterwork (M. Maimonides, Code ; M. Maimonides, Mishneh). The best overview of his life and works is H. A. Davidson, Maimonides .
David Kimhi (Kimchi or Qimchi or Radak)	ca. 1160-1235	Born in Provence, France, Kimhi's commentary on Genesis emphasizes moral and ethical implications of the stories. Although he tends toward straightforward interpretations of the words themselves, he advances a mystical interpretation of the story of Adam and Eve.	Portions of Kimhi's commentary are available within E. Munk, Hachut .

41 The Jewish Publication Society has published a volume of their own version of the Miqra'ot Gedolot for Exodus (M. Carasik, Exodus). It is unknown whether they will continue the series with volumes on other books of the Torah.

42 R. M. Zlotowitz et al., Bereishis.

43 D. L. Lieber, Etz Hayim.

44 A. Berlin et al., Jewish.

Name	Date	Description	English Publication Reference
Moshe ben Nachman (Ramban or Nachmanides)	1194-1270	Like Maimonides, Nachmanides was a Spaniard, a physician, and a Torah scholar. Though he differed with Maimonides on many points, he tried to avert schism between his supporters and opponents. His commentaries contain significant haggadic elements and are also the first to incorporate kabbalistic thought.	See Ramban, Torah Commentary .
Levi ben Gershom (Gersonides or Ralbag)	1288-1344	A controversial philosopher, mathematician, theologian, and astronomer from Provence, Gersonides insisted on the role of reason in understanding all truth, including the Torah .	Ralbag's most well-known work, The Wars of the Lord , has been translated in S. Feldman, Wars . A partial English translation is available in J. J. Staub's The Creation of the World According to Gersonides .
Yitzhak ben Yehuda Abravanel (Abrabane or Abravanel)	1437-1508	Born in Portugal as part of a distinguished family, Abravanel died in exile in Italy. He was not only a scholar but also a statesman and defender of the faith during the time of the Inquisition. His commentaries are known for the fact that they took social and political issues no less than theological ones into account. After his death, his works were frequently published by appreciative Christian scholars.	Although excerpts from his commentaries are often included in rabbinic Bibles, no integral edition of his work is available in English. However, Schiffers has translated Abravanel's commentary on Genesis 1:1-6:8 into French (I. Abravanel, Abravanel).
Obadiah ben Jacob Sforno (Sforno)	ca. 1475-1550	The most famous member of an Italian family of scholars and rabbis, his commentary on the Torah took advantage of his skills as a philologist to construct the meaning of the text. Sforno's attitudes toward mystical interpretation influenced his judicious selection from earlier exegetes. His commentary is still popular today.	Sforno's two-volume commentary on Genesis is available in English in O. b. J. Sforno, Torah Commentary .

Mystical Texts

The mystical tradition in Judaism has a long tradition, stretching back to beginnings in at least the talmudic period, flowering in kabbalistic writings dating from the 12th century, and continuing to the present. Scholem has written the classic surveys of this literature,⁴⁵ but a more recent four-volume by Joseph Dan on Jewish mysticism better situates the texts and incorporates important later scholarship.⁴⁶ An accessible introduction that provides additional background understanding for these writings can be found in L. Fine, Kabbalistic Texts. An excellent two-volume source reader by Blumenthal is available⁴⁷ as well as an anthology composed from an eclectic perspective, edited by Dan.⁴⁸ A concise overview of Jewish mysticism is provided by Hamblin.⁴⁹ See also the bibliographic survey by Karr.⁵⁰

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Sefer Hekhalot (Book of Palaces), 3 Enoch , The Hebrew Apocalypse of Enoch , Pirq Rabbi Yishmael (Chapters of Rabbi Ishmael), or The Book of Rabbi Ishmael the High Priest	400-600	3 Enoch is a late manuscript attributed to Rabbi Ishmael (d. ca. 132 CE) who ascended to heaven and received revelations from Metatron (Enoch). Seven manuscripts have survived. It can be divided into four sections: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Chapters 1-2 describe the ascension of Ishmael. • Chapters 3-16 describe how Metatron, who says he is Enoch, was translated from earth to heaven and exalted above the other angels. • Chapters 17-40 describe the organization and activities of the heavens. • Chapters 41-48 describe a tour of various heavenly marvels (cosmology, eschatology, souls in various states) given to Ishmael by Metatron. 	Appears in P. Alexander, 3 Enoch . Summarized in J. Dan, Heart , pp. 61-73.

45 G. Scholem, Trends; G. Scholem, Kabbalah.

46 J. Dan, Mysticism.

47 D. Blumenthal, Merkabah; D. Blumenthal, Philosophic.

48 J. Dan, Heart.

49 W. J. Hamblin et al., Temple, pp. 81-87.

50 D. Karr, Notes.

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Hekhalot Rabbati (The Greater Palaces or Pirkei Hekhalot) (HR)	200-800	An account of a heavenly ascent by Rabbi Ishmael to God's throne chariot (merkabah). Seven heavens and seven throne halls are described, and dangers are overcome by the recital of specific formulas.	An English translation of chapters 15-29 with commentary appears in D. Blumenthal, Merkabah , pp. 53-91. A good overview can be found in J. Dan, Heart , pp. 49-54.
Hekhalot Zutreti or Hekhalot Zutarti (The Lesser Palaces)	200-800	An account of the heavenly ascent of Rabbi Akiva.	There is no complete version available in English, however a selection of significant passages from this work appear in D. J. Halperin, Chariot .
Merkabah Rabbah (The Great Chariot) or Shi'ur Qomah (Measurement of the [Divine] Body)	ca. 600 or earlier	A mystical exegesis of the Song of Songs , revered by Rabbi Akiva but repulsive to Maimonides. The immense measures of the body of God have been discussed in light of the huge statures attributed to Adam and other OT patriarchs.	Cohen has produced a book of analysis and a book of texts and recensions in English (M. S. Cohen, Liturgy ; M. S. Cohen, Texts). Unfortunately, both are now out-of-print. A full translation can be found in D. Meltzer, Shiur Qoma .
Baraita de Ma'aseh Bereshit (Baraita on the Work of Creation)	ca. 700-800	Mystical speculation on the first chapter of Genesis.	See J. Hirschman, Baraita .
Solomon ben Yehudah Ibn Geirol	ca. 1021-1070	Born in Spain, Geirol is known for his Keter Malkhut (= The Crown of the Kingdom, ca. 1060), a hymn praising God and his Creation.	Published in J. Dan, Heart , pp. 81-94; S. i. Gabirol, Crown .
Ma'aseh Merkabah (Account of the Chariot)	ca. 1100-1200	The work contains a collection of hymns that were heard and recited during an ascent, presented by Rabbi Akibah and Rabbi Ishmael. The text may have been used as a form of ritual instruction.	A translation and analysis of the text can be found in N. Janowitz, Poetics . See also Joseph Dan's summary J. Dan, Heart , pp. 55-60.
Sefer Yetsirah (Book of Creation)	ca. 700-900	This text is considered one of the forerunners of kabbalistic thought and is traditionally ascribed to Abraham. It is called the Book of Creation because it provides the words God used for bringing the world into existence. It exists in several versions.	An inexpensive English translation of this book can be found in A. Kaplan, Sefer Yetzirah , and Blumenthal has prepared a version with valuable diagrams (D. Blumenthal, Merkabah , pp. 13-44). A substantial excerpt can be found in P. Mordell, Sefer Yetsirah .
Sefer ha-Bahir (Book of Brightness)	ca. 1176	A brief, loosely-organized collection of speculations about God in the form of scriptural commentary that appeared in Provence. It contains Gnostic elements and describes the ten Sefirot —attributes or lights that comprise the life of God. The Sefirot are the foundation of kabbalistic thinking. "[P]ortions of it appear to come from a much earlier work, the Sefer Raza Rabbah " (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 50).	An inexpensive translation has been published (A. Kaplan, Bahir). A substantial excerpt can be found in J. Neugroschel, Bahir .
The Zohar (Sefer ha-Zohar or Book of Splendor)	1275-1500	The most famous work in the kabbalistic tradition. The Zohar is a commentary on the Torah and, though attributed to Shimon bar Yohai, its core was probably composed by Moses de Leon, who drew on fragments of more ancient works. This work achieved near canonical status by the sixteenth century. Green has produced an up-to-date introduction to the Zohar (A. Green, Guide).	Superseding the older edition from Soncino Press (H. Sperling et al., Zohar), Matt's lucid new translation of the Zohar with extensive notes has set a new standard (D. C. Matt, Zohar).
Midrash Kohen	1601	A mystical midrash on the creation of the world.	No English edition is available.
Yalkut Reubeni	Before 1673	A collection of kabbalistic interpretations of the Pentateuch.	No English edition is available.
Sefer Rezial Hamelach (The Book of the Angel Rezial)	ca. 1700	This book was said to have been given to Adam by the Angel Rezial. Much of its material may date to several centuries earlier. Besides descriptions of the seven heavens, it contains a wide variety of magical lore and a long version of Shi'ur Qomah . It also incorporates the kabbalistic work Sefer ha-Razim (Book of the Mysteries or Book of Secrets).	For an English translation, see S. Savedow, Rezial. Sefer ha-Razim is separately published in M. A. Morgan, Sefer ha-Razim .

Christian Texts

New Testament Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha and Related Writings

These books were excluded from the New Testament canon. Some of these texts are also included in the Nag Hammadi or Gnostic collections. An excellent online resource for New Testament Apocryphal writing is New Testament Apocrypha. An overview of current views on this literature can be found in S. J. Shoemaker, Apocryphal. The most convenient published source for translations of these texts is the two-volume New Testament Apocrypha (NTA) edited by Edgar Hennecke and Wilhelm Schneemelcher. Originally published in German as Neutestamentliche Apokryphen by Hennecke in 1904, a second edition was produced in 1924 and a third in 1959. The English edition of 1963-1965 contains English translations of the texts from the original, rather than from the German.⁵¹ Hennecke originally compiled this work to update M. R. James' Apocryphal New Testament (ANT). Page numbers for both NTA and ANT are referenced in the table below.

Text Names	Date	Description and Comments	NTA	ANT
Secret Gospel of Mark	ca. 100	Of controversial provenance, this purported excerpt of a letter from Clement contains a brief account of the raising of Lazarus and of Jesus teaching the mysteries of the kingdom to a youth. Readily available in M. Smith, Secret Gospel . Subsequent research is documented in J. Dart, Decoding .
Protevangelium of James (Infancy Gospel of James)	By the third century CE	This book contains a number of very early traditions about the life of Mary and the birth of Jesus. Parts were incorporated into the Gospel of Pseudo-Matthew (Pseudo-Matthew, Gospel of Pseudo-Matthew) and the Gospel of the Birth of Mary (A. Roberts et al., Nativity of Mary). A more recent English translation with commentary can be found in M. Barker, Infancy Gospel of James .	1:370-388	38-49
Gospel of Nicodemus (Acts of Pilate and Christ's Descent into Hell)	ca. 350	The so-called Gospel of Nicodemus is composed of two originally independent parts. The Acts of Pilate , which exists in Greek and Latin versions, was implausibly said to have been derived from official Roman records. The Latin appendix describing Christ's Descent into Hell , perhaps the most well-known account of the story of the "Harrowing of Hell," was popular among early Christians.	1:444-484	94-165
The Acts of John	ca. 150-200	About two thirds of this work, which was probably about the length of Matthew, has survived. John's visits to Ephesus and his death are recorded. A prayer circle at the Last Supper and other incidents surrounding the time of the Passion are also included. Some scholars date the work to the fourth century.	2:188-259	228-270
Apocalypse of Peter	ca. 100-150	"An early Christian document attributed to the apostle Peter, known only from quotes by early church fathers and a few fragments" (J. A. Tvedtnes, Hidden Books , p. 229).	2:663-683	505-524
Apocalypse of Paul	By the fourth century	"A document attributed to the apostle Paul, describing his vision of the heavens alluded to in 2 Corinthians 12:1-4. It was known to St. Augustine in the fourth century CE. It was widely distributed and is known from manuscripts written in Greek (the original), Syriac, Latin, Coptic, Armenian, and Old Church Slavonic" (J. A. Tvedtnes, Hidden Books , p. 229). An English translation of a Coptic fragment can be found in G. W. MacRae et al., Paul .	2:755-798	524-555
Évangile des Douze Apôtres (Gospel of the Twelve Apostles)	500-600	French translation in E. Revillout, Évangile . Nibley translates liberal portions into English in H. W. Nibley, Christ , pp. 416-428. NTA calls this a "collection of sixteen independent Coptic fragments... arbitrarily grouped under a fictitious title" (NTA, 1:271), but Nibley sees them as a connected forty-day manuscript (H. W. Nibley, Christ , p. 416). Not to be confused with the no-longer-extant Gospel of the Twelve Apostles referred to by the Church Fathers (NTA, 1:263-264) and possibly to be identified with the Gospel of the Ebionites (ANT, p. 10). Neither does it have anything to do with J. R. Harris, Gospel (an eighth-century Syriac manuscript—see NTA, 1:271), nor G. J. R. Ouseley, Gospel (purportedly from a manuscript hidden in Tibet that was "channeled" to the author).

The Church Fathers

These texts represent the writings of early Christian leaders, following the apostolic period.⁵² They are usually divided into authors who wrote before the Council of Nicaea, held in 325 CE, 51 E. Hennecke et al., NT Apocrypha. Page numbers below are to the third edition. An English (1991/1993) fifth edition has now appeared. J. K. Elliott, Apocryphal has now superseded both NTA and ANT.

52 Kelly and Saint-Laurent have assembled a useful study of resources for the study of early Christianity, with a referred to as the Ante-Nicene Fathers and those who wrote during and after, referred to as the Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers. Included with the Ante-Nicene Fathers are some of the New Testament Apocryphal texts and a few Pseudepigraphal texts. Some medieval Christian writers are also listed in the table.

Far from dismissing the value of these writings, the Prophet Joseph Smith regretted the fact that the “character of the old churches [had]... been slandered” and said that he valued the many “old Catholic church traditions” that were consistent with teachings of the restored Church.⁵³ Edward Stevenson also reported the following:

While looking over our copy of a large English Book of Martyrs,⁵⁴ [Joseph Smith] expressed sympathy for the Christian martyrs and a hope for their salvation. He asked to borrow the book, promising to return it when he should meet us again in Missouri. On returning it he said, “I have, by the aid of the Urim and Thummim,⁵⁵ seen those martyrs. They were honest, devoted followers of Christ, according to the light they possessed. They will be saved.”⁵⁶

The most frequently cited scholarly editions of the writings of the Church Fathers are the Patrologia Graeca (written in Greek, with Latin translations) and the Patrologia Latina (written in Latin). Translations and commentary for most of the writings of the Early Christian Fathers can be found online at Early Church Fathers.

The Patrologia Graeca (PG) were edited by Jacques-Paul Migne and published in 161 volumes plus a separate index from 1857 to 1866.⁵⁷ Although many of the early church leaders wrote in Greek, Latin became the predominant language of the Church by the third century CE. Notable authors include Clement, Eusebius, Origen, Basil the Great, Gregory of Nazianzus, and Gregory of Nyssa. PG includes material dating up to 1439, the time of the Council of Florence.

The Patrologia Latina (PL), published by Migne between 1844 and 1855, included 217 volumes of works written in Latin, along with some Greek works translated into Latin.⁵⁸ Indices were published between 1862 and 1865. These texts cover a time period of nearly 1000 years, essentially ending in 1216 CE. It was Migne’s intent to incorporate additional works from the reformation. Although he commenced this effort, it was never completed. Prominent authors in this collection include scholars such as Tertullian, Cyprian, Lactantius, Ambrose, Jerome, and Augustine, and Popes such as Cornelius, Constantine I, and Innocent I. Other authors include Charles the Bald, Anselm, Abelard, Thomas Becket, and Godfrey de Bouillon.

A third collection, the Patrologia Orientalis (PO), consisting of works written in Syriac, Armenian, Arabic, Coptic, Amharic, Georgian, and Slavonic replaced the Patrologia Syriaca series that began in 1894 with two original volumes.⁵⁹ Volume 41 was published in 1984.

The most inexpensive and accessible series containing an English translation of the early church fathers is published in 38 volumes by Hendrickson. This edition has also been sold as three separate sets: The Ante-Nicene Fathers (A. Roberts et al., ANF, 10 Volumes), The particular focus on English-language titles (J. F. Kelly et al., Tools). Unfortunately, temple studies have been neglected in the Handbook in which this chapter is included—only a single relevant entry in the index appears (“Jerusalem temple”).

53 J. Smith, Jr., Teachings, 16 June 1844, p. 375; J. Smith, Jr., Words, 16 June 1844, pp. 381-382; cf. p. 411 n. 48.

54 J. Foxe, Martyrs.

55 At that time (1834), it is more likely that Joseph Smith used a seerstone.

56 Edward Stevenson, cited in H. L. Andrus et al., They Knew (2004), p. 83.

57 J. P. Migne, Patrologiae Graeca.

58 J. P. Migne, Patrologiae Latina.

59 R. Graffin, Syriaca; R. Graffin et al., Orientalis.

Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers Series I (P. Schaff, NPNF-1, 14 Volumes) consisting of writings from Augustine and Chrysostom, and The Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers Series II (P. Schaff et al., NPNF-2, 14 Volumes) consisting of Greek Fathers from Eusebius to John of Damascus, and Latin Fathers from Hilary to Gregory the Great.

Only a limited selection of authors and writings that either have been directly cited or are otherwise judged to be of relevance to the text of Genesis are included below. For a more complete list of sources and a valuable collection of patristic commentary on Genesis 1-11, see Louth's volume in the Ancient Christian Commentary on Scripture series.⁶⁰ Many of the capsule summaries below are excerpted from this volume. See also Sheridan's companion volume on Genesis 12-50.⁶¹ For an overview of this literature and its setting, see F. Young et al., Early Christian Literature. See also S. A. Harvey, Early Christian, especially pp. 957-977.

Author	Selected Writings	Date	Description and Comments	English Translations
Clement of Rome (pope)	Epistula i ad Corinthios (Epistle to the Corinthians)	Regn. 92-101?	Clement is reputed to be the third or fourth pope (depending on whether Peter is counted), and the first of which something is known. His letter to the Corinthians was written to urge unity in the face of quarrels and schisms.	A. Roberts et al., ANF , 9:229-249
Ignatius of Antioch	Epistle to the Trallians , Epistle to the Ephesians , Epistle to the Philadelphians	d. ca. 110-112	"Bishop of Antioch who wrote several letters to local churches while being taken from Antioch to Rome to be martyred. In the letters, which warn against heresy, he stresses orthodox Christology, the centrality of the Eucharist, and the unique role of the bishop in preserving the unity of the church" (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 188).	A. Roberts et al., ANF , 1:49-58, 1:66-72, 1:79-85
Polycarp of Smyrna	Epistle to the Philipians , Martyrdom of Polycarp	ca. 69-155	"Bishop of Smyrna who vigorously fought heretics such as the Marcionites and Valentinians. He was the leading figure in Roman Asia in the middle of the second century" until he was martyred (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 191). He may have known the Apostle John.	A. Roberts et al., ANF , 1:33-36, 1:39-44
Justin Martyr (of Flavia Neapolis in Palestine)	Dialogus con Tryphone (Dialogue with Trypho)	ca. 100/110-15, fl. ca. 148-161	"Palestinian philosopher who was converted to Christianity, 'the only sure and worthy philosophy.' He traveled to Rome where he wrote several apologies against both pagans and Jews, combining Greek philosophy and Christian theology; he was eventually martyred" (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 189).	A. Roberts et al., ANF , 1:194-270
Sextus Julius Africanus	The Extant Fragments of the Five Books of the Chronography Chronography of Julius Africanus	ca. 160-240	Little is known about the life of Julius Africanus. This work contains a fragmentary chronography from Adam through Jacob, followed by more detailed overview of Moses and Jesus. Interesting detail on the descendants of Cain versus Seth, the Babylonian captivity, and the death of Cleopatra. It includes an explanation of the Seventy Weeks prophesied by Daniel.	A. Roberts et al., ANF , 6:130-138
Irenaeus of Lyons	Adversus haereses (Against Heresies), Demonstration of the Apostolic Preaching (Proof of the Apostolic Preaching)	b. ca. 150, fl. 180-199, d. ca. 202	Bishop of Lyons, and "a disciple of teachers who had known St. John" (M. Barker, Hidden , p. x). His Against Heresies is an important refutation of Gnosticism. His long-lost Demonstration was rediscovered in 1904.	Irenaeus, Proof ; Irenaeus, Demonstration ; Irenaeus, Heresies .
Theophilus of Antioch	Apologia ad Autolytus	d. ca. 183-185	"The one undoubted extant work of Theophilus is his Apologia ad Autolytum , in three books. Its ostensible object is to convince a pagan friend, Autolytus, a man of great learning and an earnest seeker after truth, of the divine authority of the Christian religion, while at the same time he exhibits the falsehood and absurdity of paganism" (Theophilus).	A. Roberts et al., ANF , 2:89-121

60 A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11.

61 M. Sheridan, Genesis 12-50.

Author	Selected Writings	Date	Description and Comments	English Translations
Clement of Alexandria	Stromateis (Stromata, Miscellanies), Exhortation to the Greeks (Exhortation to the Heathen)	b. ca. 150, fl. 190-215	“A highly educated Christian convert from paganism, head of the catechetical school in Alexandria, and pioneer of Christian scholarship” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 186). He was the teacher of Origen.	A. Roberts et al., ANF, 2:299-568, 2:171-206
Tertullian of Carthage	Adversus Judaeos (Against the Jews, An Answer to the Jews), Adversus Marcionem (Against Marcion), De corona (On the Crown), De anima (On the Soul), De Baptismo (On Baptism), De Oratione (On Prayer)	ca. 155/160-225/250, fl. ca. 197-222	“Brilliant Carthaginian apologist and polemicist who laid the foundations of Christology and trinitarian orthodoxy in the West, though he himself was estranged from the main church by its laxity” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 192).	A. Roberts et al., ANF, 3:151-173, 3:93-104, 3:181-235, 3:271-475, 3:669-679, 681-691
Origen of Alexandria	De principiis (On first principles), Homiliae in Genesim (Homilies on Genesis), Homiliae in Leviticum (Homilies on Leviticus), Contra Celsum (Against Celsus), Commentary on John	b. 185, fl. ca. 200-254	“Influential exegete and systematic theologian. He was condemned (perhaps unfairly) for maintaining the preexistence of souls while denying the resurrection of the body, the literal truth of Scripture, and the equality of the Father and the Son in the Trinity” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 190).	Origen, Genesis and Exodus ; Origen, Leviticus 1-16 ; A. Roberts et al., ANF, 4:239-384, 4:395-669, 10:297-408.
Pseudo-Clement	Recognitions, Homilies	Before 231	These two overlapping books, sometimes called together the Clementina or the Preachings of Peter , describe the conversion of Clement of Rome and his travels with the Apostle Peter. They purport to contain many of Peter’s teachings. Homilies is preserved in the original Greek, while Recognitions exists in a Latin translation. Fragments exist in other languages and in citations by other writers. It is presumed that both books are derived from an older, longer source. The dating of this literature has been highly controversial. Tvedtnes concludes that Recognitions must predate 231 (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 185). Most scholars see these writings as arising from a sect of Jewish Christianity, and some see a possible relationship to the Ebionites or Nazarenes. Non-Mormon scholar David Flusser writes: “The Ebionites held interesting doctrines including the corporeality and visibility of God, as well as the denial of predestination, fixed election, and original sin. They affirmed the honorable role of Adam and Eve, and likewise affirmed the expiatory death of Jesus as the Messiah and the Christ, as would the Latter-day Saints today. In these teachings, they show a remarkable similarity to the teachings of Joseph Smith who claimed he was returning to the pristine Jewish-Christian faith. In their dynamic understanding of human nature and the Christian faith, the faith of these Jewish-Christians closely resembles that of the Latter-day Saints, an astonishing coincidence that is surely good for a normative approach to both faiths” (D. Flusser, Jewish-Christian , p. 67).	F. S. Jones, Recognitions ; A. Roberts et al., ANF, 8:77-211, 8:223-346
Novatian of Rome	De Trinitate (On the Trinity)	Fl. 235-258	“Roman theologian, otherwise orthodox, who formed a schismatic church after failing to become pope. His treatise on the Trinity states the classic Western doctrine” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 190).	A. Roberts et al., ANF, 5:611-644
Victorinus of Petovium (Pettau)	Fragment of Tractatus de Fabrica Mundi [On the Creation of the World]	d. ca. 304	Victorinus was a Bishop of Pettau. This work contains an expansion of Genesis creation account with interpretations based on 1 John and the book of Revelation.	A. Roberts et al., ANF, 7:341-343

Author	Selected Writings	Date	Description and Comments	English Translations
Methodius of Olympus	From the Book Concerning Matter (Concerning Free Will)	d. ca. 311	A fragment of a work defending the proposition that matter is created and is not the cause of evil. Preserved by Eusebius and quoted by Origen in his arguments against the Gnostic Marcionites.	A. Roberts et al., ANF 6:356-363
Lucius Caelius (or Caecilius?) Firmianus Lactantius	Divinarum Institutionum (The Divine Institutes, The Divine Institutions)	ca. 240-ca. 320	Lactantius, a Latin-speaking North African, was a highly-skilled apologist and rhetorician. Divinarum Institutionum , his most important work, “was intended to point out the futility of pagan beliefs and to establish the reasonableness and truth of Christianity as a response to pagan critics. It was also the first attempt at a systematic exposition of Christian theology in Latin, planned on a scale sufficiently broad to silence all opponents” (Lactantius).	A. Roberts et al., ANF 7:9-223
Eusebius of Caesarea (Eusebius Pamphilus)	Life of Constantine, Ecclesiastical History (History of the Church), Onomasticon	b. ca. 260/263; fl. ca. 315-340	“Bishop of Caesarea, partisan of the emperor Constantine, and first historian of the Christian church. He argued that the truth of the gospel had been foreshadowed in pagan writings, but had to defend his own doctrine against suspicion of Arian sympathies” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 187). Eusebius’ unfinished Life of Constantine , while filled with partisan rhetoric, is an invaluable account of the life of this Roman emperor, who turned from being the greatest persecutor of the Church to its most important supporter. His History , while suffering from the same defects, presents much information not found elsewhere. The Onomasticon is a glossary of scriptural names and places.	Eusebius, Onomasticon ; Eusebius, History ; Eusebius, Constantine ; P. Schaff et al., Nicene and Post-Nicene 2, 1:73-403, 1:405-610
Athanasius of Alexandria (Athanasius the Great, Pope Athanasius I)	Incarnation	293-373	As a church leader and theologian, Athanasius is most remembered for his role in the Arian controversy at the Council of Nicaea. He vigorously attacked the idea of Arianism that the Son was subordinate to the Father. Though successful in anathematizing the followers of Arius at the Council, support for these ideas waxed and waned, and Athanasius was frequently exiled throughout his life because of his teachings.	Athanasius, Incarnation .
Cyril of Jerusalem	Catechetical Lectures	ca. 315-386; fl. ca. 348	Cyril was a Bishop of Jerusalem. Nibley cites lengthy passages of the section containing the Lectures on the Ordinances (Mystagogikai Katecheseis) that echo LDS temple themes (H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 515-524; cf. J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 878-879; J. A. Tvedtnes, Rituals). He notes that these lectures took place just as “the cult of the temple enjoyed a spectacular albeit specious revival. These particular lectures contain ‘the fullest account extant’ of ordinances in the church at that crucial period... The apostolic fathers are full of oblique references to the ordinances; they understand their extreme importance but are not in a position to talk freely about them... And so ancient ordinances survive as fossils buried in a deep matrix of rhetoric, philosophy, and art” (H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 515, 522, 524).	H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, 1-5:23, pp. 515-524; P. Schaff et al., Nicene and Post-Nicene 2, pp. 1-157.
Ephrem the Syrian	Commentary on Genesis, Hymns on Paradise, Hymns for the Feast of the Epiphany, Hymns on Virginity and on the Symbols of the Lord, Commentary on the Diatessaron	b. ca. 307; fl. 363-373	“Syrian writer of commentaries and devotional hymns which are sometimes regarded as the greatest specimens of Christian poetry prior to Dante” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 187).	Ephrem the Syrian, Epiphany ; Ephrem the Syrian, Virginity ; Ephrem the Syrian, Commentary ; Ephrem the Syrian, Paradise ; Ephrem the Syrian, Poems ; Ephrem the Syrian, Diatessaron
Gregory of Nazianus (the Theologian, or Nazianzen)	Orations, Dogmatic Poems	329-389	Influential in both the Western and Eastern churches, Gregory was one of the most highly-trained and effective Christian writers and orators of his time. His thinking was influential in elucidating the relationship among the members of the Trinity. Along with the two brothers Basil the Great and Gregory of Nyssa, he is known as one of the three Cappadocian Fathers.	Gregory Nazianzen, Orations, Poetry .

Author	Selected Writings	Date	Description and Comments	English Translations
Basil the Great of Caesarea	Homilae in hexaemeron (The Hexaemeron), De spiritu sancto (On the Spirit)	b. ca. 330; fl. 357-379	“One of the Cappadocian fathers, bishop of Caesarea and champion of the teaching on the Trinity propounded at Nicaea in 325. He was a great administrator and founded a monastic rule” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 186).	P. Schaff et al., Nicene and Post-Nicene 2, 8:1-50, 8:51-107
Gregory of Nyssa	De officio hominis (On the Creation of Man), Dialogus de anima et resurrectione (On the Soul and the Resurrection), The Great Catechism	ca. 335-394	“Brother to Basil the Great, Gregory of Nyssa was born in 335 or 336 CE in Cappadocia (in modern Turkey). He authored more than thirty works that have been preserved through the centuries” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 187). “He is famous for maintaining the equality in unity of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 188).	P. Schaff et al., Nicene and Post-Nicene 2, 5:386-427, 5:428-468, 5:471-509.
Bordeaux Pilgrim	Travels	333	This anonymous pilgrim provided the earliest Christian account of a visit to the Holy Land.	In Egeria, Travels , pp. 22-34
Egeria (Etheria)	Egeria's Travels	381-384	Egeria, a medieval nun, produced a “diary rediscovered in 1884 that describes a pilgrimage to the Holy Land” (M. Barker, Hidden , p. xii).	Egeria, Travels
John Chrysostom	In Genesim [homilies 1-67] (Homilies on Genesis), In Genesim [sermons 1-9] (Sermons on Genesis); Commentary on Job	344/354-407; fl. 386-407	Bishop of Constantinople and champion of orthodoxy, Chrysostom was “one of the most prolific writers among the early church fathers” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 193).	J. Chrysostom, Homilies on Genesis ; Job
Jerome	Tractatus lix in Psalmos (Homilies on the Psalms), Liber quaestionum hebraicarum in Genesim (Hebrew Questions on Genesis), Letters , Vulgate Translation of the Bible	ca. 347-420	Jerome “has left a substantial corpus of writings, including several commentaries on the Bible, although he is best known as the scholar who translated the Bible into the Latin... Vulgate ” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 194). “He defended the perpetual virginity of Mary, attacked Origen and Pelagius and supported extreme ascetic practices” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 188).	Jerome, Homilies ; Jerome, Questions on Genesis ; P. Schaff et al., Nicene and Post-Nicene 2, 6:1-295, 6:486-487; R. Weber, Vulgata
Augustine of Hippo	The City of God , De Genesi ad litteram (On the Literal Interpretation of Genesis), Against the Two Letters of the Pelagians	354-430; fl. 387-430	“Following his conversion from Manichaeism to Christianity, Augustine... became bishop of Hippo, in North Africa (Tunisia).” In his writings against the pelagians, he formulated the doctrines of original sin and predestination. He wrote The City of God “to defend Christianity to the heathens after the sack of Rome (written 413-426)” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 200).	Augustine, Literal ; P. Schaff, Nicene and Post-Nicene 1, 2:1-511, 5:373-434
Quodvultdeus of Carthage	Book of Promises and Predictions of God	d. ca. 450	A deacon of Carthage and friend of Augustine, his name means “Whatever God wants.” He attempted to “show at length how the New Testament fulfilled the Old Testament” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 191).	Quodvultdeus, Promesse ; Quodvultdeus, Homilies
Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite	De coelesti hierarchia (The Celestial Hierarchy)	ca. 482-ca. 532; fl. ca. 500	“[A]uthor of four mystical writings, probably from the late fifth century, which were the foundation of the apophatic school of mysticism in their denial that anything can be truly predicated of God” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 187). The Celestial Hierarchy describes the nine ranks of angels that mediate between God and humankind” (M. Barker, Hidden , p. xii).	Pseudo-Dionysius, Hierarchy
Ancius Manlius Severinus Boethius	De Consolatione Philosophiae (The Consolation of Philosophy)	ca. 480-ca. 525	Boethius was a Christian educator, statesman, theologian, and philosopher of the late Roman empire whose Consolation of Philosophy “was for centuries the most influential book ever written in Latin” (C. S. Lewis, Image , p. 75).	A. M. S. Boethius, Consolation
Bede the Venerable (Bede of Jarrow)	On the Temple , An Ecclesiastical History of the English People (Historia ecclesiastica gentis Anglorum)	673-735	“One of the most learned men of his age... Born in Northumbria, at the age of seven Bede was put under the care of the Benedictine monks of Saints Peter and Paul at Jarrow and given a broad classical education in the monastic tradition” (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 186).	Bede, Ecclesiastical ; Bede, Temple
Hugh of St. Victor	De sacramentis christianae fidei (On the Sacraments of the Christian Faith)	ca. 1078-1141	Mystic and philosopher with numerous and diverse writings. De sacramentis is his most well-known work.	Hugh of Saint Victor, De Sacramentis

Author	Selected Writings	Date	Description and Comments	English Translations
Martin of Leon	Septuagesima	ca. 1130-1203	Martin of Leon was a priest and canon regular of the Augustinian order. His Septuagesima has not been translated into English.	J. P. Migne, Patrologiae Latina , 208
Thomas Aquinas	Summa Theologica	ca. 1225-1274	Prolific medieval theologian and philosopher, Thomas Aquinas attempted to unify faith and reason at a time when Aristotle's works had newly made their appearance in Latin. Best known for the Summa , his massive volume on Christian doctrine, he produced some 60 other works in his short life of less than 50 years.	T. Aquinas, Summa

Other Christian Writings

These are texts that are not included in the above groupings.

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Subject Matter Related to Genesis
Letter of Barnabas	ca. 140	This letter "was originally attributed to Barnabas the Levite (Acts 4:36; 13:2) and was rediscovered in 1859, included in the New Testament of the Sinai Codex, the oldest known Bible. It gives a Jewish Christian perspective on many issues, such as the Sabbath and the temple" (M. Barker, Hidden , p. x).	A. Roberts et al., ANF , 1:137-149
Didache	ca. 140	Purported to contain teachings of the original Twelve Apostles, the Didache is a brief handbook of instructions that was used in the training of new converts. It "intertwines Jewish ethics with Christian liturgical practice to form a whole discourse on the 'way of life'" (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 187).	B. D. Ehrman, Didache ; A. Roberts et al., ANF , 7:391-383
Shepherd of Hermas (Pastor of Hermas)	ca. 140-155	"Written by a former slave and named for the form of the second angel said to have granted him his visions, this work was highly esteemed for its moral value and was used as a textbook for catechumens in the early church" (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 192).	C. Osiek, Shepherd ; A. Roberts et al., ANF , 2:9-58
Second Letter of Clement (so-called) (2 Clement)	ca. 150	"The earliest surviving Christian sermon, probably written by a Corinthian author" (A. Louth et al., Genesis 1-11 , p. 191).	A. Roberts et al., ANF , 9:251-256
Testamentum Domini Nostri Jesu Christi (Testament of our Lord)	ca. 350	This document purports to be "the words of our Lord Himself, and to tell what He said to the disciples after His resurrection and before His ascension. It is supposed to be the last Will or Testament which he gave them, and to provide them with rules for the conduct of their work" (J. Cooper et al., Testament , p. 3). Written, perhaps, about 350, it exists in several Syriac recensions as well as in an Ethiopic translation. A fragment of the apocalyptic prelude also exists in Latin translation.	J. Cooper et al., Testament
Apostolic Constitutions	ca. 380	Presumed to have been compiled in Syria, these writings constitute the "largest collection of ecclesiastical law that has survived from early Christianity... The work consists of eight books. The first six are an adaptation of the Didascalia Apostolorum , written in Syria about AD 250... The seventh contains a paraphrase and enlargement of the Didache " (Apostolic Constitutions). The eight book contains a mix of additional material.	A. Roberts et al., ANF , 7:387-508
The Discourse on Abbaton (How Abbaton, the angel of death, became the king of all mankind)	Before 385	This book was copied from an existing document in the library of Jerusalem by Timothy, the fourth-century Patriarch/Archbishop of Alexandria (E. A. W. Budge, Cave , p. 54). Abbaton signifies the Angel of Death, the main purpose of the text being to explain how death came to rule among mankind. Contains valuable material on the foreordained mission of the Savior and Satan's rebellion.	Timothy of Alexandria, Discourse ; Timothy of Alexandria, Abbaton
Life of Abel	ca. 450-550	"In the Syriac Life of Abel , either Adam is considered unworthy of performing his priestly function after his Fall, or the phenomenon of priesthood in general is relegated to the reality 'after and outside Paradise,' with Cain and Abel given the appellation... 'first priests'" (S. Ruzer, Abel's Blood).	S. Brock, Abel

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
The Book of the Cave of Treasures (Arabic: Me'arath Gazze ; Ethiopic: Balata Mazagebet)	ca. 500	This text is “one of the most significant of the secondary Adam books” (M. E. Stone, History of the Literature , p. 91). The work dates in its current form to perhaps the sixth century, but with a substantial core of elements plausibly originating in the school of St. Ephrem (d. 373). On the question of dating, see C. Leonhard, Date , who posits a later date than Ri (A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne , p. 86). The book’s name is “probably a double allusion, namely, to the Book as the storehouse of literary treasures, and to the famous Cave in which Adam and Eve were made to dwell by God after their expulsion from Paradise, [in] which... gold, and frankincense, and myrrh... [brought from the Garden of Eden were] laid up”—anticipating the gifts of the Magi to the Christ child that symbolized the recovery of what mankind had lost (E. A. W. Budge, Cave, Introduction , p. 16; cf. p. 69. See also M. Barker, Hidden , p. 25; D. Wilson, Conflict , pp. 46-49; Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations, The Cave of Treasures , p. 669). The cave can be seen in temple terms as a sort of replacement for the Garden of Eden, affording them protection from the world in their state of vulnerability, and providing privacy and security for the treasures that were kept therein (D. Wilson, Conflict , pp. 50-51; cf. J. M. Lundquist, Fundamentals , pp. 655-659). The narration summarizes sacred history through the resurrection of Christ, but the greatest attention is given to the early chapters of Genesis. The author endeavored to show how the mission of Christ was foreshadowed by the events and types of Old Testament History (E. A. W. Budge, Cave , pp. 33-39). Later Christian tellings of these stories (e.g., The Book of Adam and Eve , The Book of The Bee) drew extensively from portions of this earlier work.	An English translation was made in 1927 by Budge and is currently available in reprint editions. A more recent French translation and a commentary is available for the Syriac recension (A. S.-M. Ri, Caverne Syriaque , A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne). A modern French translation also exists for the Georgian recension (C. Kourcikidze et al., Caverne Géorgienne).
The Book of Adam and Eve (The Conflict of Adam and Eve with Satan)	ca. 600-900	In its current form, the text dates to no sooner than the seventh century (M. E. Stone, History of the Literature , p. 98), and no later than the ninth (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 219). However, despite its late dating, “Turdeanu argues that this work is, in terms of the themes discussed, closest of all the secondary Adam literature to the primary Adam writings” (cited in M. E. Stone, History of the Literature , p. 99). Book 1 covers events from the Garden of Eden through the early years of Adam and Eve in exile. Eight confrontations with Satan are described. It ends with the death of Abel. Book 2 continues the story of conflicts with Satan and the narration of events to the time preceding the Flood, and Books 3 and 4 continue the story to the coming of Christ. A major object of Book 1 “is to connect the first Adam with the coming of the second, Christ; five thousand five hundred years after Adam’s fall in Eden, and in fulfillment of the promise then made him of a Savior” (S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve , p. v). See D. Wilson, Conflict for a discussion of temple symbolism in this text.	Malan’s 1882 English translation is available separately (S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve) or as part of the much-reprinted popular edition of Platt (R. H. Platt, Forgotten ; R. H. Platt, Lost and Forgotten Books). The edition by Platt contains only the first two of the four Books, and lacks the notes of Malan.
History of the Creation and Transgression of Adam	After 400	Part one of the Armenian Cycle of Four Works . The cycle presents “an expanded version of the biblical account of the primordial history recorded in Genesis 1-11,” focusing almost exclusively on events in the lives of Adam, Eve, and their immediate descendants (W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian , p. 13). This first work opens with the creation and revolt of the rebellious angels and continues to the point after the Fall where Adam and Eve are brought out of darkness into the light of this world.	W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian , pp. 108-127, 241-245, 261-266.
History of the Expulsion of Adam from the Garden	After 400	Part two of the Armenian Cycle of Four Works . It gives an account of Satan’s deception and the cheirograph of Adam. God promises deliverance through Christ.	W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian , pp. 128-141, 246-248, 267-269
History of Abel and Cain, the Sons of Adam	After 400	Part three of the Armenian Cycle of Four Works . The story of Cain and Abel, the killing of Cain by Lamech, and the good news of Seth’s birth.	W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian , pp. 142-171, 249-254, 270-275
Concerning the Good Tidings of Seth	After 400	Part four of the Armenian Cycle of Four Works . The story of the seduction of the Sethites, the Flood, the covenant with Noah, and the settlement of his descendants.	W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian , pp. 172-205, 255-260, 276-282
History of the Repentance of Adam and Eve	After 400	The penance of Adam and Eve, and the stories of Cain and Abel, the gathering of Adam’s descendants, Seth’s quest for oil, and Noah’s preservation and burial of Adam’s bones at Golgotha.	W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian , pp. 210-233

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
The Words of Adam to Seth	After 400	“Adam tells Seth the story of his sin..., for which Seth fasts and prays and is rewarded with a life-giving branch from the garden and the promise of Christ. Seth then tells the same story... to his son [Enosh or Enoch]. Like Seth, Enoch responds with a penitent act, fasting and planting a garden, for which he is rewarded with translation” (W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian , p. 40).	W. L. Lipscomb, Armenian , pp. 206-209
Book of the Rolls (Kitab al-Magall)	ca. 500-1100	Tvedtnes et al. describe this as “an Arabic text that claims to have been ‘one of the hidden books of Saint Clement the Apostle, disciple of Simon Cepha’” (fol. 89b), or Clement of Rome. It was probably written in Greek, somewhere between the sixth and twelfth centuries by a Christian seeking to defend Mary the mother of Jesus from Jewish criticisms, although only the Arabic version is known” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 207).	Passages about the Creation, the Fall, and the Life of Adam and Eve from Margaret D. Gibson’s long out-of-print translation have been re-printed as part of a collection by S. Day (see M. D. Gibson, Rolls 1901).
Chronicle of Symeon Logothetes (Symeon Metaphrastes) ³	ca. 950-1050	Symeon is best known for his ten-volume “Lives of the Saints”—known as the Menologion because it was organized around the twelve months of the year. One of the principal sources for middle Byzantine history, his Chronicle includes a selection of Old Testament stories. This work “has been published under various names, including Theodosios of Melitene (or Melissenos) and Leo the Grammarian. Symeon relies heavily on George Hamartolos” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 249). Logothete (= Greek “one who accounts, calculates or ratiocinates”) was an administrative title given to responsables in the Byzantine Empire. The epithet Metaphrastes (from Greek metáphrasis = compilation) comes from his role in assembling a book of the Saints’ lives.	The first volume of a two-volume critical edition has appeared (S. Wahlgren, Symeonis). An English translation by Walter K. Hanak from the Old Church Slavic text is currently in preparation. Hogel has produced a monograph about the life and working methods of Symeon (C. Hogel, Symeon).
Caedmon Manuscript (MS Junius 11)	ca. 1000	Parts of Genesis, Exodus and Daniel in Old English verse, illustrated with many Anglo-Saxon drawings—48 for Genesis alone. Parts of the Genesis work appear to be a translation from a 9th-century Old Saxon original. The original manuscript is at the Bodleian Library in Oxford. The former attribution of the poems to the cowherd Caedmon is inaccurate and is no longer credited. Franciscus Junius, the Junius of the manuscript, published the first edition of its contents in 1655.	Doane has produced critical editions of the Genesis verse (A. N. Doane, Genesis A ; A. N. Doane, Genesis B). High-quality images of the manuscript are available online for private study (Manuscript Junius).
Hortus Deliciarum (Garden of Delights)	ca. 1175	Herrad of Hohenbourg was a twelfth-century abbess under whose direction the comprehensive and copiously illustrated compendium of knowledge and salvation history called Hortus Deliciarum (Garden of Delights) was assembled. Preserved for centuries at the Augustinian monastery of St. Odile at Hohenbourg, it was placed in the municipal library of Strasburg about the time of the French Revolution. Though it was tragically destroyed during the siege of Strasburg in 1870, portions of the text and illustrations had been previously copied, enabling the later reconstruction and publication of the work.	Published in a lavish oversized two-volume edition, unfortunately now out-of-print (R. Green et al., Hortus).
Book of the Bee	ca. 1222	Tvedtnes et al. describe the book as being “written in Syriac by the Armenian-born bishop Shelemon (Solomon) of Basra (fl. ca. 1222 CE)[. It] uses the Bible and early commentaries on the Bible. It is closely related to... the Book of the Cave of Treasures , the Book of the Rolls , and the Conflict of Adam and Eve with Satan ” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 272).	Budge’s English translation is available in reprint editions (Shelemon, Book of the Bee).
Vita Adae et Evae	ca. 1300	A mid-15 th -century manuscript in the National Library in Vienna, whose original by Lutwin was probably written in the early 14 th century. The Middle High German text was composed in the form of poetry, and is thought to be based on an unidentified Latin source incorporating elements “not included in any of the known versions of the Vita Adae et Evae [Latin Life of Adam and Eve]” (M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam , p. 37; cf. p. 95. See also M. E. Stone, History of the Literature , p. 119).	See Halford’s study and English translation (M.-B. Halford, Eva und Adam).
Rhymed History (Concerning the Creation of the World)	1300-1400	A poem “by the renowned medieval Armenian poet Yovhannes T’lkuranc’i” containing “many exegetical and apocryphal expansions of the Genesis traditions” (M. E. Stone, Selections , pp. 167-168).	The English translations of selections from this work contains events from creation to the translation of Enoch (M. E. Stone, Selections).

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Kebra Nagast (The Glory of the Kings)	1300-1400	Tvedtnes et al. write that this “fourteenth-century Ethiopic document that claims to be based on an early Coptic text supposedly translated into Ethiopic by a man named Isaac. The colophons of manuscripts of the text... claim that an Arabic version was translated from Coptic in the 409 th year of mercy, when Gabra Maskal (also called Lalibala) was king of Ethiopia (1314-1344)” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 277).	The translation by Budge is available in reprint editions (E. A. W. Budge, Kebra).
The Book of the Mysteries of the Heavens and the Earth; Discourse Concerning the Mystery of the Godhead and the Trinity; Another Discourse Concerning the Birth of Enoch	ca. 1400	In its current form, the four works of the otherwise unknown Ethiopian author, Bakhayla Mikael (Basalota Mikael, Zosimas) and his son Isaac, are thought to be a product of the fifteenth century (B. Mikael, Book , p. xxix). Purporting to be a revelation given by the angel Gabriel, The Book of the Mysteries explains hidden meanings of biblical narrative that continues through the resurrection of Christ, and briefly describes the signs of the Second Coming. A second work is an Interpretation of the Vision of St. John . The discourses on the Godhead and Enoch are shorter collection of miscellaneous Old Testament and New Testament explanations.	See B. Mikael, Book for an English translation. This was the last translation completed by Budge before his death.
Leabhar Breac	ca. 1411	Compiled in Ireland, this book contains, among other texts, stories of the Creation of Adam and of the Creation and Fall . These stories probably date from 900-1200. The story of Adam's having been created from seven components probably derives from a parallel account in 2 Enoch 30:8.	M. Herbert et al., Irish Apocrypha , pp. 1-7.
Liber Flavus Fergusiorum	ca. 1400-1500	Compiled in Ireland, this book contains, among other texts, The Fall of Lucifer and the Fall of Adam , The Penance of Adam , Distance of the Garden of Eden to the House of the Trinity , The Two Sorrows of the Kingdom of Heaven . These stories probably date from 900-1200.	M. Herbert et al., Irish Apocrypha , pp. 8-21.
Adamgirk'	1401-1403	Three epic poems in Armenian about Adam and Eve by Arakel of Siwnik' with typological components relating to the passion and death of Jesus Christ.	English translation in M. E. Stone, Adamgirk .
Concerning the Death of Adam	1624, 1634, 1666		M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 209-212. No English translation is available.
Armenian Adam Fragment 1	1624, 1634, 1666		M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, p. 212. No English translation is available.
Armenian Adam Fragment 2			M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 10-11. No English translation is available.
History of the Forefathers, Adam and His Sons and Grandsons	1689	Closely related to Repentance and to a lesser extent to the Armenian Cycle (M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, p. 181), the story begins with Adam's departure from the garden and continues with the story of Enoch, including the account of the stele.	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 180-200
On the Fall of Adam	1700-1800	A poetic dialogue between God and Adam after the Fall.	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 3-7
Concerning Adam and Eve and the Incarnation	1657-1659	The document contains an expanded version of the biblical story of Adam and Eve, followed by a life of Christ drawn from the Gospels. It includes a story of Adam and Eve's contract with Satan (cheirograph). The text is closely related to the Cycle of Four Works (Transgression and Expulsion) .	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 8-79
History of Adam and His Grandsons	1697	A brief chronology from Adam to the temple of Solomon.	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 80-100
Armenian Adam Story 1	1686	A version of the story of the cheirograph of Adam and the promise of Redemption through Christ.	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 101-108
Armenian Adam Story 2	1686	A story of Adam and Eve with an hour-by-hour chronology of their activities. An important objective is to show that as Adam sinned on a Friday, Christ was crucified on a Friday.	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 109-113

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Question	1686	This Armenian Christian document “comes from a miscellany that was copied or compiled by one Markos in 1686” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 286). It contains a narrative from the time of Adam through the wars of Gog and Magog in the last days.	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 114-134
The Eras of the World	1686	Composed of three chronological lists: Concerning the Six Millennia , The Eleven Periods , and The Times of the Patriarchs .	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 135-140
Abel and Other Armenian Pieces	1624, 1634, 1666	“Although the author of this Armenian text is unknown, the scribes of the miscellany from which it is taken were Sargis and Amiras of Erznka, who copied the manuscript in 1624, 1634, and 1666” (J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions , p. 287).	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 141-157
The Sethites and the Cainites	1600-1700	Excerpted from a miscellany, this text contains a longer version of an account similar to Question about the Cainites and Sethites.	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 201-206
Sermon Concerning the Flood	1657-1659	Contains apocryphal expansions of the stories from the time of Cain and Abel to the time of the command for Noah to build the ark.	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 174-179
The Sons of Noah and the Generations from Adam	1660	An expanded form of the traditions of the Cave of Treasures and the Chronicle of Michael the Syrian describing the descendants of the sons of Noah and the divisions of the earth among them (cf. e.g., Genesis 10; 2 Chronicles 1:5-21; O. S. Wintermute, Jubilees , 7:13-19, p. 69).	M. E. Stone, Signs , pp. 219-245.
Descendants of Adam		A brief fragment about the sons of God and the daughters of men, a description of Enoch’s righteousness, and a genealogy until the time of Noah.	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1982, pp. 84-87
Lists	1624, 1634, 1666	The published text includes four lists: 72 Languages , Twelve Nations which Know Writing , Names of the Patriarchs , and Names of the Wives of the Forefathers and Patriarchs .	M. E. Stone, Armenian Apocrypha 1996, pp. 158-166

Nag Hammadi Codices and Various Gnostic Texts

Leeming provides a brief overview of the complex and multi-faceted teachings of gnostic sects, which flourished in both Christian and pagan forms:

Generally speaking, the Gnostics were Egyptians and Essene Jews, early Christians, and certain Christian medieval heretics who practiced mystery cults based on the idea of “knowing” the divine. “Gnosis” is now preferred to the term “Gnosticism”—a religion of its own—as a label for this loosely connected group. An important figure for Gnosis was Hermes Trimegistos, identified with the Egyptian god Thoth, to whom is accredited the crucial saying “He who knows himself, knows the All.” Many of the Christian followers of Gnosis were particularly devoted to what might seem to some to be the mysticism of John’s Gospel and to his definition of “eternal life: to know you, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom you have sent.”⁶² The Gnostic form of the Logos was sometimes the female figure of Divine Wisdom, Sophia.

One Gnostic creation myth says that Sophia, the spirit of Wisdom, signified by the Dove that also was the sign of the Holy Spirit,⁶³ was the child of the primeval Silence, and that Sophia herself was the mother of both Christ and a female spirit named Achamoth. Achamoth produced the material world and gave birth to Ildabaoth, the Son of Darkness, as well as to spirits that were emanations of Jehovah (Yahweh). It was these spirits who produced the angels and humans and who, as Jehovah, forbade humans from eating of the Tree of Knowledge. But Achamoth came to earth as the serpent Ophis and sought Christ’s help in order to convince humans to disobey Jehovah by eating the forbidden fruit so as to gain knowledge—gnosis. Later Sophia sent Christ to earth as the Dove to enter the human man Jesus as he was being baptized by John the Baptist in the Jordan River.⁶⁴

Lupieri provides an insightful summary of the worldview held in common by most Gnostics—a perspective often difficult to penetrate for modern readers:

The heterodox Gnostics saw the negative side of the world. It was impossible to believe that a good God, a God who loved man, would have imprisoned him in a body that by its very nature stinks, that needs to destroy countless lives, both animal and vegetable, just to feed itself, that is the seat of all vices and the very worst of instincts, and that, in the end, is destined to be food for worms... Even the idea that humankind had been placed on earth as punishment for some sin, committed perhaps in an earlier life, or by some ancestor, could not explain why all of creation was suffering...

Since heterodox Gnostic knowledge is arrived at through illumination, each Gnostic could feel authorized to receive slightly more than others, and thence give rise to a new school... for dissecting the truth with ever greater precision. This led to a considerable degree of fragmentation... but only certain points upon which most Gnostics would have agreed. First, the demiurge, the ignorant and evil God that created this world, is the easily-angered and anthropomorphic God of the Jews, that is, Yahweh. As a consequence, the... Old Testament must be considered false and full of lies... All of sacred history is to be reread and reinterpreted in a new light: the ancient enemies of Yahweh and his people, from Cain to the Sodomites to the generation of the Flood, were the true depositories of spiritual knowledge. The God of this world... is indeed only the latest product of a degenerative chain that brought about the dispersion of a luminous particle of divinity in the world of darkness and of matter. After much wandering about, the last fragment of light was embodied in Adam, while the demiurge Yahweh was left without. Awareness of what he lacked, then, left Yahweh to persecute humankind, to attempt to appropriate its spirit, or at least to keep it entrapped in matter. According to some, he even 62 John 17:3, emphasis added.

63 See Commentary 1:1-b, p. 42; 3:9-g, p. 163; 4:5-b, p. 246.

64 D. Leeming, World Mythology, s.v. Gnostic Mythology, p. 153.

invented Eve so as to seduce Adam and thereby draw from him his spiritual seed, imprisoning it forever in a chain of reproduction. In this perspective, Adam did not sin in the garden when he ate the “fruit of the tree of knowledge”; if anything he was reaffirming a right that made him “like God.” If there was any sin, it was that of allowing himself to be seduced by Eve. All of history, then, is the tragic scene of an utterly ruthless struggle by the demiurge and his evil princes (in Greek, the archons) to keep the sparks of divine light that had precipitated down divided and imprisoned in matter. The Light, however, has prepared a plan for salvation, providing for the recovery of all that is consubstantial with it.

... The savior, or the series of saviors as some believed, comes to “reawaken” the Gnostics’ dormant knowledge and thus save them. For the Christian Gnostics this bringer of revelation and savior is the heavenly Christ, a divine being, a direct emanation of the very heart of the divine, which entered into the earthly Jesus to save the Gnostics. Others went so far as to believe that the earthly Jesus was a negative, demonic reality, a creature the demiurge made for the purpose of trapping the heavenly messenger within it. The demiurge thought he could take over the divine Spirit in this way, binding it in the coils of the flesh, nailing it to the cross, and swallowing it in death. Christ, however, fooled everyone. In different ways, according to the teachings of the various Gnostic sects, he never really suffered the passion, nor was he ever actually killed. Leaving the body of Jesus before the passion, he let the demiurge’s thugs destroy his bodily image while he looked on in another form, laughing his heart out...

The whole Gnostic vision of the world is based on the opposition of conflicting principles. The diversity and laceration perceived among men and within each Gnostic is projected into the world, into the cosmos, and even into the divine itself. Just as there is a division between good and evil on earth (ethical dualism), the forces of good and evil, of light and darkness, battle throughout the entire universe (cosmic dualism). Even divinity is divided... This will cease only when the irreconcilable components of the cosmos, once again completely separated when the light that is dispersed and imprisoned in darkness has been recovered in all its parts, return to the enjoyment of an eternal equilibrium.⁶⁵

A summary modern scholarly approaches to Gnosticism can be found in A. Marjanen, Gnosticism. Rudolph has also authored an excellent, though now somewhat dated, overview of Gnosticism (K. Rudolph, Gnosticism). The relationship between gnostic and biblical writings is explored in P. Perkins, Gnosticism. For a detailed overview of the complex perspectives of various Gnostic texts on Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, see G. Lettieri, Ambiguity, pp. 39-54. Discussions of different schools of Gnostic thought and difficulties in defining the category as a whole can be found in M. W. Meyer, Nag Hammadi, pp. 777-798 and M. A. Williams, Rethinking. For extensive discussions of specific affinities between selected LDS and gnostic teachings, see J. E. Seaich, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 1017-1110 and J. E. Seaich, Mormonism.

The Nag Hammadi Codices (NHC)

This collection, also known as the Coptic Gnostic Library or the Chenoboskion Manuscripts, contains writings preserved by Egyptian Christians during the second century CE. Discovered in 1947, the twelve full codices and partially-preserved thirteenth codex were buried in clay jars and sealed with pitch in the fourth century though many date to earlier periods. Fifty-two separate tractates were included in the collection, comprising forty-five separate works. The collection includes many works classed as Gnostic. However due to the complexity and variety of Gnostic ideas and the evolving nature of Christianity itself during the period in question, such a determination is a very inexact endeavor.

65 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, pp. 35-38.

Besides the publications listed below, a selection of gnostic sources is included at Gnostic Society Library. Note also that the fourteen hardback volumes of the Brill Nag Hammadi series are currently available as a five-volume 5,000-page paperpack set.⁶⁶

JMR - The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by J. M. Robinson. This work was published as the official English edition of these texts, with a very strict approach to translation. Texts are in order by codex and tractate. For example, (V,1) would reference the first tractate in the fifth codex. Also included in this collection is the Berlin Gnostic Papyrus, formally known as Papyrus Berolinensis 8502. References are listed as BG, followed by the tractate number.

BL - The Gnostic Scriptures, edited by B. Layton. A collection of Gnostic writings arranged by school of thought. The translation is periphrastic. Fifteen works from this book have been drawn from the NHC.

NTA - New Testament Apocrypha, edited by E. Hennecke et al. Described in the New Testament Apocrypha section above.

ANT - The Apocryphal New Testament M. R. James, Apocryphal. Described in the New Testament Apocrypha section above.

OB - The Other Bible, edited by W. Barnstone. A collection drawn from Jewish pseudepigrapha, Christian apocrypha, Gnostic scriptures, Kabbalah, and the Dead Sea Scrolls. It is arranged topically.

GB - The Gnostic Bible, edited by W. Barnstone et al. A diverse collection of Gnostic writings including early Wisdom gospels, literature of Gnostic wisdom, Sethian literature, Valentinian literature, Thomas and other Syrian literature, Hermetic literature, Mandaean literature, Manichaean literature, a work of Islamic Mystical literature, and Cathar literature.

NHS - The Nag Hammadi Scriptures, edited by M. W. Meyer. The newest edition of these writings, superseding JMR and incorporating the latest scholarship of English-language, German-language, and French-language teams of scholars. The translations are smoother, but less faithful to the underlying language of the original than JMR.

Codex	Text Names	Date	Description	JMR	BL	NTA	ANT	OB	GB	NHS
I,2	The Apocryphon of James (The Secret Book of James)	100-300	A letter purportedly written by James, the Lord's brother, relating private instructions given by Jesus Christ to Peter and James 550 days after his resurrection.	29-37		1:333-338			340-350	19-30
II,2	The Gospel of Thomas	ca. 50	An early collection of 114 traditional sayings of Jesus, especially significant because some of them are closely related to passages in Matthew and Luke.	124-138	376-399	1:278-307, 511-522		299-307	43-69	133-156
II,3	The Gospel of Philip	250-300	An anthology of statements about the meaning of the sacraments, imbued with Valentinian ideas about life, death, and the resurrection. Nibley cites lengthy passages of the Gospel of Philip that echo LDS temple themes (H. W. Nibley, Message 2005 , pp. 525-532). For a study of the sources of this work, see M. L. Turner, Philip .	139-160	325-353	1:271-278	12	87-100	257-298	157-186
II,4	The Hypostasis of the Archons (The Nature of the Archons, The Reality of the Rulers); RR	200-300	This anonymous work presents an esoteric interpretation of Genesis 1-6 in the form of a dialogue between an angel and a questioner. Although probably translated from Greek into Coptic, like the rest of the NHC, Coptic puns indicate familiarity with Egyptian, and Jewish puns and genealogies indicate some form of Jewish-Christian background.	161-169	65-76			75-80		187-198

66 J. M. Robinson, Coptic Gnostic Library.

Codex	Text Names	Date	Description	JMR	BL	NTA	ANT	OB	GB	NHS
II,5; XIII,2	On the Origin of the World	ca. 350	This work has some relation to the preceding text. It is a compendium of central Gnostic ideas on cosmogony, anthropogony and eschatology. Among other things, it gives “a glimpse of what happened in the world of the angels before the opening of the biblical Genesis” (M. Barker, Hidden , p. ix). This work is carefully crafted and shows little evidence of later alteration. It does not represent any of the known Gnostic systems of thought.	170-189				62-74	414-437	199-221
V,5	The Apocalypse (Revelation) of Adam, RAd	ca. 350	This work tells the history of the world from the Creation to the Savior’s final coming. The story is based on the Gnostic myth and other non-biblical material more than Genesis. Near the end is a fifteen-stanza poem on the incarnation of the Savior that is unique among the Gnostic writings. The revelation is presented as being narrated to Adam by three heavenly visitors, and later told by Adam to his son Seth. The three heavenly visitors tell Adam about his future life on earth.	277-286	52-64			81-86	178-188	343-356
VII,1	The Paraphrase of Shem	ca. 350	This is an apocalypse that describes the ascent of Shem to the top of creation and his final return to earth. It includes accounts of the Flood, the destruction of Sodom, the baptism of the Savior and His ascent after the crucifixion. The text concludes with Shem’s final address.	339-361				101-115	438-464	437-471
VII,2	The Second Treatise (Discourse) of the Great Seth	150-200	A Gnostic-Christian revelation dialogue purportedly given to a group of elect disciples. “Apart from the title, the name Seth never occurs in the text, though perhaps Jesus Christ is meant to be identified with Seth” (J. A. Gibbons et al., Great Seth , p. 362). One portion of the text seems to describe the presentation of the plan of salvation to a heavenly assembly, and the way that is prepared for the ascent of the individual.	362-371				116-122	465-476	473-486
VII,4	The Teachings of Sylvanus	175-225	A “rare specimen of Hellenic Christian wisdom literature, [displaying] a remarkable synthesis of biblical and late Jewish ideas with Middle Platonic and late Stoic anthropological, ethical, and theological concepts” (M. L. Peel et al., Sylvanus , p. 379).	379-395						499-521
VII,5	The Three Steles (Tablets) of Seth	Before 350	Hymns of worship used by Gnostic believers, who identified themselves as the true latter-day descendants of Seth. The hymns commemorate the ascent of Seth to the divine triad, as he rises and returns through three stages or levels of worship.	396-401	149-158				201-211	523-536
IX,1	Melchizedek	150-225	This is a poorly-preserved apocalypse of Melchizedek, where he is transported into the future to witness the death and resurrection of Christ. In some places Melchizedek and Christ are presented as the same person.	438-444						595-605
IX,2	The Thought of Norea	150-250	A brief Sethian psalm of deliverance in four parts. In Jewish legend, Norea is one of the daughters of men who seduces the sons of God at the time of Noah. Here, however, she is “an undefiled virgin and a spiritual helper to (gnostic) humankind” (B. A. Pearson, Norea , p. 445).	445-447						607-611
XI,2	Valentinian Exposition with Valentinian Liturgical Readings	160-350	This “is an untitled treatise that in scope and vocabulary resembles the Valentinian treatises presented by the church fathers” (M. W. Meyer, Nag Hammadi , p. 663). The text includes fragments about the Creation, the Fall, and the Angels.	481-489						667-677

Other Gnostic Texts

Besides classic Gnostic texts not found in the NHC, this section includes selections from the Sethian and Valentinian literature, Thomas and other Syrian literature, the pagan Hermetic writings, and the medieval Cathar-Albigensian-Bogomil-Paulician literature. For a description of the four collections below, see the Nag Hammadi Codices section.

BL – The Gnostic Scriptures, edited by B. Layton.

OB – The Other Bible, edited by W. Barnstone.

GB – The Gnostic Bible, edited by W. Barnstone et al.

NHS – The Nag Hammadi Scriptures, edited by M. W. Meyer, Nag Hammadi.

Text	Text Names	Date	Description	BL	OB	GB	NHS
Bjn	The Secret Book According to John	Probably before 180	“[O]ne of the most classic narrations of the gnostic myth,” including an account of “what happened before Genesis 1:1” (B. Layton, John , p. 23). It also contains a detailed retelling of Genesis up to the birth of Seth.	23-51	51-61	135-165	103-132
IrSat	Satorninos, according to Irenaeus	180	This is a summary of the teachings of Satorninos, written in Greek, by Irenaeus of Lyon and included in Against Heresies , 1:24:1-2, pp. 348-349. It describes the Creation and the two human races, one good and one evil.	159-162
IrUnid	Other Gnostic Teachings, according to Irenaeus	180	Irenaeus of Lyon’s account, written in Greek, of other teachings presumed to be Gnostic in Against Heresies 1:30-31, pp. 354-358. The creation of matter is discussed.	170-181
EpS	The Sethians, according to Epiphanius	377	An excerpt from Epiphanius of Salamis’ Against Heresies (or Panarion = medicine chest) 39:1:1-39:5:3. The beliefs of the Sethians are structured around three principles—light, darkness, and pure spirit—and reflected in the triad of Cain, Abel, and Seth. See also the description of the sect by Hippolytus , v. 19, included in W. Barnstone, Other , pp. 654-657.	185-190	657-658
VFrC	Adam’s Faculty of Speech	150-175	Fragment 1, a description by Valentinus of the power of Adam’s speech, cited in Clement of Alexandria’s Miscellanies (Stromateis) 2:8, pp. 355-356.	234-235
VFrD	Adam’s Name	150-175	Fragment 5, a description by Valentinus of the face of Adam, cited in Clement of Alexandria’s Miscellanies (Stromata) 4:13, p. 425.	236-237
VFrF	Annihilation of the Realm of Death	150-175	Fragment 4, immortality triumphs over death, cited in Clement of Alexandria’s Miscellanies (Stromata) 4:13, p. 425.	240-241
HPrl	Hymn of the Pearl (Hymn of the Soul, Hymn of Jude Thomas the Apostle in the Country of the Indians)	200-225	This account describes a pair of heavenly parents sending their son on a journey to recover a pearl. The pearl represents his soul. They clothe him with special clothing and give him special food. While on his journey (which represents earth life) he forgets his mission. They send a messenger who causes him to remember his mission and he returns to receive heavenly glory with his parents. Written in Greek and popular with the early Christians. Nibley cites lengthy passages of the Hymn of the Pearl that echo LDS temple themes (H. W. Nibley, Treasures , pp. 177-178; H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 487-501; cf. A. Roberts, Anointing , p. 106). The Hymn can also be found in (J. K. Elliott, Pearl ; E. Hennecke et al., NT Apocrypha , 2:498-504; M. R. James, Apocryphal , pp. 411-415; cf. I. Gardner, Kephalaia , 9 (37,28-42,23), pp. 43-46). Welch and Garrision give an interpretation of the Hymn from an LDS perspective (J. W. Welch et al., Pearl). The Hymn is part of a larger work called the Acts of Thomas (E. Hennecke et al., Acts of Thomas). In a separate work, Ephrem discusses the Pearl as a symbol of the incarnation of Christ (Ephrem the Syrian, Pearl).	366-375	308-313	386-394

Text	Text Names	Date	Description	BL	OB	GB	NHS
BasFrE	The Elect Transcend the World	180	The elect are alien to the world as if they were transcendent by nature.	436-437
	The Gospel of the Secret Supper	12 th century or earlier	A Cathar document originating with the Balkan Bogomil Gnostic sect in the twelfth-century or earlier, with roots that may go back to a Greek original some centuries before. It gives an account of a dialogue between the apostle John, Jesus Christ, and the “invisible father” at the Last Supper. It includes a retelling of the crucifixion “in which Christ is an angel, an illusion, a phantasm rather than the suffering Jesus” and a detailed description of Satan’s punishment for his premortal rebellion, and couching the Devil in the role of the unjust steward (Luke 16:1-13).			740-750
	Poimandres (= Greek shepherd of man or, alternatively, Coptic knowledge of the Sun-God Ra)	150-200	An influential pagan treatise drawn from the Corpus Hermeticum ascribed to Hermes Trismegistus (= thrice-greatest Hermes). Poimandres, representing the highest godhead, engages the narrator in a severe Socratic dialogue in an attempt to lead him in a “the mystical experience of darkness and purification from matter, ascent to the light, and entry into a oneness with god” (Hermes Trismegistus, Poimandres , p. 503). The work is divided in three sections: “the creation of the world and human life; the soul’s escape from the world, its ascent to Heaven and mystical union with God; and instructions for proselytizing the gospel of gnosis. The work ends with a prayer” (Hermes Trismegistus, Poimandres , p. 568). A translation of the full Corpus Hermeticum was made by Mead in 1906 (Hermes Trismegistus, Hermes).	447-459	567-574	502-511
	Asclepius	150-200	A pagan Coptic dialogue between Hermes Trismegistus and an initiate named Asclepius. “The tractate opens with a comparison of the mystery and sexual intercourse... With the acquisition of knowledge humans become better than the gods, for they are both mortal and immortal. Hermes Trismegistus next suggests that just as the Lord of the universe creates gods, so also humanity creates gods according to human likeness” (Hermes Trismegistus, Asclepius , p. 575). A promise is given that God the Creator will eventually restore order to the world, and that judgment, rewards, and punishments will accrue to individuals.		575-580
	The Sethian-Ophites		“The Sethian-Ophite legend is one of the main Gnostic cosmogonies and theogonies, close to the Valentinian speculation which we find in the Gospel of Truth ... Ophis, the serpent, indicates the important, ambiguous, but ultimately positive role played by the serpent in delivering knowledge, gnosis , to Adam and Eve, and consequently providing them with the means to combat [the evil Creator] God. By being free of their Creator God, they could find the light in their souls and return to the true Father” (Sethian-Ophites , p. 660).		659-664
	Pistis Sophia (The Faith of Sophia)	ca. 250-300	The Askew Codex , from which this document comes, was bought by the British Museum in 1795. The work is a Coptic Christian Gnostic text that relates the post-resurrection teachings of Jesus to His disciples and to His mother Mary. Sophia (= Greek Wisdom) is the female aspect of Logos, and is sometimes identified in gnostic thought with the Holy Ghost. Although a scholarly edition was prepared by Schmidt (C. Schmidt, Pistis), the most easily available version is Mead’s 1921 English translation (G. R. S. Mead, Pistis). Nibley cites lengthy passages of the Pistis Sophia that echo LDS temple themes (H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, pp. 503-514).

Text	Text Names	Date	Description	BL	OB	GB	NHS
	The Two Books of Jeu (1 Jeu, 2 Jeu)	ca. 250-450	Two sections of the Bruce Codex , acquired by the British Museum in 1769. Like the Pistis Sophia they contain discussions between Jesus and the Apostles during the 40-day ministry after the resurrection. A description of the text is found in E. Hennecke et al., NT Apocrypha , 1:259-263. The only full English translation of the Bruce Codex is based on the German edition (C. Schmidt et al., Jeû), as translated by MacDermot (C. Schmidt, Bruce Codex ; also republished as part of J. M. Robinson, Coptic Gnostic Library). O'Brien has published an inexpensive edition of the books of Jeu (C. O'Brien, 1 Jeu ; C. O'Brien, 2 Jeu), however this admittedly "abridged and free translation" adds its own idiosyncratic "Mystical interpretation" and "restructuring of the text," and unfortunately omits the accompanying diagrams (C. O'Brien, Path , p. xviii).
	The Sermon of Cosmas the Priest Against Bogomilism	ca. 970	A tract written against the Bogomils by Cosmas, a Bulgarian priest. Excerpts in English appear in E. Peters, Heresy , pp. 108-117. A complete French translation of the Slavic was published in 1945 (Cosmas, Traité).

Zoroastrian Texts

The Iranian prophet known as Zoroaster (Greek), Zarathustra (Avestan), or Zartosht (Persian) is an indisputably historical figure who seems to have lived in Iran sometime between 1700 and 1000 BCE. The religion founded in his name is said by Mary Boyce to be “the oldest of the revealed world-religions, and it has probably had more influence on mankind, directly and indirectly, than any other single faith.”⁶⁷ Moreover, Zoroaster is said to be “the first to teach the doctrines of an individual judgment, Heaven and Hell, the future resurrection of the body, the general Last Judgment, and life everlasting for the reunited soul and body.”⁶⁸

Zoroaster was presumably made a priest (zaotar) of the ancient Indo-Iranian religion at the usual age of fifteen. Describing himself as a “vaedemna or ‘one who knows,’ an initiate possessed of divinely inspired wisdom..., he spent years in a wandering quest for truth” until about the age of thirty, when he was led into the presence of Ahura Mazda [= Lord Wisdom], the Supreme Divinity, and received his revelation.⁶⁹

Stories of the prophet’s life derive from Zoroastrian scripture (Avesta = The Injunction), Greek texts (e.g., Plutarch, Pliny), and later Pahlavi traditions recorded in the 9th-12th century CE.⁷⁰ Within the Avesta are the Gathas, consisting of prayers directly attributed to Zoroaster;⁷¹ the Vendidad (= law for protection from demons), which includes accounts of dialogues between God and Zoroaster,⁷² and the lost account of the prophet’s life in the Spenta Nask (= beneficent or bounteous treatise), known only through the summary given in the Dinkard.⁷³ The earliest religious works were handed down orally and were not written until perhaps the fifth century CE. The oldest extant manuscript of the Avesta itself is dated to 1323 CE.⁷⁴ See Boyd⁷⁵ for a description of the differences between orthodox and reform Zoroastrianism in their understanding of the meaning and role of the Avesta.

There are currently estimated to be between one hundred and two hundred thousand adherents of the Zoroastrian faith. Most live in Iran and India (where they are called Parsis), though there are several thousand in North America. Followers of Manichaeism and of the Baha’i faith also consider Zoroaster to be a prophet.

For general overviews of Zoroastrianism, see M. Boyce, Zoroastrians; P. Kriwaczek, Zarathustra; S. A. Nigosian, Zoroastrian Faith. For an LDS perspective, see S. J. Palmer, Zoroastrianism.

Zoroastrian Scripture

Only a fraction of the original texts of the Avesta have survived. This book of scripture consists of five main categories of writings:

67 M. Boyce, Zoroastrians, p. 1.

68 Ibid., p. 29.

69 Ibid., pp. 18-19.

70 E.g., A. Ferdowsi, Shahnama; F. M. Müller, Dinkard 5, 7, 7:2:1-7:5:12, pp. 17-77. See also F. M. Müller, Zad-spam, 12:1-13:13, pp. 133-167.

71 S. Insler, Gathas.

72 F. M. Müller, Vendidad.

73 F. M. Müller, Dinkard 8-9, 8:14:1-16, pp. 31-34.

74 M. Boyce, Sources, p. 1.

75 J. W. Boyd, Zoroastrianism.

The Yasna (= worship, oblations) is the oldest and most important part of the collection, consisting of 72 sections of prayers and hymns.⁷⁶ Within the Yasna are the seventeen Gathas attributed to Zoroaster himself.

The Visparad (= all lords) is a collection of 23 supplements to the Yasna, describing the worship of minor divinities (yazata), roughly corresponding to the idea of archangels in Jewish and Christian sources.

The Yashts (= worship by praise) consists of 24 hymns to various deities. “[I]n the Yashts is found a polytheism which is very similar to the Rig Veda—a polytheism against which Zarathustra rebelled.”⁷⁷

The Vendidad (= given against the demons) containing practical information about maintaining ritual purity and confounding evil spirits. It also includes a myth of Yima and the deluge—described as a “dire winter”—and sent by the demons rather than as a punishment from God.

Other Material, miscellaneous short texts and prayers.

The most current English translation and commentary on the Gathas is by Insler.⁷⁸ Older English translations of the Avesta are included in the 19th-century Sacred Books of the East series, edited by Max Müller. These are still available in reprint editions,⁷⁹ and the full text of all public domain volumes of the Sacred Books of the East series can be found online.⁸⁰ See also the 1917 Sacred Books and Early Literature of the East series edited by Horne, which can still be purchased in reprint editions.⁸¹

The Khorda Avesta (= Short Avesta) contains a selection of brief prayers taken from the Avesta along with other minor texts.⁸² English translations of later Pahlavi traditions from Müller’s series are available in reprint editions.⁸³ One of the texts, the Sikand-Gumanik Vigar, contains an explicit refutation of the seeming absurdities of the Genesis account of the Creation and the Fall.⁸⁴ The Persian “Book of Kings” (Shahnameh), written by the gifted poet Ferdowsi over a thirty year period ending about 1010, relates the national epic in a poem consisting of nearly 60,000 couplets.⁸⁵ A topical arrangement of selections from Zoroastrian writings can be found in M. Boyce, Sources. Nearly all of the most important Zoroastrian texts can also be found online.⁸⁶

Zoroastrian Creation Stories

Some of the basic beliefs and stories relating to themes in the book of Moses are summarized by Leeming:⁸⁷

Several stories of creation exist in the Iranian tradition. One story tells how Yima, the primal human, king of the Golden Age, and later a solar deity, pierced the earth with a golden arrow,

76 See Endnote B-2, p. 903.

77 S. J. Palmer, Zoroastrianism, p. 154.

78 S. Insler, Gathas.

79 F. M. Müller, Vendidad; F. M. Müller, Avesta 2; F. M. Müller, Avesta 3.

80 Sacred Books Online.

81 C. F. Horne, Sacred.

82 F. M. Müller, Khorda Avesta.

83 F. M. Müller, Pahlavi 1; F. M. Müller, Pahlavi 2; F. M. Müller, Pahlavi 3; F. M. Müller, Dinkard 8-9; F. M. Müller, Pahlavi 5.

84 F. M. Müller, Sikand-Gumanik Vigar, pp. 208-221.

85 A. Ferdowsi, Shahnama (1905-1925). For a one-volume abridged version, see A. Ferdowsi, Shahnama (2006).

86 E.g., Avesta.

87 D. Leeming, World Mythology, s. v. Zoroastrian Mythology, p. 412.

making it pregnant.⁸⁸ Yima, who resembles the Indian Vedic god Yama, had been created by the sun god Vivahant, a servant of Ahura Mazda. In the Avesta, we are told that there was only Light—an essential purity—in the beginning.⁸⁹ In the Light was the Word and the power of Nature. It was the creator, usually seen as Ahura Mazda himself, who joined together the Word and Nature to make the world. When the world became overwhelmed by the constant multiplication of its all immortal beings, Ahura Mazda decided that the earth must be enlarged and a new beginning made.⁹⁰ He warned the faithful king Yima that a great flood was coming to cleanse the world and that Yima had to protect himself and two of each species in his castle⁹¹ on top of the highest mountain.⁹² The deluge arrived, and the world, except for Yima's castle and its inhabitants, was destroyed. When the waters receded, Yima opened his doors and the world was inhabited again.⁹³

According to the twelfth-century text the Bundahishn [= Foundations of Creation],⁹⁴ in the beginning only the essential duality existed: the good Ahura Mazda and the evil Angra Mainyu.⁹⁵ At first Ahura Mazda created a spiritual world rather than a physical one in order to foil the evil intention of his adversary. Only 3,000 years later did he create the tangible world (getig), a perfect place with a perfect beast and a perfect human, Gayomart [Gayomard].⁹⁶ Instinctively, the evil Angra Mainyu reacted against this perfection. Breaking through the great cosmic shell that encompassed the world and its cosmic sea, he caused so much vibration that the sun began to rotate rather than stand still, causing day and night, and mountains and valleys were formed.⁹⁷ And as in Genesis, the interference of evil in the stillness and perfection of original creation led to death, work, and pain for humans.

In accounts of the Creation, Bundahishn describes two special trees growing near each other—a tree of life and a “tree of many seeds”⁹⁸—as well as a cosmic mountain with water streaming forth from underground:

1. On the nature of the tree they call Gôkard it says in revelation, that it was the first day when the tree they call Gôkard grew in the deep mud within the wide-formed ocean; and it is necessary as a producer of the renovation of the universe, for they prepare its immortality therefrom....

9. The tree of many seeds has grown amid the wide-formed ocean, and in its seed are all plants; some say it is the proper-curing, some the energetic-curing, some the all-curing.

10. Between these trees of such kinds is formed the mountain with cavities, 9999 thousand myriads in number, each myriad being ten thousand.

88 F. M. Müller, Vendidad, 2:10, p. 13.

89 E.g., F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 1:1-2, p. 3; F. M. Müller, Vendidad, 2:40, p. 20.

90 F. M. Müller, Vendidad, 2:4-19, pp. 12-15. Just prior to this event, Yima had refused Ahura Mazda's proposal to be a “preacher and... bearer of [God's] law” and was given instead the charge to watch over the world, and make it thrive and increase (F. M. Müller, Vendidad, 2:3-4, pp. 11-12). Zarathustra later received the mission that Yima refused.

91 Note that some scholars associate the Egyptian loan word used for the Hebrew term for “ark” in the story of Noah with the meaning of “palace” or “castle” (J. H. Sailhamer, Genesis, p. 83).

92 F. M. Müller, Vendidad, 2:21-30, pp. 15-18.

93 F. M. Müller, Dinkard 5, 7:9:4-5, p. 108; see also F. M. Müller, Bahman Yast, 3:55, p. 234. See Endnote B-3, p. 903.

94 An English translation of the shorter Indian version of the Bundahishn is readily accessible in reprint editions (F. M. Müller, Bundahis). A longer Iranian version, called the Greater Bundahishn, has also been translated into English but is currently out of print (B. T. Anklesaria, Bundahishn).

95 See F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 1:1-12, pp. 3-6. See Endnote B-4, p. 904.

96 See ibid., 1:13-14, p. 6. See Endnote B-5, p. 904.

97 See B. T. Anklesaria, Bundahishn, 4:10-12; cf. Excursus 50: Fu Xi and Nü Gua, p. 654.

98 F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 9:5, 18:9, 27:2, pp. 31, 66, 99-100.

11. Unto that mountain is given the protection of the waters, so that water streams forth from there, in the rivulet channels, to the land of the seven regions, as the source of all the sea-water in the land of the seven regions is from there.⁹⁹

The Zoroastrian Tree of Life is further described as the “white Hôm the healing and undefiled, [which] has grown at the source of the water of Arêdvîvsûr; every one who eats it becomes immortal, and they call it the Gôkard tree, as it is said that Hôm is expelling death; also in the renovation of the universe they prepare its immortality therefrom; and it is the chief of plants.”¹⁰⁰

The primeval mountain is said to have gradually made its appearance, rising up past the stations of the stars, moon, and sun, and finally reaching the “utmost height”:

1. One says in the Scripture, “The first mountain that grew up was [Alburz of divine destiny and thereafter all the mountains grew up] in eighteen years.”

2. Alburz grew ever till the completion of eight hundred years: for two hundred years up to the Star station, two hundred years [up] to the Moon station, two hundred years [up] to the Sun station, and two hundred years [up] to the utmost height of the Sky.¹⁰¹

Zoroastrian Stories Relating to the Fall

Although Zoroastrianism ignores the story of the taking of forbidden fruit, there is a story of how Yima—who, in early accounts, stood in the place that Gayomard later occupied as the primal man—sinned in pretending to be a god,¹⁰² and caused human beings to lose their immortality.¹⁰³ Other traditions emphasize the idea that the evil “primeval contender” was responsible for having struck the blows that “made Gayomard mortal.”¹⁰⁴ In his combat, he “stood upon one-third of the inside of the sky, and he sprang, like a snake, out of the sky down to the earth,”¹⁰⁵ taking “as much as one-third of the base of the sky, in a downward direction, into a confined and captive state, so that it was all dark and apart from the light.”¹⁰⁶ Then, celebrating his victory, the evil one cried: “My victory has come completely, for the sky is split and disfigured by me with gloom and darkness, and taken by me as a stronghold; water is disfigured by me, and the earth, injured by darkness, is pierced by me; vegetation is withered by me, the [primeval] ox is put to death by me, Gâyômarð is made ill by me.”¹⁰⁷

Although “the contentious promise-breaker injured the life of [Gayomard], and produced a burdensome mortality,”¹⁰⁸ the male and female “progenitors of the undeformed human

99 F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 18:1, 9-10, pp. 65, 66-67.

100 F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 27:4, p. 100. In another place it reads: “5. The tree of many seeds, having been produced from all those seeds of plants, grew up in the ocean Frakhvîkart, wherefrom the seeds of all the species of plants are growing. 6. Near to that tree, the Gokaren tree was produced, in order to keep away ill-shaped decrepitude; and the complete exaltation of the world arose therefrom” (B. T. Anklesaria, Bundahishn, 6D:5-6; cf. F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 9:5-6, p. 31).

101 B. T. Anklesaria, Bundahishn, 9:1-2; cf. F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 12:1, p. 34 and F. M. Müller, Zad-spâram, 7:6, pp. 174-175; see also 1 Corinthians 15:40-42, D&C 76, J. E. Seach, Ancient Texts 1995, pp. 568-577, 660-661. For a detailed overview of Zoroastrian cosmology, see G. L. Windfuhr, Guardian Spirits.

102 F. M. Müller, Yasts, p. 293 n. 6 re: 19:(7):34.

103 S. A. Nigosian, Zoroastrian Faith, p. 19; see A. Ferdowsi, Shahnama, pp. 7-8; F. M. Müller, Yasts, 19:(7):35-36, 38, pp. 293-295.

104 F. M. Müller, Dadistan-i Dinik, 37:44, 46, p. 94.

105 F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 3:11, p. 16.

106 F. M. Müller, Zad-spâram, 4:1, p. 164; cf. Revelation 12:14, D&C 29:36.

107 F. M. Müller, Zad-spâram, 4:3, p. 164.

108 F. M. Müller, Dadistan-i Dinik, 64:5, p. 198.

race... are said to have grown up, in the manner of a plant, from the seed of the dead Gâyômarđ.”¹⁰⁹ We read that:¹¹⁰

... in forty years, with the shape of a one-stemmed Rivas-plant... Matro [Mashye, Marhayâ] and Matroyao [Mashyane, Marhîyôih—the names of the couple are derived from Avestan terms meaning “the man” and “the woman”¹¹¹] grew up from the earth in such a manner that their arms rested, behind on their shoulders (dosh), and one joined to the other they were connected together and both alike.¹¹²

3. And the waists of both of them were brought close and so connected together that it was not clear which is the male and which the female, and which is the one whose living soul (nismo) of Ohrmazd is not away.

4. As it is said thus: Which is created before, the soul (nismo) or the body? And Ohrmazd said that the soul is created before, and the body after, for him who was created;¹¹³ it is given into the body that it may produce activity, and the body is created only for activity; hence the conclusion is this, that the soul (ruban) is created before and the body after.

5. And both of them changed from the shape of a plant into the shape of man, and the breath (nismo) went spiritually into them, which is the soul (ruban);¹¹⁴ and now, moreover, in that similitude a tree had grown up whose fruit was the ten varieties of man.

Following their creation, the first couple “attained to movement and walking upon the earth, and... advanced even to intercourse and also procreation.”¹¹⁵ The Creator ensured their survival by showing them how to cultivate grain, make bread, tend sheep, make clothing, and build houses.¹¹⁶ Thus, although the evil one had intended to destroy God’s highest work of Creation, his plan was frustrated when Gayomard “came back to the world as a man and a woman” and, as a result, the “unlucky fiend” instead “increased offspring and fortune for them through death.” Thwarted in his purpose, the evil one sought to discourage the couple and “uplifted his voice” to remind them that “the living ones of their offspring and lineage” would also suffer the effects of mortality. For this reason, “the sting also of birth was owing to death.”¹¹⁷

Zoroastrian writings allude to a change in earth’s vegetation paralleling the “thorns... and thistles”¹¹⁸ that sprang up after the Fall in the book of Moses account: “On the nature of plants it says in revelation, that, before the coming of the destroyer, vegetation had no thorn and bark about it; and, afterwards, when the destroyer came, it became coated with bark and thorny.”¹¹⁹

Finally, the Shahnameh tells of how Kayumars (= Gayomard), having previously dwelt on a mountain, became the first king. The account relates that he “dressed in leopard skins” and “first taught men about the preparation of food and clothing, which were new in the 109 Ibid., p. 105 n. 5 re: 37:82.

110 F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 15:2-5, pp. 53-54.

111 F. M. Müller, Dadistan-i Dinik, p. 105 n. 5 re: 37:82.

112 See Commentary 2:27-a, p. 115.

113 Cf. Moses 3:5.

114 Cf. Moses 3:7.

115 F. M. Müller, Dadistan-i Dinik, 64:5-6, pp. 198-199.

116 F. M. Müller, Dinkard 5, 7, 7:1:9-14, pp. 6-8.

117 F. M. Müller, Dadistan-i Dinik, 37:82-83, pp. 105-106.

118 Moses 4:24.

119 F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 27:1, p. 99.

world at that time.”¹²⁰ As in rabbinical accounts¹²¹ of how the beasts were awed at the sight of Adam: “All the animals of the world, wild and tame alike, reverently paid homage to him, bowing down before his throne, and their obedience increased his glory and good fortune.”¹²²

The Zoroastrian Savior

Zoroastrians believe in a “a past and future savior (Saoshyant), [and that] through ceremonies presided over by the savior, ...the resurrection of the bodies of the good will take place and a new Golden Age will follow.”¹²³ One text describes how, during the glorious millennium following the appearance of Hūshêdar-mâh, “adversity departs from the world... Meat is no longer eaten, but only milk and butter, and a hundred people are satisfied with the milk of one cow. Hūshêdar-mâh destroys the terrible serpent, ...he clears all noxious creatures out of the world, and wild animals live harmlessly among mankind; the fiends of apostasy and deceit depart from the world, which becomes populous and delightful, and mankind abstain from falsehood.” Eventually, “Dahâk escapes from his confinement, and reigns for a day and a half in the world with much tyranny” but, in the end, “[a]ll evil having departed from the world mankind become like the archangels, and the resurrection takes place.”¹²⁴

Resemblances to LDS Beliefs

Palmer¹²⁵ lists several points of resemblance between Zoroastrian and Latter-day Saint beliefs, including:

- the idea of an evil adversary to God¹²⁶
- a spiritual creation and a premortal existence for all of humanity¹²⁷
- sacred garments¹²⁸
- disavowal of monasticism and asceticism¹²⁹
- realms in the afterlife symbolized by the glory of the stars, the moon, and the sun.¹³⁰

Moreover, Zoroastrian ideas about the basic goodness of the material world and the origin of dualism in free choice are also more consistent with LDS beliefs than, for instance, the Manichaean view of these things:

The conspicuous monotheism of Zoroaster’s teaching is apparently disturbed by a pronounced dualism: the Wise Lord has an opponent, Ahriman, who embodies the principle of evil, and whose followers, having freely chosen him, also are evil.¹³¹ This ethical dualism is rooted in the Zoroastrian cosmology. He taught that in the beginning there was a meeting of the two spirits,

120 A. Ferdowsi, Shahnama, p. 1.

121 H. W. Nibley, Dominion, pp. 8-9.

122 A. Ferdowsi, Shahnama, p. 1.

123 D. Leeming, World Mythology, s. v. Zoroastrian Mythology, p. 412; cf. e.g., B. T. Anklesaria, Bundahishn, 34:1-33; F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 30:1-33, pp. 120-130. See Endnote B-6, p. 904.

124 F. M. Müller, Pahlavi 1, p. lviii. See J. H. Charlesworth, Resurrection Beliefs, pp. 221-222.

125 S. J. Palmer, Zoroastrianism, pp. 158-159.

126 See, e.g., F. M. Müller, Zad-spāram, 4:1-3, p. 164.

127 See, e.g., F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 1:1-14, pp. 3-6.

128 See, e.g., F. M. Müller, Dadistan-i Dinik, 39:1-32, 40:1-4, pp. 122-133, 133-134.

129 See, e.g., R. Masani, Zoroastrianism, pp. 70, 81-82, 97.

130 See, e.g., Arda Viraf, pp. 196-197; F. M. Müller, Dadistan-i Dinik, 34:3, p. 76; F. M. Müller, Dinai Mainog-i khirad, 7:8-11, p. 29.

131 See Endnote B-7, p. 904.

who were free to choose—in the words of the Gathas—“life or not life.”¹³² This original choice gave birth to a good and an evil principle. Corresponding to the former is a Kingdom of Justice and Truth; to the latter, the Kingdom of the Lie (Druj), populated by the daevas, the evil spirits (originally prominent old Indo-Iranian gods). Monotheism, however, prevails over the cosmogonic and ethical dualism because Ahura Mazda is father of both spirits, who were divided into the two opposed principles only through their choice and decision.¹³³

The Wise Lord, together with the amesha spentas [—the six holy immortals who, together with Ahura Mazda, represent the sevenfold character of God—] will at last vanquish the spirit of evil: this message, implying the end of the cosmic and ethical dualism, seems to constitute Zoroaster’s main religious reform. His monotheistic solution resolves the old strict dualism. The dualist principle, however, reappears in an acute form in a later period, after Zoroaster. It is achieved only at the expense of Ahura Mazda, by then called Ohrmazd, who is brought down to the level of his opponent, Ahriman. At the beginning of time, the world was divided into the dominion of the good and of the evil. Between these, each man is bound to decide. He is free and must choose either the Wise Lord and his rule or Ahriman, the Lie. The same is true of the spiritual beings, who are good or bad according to their choices. From man’s freedom of decision it follows that he is finally responsible for his fate. Through his good deeds, the righteous person (ashavan) earns an everlasting reward, namely integrity and immortality. He who opts for the lie is condemned by his own conscience as well as by the judgment of the Wise Lord and must expect to continue in the most miserable form of existence, one more or less corresponding to the Christian concept of hell.¹³⁴

132 See S. Insler, Gathas, 30:4, pp. 33, 166-167.

133 See Endnote B-4, p. 904.

134 Zoroaster. See B. T. Anklesaria, Bundahishn, chs. 1, 4, 5; F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 30:1-33, pp. 120-130.

Mandaean Texts

Regarding the Mandaeans, Deutsch writes:¹³⁵

In the marshes of southern Iraq and Iran, in the cities of Baghdad and Basra, and increasingly in locales like suburban New Jersey, live the Mandaeans, the only surviving Gnostic community from antiquity. These fascinating and tenacious people have maintained their traditions for nearly two thousand years, long after their better known Gnostic “cousins” fell into obscurity. Although they have always been a relatively small community, the Mandaeans have produced an extremely rich body of rituals and texts written in Mandaic, an eastern dialect of Aramaic. Many of these traditions are unique, while others have parallels in Gnosticism, Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, as well as in ancient Mesopotamian religions. Because of their geographical isolation, their traditional wariness toward outsiders, and the linguistic and interpretive challenges posed by their literature, the Mandaeans have remained a mystery to all but a few scholars of religion....

Turmoil in the Persian Gulf region has created a growing Mandaean diaspora. According to recent statistics, there are approximately seventy Mandaean families in the New York City area, including New Jersey, and others in Florida, Michigan, and California. There is also a large community of Mandaeans in Australia...

Mandaeans around the world maintain contact with one another and with their home communities in the Middle East. They are led by a priesthood still recovering from a devastating cholera epidemic in 1831, which killed all of the adult priests but spared a handful of their sons. In recent years, priests from Iran have traveled to Australia and the United States to perform baptisms, weddings, and other rituals.

Out of the over 60,000 Mandaeans in Iraq in the early 1990s, only about 5,000 to 7,000 remain there; as of early 2007, over 80% of Iraqi Mandaeans are now refugees in Syria and Jordan. There are small Mandaean diaspora populations in Australia (ca. 3,500 as of 2006), Canada, the USA (ca. 1,500) and Sweden (ca. 5,000).

According to a 10 February 2007 Associated Press article by Chris Newmarker, many of the roughly 1,500 Mandaeans living in the United States are professionals including physicians, engineers and jewelers. One concern of Mandaeans is assimilation into American culture, especially intermarriage. For mixed marriages, the Mandaean religion has “no mechanism to bring their children into the fold... [T]he religion’s few dozen priests [are] reluctant to bring in the children of mixed marriages.”¹³⁶

There are three theories about the origin of the name for the Mandaean people.¹³⁷ One is that it comes from a related term meaning “knowledge,” corresponding to the Greek term “Gnostic.” A second idea is that it comes from the mandi, a sacred area marked off by a palisade of reeds and dried mud, and containing an immersion pool and a simple empty “temple” called a bimanda (= house of knowledge) or simply manda.¹³⁸ A third idea is that the name comes from the principal Mandaean redeemer figure, Manda d-Hiia, whose name means “Knowledge of the Life,” where the term “Life” refers to the supreme deity. Within the Mandaean community is a smaller number of elite nasuriiia (i.e., those who have 135 N. Deutsch, Mandaean Introduction, pp. 527, 535.

136 Mandaism.

137 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, pp. 8-9.

138 Ibid., pp. 14-15.

nasurita—knowledge—or perhaps “initiates”) who have access to additional mysteries of the religion, hence the nickname *Nasoraean*s for the Mandaean people.¹³⁹

Whereas early scholarship looked to the pre-Christian era for the origins of the Mandaeans as a distinct community, more recent studies point to their beginnings as a first-century “Jewish baptismal group somewhere in Palestine or Syria, perhaps in the Jordan valley. Later this religious group seems to have become heretic from the orthodox Jewish point of view, and moved north-eastwards to Adiabene (modern Kurdish Iraq, Armenia, and Northern Iran), and from there to Southern Babylonia (today’s Southern Iraq and Southwestern Iran).”¹⁴⁰

Apart from their veneration of John the Baptist,¹⁴¹ the Mandaeans retain only bitter memories of their own supposed origin among the Jews.¹⁴² Ryen explains this as a process of the Mandaeans having gradually become isolated outsiders to Judaism, their feelings eventually changing to “hatred and polemic.”¹⁴³ Their attitude is also hostile toward the person of Jesus, the Messiah of Christian doctrine.¹⁴⁴ Writes Drower:

It is a striking fact that in all the Mandaean texts the word msiha (Messiah, Christ) is only used with the qualification ‘lying’ or ‘false’ of Jesus, and this is the more surprising as every priest is a king (malka),¹⁴⁵ crowned and anointed, as microcosm of the macrocosm Adam Kasia, the crowned and anointed Anthropos, Arch-priest, and creator of the cosmos made in his form. The word for the oil of unction is misa and the verbs for its application are RSM and ADA. The implication is that the word msiha (the anointed one) was so inextricably connected with the hated Jew and Christian that the root MSH was banned from Nasoraean use.¹⁴⁶

Mandaean Creation Stories

Lupieri summarizes the basic ideas of Mandaeanism, and Mandaic themes relating to the book of Moses:

The religious ideas of the Mandaeans show some remarkable similarities to the ancient doctrines of the Gnostics,¹⁴⁷ and they also share a similar mode of expression, through myth... Characters belonging to the divine world or the realm of human legend... perform deeds in them whose interpretation is believed to provide the meaning of things. Unluckily for us, it is impossible to reconstruct a unified, coherent vision of certain important aspects of religious doctrine from the corpus of Mandaean literature... Indeed, the Mandaean texts are the fruit of sedimentation

- 139 Ryen also discusses a possible connection to the epithet Nazorean, used for the earliest Christians (J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine, pp. 22-23). Barker speculates that this name for Jesus’ disciples have derive “from the Hebrew neser meaning Branch, the messianic title derived from Isaiah 11:1” or from nazir “meaning a consecrated person, one anointed with holy oil” (M. Barker, Christmas, p. 127).
- 140 J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine, p. 41; cf. pp. 21-41. See also S. Gündüz, Knowledge of Life; E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, pp. 122-172; R. Thomas, Israelite Origins; E. M. Yamauchi, Gnostic Ethics.
- 141 G. R. S. Mead, Mandaean John-Book; J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine, pp. 37-39.
- 142 E.g., E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, GR 1:163-180, pp. 213-215; G. R. S. Mead, Mandaean John-Book, 34-35, pp. 62-70.
- 143 J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine, pp. 35-36.
- 144 E.g., E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, JB 76, pp. 246-250; GR 1:198-202, pp. 243-244; GR 2:1:139-150, 154, pp. 240-243; G. R. S. Mead, Mandaean John-Book, 30, pp. 48-52. See K. Rudolph, Coptic, GR 1:200, 201-202, p. 299 for a passage about the miracles of Anos-Uthra with close parallels to Matthew 11:5. Scholarship is divided as to whether this passage constitutes a positive reference to Jesus, or rather is a polemic against Christianity attributing Jesus’ miracles to a different figure (S. Gündüz, Knowledge of Life, pp. 106-107).
- 145 Thomas argues for the possibility of a connection to the old royal cult in Israel and the figure of Melchizedek (R. Thomas, Israelite Origins, p. 24).
- 146 E. S. Drower, Adam, p. xi.
- 147 In some important ways, Mandaean beliefs differ from Gnostic stereotypes: “Mandaeans believe in marriage and procreation, and in the importance of leading an ethical and moral lifestyle in this world, placing a high priority upon family life. Consequently, Mandaeans do not practice celibacy or asceticism. Mandaeans will, however, abstain from strong drink and red meat. While they agree with other gnostic sects that the world is a prison governed by the planetary archons, they do not view it as a cruel and inhospitable one” (Mandaeanism).

of different teachings recorded centuries apart... In the Ginza, for example, perhaps the best known of the Mandaic sacred books, we find at least seven different accounts of the origins of the cosmos, each with features that are most difficult to reconcile...

In the more clearly dualistic texts there is a sharp contrast between light (nhura) and darkness (huska). At the highest point of light we find a supreme being, often possessing the qualities of transcendence: Life, or Great Life, or First Life [Manda d-Hiia]... The realm of light is inhabited by a great number of intermediate celestial beings, the 'utria [= the plural of “wealth”] or malkia [= the plural of “king”]. These were presented to the European missionaries... as “angels” because of their function as intermediaries and messengers between humans and the highest divinity. Alongside them are many abstract or hypostatized realities that sometimes seem to take on individual consistency and features... There is also the iardna or light, the “river” or “flowing water” or the ubiquitous “Jordan,” that sometimes goes by a proper name: Piriauis, or Pras Ziua, “Euphrates-Splendor.” This can be thought of as a unit, or as an infinite whole of rivers of light, in which the celestial realities immerse themselves, perpetuating the perfect cult that pleases God in eternity, the celestial liturgy compared to which mere earthly ones are but wretched imitations. The entire realm of light is structured in a limitless number of “worlds of light” (almia d-nhura), where celestial “dwelling places” are to be found, the seat of the 'utria and the blessed Mandeans.

As far as the highest hierarchy of Light is concerned, from the First Light emanates the Second Light, whose proper name is Iusamin [probably derived from Iao, the secret name of Yahweh], from this the Third Life, called Abatur [possibly related to ab, “father” plus 'utria, i.e., father of 'utria], and from this the Fourth Life, Ptahil [perhaps connected to a root PTH, meaning “to mold,” “to open”].¹⁴⁸ The process is clearly degenerative, and Ptahil, the least perfect, is to be found at the edge of light, by this point in contact with darkness... Out of [the waters of darkness] sometimes emerges a Lord or a King of Darkness, the exact opposite of the King of Light. More often the prominent figure is Ruha, the “Spirit,” a female being, also called Ruha d'Qudsa, “Spirit of Holiness,” that is, the Holy Spirit of the Christians. From an incestuous relationship with her own brother Gap, Ruha generates 'Ur, an enormous monster in the form of a serpent whose coils wrap themselves into the dark fires of the abyss. The created world stands on him. From a new incestuous relationship, this time with 'Ur (and, according to some texts, also with Gap and with her own father, the King of Darkness), Ruha generates the Seven, that is, the planets; the Twelve, that is, the signs of the zodiac; and the Five, the so-called “furious” [one of these may be the star Sirius]...¹⁴⁹

The best-known myth on the origin of creation narrates that Ptahil, on the orders of his father, Abatur, created the cosmos. Having descended from the light toward the waters of darkness, however, he showed himself incapable of carrying out the task entrusted to him. So he turned to Ruha, to the Seven, and to the Twelve, and with their help molded form the waters of darkness Tibil, the created world.¹⁵⁰ According to another version, Ptahil obtained a mantle of light from his father and with it, by beating the water, he solidified it, thus creating the world.¹⁵¹ In any case, his creative gesture was incorrect and was considered a sin.¹⁵² His father was also involved in this, since he was responsible for having given him the order to create. Both are driven out of the world of light and, above the firmament (the outermost confines of the created world) but under the light, they created their own worlds, in which they dwell and reign sovereign. Underneath them, starting from the celestial vault, the cosmos is entrusted to the 148 Nibley cites Widengren's observation that the name of this Creator combines “the archaic Egyptian and Semitic names”—i.e., Ptah and El (H. W. Nibley, Expanding 1992, p. 189. See G. Widengren, Mandäer, p. 86).

149 See E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, GR 3:1, pp. 183-185.

150 K. Rudolph, Coptic, GR 15:13, pp. 177-179.

151 Ibid., GR 5:1, pp. 180-181.

152 Ibid., GR 15:13, p. 179.

malevolent control of the Twelve and the Seven. These are the ancient Gods, astral and planetary, worshipped in the entire Mesopotamian area but now transformed into evil demons...

This does not take away from the fact that there are some Mandaean texts, though to tell the truth not so very many, that take a positive view of the planets and, most importantly, that the everyday life of the Mandaeans involves (or involved) them in constantly consulting the stars....

The domination of the stars over human activities has roots going back a very long way. Having created Tibil, in fact, Ptahil and his helpers create Adam.¹⁵³ Here the Mandaean version of a well-known Gnostic myth makes its appearance. The first attempt leads to little more than an abortion. Adam pagria, physical Adam, is virtually a body without life. In the world of light, having felt pity for him, they convince the inner Adam (adam kasia or Adakas) to allow himself to be imprisoned in his body. He is the first soul, thanks to whose presence the earthly Adam acquires life. Now, however, the soul (or spiritual element; the Mandaean texts do not make much distinction) has to be saved. So Manda d-Hiia, called also Bar Hiia (son of Life) or Dmut Hiia (Image of Life), the main Mandaean figure of revealer, descends. He brings Adam knowledge of his true celestial nature, he teaches him baptism, and he makes him the first Mandaean.¹⁵⁴ As can readily be seen, in this context the sin of Adam makes no sense at all. In fact, he does not sin. His salvation does not derive from repentance but from the knowledge that the divinity has bestowed upon him. Also, the baptism that was taught to him, on the model of the celestial liturgies, serves to maintain or recover the purity lost through contact with the physical...

Among the speculations concerning Adam is the Mandaean myth about the celestial Adam. This latter figure, also called Adakas, is the double of the other Adam and lives in another world, the double of the earthly world: Msunia Kusta [= the enraptured/chosen of the truth].¹⁵⁵ The term indicates a seat, a kind of paradise, situated somewhere in the north...¹⁵⁶

[T]he celestial Adamites correspond to the earthly ones. Three of these—Abel (Hibil), Seth (Sitil), and Enos (Anus)—are 'utria, who can substitute or stand behind Manda d-Hiia in the function of revealer and savior... [T]he figure of Cain and his story are completely absent, whereas a couple of times an otherwise unknown Adam son of Adam, Adam bar Adam, who was reputed to have been seduced by Ruha, makes his appearance...

As far as the sons of Adam go, Seth (Sitil) dies before his time.¹⁵⁷ He in fact accepts dying in place of his old father, who is too afraid and who through tricks and excuses manages to deceive the angel of death...¹⁵⁸ [Seth] becomes the first Mandaean to enter into celestial blessedness. Hibil (the biblical Abel), however, is born miraculously, leaving his mother intact and appearing suddenly at her side...¹⁵⁹

Whatever the genesis of the legends about Hibil, the son of Adam, a dense mass of mythical material is connected with Hibil Ziua's descent into the underworld or world of darkness... [and his] very long journey back up, with [a] magic pass, [a] mirror, and [a] consort or consorts...¹⁶⁰

Inside this mythical structure, finally, other fragments of Gnostic myth on the descent of the heavenly savior are to be found... In short, Hibil Ziua impersonates the so-called "savior to be saved," very much a part of Gnostic traditions...¹⁶¹

153 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, GR 3:1, pp. 187-191.

154 See Endnote B-8, p. 904.

155 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, GR 3:1, p. 189 and n. 9.

156 On the significance of "north," see A. S.-M. Ri, Commentaire de la Caverne, pp. 120-121.

157 Ibid., GL 1:1, pp. 191-194.

158 Cf. e.g., Abraham in D. C. Allison, Testament, 16:1-20:15, pp. 319-412.

159 Cf. the birth of Melchizedek in 2 Enoch, 78:17-19, pp. 206-207.

160 K. Rudolph, Coptic, GR 5:1, pp. 215-220.

161 Cf., e.g., J. K. Elliott, Pearl.

... [T]he soul... is personal, detaching itself from the body on the third day after death... [The] ascension of the soul... of the dead person toward the regions beyond the heavens is at one time imagined as a journey undertaken in solitude and at another as the meeting and the reunion and fusion with the “celestial double” of the dead person....

[T]he descendants of Sum [Shem, son of Noah], the Mandaeans themselves, are the only ones who are pure and genetically without sin. Adam in actual fact does not sin... [and] they alone are his worthy descendants... The savior and redeemer already appeared at the beginning of time, and his return would not make much sense. Nevertheless, through the influence of Christianity... some Mandaean texts await a return of Jesus at the end of time...¹⁶²

Mandaean Ritual

Despite their probable post-Christian origins as a separate people, Nibley sees the “whole Mandaean ritual complex with its endless washings, garments, ritual meals, embraces, grips and crownings [as being] reminiscent of the Egyptian endowment, and Drower, the principal authority on the subject, long ago called attention to the common prehistoric origin of both.”¹⁶³ Thomas argues for a connection to Palestinian baptist sects and the pre-exilic Israelite temple cult.¹⁶⁴ Even Yamauchi, who argued persuasively that, in contrast to mainstream scholarship, the Mandaean movement originated in the East and no earlier than the first centuries of the Christian era, nevertheless agreed with other researchers who saw the roots of their mythology and ritual in ancient Mesopotamian religion.¹⁶⁵

The most important phases of Mandaean ceremonies and rituals are performed in the mandi. Participants face north, since “the Mandaeans consider the North Star to be the throne of Abatur, the divine judge of all mortals.”¹⁶⁶ The rituals “that they are the most famous for, and from which their Arabic name is derived (subba[], hence the name Sabeans), are those concerning immersion in running water (or, at any rate, its use)”:

The most important of these is the masbuta, “baptism,” a solemn “immersion” in the presence of a priest. Sunday, which the Mandaeans call habsaba, “first [day] of the week,” is a holy day, just as it is for Christians, and practicing Mandaeans are expected to participate in the masbuta every Sunday. The ceremony lasts several hours, occupying nearly the entire morning. Preceded by the officiating tarmida’s preparatory prayers, the ceremony takes place along a watercourse or near the mandi’s immersion pool, and can be divided into two parts. The first part takes place in water: the person to be baptized first immerses himself or herself three times and is then immersed three times by the tarmida. He or she must drink the baptismal water three times from the tarmida’s hand, and then a small crown of myrtle is placed on the head, followed by a laying on of hands by the tarmida. The second part of the ceremony takes place on the bank once all the baptisms have been performed. With their white gowns soaking with water the Mandaeans consume a special bread (pihta) that has been prepared beforehand, and they drink the most holy water (mambuha), which has also been prepared by the priest in advance. They are then anointed with sesame oil by the priest, that is, “marked” on the forehead and the face (from ear to ear), with a gesture possibly related both to the Christian sign of the cross and to baptismal anointing (of the ears). Handshaking (called kusta, meaning “right” or “truth”) takes place repeatedly during the ceremony, each of the gestures described above being separated by hymns and prayers of varying length, recited by the priest.

162 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, pp. 38-52.

163 E. S. Drower, Mandaeans, pp. xviii-xix; H. W. Nibley, Message 2005, p. 445.

164 R. Thomas, Israelite Origin, pp. 11-26.

165 E. M. Yamauchi, Gnostic Ethics, pp. 80-86. See also G. Widengren, Enthronement, who discusses Mandaean baptism in light of Syrian-Mesopotamian ritual traditions.

166 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, p. 15.

Solemn baptism has two specific functions: it reduces (although it does not eliminate) the quantity and quality of punishment in the next world for sinful or irregular behavior, and restores those who have been very seriously contaminated to a state of ritual purity.¹⁶⁷

According to Drower: “Mysteries’, i.e., sacraments to aid and purify the soul, [are intended] to ensure her rebirth into a spiritual body, and her ascent from the world of matter... In the case of the Nasoraeans this interpretation is based on the Creation story..., especially on the Divine Man, Adam, as crowned and anointed King-priest.”¹⁶⁸ Anciently, all adult members of the sect were initiated into the mysteries through a series of rites described in Mandaean sacred writings. Today, the rites are still carried out in a limited way for those who are to become priests. Writes Lupieri:

The ceremony for consecrating a tarmida [= priest] is even richer and on a bigger scale than a wedding... The sualia [= candidate for initiation as a tarmida] is clothed as if he were dying or dead man ready for burial. He is dressed in a new rasta [= white ceremonial robe] with a gold coin sewn on the right and a silver one on the left. Gold symbolizes the sun and silver the moon, and their presence means that whoever wears that particular rasta must undertake the voyage through the heavens, controlled by the evil planetary powers, to the higher light. Dressed as a dead man, then, the sualia must demonstrate to his teacher, to the priests, and to the people gathered to celebrate that he possesses the necessary knowledge and preparation...¹⁶⁹

The consecration ceremony for the tarmida must be understood in light of portrayals of the soul in Mandaean scripture “as an exile, a captive; her home and origin being the supreme Entity to which she eventually returns”.¹⁷⁰

Rise up, rise up, soul
Ascend to your first earth [i.e., former earth, native place, place of origin]... to the place from which you were transplanted,...
Bestir yourself, put on your garment of radiance
And put on your resplendent wreath.
Sit on your throne of radiance, which the Life set up for you in the Place of Light.¹⁷¹

Ascend, rise up to your former home,
To your fine abode with the ‘uthras.
Live among the ‘uthras, your brothers,
Sit there as you were taught to do.
Seek the House of your Father...
May your throne be set up, just as it used to be...¹⁷²

The Mandaean Book of John gives the following account of how Adam awoke, having lost his body of light and being placed on the dreary earth, and welcomed the messenger who was sent by his Father to instruct him:

At the call of the Envoy Adam, who lay there, awoke... and went forth to meet the Envoy: “Come in peace, O Envoy, Life’s messenger, who hast come from the House of my Father. How firmly planted withal dear, beautiful Life in his region! But how [meanly] for me has a stool been set up [i.e., Tibil, the dreary earth] and my dark form sits on it lamenting.”

167 Ibid., pp. 15-16.

168 E. S. Drower, Adam, p. xvi. See Endnote B-9, p. 905.

169 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, pp. 25-26.

170 E. S. Drower, Adam, p. xvi.

171 K. Rudolph, Coptic, GL 3:3, p. 261.

172 Ibid., GL 1:2, p. 254.

Thereon the Envoy made answer and spake to the corporeal Adam: “Thy throne has been set up in Beauty, O Adam; and ’tis thy form sits here lamenting. All were mindful of thee for thy good and fashioned and sent me to thee. I am come and will give thee instruction, O Adam, and free thee from this world. Give ear and hearken and get thee instructed, and mount to Light’s region victorious.”¹⁷³

The Mandaean literature abounds with references to the idea that three messengers were sent to teach Adam and to protect him from the deceptive and dangerous influence of evil powers.¹⁷⁴ For example, in the Canonical Prayerbook, it says: “And Hibil-Ziwa came and blessed three ’uthras, and the three ’uthras blessed Adam and all his descendants.”¹⁷⁵ According to Nibley, these envoys “taught Adam and Eve the hymns, and the order of prayer, and the ordinances which would help one to return to the presence of the Father.”¹⁷⁶ Ginza records:

When I (Manda d-Hiia) installed Adam, I appointed three ’uthras over him. I set myself at the head of the ’uthras whom I set over Adam and Eve. I stood before them and taught them wonderful hymns (drase). I instructed them in the ritual books (sidre) so that they might perform the masiqtas [after the manner] of the ’uthras. I taught them prayers so that they might be confirmed through the prayers of the Life... I brought myself forward and instructed them, as a teacher (rabba) does his pupils (swalya). I conversed with them and blessed them, and the blessing of the good ones shall rest upon them. Adam, his sons, and his generation shall behold the Place of Light.¹⁷⁷

In another passage from Ginza (GR 11:1), Nibley¹⁷⁸ also sees a description of the efforts of Satan to oppose the ministry of the three envoys:

The evil spirits, who claim the world for their own, resent the Sent Ones’ instructions. “These three men are in the world,” they say, “but they are not really men. They are light and glory, and they have come down to little ‘Enosh’ [physical man—Adam] who is helpless and alone in the world.”¹⁷⁹ They are intruding on our world. “The children of men have taken over the earth. They are really strangers who speak the language of the three men. They have accepted the teachings of the three men and rejected us in our own world.”¹⁸⁰ They refuse to acknowledge our kingdom and our glory. The devils don’t like the three men interrupting their program and spoiling things. Thus, the evil ones plotted to overthrow Adam, who was hoping for “Manda d-Hiia (Teacher of Life), the messenger from the Father to come and give him aid and support.”¹⁸¹

Mandaean disciples are specifically warned of Satan and of the dangers of putting their trust in the treasures of the earth:

Love not gold and silver and the possessions of this world, for the world will come to nothing and perish, and its possessions and its works will be abandoned. Do not worship Satan, the idols, the images, the error and the confusion of this world...¹⁸²

173 G. R. S. Mead, Mandaean John-Book, 13, p. 91.

174 See Figure 5-9, p. 339 and Figure 5-10, p. 340.

175 E. S. Drower, Prayerbook, 379, p. 292.

176 H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, p. 302.

177 K. Rudolph, Coptic, GR 3:1, pp. 197-198.

178 GR 11:1, cited in H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, pp. 302-303. Quotation marks in the original are modified here to better distinguish Ginza citations from Nibley’s own explanations.

179 In German: “Die Bösen der Welt sollen sagen: ‘Diese drei Männer sind in der Welt, jedoch sind sie keine Männer, sondern Glanz und Licht ist es, das seine Gestalt zeigt in dieser Welt beim kleinen Enös, der allein in dieser Welt dasteht’” (M. Lidzbarski, Ginza, GR 11:1, p. 264).

180 In German: “... die Menschenkinder waren in Fülle da. Sie sprechen in der Rede des fremden Lebens, sprechen in der Rede dieser drei Männer. Sie schließen sich dem Leben an und unterwerfen sich diesen drei Männern. Sie erheben sich gegen uns und verachten uns in dieser unserer eigenen Welt” (ibid., GR 11:1, p. 263).

181 In German: “Ich hoffe auf Mandit d’Hajje, daß er komme und mir eine Stütze sei” (ibid., GR 11:1, p. 263).

182 K. Rudolph, Coptic, GR 1:95-96, p. 289.

They are also given moral instructions to accompany the ordinances.¹⁸³ In the Ginza, we find teachings concerning such subjects as:

Obedience: “Do not put your trust in the world in which you live, for it does not belong to you. Trust in the fine works which you perform. When you leave your body, (then) the works of your hands will be your support.”¹⁸⁴

Sacrifice: “Give alms to the poor... If you give with your right hand, (then) do not tell it to your left”;¹⁸⁵ “When you see anyone who is hungry, (then) satisfy his hunger. When you see anyone who is thirsty, (then) give him to drink. When you see anyone naked, (then) give him clothes... Whoever releases a prisoner, will find a Messenger (sliha) of life advancing to meet him.”¹⁸⁶

The Gospel: “Do not do anything that is odious to your associates.”¹⁸⁷

Chastity: “Take a wife and found a family... Do not commit adultery or fornicate.”¹⁸⁸

Charity: “Love and support one another, and you shall cross the great Ocean of Suf.... Be you brothers of kusta, who bring your love to perfection.”¹⁸⁹

Shortly after birth, the newborn child is given four names, one of which is “the most secret and important one” that is “used always (and almost exclusively) in religious rituals.”¹⁹⁰ The number four is also a significant part of initiation in the Mandaean tradition, which includes a testing process involving a series of four ritual acts. As described by Roper:¹⁹¹

Both the Ginza... and the Canonical Prayer-Book of the Mandaeans describe how, upon death, the soul, leaving behind her mortal body, will ascend to the heavenly world of Light from which she originally came. [There, the soul meets] Abathur, a powerful angel who guards the entrance into paradise. “There his scales are set up and spirits and souls are questioned before him as to their names, their signs, their blessing, their baptism and everything that is therewith.”¹⁹² According to a Mandaean commentary, this portion of the liturgy refers to “the four ritual handclasps which Abathur seeks to exchange with the soul.”¹⁹³ Each of these four are associated with separate ritual acts accompanied by a solemn oath:¹⁹⁴ “The first kusta is a precious kusta; it is the promise made at baptism.... The second kusta is a lofty kusta: it is the oath [taken at] coronation; no [earthly] king hath more majesty! The third kusta is a loving one, it is the vow taken at espousal: there is no love like it. The fourth kusta is a powerful kusta for it travelth to (the other) world. It came, it went, and it opened the door to the world. Every man who hath performed these kustas is thereby made perfect, he hath been put to the test by all the worlds and will rise upward and behold the Place of Light.”¹⁹⁵ All this in Mandaean tradition was revealed to Adam by divine messengers sent from God to teach him... the proper way to worship.

183 H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, pp. 302, 308.

184 K. Rudolph, Coptic, GR 1:155, p. 289; cf. Matthew 6:19-20.

185 Ibid., GR 1:104, p. 291; cf. Matthew 6:3.

186 Ibid., GR 1:105, p. 291, cf. GL 3:19, p. 295; cf. Matthew 25:35-36.

187 Ibid., GR 1:150, p. 291; cf. Matthew 7:13.

188 Ibid., GR 1:92, p. 292; cf. Matthew 5:27-28.

189 Ibid., GR 1:128, pp. 291-292; cf. Matthew 5:43-48.

190 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, p. 17; cf. E. S. Drower, Haran, p. 32. See Endnote B-9, p. 905.

191 M. Roper, Adam; cf. T. M. Compton, Handclasp, p. 622.

192 E. S. Drower, Prayerbook, p. 45. The account continues by saying: “The souls of our fathers were signed with the sign of Life and the name of the Life and the name of Manda d-Hiia was pronounced over them” (ibid., p. 45).

193 E. S. Drower, Nasorean, p. 35. See Commentary 1:25-c, p. 60, Figure 6-14, p. 473; Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations, Dexiosis, p. 681; the Manichaean Texts section of the Annotated Bibliography, p. 884; and Figure B-1, p. 872. See Endnote 1-22, p. 79.

194 See Endnote B-10, p. 905.

195 E. S. Drower, Thousand, pp. 255-256. See Endnote B-11, p. 905.

At the final stage of the tarmida consecration ceremony, the candidate symbolically enacts a journey from the material world to the Place of Life:

Once the texts have all been recited, another straw hut is quickly built under the guidance of the priests. This hut is in every respect similar to the manda, but without the mud stucco. It is built to the north of the courtyard, with its opening facing south, directly opposite that of the andiruna[, a previously-built house covered with blue cloth which represents the material world]. The second hut is called a skinta, which means “dwelling,” “house,” or “temple,” and is covered with a large sheet of white cloth.¹⁹⁶

... The next morning just before dawn [the sualia] will leave the andiruna, and, after pausing halfway between the two huts to again recite a sacred text, he finally enters the skinta....¹⁹⁷

In a passage no doubt corresponding to a more elaborate version of the same kind of enactment, the culmination of the process by which one is admitted to the Place of Life is described in the Mandaean liturgy:

When [the soul] puts on the vesture of the sons of perfection she laugheth, rejoiceth... about the glorious splendor, the honor resting on and belonging to her. She proceeded in the vesture of Yuzataq-Manda-d-Hiia and went onwards and reached the Waters of Death [i.e., the frontier of the world of light¹⁹⁸]. The waters covered her, but Radiance crossed over... and said, “Life, I am Thine, and for Thy name’s sake came I forth from the world... so that we may bring out this soul... so that she cometh before him”... He graspeth her with the palm of his right hand and handeth her over to two ’uthras... who open the Door of Life, plant the plant of Life and establish the first counterpart of the House of Life.¹⁹⁹

A related description of this event is found in Left Ginza 1:1:

Sitil [Seth], the son of Adam... was brought to the Watchhouse [where] Silmais, the treasurer, holds the nails of glory in the hand, and carries the key of the kushta of both arms.²⁰⁰ They opened the gate of the treasure house for him, lifted the great veil of safety upward before him, introduced him, and showed him that Vine [i.e., the Tree of Life],²⁰¹ its inner glory... They eat, and the great Presence of Life came and rested upon him. They twined wreaths of Presence and placed them on his head... Sitil, son of Adam, spoke: “On this [same] way, the Path and Ascent which I have climbed, truthful, believing, faithful and perfect men should also ascend and come, when they leave their bodies [i.e., at death].”²⁰²

196 See R. Thomas, Israelite Origins, pp. 22-23 for comparisons of the design of the huts and Israelite temples.

197 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, p. 27.

198 E. S. Drower, Prayerbook, p. 45 n. 6.

199 Ibid., 49, pp. 45-46.

200 Nibley comments: “That is the code for the signs that Adam had to receive—his instructions. The one who holds the nails of glory, and the signs in the hands, and the key to the initiation rites is the master of the Treasure House” (H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, p. 300; cf. Isaiah 49:16; Zechariah 13:6; Cyril of Jerusalem, Five, 2:5, p. 148).

201 J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine, pp. 203-204. A close association between the symbolism of the “true vine” and that of the “true olive tree” can be found in 1 Nephi 15:15-16.

202 Cf. Lidzbarski’s German translation: “Sitil, den Sohn Adams... stellten ihn an das Wachthaus Silmais, des Schatzmeisters, der die Pflöcke des Glanzes in der Hand hält und die Schlüssel der Kusta auf beiden Armen trägt. Sie öffneten ihm das Tor des Schatzhauses, hoben vor ihm den großen Vorhang der Sicherheit in die Höhe, führten ihn ein und zeigten ihm jenen Weinstock, dessen Inneres Glanz, ... Sie essen, und die Wonnigkeit des Lebens kommt und legt sich über sie. Sie winden Kränze der Wonnigkeit und legen sie sich aufs Haupt... Sitil, der Sohn Adams, sprach: ‘Auf diesem Wege, Pfad und Aufstieg, auf dem ich emporgestiegen bin, sollen auch die wahrhaften, gläubigen, trefflichen und vollkommenen Männer emporsteigen und kommen, wenn sie aus ihrem Körper scheiden’” (M. Lidzbarski, Ginza, GL 1:1, p. 429:3-20). Another account in Ginza reads: “When it [i.e., the soul] arrived at the gate of the House of Life, the escort comes to meet it. He bears a resplendent wreath in his hand and a garment in both his arms... The Life stretched out (his hand), and joined in communion (laufa) with it, just as the elect join in communion (laufa) in the Place of Light” (K. Rudolph, Coptic, GR 3:6, p. 263).

FIGURE B-1. Pact and Pax: The Kushta. 1956
E.S. Drower, 1879-1972

*Sitil [Seth], the son of Adam... was placed at the Watchhouse [where] Silmais, the treasurer, holds the nails of glory in the hand, and carries the key of the kushta of both arms... Sitil, son of Adam, spoke: "On this way, the Path and Ascent which I have climbed, truthful, believing, discerning and perfect men should also climb and come, when they leave their bodies."*¹

Lady Drower, during her life the foremost specialist on the Mandaeans and still one of the few who have been privileged to spend years in firsthand study of their practices, writes: "Mandaeans call the ceremonial handclasp the *kushta*² and its performance 'taking kushta' with a person. As in the European handshake the right hand only is given, and on its release it is carried to the lips. Kushta may be translated 'troth,' 'truth' or 'true-dealing'... The handclasp and kiss occur three times during the Mandaean baptismal rite, once in the water, once after the giving of the sacramental bread and water, and once at the end when the priest veils his right hand in his stole for the final salutation.³ The words spoken are 'Kushta asiak ukaimak,'

1 M. Lidzbarski, Ginza, LG 1:1, p. 429. See Excursus 51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple, p. 658.

2 Sundberg has written an in-depth monograph on the key term kushta, referring both to the idea of "right" or "truth" and the unusual handclasp rite described above (W. Sundberg, Kushta).

3 Note in the photograph that the white stole is being gripped between the two parties as part of the handclasp. The veiling of the clasped hands beneath a white cloth is also a part of Mandaean and Muslim marriage covenants. The seemingly related practice of the two participants in marriage and in other pact-making rites holding the ends of a white handkerchief between them is had among some Iraqi Jews (E. S. Drower, Water, pp. 104-105). See R. Thomas, Israelite Origins, pp. 6, 23 for a discussion of resemblances between the ritual clothing of the Mandaeans and that of Levitical priests in Judaism. The turban is wrapped around the head three times, with the end hanging over the left shoulder. Thomas also notes that the kusta is identical to the first Masonic handclasp (ibid., p. 25 n. 139).

that is, 'Kushta strengtheneth thee (or healeth thee) and establisheth thee.' In Mandaean rites the handclasp seems to mark the completion of a ceremony or of a stage in a ceremony.⁴ As exemplified both by Adam and by his righteous son Seth, who were taken by the right hand and brought into the presence of the Great Life,⁵ the performance of the sacred handclasp in Mandaean ritual is of a "symbolic salvific character," signaling "a recognition of the embodied soul as a displaced being of Light" and presaging "its eventual installation within its true home."⁶ See Nibley⁷ for a reproduction of a drawing from Drower's "1934 copy of an old Mandaean magic scroll"⁸ showing "Adam, Sital, and other perfected souls in priestly dress [giving] the kushta... to each other."

Drower compares the rite of kushta to practices among Jews⁹ and Christians,¹⁰ and in the ancient Mesopotamian Akitu festival.¹¹ Despite its varied forms, she finds that the rite is universally "identical in purpose," signifying pact and pax—covenant and reconciliation—citing the eloquent words of Modi: "... behind the outward passing of hands in the hamazor (= Parsi ritual handclasp), which signifies unity, harmony, participation, there lies the inner idea, which demands that the participants must unite in the works of righteousness. So, behind what we may call the 'physical hamazor,' there is what we may term the 'spiritual hamazor.' The participants in the ceremony, in the ritual, in the recital are asked to be one with the chief celebrant in some religious acts which may lead to an increase of righteousness in the world."¹²

4 E. S. Drower, Water, p. 106.

5 M. Lidzbarski, Ginza, GL 1:1, p. 429:3-20, GL 2:26, p. 498:20-22.

6 J. C. Reeves, Heralds, pp. 123, 124.

7 H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, p. 300 Figure 50.

8 E. S. Drower, Writings, p. 173.

9 E. S. Drower, Water, pp. 103-105.

10 Ibid., pp. 106-110.

11 Ibid., p. 102 n. 1. For more on the use of the handclasp in classical, Jewish, and Christian contexts, see Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations, Dexiosis, p. 681. See also Commentary 1:25-c, p. 60, Figure 6-14, p. 473; and the Manichaean Texts section of the Annotated Bibliography, p. 884. See Endnote 1-22, p. 79.

12 J. J. Modi, Ceremonies, p. 406, cited in E. S. Drower, Water, p. 111.

General studies of the Mandaean people and their beliefs, customs, and rituals include J. J. Buckley, Mandaeans; E. F. Crangle et al., Baptism; E. F. Crangle et al., Priestcraft; E. S. Drower, Mandaeans; E. Lupieri, Mandaeans. In addition to translations and commentaries on Mandaean sacred writings described below, Drower's study of the idioms of Middle Eastern ritual²⁰³ and of the Mandaean Adam²⁰⁴ should be consulted.

Ginza, Sidra Rba, or Mandaean Book of Adam

The most important book of Mandaean scripture is the Ginza Rba (= Great Treasure) or Sidra Rba (= Great Book), briefly described by Ryen as follows:

The work consists of two parts: Left and Right Ginza.²⁰⁵ Right Ginza (RG) is the first and most voluminous of the two, and contains the myths about the Lightworld and darkness from the beginning of mythological time, and how this world came into being. The literary style is mainly prose. Left Ginza (LG) deals with the soul's destiny after death and the soul's journey upwards to the Lightworld. The style is usually poetic.

The first translation (into Latin) was made by M. Norberg [1815/1816, 3 volumes]. Norberg's translation was somewhat free. H. Petermann's edition from 1867 became more known, but was also in Latin. W. Brandt translated extracts from Ginza into German at the end of the 19th century [1893]. A complete translation in German was edited by M. Lidzbarski in 1925... This edition is still the standard edition of Ginza. Efforts are made for a new edition with translation of this work.²⁰⁶

203 E. S. Drower, Water.

204 E. S. Drower, Adam.

205 The two parts of Ginza "are organized in such a way that on reaching the end of Right Ginza, a reader must turn the volume upside down to read Ginza Left. The two parts face each other in the manner of two inscribed bowls enclosing the text within. Some scholars think that this may very well be the Ginza's model, for traditional Mandaean inscribed clay bowls are often found buried in this same fashion" (R. Spencer, Loss).

206 J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine, pp. 44-45.

To facilitate the finding of specific passages from Ginza in English translation, we have prepared the following table. The summary descriptions given in the table provide a useful overview of important beliefs and ethical practices among the Mandaeans. Selections are listed by Ginza section and verse, with Ginza Left references following those of Ginza Right. Page numbers in English publications of Ginza selections are correlated to page numbers in the complete Latin (Petermann) and German (Lidzbarski) editions:

Pet – The Great Treasure or Great Book, Commonly Called “The Book of Adam,” the Mandaean’s Work of Highest Authority (Thesaurus sive Liber Magnus, vulgo “Liber Adami” appellatus, opus Mandaeorum summi ponderis) with a New Introduction by Charles Häberl. Reprint edition of Petermann’s Latin translation. Volume 1 (Ginza Right) and Volume 2 (Ginza Left).

Lid – Ginza: Der Schatz oder das Grosse Buch der Mandäer, edited by M. Lidzbarski. A complete German translation.

WF – Gnosis: A Selection of Gnostic Texts, Vol. 2. A translation and arrangement of Gnostic writings organized by school of thought. Kurt Rudolph edited the large section on Mandaean sources, under the general editorship of Werner Foerster. I have drawn from Rudolph’s summaries in many of the section descriptions below.

EL – The Mandaeans: The Last Gnostics by E. Lupieri. A well-written introduction to the Mandaean religion which includes an anthology of texts organized by topic, along with commentary. The anthology includes not only several excerpts from the Ginza but also significant passages from the Book of John and other Mandaean texts.

OB – The Other Bible (W. Barnstone, Other). Described in the Nag Hammadi Codices section above.

GB – The Gnostic Bible (W. Barnstone et al., Gnostic). Described in the Nag Hammadi Codices section above.

Haa – Gnosis: Character and Testimony (R. Haardt, Gnosis). A collection of Gnostic writings, including a section on Mandaeism.

Section	Description	Pet	Lid	WF	EL	OB	GB	Haa
GR 1:5-7	Attributes of the King of light or Lord of greatness (mar d-rabuta). Relatively recent.	2	5	148-149	178-179
GR 1:8-37	Additional attributes of the King of light.	2-7	5-10	149-151
GR 1:40	Creation through the word.	7	10	157
GR 1:42-76	Description of the world of light-beings.	7-11	11-14	152-153
GR 1:81-88	A monistic version of the cosmogony.	12-13	14	182-184
GR 1:85	The King of Light brings everything into being by his word.	13	15	157
GR 1:92	Take a wife and found a family.	14	16	292
GR 1:95-96 (Recension A)	A portion of the Mandaean “Moral Code.” Believers are admonished to be truthful, to love not gold and silver, and to eschew the worship of Satan and the error and confusion of this world.	14	16	289
GR 1:103-105	Instructions on freeing prisoners, giving alms (cf. Matthew 6:3), feeding the hungry, and clothing the naked.	15-16	17-18	291
GR 1:110-118	Fast not from eating and drinking, but rather fast from evil with your eyes, ears, mouths, hears, hands, body, knees, and feet.	16	18-19	290
GR 1:121	Trust neither rulers nor armies, nor their riches.	17	19	290

Section	Description	Pet	Lid	WF	EL	OB	GB	Haa
GR 1:123-124	Admonishment for believers to be baptized. All who are baptized and are steadfast in good deeds will not be hindered on their way to the place of light.	17-18	19-20	277
GR 1:128	Love and support one another.	18	20	291-292
GR 1:134-136 (Recension A)	The dead will be protected and set free from the watch-houses through the rituals of the masiqta (elevation or ascent).	19	21	282-283
GR 1:138	Give bread, water, and shelter to the poor and persecuted.	19	21	291
GR 1:143	Do not go to soothsayers, nor to lying Chaldeans.	20	22	292
GR 1:146	Do not commit adultery, sing, or dance.	20	22	292
GR 1:150	Do not do anything that is odious to your associates.	21	22	291
GR 1:153-165	Do not put your trust in the world, which will come to an end, nor in false gods. The discipline of penitence.	21-22	23-25	289-290, 292-293
GR 1:163-180	A revelation to Adam condemning the “evil” god Adunai (= Adonai (Hebrew “Lord”), Jehovah) and Judaism, the first deviation from the first religion (Mandaism) and the root from whence other false religions (e.g., Christianity, Islam) sprang.	23-26	24-27	296-298	213-215
GR 1:189-191	A brief account telling of how King Solomon lost his power when he exalted himself and forgot the Lord.	27	28	298	215
GR 1:198-202	Jesus attempts to deceive, but Anus Uthra teaches truly. After the 360 true prophets leave Jerusalem, the city is destroyed and the Jews are exiled.	28-29	29-30	298-299	243-244
GR 1:203	Muhammad does much evil in the world and leads Mandaean astray.	29	30	300	254
GR 2:1:49-50 (Recension B)	Mandaean are not to mourn for the dead, but instead to perform the rituals of the masiqta .	37	37	282
GR 2:1:100	Glorious promises to those who ascend to the realm of Light.	44-45	42	246
GR 2:1:118-122a	Description of the ages of the world. The victims of the Flood and of the destruction by fire (Sodom?) “are not sinners but among the righteous who will ‘ascend to the light’” (E. Lupieri, Mandaean , p. 199).	48-50	45-46		199-200
GR 2:1:139-150, 154	Anti-Christian account describing Jesus and His apostles as deceivers.	54-58	50-52	307-309	240-243		549-551
GR 2:1:151-153	This brief passage provides a good summary of Mandaean teachings about the life of John the Baptist, the baptism of Jesus, and John’s death and ascension.	57	51	308	224-225		550
GR 2:1:158-159	Jesus is likened to evil mythological figures.	58-59	52-53		251
GR 2:1:160-161	Polemic against the planets and against Christianity.	59-60	53		211
GR 2:1:164	After Muhammad brings wretchedness to the world, prophecy will cease and faith will disappear from the earth.	61	54		254
GR 2:3	Description of the “Messenger of Light.”	64-66	57-61	227-230
GR 2:4	Polemic against the Christian practices of celibacy and virginity.	67	61-62		252
GR 3:1	The origin of the worlds of light	68-69	65	154-155

Section	Description	Pet	Lid	WF	EL	OB	GB	Haa
GR 3:1	A description of the emanation of the Second Life, comprising the various uthras (= “riches,” meaning a class of semi-divine beings), malkia (= sovereigns), or malakia (= angels) that populate the Lightworld. Before that time, only the wholeness of the divinity existed (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , pp. 175-176).	69-70	66-67	155-156	176-178		537-538	353-355
GR 3:1	The primeval descent into hell of the envoy.	71-74	68-70	204				355-359
GR 3:1	Descriptions of the rebellious and of darkness. The messenger questions the Life.	74-76	70-73	163-164		126-127	538-540
GR 3:1	The world beyond.	75-76	73	156-157		125-126	537
GR 3:1	The Life is questioned about the origin of darkness. No answer follows, only instruction.	76-79	73-78	164-166		127	540-541
GR 3:1	Concerning the arch-demon Ruha. Soteriology “concerned chiefly with the release of the soul from the body after death and its joyful return to its homeland. This is prefigured in the primeval history by Adam” (W. Foerster, Gnosis , p. 204).	80-92	79-95	167, 184, 204-214		697-698	541-542
GR 3:1	Manda d-Hiia draws off a channel of living water (baptismal water, the Jordan) for the world, to save the fallen soul.	92	96	186, 202
GR 3:1	Cosmogony describing the actions of Ptahil and Ruha in the creation of the earth.	93-95	97-99	170-176	183-186	127-132		360-370
GR 3:1	The creation of Adam as king of the world. Adam’s soul is placed in his body with the personal participation of the supreme deity.	100-104	107-113	187-192	187-191	134-138	543-548	370-376
GR 3:1	The reaction of the wicked and the renewed intervention of the world of light on behalf of Adam; the origin of the heavenly Adamites. Three ‘uthras appointed to instruct Adam and Eve in the ordinances and in prayer.	104-108	113-119	193-198				378-379
GR 3:1	The wicked ones forge secret plans and oaths to eliminate the call of Life into the World shut out from light. The Mysteries of Love will be used to ensnare the World. The wicked say the world belongs to them.	109-110	120-121					379-381
GR 3:1	The man and the woman were made from a single body.	116	130	202-203
GR 3:1	The violence and deception of Muhammad’s followers.	122	137		258
GR 5:1	Hibil’s descent into hell before the creation of the world, revealing the name and sign of the King of Darkness. He obtains a passport for his return.	142-144	156-158	215-216
GR 5:1	On the origin of Darkness.	149	161	167
GR 5:1	Hibil purloins utensils and a mirror from the worlds of darkness, and marries one of the daughters of the underworld. Ur is born to Ruha and Gap. Ur invades the world of light, but is bound and immured. A second attempt also fails.	162-167	169 ff.	217-220
GR 5:1	Hibil-Ziua’s descent into hell. Hibil installs the seven and twelve sons he begets by Ruha. Ptahil creates the world using Abatur’s mantle of light.	168-172	174 f.	180-181
GR 5:2	A description of the appearance of the messengers of light. The passage quotes Psalm 29:114.	173	177	236-237
GR 5:2	A description of how Manda d-Hiia revealed himself in Jerusalem.	178, 179	181, 182	300-301
GR 5:4	There are two sections of this passage. “The first deals with the arrival of Manda d-Hiia at the Jordan, with his baptism not performed, and with the death of John and his burial. The second deals with the ascent of the soul of John... and the connected reintegration of Ptahil and Abatur, who were met during the journey” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 234).	188-196	190-196		234-238

Section	Description	Pet	Lid	WF	EL	OB	GB	Haa
GR 9:1	Polemic against other religions, called the “collapse of the seven stars.”	222-234	223-234		204-210, 258-260
GR 10:1	Godly Mandaean will be received in the House of Life.	240	241	214
GR 10:1	The creation of Adam and Eve, and the “virgin birth” of Hibil.	241	242	198-199
GR 10:1	The role of Hibil in the cosmogony.	241	243	185
GR 10:1	Some remarkable views about Adakas.	243-245	244 ff.	199-200
GR 10:1	Three sets of twins are born to Eve.	245	245	199
GR 11:1	The “pouring out of the living waters” of baptism into the turbid waters.	269	266	185-186
GR 12:2	The saving truth (kusta) is praised in an old acrostic psalm, recited, e.g., at wedding ceremonies.	274-275	271-272	234-235
GR 12:6	Describes the world of the King of darkness below Tibil, the created world.	278-281	277-279	159-162	179-181
GR 12:6	Continuation of the description of the world of darkness	281-282	279 f.	162
GR 13:1	The connection of the emanations of Life with other beings	284	283	158
GR 13:1	Ptahil, the creator.	286	284	185
GR 14:1	Ptahil creates the planets.	298	294	181
GR 15:2	Hibil as a gentle vine.	234	301	234
GR 15:3	Baptism was devised when Adam was formed. Silmai and Nidbai, the angels of baptism, were given knowledge and a message to rouse and waken those who sleep, and to perform the healing ordinance of baptism.	308-309	307-309	277-278
GR 15:3	At the end of time, Tibil will be destroyed forever, the spirit of the Seven and the Twelve shall meet its end, and sentence will be pronounced on Yosamin, Abathur, and Ptahil. Then these three fallen beings of light shall receive the baptism of purification in the heavenly Jordan.	310-311	311	276				395-397
GR 15:10	The four stages or emanations of the Pleroma.	325	331-332	158
GR 15:10	Manda d-Hiia descends to the earth.	328	335	215
GR 15:11	Two stories that describe the origins of Judaism and the persecution of the Mandaeans in efforts by the evil Ruha/Namrus to thwart the purposes of Anus Uthra.	328-333	336-344	302-307	217-220
GR 15:13	Cosmogony describing the creation of the earth by Ptahil and Abathur. Ptahil is commanded to create two “solidifications”: Msunne-Kusta (Paradise) and Tibil (Earth).	336-338	348-351	177-178	181-182	132-134	542
GR 15:13	An account of “creation by the word.”	339	351	178-179		134	542-543
GR 15:13	Ptahil’s disobedience is punished, and Hibil-Ziua is sent to set the world in order.	340	351-352	179
GR 15:14	The Life as a demiurge.	341	354	185
GR 15:19	The fall of the soul into darkness and its deliverance, for which Adam is the prototype.	358	377-378	224-225		698		382
GR 16:2	Instruction of Adam by an ’uthra . He is admonished to forsake the illusory things of the world and remember his Lord.	364-365	387	293		701-702
GR 16:4	A prayer for the perfect ones.	366-367	389-390	225-226
GR 16:5	From the day I came to love the Life, I have no trust in the world. I went and found my soul—what are the worlds to me? (cf. Matthew 16:26)	367	390	293-294

Section	Description	Pet	Lid	WF	EL	OB	GB	Haa
GR 16:8	A psalm of deliverance.	369-370	393-394	226-227
GR 16:9	A prayer to Kusta .	370	394-395	235-236
GR 17:1	Adam, his companion, and the elect righteous are called forth.	372	400	203
GR 18:1	A history from the time of creation and a prophecy to the end of time. Foresees an end to Islamic domination of the region after only seventy-one years, allowing the text to be dated between 639-710 CE.	378-381	407-410		200-202
GR 18:1	An account of the ancient creation of Jerusalem by Adunai, Ruha, and the seven planets. Abraham is born, goes to Egypt, the Israelites return to Jerusalem by the passage through the Red Sea, and eventually Jesus is born and founds a church.	381-382	410-411		131, 216
GR 18:1	A long composite list of sovereigns who purportedly reigned from the time of the Flood to the completion of the years of the kings. The predicted end of the world can be calculated to the year 844 CE.				316 n. 13 (summary)
GL 1:1	Adam, not wanting to die, convinces God to have Sital (Seth) die in his place. Description of the faithfulness of Hibil, Sital, and Anos.	1-9	424-429	272-274, 300	191-194
GL 1:2	Adam, not wanting to die, finally accepts his destiny.	9-19	430-438	181-182, 274-275	195-198, 224
GL 1:3	Eve laments for her dead husband.
GL 1:4	A description of the soul's journey through celestial places of detention.	26-38	443-452	246-251
GL 2:1	The soul complains about its having been placed in the body, and rejoices in its release and return to its former home with the Father.	38-40	454-456	253-254
GL 2:4	The soul complains about being cast into the house of Ptahil.	42	459	182
GL 2:5	The soul complains about its having been placed in the body, and rejoices in its planter (or helper) that will release it and cause it to ascend.	43-44	461-462	254-256
GL 2:6	Ptahil and the planets he created shall be accursed and destroyed.	44	462	182
GL 2:7	The soul complains about its lot, and praises the planter (or helper) that will fetch him after it has endured to the end.	45	463	256-257
GL 2:8	The soul complains about its body, and is promised that it will eventually leave this world.	46	465	257
GL 2:12	The soul asks for a boundary-stone and a crier. Its complaint will be answered. Because it endured the persecution of the world, its sins shall be forgiven.	51-52	472	258
GL 2:14	At the end of time, when the heaven and the earth pass away, Ptahil shall receive his garment and will be baptized in the Jordan.	56	478	275-276
GL 2:16	The mana or the hidden Adam is admonished to take on a body, and is promised that it will be protected and will rise through the mysteries, the luminaries (sun and moon), and the help of guardians.	59	483	258-259
GL 2:18	The old significance of Adakas.	61-62	486-487	200-202				383-384
GL 2:21	The planets are fettered; Adam is protected and washed, and ascends to the House of Life.	65-66	492	259		698-699

Section	Description	Pet	Lid	WF	EL	OB	GB	Haa
GL 2:25	The Evil ones vent their anger and vow to cut Adam off from his Place of Origin. Adam ceases to ask about transitory things, and ascends to the place from which he was transplanted.	69-71	498-500	259-260				390-392
GL 2:26	Praises to Hibil who made a path to the Place of Light.	71	500	260-261
GL 3:1	Darkness (= the underworld) is identified with the sublunar world and the Tibil, or with the “body” (microcosm).	74-76	505-507	221-223
GL 3:3	The soul is admonished to rise up to its first (i.e., former) earth.	78-79	511-512	261-262		699		384-386
GL 3:5-6	The soul finds bliss and peace on the road of Adam, is met by an escort at the gate of the House of Life who bears a wreath and a garment, and joins in communion with the Life, who stretches out His hand.	80-81	513-515	262-263		699-700
GL 3:9	The soul expresses its reluctance to return to the body.	84	519	223-224
GL 3:10	The head of the believers, marked with the sign, is challenged by the Seven planets, but refuses to give them his head, eyes, ears, mouth, hands, heart, knees, or feet, which take him to the Place of Light. Manda d-Hiia led his beloved ones to victory and saved their souls from sin.	86-87	522-523	263-264
GL 3:12	The soul is guided past the heavenly watchhouses by its reward, its works, its alms, and its goodness. At the water-brooks, a discharge of radiance took the soul by the palm of the right hand and brought it over the streams to reach the Life.	89-90	525-527	265		700-701
GL 3:15	A chosen one is protected by an uthra , who destroys the houses of the tollkeepers [watchhouses] and makes possible his escape from the Tibil.	94-95	532-534	265-266				388-390
GL 3:16	The father, the uthra , is the soul's helper; the soul is the slave of the alien, of the man who is a supporter.	96-97	535-536	267
GL 3:19	The soul is questioned on the way to judgment about its good works. It replies that it gave alms, shared bread, sustained orphans and widows, clothed the naked, and released the prisoner (cf. Matthew 25:31-46).	100-101	541-542	294-295
GL 3:23	The prison warden is told to torment the wicked until the Great Life sits in judgment, and the wicked come to be questioned.	105	548	268
GL 3:24	The redeemer, a soul of radiance, enters Sheol (Hell) and commands the warden to open the gate for the imprisoned souls. The sinners (adulterers, thieves, sorcerers, soothsayers, etc.) receive a recompense for their chains and are separated from the Place of Darkness for the Place of Light.	106	549	267-268
GL 3:25	The world is surrounded with a Wall of Iron like a Garland, with no breach in it. The redeemer converses with the soul in the Tibil, promising to make a bridge across the river, to be a guide past the flames of fire, to make a path over the high mountain, and to hack a breach in the iron wall.	107-108	550-551	268-269			553	392-394
GL 3:30	The great mana dwelt in the sea until wings were fashioned and he flew to the Place of Light.	111-112	557	269
GL 3:38	The soul protests the spirit's request to go with it to the scales, but is weighed and found perfect, and the spirit was joined to the soul.	117-118	566-567	269
GL 3:41	The soul complains about being cast into Tibil.	118	569					394
GL 3:42	The soul asks, “Who cast me into the Tibil, chained me, and clothed me in a coat of all colors and kinds?”	119-120	570	270		700	551

Section	Description	Pet	Lid	WF	EL	OB	GB	Haa
GL 3:43	The deceased Mandaean sleeps in death, interred in his sacral garment. Adam awakes, takes him by the palm of his right hand, and places a palm-branch in his hand. The soul shall draw near to the clouds of light on a course to the Place of Light.	120	571	270		700	551-552
GL 3:47	The mana (soul) is a crown cast down to the earth from the House of Life. Through the strength and illumination of the father, it is not led astray.	122	574-575	270-271				394-395
GL 3:48-50	Manda d-Hiia came to the help of the soul. He awakened it out of sleep, brought the seven into confusion, and drew it out of its physical, perishable garment to be clad in splendor.	123	576-577					376-378
GL 3:51	The soul comes from Tibil. An older description of the soul's journey through celestial places of detention.	124-128	578-582	182, 251-253			552-553
GL 3:53	The children of the departed souls worship Manda d-Hiia, the great healer.	127	583	271
GL 3:56	The Seven attempt to block the way of the ascending soul, who raises his eyes to the Great Life. The son of Life opened the doors, revealed himself as the firmament was split, clothed the soul with light, and bestowed a wreath of radiance.	130	586	271-272
GL 3:57	The soul was led astray by earthly baubles, but if its sins are removed it will rise. If not, it will suffer a second death.	132	588	272
GL 3:58-59	The soul abandons its body and speaks to it. The Envoys of Life say, "Come, come, thou Pearl fetched out of the Treasure of Life," urging it to ascend to the Place of Light.	133-134	589-590					386-388
GL 3:61	The four stages or emanations of the Pleroma.	136	594	157

Exoteric Texts

Text Name	Description	English Publication Reference
Qulasta (Liturgies, The Canonical Prayerbook of the Mandaean)	“The main collection is called Qulasta (originally ‘Hymns of Praise,’ then ‘Collection of Writings’) and includes over 400 texts... In addition..., other important parts are: Sidra d-Nismata (‘The Book of Souls’), containing liturgies for the masbuta , and then hymns and prayers for the masiqta —among the prayers, we should recall Asut Malkia (‘The Greeting of/to the Kings’), a prayer for everyday purification; Rhamia (everyday prayers); Abahutan Qadmaia (‘Our First Fathers’), and then prayers for weddings, for ordaining priests... and so forth” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 54).	E. S. Drower, Prayerbook . English translations of passages from this work have also been included in W. Barnstone et al., Gnostic , pp. 561-565; W. Barnstone, Other ; R. Haardt, Gnosis ; G. R. S. Mead, Mandaeen John-Book ; K. Rudolph, Coptic . A German translation of a less complete version of the liturgies was published in 1920 (M. Lidzbarski, Liturgien).
Drasia d-Iahia (The Book/Words of John) or Drasia d-Malkia (The Book/Words of the Kings)	Seen as an exemplar of a true Mandaean, “John the Baptist has given name to this book, which was probably compiled in order to give the Muslims a reason to view the Mandaeans as owners of a prophetic book. But it is not only a book about John, for it contains extensive passages dealing with cosmogony and cosmology, similar to those in Ginza [e.g., chapter 13]” (J. O. Ryen, Mandaeen Vine , p. 45). The book contains seventy-six chapters, with stories of John (and Jesus, the “false Messiah”) being contained in chapters 18-33. A brief summary of Mandaean teachings about the life of John is also found in GR 2:1:151-153 (see E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 225). Allegorical pieces describe the Good Shepherd (chapters 11-12), the Fisher of Souls (chapters 36-39), and the Treasury of Life (chapter 57). Chapter 76 is “devoted to the conflict between two saviors, one Christian and one Mandaean, in Jerusalem” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 246). Chapters 14-17 recount the prayers of Shum bar Nu (Shem, the son of Noah) and the comfort he receives as he leaves the world. The “Legend of Mirai” (chapters 34-35) tells the story of a young woman in Jerusalem, a daughter of the kings, who disobeys her father and mother and converts to Mandaism. She becomes an example of faithfulness in the face of oppression. The origin of the legend is debated, but Lupieri sees it “in the reworking of Christian legends on the adolescent Mary in the temple, placed on trial by the Judaic authorities since she was found to be pregnant and therefore considered unworthy” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 220; see M. Barker, Infancy Gospel of James , 1:13-16, pp. 156-157).	Lidzbark’s German edition remains the best full translation of this work (M. Lidzbarski, Johannesbuch). Israel’s sectarian translation of the full English text attempts to correct what are taken to be “offending alterations” of the original text (e.g., disparaging references to Jesus Christ), but with only minimal editorial justification and with little or no critical apparatus (D. A. Israel, Secret Teachings). Mead’s 1924 edition of selections from chapters 11-13, 18-39, 47, and 57 is the best translation of these chapters in English (G. R. S. Mead, Mandaeen John-Book). An English version of “Hibil’s Lament” (chapter 55) can be found in W. Barnstone et al., Gnostic , p. 555-560, and a translation and commentary on chapter 76 is given in E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , pp. 246-250. Passages from the Book of John have also been included in W. Barnstone, Other ; R. Haardt, Gnosis ; E. Lupieri, Mandaeans ; Y. Nasrai, John ; K. Rudolph, Coptic .
Haran Gauaita (Inner Haran)	“This writing can be read as a mixture of history and myth, telling the story of the Mandaeans’ exodus from Jerusalem [under King Artaban] via Haran to Babylonia and the settlement in the land of the two rivers” (J. O. Ryen, Mandaeen Vine , p. 45). The story includes a valuable account of the coming of Islam and Arab occupation, and continues the story to the end of the world.	E. S. Drower, Haran , pp. 3-23

Esoteric Texts

Text Name	Description	English Publication Reference
Sarh d-Qabin d-Sislam Rba (Explanation of the Marriage of Sislam the Great)	“This contains the marriage ritual. Sislam Rba (Sislam the Great) is a quite recent figure in the Mandaean pantheon and is the celestial model of the Mandaean priest. Some of the prayers here are said aloud at the marriage of the priests. There is also a calendar with the propitious and unpropitious times for the wedding indicated” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 56). Though the texts of this and similar Mandaean ritual commentaries are linguistically “younger,” Buckley argues that they offer information of great antiquity (J. J. Buckley, Mandaeans , p. 97).	E. S. Drower, Marriage of Sislam
Sarh d-Trasa d-Taga d-Sislam Rba (Explanation of the Coronation of Sislam the Great)	“This contains primarily the ritual for the ordination of a ganzibra and its (esoteric) explanation” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 56).	E. S. Drower, Coronation of Sislam

Text Name	Description	English Publication Reference
Sarh d-paruanaiia (Explanation of the Parwanaia)	This manuscript concerns the Mandaean feast paruanaiia (= five), so named because it falls on the five days of the year that fall outside the twelve thirty-day months (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 19; J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine , p. 46).	Published in German translation (B. Burtea, Magischer Text ; B. Burtea, d-paruanaiia).
Alp Trisar Suialia (The Thousand and Twelve Questions)	“The manuscript contains a treatise of the same title where in the form of question and answer among celestial beings the cult and the rituals are esoterically interpreted. This is followed by Tapsir Pagra (Explanation of the Body), a fragmentary text containing speculations on the correspondence between the microcosm (the human body) and the macrocosm (the universe). Then there is ‘Blow and Cure,’ a short treatise on purification (the ‘cure’) for ritual impurities (the ‘blows’)” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , pp. 56-57).	E. S. Drower, Thousand . The book is out-of-print and very difficult to find. A passage on the proper use of the girdle or waistband (1:2:250) is included in E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , pp. 211-212. “The Head Is One World” (1:2:217-226) can be found in W. Barnstone, Other , pp. 138-140.
Alma Risaia Rba (First Great World, Macrocosm) and Alma Risaia Zuta (First Small World, Microcosm)	“There are speculations on the relation between the macrocosm and the microcosm. ARR provides the esoteric explanation of the masiqta , while in ARZ Hibil Ziua explains the dukrana [= commemoration or remembrance of the dead]. The manuscript contains interesting colophons” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 57).	E. S. Drower, Nasorean
Diuan d-Masbuta d-Hibil Ziua (The Book of the Baptism of Hibil Ziua)	“The text explains how a contaminated priest can purify himself (analogous to what Hibil Ziua had to perform having descended into the darkness in prehistoric times). The manuscript contains interesting colophons” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 57).	E. S. Drower, Haran , p. 24-96
Diuan Abatur (The Book of Abatur)	“The scroll, with a wealth of illustrations, describes the journey of the soul across the matarata , the celestial purgatorial houses. The Abatur referred to in the title is the ‘Abatur of the balances,’ the judge of the otherworld. The text is relatively recent but is perhaps the oldest known in Europe since a copy was sent to Rome by Ignatius of Jesus around 1650 (and is now preserved in the Vatican Library)” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 57I).	E. S. Drower, Abatur
Diuan d-Nahrauata (The Book of the Rivers)	“The text is a kind of geographical atlas with the religious and symbolic geography of the celestial world (and of Lower Mesopotamia, of which the celestial world is in some ways a projection). There are illustrations of canals, rivers, springs, trees, and hills. There is also Jerusalem and the temple, represented, respectively, by a rectangle and a circle (the scribe is thinking of the ‘dome of the temple’) and both placed on the Euphrates-Splendor (Pras Ziua)” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 58).	The only translation is in German (K. Rudolph, Flüsse).
Diuan Malkuta 'Laita (The Book of Exalted Kingship)	“This text contains a detailed description of a part of the initiation ritual for the Mandaean priest, the tarmida ” (E. Lupieri, Mandaeans , p. 58). It also contains “interesting references to the hymns of The Canonical Prayerbook , and interpretations of these” (J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine , pp. 46-47).	J. J. Buckley, Exalted Kingship
Spar Maluasias (The Book of the Zodiacal Signs)	“This book contains material of very composite nature, including determinations of the astrological number (hidden name) of the new-born child; medical prescriptions in connection with different illnesses; and prophecies of the coming year based on star constellations” (J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine , p. 47).	E. S. Drower, Zodiac
Magical Texts	“Texts of this kind are written on small tablets, leaden scrolls, amulets, and vases” (J. O. Ryen, Mandaean Vine).	See, e.g., A. Caquot, Phylactère ; E. S. Drower, Shafia ; E. S. Drower, Phylacteries ; E. S. Drower, Black Magic ; E. S. Drower, Phylactery ; C. Müller-Kessler, Amulet ; E. M. Yamauchi, Incantation .

Manichaean Texts

Mirecki gives the following succinct overview of Manichaeism:

Manichaeism was one of the major world religions and the only such religion to align itself closely with late antiquity's Near Eastern Gnostic tradition. Previously considered by Western scholars to be a Christian heresy, Manichaeism is now properly understood in the context of third-century Mesopotamian religions. The religion was founded by the Iranian prophet Mani (216-277 CE), who deliberately created a universal and propagandistic religion that incorporates Christian, Zoroastrian, and Buddhist concepts. Whether Manichaeism is properly designated as Gnostic, as Hans Jonas and others have suggested, is being debated by scholars. The religion moved east toward India and west into the Roman Empire already in Mani's lifetime, reaching as far west as Algiers and southern Europe and as far east as Central Asia and southeast coastal China, where traces of the religion datable to the early seventeenth century can be identified.²⁰⁷

Life and Mission of Mani

According to the Cologne Mani Codex (CMC),²⁰⁸ Mani was raised among a group of adherents to the teachings of Elchasai:

Elchasai [was] a Jewish-Christian prophet who apparently lived during the early part of the second century CE and whose doctrines are otherwise known to us only from the hostile reports of Christian and Muslim heresiologists. These accounts depict Elchasai as a Jewish visionary who was the recipient of a "heavenly book" ultimately derived from the revelatory activity of two gigantic beings, identified as the Son of God (or "angel" or "Great King") and the Holy Spirit. According to the Christian accounts, this book prescribes a firm adherence to Jewish law, supplemented with a rigorous program of repetitive ablutions which are to atone for the recurrent defilements of daily life.²⁰⁹ Followers of the teachings of Elchasai and/or his book are termed Helkesaites or Elchaseans and are placed by the Church Fathers in Palestine, Syria, and the Transjordan, particularly around the region of the Dead Sea. The geographical distribution of these communities, coupled with certain observable similarities between the ritual customs of the Elchasaites and those of the earlier Second Temple Jewish sect of the Essenes as described by Josephus and Philo, have led some scholars to posit a genetic connection between these sects....

Mani recounts his growing dissatisfaction with an eventual opposition to the teachings revered by the Elchasaites. His discontent was fueled by a series of "revelations" which he claimed to have received from a heavenly messenger. When the Elchasaites discovered that he was undermining the community on the basis of these "revelations," they summoned him before their Sanhedrin and expelled him from their midst. Mani thereupon began his travels for the purpose of propagating his "revelations."²¹⁰

Zoroaster does not figure in Mani's series of prophetic "revealers" at this stage of his life... One therefore concludes that the extent of Zoroastrian influence upon the young Mani has been overrated. The new textual evidence which has appeared over the last twenty years supplies a valuable corrective to earlier expositions of Mani's thought. These texts indicate that heterodox 207 P. Mirecki, Manichaean Introduction, p. 569. In 2004, Gardner and Lieu were astonished to find evidence of a continuing Mani cult in a village in the Fujian province of China (I. Gardner et al., Living).

208 R. Cameron et al., CMC.

209 Compare rites with a similar function described in Annotated Bibliography, Mandaean Texts, p. 867.

210 J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore, pp. 2, 207-208.

Jewish thought, particularly that embodied in Enochic literature, was a powerful stimulus in the formulation of Mani's theology.²¹¹

Although it was said by Titus of Bostra that Mani attributed “the Old Testament fully and completely to the archons of Hyle [i.e., the princes of darkness],”²¹² the biblical patriarchs Adam, Seth, Enosh, Enoch, Noah, Shem, and possibly Abraham²¹³ were honored as prophetic predecessors to Mani, “the Paraclete of truth” and “the seal of the prophets.”²¹⁴ The stories of these prophets recounted in Manichaean literature, however, are not given “in their biblical guise” but rather in “an expanded and embellished form of these stories that we find in earlier Jewish pseudepigraphic works and rabbinic haggadic traditions.”²¹⁵

While these earlier prophets [were seen by Mani as having] experienced some personal success in the promulgation of the teachings among their generations, their message was [said to have been] inevitably corrupted and distorted by its subsequent faulty (and in some cases deliberately falsified) transmission. The disciples and followers of each preceding apostle were overwhelmingly incompetent (and in some cases deceitful) custodians of the divine message. The results of their literary labors, whether well- or ill-intentioned, were the canonical scriptures of the ancestral religions: i.e., Judaism, Christianity, Zoroastrianism, and Buddhism... Herein lies... the basic reason for the Manichaean disparagement of earlier canonical scriptures.²¹⁶

Heavenly Ascent in Manichaeism

The most essential of the “key credentials” governing inclusion in the line of Manichaean prophetic succession is a written account of “an ascent-experience.”²¹⁷ Accordingly, as a prologue to the biography of Mani in the CMC, the figures of Adam, Seth, Enosh, Shem, and Enoch are each introduced by a citation purportedly excerpted from an apocalyptic “visionary experience” where “each seer is transported to heaven and views certain sights or is made privy to certain secrets” in a manner that suggests a close affinity both to the later Jewish genre of Hekhalot, and to earlier strands of what seems to be Merkabah mysticism in the teachings of Elchasai.²¹⁸ Mani, of course, also claimed to be adept at the practice of heavenly ascent.²¹⁹

The symbolism of heavenly ascent was incorporated into Manichaean scripture and ritual. The “descent of the First Man from the land of light,” his redemption, and his return to the kingdom was a “favorite theme,” and was “in a very real sense the story of each soul.”²²⁰ The Kephalaia speaks of “five lessons” (38, 5) that were successively bestowed upon the First Man as he took his leave from the gods, the angels, and the Mother of Life.²²¹ Later, “when he ascended from the war, he came in to the kingdom of the household of his people by these [same] five mysteries,” performing each of them anew as he was “brought upward out from the struggle” (39:7-11; 39,21). Likewise each disciple will perform these five things in the church, and “the last of these things shall be bequeathed upon them from the right hand

211 Ibid., p. 209.

212 Cited in J. C. Reeves, Manichaean Literature, p. 173.

213 See Endnote B-12, p. 906.

214 J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore, p. 4 n. 4; J. C. Reeves, Manichaean Literature, p. 174; J. C. Reeves, Heralds, pp. 7-15. See Endnote B-13, p. 906.

215 See Endnote B-14, p. 906.

216 J. C. Reeves, Manichaean Literature, pp. 174-175.

217 J. C. Reeves, Heralds, p. 16.

218 J. C. Reeves, Manichaean Literature, pp. 176-178.

219 Ibid., pp. 178-181.

220 I. Gardner, Kephalaia, p. 42.

221 Cf. Excursus 51: The Five Lost Things of the Temple, p. 658.

of charity” (41,5). In recapitulating the experiences of Adam, these ritual acts also prefigure the actions that Manichaean disciples will perform after death when, “[a]t the time of their coming forth... the angel who holds the victory prize extends to him the right hand. And it draws him out of the abyss of his body, and accepts him in with the kiss and love. That soul shall make obeisance to its redeemer” (41,11; 41,17-21). He “shall be perfected and increased... in the household of the living ones, with the gods and the angels and all the apostles and the chosen. And he receives the crown [...] glory in the life for ever” (41,22-25).²²²

Hegemonius “tells how this ‘Living Spirit’ descends to the ‘Door,’ extends her right hand to the candidate, and draws him back into the Light; ‘on this account, the Manichaeans, if they meet each other, give their right hands as a sign of having been saved from the Darkness.’”²²³

Overview of Manichaean Stories about Adam and Eve and the Creation

The Manichaean scheme embraced not only such rituals as the above, but also “a highly complex historical drama of supracosmic proportions in which humanity’s past origin, present predicament, and future possibilities are described,” as summarized by Mirecki.²²⁴

In the past time there existed two eternal principles, one all good and the other all evil. The good principle exists exclusively within the kingdom of light and finds its focus in the father of greatness, whose fourfold majesty embraces divinity, light, power, and goodness. His throne is surrounded by at least 156 peace-loving entities: twelve aeons (or eternal realms, in three groups of four each) and 144 aeons of aeons. The kingdom of light is constructed of five elements or stoichea (air, wind, light, water, and fire) and contains five peaceful “dwellings” (intelligence, knowledge, reason, thought, and deliberation). (In Manichaeism many things are given in five, even the five trees of paradise reminiscent of the Gospel of Thomas 19.²²⁵) The evil principle and the kingdom of darkness are the complete antitheses of the good principle and the kingdom of light. The many monstrous and agitated inhabitants of the kingdom of darkness are ruled by five evil archons (demon, lion, eagle, fish, and dragon), who are in constant opposition to each other and who, collectively, make up the hellish prince of darkness. They are sexually preoccupied and controlled by their passions, and they dwell in an ominous netherworld of smoke, fire, wind, water, and darkness. The two kingdoms are completely distinct yet eternally coexistent.²²⁶

The “present time” begins when the evil inhabitants of the kingdom of darkness [launch a full-scale invasion of] the kingdom of light in a lustful desire to mingle with the light... The father of greatness responds by evoking a series of entities who may need to be sacrificed to the invaders so as to satisfy them and stop the assault. The first evocation is the mother of life, who then evokes the primal man, who fights the incoming forces of darkness but loses his battle. The five evil archons (who constitute the prince of darkness) then consume some of the light elements of the primal man’s armor. Having unwittingly fallen into the trap of the father of greatness, they are now dependent on the light for their continued existence. The primal man awakes from his sleep of forgetfulness, remembers his divine origins, and prays for his rescue. The father of greatness responds by evoking a series of beings who initiate the rescue of the primal man... The living spirit cries out from the kingdom of light into the darkness to the primal man, who answers. The cry and answer (representing the divine word of salvation and 222 I. Gardner, Kephalaia, 9, pp. 43-46; cf. J. K. Elliott, Pearl; E. Hennecke et al., NT Apocrypha, 2:498-504; M. R. James, Apocryphal, pp. 411-415. See Commentary 1:25-c, p. 60; Figure 6-14, p. 473; Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations, Dexiosis, p. 681; the Mandaean Texts section of the Annotated Bibliography, p. 870; Figure B-1, p. 872. See Endnote 1-22, p. 79.

223 J. E. Seach, Ancient Texts 1995, p. 886, citing Acta Archelai 7, 4-5.

224 P. Mirecki, Manichaean Introduction, pp. 575-578.

225 H. Koester et al., Thomas, 19, p. 128.

226 See Endnote B-15, p. 906.

the positive human response) are hypostasized, that is, they become divine beings who ascend to the kingdom of light. The living spirit then grasps the primal man by the hand and rescues him from the kingdom of darkness.

The rest of the drama in the “present time” focuses on the work of the father of greatness to regain all of the light particles swallowed by the five evil archons... [The creation of the universe, the earth, plants, and animals is described as a complicated affair of emanation and sexual generation.] The sum total of all these precious light particles trapped in deadly matter, including plants and animals, is called the suffering Jesus (Jesus patibilis), who is on the light cross (crux luminus).

The prince of darkness, in an attempt to frustrate the cosmic distillation of light particles, gives birth to the two evil demons, Sakla (Ashqulan) and Nebroel (Namrael)... The two demons copulate, then Nebroel gives birth to exact miniature replicas (the “image of God” of Genesis 1:26-27) of the confused light-matter macrocosm: Adam and Eve. In a typically Gnostic “inverted exegesis” of Genesis 1-5..., the sexually oriented evil creator can create only by copulation and birth, and so can create only matter (which is inherently evil). He is unable to create in the manner of the father of greatness, by asexually evoking pure spiritual entities. Consequently, Adam (representing humanity) is specifically designed by the evil creator in his own image²²⁷ to procreate sexually.²²⁸ Thus, Adam can only continue the evil cycle of birth, copulation, and rebirth, and in so doing he fulfills his natural evil inclination to “be fruitful and multiply.”²²⁹ Adam’s evil material nature (representing human sexuality) thus entangles the precious light particles, transmitted through male seed, in potentially endless generations of material bodies (representing human history²³⁰).

But Adam is ignorant of the light within him and his true origin in the kingdom of light and so is unable to recognize and redeem the light particles. The evocations of the father of greatness then send Jesus of light to awaken Adam²³¹ to inform him of his true nature²³² and to lead him to self-recognition.²³³ Jesus of light helps Adam eat of the salvific tree of life,²³⁴ warns him of the dangers of sexual procreation with Eve, and so encourages a sexually abstinent lifestyle (the ideal model of behavior in Manichaean ethics). Then Eve and a male archon copulate, and Eve gives birth to Cain,²³⁵ who then copulates with his mother Eve, who gives birth to Abel,²³⁶ and so begins the incestuous interaction of Cain²³⁷ and Abel with Eve and with each other’s daughters borne by Eve.²³⁸ Eve then receives magical knowledge from an evil archon, which enables her to copulate with ascetic Adam. She succeeds in her desire and bears Seth,²³⁹ who, as the first true son of Adam,²⁴⁰ contains a significantly larger amount of light particles than the other offspring of Eve. The ascetic Adam and Seth, self-conscious particles of light entrapped in innately evil material bodies, become the exemplary human figures for Manichaean ethics.²⁴¹

The “future time” is the third and final act of the historical cosmic drama, and it provides for Manichaean ethics a preview into the system of reward and punishment. The final and great

227 Moses 2:26.

228 Moses 2:27-28.

229 Moses 2:28; 5:2.

230 See Moses 6:1-22.

231 I.e., the serpent (Moses 4:5).

232 Moses 4:10-11.

233 Moses 4:13, 17, 28.

234 Moses 4:28.

235 Moses 5:16.

236 Moses 5:17.

237 Ibid.

238 Moses 5:42.

239 Moses 6:2.

240 Moses 6:10-11.

241 Moses 6:3-23.

war will break out among the unenlightened powers of darkness when the distillation of light particles from the material cosmos has neared its completion. Jesus will return at a decisive eschatological moment as the great king and will judge humanity and the infernal powers. The elect will become angels, the auditors will be judged righteous, and the sinners will be cast into hell with the sexually promiscuous woman Eve and her hellish offspring. The cosmos will disintegrate and burn in a conflagration for 1,468 years. The remaining light particles will be gathered and finally return by ascent to the kingdom of light, while the prince of darkness and his diabolical minions will be cast into a bottomless pit permanently sealed with a huge stone for all eternity. The two principles of light and darkness will again be two separate and distinct entities, never again to commingle.

A Manichaean Version of the Creation and Fall of Man

The following passage, with the heading title of “The Beginning of Sexual Reproduction According to the Teaching of Mani,” is found in the Kitab al-Fehrest, the most famous work of the tenth-century Persian Muslim author Abu’l-Faraj Muhammad bin Ishaq al-Nadim:²⁴²

He (Mani) said, “Then one of those archons, the stars, urgent force, desire, lust, and sin had sexual intercourse, and the result of their intercourse was the first man, who was Adam. That which produced this (was the union of) two archons, male and female. Then intercourse took place once more, and its result was the beautiful woman, who was Eve.”

He (Mani) said, “When the five angels²⁴³ saw the divine Light and Goodness which Desire had plundered and bound as captive within those two who had been born, they asked al-Bashir (= the Messenger), the Mother of Life, Primal Man, and the Living Spirit to send to this first-born creature someone to release and deliver him, to teach him knowledge and piety, and to deliver him from the satans.”

He (Mani) said: “They thus sent Jesus, along with (another) deity. They approached the two archons, confined them, and rescued the two who had been born.”

He (Mani) said: “Then Jesus came and spoke to the one who had been born, who was Adam, and explained to him (about) the gardens (of Paradise), the deities, Gehenna [= hell], the satans, earth, heaven, sun, and moon. He also made him fear Eve, showing him how to suppress (desire) for her, and he forbade him to approach her, and made him fear to be near her, so that he did (what Jesus commanded). Then that (male) archon came back to his daughter, who was Eve, and lustfully had intercourse with her. He engendered with her a son, deformed in shape and possessing a red complexion, and his name was Cain, the Red Man.²⁴⁴ Then that son had intercourse with his mother, and engendered with her a son of white complexion, whose name was Abel, the White Man. Then Cain again had intercourse with his mother, and engendered with her two girls, one of whom was named Hakimat al-Dahr²⁴⁵ and the other Ibnat al-Hirs.²⁴⁶ Then Cain took Ibnat al-Hirs as his wife and presented Hakimat al-Dahr to Abel, and he took her as his wife.”

He (Mani) said: “In Hakimat al-Dahr there was a residue of the Light of God and His Wisdom, but there was none of this (present) in Ibnat al-Hirs. Then one of the angels²⁴⁷ came to Hakimat al-Dahr and said to her, ‘Watch yourself, for you will give birth to two girls who will fulfill 242 English translation in J. C. Reeves, Genesis 2-4 from I. al-Nadim, Fihrist, 58.11-61.13. For a detailed commentary, see J. C. Reeves, Heralds, pp. 79-81, 100-104.

243 Presumably the five members of the Realm of Light (J. C. Reeves, Heralds, p. 100 n. 86).

244 Reeves notes an association with the tradition that Cain was conceived by intercourse of Eve with Satan, based on “creative exegesis” of Moses 5:1 (ibid., pp. 100-101 n. 89).

245 = Wise (One) of the Age, suggesting, perhaps, the figure of Sophia (ibid., p. 101 n. 92).

246 = Daughter of Greed (ibid., p. 101 n. 93).

247 “This does not seem to be an archon, and the episode possesses a distinct non-Manichaean flavor” (ibid., p. 102 n. 96).

the pleasure of God.' He had sexual intercourse with her and she gave birth because of him to two girls, and she named one of them (Rau)-Faryād and the other Bar-Faryād.²⁴⁸ When Abel learned of this, rage filled (him) and grief overcame him. He said to her, "From whom did you produce these two children? I think they are from Cain; it was he who consorted with you!" Although she described to him the form of the angel, he left her and came to his mother, Eve, and complained to her about what Cain had done. He said to her, "Have you heard what he did to my sister and wife?" When Cain learned this, he went to Abel and struck him with a rock, killing him. Then he took Hakimat al-Dahr for a wife."²⁴⁹

Mani said: "Then those archons and this *al-Sindid*²⁵⁰ and Eve were troubled at (the behavior) they saw (exhibited) by Cain. Al-Sindid then taught Eve magical syllables²⁵¹ in order that she might infatuate Adam.²⁵² She proceeded to act (by) presenting him with a garland from a flowering tree,²⁵³ and when Adam saw her, he lustfully united with her, and she became pregnant and gave birth to a handsome²⁵⁴ male child of radiant²⁵⁵ appearance. When al-Sindid learned about this, he was distressed and fell ill, and said to Eve, "This infant is not one of us; he is a stranger."²⁵⁶ Then she wished to kill him, but Adam seized him and said to Eve, "I will feed him cow's milk and the fruit of trees!"²⁵⁷ Thus taking him he departed. But al-Sindid sent the archons to carry off the trees and cattle, moving them away from Adam. When Adam saw this, he took the infant and encircled him within three rings. He pronounced over the first (ring) the name of the King of the Gardens, over the second the name of Primal Man, and over the third the name of the Living Spirit.²⁵⁸ He spoke to and implored God, may His name be glorified, saying, "Even though I have sinned before you, what offense has this infant committed?" Then one of the three (invoked deities) hurried (to Adam bearing) a crown of radiance, extending it in his hand to Adam. When al-Sindid and the archons saw this, they departed (and went) away."

He (Mani) said, "Then there appeared to Adam a tree called the lotus, and milk flowed from it, and he fed the boy with it. He named him (the boy) after its name, but sometime later he renamed him Shāthil (i.e., Seth).²⁵⁹ Then that al-Sindid declared enmity against Adam and those who were born,²⁶⁰ and said to Eve, 'Reveal (yourself) to Adam; perhaps you may restore him to 248 The names mean "Go for help" and "Bring help" (ibid., p. 102 n. 97).

249 Reeves notes parallels with the Jewish traditions about Cain's rivalry for Abel's wife, and of Lamech's suspicion of unfaithfulness of his wife, the mother of Noah, with the Watchers and Holy Ones (ibid., pp. 101-102 nn. 94, 99-101).

250 = Powerful one, mighty one (ibid., p. 102 n. 103).

251 Compare the Watchers' teachings about technology and beauty aids in 1 Enoch and in Gnostic writings (ibid., pp. 102-103 n. 104).

252 "Note that the archetypal Genesis narrative [Moses 3-5] has been inverted in its Manichaean analogue: the temptation and corruption of Adam now transpires after the story of Cain and Abel. Al-Sindid thus performs the role of the serpent in the original myth" (ibid., p. 103 n. 105).

253 Compare the story of the Tree of Knowledge (ibid., p. 103 n. 106).

254 Compare similar accounts of Seth's beautiful appearance (ibid., p. 103 n. 106; cf. Commentary 6:10-a, p. 482.)

255 On the feature of luminosity, see ibid., p. 103 n. 109 and Excursus 37: Traditions About the Role of Abel, p. 617.

256 Reeves sees an allusion to Moses 6:2 (ibid., p. 103 n. 110).

257 Reeves interprets this as Eve's desire to starve the child by refusing to feed him. In response, Adam acts to save the child (ibid., pp. 103-104 n. 111).

258 Note the progression: the first name associates the child with the prelapsarian innocence of the Garden, the second name with a mortal progenitor, and the third name with Deity. Reeves connects Adam's actions with a "curious invocation" preserved in Aramaic referring to "that seal with which Adam the protoplast sealed his son Seth, and he (i.e., Seth) was delivered from d[emons], devils, tormentors, and satans" (ibid., p. 104 n. 113).

259 "According to this traditions, the name 'Sethel'... derives from a midrashic transposition and manipulation of the consonantal phonemes of the child's original name 'Lotis'" (ibid., p. 104 n. 114).

260 In Moses 4:21, it is the Lord who foretells the enmity that will exist between Satan and the seed of the woman; here it is Satan who declares his enmity, echoing the words of the Qur'an: "Because [... Thou hast adjudged me to be erring], Iblis [= the Devil] declared, 'I will waylay Your servants as they walk on Your straight path, then spring upon them from the front and the rear, from their right and from their left....' 'Begone!' [God] said." (N. J. Dawood, Koran, 7:11-18, pp. 109-110; cf. 15:32-44; 17:61-63; 38:74-85; see also M. Herbert, Irish Apocrypha, p. 11; Commentary 4:21-a, p. 265).

us.' Then she made haste and seduced Adam, who lustfully united with her. When Shāthil saw him, he admonished and rebuked him (Adam), and said to him, 'Arise, let us go to the East, to the Light and Wisdom of God.'²⁶¹ So he left with him and resided there until he died and came to the Gardens (of Paradise). Then Shāthil with Rau-Faryād and Bar-Faryād and Hakimāt al-Dahr, their mother, practiced ê iddiqūt,²⁶² following one way and one path until the time of their deaths, but Eve, Cain, and Ibnat al-Hiris went to Gehenna."

Manichaean Literature

The primary literature on Manichaeism is a vast and complex collection of often fragmentary texts. BeDuhn describes the history of the gradual discovery of sources as follows:

Prior to the twentieth century, historical knowledge of Manichaeism depended entirely on the polemical accounts of its enemies. The reassessment of the entire history of Christianity compelled by the Protestant Reformation and the Enlightenment led to the first critical examinations of the most accessible of these sources, the heresiographical writings of Christian church leaders of the fourth to tenth centuries.²⁶³ The nineteenth century brought significant gains in access to sources; many new Patristic texts (Greek and Syriac) came to light from archives of Orthodox institutions in Greece and the Middle East,²⁶⁴ and Arabic sources heretofore unknown to the European academy revealed even more detailed accounts of the dead religion.²⁶⁵ A comparison of all these sources produced a rather sketchy general picture of the Manichaeans as a historical curiosity, seen entirely through the eyes of their religious rivals, Christian and Muslim.²⁶⁶

This situation changed dramatically with the 1904 announcement by F. W. K. Müller that he had succeeded in deciphering texts brought back from East Turkestan by a German exploratory expedition, and found them to have Manichaean contents. The heap of highly fragmentary Manichaean literature and art eventually retrieved from the region of Turfan by several expeditions remains the largest and most important known source of information on the religion... New discoveries of Manichaean texts continue to be made in the Turfan region to this day.

Shortly after the initial Turfan discoveries, British and French expeditions found Chinese and Turkic Manichaean texts farther to the east at Tun-huang. The Tun-huang Turkic finds are rather meager compared with the four Chinese rolls which have proven to be extraordinarily important and rich sources of information... The combination of the Turfan and Tun-huang discoveries permitted the first synthetic studies of Manichaeism based on primary sources, and gave birth to modern Manichaean studies.²⁶⁷

It was not long before the nascent field became the beneficiary of another major wellspring: a small collection of Manichaean books came to light in Egypt in 1929. Eventually traced back to an ancient village in the Fayum district, the Medinet Madi library, written in Coptic, contained seven volumes: the Psalm-Book, the Homilies, the Chapters in two volumes (Kephalaia I and Kephalaia II), the Readings (Synaxeis), the Letters, and the History... Tragically, ... [t]he Letters and History volumes vanished after [World War II]... [The surviving volumes are housed in the 261 "A reflex of [Moses 4:31], wherein Adam and Eve are involuntarily expelled from the Garden. Here, by contrast, Adam and Seth voluntarily separate themselves from further temptation" (J. C. Reeves, Heralds, p. 104 n. 116).

262 I.e., the teachings of Manichaeism (ibid., p. 104 n. 118).

263 E.g., Augustine, Epiphanius of Salamis (Panarion), Cyril of Jerusalem (Catecheses), Hegemonius (Acta Archelai), Titus of Bostra, Serapion of Thmuis, Alexander of Lycopolis.

264 E.g., Ephrem Syrus, Theodore bar Konai, and new manuscripts of Serapion of Thmuis and Titus of Bostra.

265 E.g., Ibn al-Nadim (Fihrist ul-ulum), al-Biruni (Athar-ul-Bakiya).

266 See Anti-Manichaean Texts below.

267 See Central Asian and Chinese Texts below.

Chester Beatty Library in Dublin, Ireland and in the State Museums of Berlin, Germany. A few leaves are in the national collections of Vienna and Warsaw...²⁶⁸

Two more Egyptian discoveries complete the history of the recovery of primary Manichaean documents. A tiny book acquired by the University of Cologne in the 1960s has achieved fame as the Cologne Mani Codex... This Greek book of uncertain provenance recounts the life of Mani and the early years of his religious activity... [To this was added the fragmentary Tebessa Codex.²⁶⁹] Then, only a few years ago, a joint Australian-Canadian archaeological expedition working in the Dakhleh Oasis of Egypt uncovered a new cache of Manichaean documents. This rather heterogeneous assortment of material from ancient Kellis is still in the earliest phase of assessment²⁷⁰...²⁷¹

For general works on Manichaeism, see J. D. BeDuhn, Manichaean Body; M. Tardieu, Manichéisme; M. Tardieu, Manichaeism. Gardner and Lieu have assembled a useful collection of sources in the Christian Roman Empire (I. Gardner et al., Manichaean). Additional valuable perspectives and collections include M. Heuser et al., Literature and Art; P. Mirecki et al., Emerging; P. Mirecki et al., Light. For comprehensive bibliographies of primary Manichaean texts, see F. de Blois et al., Dictionary 2; D. Durkin-Meisterernst, Dictionary 3; S. N. C. Lieu, Dictionary 1; G. Mikkelsen, Bibliography; G. Mikkelsen, Dictionary 4. Lieu has provided a good overview of current sources and scholarly perspectives (S. N. C. Lieu, Manichaeism). Note that field of Manichaean studies is rapidly evolving, so catalogues of sources become outdated quickly.

Anti-Manichaean Texts

R. Haardt, Gnosis contains is a good collection of relevant excerpts from the works of Theodore bar Konai,²⁷² Augustine,²⁷³ the Bishop of Alexandria,²⁷⁴ Alexander of Lycopolis,²⁷⁵ and Hegemonius.²⁷⁶ The writings of Evodius against the Manichaeans are excerpted in W. Barnstone, Other, p. 687ff. Two excerpts from a writing of Mani, The Book of Secrets or Mysteries, are quoted by al-Biruni. The fragment relates the immortality of souls and asks about their fate.²⁷⁷

In the chapter concerning the reign of Shapur Zu'l Aktaf, Ferdowsi's 11th century "Book of Kings" (Shahnameh) relates the story of the visit of Mani to the king.²⁷⁸ The king listened politely to the "eloquent... prophet and... painter," but was "troubled by his words." He then invited the chief priest of the "ancient faith of Zoroaster" to speak with him. Confounded by the priest's condemnation of his "trust in images," Mani was "ignominiously dragged from the court" before being "flayed" and "stuffed with straw." His corpse was hung from the city gates "and men flung dirt" on it.²⁷⁹

268 P. Mirecki, Manichaean Introduction, p. 574. See Medina Madi Texts below.

269 See Greek and Latin Texts below.

270 See Kellis Texts below.

271 J. D. BeDuhn, Manichaean Body, pp. 2-4.

272 Pp. 289-295; see also T. bar Konai, Impure Doctrine.

273 Pp. 295-301, 330-334, 341-49. See also Augustine, Fortunatum; W. Barnstone, Other, pp. 675-686.

274 Pp. 335-336.

275 Pp. 336-339.

276 Pp. 339-341. See also the more recent translation and commentary in Hegemonius, Acta.

277 E. Hennecke et al., Manichaean Gospel.

278 A. Ferdowsi, Shahnama, pp. 597-598.

279 See Endnote B-17, p. 907.

Reeves has assembled a collection of English translations of Manichaean Adam traditions from Theodore bar Konai, Ibn al-Nadim, the discourse about Gehmurd (i.e., Adam) and Murdiyanag (i.e., Eve), and fragments from Sundermann.²⁸⁰

Central Asian and Chinese Texts

Turfan. The “Turfan fragments (many of which could not be conserved) are the disintegrated remains of what were once high-quality illuminated manuscripts that had suffered mutilation under Muslim conquerors. The texts are written in several Central Asian languages, and they are now conserved in the collection of the German Academy of Sciences in Berlin.”²⁸¹ In 2006, all previously published and some additional Hymns to the Living Soul in the Berlin Collection were newly edited.²⁸²

Though included in several descriptions of the Manichaean canon²⁸³ and in citations by hostile heresiologists, no versions of this The Book of Giants were available until Henning published newly discovered fragments in 1943. Later, several fragments of a related work were identified among the Qumran manuscripts.²⁸⁴ In his comprehensive study of the manuscript evidence, Reeves concluded that this foundational work of Manichaean cosmogony is indebted in important respects to Jewish exegetical traditions relating to Genesis 6:1-4.²⁸⁵

Dunhuang. Sir Aurel Stein and Chinese scholars “discovered the remains of a large hoard of Buddhist and Manichaean manuscripts in the Temple of the Thousand Buddhas of Tunhuang (east-southeast of Turfan). Stein recovered a long Manichaean confessional text entitled Confessional for the Hearers (Confessional Mirror for Auditors).²⁸⁶ Also discovered were three Manichaean texts translated into Chinese from Iranian-language originals, including the Treatise on Cosmogony and Its Implications for the Everyday Life of Manichaeans ([Ts’an Ching,] now conserved in Beijing), the Hymn Scroll (now in London), and the Compendium of the Teaching of Mani, the Buddha of Light (now in London and Paris).²⁸⁷

The Compendium was the work of a Manichaean priest who, in 731, depicted Manichaeism as a form of Buddhism and Mani as an avatar of Lao-tzu, the traditional founder of Taosim. “Lao-tzu was then believed by many Chinese not to have died but had gone to West where he reappeared as the Buddha. The response of the T’ang government to the Compendium was the law of 731, which permitted the practice of the religion by foreigners in China but banned its preaching to the Chinese.”²⁸⁸ The first four parts of the Compendium were translated into English and published by Haloun and Henning in 1952.²⁸⁹ The last two parts were earlier published in French by Chavannes and Pelliot.²⁹⁰ In 1990, these two parts were finally brought together in a single French edition by Tajadod.²⁹¹

280 J. C. Reeves, Heralds, pp. 79-88.

281 P. Mirecki, Manichaean Introduction, p. 572.

282 D. Durkin-Meisterernst, Hymns.

283 E.g., Homilies 25:2-5, Psalm-Book 46:21-47:4, Kephalaia 5:22-26.

284 1Q23, 6Q8, 4QEnG1a, 4QEnG1b, 4QEnG1c, and possibly others.

285 J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore.

286 See excerpt in R. Haardt, Gnosis, pp. 327-329.

287 P. Mirecki, Manichaean Introduction, pp. 572-573.

288 S. N. C. Lieu, Manichaeism in China.

289 G. Haloun et al., Compendium.

290 É. Chavannes et al., Traité Manichéen.

291 N. Tajadod, Mani.

“Western scholars are now informed of the numerous recent discoveries of Manichaean archaeological sites, artifacts, and texts in Central Asia and China through the works of S. N. C. Lieu and Geng Shimin.”²⁹²

Medinet Madi Texts

Text Name	Description	English Publication Reference
Psalms (Chester Beatty Library Codex A, Papyrus Chester Beatty Mani 3 and 4)	“The first part of this codex was acquired by Beatty from the Cairo dealer Maurice Nahman in 1931 [Herakleides Psalms], the second [Berna Psalms] in 1930” (J. M. Robinson, Madi Codices).	Allberry’s 1938 English translation of part 2 of the psalm-book has become difficult to find (C. R. C. A. Allberry, Psalm-Book). A more recent facsimile edition of the first part of the Psalms and a German translation of the second part is currently available (S. Richter, Herakleides-Psalmen ; G. Wurst, Berna-Psalmen). Villey has published a translation and commentary of part 2 of the psalm-book in French (A. Villey, Psaumes). English translations of excerpts of the Psalms can be found in R. Haardt, Gnosis , pp. 301-324.
Synaxeis (=assembly) of the Living Gospel (The Readings, Chester Beatty Library Codex B, Papyrus Chester Beatty Mani 5)	“This codex was acquired by Beatty from a Fayyumic dealer in 1930 (except for 31 residual leaves that Schmidt acquired in 1931 — [Berlin] P 15995)” (J. M. Robinson, Madi Codices). “It appears to be a commentary (?) on the Living Gospel , a canonical work of Mani” (S. N. C. Lieu, Manichaeism , p. 223).	The manuscript remains unpublished. See P. Mirecki, Synaxeis Codex .
Volume Two of the Kephalaia (Kephalaia of the Wisdom of my Lord Mani, Chester Beatty Library Codex C, Papyrus Chester Beatty Mani 1)	“This [codex] was acquired by Beatty... prior to... the Spring of 1931” (J. M. Robinson, Madi Codices). “The relationship between the two Kephalaia has... been open to debate. However, ...it appears that the Dublin [Beatty] codex can best be regarded as simply a continuation of the Berlin one” (I. Gardner et al., Manichaean , p. 38 n. 58).	Volume Two of the Kephalaia remains unpublished.
Volume One of the Kephalaia (Kephalaia of the Teacher, Berlin Papyrus Collection, P 15996)	“This codex was acquired by Schmidt from Nahman in 1930. Most of the leaves were conserved in Ibscher and edited by Polotsky and Alexander Böhlig and published in fascicles, a first volume through p. 244, line 20 by 1940. Böhlig published through p. 291 in 1966, and p. 292 in 1985. Remains of three unpublished leaves had been acquired by Prof. Grohmann of Prague for the Austrian National Library, where they are still extant. There are five unpublished Berlin leaves in Warsaw, where they were brought after having been lost in transit between Berlin and Leningrad in 1946. Together with leaves in Berlin there are 85 to 93 extant unpublished leaves (170 to 186 pages). Wolf-Peter Funk is preparing a critical edition. Transcriptions and translations by Polotsky located at the Academy of Sciences in Berlin, at the Griffith Institute of the Ashmolean Museum in Oxford, and at the Chester Beatty Library in Dublin have been put by Polotsky at Funk’s disposal for the critical edition” (J. M. Robinson, Madi Codices).	I. Gardner, Kephalaia . An English translation of Kephalaion 41 is published in R. Haardt, Gnosis , pp. 325-327.

292 P. Mirecki, Manichaean Introduction, p. 573. See, e.g., S. N. C. Lieu, Manichaeism in China.

Text Name	Description	English Publication Reference
Homilies and Varia (Chester Beatty Library Codex D, Papyrus Chester Beatty Mani 2)	“The bulk of this codex was acquired from Nahman with an option to buy by Beatty in 1930, but he released it to Carl Schmidt for Berlin in 1932 (P 15999). It was not considered conservable, but was put on display as a show piece of how impossible this task was. The unconserved book block is thought to have been among the materials stored in the bunker at the Zoo train station, taken from there to the Soviet Command Post at the castle Friedrichsfelde in 1945-1946, and from there to Leningrad in 1946, though it was not found when the material was returned to Berlin in 1958. A smaller part of the codex was acquired by Beatty in 1931, conserved by Ibscher, edited by Polotsky, and published in 1934. A facsimile edition of the codex has been published by Giversen in 1987” (J. M. Robinson, Madi Codices).	N. A. Pedersen, Homilies
Acts (Acta Codex, The History, Berlin Papyrus Collection, P 15997)	According to Lieu, this is “a historical work which gave a life of Mani and the early history of the sect” (S. N. C. Lieu, Manichaeism , p. 223). “This codex, with its covers (which were photographed and published), was sold by a provincial dealer to Nahman, who sold it to Schmidt in 1931. One leaf that Ibscher conserved was returned to London, moved with the library to Dublin, and was included in the material put on deposit on Copenhagen. Giversen published it in facsimile in 1987. There are 7 or 8 unpublished leaves still in Berlin. Part of one unpublished leaf may be at the Institute for Papyrology of Warsaw University. The unconserved book block and wooden covers did not return from Leningrad to Berlin in 1958. None of the leaves of this codex have been published” (J. M. Robinson, Madi Codices).
Letters (Epistles of Mani, Berlin Papyrus Collection, P 15998)	“This codex was also sold by the provincial dealer to Nahman, who sold it to Schmidt in 1931. There are six unpublished leaves that were returned from Leningrad to Berlin in 1958 and three unpublished leaves in the National Museum in Warsaw. There are also fifteen leaves among those that lay half-conserved in the Ibscher home throughout the war that may belong to this codex. The book block did not return from Leningrad to Berlin in 1958. None of the leaves of this codex have been published” (J. M. Robinson, Madi Codices).	Gardner and Funk are finishing preparations for publication of the reconstructed remains of the Berlin codex of the Letters . See I. Gardner, Reconstruction .

Greek and Latin Texts

Dated by some scholars to the late fourth century and by others to the seventh century,²⁹³ the Cologne Mani Codex (CMC) purports to be an account of the childhood and early missionary journeys of Mani. It is a Greek translation of a lost Syriac text. The title found in the text On the Origin of His Body “may be so named because of its concern for the life and body of Mani, or it may be given its title in reference to the [body of the] Manichaean church.”²⁹⁴ In an earlier Aramaic form, portions of the text may go back to Mani himself. The work is 192 pages long and is divided in five chiastically-arranged sections:

The first section (pp. 2-14), telling of Mani from years four to twelve, comes from three different sources and provides two full-fledged conversion accounts. The fifth section (pp. 116-192), meanwhile, contains a long but extremely fragmentary itinerary of Mani’s first missionary journey. Most emphatically Gnostic is the second section (pp. 14-72)... Accounts of Mani’s separation from the Baptists, his call to be a missionary, and instructions for the foundation of Manichaeism as a world religion, all in dialogue form, comprise the fourth section (pp. 99-116). Finally, the midsection (pp. 72-99)... features the dramatic break with the Baptists.”²⁹⁵

293 S. N. C. Lieu, Manichaeism, p. 224.

294 P. Mirecki, Origin, p. 581. See Endnote B-18, p. 907.

295 R. Cameron et al., CMC, p. 3.

Thus far only the first three sections of the CMC (pp. 1-99) have appeared complete in English translation,²⁹⁶ though extensive excerpts from the entire work have been published by Gardner.²⁹⁷ A critical edition of the text and a partial commentary (pp. 1-120) is available in German translation.²⁹⁸ A critical edition and commentary in German for pp. 121-192 of the codex was published in 1994.²⁹⁹ Of interest to students of Genesis is the extensive commentary by Reeves on the apocalypses of Adam, Sethel (Seth), Enosh, Shem, and Enoch found in section two of the codex (pp. 48-60).³⁰⁰

An additional Manichaean text in Latin has been preserved, which Mirecki describes as follows:

A fragmentary Manichaean parchment codex, the Tebessa Codex, was discovered in a cave near Theveste, Algeria, in 1918 and placed in the National Library of Paris. Only twenty-five damaged leaves and the slight remains of four others are preserved from this codex, with each page originally carrying two columns of Latin text. The extant text contains two sections: an apologetic discussion on the relationship between the two major groups in the Manichaean church, the elect and the auditors, with allusions to and quotations of relevant canonical gospel texts; and a discussion in which the unknown Manichaean author defends the “nonwork ethic” of the Manichaean elect (who had their practical needs met by the auditors), apparently as an apologetic response to Christian charges that the messenger Paul had clearly condemned such dependent lifestyles in 2 Thessalonians 3:10.³⁰¹

Kellis Texts

Iain Gardner has provisionally categorized the Kellis texts as follows:

- fragments of two Coptic codices containing canonical works (Epistles?) by Mani
- a Coptic Manichaean doctrinal text on a wooden board
- Greek and Coptic Manichaean psalms, prayers, and liturgical texts on papyrus and wooden boards with significant parallels to the Coptic Psalm-Book texts from Medinet Madi
- two Coptic-Syriac glossaries of Manichaean technical terms on two wooden boards and a Greek-Syriac glossary (?) on vellum
- two Greek Manichaean amulets (miniatures)
- a Coptic codex leaf containing Romans 2:6-29 (Dialect I) and fragments of a Greek codex containing traditions similar to the Acts of John
- four miscellaneous literary fragments in Greek and Coptic (possibly Manichaean)
- many Greek and Coptic documentary texts, mostly letters, some of which are clearly Manichaean.³⁰²

296 R. Cameron et al., CMC.

297 I. Gardner et al., Manichaean, pp. 47-73.

298 L. Koenen et al., Mani-Kodex.

299 C. E. Römer, Mani-Kodex 121-192.

300 J. C. Reeves, Heralds.

301 P. Mirecki, Manichaean Introduction, pp. 573-574. An English translation appears in J. D. BeDuhn et al., Tebessa.

302 Cited P. Mirecki et al., Spell, p. 2.

Mirecki suggests: “The texts may indicate that the earliest form of Christianity to enter the Oasis was in fact Manichaeism portraying itself as a type of Christianity.”³⁰³ Lieu adds that because this branch of Mani’s followers was located “in a corner of the Empire where it was free from religious persecution (pagan or Christian), the sect was able to perceive itself as the true followers of Christ, as presented by Mani.”³⁰⁴

Three volumes of original Coptic, Greek and Syriac papyri relating to the Manichaean community at Kellis have been published,³⁰⁵ and one more is in preparation. A letter containing a magical spell has been translated,³⁰⁶ and an interim progress report with an overview of findings at Kellis through the mid-1990s has been written by Gardner.³⁰⁷

303 P. Mirecki, Manichaean Introduction, pp. 574-575.

304 S. N. C. Lieu, Manichaeism, p. 224. See also I. Gardner et al., Manichaean, pp. 43-45, 272-278.

305 I. Gardner, KL 1; I. Gardner et al., CDT 1; I. Gardner, KL 2.

306 P. Mirecki et al., Spell.

307 I. Gardner, Progress Report.

Islamic Texts

LDS views toward Islam have been highly favorable. Early Church leaders such as Elders George Q. Cannon,³⁰⁸ B. H. Roberts,³⁰⁹ and Orson F. Whitney³¹⁰ have all spoken of Muhammad's positive influence on those who have been influenced by his life and teachings. More recently, Elder Boyd K. Packer noted that "Church members and Muslims share similar high standards of decency, temperance, and morality. We have so much in common."³¹¹ On February 15, 1978, the First Presidency issued a statement entitled "God's Love for All Mankind," which reads in part:

The great religious leaders of the world such as Muhammad, Confucius, and the Reformers, as well as philosophers including Socrates, Plato, and others, received a portion of God's light. Moral truths were given to them by God to enlighten whole nations and to bring a higher level of understanding to individuals.³¹²

The Qur'an

The Noble Qur'an (al-Qur'an al-Karim), as it is frequently described, is the primary text of Islam, proclaiming the oneness of God³¹³ and the mission of His Prophet Muhammad. According to traditional accounts,³¹⁴ it was revealed by the angel Gabriel³¹⁵ beginning in 610 CE and later written down and organized into an official recension within two decades after Muhammad's death in 632 CE.³¹⁶ Qur'an means "recitation," from Muhammad's account of how he was commanded by the angel Gabriel to "Recite!"³¹⁷

According to many Muslim scholars, the Qur'an was taken from the "Preserved Tablet"³¹⁸ in Paradise and brought down to the earthly heavens during the "Night of Fate"³¹⁹ during the month of Ramadan. From there the Qur'an was revealed to the Prophet Muhammad in intervals, so that he could memorize it, and because different parts of the Qur'an were addressed to specific circumstances occurring in the life of the Prophet Muhammad.³²⁰

Though it presents itself as a confirming continuity of revelation given in Jewish and Christian scripture,³²¹ the Qur'an powerfully asserts its "overriding pre-eminence, its utter finality. With this revelation, God has completed his salvific sequencing of prophets and messengers. The words spoken to Muhammad, the 'seal of the prophets,' constitute God's 308 G. Q. Cannon, Truth, 1:308-310.

309 B. H. Roberts, Comprehensiveness, p. 67; B. H. Roberts, Spirit of Gospel, p. 138; B. H. Roberts, The Truth, pp. 140-142, 152.

310 O. F. Whitney, Thoughts, 36, p. 478.

311 B. K. Packer, Bridges, p. 7. See D. Q. Cannon et al., Nation, pp. 438-442; A. H. Green, Islam; H. W. Hunter, Alike, 4 February 1979, p. 74; B. K. Packer, Bridges; S. J. Palmer, Mormons and Muslims; D. C. Peterson, Abraham; J. A. Toronto, Islam, pp. 234-238 for discussions of doctrinal affinities and historical trends in the relationship between the LDS Church and Islam. For an overview of the history and status of relations and interactions between Islam, Judaism, and Christianity, see R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:360-364; G. D. Newby, Muslims; A. Shihab, Bridges. See also Excursus 47: Islamic Perspectives Relating to Redemption, p. 645.

312 S. W. Kimball et al., God's Love; S. J. Palmer, Expanding, p. v; cf. Qur'an 2:62, 5:48, 10:47, 40:78.

313 .See Endnote B-20, p. 907.

314 See Endnote B-21, p. 907.

315 See Endnote B-22, p. 907.

316 Some variant codices are extant and in use today (B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, p. 5).

317 Qur'an 96:1.

318 Qur'an 85:21-22.

319 Qur'an 97:1.

320 B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, pp. 3-4.

321 E.g., Qur'an 2:136, 3:3, 4:136, 5:46, 9:111, 12:111, 46:12.

full and final guidance for humankind.”³²² Like the Doctrine and Covenants, each surah (= section or chapter) of the Qurʾan constitutes an independent record of divine instruction, echoing and extending previous revelations rather than providing a continuous narrative of events.³²³

Although the Qurʾan has appeared in many translations, the eloquent poetry of the Arabic version retains a unique status because for Muslims it contains the verbatim record of the words of God.³²⁴ See D. C. Peterson, Understanding the Qurʾan for an insightful perspective on the role of language in the Qurʾan and the book’s unique place in Islam. For readers desiring a more in-depth treatment of the background and context of the Qurʾan, McAuliffe’s edited volume is highly recommended.³²⁵ A useful overview of English translations can be found in K. Mohammed, Translations. A valuable study of sayings of Muhammad reported as first-person words of God but not included in the Qurʾan (hadith qudsi = divine saying) was made by Graham.³²⁶ Zilio-Grandi, Paradise provides an overview of the Garden of Eden in the Qurʾan and in Islamic exegetical tradition.

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
English Translations of the Qurʾan
The Holy Qurʾan with English Translation and Commentary	1917-1951	A competent though somewhat dated translation with an extensive commentary. Unfortunately, the translation is marred by the sectarian Ahmadi bias against miracles.	M. M. Ali, Qurʾan .
The Holy Qurʾan: Arabic Text, English Translation and Commentary	1934	Until recently, this was the most popular version of the Qurʾan among English-speaking Muslims.	A. A. Y. Ali, Qurʾan .
The Koran Interpreted	1955	Arberry is more successful than other translators in conveying the fluency and literary beauty of the Qurʾan .	A. J. Arberry, Koran
The Qurʾan: A New Translation	2004	An English translation that rivals Arberry’s in clarity and fluency.	M. A. S. A. Haleem, Qurʾan
The Qurʾan	2007	English translation by a renowned Oxford scholar that attempts to preserve the quality of the Qurʾan ’s originally oral character.	A. Jones, Qurʾan

Sunnah (Sirah and Hadith)

Although the words of the Qurʾan provide the foundation of divine guidance for Muslims, stories about the sayings and doings of the Prophet provide the believer with “concrete examples” to emulate, drawn from “a life that was human yet completely immersed in the sacred.”³²⁷ The term used for the sum of these traditions is Sunnah [= the trodden path, customary procedure, precedent].³²⁸ The Sunnah “includes... [the] specific words and actions and practices of which [Muhammad] approved among earlier Arab traditions and so allowed to continue among Muslims. He thereby Islamicized these practices although they were of pre-Islamic origin.”³²⁹

322 J. D. McAuliffe, Introduction, p. 4; cf. T. Khalidi, Muslim Jesus, p. 20.

323 H. Bloom, Genius, p. 146.

324 Qurʾan 12:2.

325 J. D. McAuliffe, Companion. See also R. Allen, Introduction, pp. 52-64; A. K. Brohi, Spiritual Significance; R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:562-568; S. H. Nasr, Qurʾan; G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia, s. v. Qurʾan, pp. 178-180; B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, pp. 1-14.

326 W. A. Graham, Divine.

327 See F. M. Denny, Islam for a discussion of the distinctive roles and differing values of the Qurʾan and the Sunnah in Islam.

328 R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:666-669.

329 S. H. Nasr, Sunnah, p. 97.

The biographical sirah (= course, road, way) literature collects the earliest stories about Muhammad and early Muslims.³³⁰ The hadith (= speech, report) literature, second only to the Qur'an in importance and authority, is comprised of systematic collections of early Islamic sayings whose trustworthiness has been qualified by careful documentation of chains of transmission (isnad = support) connecting the stories of later authorities to their origin in earlier reports by the Companions and Followers of Muhammad.³³¹ The most authoritative of these reports are called sahih (= true, sound, genuine).³³² Many of these reports describe the circumstances of the revelation of particular surahs, or background information relating to them. The hadith reports are seen as normative, in contrast to the sirah, which is written in a narrative genre.³³³

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Sirah and Hadith (Biography and Traditions about Muhammad and early Muslims)
Sirat Rasul Allāh (Life of Allāh's Messenger) or Sirah al-Nabi or Sirat Nabawiyya (Life of the Prophet)	Before 833	The most well-known ancient sirah is that of Muhammad ibn Ishaq (704-767) (G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 91), whose no-longer-extant biography of Muhammad survives in the abridged version of ibn Hisham (d. 833) (ibid. , p. 90), which left out "things which it is disgraceful to discuss; matters which would distress certain people; and such reports as al-Bakka'i told me he could not accept as trustworthy" (M. Ibn Ishaq ibn Yasar, Sirat Rasul , p. 691). Much of this omitted material no doubt was of extra-Islamic (i.e., Judeo-Christian) origin, part of a literature that had been subject to increasing distrust during this period (M. Ibn Ishaq ibn Yasar, Making , pp. 8-14).	The last two parts of ibn Ishaq's work, Kitab al-Mabath (The Book of the Sending Forth) and Kitab al-Maghazi (The Book of Military Campaigns), containing the biography of Muhammad proper, are published in M. Ibn Ishaq ibn Yasar, Sirat Rasul . Al-Tabari's history of Muhammad relies heavily on the Sirat Rasul Allāh and contains the controversial episode of the Satanic Verses omitted in that work (al-Tabari, Creation). Peterson has written on Muhammad's life from the perspective of contemporary scholarship (D. C. Peterson, Muhammad (2001); D. C. Peterson, Muhammad (2007)). See also R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia , 2:478-485 for a good overview of modern biographical sources and perspectives.
Sahih al-Bukhari	846	Muhammad b. Isma'il al-Bukhari (810-870) (R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia , 1:114; G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 45) is said to have collected six hundred thousand hadith reports (M. Z. Siddiqi, Hadith , p. 93)—and tradition reports that he memorized two hundred thousand of these. His topical collection of 7563 traditions he deemed reliable is, despite its defects, generally regarded as the most authoritative work of its kind (M. Z. Siddiqi, Hadith , pp. 88, 96-97).	M. I. I. Bukhari, Sahih
Sahih al-Muslim	ca. 860	Abu al-Husayn Muslim (817-875) (R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia , 2:496; G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 160) assembled an early collection of 7190 hadith sayings reportedly selected from among 300,000 original accounts. Al-Muslim is seen as having been somewhat more careful than al-Bukhari in the documentation of sources and in other aspects of the "science of hadith " (M. Z. Siddiqi, Hadith , p. 100).	I. A.-H. Muslim, Sahih .

330 See Endnote B-24, p. 908.

331 M. Z. Siddiqi, Hadith. See Endnote B-25, p. 908.

332 M. Z. Siddiqi, Hadith, p. 192.

333 G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia, sirah, p. 195.

Tafsir

As helps in the task of interpretation, thousands of Qur'anic commentaries (tafsir = to explain) have been written, of which only a tiny fraction can be listed below.³³⁴ Strictly speaking, since the only official version of the Qur'an is in Arabic, all translations are regarded as tafsir.³³⁵ Differences in interpretation and emphasis in the commentaries and other Islamic literature will sometimes reflect the specific religious orientation of the author (e.g., Sunnism,³³⁶ Shi'ism,³³⁷ Sufism,³³⁸ Salafism,³³⁹ Wahhabism,³⁴⁰ Ahmadism (Qadiyanis and Lahoris).³⁴¹ For an overview of the different traditions of Qur'anic interpretation, see J. D. McAuliffe, Interpretation.

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Tafsir (Qur'anic Commentary)
Jami' al-bayan 'an ta'wil ay al-Qur'an (The Comprehensive Clarification of the Interpretation of the Verses of the Qur'an)	Before 923	Masterfully organized and with exquisite judgment both in his own opinions and in the selection of supporting sources, al-Tabari's (839-923) (R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia , 2:671; G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 199) multivolume commentary is one of the most widely-used in the Muslim world.	A French monograph on this commentary is available (C. Gilliot, Tabari). Excerpts from al-Tabari's commentary are sometimes included in English translations of the Qur'an .
Al-Kashshaf an Haqa'iq al-Tanzil (The Revealer of the Truth of Revelation)	Before 1144	Combining traditions with theological, grammatical, and lexicographical exegesis, az-Zamakhshari's (1075-1144) (G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 216) commentary is especially prized in Sunni communities.	A one-volume overview of the life and Qur'anic commentary of az-Zamakhshari has been published (J. A. al-Zamakhshari, Kathaf).
Al-Jami' li-Ahkam al-Qur'an (The Compendium of Legal Rulings of the Qur'an)	Before 1272	Less-interested in isnad than content, al-Qurtubi (d. 1272) (G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 180) emphasizes the legal and practical aspects of the Qur'an for daily Muslim life in his twenty-volume commentary. He also provides valuable commentary on the isra'iliyyat .	A series publishing an abridged English translation of al-Qurtubi's tafsir was initiated in 2003 (A. al-Qurtubi, Tafsir).
Tafsir an-Nasafi	Before ca. 1300	Nasafi's (d. ca. 1300 CE) commentary on the Qur'an is written from a Sufi perspective.	See A. Nasafi et al., Aziz for an in-depth study of Nasafi's works.
Muqaddima fi usul al-tafsir (An Introductory Essay on the Principles of Interpretation)	Before 1328	The controversial ibn Taymiyya's (1263-1328) (G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , pp. 94-95) writings are considered heretical by most Muslims but are revered by adherents of Salafism/Wahhabism, strict movements of Islam that predominate in Saudi Arabia and Qatar. Of particular interest is his insistence on faithfulness to the words of the text in his interpretation of the Qur'an , including anthropomorphic descriptions of Deity.	Ibn Taymiyya did not author a complete Tafsir , however his writings have been influential in Qur'anic interpretation. See J. D. McAuliffe, Ibn Taymiyya .
Tafsir Ibn Kathir or Tafsir al-Qur'an al-Azim	Before 1373	This comprehensive Sunni commentary of ibn Kathir (ca. 1300-1373) (G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 91) is highly valued because of its extensive use of authoritative hadith to explain the meaning of the text, his incorporation of non-Muslim sources, and his evaluation of opinions from earlier scholars.	See I. Ibn Kathir, Tafsir . Note that this ten-volume edition has been abridged in order to ensure that hadith viewed as "weak" by the editors are excluded.

334 R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:672-674.

335 G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia, s. v. Qur'an, p. 179.

336 A.-R. I. Doi, Sunnism.

337 S. H. M. Jafri, Shi'ism. Specific groups within Shi'ism include the dominant branch of the Imamis (Twelvers) (R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:624-628), as well as the Zaydis (Fivers) (ibid., 2:629-630), and the Khoja and Bohra Isma'ilis (ibid., 2:628-629; A. Nanji, Isma'ilism). For a chart summarizing the relationships among individuals and groups associated with these branches, see T. Ansary, Destiny, p. 359.

338 A. B. S. Ed-Din, Sufism.

339 R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:608-610.

340 B. Lewis, Crisis, pp. 103-116; R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:727-729.

341 R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 1:30-32. See Endnote B-26, p. 908.

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Fi zilal al-Qur'an (In the Shade of the Qur'an)	Before 1966	Called the "Philosopher of Islamic Terror" in a 2003 New York Times Magazine article, the brilliant activist Sayyid Qutb (1906-1966) (R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia , 2:568-569; G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 181) became the leading intellectual for the Muslim Brothers (al-Ikhwan al-Muslimun), and eventually was executed by hanging. His commentary was written during his long years of imprisonment in Egypt and reflects his unswerving commitment to reform and revitalization of Islam according to an explicit social and political agenda (B. Lewis, Crisis , pp. 65-69; J. D. McAuliffe, Interpretation , pp. 199-200). Like other fundamentalists who have "little regard for traditional modes of systematic exegesis," Qutb "denies the established Islamic tradition that jihad is a defensive act of war, and determines that jihad is incumbent upon all Muslims as they abolish corrupt political and religious regimes." Thus Qutb can be seen as a forerunner to Usama bin Ladin (R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia , 1:208-209), who "also bypasses the traditional understanding of jihad by reinterpreting the definition of a defensive attack to include the mere occupancy of sacred Muslim lands by foreign powers, or the sheer presence of anti-Islamic values in those lands, such as promiscuity or usury" (R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia , 2:674; cf. P. L. Bergen, Osama , pp. 18-20; R. Ibrahim, Reader ; B. Lewis, Crisis , pp. 117-146).	S. Qutb, Shade .
Al-Mizan fi l-tafsir al-Qur'an (The Balance in the Interpretation of the Qur'an)	1972	The highly-respected 20 th -century Shi'ah commentator at-Tabataba'i (1892-1981) (G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 199) grouped consecutive verses together as a means of improved contextual interpretation. His most important method was to interpret the Qur'an by the Qur'an itself.	Only the first twelve volumes, corresponding to the first six of twenty volumes in the original publication, are currently available in English (A. at-Tabataba'i, Al-Mizan).
Tafhim al-Qur'an (Towards Understanding the Qur'an)	Before 1979	Written by the prolific Pakistani scholar and political activist Abu l-A'la Maududi (1903-1979) (R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia , 2:443-444; G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 145), the Tafhim al-Qur'an is one of the most widely-read commentaries on the Qur'an . It includes a critique of non-Islamic ideologies and argues that the adoption of Islamic principles by all peoples would lead to an ideal society that would transcend nationalism. Critics have questioned the inventive nature of some of the Qur'anic explanations.	S. A. A. I. Maududi, Understanding . A one-volume abridged version is also available from the same publisher.
The Qur'an and Its Interpreters	1992	"Ayoub provides an accurate and clear translation of the Qur'an along with copious translations from Arabic of Muslim exegesis on almost every verse" (B. M. Wheeler, Prophets , p. 364). Ayoub has also been an important figure in the dialogue between Islam and Christianity (M. M. Ayoub, View ; M. M. Ayoub, Redemption).	The work is incomplete (surahs 1-3), with only two volumes published to date (M. M. Ayoub, Qur'an (Vol. 1) and Qur'an (Vol. 2)). Ayoub's translation and commentary on surahs 78-114 appears in M. M. Ayoub, Awesome .

Qisas al-Anbiya and Ta'rikh

Passages in the Qur'an typically do not explain but rather "presuppose knowledge of the Jewish and Christian scriptural and exegetical tradition."³⁴² This made certain parts of the Qur'an unintelligible to many new Muslims during Islam's early centuries of rapid expansion among peoples who did not share these earlier traditions. A demand naturally arose for more detailed information, encouraging the development of what became known as the isra'iliyyat literature (= Judaica).³⁴³

Within this literature, the Stories of the Prophets (Qisas al-Anbiya) contain highly-prized accounts of the lives of the "former prophets" who preceded Muhammad. What makes these stories interesting from the point of view of modern scholarship is that most of them “were not taken directly from the Old and New Testaments, rather their source was the basically oral interpretations of the stories of biblical characters which has been termed ‘religious folklore.’”³⁴⁴ Many of these stories can also be found in the ta’rikh (= history) literature. Although these prophetic tales often parallel or elaborate upon the plentiful texts in Jewish and Christian apocryphal, pseudepigraphic, and midrashic sources available in Arabia at the beginning of Islam,³⁴⁵ occasionally they seem to evidence knowledge of independent traditions going back to antiquity that do not appear elsewhere.³⁴⁶ This fact is not surprising to Muslims, given their belief that God’s messengers over the ages have been numerous: “Ibn Sa’d... reports that the total number of rasul [= messenger, a title generally used for prophets who brought forth a revealed book] is 315, and the total number of prophets [nabi = prophet in a more general sense] is 1000.³⁴⁷ The Qur’an mentions books revealed to Abraham, and specifies the Torah, Gospel, Psalms of David, and Qur’an as revealed books. A hadith report... states that books were [also] revealed to Adam, Seth, Idris,³⁴⁸ and Abraham.”³⁴⁹

³⁴² A. Rippin et al., Islam, p. 2.

³⁴³ G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia, isra'iliyyat, p. 108.

Scholars of hadith, following ibn Taymiyya,³⁵⁰ have attempted to resolve controversies about which of these traditions of Jewish or Christian origin should be accepted by classifying them according to whether they are definitely known to be true (or false) because Muhammad confirmed (or rejected) them, or whether their truth or falsity is unknown. Wheeler has assembled a useful collection of Qur’anic commentary concerning the prophets and messengers from Adam through Muhammad.³⁵¹ See also the volumes by Khalidi and Qa’im containing sayings and stories of Jesus taken from Islamic literature.³⁵²

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Qisas al-Anbiya (Stories of the Prophets), Isra’iliyyat (Judaica)
Sirat Rasul Allāh (Life of Allāh’s Messenger) or Sirah al-Nabi or Sirat Nabawiyya (Life of the Prophet)	Before 767	The first part of ibn Ishaq’s (704-767) (G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 91) biography of Muhammad, the Kitab al-Mubtada (The Book of Beginnings) contains the stories of the prophets up to Muhammad. The text exists only in an edition by Newby reconstructed from secondary citations by later scholars.	M. Ibn Ishaq ibn Yasar, Making .
‘Ara’is Al-Majalis Fi Qisas Al-Anbiya’ (The Brides of Sessions about the Tales of the Prophets)	Before 1035	Al-Tha’labi’s detailed and diverse collection of stories evidences a scholar’s interest in the documentation of sources, including lengthy biblical citations. It “includes important materials not found in Tabari’s work but does not include some of the more fantastic elements found in the work of Kisa’i” (B. M. Wheeler, Prophets , p. 357).	A. al-Tha’labi, Lives .
Qisas al-Anbiya (Tales of the Prophets)	ca. 1000-1100	An otherwise unknown author with a keen sense of storytelling, Muhammad al-Kisai (G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 128) includes details that do not appear in other collections of these tales. His work contains relatively few references to the Qur’an and the hadith .	M. al-Kisa’i, Tales .
Qisas al-Anbiya (Tales of the Prophets)	Before 1373	Excerpted from ibn Kathir’s (ca. 1300-1373) (G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 91) Al-Bidayah wan-Nihayah (The Beginning and the End).	I. Ibn Kathir, Stories .
Qisas al-Anbiya (Tales of the Prophets)	ca. 1300-1400	A version of the prophetic stories from eastern Turkey.	N. B. al-Rabghuzi, Stories .

344 M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, p. xvii; see also S. M. Wasserstrom, Muslim Literature.

345 G. D. Newby, History.

346 .See Endnote B-27, p. 908.

347 T. Khalidi, Muslim Jesus, p. 8. Other Muslim sources list the total number of prophets as 224,000.

348 Alternate spellings include Esdras, Andreas, Emmeduranki, or Edoranchus/Euedorachus, but in all cases these names refer to Enoch (M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, p. 347 n. 72; Berossus, History). Some take the term to be derived from the Arabic dirasah = “studies” “because of his studies of the scriptures” (Suyuti, cited in B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, p. 46).

349 B. M. Wheeler, Prophets, p. 8; cf. M. al-Kisa’i, Tales, pp. 73-76; al-Tabari, Creation, 1:151-152, pp. 322-324.

350 J. D. McAuliffe, Ibn Taymiyya, p. 38.

351 B. M. Wheeler, Prophets. See Endnote B-28, p. 908.

352 T. Khalidi, Muslim Jesus; M. M. Qa’im, Jesus.

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Ta'rikh (History)
Ta'rikh al-Yaqubi (Ta'rikh ibn Wadiah)	d. 897	The work is in two parts. The first concerns pre-Islamic and non-Islamic peoples, including a version of stories of the prophets that seems to be dependent on the Syriac Cave of Treasures . The second part relates Islamic history up to 872.	An English translation of Yaqubi's stories of the prophets has been made by Reeves J. C. Reeves, al-Yaqubi
Ta'rikh al-rusul wa'l-muluk (History of the messengers and the kings)	Before 923	"The greatest and most influential Muslim writer of narrative history up to the tenth century is al-Tabari (839-923). His multivolume history is unsurpassed and lays the groundwork for further study in all four of the Muslim traditions" (B. M. Hauglid, Muslim Tradition , pp. 136-137. See also R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia , 2:671; G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia , p. 199). Comprehensive in scope, it contains not only history but also philosophy (e.g., an opening essay is entitled "What is time?") as well as a substantial collection of the stories of the prophets. A comparison with the work of al-Tha'labi and al-Kisa'i, however, shows "the difference between their approach and that of the historian" (al-Tabari, Creation , Foreword, p. 163).	al-Tabari, Creation .

Mystical Texts

Over the centuries, a variety of texts by mystical believers in Islam have appeared. Most of these writings are generally associated with Sufism (probably from suf = wool, referring to the woolen garment worn by Muslim ascetics³⁵³), a loosely-organized movement that developed in the 8th and 9th centuries as a reaction against what were seen as legalistic and worldly tendencies in the growing Muslim empire.³⁵⁴

Sufi writings focus on esoteric meanings (batin) within the Qur'an and the hadith reports, and practices designed to lead to mystical knowledge and the bliss of divine love obtained by direct communion with God.³⁵⁵ These practices are termed tariqah, the inner way, in contrast to the traditional Islamic emphasis on shari'ah, characterized by Sufis as the outer path—and observed with widely varying degrees of rigor by different Sufi groups.³⁵⁶ The roles of Adam and Satan, the struggle between good and evil, and the meaning of creation are important themes in Sufism³⁵⁷—indeed, Adam is seen as the first Sufi.³⁵⁸ The ideas of the Sufi movement have been historically and continue to be opposed by some groups within Islam, notably proponents of Salafism.

For a brief overview of Islamic mysticism, see W. C. Chittick, Mysticism. For more in-depth views including the social and political dimensions of Sufism, see C. W. Ernst, Sufism; C. W. Ernst, Between; A. Schimmel, Mystical. An overview of the various loosely-organized Sufi "orders" (tariqah) can be found in R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:680-684 and A. Schimmel, Mystical, pp. 228-258.

Text Name	Date	Description	Publication Reference
Mystical Texts
The Mother of Books (Umm al-kitab)	Late 8 th century	Not to be confused with the Qur'an , which has an identical nickname, this ghulat (= "exaggerator" or "extremist") text centers around the meaning of creation, essentially presenting "a gnostic mythological account in Shi'ite form" (W. Barnstone et al., Gnostic , p. 663).	Included in a collection within W. Barnstone et al., Mother .

353 Cf. M. al-Kisa'i, Tales, p. 68; al-Tabari, Creation, 1:123, p. 294.

354 V. Danner, Sufism.

355 J.-L. Michon, Sufism.

356 C. W. Ernst, Between, p. 116; A. Schimmel, Mystical, pp. 98-186.

357 A. Schimmel, Mystical, pp. 193-199.

358 Ibid., p. 16.

Endnotes

- B-1 Of course, as Nibley observes, no translation can adequately substitute for the original: “We do not study ancient languages in order to translate from them, but to read, ponder, savor, and, if possible, sound the depths of those things which cannot be translated but only tentatively paraphrased.”³⁵⁹
- B-2 These sections correspond to 72 threads of the sacred cord (kusti) worn as a girdle over an inner shirt of pure white (sudra) at all times by Zoroastrian men and women over the age of seven—recalling the 613 knots and strings on the Jewish talith corresponding to the laws of Moses. Sometimes the initiation ceremony (Navjote) is deliberately postponed until a later time, up to age 15, if the “child is not sufficiently intelligent to understand the ceremony and to know its responsibilities.”³⁶⁰ After a washing with water for purification, the “part of the child’s body, which is to be covered with the sacred shirt by the officiating priest, carries a sheet of cloth which can be easily removed” and the child is brought before the priest. As the priest invests the child with his sacred shirt and cord a prayer is repeated, praising God, confessing a spirit of repentance, and asking for protection from the Evil Spirit. A possible derivation of the word sudra is from the Arabic sdrh, i.e., “anything which covers or protect (the body).”³⁶¹

The symbolism of the clothing itself is explained by Modi:

White color is symbolic of innocence and purity, and, as such, is the symbol of the Mazdayasnian or Zoroastrian religion. It must be made up of two pieces of cloth sewn together on the sides, so that one seam may be on the right hand side, and the other on the left hand side, thus dividing the shirt into two parts, the front part and the back part. These two parts—the front and the back—are said to be symbolic of the past and the future, both related to each other through the present. The front part must remind a Zoroastrian of his duty to persons and institutions of the past ages. We owe a duty towards those who have gone before us—to our ancestors, our forefathers, our departed dear ones, all who have preceded us. We also owe a duty to our superiors, who have been in the front before us. The second or the back part of the shirt must remind us of our duty to the future—to our children, to future generations. It must also remind us of our duty to our inferiors who are still to rise to our position... The most important part of the shirt is the Giriban (lit. that which preserves the knot) which signifies loyalty to or faith in the religion. The Giriban is also called the kisseh-i kerfeh, i.e. the purse or the bag of righteousness. It is put up, in the form of a bag or a purse a little below the portion of the shirt which covers the part of the body below the throat. It indicates symbolically that a man has to be industrious and has not only to fill his bag or purse with money but has to fill it up with righteousness [i. e., “the merits of good thoughts, words, and deeds, and so be laying up treasure for himself in heaven”³⁶²]...

[T]he probable derivation [of the word kusti] seems to be kost (i.e., limit or boundary). Kusti then is that which keeps us, or reminds us to keep ourselves within proper limits or boundaries... The kusti, being prepared from the wool of a lamb, which is, in all ages, considered to be the emblem of innocence and purity, is held to be a badge reminding a Zoroastrian of the purity of life and action which he has always to observe.³⁶³

Russell concluded that the term k’ustik was a “popular archaic survival of Zoroastrianism” in writings of the 14th century Armenian Church, and compares its function to the priest’s girdle in the Roman Catholic Church.³⁶⁴

- B-3 The idea of the “castle” seems to combine the ideas of the ark of Noah and of the subterranean enclosure where, in a related tradition, Yima rules over the kingdom of the dead.³⁶⁵
- Nigosian offers a somewhat different amalgamation of the legends concerning Yima: “According to one legend, Yima had a golden reign of one thousand years during which he deprived the malevolent deities of their prosperity, and took away their power to inflict cold or heat, old age, death, or disease on their victims.”³⁶⁶ This golden age, however, did not last forever, because Yima sinned and human 359 H. W. Nibley, Greek, p. 112.

360 J. J. Modi, Navjote.

361 Ibid.

362 M. Boyce, Zoroastrians, p. 32.

363 J. J. Modi, Navjote.

364 J. R. Russell, K’ustik.

365 D. P. Müller, Yogananda, pp. 12–13, 95.

366 F. M. Müller, Yasna, 9:4–5, p. 232. See also F. M. Müller, Dinkard 5, 7, 7:1:20, p. 9.

beings lost their immortality.³⁶⁷ Then the wise father, Vivahvant, warned Yima to retreat underground as humanity was to be afflicted by winter. There Yima was to remain, together with his followers, until the signs foreshadowing the last days appeared—the worst being a winter more terrible than any the world had ever seen.³⁶⁸ Then Yima was to re-emerge and re-populate the devastated earth.³⁶⁹

According to another legend, Yima was the institutor of the bull-sacrifice, the ritualistic observance of which was believed to banish from the world disease, old age, and death.³⁷⁰ Russell notes the parallels between the creation account of the Bundahishn and Mithraism when, “[a]t the beginning of historical time, the evil spirit Ahriman attacks the newly-created universe and slays the primeval bull, the unique living animal...—and the abundance of all good creatures emerge from the corpse of this first victim of murder through a stratagem of the wise and good Creator, Ahura Mazda... Mithra himself does not slay any bull, but it was customary for Zoroastrians to sacrifice a sheep in recent times, and a bull in ancient times, on Mihragan, the feast dedicated to Mithra.”³⁷¹

B-4 Zoroastrianism, at least in its presumably later Zurvan form,³⁷² is really not a radical dualism, since the two opposite cosmic powers (Ahura Mazda and Angra Mainyu) were born of the same primordial divinity (Zurvan, “which signifies more than destiny itself or the original time”), with Ahura Mazda dominant through the four ages of the current world and a Savior (Saoshyant) who ultimately wins the eschatological war.³⁷³

B-5 The ongoing stewardship of the first man over all God’s creatures is expressed in the Pahlavi Dadistan-i Dinik: “One [of the three best] is the pure man, Gayomard, who was its first rational praiser; he in whose keeping was the whole creation of the sacred beings, from its beginning and immaturity unto the final completion of the worldly creatures.”³⁷⁴

B-6 Zoroastrian teachings about the four ages that conclude in the resurrection are summarized as follows: “Twelve thousand years are supposed to elapse between the first creation and the resurrection; during the first three (about 8400-5400 BCE) the creation remains undisturbed in a spiritual state, during the next three (5400-2400 BCE) the evil spirit appears, but flies back to hell in confusion, during the next three (2400 BCE-600 CE) he attacks the creation and keeps it in a constant state of tribulation, and during the last three (600-3600 CE) his power, having attained its maximum, is gradually weakened till it is finally destroyed at the resurrection.”³⁷⁵

B-7 Boyce further explains:

An essential element in [Yasna 30] is that the two primal Beings each made a deliberate choice (although each, it seems, according to his own proper nature) between good and evil, an act which prefigures the identical choice which every man must make for himself in this life. The exercise of choice changed the inherent antagonism between the two Spirits into an active one, which expressed itself, at a decision taken by Ahura Mazda, in creation and counter-creation, or, as the prophet put it, in the making of ‘life’ and ‘not life’ (that is, death); for Ahura Mazda knew in his wisdom that if he became Creator and fashioned this world, then the Hostile Spirit would attack it, because it was good, and would become a battleground for their two forces, and in the end he, God, would win the great struggle there and be able to destroy evil, and so achieve a universe which would be wholly good forever.³⁷⁶

B-8 Ginza recounts that a garment and a promise of ongoing assistance was also given to Adam at this time, as summarized by Nibley:

367 A. Ferdowsi, Shahnama, pp. 7-8; F. M. Müller, Yasts, 19:(7):35-36, 38, pp. 293-295.

368 F. M. Müller, Vendidad, 2:4-41, pp. 12-20.

369 F. M. Müller, Dinkard 5, 7, 7:9:4-5, p. 108. See also F. M. Müller, Bahman Yast, 3:55, p. 234.

370 S. A. Nigosian, Zoroastrian Faith, p. 19.

371 J. R. Russell, Mithraism, p. 648.

372 Y. Stoyanov, Other God, pp. 44ff.

373 L. Aflooraei, Dualism, p. 94.

374 F. M. Müller, Dadistan-i Dinik, 2:10, p. 13.

375 F. M. Müller, Pahlavi 2, p. 82 n. 1 re: 37:11. See F. M. Müller, Bahman Yast, 2:44, 2:52, 2:61-62, 3:1-63, pp. 208-209, 210, 213, 215-235; F. M. Müller, Bundahis, 1:18, 1:20, 1:22, 3:1, 34:1-9, pp. 7-9, 15, 149-151.

376 D. P. Miller, Yogananda, pp. 20-21.

...when Adam stood praying for light and knowledge, a helper came to him, gave him a garment, and told him, “Those men who gave you the garment will assist you throughout your life until you are ready to leave earth.”³⁷⁷

- B-9 Although Drower faithfully recorded “how modern priests celebrate the rite,” she notes that “they did not tell me the symbolic meaning of the actions they performed... I have sometimes wondered if they really knew.”³⁷⁸ Guénon confirms such happenings in the transmission of initiatory rites more generally.³⁷⁹ This is one reason why, as Nibley has explained, the study of the rites themselves should generally take priority over the explanations given for them:

Myths arise at attempts to explain ritual doings, whose meaning has been forgotten—“What mean these stones?”³⁸⁰ After much discussion back and forth, the consensus now emerges that it is the rites and ordinances that come first. This should have been clear from the outset, since myths and legends are innumerable while the rites and ordinances found throughout the world are surprisingly few and uniform, making it apparent that it is the stories that are invented—the rites are always there. Such indeed has always been the Latter-day Saint position. Adam first performed an ordinance and when asked to give an explanation of it replied that he knew of none ‘save the Lord commanded me.’³⁸¹ Then it was that the true explanation came forth from the mouth of a heavenly instructor.³⁸²

When the masbuta is performed on newborn children, “the child’s astrological name is pronounced and given. The name is ‘calculated’ beforehand by the priest, who presents the parents with a short list of names from which to choose. In fact, every Mandaean has four names, but this is the most secret and important one. It will hardly ever be told to a stranger, though it is the name used always (and almost exclusively) in religious rituals.”³⁸³

Similarly, Jewish children are also given a special name used in religious events, and “Moslems get a new name at Mecca that they must keep secret. This name is used when they approach Allah after death. Moslems return to Mecca in behalf of relatives who have died and did not have the chance to go to Mecca themselves. Living proxies may apparently get the new name for their relatives.”³⁸⁴

- B-10 The Conflict of Adam and Eve with Satan relates how Satan used a handclasp as part of a deception of Adam that involved his taking an oath.³⁸⁵

Then Adam said, “I know not how to swear and promise.” And Satan said to him, “Hold out thy hand, and put it inside my hand.” Then Adam held out his hand, and put it into Satan’s hand; when Satan said unto him, “Say, now—so true as God is living, rational, and speaking, who raised the heavens in the space, and established the earth upon the waters, and has created me out of the four elements, and out of the dust of the earth—I will not break my promise, nor renounce my word.” And Adam swore thus.³⁸⁶

- B-11 Lupieri comments:

The soul’s rise through the heavens [after death] is in itself a dangerous voyage because the heavens are inhabited by demons or evil beings. The various heavens are the site of the “houses of punish-377 H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, p. 299. The full German text in Lidzbarski’s translation reads: “Wie Adam dasteht und sich aufzuklären sucht, kam der Mann, sein Helfer. Der hohe Helfer kam zu ihm, der ihn in ein Stück reichen Glanzes hineinrug. Er sprach zu ihm: ‘Ziehe dein Gewand an, damit du in deinem eigenen Glanze feststehst’... Darauf öffnete Adam den Mund und sprach zu seinem Helfer: ‘Welche Kraft verleiht ihr mir in Fülle, daß ich dieses Gewand anziehe? Mit welcher Stütze stützt ihr mich in der Tibil, daß ich im hinfalligen Hause wohnen soll?’ Da erwidern sie ihm: ‘Deine Kraft ist die Kraft des großen (Lebens), deine Erleuchtung ist von ihrer Stätte her geschaffen. Die Männer, die dein Gewand geschaffen, dienen dir, bis du abscheidest.’” (M. Lidzbarski, Ginza, GL 2:19, p. 488).

378 E. S. Drower, Adam, p. 74.

379 R. Guénon, Symboles, p. 210.

380 See Joshua 4:6.

381 Moses 5:6.

382 H. W. Nibley, Myths, p. 42; cf. H. W. Nibley, Apocryphal, p. 320, H. W. Nibley, Greatness, pp. 294-295.

383 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, p. 17.

384 D. Rona, Revealed, p. 28.

385 See Commentary 1:25-c, p. 60; Figure 6-14, p. 473; Excursus 53: Comparative Explorations, Dexiosis, p. 681; the Mandaean Texts and Manichaean Texts sections of the Annotated Bibliography, pp. 870, 884; Figure B-1, p. 872. See Endnote 1-22, p. 79.

386 S. C. Malan, Adam and Eve, 1:70, pp. 85-86.

ment” or matarata, a sort of heavenly purgatory, in which those souls who do not have a pass constituted by the purity of their lives (in Mandaean observance) are imprisoned for various lengths of time, for purification through suffering. This is why on the first, third, seventh, and forty-fifth days after death ritual meals take place in which the soul of the departed supposedly takes part, and from which it draws strength.³⁸⁷

In this connection, Rudolph notes that: “Nearly all ceremonies, including even the wedding ritual, are in some way associated with a rite which has value for the souls of the dead.”³⁸⁸

- B-12 Jesus, Paul, Hermes Trismegistus, Plato, Zoroaster, and the Buddha were also included in this group, the latter two which some scholars say were added in an express design “to convey an imperialistic argument to the [Sassanian] king” who, according to Manichaean accounts, became a believer.³⁸⁹ At least one other notable—possibly Marcion, Bardasian and/or Elchasai—could also be listed in this group based on an elliptical reference in the Kephalaia.³⁹⁰ In what Reeves calls a “conscious syncretism,”³⁹¹ it seems that Manichaeism “did not hesitate to incorporate anything of possible utility for the advancement of its positions.”³⁹²

- B-13 Reeves comments:³⁹³

The epithet “seal of the prophets”... normally associated with the mission of Muhammad, is almost certainly of Manichaean origin and designates the teleological status of Mani within the chain of authentic messengers to humankind. The locution ‘seal’ is frequently employed in Manichaean ideology: e.g., the “Three Seals”... of mouth, hands, and heart (i.e., thought).³⁹⁴

Mani also claimed to be the Paraclete (= Greek parakletos, a consoler, comforter, or advocate) whose coming was foretold by Jesus.³⁹⁵ Some Muslims also see Muhammad,³⁹⁶ or a controversial messianic figure referred to as al-Mahdi (= Arabic “the Guided One”),³⁹⁷ as the subject of Jesus’ promise of a Paraclete: “And remember, Jesus, son of Mary, said: O Children of Israel, surely I am the messenger of Allah to you, verifying that which is before me of the Torah and giving the good news of a Messenger who will come after me, his name being Ahmad [i.e., the Praised One, taking the Greek paraclete to be a corruption of periklytos].³⁹⁸ But when he came to them with clear arguments, they said: This is clear enchantment.”³⁹⁹

- B-14 Reeves writes:

Comparative analysis of these five apocalypses will show that overall they have been artificially and secondarily fashioned by resourceful redactors who had access to reservoirs of authentic Jewish pseudepigraphic traditions. The purpose of such fabrication and manipulation of textual fragments is clear—to demonstrate that Mani... is an authentic link in the chain of “apostles.”⁴⁰⁰

- B-15 Reflecting these religious ideas about the opposition between good and evil, the term “Manichaean” has been increasingly adopted for use in ordinary conversation. In perhaps its first popular reference in recent years, the term was aptly employed in a 1966 essay by May criticizing the ideology of the “Radical Right,”⁴⁰¹ however its use in subsequent political discourse has been with widely varying degrees of erudition.⁴⁰² In some cases, it has been used to mean nothing more than contrasting binary categories (e.g., “Manichaean, and therefore simplistic, oppositions between the professor and the

387 E. Lupieri, Mandaeans, pp. 31-32.

388 In W. Foerster, Gnosis, p. 133.

389 J. C. Reeves, Heralds, p. 13.

390 I. Gardner, Kephalaia, 13:30-32, p. 19 and p. 19 n. 4; cf. J. C. Reeves, Manichaean Literature, pp. 174, 192 n. 7.

391 J. C. Reeves, Manichaean Literature, p. 1.

392 J. C. Reeves, Heralds, p. 13.

393 Ibid., p. 22 n. 27.

394 Homilies 13:27-28, cited in ibid., p. 22 n. 27.

395 J. C. Reeves, Heralds, p. 24 n. 47. See John 14:16-19, 26; 15:26, 16:7.

396 M. M. Ali, Qur'an, p. 1056 n. 2496; M. I. I. Bukhari, Sahih, 60:3:3340, 4:449, 451.

397 S. Bhimji, Al-Mahdi; S. H. M. Jafri, Shi'ism, pp. 161, 166, 167, 172, 173; R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:421; G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia, pp. 135-136; Porch of Wisdom Cultural Institution, Faith and Reason, pp. 179-218.

398 A. A. Y. Ali, Qur'an, p. 1461 n. 5438.

399 M. M. Ali, Qur'an, 61:6, pp. 1056-1057.

400 J. C. Reeves, Heralds, p. 17.

401 W. F. May, Manichaeism.

402 E.g., Z. Brzezinski, Second Chance; A. Gore, Assault; P. Singer, Bush.

pundit, the left-wing thinker and the right-wing one or the conservative and the liberal”⁴⁰³).

- B-16 According to the Christian Theodore bar Konai, Mani taught that after the creation of Adam and Eve “Jesus the Luminous [perhaps assisted by other emissaries⁴⁰⁴] approached the unsuspecting Adam and roused him from the sleep of death, that he might be delivered from the great spirit... Then Adam examined himself and recognized who he was, and (Jesus) showed him the Fathers on high, and (revealed to him) regarding his own self all that which he had fallen into... He says that... (Jesus) raised him up and made him taste of the Tree of Life.”⁴⁰⁵

In place of “raised him up,” Widengren has “baptized him.” Reeves cites Widengren’s arguments for this alternate translation based on “unidentified Mandaic references.” However, he fails to find additional confirmation for this proposal, and contends that the idea of Adam’s being raised to a standing position is more likely, given “Mani’s known hostility to ‘baptism’ and the previous prone state of Adam.”⁴⁰⁶

Widengren,⁴⁰⁷ however, discusses this topic in great depth, relating Akkadian, Sumerian, and Mandaic sources that interpret “standing” in the context of enthronement festivals. For example, “a bilingual poem addressed to a deity of Tammuz character” depicts him as “standing in the sanctuary of the Freshwater Deep, the adorned, purified with sparkling lustration.”⁴⁰⁸

- B-17 Other accounts place Mani’s death as being after the decease of King Shapur I and his successor Hormizd, during the reign of the Persian Emperor Bahram I, about 276-277. During this time Kerder (or Karder), the head Zoroastrian priest, with the support of Bahram, began official persecution of minority sects.⁴⁰⁹
- B-18 BeDuhn emphasizes that “[w]e lose the ability to ‘make sense’ of the Manichaean system the moment we lose sight of the absolute identity of the individual and the collective soul. There is no individual salvation in Manichaeism, only the common ‘work of religion’ involving solar and lunar orbits, ocean tides, and plant exhalations, as much as human activity... When we look closely, Manichaean discourse about the soul and concern with its salvation turns out to be very much ‘a something about the body.’”⁴¹⁰
- B-19 In February 2005, President Boyd K. Packer visited a prominent mosque in Jakarta, Indonesia and asked the head cleric “if they might pray together. The cleric agreed. President Packer ‘blessed the mosque, the cleric, and all who attend to pray and worship.’ Following the prayer, the tearful cleric thanked President Packer for ‘his faith and prayers on their behalf.’”⁴¹¹
- B-20 The supreme sin in Islam is shirk (= association) the attribution of any equal or partner to God. Some Islamic revivalists accuse Christians and Jews of shirk, based on Qur’an 5:72-73 and 9:30; however, most Muslims accept a distinction between these faiths and polytheists (mushrikun = ones who associate) based on 2:105.⁴¹²
- B-21 Traditional accounts of the formation of the Qur’an are to be found in the sirah literature.⁴¹³ A summary and critical evaluation of these accounts is given in F. M. Donner, Context and C. Gilliot, Fixed Text. Motzki provides an overview of alternatives to the traditional accounts, some of which place the formation of the Qur’an at a later period.⁴¹⁴
- B-22 Peterson and Ricks raise the possibility of parallels between the call of Muhammad and the throne of Old Testament prophets such as Isaiah and Ezekiel. They also cite sources suggesting that “Gabriel was only identified as the vehicle of revelation quite late, and that, at the first, it was God himself who was 403 P. Guerlain, Kagan and Chomsky, p. 447.

404 E. Isaac, 1 Enoch, pp. 17-18; J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore, pp. 205 n. 54, 206 n. 64.

405 Cited in J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore, p. 193.

406 J. C. Reeves, Jewish Lore, p. 205 n. 58.

407 G. Widengren, Enthronement.

408 AnOr 10, p. 214:2-6, cited in G. Widengren, Enthronement, p. 581.

409 G. Widengren, Mani, pp. 37-42. Collections of accounts of the death of Mani in English can be found in J. P. Asmussen, Manichaean Literature, pp. 54-58; W. Barnstone, Death of Mani; A. Welburn, Mani, pp. 107-114.

410 J. D. BeDuhn, Manichaean Body, p. 233.

411 C. F. Emmett, Building.

412 R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:630-631.

413 R.g., M. Ibn Ishaq ibn Yasar, Sirat Rasul.

414 H. Motzki, Alternative. See also J. Wansbrough, Qur’anic Studies.

viewed as the agent of inspiration.”⁴¹⁵

- B-23 Whereas traditional accounts rely on the sirah as evidence for standard interpretations of the Qur'an, some skeptical writers have argued conversely that at least some of these biographical reports “may, in fact, have originated to invent a supposed historical context for exegetical readings of particular verses” (F. M. Donner, Context, p. 34).
- B-24 Note that the term sirah is closely related to the term shari'ah (= a path to the watering hole or the spring itself), the term used to describe what is accepted as divinely-inspired principles covering religious, political, legal, social, domestic and private life that have been worked out by Muslim scholars according to various schools of thought.⁴¹⁶ The practical importance of shari'ah in non-domestic affairs varies with the degree of Islamization in a given country.⁴¹⁷ Sometimes the term shari'ah is also used to describe religious laws of non-Muslim faiths.
- B-25 According to Daniel W. Brown, the “single most important focus of controversy in modern Muslim discussions of religious authority” is the difference between modernists and conservatives on the authority of sunna.⁴¹⁸
- B-26 For example, “the cryptic Qur'anic statement that likens a good word to a good tree⁴¹⁹ is understood by Shi'ites to refer specifically to the Prophet and his family. Contrarily, a corrupt word likened to a corrupt tree⁴²⁰ points to the immoral Umayyads, whom Shi'ites view as usurpers of their rightful leadership.” In another reference, Sunnis read umma (community) while Shi'a read a'imma (imami leaders).⁴²¹ Many such differences have to do with divergent views on the issue of succession following the death of Muhammad.⁴²²
- B-27 Of the change in scholarly perspectives on isra'iliyyat, and the literature on Jesus in particular, over the hundred years, Khalidi writes:

In the early part of the twentieth century, ...analysis was generally embedded in polemic. Muhammad (very rarely the Qur'an) is said to have had a confused and/or heretical notion of Christianity. The Qur'anic stories and sayings of Jesus which “he” narrated were fables and fantasies, or at best apocryphal material which, one is left to presume, circulated more easily in the marginal regions of the Byzantine world. Where these stories could not be securely traced back to an origin, they were sometimes said to be the product of a “fertile oriental imagination”... Several factors, however, have acted to balance, if not entirely to change, these images and interpretations of the Qur'anic Jesus in Western scholarship. To begin with, the resurgence of scientific interest in folklore studies and a radical reassessment of the place and function of myth in systems of belief have led to a more tolerant, even sympathetic attitude to the “fables” of the Qur'an and of early Islamic literature in general. In some cases, it is recognized that such fables may in fact possess considerable importance—not so much in themselves but for their role in preserving Jewish or Christian materials that might otherwise have been lost.... Last, the introduction of various tools of modern literary criticism into the analysis of the Qur'anic text has led to a shift in emphasis away from the delineation of ‘influence’ and toward an attempt to understand the text on its own terms and territory. The results of this endeavor are not uniformly convincing, but they do at least represent a new departure from the analysis of the Qur'anic images of Jesus in terms of influence or derivation, terms which are now recognized to be far more complex processes than was hitherto assumed.⁴²³

- B-28 The numerous Islamic texts excerpted in J. A. Tvedtnes et al., Traditions that had to be translated directly from Arabic for the first time evidence how few of the primary sources for the stories of the prophets are currently available in English.

415 D. C. Peterson et al., Theophany, p. 325.

416 G. D. Newby, Encyclopedia, shari'ah, pp. 193-194.

417 R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:584-590. See N. Feldman, Rise for a historical overview of the role of shari'ah in the governments of the Islamic world. J. L. Esposito et al., Who Speaks give a report of the results of a ground-breaking Gallup poll on the religious, political, and social views of Muslims worldwide.

418 Ibid., 2:668-669.

419 Qur'an 14:24.

420 Qur'an 14:26.

421 R. C. Martin, Encyclopedia, 2:673-674.

422 Ibid., 2:651-656

423 T. Khalidi, Muslim Jesus, pp. 8, 9.

REFERENCES

- Abegg, Martin, Jr., Peter Flint, and Eugene Ulrich, eds. The Dead Sea Scrolls Bible. New York City, NY: Harper, 1999.
- Abravanel, Isaac. Commentaire du Récit de la Création d'Isaac Abravanel. Edited by Yehouda Schiffers. Lagrasse, France: Éditions Verdier, 1999.
- Ackerman, Robert. The Myth and Ritual School: J. G. Frazer and the Cambridge Ritualists. New York City, NY: Routledge, 2002.
- Ackroyd, Peter. 1995. Blake. London, England: Vintage, 1999.
- "Adam and Eve." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Adam_and_Eve (accessed September 27, 2008).
- "Adam Lay Ybounden." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Adam_Lay_Ybounden (accessed March 12, 2009).
- "Adam-God Theory." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Adam-God_theory (accessed August 28, 2006).
- Adams, Vivian M. "Our glorious mother Eve." In The Man Adam, edited by Joseph Fielding McConkie and Robert L. Millet, 87-111. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1990.
- Adams, Vivian McConkie. Our glorious mother Eve. In Deseret Book Audio Talk. http://deseretbook.com/item/9999990/Our_Glorious_Mother_Eve. (accessed February 7, 2010).
- Afloroaei, Lucia. "Religious dualism: Some logical and philosophical difficulties." Journal for Interdisciplinary Research on Religion and Science, no. 4 (January 2009): 83-111.
- Agnew, N.M., and J.L. Brown. "Foundations for a theory of knowing: I. Construing reality." Canadian Psychology 30 (1989): 152-67.
- . "Foundations for a theory of knowing: II. Fallible but functional knowledge." Canadian Psychology 30 (1989): 168-83.
- Akenson, Donald Harman. Surpassing Wonder: The Invention of the Bible and the Talmuds. New York City NY: Harcourt Brace, 1998.
- Akslund, Markus. The Sacred Footprint: A Cultural History of Adam's Peak. Orchid Guides. Bangkok, Thailand: Orchid Press, 2001.
- al-Khalesi, Yasin M. The Court of the Palms: A Functional Interpretation of the Mari Palace. Bibliotheca Mesopotamica 8, ed. Giorgio Buccellati. Malibu, CA: Undena Publications, 1978.
- al-Kisa'i, Muhammad ibn Abd Allah. ca. 1000-1100. Tales of the Prophets (Qisas al-anbiya). Translated by Wheeler M. Thackston, Jr. Great Books of the Islamic World, ed. Seyyed Hossein Nasr. Chicago, IL: KAZI Publications, 1997.
- al-Nadim, Ibn. d. ca. 995. "Fihrist." In Mani: Seine Lehre und seine Schriften. Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Manichäismus. Aus dem Fihrist des Abū'l-faradsch Muhammad ben Ishak al-Warrāk, bekannt unter dem Namen Ibn Abi Ja'kub an-Nadīm, im Text nebst Uebersetzung, Commentar und Index zum ersten Mal herausgegeben, edited by Gustav Leberecht Flügel. Leipzig, Germany: F. A. Brockhaus, 1862. Reprint, Osnabrück, Germany: Biblio Verlag, 1969.
- al-Qurtubi, Abu Abdullah Muhammad ibn Ahmad al-Andalusi. d. 1273. Tafsir Al-Qurtubi: Classical Commentary of the Holy Qur'an. Translated by Aisha Bewley. London, England: Dar al-Taqwa, 2003.
- al-Rabghuzi, Nosiruddin Burhonuddin. ca. 1350. The Stories of the Prophets: Qisas Al-Anbiya: An Eastern Turkish Version, ed. Hendrik E. Boeschoten, M. Vandamme and Semih Tezcan. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1995.
- al-Tabari. d. 923. The History of al-Tabari: General Introduction and From the Creation to the Flood. Vol. 1. Translated by Franz Rosenthal. Bibliotheca Persica, ed. Ehsan Yar-Shater. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1989.
- al-Tha'labi, Abu Ishaq Ahmad Ibn Muhammad Ibn Ib rahim. d. 1035. Ara'is Al-Majalis Fi Qisas Al-Anbiya' or "Lives of the Prophets". Translated by William M. Brinner. Studies in Arabic Literature, Supplements to the Journal of Arabic Literature, Volume 24, ed. Suzanne Pinckney Stetkevych. Leiden, Netherlands: Brill, 2002.
- al-Zamakhshari, Jar Allah. d. 1144. A Traditional Mu'tazilite Qur'an Commentary: The Kathaf of Jar Allah Al-Zamakhshari. Translated by Andrew J. Lane. Texts and Studies on the Qur'an. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill Academic Publishers, 2005.
- Albeck, Chanoch, ed. Midrash Bereshit Rabbati. Jerusalem, Israel: Mekitze Nirdamim, 1940.
- "Albion." In Wikipedia. <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Albion> (accessed November 23, 2007).
- Albrecht, Stan L., and Tim. B. Heaton. "Secularization, higher education, and religiosity." Review of Religious Research 26, no. 1 (September 1984): 43-58.
- Alexander, P. ed. "3 (Hebrew Apocalypse of) Enoch." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 223-315. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Ali, Allama Abdullah Yusuf, ed. 1938. The Holy Qur'an: Arabic Text, English Translation and Commentary. Lahore, Pakistan: Sheikh Muhammad Ashraf, 2001.
- Ali, Maulana Muhammad, ed. 1951. The Holy Qur'an with English Translation and Commentary. Columbus, OH: Ahmadiyyah Anjuman Isha'at Islam (Lahore), 1999.

- Alighieri, Dante. 1321. "Commedia." In Princeton Dante Project, Princeton, NJ. <http://etcweb.princeton.edu/dante/pdp/> (accessed November 28, 2007).
- All Things Testify of Him. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1998.
- Allan, Sarah. The Shape of the Turtle: Myth, Art, and Cosmos in Early China. SUNY Series in Chinese Philosophy and Culture, eds. David L. Hall and Roger T. Ames. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1991.
- Allberry, Charles Robert Cecil Augustine, ed. A Manichaean Psalm-Book, Part 2. Manichaean Manuscripts in the Chester Beatty Collection 2. Stuttgart, Germany: W. Kohlhammer, 1938.
- Allen, James P., ed. The Ancient Egyptian Pyramid Texts. Writings from the Ancient World 23, ed. Theodore J. Lewis. Atlanta, GA: Society of Biblical Literature, 2005.
- , ed. The Egyptian Coffin Texts: Middle Kingdom Copies of Pyramid Texts. Vol. 8. Oriental Institute Publications 132. Chicago, IL: The Oriental Institute, 2006.
- Allen, Roger. An Introduction to Arabic Literature. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2000.
- Allen, Thomas G., ed. The Book of the Dead or Going Forth by Day: Ideas of the Ancient Egyptians Concerning the Hereafter as Expressed in Their Own Terms. Studies in Ancient Oriental Civilization 37. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press, 1974.
- , ed. The Egyptian Book of the Dead: Documents in the Oriental Institute Museum at the University of Chicago. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press, 1960.
- Allison, Dale C., ed. Testament of Abraham. Berlin, Germany: Walter de Gruyter, 2003.
- Allred, Alma. "The traditions of their fathers: Myth versus reality in LDS scriptural writings." In Black and Mormon, edited by Newell G. Bringhurst and Darron T. Smith, 34-49. Urbana, IL: University of Illinois Press, 2004.
- Alter, Robert. The Art of Biblical Narrative. New York: Basic Books, 1981.
- , ed. The Book of Psalms: A Translation with Commentary. New York City, NY: W. W. Norton, 2007.
- , ed. The David Story: A Translation with Commentary of 1 and 2 Samuel. New York City, NY: W. W. Norton, 1999.
- , ed. The Five Books of Moses: A Translation with Commentary. New York City, NY: W. W. Norton, 2004.
- , ed. Genesis. New York City, NY: W. W. Norton, 1996.
- American Bible Society. Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia. 5th ed. New York City, NY: American Bible Society, 1997.
- American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, Fourth Edition. 2000. In Bartleby.com. <http://www.bartleby.com/61/> (accessed April 26, 2009).
- "Ancient ruins." Nauvoo, IL: Times and Seasons 5:23, December 15, 1844, 744-48.
- Anderson, Arnold A. The Book of Psalms. Vol. 2, Psalms 73-150. Grand Rapids, MI: Eerdmans, 1981.
- Andersen, Francis I. ed. "2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of) Enoch." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 91-221. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Andersen, Francis I., and David Noel Freedman. Hosea: A New Translation with Introduction and Commentary. The Anchor Bible 24, eds. William Foxwell Albright and David Noel Freedman. Garden City, NY: Doubleday, 1980.
- Anderson, E. H., and R. T. Haag. "The Book of the Revelation of Abraham: A Translation." From G. Nathanael Bonwetsch's then-unpublished German translation. Improvement Era 1, August-September 1898, 705-14, 93-806.
- Anderson, Gary A. "Ezekiel 28, the fall of Satan, and the Adam books." In Literature on Adam and Eve: Collected Essays, edited by Gary A. Anderson, Michael Stone, and Johannes Tromp, 133-47. Leiden, Netherlands: Brill, 2000.
- . "The fall of Satan in the thought of St. Ephrem and John Milton." Hogoye: Journal of Syriac Studies 3, no. 1 (January 2000). <http://syrcom.cua.edu/hugoye/Vol3No1/HV3N1Anderson.html> (accessed August 16, 2007).
- . "The garments of skin in apocryphal narrative and biblical commentary." In Studies in Ancient Midrash, edited by James L. Kugel, 101-43. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2001.
- . The Genesis of Perfection: Adam and Eve in Jewish and Christian Imagination. Louisville, KY: Westminster John Knox Press, 2001.
- . "The original form of the Life of Adam and Eve: A proposal." In Literature on Adam and Eve: Collected Essays, edited by Gary A. Anderson, Michael E. Stone and Johannes Tromp, 215-31. Leiden, Netherlands: Brill, 2000.
- . "The penitence narrative in the Life of Adam and Eve." In Literature on Adam and Eve: Collected Essays, edited by Gary A. Anderson, Michael E. Stone and Johannes Tromp, 3-42. Leiden, Netherlands: Brill, 2000.
- . Sacrifices and Offerings in Ancient Israel. Harvard Semitic Monographs 41, ed. Frank Moore Cross. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1987.
- . Sin: A History. New Haven, CN: Yale University Press, 2009.

- Anderson, Gary A., and Michael Stone, eds. A Synopsis of the Books of Adam and Eve 2nd ed. Society of Biblical Literature: Early Judaism and its Literature, ed. John C. Reeves. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1999.
- Anderson, Richard Lloyd. "The impact of the first preaching in Ohio." In Oliver Cowdery: Scribe, Elder, Witness (Essays from BYU Studies and FARMS), edited by John W. Welch and Larry E. Morris, 195-220. Provo, UT: The Neal A. Maxwell Institute for Religious Scholarship, Brigham Young University, 2006.
- Anderson, Washington F. "Life sketch of J. M. Bernhisel, author unknown." In John M. Bernhisel Papers, 1825-1910, MSS SC 331 box 2, Manuscript Collection, L. Tom Perry Special Collections, 12 pp. and 8 pp. Provo, UT: Harold B. Lee Library, Brigham Young University, ca. 1881.
- Andrews, Carol, ed. The Ancient Egyptian Book of the Dead. Revised ed. Translated by Raymond O. Faulkner. London, England: British Museum Publications, 1985. Reprint, Austin, TX: University of Texas Press, 1990.
- Andrus, Hyrum L. Doctrinal Commentary on the Pearl of Great Price. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1970.
- . Doctrinal Commentary on the Pearl of Great Price. Revised ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2003.
- . Doctrines of the Kingdom. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1973.
- . God, Man, and the Universe. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1968.
- . Principles of Perfection. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1970.
- Andrus, Hyrum L., and Helen Mae Andrus, eds. They Knew the Prophet. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1974.
- , eds. 1974. They Knew the Prophet. American Fork, UT: Covenant, 2004.
- Anklesaria, Behramgore Tehmuras, ed. Zand-Akasiḥ: Iranian or Greater Bundahishn. Bombay, India: Rahnumae Mazdayasnan Sabha and Dastur Framroze A. Bode, 1956. <http://www.avesta.org/pahlavi/grb.htm> (accessed July 26, 2007).
- Ansary, Tamim. Destiny Disrupted: A History of the World through Islamic Eyes. New York City, NY: PublicAffairs, 2009.
- "Answering media questions about Jesus and Satan." In Newsroom: The Official Resource for News Media, Opinion Leaders, and the Public. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. <http://newsroom.lds.org/ldsnewsroom/eng/commentary/answering-media-questions-about-jesus-and-satan> (accessed March 19, 2009).
- "Apostolic Constitutions." In Encyclopedia Britannica Online. <http://www.britannica.com/EBchecked/topic/30274/Apostolic-Constitutions> (accessed January 7, 2009).
- "Approaching Mormon doctrine." In Newsroom: The Official Resource for News Media, Opinion Leaders, and the Public. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. <http://newsroom.lds.org/ldsnewsroom/eng/commentary/approaching-mormon-doctrine> (accessed February 26, 2008).
- Aquinas, Thomas. 1265-1274. The Summa Theologica of St. Thomas Aquinas. 5 vols. Translated by Fathers of the English Dominican Province. 2nd ed. London, England: Burns, Oates, and Washbourne, 1920. Reprint, Notre Dame, IN: Benziger Brothers / Ave Maria Press, 1981. <http://www.newadvent.org/summa/> (accessed August 6, 2007).
- Arberry, A. J., ed. 1955. The Koran Interpreted: A Translation. New York City, NY: Touchstone Books, 1996.
- Aristophanes. 380 BCE. "Plutus." In The Internet Classics Archive. <http://classics.mit.edu/Aristophanes/plutus.html> (accessed May 2, 2009).
- Armstrong, Karen. Jerusalem: One City, Three Faiths. New York City, NY: Ballantine Books, 2005.
- Arnold, Bill T. Encountering the Book of Genesis. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Books, 1998.
- . Genesis. New Cambridge Bible Commentary, ed. Ben Witherington, III. New York City, NY: Cambridge University Press, 2009.
- Arnon, Noam. The Cave of Machpela: Roots of the Jewish People. Translated by Raphael Blumberg. 2nd ed. Kiryat Arba, Hebron, Israel: The Ma'arat HaMachpela Authority and The Jewish Community of Hebron, 2004.
- Arrington, Leonard J. Brigham Young: American Moses. New York City, NY: Alfred A. Knopf, 1985.
- Asad, Talal. "The construction of religion as an anthropological category." In Genealogies of Religion: Discipline and Reasons of Power in Christianity and Islam, edited by Talal Asad, 27-54. Baltimore, MD: The Johns Hopkins University Press, 1993.
- . "The limits of religious criticism in the Middle East: Notes on Islamic public argument." In Genealogies of Religion: Discipline and Reasons of Power in Christianity and Islam, edited by Talal Asad, 200-36. Baltimore, MD: The Johns Hopkins University Press, 1993.
- Asay, Carlos E. "The temple garment: 'An outward expression of an inward commitment.'" In Temples of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 35-41. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1999.
- Ash, Michael R. "The ABCs of the Book of Abraham." Presented at the FAIR Conference, August 2004. http://www.fairlds.org/FAIR_Conferences/2004_ABCs_of_the_Book_of_Abraham.html (accessed August 4, 2007).

- . “The Mormon myth of evil evolution.” Dialogue 35, no. 4 (2002): 19-59.
- “Ashburnham Pentateuch.” In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ashburnham_Pentateuch (accessed August 4, 2008).
- Ashraf, Syed Ali. “The inner meaning of the Islamic rites: Prayer, pilgrimage, fasting, jihad.” In Islamic Spirituality 1: Foundations, edited by Seyyed Hossein Nasr, 111-30. New York City, NY: The Crossroad Publishing Company, 1987.
- Asmussen, Jes P., ed. Manichaean Literature: Representative Texts Chiefly from Middle Persian and Parthian Writings. Persian Heritage Series 22, ed. Ehsan Yar-Shater. Delmar, NY: Scholars’ Facsimiles and Reprints, 1975.
- Assman, Jan. 2001. Death and Salvation in Ancient Egypt. Translated by David Lorton. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 2005.
- . 1984. The Search for God in Ancient Egypt. Translated by David Lorton. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 2001.
- at-Tabataba’i, Allamah as-Sayyid Muhammad Husayn. 1973. Al-Mizan: An Exegesis of the Qur’an. Translated by Sayyid Saeed Akhtar Rizvi. 3rd ed. Tehran, Iran: World Organization for Islamic Services, 1983.
- Athanasius. ca. 335. “On the Incarnation of the Word (De Incarnatione Verbi Dei).” In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 4, 31-67. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1892. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Atiya, Aziz Suryal, ed. Coptic Encyclopedia. 8 vols. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1991.
- Atran, Scott. In Gods We Trust: The Evolutionary Landscape of Religion. Evolution and Cognition, ed. Stephen Stich. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2002.
- Attridge, Harold W., and Helmut Koester, eds. Hebrews: A Commentary on the Epistle to the Hebrews. Hermeneia—A Critical and Historical Commentary on the Bible, eds. Frank Moore Cross, Klaus Baltzer, Paul D. Hanson, S. Dean McBride, Jr., and Roland E. Murphy. Philadelphia, PA: Fortress Press, 1989.
- Audouard, Yvan. La Pastorale des sants de Provence. Paris, France: Le pré aux clers, 1986.
- Auerbach, Erich. 1946. Mimesis: The Representation of Reality in Western Literature. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1974.
- Augustine. ca. 410. “The City of God.” In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, First Series, edited by Philip Schaff. 14 vols. Vol. 2, 1-511. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1887. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 1994.
- . d. 430. Contra Fortunatum. Edited by F. Decret and Johannes van Oort. Corpus Fontium Manichaeorum, Series Latina. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 2005.
- . d. 430. St. Augustine: The Literal Meaning of Genesis. Edited by John Hammond Taylor. New ed. Ancient Christian Writers 41 and 42. Mahwah, NJ: Paulist Press, 1982.
- “Aux sources de la légende.” Lire, Hors-Série no. 3 (Référence #HSLR0206) 2006, 47-57.
- Avagianou, Aphrodite A. “Hieros Gamos in ancient Greek religion: The human aspect of a sacralized ritual.” In Sacred Marriages, edited by Martti Nissinen and Risto Uro, 145-71. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 2008.
- Avesti, Anthony. “Reaching for the stars: Linda Schele’s contributions to Mayan astronomy.” In Heart of Creation: The Mesoamerican World and the Legacy of Linda Schele, edited by Andrea Stone, 13-20. Tuscaloosa, AL: The University of Alabama Press, 2002.
- Avi-Yonah, Michael. “Goodenough’s evaluation of the Dura paintings: A critique.” In The Dura-Europos Synagogue: A Re-evaluation (1932-1972), edited by Joseph Gutmann, 117-35. Chambersburg, PA: American Academy of Religion, Society of Biblical Literature, 1973.
- Avigad, N., and Yigal Yadin, eds. A Genesis Apocryphon: A Scroll from the Wilderness of Judea. Jerusalem, Israel: Magnes Press-Heikhal Hasefer, 1956.
- Avesta—Zoroastrian Archives*. <http://www.avesta.org/> (accessed October 3, 2008).
- Ayala, Francisco J. Darwin and Intelligent Design. Facets Series. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 2006.
- . Darwin’s Gift to Science and Religion. Washington, DC: Joseph Henry Press, 2007.
- Ayoub, Mahmoud M. The Awesome News: Interpretation of Jus’ Amma: The Last Part of the Qur’an. 2nd ed. Hiawatha, IA: Cedar Graphics, 1997.
- . 1983. “The idea of redemption in Christianity and Islam.” In Mormons and Muslims: Spiritual Foundations and Modern Manifestations, edited by Spencer J. Palmer. Updated and Revised ed, 157-69. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 2002. Reprint (with some modifications), Ayoub, Mahmoud M. A Muslim View of Christianity: Essays on Dialogue, 90-97. Edited by Irfan A. Omar. Maryknoll, NY: Orbis Books, 2007.
- . “Introduction.” In A Muslim View of Christianity: Essays on Dialogue, 1-6. Edited by Irfan A. Omar. Maryknoll,

- NY: Orbis Books, 2007.
- . A Muslim View of Christianity: Essays on Dialogue. Edited by Irfan A. Omar. Maryknoll, NY: Orbis Books, 2007.
- . The Qur'an and Its Interpreters. Vol. 1. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1984.
- . The Qur'an and Its Interpreters. Vol. 2. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1992.
- . "Toward an Islamic Christology 1: An image of Jesus in early Shi'i Muslim literature." In A Muslim View of Christianity: Essays on Dialogue, 134-155. Edited by Irfan A. Omar. Maryknoll, NY: Orbis Books, 2007.
- Bachman, Daniel W. "New light on an old hypothesis: The Ohio origins of the revelation on eternal marriage." Journal of Mormon History 5 (1978): 19-32.
- Backman, Milton V., Jr., and Richard O. Cowan. Joseph Smith and the Doctrine and Covenants. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- Bagehot, Walter. The Works of Walter Bagehot (with Memoirs by R. H. Hutton). 5 vols. Edited by Forrest Morgan. Hartford, CN: The Travelers Insurance Company, 1889.
- Bailey, Arthur A. "Adam, LDS sources." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 1, 15-17. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Bailey, David H. "God is not a great deceiver: What's wrong with intelligent design." Unpublished manuscript in the possession of the author. 2005
- . "Latter-day Creationism." In The Mormon Organon. <http://sciencebysteve.net/?p=379> (accessed December 2, 2008).
- . "The LDS Church and Evolution." 27 July 2008. In Papers by David H. Bailey. <http://www.dhbailey.com/papers/dhb-lds-evolution.pdf> (accessed December 2, 2008).
- . "Mormonism and the new creationism." Dialogue 35, no. 4 (2002): 39-59.
- . "Mormons and the omnis: The dangers of theological speculation." Dialogue 37, no. 3 (Fall 2004): 29-48.
- . "Science and Mormonism: Past, Present, Future." Dialogue 29, no. 1 (1996): 80-96.
- . "Scientific foundations of Mormon theology." Dialogue 21, no. 2 (1988): 61-79.
- . "What's wrong with Intelligent Design?" 11 May 2008. In Papers of David H. Bailey. <http://www.dhbailey.com/papers/dhb-intell-design.pdf> (accessed December 2, 2008).
- Baker, Jacob T. "'The Grandest principle of the Gospel': Christian nihilism, sanctified activism, and eternal progression." Dialogue: A Journal of Mormon Thought 41, no. 3 (Fall 2008): 55-80. <http://www.dialoguejournal.com/content/wp-content/uploads/2007/08/4003-White.pdf> (accessed January 2, 2009).
- Baldwin, Robert W. "The legend of the True Cross: Piero's frescoes at Arezzo." In A Critical History of Western Art, 1300-2000, edited by Robert W. Baldwin. New London, CT: Connecticut College (published only on CD-ROM), 2001. <http://oak.conncoll.edu/rwbal/> (accessed September 1, 2006).
- Ballard, M. Russell. 2004. "Becoming self-reliant—spiritually and physically." Ensign 39, March 2009, 50-55.
- . "Building bridges of understanding." Presented at a Missionary satellite broadcast, Logan, UT, February 17, 1998.
- . Counseling with Our Councils: Learning to Minister Together in the Church and in the Family. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1997.
- Ballard, Melvin J. 1922. "The Three Degrees of Glory." A discourse delivered in the Ogden Tabernacle, September 22, 1922, on the one hundredth anniversary of the appearance of the angel Moroni. In Sermons and Missionary Services of Melvin Joseph Ballard, edited by Bryant S. Hinckley, 234-61. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1949.
- Bandstra, Barry L. Genesis 1-11: A Handbook on the Hebrew Text. Baylor Handbook on the Hebrew Bible, ed. W. Dennis Tucker, Jr. Waco, TX: Baylor University Press, 2008.
- bar Konai, Theodore. "Concerning his impure doctrine." In The Other Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone, 46-48. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 2005.
- Barclay, John M. G. Jews in the Mediterranean Diaspora: From Alexander to Trajan (323 BCE-117 CE). Hellenistic Culture and Society 33, eds. Anthony W. Bulloch, Erich S. Gruen, A. A. Long, and Andrew F. Stewart. Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1996.
- Barclay, William, ed. The Gospel of John. 2nd ed. 2 vols. Vol. 1. The Daily Study Bible Series. Philadelphia, PA: The Westminster Press, 1956.
- , ed. 1956. The Gospel of Matthew. Revised ed. 2 vols. The Daily Study Bible Series. Philadelphia, PA: The Westminster Press, 1975.
- . 1970. The Parables of Jesus. Louisville, KY: Westminster John Knox Press, 1999.

- Barker, Kenneth L., ed. Zondervan NIV Study Bible Fully Revised ed. Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan, 2002.
- Barker, Margaret. "The angel priesthood." In The Great High Priest: The Temple Roots of Christian Liturgy, edited by Margaret Barker, 103-45. London, England: T & T Clark, 2003.
- . "Atonement: The rite of healing." Scottish Journal of Theology 49, no. 1 (1996): 1-20. <http://www.abdn.ac.uk/~div054/sjt> (accessed August 3, 2007).
- . "Beyond the veil of the temple: The high priestly origins of the apocalypses." Scottish Journal of Theology 51, no. 1 (1998): 1-21. <http://www.marquette.edu/maqom/veil> (accessed August 3, 2007).
- . "Beyond the veil of the temple: The high priestly origin of the apocalypses." In The Great High Priest: The Temple Roots of Christian Liturgy, edited by Margaret Barker, 188-201. London, England: T & T Clark, 2003.
- . Christmas: The Original Story. London, England: Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, 2008.
- . "Creation theology." Unpublished manuscript, 2004. <http://www.margaretbarker.com/Papers/CreationTheology.pdf> (accessed August 6, 2007).
- . E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, June 11, 2007.
- . An Extraordinary Gathering of Angels. London, England: MQ Publications, 2004.
- . The Gate of Heaven: The History and Symbolism of the Temple. London: Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge (SPCK), 1991.
- . The Great Angel: A Study of Israel's Second God. Louisville, KY: Westminster / John Knox Press, 1992.
- . "The Great High Priest." BYU Studies 42, no. 3 (2003): 65-84.
- . The Great High Priest: The Temple Roots of Christian Liturgy. London, England: T & T Clark, 2003.
- . The Hidden Tradition of the Kingdom of God. London, England: Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge (SPCK), 2007.
- . "The holy anointing oil." 2008. <http://www.margaretbarker.com/Papers/TheHolyAnointingOil.pdf>. (accessed September 1, 2009).
- . "The Holy of Holies." In The Great High Priest: The Temple Roots of Christian Liturgy, edited by Margaret Barker, 146-87. London, England: T & T Clark, 2003.
- , ed. "The Infancy Gospel of James and translation of the text." In Christmas: The Original Story, edited by Margaret Barker, 128-61. London, England: Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, 2008.
- . "Joseph Smith and preexilic Israelite religion." BYU Studies 44, no. 4 (2005): 69-82.
- . The Lost Prophet: The Book of Enoch and Its Influence on Christianity. London, England: Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge (SPCK), 1988.
- . The Older Testament: The Survival of Themes from the Ancient Royal Cult in Sectarian Judaism and Early Christianity. London, England: Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge (SPCK), 1987.
- . On Earth as It Is in Heaven: Temple Symbolism in the New Testament. Edinburgh, Scotland: T&T Clark, 1995.
- . "Paradise lost." Presented at the Religion, Science and the Environment Symposium IV: The Adriatic Symposium, 5-11 June, 2002. <http://www.margaretbarker.com/Papers/ParadiseLost.pdf> (accessed August 7, 2007).
- . The Revelation of Jesus Christ: Which God Gave to Him to Show to His Servants What Must Soon Take Place (Revelation 1.1). Edinburgh, Scotland: T&T Clark, 2000.
- . The Risen Lord: The Jesus of History as the Christ of Faith. Valley Forge, PA: Trinity Press International, 1996.
- . "Temple and Timaeus." In The Great High Priest: The Temple Roots of Christian Liturgy, edited by Margaret Barker, 262-93. London, England: T & T Clark, 2003.
- . "Temple imagery in Philo: An indication of the origin of the Logos?" In Templum Amicitiae: Essays on the Second Temple Presented to Ernst Bammel, edited by William Horbury. JSOT Supplement Series 48, 70-102. Sheffield, England: Sheffield Academic Press, 1991. http://jbburnett.com/resources/barker/barker_logos%20in%20philo.pdf (accessed December 21, 2007).
- . "The temple roots of the Christian liturgy." In The Great High Priest: The Temple Roots of Christian Liturgy, edited by Margaret Barker, 73-102. London, England: T & T Clark, 2003.
- . Temple Themes in Christian Worship. London, England: T&T Clark, 2008.
- . Temple Theology. London, England: Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge (SPCK), 2004.
- . "Text and context." In The Great High Priest: The Temple Roots of Christian Liturgy, edited by Margaret Barker, 294-315. London, England: T & T Clark, 2003.
- . "The veil as the boundary." In The Great High Priest: The Temple Roots of Christian Liturgy, edited by Margaret Barker, 202-28. London, England: T & T Clark, 2003.

- . “What did King Josiah reform?” In Glimpses of Lehi's Jerusalem, edited by John W. Welch, David Rolph Seely and Jo Ann H. Seely, 523-42. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS) at Brigham Young University, 2004.
- . “Where shall wisdom be found?” In Russian Orthodox Church: Representation to the European Institutions. <http://orthodoxeurope.org/page/11/1/7.aspx> (accessed December 24, 2007).
- . “Who was Melchizedek and who was his God?” Presented at the 2007 Annual Meeting of the Society of Biblical Literature, Session S19-72 on ‘Latter-day Saints and the Bible’, San Diego, CA, November 17-20, 2007.
- . “Wisdom and the stewardship of knowledge (Bishop's Lecture 2004).” Presented at the Lincoln Cathedral Lectures, Lincoln, England, March, 2004. <http://www.margaretbarker.com/Papers/WisdomAndTheStewardshipOfKnowledge.pdf> (accessed August 6, 2007).
- . “Wisdom, the Queen of Heaven.” In The Great High Priest: The Temple Roots of Christian Liturgy, edited by Margaret Barker, 229-61. London, England: T & T Clark, 2003.
- Barker, Margaret, and Kevin Christensen. “Seeking the face of the Lord: Joseph Smith and the first temple tradition.” In Joseph Smith Jr: Reappraisals After Two Centuries, edited by Reid L. Neilson and Terryl L. Givens, 143-72. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2009.
- Barlow, Philip L. Mormons and the Bible: The Place of the Latter-day Saints in American Religion. New York, NY: Oxford University Press, 1991.
- Barney, Kevin L. “A book or a tree? A textual variant in Revelation 22:19.” Manuscript draft provided by the author. Presented at the Mormon Theology Seminar: Latter-day Saint Readings of Revelation 21-22, University of Texas, Austin, TX, 25 September 2009, 2009. <http://www.mormontheologyseminar.org/>. (accessed September 19, 2009).
- . “Do we have a Mother in Heaven?” In Foundation for Apologetic Information and Research (FAIR). <http://www.fairlds.org/pubs/MotherInHeaven.pdf> (accessed December 24, 2007).
- . E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, June 21, 2006.
- . “Examining six key concepts on Joseph Smith's understanding of Genesis 1:1.” BYU Studies 39, no. 3 (2000): 107-24.
- . “The facsimiles and Semitic adaption of existing sources.” In Astronomy, Papyrus, and Covenant, edited by John Gee and Brian M. Hauglid. Studies in the Book of Abraham 3, 107-30. Provo, UT: FARMS, Brigham Young University, 2005.
- , ed. Footnotes to the New Testament for Latter-day Saints. 3 vols, 2007. <http://feastupontheword.org/Site:NTFootnotes> (accessed February 26, 2008).
- . “Is Nauvoo a Hebrew word?” In Ask the apologist, FAIR. http://www.fairlds.org/Misc/Is_Nauvoo_a_Hebrew_Word.html (accessed August 7, 2007).
- . “Joseph Smith's emendation of Hebrew Genesis 1:1.” Dialogue: A Journal of Mormon Thought 30, no. 4 (Winter 1997): 103-35.
- . 2006. “Only Begotten.” In By Common Consent. <http://bycommonconsent.com/2006/05/24/only-begotten/> (accessed June 20, 2006).
- . “Poetic diction and parallel word pairs in the Book of Mormon.” Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 4, no. 2 (1995): 15-23.
- . “Reflections on the Documentary Hypothesis.” Dialogue 33, no. 1 (2000): 57-99.
- Barnstone, Willis, ed. “The Gospel of the Secret Supper.” In The Gnostic Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone and Marvin Meyer, 740-50. Boston, MA: Shambhala, 2003.
- , ed. “The Mother of Books (Umm al-kitab).” In The Gnostic Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone and Marvin Meyer. Translated by Willis Barnstone, 655-725. Boston, MA: Shambhala, 2003.
- , ed. The Other Bible. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 2005.
- , ed. “The Sethian-Ophites.” In The Other Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone, 659-64. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 2005.
- , ed. “The story of the death of Mani.” In The Gnostic Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone and Marvin W. Meyer. Translated by Jes P. Asmussen, 594-97. Boston, MA: Shambhala, 2003.
- Barnstone, Willis, and Marvin W. Meyer, eds. “The Coptic Manichaean Songbook, Songs of Thomas.” In The Gnostic Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone and Marvin Meyer, 616-24. Boston, MA: Shambhala, 2003.
- , eds. The Gnostic Bible. Boston, MA: Shambhala, 2003.
- Barr, James. 1961. The Semantics of Biblical Language. Eugene, OR: Wipf and Stock, 2004.
- Barthélemy, Dominique. 1963. God and His Image: An Outline of Biblical Theology. Translated by Dom Aldhelm Dean. Edited by Stephen D. Ryan. Revised ed. San Francisco, CA: Ignatius Press, 2007.

- Basil. ca. 364-379. "The Hexameron." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 8, 51-107. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1895. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 1994.
- . ca. 364-379. "On the Spirit (De Spiritu Sancto)." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 8, 1-50. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1895. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 1994.
- Bassie-Sweet, Karen. From the Mouth of the Dark Cave: Commemorative Sculpture of the Late Classic Maya. Norman, OK: University of Oklahoma Press, 1991.
- Bateson, Gregory. Mind and Nature: A Necessary Unity. New York: E. P. Dutton, 1979.
- Bateson, Gregory, and Mary Catherine Bateson. Angels Fear: Towards an Epistemology of the Sacred. New York City, NY: Macmillan Publishing Company, 1987.
- Batson, Beatrice. "Preface." In Shakespeare's Christianity: The Protestant and Catholic Poetics of Julius Caesar, Macbeth, and Hamlet, edited by Beatrice Batson, xi-xvii. Waco, TX: Baylor University Press, 2006.
- Battenhouse, Roy. "Introduction: An overview of Christian interpretation." In Shakespeare's Christian Dimension: An Anthology of Commentary, edited by Roy Battenhouse, 1-14. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1994.
- . "The Tempest: Comment and Bibliography." In Shakespeare's Christian Dimension: An Anthology of Commentary, edited by Roy Battenhouse, 250-54. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1994.
- Bauer, Walter, William F. Arndt, and F. Wilbur Gingrich. A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press, 1957.
- Beach, Edward Allen. "The Eleusinian Mysteries." In The Potencies of God(s): Schelling's Philosophy of Mythology, edited by Edward Allen Beach, 238-44. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1994. Abridged version at <http://www.uwec.edu/philrel/faculty/beach/Publications/eleusis.html> (accessed August 14, 2009).
- Beale, Gregory K., and Donald A. Carson, eds. Commentary on the New Testament Use of the Old Testament. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2007.
- "Beccafumi, Domenico." In Web Gallery of Art. <http://www.wga.hu/frames-e.html?/html/b/beccafumi/72rebel.html> (accessed April 27, 2007).
- Bede. 731. The Ecclesiastical History of the English People, with The Greater Chronicle and Bede's Letter to Egbert. Translated by Bertram Colgrave. Edited by Judith McClure and Roger Collins. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1999.
- . ca. 731. On the Temple. Translated by Sean Connolly. Edited by Jennifer O'Reilly. Liverpool, England: Liverpool University Press, 1996.
- Bednar, David A. "Clean hands and a pure heart." Ensign 37, November 2007, 80-83.
- . "Honorably hold a name and standing." Ensign 39, May 2009, 97-100.
- . "In the strength of the Lord." Ensign 34, November 2004, 76-78.
- . "Pray always." Ensign 38, November 2008, 41-44.
- . "Quick to observe." Ensign 36, December 2006, 30-36.
- . 2006. "Seek learning by faith." Ensign 37, September 2007, 60-68.
- BeDuhn, Jason David. 2000. The Manichaean Body in Discipline and Ritual. Baltimore, MD: The Johns Hopkins University Press, 2002.
- BeDuhn, Jason David, and Geoffrey Harrison. "The Tebessa Codex: A Manichaean treatise on biblical exegesis and church order." In Emerging from Darkness: Studies in the Recovery of Manichaean Sources, edited by Paul Mirecki and Jason David BeDuhn. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 43, eds. James M. Robinson and H. J. Klimkeit, 33-87. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1997.
- Beecher, Maureen Ursenbach. "The Iowa journal of Lorenzo Snow." BYU Studies 24, no. 3 (1984): 261-73.
- Ben Meir, Samuel. d. 1158. Rabbi Samuel Ben Meir's Commentary on Genesis: An Annotated Translation. Edited by Martin I. Lockshin. Jewish Studies 5. Lewiston, NY: The Edwin Mellen Press, 1989.
- Ben-Amos, Dan, Dov Noy, and Ellen Frankel, eds. Folktales of the Jews; Tales from the Sephardic Dispersion. 5 vols. Translated by Lenn Schramm. Philadelphia, PA: Jewish Publication Society of America, 2006-.
- Benét, Stephen Vincent. "The author is pleased." New York City, NY: The New York Times, September 28, 1941.
- . The Devil and Daniel Webster. New York: Farrar and Rinehart, 1937. <http://tarlton.law.utexas.edu/lpop/etext/devil/devil.htm> (accessed September 30, 2008).
- Bennett, Archibald F. Saviors on Mount Zion: Course No. 21 for the Sunday School. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Sunday School Union Board, 1950.
- Bennett, Richard E. "'Line upon line, precept upon precept': Reflections on the 1877 commencement of the performance of endowments and sealings for the dead." BYU Studies 44, no. 3 (2005): 39-77.

- . Mormons at the Missouri, 1846-1852: "And Should We Die..." Norman, OK: University of Oklahoma Press, 1987.
- Benson, Ezra Taft. "The Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants." Ensign 17, May 1987, 83-85.
- . "A message to Judah from Joseph." Ensign 6, December 1976, 67-72. http://www.lds.org/ldsorg/v/index.jsp?vgnetoid=2354fccf2b7db010VgnVCM1000004d82620aRCRD&locale=0&sourceId=8da81f26d596b010VgnVCM1000004d82620a_____&hideNav=1 (accessed May 29, 2009).
- . The Teachings of Ezra Taft Benson. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1988.
- . 1977. "A vision and a hope for the youth of Zion." 12 April 1977. In BYU Speeches and Devotionals, Brigham Young University. <http://speeches.byu.edu/reader/reader.php?id=6162> (accessed August 7, 2007).
- Benz, Ernst. 1969. "Imago Dei: Man as the image of God." The FARMS Review 17, no. 1 (2005): 223-54.
- . "Imago Dei: Man in the image of God." In Reflections on Mormonism: Judeo-Christian Parallels, Papers Delivered at the Religious Studies Center Symposium, Brigham Young University, March 10-11, 1978, edited by Truman G. Madsen. Religious Studies Monograph Series 4, 201-21. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1978.
- Bergen, Peter L. The Osama bin Laden I Know. New York City, NY: Free Press, 2006.
- Berlin, Adele. Esther. The JPS Bible Commentary, ed. Michael Fishbane. Philadelphia, PA: The Jewish Publication Society, 2001.
- . "A search for a new biblical hermeneutics: Preliminary observations." In The Study of the Ancient Near East in the Twenty-First Century: The William Foxwell Albright Centennial Conference, edited by Jerrold S. Cooper and Glenn M. Schwartz, 195-207. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 1996.
- Berlin, Adele, and Marc Zvi Brettler, eds. The Jewish Study Bible, Featuring the Jewish Publication Society TANAKH Translation. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2004.
- Bernstein, Moshe J. "Contours of Genesis interpretation at Qumran: Contents, context, and nomenclature." In Studies in Ancient Midrash, edited by James L. Kugel, 57-85. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2001.
- "Berossus." In Wikipedia. <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Berossus> (accessed February 22, 2008).
- Berossus. 290-278 BCE. "Fragments of Chaldaean history." In Ancient Fragments of the Phoenician, Chaldaean, Egyptian, Tyrian, Carthaginian, Indian, and Other Writers; with an Introductory Dissertation and an Inquiry into the Philosophy and Trinity of the Ancients, edited by Isaac Preston Cory. 2nd ed. London, England: William Pickering, 1832. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2003. <http://www.sacred-texts.com/cla/af/index.htm> (accessed May 30, 2009).
- Berrett, LaMar C. "Adam-ondi-Ahman." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 1, 19-20. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Berrett, LaMar C., and Max H. Parkin. Sacred Places: Missouri. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2004.
- Bethge, Hans-Gebhard, and Bentley Layton ed. "On the origin of the world." In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed. 170-89. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- "Bethlem Royal Hospital." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bethlem_Royal_Hospital (accessed November 23, 2007).
- Betz, Hans Dieter, and dela Yarbrow Collins, eds. The Sermon on the Mount: A Commentary on the Sermon on the Mount, including the Sermon on the Plain (Matthew 5:3-7:27 and Luke 6:20-49). Hermeneia—A Critical and Historical Commentary on the Bible, eds. Frank Moore Cross, Klaus Baltzer, Paul D. Hanson, S. Dean McBride, Jr., Peter Machinist, Susan Niditch, Christopher R. Seitz, and Roland E. Murphy. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 1995.
- Bhimji, Saleem, ed. The Awaited Savior of Humanity: Al-Mahdi in the Eyes of the Ahlul Bayt. Translated by Saleem Bhimi. 40 Ahadith. Stanmore, Middlesex, England: The Islamic Education Board of the World Federation of Khoja Shia Ithna-Asheri Muslim Communities, 2006.
- Bialik, Hayim Nahman, and Yehoshua Hana Ravnitzky, eds. 1902. The Book of Legends (Sefer Ha-Aggadah): Legends from the Talmud and Midrash. Translated by William G. Braude. New York City, NY: Schocken Books, 1992.
- Bickerman, Elias Joseph. 1965. "Symbolism in the Dura synagogue." In Studies in Jewish and Christian History. Arbeiten zur Geschichte des antiken Judentums und des Urchristentums 3, 225-44. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1986.
- Bickmore, Barry Robert. Restoring the Ancient Church: Joseph Smith and Early Christianity. Ben Lomond, CA: Foundation for Apologetic Information and Research (FAIR), 1999.
- Biddle, Martin———. "The history of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre." In The Church of the Holy Sepulchre, edited by Martin Biddle, Gideon Avni, Jon Seligman, and Tamar Winter, 25-71. New York City, NY: Rizzoli, 2000.
- . The Tomb of Christ. Thrupp, England: Sutton, 1999.
- bin Gorion, Micha Joseph (Berdichevsky), and Emanuel bin Gorion, eds. 1939-1945. Mimekor Yisrael: Classical Jewish Folktales. 3 vols. Translated by I. M. Lask. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1976.
- , eds. 1939-1945. Mimekor Yisrael: Classical Jewish Folktales. Abridged ed. Translated by I. M. Lask. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1990.

- "Biology." In BYU. http://biology.byu.edu/home/Academic_Programs/Undergraduate_Programs/biology.aspx (accessed December 7, 2008).
- Birch, A. Jane. 1993. "King on King Lear: Finding Virtue in Minute Particulars." In Brigham Young University Harold B. Lee Library Institutional Repository, Department of Instructional Science, Brigham Young University. <https://dspace.byu.edu/handle/1877/524> (accessed December 12, 2007).
- Birch, Nicholas. "The hellenization of the Gospel: The Prologue of John and the Joseph Smith Translation." Studia Antiqua 2, no. 2 (Fall 2002): 87-97.
- Birrell, Anne. Chinese Mythology: An Introduction. Baltimore, MD: The Johns Hopkins University Press, 1993.
- Blake, William. ca. 1788. "All religions are one." In William Blake: The Complete Illuminated Books, edited by David Bindman, 18-30. New York City, NY: Thames and Hudson, and the William Blake Trust, 2000.
- . 1809. "A descriptive catalogue [Blake's exhibition and catalogue of 1809]." In The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake, edited by David V. Erdman and Harold Bloom. Newly Revised ed, 529-51. New York City, NY: Anchor, Random House, 1988.
- . The Illuminated Blake: William Blake's Complete Illuminated Works with a Plate-by-Plate Commentary. Edited by David V. Erdman. New York City, NY: Dover Publications, 1974.
- . 1804. "Milton a poem." In Milton a Poem and the Final Illuminated Works: The Ghost of Abel, On Homer's Poetry [and] On Virgil, and Laocoön, edited by Robert N. Essick and Joseph Viscomi. Paperback ed. Blake's Illuminated Books 5, ed. David Bindman, 9-217. Princeton, NJ: The William Blake Trust, Princeton University Press, 1998.
- . ca. 1788. "There is no natural religion." In William Blake: The Complete Illuminated Books, edited by David Bindman, 31-41. New York City, NY: Thames and Hudson, and the William Blake Trust, 2000.
- . 1804. "To the Jews (Excerpt from 'Jerusalem')." In The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake, edited by David V. Erdman and Harold Bloom, 171-74. New York City, NY: Anchor, Random House, 1988.
- . William Blake: The Complete Illuminated Books. Edited by David Bindman. New York City, NY: Thames and Hudson, and the William Blake Trust, 2000.
- Blech, Benjamin, and Roy Doliner. The Sistine Secrets: Michelangelo's Forbidden Messages in the Heart of the Vatican. New York City, NY: HarperOne, 2008.
- Blenkinsopp, Joseph. "P and J in Genesis 1:1-11:26: An alternative hypothesis." In Fortunate the Eyes that See: Essays in Honor of David Noel Freedman, edited by Astrid B. Beck, Andrew H. Bartelt, Paul R. Raabe and Chris A. Franke, 1-15. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1995.
- Block, Daniel I. The Book of Ezekiel: Chapters 25-48. The New International Commentary on the Old Testament, ed. Robert L. Hubbard, Jr. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1998.
- Blomberg, Craig L. Interpreting the Parables. Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 1990.
- Blomberg, Craig L., and Stephen E. Robinson. How Wide the Divide? A Mormon and an Evangelical in Conversation. Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 1997.
- Bloom, Harold. The American Religion: The Emergence of the Post-Christian Nation. New York City, NY: Simon and Schuster, 1992.
- . 1963. Blake's Apocalypse: A Study in Poetic Argument. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 1970.
- . "Commentary." In The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake, edited by David V. Erdman and Harold Bloom, 894-970. New York City, NY: Anchor, Random House, 1988.
- . Genius: A Mosaic of One Hundred Exemplary Creative Minds. New York City, NY: Warner Books, 2002.
- . Jesus and Yahweh: The Names Divine. New York City, NY: Riverhead Books (Penguin Group), 2005.
- . Omens of Millennium: The Gnosis of Angels, Dreams, and Resurrection. New York City, NY: Riverhead, 1996.
- , ed. Satan. Bloom's Major Literary Characters, ed. Harold Bloom. Philadelphia, PA: Chelsea House, 2005.
- . Shakespeare: The Invention of the Human. New York City, NY: Riverhead Books, Penguin Putnam, 1998.
- Blumenthal, David. "Lovejoy's Great Chain of Being and medieval Jewish tradition." In Jacob's Ladder and the Tree of Life, edited by M. L. Kuntz and P. G. Kuntz, 179-90. Bern, Switzerland: Peter Lang, 1986. <http://www.js.emory.edu/BLUMENTHAL/Lovejoy.htm> (accessed September 21, 2007).
- , ed. The Merkabah Tradition and the Zoharic Tradition. Understanding Jewish Mysticism: A Source Reader 1. Jersey City, NJ: Ktav Publishing House, 1979.
- , ed. The Philosophic-Mystical Tradition and the Hasidic Tradition. Understanding Jewish Mysticism: A Source Reader 2. Jersey City, NJ: Ktav Publishing House, 1982.
- . "Reading Creation." In Bibel und Midrasch, Forschung zum Alten Testament, edited by G. Bodendorfer and M. Millard, 117-66. Heidelberg, Germany: Mohr Siebeck, 1998. <http://www.js.emory.edu/BLUMENTHAL/GenIntro.html> (accessed August 8, 2007).

- Boethius, Ancius Manlius Severinus. ca. 524. The Consolation of Philosophy. Translated by P. G. Walsh. New York City, NY: Oxford University Press, 1999.
- Böhlig, Alexander, and Frederik Wisse, eds. "The gospel of the Egyptians (III 40, 12-44, 28; IV 55, 20-60, 30; III 49, 1-69, 20)." In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed, 208-19. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- Boice, James Montgomery. 1982. Creation and Fall (Genesis 1-11). Genesis 1. Grand Rapids, MI: BakerBooks, 1998.
- Bokovoy, David E., and John A. Tvedtnes. Testaments: Links Between the Book of Mormon and the Hebrew Bible. Tooele, UT: Heritage Press, 2003.
- Boman, Thorleif. 1954. Hebrew Thought Compared with Greek. New York City, NY: W. W. Norton, 1970.
- Bonhoeffer, Dietrich. 1937. The Cost of Discipleship. New York: Macmillan, 1963.
- Bonnechere, Pierre. "Trophonius of Lebadea: Mystery aspects of an oracular cult in Boeotia." In Greek Mysteries: The Archaeology and Ritual of Ancient Greek Secret Cults, edited by Michael B. Cosmopoulos, 169-92. New York City, NY: Routledge, 2003.
- Boren, Karen. Messiah of the Winepress. Provo, UT: Beit Parah Publishing, 2002.
- Borgen, Peder. "The Gospel of John and Philo of Alexandria." In Light in a Spotless Mirror: Reflections on Wisdom Traditions in Judaism and Early Christianity, edited by James H. Charlesworth and Michael A. Daise, 45-76. Harrisburg, PA: Trinity Press International, 2003.
- Bornkamm, G., G. Barth, and H. Hold. Tradition and Interpretation in Matthew. Translated by Percy Scott. Philadelphia, PA: Westminster, 1963.
- Bourasse, J. J., and P. Janvier, eds. La Sainte Bible: Traduction Nouvelle Selon la Vulgate. Tours, France: Alfred Mame et Fils, 1866.
- Boyce, Duane. "Of science, scripture, and surprise." The FARMS Review 20, no. 2 (2008): 163-214.
- Boyce, Mary, ed. 1984. Textual Sources for the Study of Zoroastrianism. Textual Sources for the Study of Religion, ed. John Hinnells. Chicago, IL: The University of Chicago Press, 1990.
- . 1979. Zoroastrians: Their Religious Beliefs and Practices. The Library of Religious Beliefs and Practices, ed. John Hinnells. London, England: Routledge, Taylor & Francis Group, 2001.
- Boyd, James W. 1985. "Zoroastrianism: Avestan scripture and rite." In The Holy Book in Comparative Perspective, edited by Frederick M. Denny and Rodney L. Taylor, 109-25. Columbia, SC: University of South Carolina Press, 1993.
- Bradford, Gerald M., ed. Ancient Scrolls from the Dead Sea: Photographs and Commentary on a Unique Collection of Scrolls. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS) at Brigham Young University, 1997.
- Bradley, Walter. "Why I believe the Bible is scientifically reliable." In Why I Am a Christian: Leading Thinkers Explain Why They Believe, edited by Norman L. Geisler and Paul K. Hoffman, 161-81. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Books, 2001.
- Bradshaw, Elma S. Personal journal entry in the possession of the author. August 9, 1985
- Bradshaw, Jeffrey M. "Adam, Eve, and the First Easter." Last Modified March 25, 2010. <http://www.templethemes.net/publications/Meridian/100325-Adam,%20Eve,%20and%20the%20First%20Easter-revised%20100421.pdf>.
- . "The Ark and the Tent: Temple Symbolism in the Story of Noah." In The Temple on Mount Zion, edited by David Rolph Seely, Salt Lake City, UT: Covenant, 2014, in press.
- . "The Ezekiel Mural at Dura Europos: A tangible witness of Philo's Jewish mysteries?" BYU Studies 49, no. 1 (2010): 4-49.
- . "The LDS Book of Enoch as the Culminating Story of a Temple Text." Presented at the Academy of Temple Studies Conference on Enoch and the Temple, Logan, UT and Provo, UT, February 19 and 22, 2013. BYU Studies 53, no. 1 (2014), in press.
- . "Notes from Arthur Henry King's Brigham Young University class on 'Reading the Scriptures.'" February 14, 1980.
- . "'Standing in the holy place': Ancient and modern reverberations of an enigmatic New Testament prophecy." Presented at the Expound Symposium, Provo, UT, May 14, 2011. In The Temple and Antiquity, J. M. Bradshaw, Stephen D. Ricks, and John Thompson, eds. Provo, UT: The Interpreter Foundation, 2014, in preparation.
- . Temple Themes in the Book of Moses. Salt Lake City, UT: Eborn Publishing, 2010.
- . Temple Themes in the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood. Salt Lake City, UT: Eborn Publishing, 2012.
- . "The tree of knowledge as the veil of the sanctuary." In Ascending the Mountain of the Lord: Temple, Praise, and Worship in the Old Testament, edited by David Rolph Seely, Jeffrey R. Chadwick and Matthew J. Grey. The 42nd Annual Brigham Young University Sidney B. Sperry Symposium (26 October, 2013), 49-65. Provo and Salt Lake City, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University and Deseret Book, 2013.
- . "Was Eve Beguiled?" Meridian Magazine, 25 February 2010, <http://www.templethemes.net/publications/Meridian/100225-Was%20Eve%20Beguiled.pdf> (accessed 12 January 2014).

- Bradshaw, Jeffrey M., and Ronan J. Head. "The investiture panel at Mari and rituals of divine kingship in the ancient Near East." Studies in the Bible and Antiquity 4 (2012): 1-42.
- . "Mormonism's Satan and the Tree of Life (Longer version of an invited presentation originally given at the 2009 Conference of the European Mormon Studies Association, Turin, Italy, 30-31 July 2009)." Element: A Journal of Mormon Philosophy and Theology 4, no. 2 (2010): 1-54.
- Bradshaw, Jeffrey M., and David J. Larsen. "Ancient affinities within the LDS book of Enoch, Part One." Interpreter: A Journal of Mormon Scripture 4 (2013): 1-27. <http://www.mormoninterpreter.com/ancient-affinities-within-the-lds-book-of-enoch-part-one/>. (accessed May 25, 2013).
- . "Ancient affinities within the LDS book of Enoch, Part Two." Interpreter: A Journal of Mormon Scripture 4 (2013): 29-74. <http://www.mormoninterpreter.com/ancient-affinities-within-the-lds-book-of-enoch-part-two/>. (accessed May 25, 2013).
- . Enoch, Noah, and the Tower of Babel. In God's Image and Likeness 2. Salt Lake City, UT: The Interpreter Foundation/Eborn Books, 2014.
- Bradshaw, Jeffrey M., Jacob Rennaker, and David J. Larsen. "Revisiting the forgotten voices of weeping in Moses 7: A comparison with ancient texts." Interpreter: A Journal of Mormon Scripture 2 (2012): 41-71.
- Bradshaw, Paul F. The Search for the Origins of Christian Worship: Sources and Methods for the Study of Early Liturgy. 2nd ed. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2002.
- Bradshaw, Robert W. E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, October 9, 2006.
- Brandon. 2005. "Master of the World." In Siris. <http://www.pkblogs.com/branemrys/2005/04/master-of-world.html> (accessed December 2, 2006).
- Brandt, Edward J. "The Book of Jasher and the Latter-day Saints." In Apocryphal Writings and the Latter-day Saints, edited by C. Wilfred Griggs, 297-318. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 1986.
- Braude, William G., ed. The Midrash on Psalms (Midrash Tehillim). 2 vols. Yale Judaica Series 13, ed. Leon Nemoy. New Haven, CN: Yale University Press, 1959.
- , ed. Pesikta Rabbati: Discourses for Feasts, Fasts, and Special Sabbaths. 2 vols. Yale Judaica Series 28, eds. Leon Nemoy, Saul Lieberman, and Harry A. Wolfson. New Haven, CN: Yale University Press, 1968.
- Braude, William G., and Israel J. Kapstein, eds. Pesikta De-Rab Kahana. Philadelphia, PA: Jewish Publication Society, 1975.
- Brayford, Susan, ed. Septuagint Genesis: A Commentary Based on the Greek Text of Codex Alexandrinus. Septuagint Commentary. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill Academic Publishers, 2007.
- Bregman, Marc, ed. The Tanhuma-Yelammedenu Literature: Studies in the Evolution of the Versions. Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2003.
- Brems, David N. Divine Engineering: Scriptural Accounts and Scientific Truths about the Earth's Creation Are Compatible. Springville, UT: Cedar Fort, 2003.
- Brenson, Michael. "Titian and his supreme works of inevitability and freedom." New York City, NY: The New York Times, October 29, 1990. <http://query.nytimes.com/gst/fullpage.html?res=9C0CE7DF123CF93AA15753C1A966958260> (accessed August 8, 2007).
- Brenton, Lancelot C. L. 1851. The Septuagint with Apocrypha: Greek and English. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2005.
- British Methodist Conference, ed. 1984. Hymns and Psalms. Corrected ed. Peterborough, England: Methodist Publishing House, 2004.
- Broadwood, Lucy E., and J. A. Fuller Maitland. English County Songs. London, England: The Leadenhall Press, 1893.
- Brock, Sebastian. "A Syriac Life of Abel." Le Muséon 87 (1974): 467-92.
- Broderick, Carlfred. 1987. "The Uses of Adversity." In My Parents Married on a Dare and Other Favorite Essays on Life, edited by Carlfred Broderick, 121-41. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1996.
- Brodhead, Richard H. "Prophets in America circa 1830: Ralph Waldo Emerson, Nat Turner, Joseph Smith." In Joseph Smith Jr: Reappraisals After Two Centuries, edited by Reid L. Neilson and Terryl L. Givens, 13-29. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2009.
- Brodie, Thomas L. Genesis as Dialogue: A Literary, Historical, and Theological Commentary. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2001.
- Brohi, Allahbakhsh K. "The spiritual significance of the Qur'an." In Foundations, edited by Seyyed Hossein Nasr. Islamic Spirituality 1, 11-23. New York City, NY: The Crossroad Publishing Company, 1987.
- Brooke, John L. The Refiner's Fire: The Making of Mormon Cosmology, 1644-1844. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 1994.

- Brooks, Juanita. 1950. The Mountain Meadows Massacre. Norman, OK: University of Oklahoma Press, 1962.
- . On the Mormon Frontier: The Diary of Hosea Stout. 2 vols. Salt Lake City, UT: University of Utah Press, 1964.
- Brough, Monte J., and John K. Carmack. "How the Hong Kong Temple came to be." Ensign 36, December 2006, 59-61.
- Brown, Francis, S. R. Driver, and Charles A. Briggs. 1906. The Brown-Driver-Briggs Hebrew and English Lexicon. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2005.
- Brown, G. Spencer. 1969. The Laws of Form. Limited ed. Portland, OR: Cognizer Co., 1994.
- Brown, Hugh B. 1956. "Education is a part of salvation." In BYU Education Week, June 20, 1956, Brigham Young University. <http://speeches.byu.edu/?act=viewitem&id=107> (accessed August 7, 2007).
- . "Participation: The way to salvation." Improvement Era 66, June 1963, 506-07.
- Brown, Matthew B. "Brigham Young's teachings on Adam." Presented at the FAIR Conference, August 7, 2009.
- . "Girded about with a lambskin." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 6, no. 2 (1997): 124-51.
- . E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, August 9, 2008.
- . E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, August 12, 2009.
- . The Gate of Heaven. American Fork, UT: Covenant Communications, 1999.
- . The Plan of Salvation: Doctrinal Notes and Commentary. American Fork, UT: Covenant Communications, 2002.
- Brown, Matthew B., and Paul Thomas Smith. Symbols in Stone: Symbolism on the Early Temples of the Restoration. American Fork, UT: Covenant Communications, 1997.
- Brown, Raymond E. The Birth of the Messiah. 2nd ed. The Anchor Bible Reference Library, ed. David Noel Freedman. Doubleday: New York, NY, 1993.
- . The Death of the Messiah: From Gethsemane to the Grave. 2 vols. The Anchor Bible Reference Library, ed. David Noel Freedman. New York City, NY: Doubleday, 1994.
- Brown, S. Kent. "Approaches to the Pentateuch." In Genesis to 2 Samuel, edited by Kent P. Jackson and Robert L. Millet. Studies in Scripture 3, 13-23. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1985.
- . "The hunt for the Valley of Lemuel." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 16, no. 1 (2007): 64-73, 86-88.
- . "The Nag Hammadi Library: A Mormon Perspective." In Apocryphal Writings and the Latter-day Saints, edited by C. Wilfred Griggs, 255-83. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 1986.
- . Voices from the Dust: Book of Mormon Insights. Salt Lake City, UT: Covenant Communications, 2004.
- Brown, Samuel. "The Prophet Elias puzzle." Dialogue: A Journal of Mormon Thought 39, no. 3 (Fall 2006): 1-17.
- . "William Phelps's Paracletes, an early witness to Joseph Smith's divine anthropology." International Journal of Mormon Studies 2 (Spring 2009): 62-82.
- Bruce, F. F., ed. The Epistle to the Hebrews Revised ed. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans Publishing, 1990.
- Brueggemann, Walter, ed. Genesis. Interpretation: A Bible Commentary for Teaching and Preaching, ed. James Luther Mays, Patrick D. Miller, Jr. and Paul J. Achtemeier. Atlanta, GA: John Knox Press, 1982.
- Brumfield, Allaire Chandor. The Attic Festivals of Demeter and Their Relation to the Agricultural Year. Monographs in Classical Studies, ed. W. R. Connor. Salem, NH: The Ayer Company, 1981.
- Brunhes, J. Human Geography: An Attempt at a Positive Classification, Principles and Examples. Translated by I.C. Le Compte. Edited by I. Bowman and R.E. Dodge. Chicago, IL: Rand McNally and Company, 1920. <http://books.google.com/books?id=kpoiAAAAMAAJ> (accessed October 1, 2008).
- Brzezinski, Zbigniew. Second Chance: Three Presidents and the Crisis of American Superpower. New York City, NY: Basic Books, 2007.
- Buchanan, George Wesley. To the Hebrews. The Anchor Bible 36. New York City, NY: Doubleday, 1972.
- Buck, Christopher. Paradise and Paradigm: Key Symbols in Persian Christianity and the Baha'i Faith. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1999.
- Buckley, Jorunn Jacobsen. The Mandaean: Ancient Texts and Modern People. American Academy of Religion: The Religions Series, ed. Paul B. Courtright. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2002.
- , ed. The Scroll of Exalted Kingship: Diwan Malkuta 'Laita. American Oriental Society Translation Series 3. New Haven, CN: American Oriental Society, 1993.
- Budge, E.A. Wallis, ed. "Adam describes the rebellion of Satan against God." In Egyptian Tales and Romances: Pagan, Christian and Muslim, edited by E. A. Wallis Budge, 292-95. London, England: Thornton Butterworth Limited, 1931. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2003.
- , ed. The Book of the Cave of Treasures. London, England: The Religious Tract Society, 1927. Reprint, New York City, NY: Cosimo Classics, 2005.

- , ed. The Book of the Dead. The Chapters of Coming Forth by Day: An English Translation with Introduction, Notes, etc., 1898. Reprint, Boston, MA: Adamant Media Corporation, 2001. In Internet Sacred Texts Archive. <http://www.sacred-texts.com/egy/ebod> (accessed October 3, 2008).
- , ed. Egyptian Religion, 1900. Reprint, Seacaucus, NJ: University Books, 1959.
- , ed. The Queen of Sheba and Her Only Son Menyelek (Kebra Nagast) 2nd ed. London, England: Oxford University Press, 1932. Reprint, New York City, NY: Cosimo Classics, 2004.
- Bukhari, Muhammad Ibn Ismail, ed. 846. Sahih Al-Bukhari: Being the Tradition of Sayings and Doings of the Prophet Muhammad as Narrated by His Companions. 9 vols. Translated by Muhammad Matraji. New Delhi, India: Islamic Book Service, 2006.
- Bullard, Roger A., and Bentley Layton ed. "The Hypostasis of the Archons (II, 4)." In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Revised ed, 161-69. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- Bunge, Gabriel. The Rublev Trinity: The Icon of the Monk-Painter Andrei Rublev. Translated by Andrew Louth. Crestwood, NY: St. Vladimir's Seminary Press, 2007.
- Bunyan, John. 1678. The Annotated Pilgrim's Progress. Edited by Warren W. Wiersbe. Chicago, IL: Moody Press, 1980.
- Burch, Vacher. "The 'Stone' and the 'Keys' (Mt. 16:18ff.)." Journal of Biblical Literature 52 (1933): 147-52.
- Burchard, C. ed. "Joseph and Aseneth." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 2, 177-247. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Burgon, Glade L. "Name of God." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 3, 980-81. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Burke, Kenneth. 1961. "The first three chapters of Genesis: Principles of governance stated narratively." In The Bible: Modern Critical Views, edited by Harold Bloom. Bloom's Modern Critical Views, ed. Harold Bloom, 15-19. Philadelphia, PA: Chelsea House Publishers, 1987.
- Burtea, Bogdan. "Ein mandäischer magischer Text aus der Drower Collection." In Festschrift Rainer Voigt zum sechzigsten Geburtstag, edited by Bogdan Burtea, J. Tropper and H. Younansardaroud, Alter Orient und Altes Testament, 93-103. Münster, Germany, 2004.
- . "Sahr d-parauanaiaa 'Erläuterung der Parauanaiaa' Text, Übersetzung und Kommentar der mandäischen Handschrift DC 24 (Mandäische Forschungen, Bd. 1, Wiesbaden, Germany, 2004)." Dissertation, Freie Universität, 2004.
- Burton, Theodore M. "A marriage to last through eternity." Ensign 17, June 1987, 12-15.
- Bushman, Richard Lyman. 1969. "Faithful history." In Believing History: Latter-day Saint Essays, edited by Reid L. Neilson and Jed L. Woodworth, 3-19. New York City, NY: Columbia University Press, 2004.
- . Joseph Smith and the Beginnings of Mormonism. Urbana, IL: University of Illinois Press, 1984.
- . 2001. "A Joseph Smith for the twenty-first century." In Believing History: Latter-day Saint Essays, edited by Reid L. Neilson and Jed L. Woodworth, 262-78. New York City, NY: Columbia University Press, 2004.
- . "Joseph Smith and the creation of the sacred." In Joseph Smith Jr: Reappraisals After Two Centuries, edited by Reid L. Neilson and Terryl L. Givens, 93-106. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2009.
- . Joseph Smith: Rough Stone Rolling, A Cultural Biography of Mormonism's Founder. New York City, NY: Alfred A. Knopf, 2005.
- . "Joseph Smith's family background." In The Prophet Joseph: Essays on the Life and Mission of Joseph Smith, edited by Larry C. Porter and Susan Easton Black, 1-18. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1988.
- . 2007. "Mitt Romney's Mormonism: A TNR online debate." January 3, 2007. In The New Republic Online. <http://www.tnr.com/doc.mhtml?i=w070101&s=bushman010307> (accessed August 7, 2007).
- . Mormonism: A Very Short Introduction. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2008.
- . "Richard Lyman Bushman." In Why I Believe, 79-83. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 2002.
- . "The theology of councils." In Reason, Revelation, and Faith: Essays in Honor of Truman G. Madsen, edited by Donald W. Parry, Daniel C. Peterson and Stephen D. Ricks, 433-45. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2002.
- Buskirk, Allen R. "Science, pseudoscience, and religious belief." The FARMS Review 17, no. 1 (2005): 273-309.
- Butcher, William. Jules Verne: The Definitive Biography. New York City, NY: Thunder's Mouth Press, 2006.
- Butler, Thomas. E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, October 2, 2006.
- Butlin, Martin. William Blake. London, England: Tate Gallery Publications, 1978.
- Butterworth, Edric Allen Schofeld. The Tree at the Navel of the Earth. Berlin, Germany: Walter de Gruyter, 1970.
- Buxbaum, Yitzhak. Jewish Tales of Mystic Joy. San Francisco, CA: Jossey-Bass, 2002.
- Bynum, Caroline Walker. The Resurrection of the Body in Western Christianity, 200-1336. Lectures on the History of

- Religions, American Council of Learned Societies, New Series 15.* New York City, NY: Columbia University Press, 1995.
- “Byzantine Literature.” In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Byzantine_literature (accessed October 2, 2008).
- Cabanot, Jean. Petit Glossaire des Thèmes d'Iconographie Chrétienne. Vol. 2: Au-delà; personnages saints, illustres ou légendaires; animaux réels ou mythiques; vie de l'Église; cérémonies; objets et symboles. Dax, France: Amis des Anciennes Églises de Landes (AEAL), 1996.
- Cahill, Thomas. How the Irish Saved Civilization: The Untold Story of Ireland's Heroic Role from the Fall of Rome to the Rise of Medieval Europe. New York City, NY: Doubleday, 1995.
- Callaghan, Catherine A. Other Worlds. Johnstown, OH: Pudding House Publications, 1999.
- Callender, Dexter E. Adam in Myth and History: Ancient Israelite Perspectives on the Primal Human. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 2000.
- Cameron, Ron, and Arthur J. Dewey, eds. The Cologne Mani Codex (P. Colon. inv. nr. 4780) 'Concerning the Origin of His Body'. Texts and Translations 15, Early Christian Literature 3, ed. Birger A. Pearson. Missoula, Montana: Scholars Press, 1979.
- Campbell, Beverly. Eve and the Choice Made in Eden. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 2003.
- Campbell, Craig S. Images of the New Jerusalem: Latter Day Saint Faction Interpretations of Independence Missouri. Knoxville, TN: The University of Tennessee Press, 2004.
- Campbell, Joseph. The Hero with a Thousand Faces. London, England: Fontana, 1993.
- Cannon, Donald Q., and Lyndon W. Cook, eds. Far West Record: Minutes of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1830-1844. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1983.
- Cannon, Donald Q., and Richard O. Cowan. Unto Every Nation: Gospel Light Reaches Every Land. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2003.
- Cannon, Elaine Anderson. “Mother in Heaven.” In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 2, 961. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1991.
- Cannon, George Q. 1884. “Discourse by President George Q. Cannon (Delivered in the Assembly Hall, Salt Lake City, Sunday Afternoon, January 6th, 1884).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 25, 22-28. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . Gospel Truth. 2 vols. Edited by Jerreld L. Newquist. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1957-1974.
- . 1888. The Life of Joseph Smith, the Prophet. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- Cannon, Hugh J. 1931. David O. McKay Around the World: An Apostolic Mission. Provo, UT: Spring Creek, 2005.
- Caquot, A. “Un phylactère mandéen en plomb.” Semitica 22 (1972): 67-87.
- Carasik, Michael, ed. The JPS Miqra'ot Gedolot: Exodus. The Commentator's Bible. Philadelphia, PA: The Jewish Publication Society of America, 2005.
- Card, Orson Scott. “Sharing in the spirit of song—and praise.” Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Morning News, February 28, 2008. <http://deseretnews.com/article/1,5143,695256836,00.html> (accessed March 28, 2008).
- Careless, George, Ebenezer Beesley, Joseph Daynes, Evan Stephens, and Thomas C. Griggs. Latter Day Saints' Psalmody. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1889.
- Carroll, James L. “Egyptian craft guild initiations.” Studia Antiqua 5, no. 1 (Spring 2007): 17-44.
- . “The reconciliation of Adam and Israelite temples.” Studia Antiqua 3, no. 1 (Winter 2003): 83-101.
- Carroll, James L., and Elizabeth M. Siler. “Let my prayer be set before Thee: The burning of incense in the temple cult of ancient Israel.” Studia Antiqua 2, no. 2 (Fall 2002): 17-32.
- Cartlidge, David R., and J. Keith Elliott. Art and the Christian Apocrypha. London, England: Routledge, 2001.
- Cassuto, Umberto. 1944. A Commentary on the Book of Genesis. Vol. 1: From Adam to Noah. Translated by Israel Abrahams. 1st English ed. Jerusalem: The Magnes Press, The Hebrew University, 1998.
- . 1949. A Commentary on the Book of Genesis. Vol. 2: From Noah to Abraham. Translated by Israel Abrahams. 1st English ed. Jerusalem: The Magnes Press, The Hebrew University, 1997.
- . 1941. The Documentary Hypothesis and the Composition of the Pentateuch. Jerusalem: The Magnes Press, The Hebrew University, 1961.
- Cazenave, Michel. Encyclopédie des Symboles (Updated and expanded version of the German text of Hans Biedermann Knäurs Lexicon der Symbole). Translated by Françoise Périgaut, Gisèle Marie and Alexandre Tondat. Paris, France: Librairie Générale Française, 1996.
- Chadwick, Jeffrey R. “Revisiting Golgotha and the Garden Tomb.” The Religious Educator: Perspectives on the Restored Gospel 4, no. 1 (2003). http://religion.byu.edu/NXT/gateway.dll/public1/1/2/89?fn=default.htm\$f=templatæ\$3.0&vid=reledpublic:10.1048/enu (accessed March 22, 2008).

- . “The wrong place for Lehi’s trail and the Valley of Lemuel.” FARMS Review 17, no. 2 (2005): 197-215.
- Chailley, Jacques. 1968. The Magic Flute Unveiled: Esoteric Symbolism in Mozart’s Masonic Opera, An Interpretation of the Libretto and the Music. English ed. Rochester, VT: Inner Traditions International, 1992.
- Chamberlain, Jonathan. Chinese Gods. Selangor Darul Ehsan, Malaysia: Pelanduk Publications, 1987.
- Chang, Kwang-chih. “China on the eve of the historical period.” In The Cambridge History of Ancient China: From the Origins of Civilization to 221 BC, edited by Michael Loewe and Edward L. Shaughnessy, 37-73. New York City, NY: Cambridge University Press, 1999.
- Chappell, William. The Ballad Literature and Popular Music of the Olden Time. London, England: Chappell and Company, 1859.
- Charles, R. H., ed. The Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament in English. 2 vols. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1913. Reprint, Berkeley, CA: Apocryphile Press, 2004.
- , ed. The Book of Enoch Together with a Reprint of the Greek Fragments 2nd ed. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1912. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2005.
- Charlesworth, James H. “The classical Protestant view of human nature.” In On Human Nature: The Jerusalem Center Symposium, edited by Truman G. Madsen, David Noel Freedman and Pam Fox Kuhlken, 69-84. Ann Arbor, MI: Pryor Pettengill Publishers, 2004.
- . “Conclusion: The origin and development of resurrection beliefs.” In Resurrection: The Origin and Future of a Biblical Doctrine, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Faith and Scholarship Colloquies 3, 218-31. New York City, NY: T & T Clark, 2006.
- . The Good and Evil Serpent: How a Universal Symbol Became Christianized. Des Moines, IA: Anchor Bible, 2010.
- . “Jesus research and archaeology: A new perspective.” In Jesus and Archaeology, edited by James H. Charlesworth, 11-63. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 2006.
- . “Jesus research and the appearance of psychobiography.” In Reason, Revelation, and Faith: Essays in Honor of Truman G. Madsen, edited by Donald W. Parry, Daniel C. Peterson and Stephen D. Ricks, 55-84. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2002.
- . “Lady Wisdom and Johannine Christianity.” In Light in a Spotless Mirror: Reflections on Wisdom Traditions in Judaism and Early Christianity, edited by James H. Charlesworth and Michael A. Daise, 92-133. Harrisburg, PA: Trinity Press International, 2003.
- , ed. “Odes of Solomon.” In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. 2 vols. Vol. 2, 725-71. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- , ed. The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha. 2 vols. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983. <http://ocp.acadiau.ca/> (accessed September 20, 2008).
- . “Resurrection: The Dead Sea Scrolls and the New Testament.” In Resurrection: The Origin and Future of a Biblical Doctrine, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Faith and Scholarship Colloquies 3, 138-86. New York City, NY: T & T Clark, 2006.
- . “Where does the concept of resurrection appear and how do we know that?” In Resurrection: The Origin and Future of a Biblical Doctrine, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Faith and Scholarship Colloquies 3, 1-21. New York City, NY: T & T Clark, 2006.
- Chaucer, Geoffrey. ca. 1380. The Canterbury Tales, Fifteen Tales and the General Prologue: Authoritative Text, Sources and Backgrounds, Criticism. Edited by V. A. Kolve and Glending Olson. 2nd ed. Norton Critical Editions. New York City, NY: W. W. Norton, 2005.
- Chavalas, Mark W., and K. Lawson Younger, Jr., eds. Mesopotamia and the Bible: Comparative Explorations. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2002.
- Chavannes, É., and P. Pelliot. Un traité manichéen retrouvée en Chine: Traduit et annoté (Extraits du Journal Asiatique, nov.-déc. 1911, pp. 499-617; jan.-fév. 1913, pp. 99-199; mars-avr. 1913, pp. 261-394). Paris, France: Imprimerie Nationale, 1912.
- Chaviv, Yaakov ibn. 1516. Ein Yaakov: The Ethical and Inspirational Teachings of the Talmud. Edited by Avraham Yaakov Finkel. Lanham, MI: Jason Aronson / Rowman and Littlefield Publishing Group, 1999.
- Chebel, Malek. Les Symboles de l’Islam. Paris, France: Assouline, 1999.
- Cherbonnier, Edmond LaB. “In defense of anthropomorphism.” In Reflections on Mormonism: Judeo-Christian Parallels, Papers Delivered at the Religious Studies Center Symposium, Brigham Young University, March 10-11, 1978, edited by Truman G. Madsen. Religious Studies Monograph Series 4, 155-73. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1978.
- Chesnutt, Randall D. “Joseph and Aseneth: Food as an identity marker.” In The Historical Jesus in Context, edited by

- Amy-Jill Levine, Dale C. Allison, Jr. and John Dominic Crossan, 357-65. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2006.
- Chester, Andrew. Messiah and Exaltation: Jewish Messianic and Visionary Traditions and New Testament Christology. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 207. Tübingen, Germany: Mohr Siebeck, 2007.
- Chesterton, Gilbert Keith. 1903. "Charles Dickens." In Collected Works. Vol. 15: Chesterton on Dickens, 29-209. San Francisco, CA: Ignatius, 1989.
- . 1905. "Heretics." In Collected Works, edited by David Dooley. Vol. 1: Heretics, Orthodoxy, The Blatchford Controversies, 39-207. San Francisco, CA: Ignatius, 1986.
- . 1908. Orthodoxy. New York City, NY: Image Books / Doubleday, 2001.
- . 1909. "A piece of chalk." In Tremendous Trifles, 15-19. Charleston, SC: BiblioBazaar, BiblioLife, n. d.
- . 1910. William Blake. New York City, NY: Cosimo, 2005.
- Chittick, William C. 2003. "Mysticism in Islam." Lecture given at the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies, May 2003. In Middle Eastern Texts Initiative, Brigham Young University. http://meti.byu.edu/mysticism_chittick.html (accessed August 7, 2007).
- Chouraqui, André, ed. La Bible. Paris, France: Desclée de Brouwer, 2003.
- "Christian Symbols." In Fish Eaters. <http://www.fisheaters.com/symbols.html> (accessed September 29, 2008).
- Christensen, Kevin. Paradigms Regained: A Survey of Margaret Barker's Scholarship and Its Significance for Mormon Studies. Vol. 2. Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies Occasional Papers, ed. William J. Hamblin. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies at BYU, 2001.
- . "The temple, the monarchy, and wisdom: Lehi's world and the scholarship of Margaret Barker." In Glimpses of Lehi's Jerusalem, edited by John W. Welch, David Rolph Seely and Jo Ann H. Seely, 449-522. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), Brigham Young University, 2004.
- Christensen, Kevin, and Shauna Christensen. "Nephite Feminism Revisited: Thoughts on Carol Lynn Pearson's View of Women in the Book of Mormon." FARMS Review of Books 10, no. 1 (1998): 9-61. <http://maxwellinstitute.byu.edu/pdf.php?filename=MjQ3Njk2NDg3LTUwLTUucGRm&type=cmV2aWV3> (accessed December 24, 2007).
- Christensen, Michael J., and Jeffery A. Wittung, eds. 2007. Partakers of the Divine Nature: The History and Development of Deification in the Christian Traditions. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2008.
- Christenson, Allen J., ed. 2004. Popol Vuh: Literal Poetic Version. Translated by Allen J. Christenson. Norman, OK: University of Oklahoma Press, 2008.
- , ed. Popol Vuh: The Mythic Sections—Tales of First Beginnings from the Ancient K'iche'-Maya. Translated by Allen J. Christenson. Ancient Texts and Mormon Studies 2, eds. John W. Welch and John A. Tvedtnes. Provo, UT: The Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS) at Brigham Young University, 2000.
- , ed. Popol Vuh: The Sacred Book of the Maya. Translated by Allen J. Christenson. Norman, OK: University of Oklahoma Press, 2003.
- . "The sacred tree of the ancient Maya." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 6, no. 1 (1997): 1-23.
- Chrysostom, John. ca. 386-407. Commentaries on the Sages. Vol. 1: Commentary on Job. Translated by Robert Charles Hill. Brookline, MA: Holy Cross Orthodox Press, 2006.
- . ca. 386-407. Homilies on Genesis 1-17. Translated by Robert Hill. Washington, DC: Catholic University of America Press, 1986.
- Church Educational System. Charge to Religious Educators. 2nd ed. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1982.
- . Religion 327: The Pearl of Great Price Student Manual. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 2000.
- Cicero, Marcus Tullius. d. 43 BC. "De Legibus (On the Laws)." In Operum Collectio. Intratext Digital Library <http://www.intratext.com/y/LAT0922.HTM> (accessed April 17, 2008).
- Clairmont, Christoph W. Classic Attic Tombstones. 9 vols. Kilchberg, Switzerland: Akanthus Verlag für Archäologie, 1993-1995.
- Clark, E. Douglas. The Blessings of Abraham: Becoming a Zion People. American Fork, UT: Covenant Communications, 2005.
- . "Cedars and stars: Enduring symbols of cosmic kingship in Abraham's encounter with Pharaoh." In Astronomy, Papyrus, and Covenant, edited by John Gee and Brian M. Hauglid. Studies in the Book of Abraham 3, 37-55. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), Brigham Young University, 2005.
- . "A prologue to Genesis: Moses 1 in light of Jewish traditions." BYU Studies 45, no. 1 (2006): 129-42.
- Clark, Elizabeth A. "New perspectives on the Origenist controversy: Human embodiment and ascetic strategies." Church History 59, no. 2 (1990): 145-62.

- Clark, J. Reuben, Jr. "Our priceless special blessings." The Improvement Era 57, December 1954, 878-79.
- . "Talk for the Evening Meeting." In Conference Report: One Hundred Twelfth Semiannual General Conference, October 1942, 54-59. 1942.
- . "When are the writings and sermons of church leaders entitled to the claim of being scripture? (July 31, 1954)." In J. Reuben Clark: Selected Papers, edited by David H. Yarn, Jr., 95-112. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1984.
- . 1956. Why the King James Version. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1979.
- Clark, James R., ed. Messages of the First Presidency. 6 vols. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1965-1975.
- Clark, Marden J. Liberating Form: Mormon Essays on Religion and Literature. Salt Lake City, UT: Aspen Books, 1992.
- Clarke, Arthur C. 1953. Childhood's End. 2nd ed. New York City, NY: Ballantine Books, 1990.
- Clarke, Arthur C., and C. S. Lewis. From Narnia to a Space Odyssey: The War of Ideas Between Arthur C. Clarke and C. S. Lewis. Edited by Ryder W. Miller. New York City, NY: iBooks, 2003.
- Clayton, Robert W. "Frequently asked questions." In BYU-I Employee Web Site. <http://emp.byui.edu/claytonr/FAQ.pdf> (accessed December 7, 2008).
- Clayton, William. "Diaries, November 24, 1840-February 27, 1846." In William Clayton's Nauvoo Diaries and Personal Writings, ed. Robert C. Fillerup. <http://www.boap.org/LDS/Early-Saints/clayton-diaries> (accessed January 3, 2008).
- . Intimate Chronicle: The Journals of William Clayton. Edited by George D. Smith. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 1995.
- Clement of Alexandria. ca. 190-215. "Exhortation to the Heathen." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 2, 171-206. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885.
- . ca. 190-215. "The Stromata, or Miscellanies." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 2, 299-568. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Clifford, Richard J., ed. Creation Accounts in the Ancient Near East and in the Bible. Catholic Biblical Quarterly Monograph Series 26. Washington, D.C.: Catholic Biblical Association, 1994.
- . "Creationism's value?" America: The National Catholic Weekly 182, no. 8 (11 March 2000). <http://www.americamagazine.org/gettext.cfm?articleTypeID=1&textID=5848&issueID=279> (accessed August 8, 2007).
- , ed. "Ewe and Wheat." In Creation Accounts in the Ancient Near East and in the Bible, edited by Richard J. Clifford, 45-46. Washington, DC: Catholic Biblical Association, 1994.
- . "The temple and the holy mountain." In The Temple in Antiquity, edited by Truman G. Madsen, 107-24. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1984.
- . The Wisdom Literature. Nashville, TN: The Abingdon Press, 1998.
- Clinton, Kevin. "Stages of initiation in the Eleusinian and Samothracian mysteries." In Greek Mysteries: The Archaeology and Ritual of Ancient Greek Secret Cults, edited by Michael B. Cosmopoulos, 50-78. New York City, NY: Routledge, 2003.
- Closterman, Wendy E. "Family ideology and family history: The function of funerary markers in classical Attic peribolos tombs." American Journal of Archaeology 111, no. 4 (October 2007): 633-52.
- Cobb, John B., Jr., ed. Back to Darwin: A Richer Account of Evolution. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 2008.
- Cohen, Abraham, ed. The Soncino Chumash: The Five Books of Moses with Haphtaroth. London, England: The Soncino Press, 1983.
- Cohen, H. Hirsch. The Drunkenness of Noah. Tuscaloosa, AL: University of Alabama Press, 1974.
- Cohen, Martin Samuel. Shi'ur Qomah: Liturgy and Theurgy in Pre-Kabbalistic Jewish Mysticism. Lanham, MD: University Press of America, Rowman & Littlefield, 1983.
- , ed. Shi'ur Qomah: Texts and Recensions. Tübingen, Germany: J. C. B. Mohr, 1985.
- Cole, Susan G. "Landscapes of Dionysos and Elysian fields." In Greek Mysteries: The Archaeology and Ritual of Ancient Greek Secret Cults, edited by Michael B. Cosmopoulos, 193-217. New York City, NY: Routledge, 2003.
- Coles, Robert. The Secular Mind. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1999.
- Coleson, Joseph E. "Israel's life cycle from birth to resurrection." In Israel's Apostasy and Restoration: Essays in Honor of Roland K. Harrison, edited by Avraham Gileadi, 237-50. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Book House, 1988.
- Collier, Fred C., and William S. Harwell, eds. 1832-1837. Kirtland Council Minute Book. Salt Lake City, UT: Collier's Publishing Company, 1996.
- Collins, Francis S. The Language of God: A Scientist Presents Evidence for Belief. New York City, NY: Free Press, 2006.

- Collins, John J. Between Athens and Jerusalem: Jewish Identity in the Hellenistic Diaspora. 2nd ed. The Biblical Resource Series, eds. Astrid B. Beck and David Noel Freedman. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 2000.
- . “The Son of Man and the Saints of the Most High in the Book of Daniel.” Journal of Biblical Literature 93, no. 1 (1974): 50-66.
- . “The sons of God and the daughters of men.” In Sacred Marriages, edited by Martti Nissinen and Risto Uro, 259-74. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 2008.
- Colton, Albert J. “Ayatollah Solzhenitsyn: Is he really any help?” In Alexander Solzhenitsyn Challenges the West: “A World Split Apart” (Transcript of Proceedings, University of Utah, May 10, 1979), edited by Susan Wakefield, 8-11. Salt Lake City, UT: Utah Endowment for the Humanities, 1979.
- Colvin, Don F. Nauvoo Temple: A Story of Faith. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 2002.
- Compton, Todd M. E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, April 21, 2008.
- . “The handclasp and embrace as tokens of recognition.” In By Study and Also by Faith: Essays in Honor of Hugh W. Nibley, edited by John M. Lundquist and Stephen D. Ricks. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 611-42. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990.
- . “The whole token: Mystery symbolism in classical recognition drama.” Typescript of article provided by the author. Epoché: UCLA Journal for the History of Religions 13 (1985): 1-81.
- Condie, Spencer J. Your Agency: Handle with Care. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1996.
- Conisbee, Philip. Art for the Nation: Collecting for a Century. Washington, D.C.: National Gallery of Art, 2000.
- Consolmagno, Guy. God's Mechanics: How Scientists and Engineers Make Sense of Religion. San Francisco, CA: Jossey-Bass, 2008.
- Coogan, Michael D. “The great gulf between scholars and the pew.” Bible Review 10, no. 3 (June 1994): 44-48, 55. <http://members.bib-arch.org/nph-proxy.pl/000000A/http/www.basarchiv.org/bswbSearch.asp=3fPubID=3dBSBR&Volume=3d10&Issue=3d3&ArticleID=3d15&UserID=3d0> (accessed June 23, 2007).
- Cook, Lyndon W. Nauvoo Marriages Proxy Sealings 1843-1846. Provo, UT: Grandin Book Company, 2004.
- . The Revelations of the Prophet Joseph Smith. Provo, UT: Seventy's Mission Bookstore, 1981.
- Cooper, James, and Arthur John Maclean, eds. ca. 350. Testament of Our Lord, Translated into English from the Syriac with Introduction and Notes, 1st ed. London, England: T&T Clark, 1902. Reprint, BookSurge Publishing, 2000.
- Cooper, Rex Eugene. Promises Made to the Fathers. Publications in Mormon Studies 5, ed. Linda King Newell. Salt Lake City, UT: University of Utah Press, 1990.
- Coppens, Philip. “William Blake: What paintings of visions come.” In Unknown Masters, ed. Philip Coppens. <http://www.philipcoppens.com/blake.html> (accessed November 28, 2007).
- Cormican, L. A. 1951. “Medieval idiom in Shakespeare.” In Shakespeare's Christian Dimension: An Anthology of Commentary, edited by Roy Battenhouse, 24-27. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1994.
- Cosmas. ca. 970. Le Traité Contre Les Bogomiles de Cosmas le Prêtre. Edited by Henri-Charles Puech and André Vaillant. Travaux publiés par l'Institut d'Études slaves 21. Paris, France: Imprimerie Nationale, 1945.
- Cosmopoulos, Michael B., ed. Greek Mysteries: The Archaeology and Ritual of Ancient Greek Secret Cults. New York City, NY: Routledge, 2003.
- . “Mycenaean religion at Eleusis: The architecture and stratigraphy of Megaron B.” In Greek Mysteries: The Archaeology and Ritual of Ancient Greek Secret Cults, edited by Michael B. Cosmopoulos, 1-24. New York City, NY: Routledge, 2003.
- Cottle, Thomas D. Adam-ondi-Ahman: A Legacy of Adam and Eve. Portland, OR: Insight, 2005.
- Coulano, Ioan P. 1990. The Tree of Gnosis: Gnostic Mythology from Early Christianity to Modern Nihilism (Translation of “Les Gnosés Dualistes d'occident”). Translated by H. S. Wiesner. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1992.
- Cowan, Richard O. Answers to Your Questions about the Doctrine and Covenants. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1996.
- . “The great temple of the New Jerusalem.” In Regional Studies in Latter-day Saint Church History: Missouri, edited by Arnold K. Garr and Clark V. Johnson, 137-54. Provo, UT: Department of Church History and Doctrine, Brigham Young University, 1994.
- . Temples to Dot the Earth. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1989.
- Cowdery, Oliver. “Egyptian Mummies.” Latter Day Saints' Messenger and Advocate 2:3, December, 1835, 233-37.
- . “Letter to W. W. Phelps dated Sabbath evening, September 7, 1834, Norton, Medina County, Ohio.” Saints' Messenger and Advocate 1, October, 1834, 13-16.
- Crangle, Edward F., and H. S. Brikha. Nāōraia, Ma'buta: The Mandaean Baptism. Corpus Codicum Mandaeorum, ed. Erica C. D. Hunter. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 2008.
- . Nāōraia, The Nāōraian: Extraordinary Priestcraft in Mandaism. Corpus Codicum Mandaeorum, ed. Erica C. D. Hunter. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, forthcoming.

- Crenshaw, James L. "Love is stronger than death: Intimations of life beyond the grave." In Resurrection: The Origin and Future of a Biblical Doctrine, edited by James H. Charlesworth, 53-78. New York City, NY: T & T Clark International, 2006.
- Cross, Frank Moore. The Ancient Library of Qumran. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 1995.
- . From Epic to Canon: History and Literature in Ancient Israel. Baltimore, MD: The Johns Hopkins University Press, 1998.
- Csapo, Eric. Theories of Mythology. Ancient Cultures. Oxford, England: Blackwell, 2005.
- Cumont, Franz Valéry Marie. Recherches sur le Symbolisme Funéraire des Romains. Bibliothèque Archéologique et Historique 35. Paris, France: Paul Geuthner, 1942.
- Currid, John D. Ancient Egypt and the Old Testament. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Books, 1997.
- Cyril of Jerusalem. ca. 347. "First Catechetical Lectures." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 7, 6-143. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1894. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 1994.
- . ca. 347. "Five Catechetical Lectures to the Newly Baptized on the Mysteries." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 7, 144-57. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1894. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 1994.
- Dahl, Larry E. "The Joseph Smith Translation and the Doctrine and Covenants." In Plain and Precious Truths Restored: The Doctrinal and Historical Significance of the Joseph Smith Translation, edited by Robert L. Millet and Robert J. Matthews, 104-33. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1995.
- . "The vision of the glories." In The Doctrine and Covenants, edited by Robert L. Millet and Kent P. Jackson. Studies in Scripture 1, 279-308. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- Dahl, Larry E., and Charles D. Tate, Jr., eds. The Lectures on Faith in Historical Perspective. Religious Studies Specialized Monograph Series 15. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1990.
- Damon, S. Foster, and Morris Eaves. 1965. A Blake Dictionary: The Ideas and Symbols of William Blake. Revised ed. Hanover, NH: University Press of New England, 1988.
- Dan, Joseph, ed. The Heart and the Fountain: An Anthology of Jewish Mystical Experiences. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2003.
- . Jewish Mysticism. 4 vols. Northvale, NJ: Jason Aronson, 1998-1999.
- Danby, Herbert, ed. The Mishnah. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1933.
- Daniell, David. "Reading the Bible." In A Companion to Shakespeare, edited by David Scott Kastan, 158-71. Oxford, England: Blackwell Publishers, 1999.
- . "Shakespeare and the Protestant mind." In Shakespeare and Religions, edited by Peter D. Holland. Shakespeare Survey: An Annual Survey of Shakespeare Studies and Production 54, ed. Peter D. Holland, 1-12. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2001.
- Daniélou, Jean. The Theology of Jewish Christianity. London, England: Darton, Longman and Todd, 1964.
- Danner, Victor. "The early development of Sufism." In Islamic Spirituality 1: Foundations, edited by Seyyed Hossein Nasr, 239-64. New York City, NY: The Crossroad Publishing Company, 1987.
- Dart, John. Decoding Mark. Harrisburg, PA: Trinity Press International, 2003.
- "Das neue Jerusalem, Bamberger Apokalypse Folio 55 recto, Bamberg, Staatsbibliothek, MS A. II. 42." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Image:BambergApocalypseFolio055rNew_Jerusalem.JPG (accessed September 25, 2008).
- David, Rosalie. The Experience of Ancient Egypt. London, England: Routledge, 2000.
- Davidson, Gustav. 1967. A Dictionary of Angels, including the Fallen Angels. New York City, NY: The Free Press, 1971.
- Davidson, Herbert A. Moses Maimonides: The Man and His Works. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2004.
- Davies, Glenys. "The significance of the handshake motif in classical funerary art." American Journal of Archaeology 89, no. 4 (October 1985): 627-40.
- Davies, Paul. About Time: Einstein's Unfinished Revolution. London, England: Penguin, 1995.
- . 2006. The Goldilocks Enigma: Why Is the Universe Just Right for Life? (Also published as Cosmic Jackpot). London, England: Penguin, 2007.
- . The Mind of God: The Scientific Basis for a Rational World. New York: Simon and Schuster / Touchstone, 1993.
- Davies, W. D. "Reflections on the Mormon 'canon.'" In Christians Among Jews and Gentiles: Essays in Honor of Krister Stendahl on His Sixty-fifth Birthday, edited by George W. E. Nickelsburg and George W. MacRae, 44-66. Philadelphia, PA: Fortress Press, 1986.
- Davies, W. V. "Egyptian hieroglyphs." In Reading the Past: Ancient Writing from Cuneiform to the Alphabet, edited by J. T. Hooker, 74-135. London, England: The British Museum Press, 1990.

- Davila, James R. "Melchizedek: King, Priest, and God." In The Seductiveness of Jewish Myth, edited by S. D. Breslauer, 217-34. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1997.
- Dawood, N. J. 1956. The Koran. London, England: Penguin Books, 1997.
- de Blois, F., and N. Sims-Williams, eds. Dictionary of Manichaean Texts. Vol. 2: Texts from Iraq and Iran (Texts in Syriac, Arabic, Persian and Zoroastrian Middle Persian). Corpus Fontium Manichaeorum, Series Subsidia. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 2006.
- de Echevarria y Veytia, Don Mariano Fernandez. ca. 1778. Ancient America Rediscovered (First Portion of the two-volume Historia Antigua de Mexico). Translated by Donald W. Hemingway and W. David Hemingway. Springville, UT: Cedar Fort, 2000.
- de Galember, Laurent. "La grandeur du petit prince." Mémoire de DEA de Lettres modernes dirigé par J-M. Maulpoix, Université Paris X-Nanterre, 2001. <http://nitescence.free.fr/DEA.pdf> (accessed August 8, 2007).
- . La grandeur du petit prince. Paris, France: Éditions Le Manuscrit, 2003. <http://nitescence.free.fr/DEA.pdf> (accessed August 8, 2007).
- de Silva, Kingsley M. "Sir James Emerson Tennent: Colonial Administrator and Historian." Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society of Sri Lanka 41, no. Special Number (1996): 13-37.
- De Vaux, Roland, ed. La Bible de Jérusalem Nouvelle ed. Paris, France: Desclée de Brouwer, 1975.
- De Vecchi, Pierluigi, and Gianluigi Colalucci. Michelangelo: The Vatican Frescoes. Translated by David Stanton and Andrew Ellis. New York City, NY: Abbeville Press Publishers, 1996.
- Dearmer, P. and R. Vaughan Williams, eds. 1906. The English Hymnal with Tunes. Second Enlarged ed. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1933. Reprint, Centenary Edition, Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2006.
- , eds. The Oxford Book of Carols. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1928.
- Decoo, Wilfried. "The image of Mormonism in French literature: Part 1." BYU Studies 14, no. 2 (1974): 1-15.
- Della Torre, Stefano Levi. "The anxiety of Eden." In The Earthly Paradise: The Garden of Eden from Antiquity to Modernity, edited by F. Regina Psaki and Charles Hindley. International Studies in Formative Christianity and Judaism, 5-13. Binghamton, NY: Academic Studies in the History of Judaism, Global Publications, State University of New York at Binghamton, 2002.
- Denny, Frederick M. 1985. "Islam: Qur'an and Hadith." In The Holy Book in Comparative Perspective, edited by Frederick M. Denny and Rodney L. Taylor, 84-108. Columbia, SC: University of South Carolina Press, 1993.
- Derr, Jill Mulvey. "The significance of 'O My Father' in the personal journey of Eliza R. Snow." BYU Studies 36, no. 1 (1996-1997): 84-126.
- , Janath Russell Cannon, and Maureen Ursenbach Beecher. Women of Covenant: The Story of Relief Society. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- Deutsch, Nathaniel. "Introduction [to the Mandaean Literature]." In The Gnostic Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone and Marvin W. Meyer, 527-35. Boston, MA: Shambhala, 2003.
- Deutscher, Guy. The Unfolding of Language: An Evolutionary Tour of Mankind's Greatest Invention. New York City, NY: Henry Holt, 2005.
- Devereux, E. J. 1968. "Sacramental imagery in The Tempest." In Shakespeare's Christian Dimension: An Anthology of Commentary, edited by Roy Battenhouse, 154-257. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1994.
- Dew, Sheri L. Go Forward with Faith: The Biography of Gordon B. Hinckley. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1996.
- Dhammika, Venerable S. 2007. "Sri Pada: Buddhism's Most Sacred Mountain – A Pilgrim's Guide." In Buddhist Studies: Buddha Dharma Education Association and BuddhaNet. <http://www.buddhanet.net/e-learning/buddhistworld/sri-pada.htm> (accessed September 20, 2007).
- Díaz, Gisele, Alan Rodgers, and Bruce E. Byland, eds. The Codex Borgia: A Full-Color Restoration of the Ancient Mexican Manuscript. New York City, NY: Dover Books, 1993.
- Dickens, Charles. 1865. The Uncommercial Traveler. Centennial ed. Charles Dickens Complete Works. London, England: Heron Books, 1970.
- DiTommaso, Lorenzo, ed. A Bibliography of Pseudepigrapha Research 1850-1999. Journal for the Study of the Pseudepigrapha Supplement Series 39, ed. Lester L. Grabbe and James H. Charlesworth. Sheffield, England: Sheffield Academic Press, 2001.
- "Dives and Lazarus." In The Hymns and Carols of Christmas. http://www.hymnsandcarolsofchristmas.com/Hymns_and_Carols/dives_and_lazarus.htm (accessed March 28, 2008).
- "Do temples always face east?" In The FAIR Wiki, Foundation for Apologetic Information and Research. http://en.fairmormon.org/Do_temples_always_face_east (accessed February 16, 2008).

- Doane, Alger Nicolaus, ed. Genesis A: A New Critical Edition. Madison, WI: University of Wisconsin Press, 1978.
- , ed. The Saxon Genesis: An Edition of the West Saxon Genesis B and the Old Saxon Vatican Genesis. Madison, WI: University of Wisconsin Press, 1991.
- Doctrine and Covenants Student Manual: Religion 324-325*. 1981. 2nd ed. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 2001.
- Dogniez, Cécile, and Marguerite Harl, eds. Le Pentateuque d'Alexandrie: Texte Grec et Traduction. La Bible des Septante, eds. Cécile Dogniez and Marguerite Harl. Paris, France: Les Éditions du Cerf, 2001.
- Doi, Abdur-Rahman Ibrahim. "Sunnism." In Islamic Spirituality 1: Foundations, edited by Seyyed Hossein Nasr, 147-59. New York City, NY: The Crossroad Publishing Company, 1987.
- Dolbee, Sandi. "David Noel Freedman; UCSD professor a legend among Bible scholars." San Diego Union-Tribune Online, 20 April 2008. <http://www.signonsandiego.com/news/obituaries/20080420-9999-1c20freedman.html> (accessed July 15, 2008).
- Donne, John. 1609. "Holy Sonnets." In John Donne: The Major Works, edited by John Carey, 173-80. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2000.
- Donner, Fred M. "The historical context." In The Cambridge Companion to the Qur'an, edited by Jane Dammen McAuliffe, 23-39. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2006.
- Dorsey, David A. The Literary Structure of the Old Testament: A Commentary on Genesis-Malachi. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2004.
- Douglas, Mary. "Atonement in Leviticus." Jewish Studies Quarterly 1, no. 2 (1993-1994): 109-30.
- . Leviticus as Literature. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2001.
- Dowe, Phil. Galileo, Darwin, and Hawking: The Interplay of Science, Reason, and Religion. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 2005.
- Downing, David C. Planets in Peril: A Critical Study of C. S. Lewis's Ransom Trilogy. Amherst, MA: The University of Massachusetts Press, 1992.
- Doxey, Graham W. "Garden of Eden." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 2, 533-34. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Draper, Richard D. "The creation of humankind, an allegory? A note on Abraham 5:7, 14-16." In Astronomy, Papyrus, and Covenant, edited by John Gee and Brian M. Hauglid. Studies in the Book of Abraham 3, 75-82. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), Brigham Young University, 2005.
- Draper, Richard D., S. Kent Brown, and Michael D. Rhodes. The Pearl of Great Price: A Verse-by-Verse Commentary. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- Draper, Richard D., and Donald W. Parry. "Seven promises to those who overcome: Aspects of Genesis 2-3 in the seven letters." In The Temple in Time and Eternity, edited by Donald W. Parry and Stephen D. Ricks, 121-41. Provo, UT: The Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS) at Brigham Young University, 1999.
- Drewermann, Eugen. 1992. "Le Petit Prince, une parabole religieuse?" In Il Était une Fois... Le Petit Prince, edited by Alban Cerisier, 279-83. Paris, France: Éditions Gallimard, 2006.
- Driver, Tom F. "Shakespeare's sense of history." In Shakespeare's Christian Dimension: An Anthology of Commentary, edited by Roy Battenhouse, 36-40. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1994.
- Drower, E. S., ed. The Book of the Zodiac (Sfar Malwasia) D. C. 31. Oriental Translation Fund 35. London, England: Royal Asiatic Society, 1949. http://www.egnu.org/~mandaeen/The_Book_of_the_Zodiac_Drower.pdf (accessed September 15, 2007).
- , ed. The Canonical Prayerbook of the Mandaean. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1959. <http://www.gnosis.org/library/ginzarba.htm> (accessed September 11, 2007).
- , ed. The Coronation of the Great Sislam: Being a Description of the Rite of the Coronation of a Mandaean Priest. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1962. <http://www.mandaeenworld.com/> (accessed September 11, 2007).
- , ed. Diwan Abatur or Progress through the Purgatories: Text with Translation, Notes and Appendices. Studi e Testi 151. Città del Vaticano: Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, 1950. http://www.egnu.org/~mandaeen/Diwan_Abatur_Drower.pdf (accessed September 15, 2007).
- , ed. The Haran Gawaita and the Baptism of Hibil-Ziwa, The Mandaic Text Reproduced Together with Translation, Notes and Commentary. Studi e testi 176. Città del Vaticano: Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, 1953. http://www.egnu.org/~mandaeen/The_Haran_Gawaita_and_The_Baptism_of_Hibil-Ziwa_Drower.pdf (accessed September 11, 2007).
- . "A Mandaean Book of Black Magic." Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society (1943): 149-81. Reprint, Sequim, WA: Holmes Publishing Group, 2005.
- . "The Mandaean Phylacteries, Transliterated and Translated." Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society (1939): 397-406.

- . “Mandaean writings.” Iraq 1, part 2 (November 1934): 171-84.
- . The Mandaeans of Iraq and Iran. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1937. Reprint, Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2002.
- , ed. A Pair of Nasorean Commentaries: Being Two Priestly Documents, the Great First World and the Lesser First World. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1963.
- . Peacock Angel, Being Some Account of Votaries of a Secret Cult and Their Sanctuaries. London, England: John Murray, 1941. <http://www.avesta.org/yezidi/peacock.htm> (accessed September 15, 2007).
- . “A phylactery for rue (An invocation of the personified herb).” Orientalia 15 (1946): 324-46.
- , ed. Sarh d-Qabin d-Sislam Rba: Explanatory Commentary on the Marriage of the Great Sislam. Biblica et Orientalia 12. Rome, Italy: Pontificio Istituto Biblico, 1950.
- . The Secret Adam: A Study of Nasoraean Gnosis. London, England: Oxford University Press, 1960. http://www.egnu.org/~mandaeen/The_Secret_Adam_Drower.pdf (accessed September 15, 2007).
- . “Shafta d-Pishra d-Ainia: A Mandaean Magical Text Translated and Transliterated.” Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society (1937-1938): 589-611, 1-20.
- , ed. The Thousand and Twelve Questions (Alf Trisar Shuialia). Deutsche Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin, Institut für Orientforschung 32. Berlin, Germany: Akademie-Verlag, 1960.
- . Water into Wine: A Study of Ritual Idiom in the Middle East. London, England: John Murray, 1956.
- Dubnick, Heather. “The poet as prophet: William Blake, 1757-1827.” In Bloom’s BioCritiques: William Blake, edited by Harold Bloom. Bloom’s BioCritiques, ed. Harold Bloom, 81-100. Philadelphia, PA: Chelsea House Publishers, 2006.
- Duke, James T. “Word pairs and distinctive combinations in the Book of Mormon.” Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 12, no. 2 (2003): 32-41.
- Dulles, Avery. Models of Revelation. Garden City, NY: Doubleday, 1983.
- Dunford, C. Kent. “Light of Christ.” In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 2, 835. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Dunn, James D. G., and John W. Rogerson. Eerdmans Commentary on the Bible. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 2003.
- Dunn, Richard J. “Dickens and the Mormons.” BYU Studies 8, no. 3 (1968): 1-9.
- Dunning, Robert, ed. Christianity in Somerset. Taunton, Somerset, England: Somerset County Council, 1976.
- Dupuis, Jérôme, and Tristan Savin. “Et Saint-Ex créa Le Petit Prince.” Lire Hors-Série, no. 3 (Référence #HSLR0206), 2006, 26-32.
- Durham, John I. “Shalom and the Presence of God.” In Proclamation and Presence: Essays in Honour of Gwynne Henton Davies, edited by John I. Durham and Joshua Roy Porter, 272-93. Richmond, VA: John Knox, 1970.
- Durkin-Meisterernst, Desmond. Dictionary of Manichaean Texts. Vol. 3: Texts from Central Asia and China (Texts in Middle Persian and Parthian). Corpus Fontium Manichaeorum, Series Subsidia. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 2004.
- , ed. The Hymns to the Living Soul: Middle Persian and Parthian Texts in the Turfan Collection. Berliner Turfan-texte 24. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 2006.
- Dyer, Alvin R. “The destiny of America.” Improvement Era 71, December 1968, 42-45.
- . The Meaning of Truth. Revised ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1970.
- . The Refiner’s Fire: The Significance of Events Transpiring in Missouri. 3rd revised ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1972.
- . Who Am I? Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1966.
- Dyson, Julia T. King of the Wood: The Sacrificial Victor in Virgil’s Aeneid. Red River Books ed. Oklahoma Series for Classical Culture. Norman, OK: University of Oklahoma Press, 2001.
- Eade, John, and Michael J. Sallnow, eds. 1991. Contesting the Sacred: The Anthropology of Christian Pilgrimage. Urbana, IL: University of Illinois Press, 2000.
- “Early Church Fathers.” In Christian Classics Ethereal Library. <http://www.ccel.org/fathers.html> (accessed October 3, 2008).
- Eccles, Robert S. Erwin Ramsdell Goodenough: A Personal Pilgrimage. Society of Biblical Literature, Biblical Scholarship in North America, ed. Kent Harold Richards. Chico, CA: Scholars Press, 1985.
- . “The purpose of the hellenistic patterns in the Epistle to the Hebrews.” In Religions in Antiquity: Essays in Memory of Erwin Ramsdell Goodenough, edited by Jacob Neusner. Religions in Antiquity, Studies in the History of Religions (Supplements to Numen) 14, 207-26. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1968. Reprint, Eugene, OR: Wipf and Stock, 2004.

- Eco, Umberto. 1993. The Search for the Perfect Language. Translated by James Fentress. The Making of Europe, ed. Jacques Le Goff. Oxford, England: Blackwell, 1997.
- Ed-Din, Abu Bakr Siraj. "The nature and origin of Sufism." In Islamic Spirituality 1: Foundations, edited by Seyyed Hossein Nasr, 223-38. New York City, NY: The Crossroad Publishing Company, 1987.
- Eden, Giulio Busi. "The mystical architecture of Eden in the Jewish tradition." In The Earthly Paradise: The Garden of Eden from Antiquity to Modernity, edited by F. Regina Psaki and Charles Hindley. International Studies in Formative Christianity and Judaism, 15-22. Binghamton, NY: Academic Studies in the History of Judaism, Global Publications, State University of New York at Binghamton, 2002.
- Eddins, Stephen. Mack Wilberg: Requiem. In All Music Guide. <http://www.allmusic.com/cg/amg.dll?p=amg&sql=43:164308> (accessed 13 April, 2009).
- Edson, E., and E. Savage-Smith. Medieval Views of the Cosmos. Oxford, England: The Bodleian Library, University of Oxford, 2004.
- Edwards, I. E. S. The Pyramids of Egypt. Harmondsworth, England: Penguin Books, 1947.
- Egeria. ca. 375. Egeria's Travels. Translated by John Wilkinson. 3rd Revised ed. Oxford, England: Aris and Phillips, 1999.
- Église de Jésus Christ des Saints des Derniers Jours. Ancien Testament: Genèse-2 Samuel (Religion cours 301) Manuel de l'Étudiant. 2 vols. Vol. 1. Torcy, France: Église de Jésus Christ des Saints des Derniers Jours, 1992.
- Ehat, Andrew F. "It seems like heaven began on earth': Joseph Smith and the constitution of the Kingdom of God." BYU Studies 20, no. 3 (1980): 1-27.
- . "Joseph Smith's Introduction of Temple Ordinances and the 1844 Mormon Succession Question." M. A. Thesis, Brigham Young University, 1982.
- Ehrlich, Carl S. "Moses, Torah, and Judaism." In The Rivers of Paradise: Moses, Buddha, Confucius, Jesus, and Muhammad as Religious Founders, edited by David Noel Freedman and Michael J. McClymond, 11-119. Grand Rapids, MI: Wm. B. Eerdmans, 2001.
- Ehrman, Bart D. ed. ca. 140. "The Didache." In The New Testament and Other Early Christian Writings, edited by Bart D. Ehrman, 313-17. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1998.
- Eisenbaum, Pamela Michelle. The Jewish Heroes of Christian History: Hebrews 11 in Literary Context. Society of Biblical Literature Dissertation Series 156, ed. Michael V. Fox and PHEME Perkins. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1997.
- "Eleusinian mysteries." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Eleusinian_Mysteries (accessed February 25, 2007).
- Eliade, Mircea. "The prestige of the cosmogonic myth." Diogenes 6, no. 23 (1958): 1-13. <http://dio.sagepub.com>. (accessed September 27, 2009).
- Elkaïm-Sartre, Arlette, ed. Aggadth du Talmud de Babylone: La Source de Jacob - 'Ein Yaakov. Collection "Les Dix Paroles", ed. Charles Mopsik. Lagrasse, France: Éditions Verdier, 1982.
- Elledge, C. D. "Resurrection of the dead: Exploring our earliest evidence today." In Resurrection: The Origin and Future of a Biblical Doctrine, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Faith and Scholarship Colloquies 3, 22-52. New York City, NY: T & T Clark, 2006.
- Ellingworth, Paul. The Epistle to the Hebrews: A Commentary on the Greek Text. The New International Greek Testament Commentary, eds. I. Howard Marshall and W. Ward Gasque. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1993.
- Elliott, J. K. The Apocryphal New Testament: A Collection of Apocryphal Christian Literature in an English Translation. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2005.
- . ed. "The Hymn of the Pearl." In Lost Scriptures: Books That Did Not Make It into the New Testament, edited by Bart D. Ehrman, 324-27. New York City, NY: Oxford University Press, 2003.
- Ellis, Richard S. "Images at work versus words at play: Michelangelo's art and the artistry of the Hebrew Bible." Judaism 51, no. 2 (2002): 162-74. <http://www.math.umass.edu/~rsellis/images-vs-words-long.html> (accessed August 9, 2007).
- Emmett, Chad F. "Building bridges the right way." BYU Studies 45, no. 4 (2006): 12.
- Emminghaus, Johannes H. 1978. The Eucharist: Essence, Form, Celebration. Translated by Linda M. Maloney. Edited by Theodor Maas-Ewerd. Revised ed. Collegeville, MN: Liturgical Press, 1997.
- Engelhardt, Christian Moritz. Herrad von Landsperg, Aebtissin zu Hohenburg, oder St. Odilien, im Elsass, im zwölften Jahrhundert; und ihr Werk: Hortus deliciarum. Stuttgart and Tübingen, Germany, 1818.
- England, Eugene. "George Laub's Nauvoo Journal." BYU Studies 18, no. 2 (Winter 1978): 151-78.
- . "The weeping God of Mormonism." Dialogue 35, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 63-80.
- . Why the Church is as True as the Gospel. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1986.
- Englebert, Omer. The Grotto of the Teachings or The Grotto of the Pater. Jerusalem, Israel: Carmel of the Pater Noster, n.d.

- Ephrem the Syrian. ca. 350-363. "The Commentary on Genesis." In Hymns on Paradise, edited by Sebastian Brock, 197-227. Crestwood, New York: St. Vladimir's Seminary Press, 1990.
- . ca. 350-363. Ephrem the Syrian: Hymns. Translated by Kathleen E. McVey. Mahwah, NJ: Paulist Press, 1989.
- . ca. 350-363. Ephrem the Syrian: Select Poems. Translated by Sebastian P. Brock and George A. Kiraz. Edited by Sebastian P. Brock and George A. Kiraz. Eastern Christian Texts 2, ed. Daniel C. Peterson, Carl W. Griffin and Kristian S. Heal. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 2006.
- . ca. 350-363. "Hymns for the feast of the Epiphany." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 13, 263-89. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1898. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- . ca. 350-363. Hymns on Paradise. Translated by Sebastian Brock. Crestwood, New York: St. Vladimir's Seminary Press, 1990.
- . ca. 350-363. "The Hymns on Virginity and on the Symbols of the Lord." In Ephrem the Syrian: Hymns, edited by Kathleen E. McVey, 259-468. Mahwah, NJ: Paulist Press, 1989.
- . ca. 350-363. "The Hymns on Paradise." In Hymns on Paradise, edited by Sebastian Brock, 77-195. Crestwood, New York: St. Vladimir's Seminary Press, 1990.
- . ca. 350-363. "On the Fall (Ieun. 3)." In Ephrem the Syrian: Select Poems, edited by Sebastian P. Brock and George A. Kiraz. Translated by Sebastian P. Brock and George A. Kiraz. Eastern Christian Texts 2, eds. Daniel C. Peterson, Carl W. Griffin and Kristian S. Heal, 96-103. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 2006.
- . ca. 350-363. "The Pearl and Its Symbolism (Fid. 82)." In Ephrem the Syrian: Select Poems, edited by Sebastian P. Brock and George A. Kiraz. Translated by Sebastian P. Brock and George A. Kiraz. Eastern Christian Texts 2, eds. Daniel C. Peterson, Carl W. Griffin and Kristian S. Heal, 246-57. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 2006.
- . d. 373. Saint Ephrem's Commentary on Tatian's Diatessaron: An English Translation of Chester Beatty Syriac MS 709 with Introduction and Notes. Translated by Carmel McCarthy. Edited by Carmel McCarthy. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1994.
- Epstein, Isidore, ed. The Soncino Hebrew-English Talmud. 30 vols. London, England: The Soncino Press, 1948.
- Ernst, Carl W. "Between Orientalism and Fundamentalism: Problematizing the teaching of Islam." In Teaching Islam, edited by Brannon M. Wheeler, 108-23. New York City, NY: Oxford University Press, 2003.
- . The Shambhala Guide to Sufism. Boston, MA: Shambhala Publications, 1997.
- Escher, M. C. M. C. Escher: The Graphic Work. Köln, Germany: Benedikt-Taschen Verlag, 1992.
- Esplin, Ronald K. "Joseph, Brigham and the Twelve: A succession of continuity." BYU Studies 21, no. 3 (1981): 301-41.
- Esposito, John L., and Dalia Mogahed. Who Speaks for Islam? What a Billion Muslims Really Think. New York City, NY: Gallup Press, 2007.
- Etheridge, J. W., ed. The Targums of Onkelos and Jonathan Ben Uzziel on the Pentateuch, with the Fragments of the Jerusalem Targum from the Chaldee. 2 vols. London, England: Longman, Green, Longman, and Roberts, 1862, 1865. Reprint, Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2005. <http://www.targum.info/pj/psjon.htm> (accessed August 10, 2007).
- Eusebius. 1971. ca. 325. The Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius Pamphilus. Edited by Isaac Boyle. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Book House, 1955.
- . ca. 325. The History of the Church. Translated by G. A. Williamson and Andrew Louth. London, England: Penguin Books, 1989.
- . ca. 339. "The Life of Constantine." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 1, 471-559. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1890. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- . ca. 339. Life of Constantine. Translated by Averil Cameron and Stuart G. Hall. Edited by Averil Cameron and Stuart G. Hall. Clarendon Ancient History Series, ed. Brian Bosworth, Miriam Griffin, David Whitehead and Susan Treggiari. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1999.
- . 1971. The Onomasticon of Eusebius Pamphili, Compared with the Version of Jerome and Annotated. Translated by C. Umhau Wolf. In http://www.tertullian.org/fathers/eusebius_onomasticon_01_intro.htm (accessed May 30, 2008).
- Euvrard, Christian. Louis Auguste Bertrand (1808-1875): Journaliste Socialiste et Pionnier Mormon. Tournan-en-Brie, France: Christian Euvrard, 2005.
- Evenson, William E. 1994. "LDS doctrine and the theory of evolution." In Can Science Be Faith-Promoting?, edited by Stan Larson, xxxi-xl. Salt Lake City, UT: Blue Ribbon Books, 2001.
- . "LDS science counsel still valid." Salt Lake City, UT: The Salt Lake Tribune, July 2, 2005.

- . “Science: The Universe, Creation, and Evolution (Chs. 3-5, 9-10, 12, 21, 23-25, 29-32).” In The Truth, The Way, The Life, edited by Brigham Henry Roberts and John W. Welch, cxi-cxxix. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1994.
- Evenson, William E., and Duane E. Jeffery, eds. Mormonism and Evolution: The Authoritative LDS Statements. Draper, UT: Greg Kofford Books, 2005.
- Eyring, Henry. The Faith of a Scientist. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1967.
- . Reflections of a Scientist. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1983.
- Eyring, Henry B., Jr. “Faith and the Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood.” Ensign 28, May 2008, 61-64. ———. “Faith, authority, and scholarship.” In On Becoming a Disciple-Scholar, edited by Henry B. Eyring, Jr., 59-71. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1995.
- . “The power of teaching doctrine.” Ensign 29, May 1999, 73-75.
- . “That we may be one.” Ensign 28, May 1998, 66-68.
- Eyring, Henry J. Mormon Scientist: The Life and Faith of Henry Eyring. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2007.
- Falk, Zeev W. Hebrew Law in Biblical Times: An Introduction. Jerusalem, Israel: Wahrman Books, 1964. Reprint, Provo, UT / Winona Lake, IN: Brigham Young University Press / Eisenbrauns, 2001.
- Farley, S. Brent. “The oath and covenant of the priesthood.” In Sperry Symposium Classics: The Doctrine and Covenants, edited by Craig K. Manscill, 221-33. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2004.
- Faulconer, James E. “Adam and Eve—Community: Reading Genesis 2-3.” Journal of Philosophy and Scripture 1, no. 1 (Fall 2003). http://www.philosophyandscripture.org/Issue1-1/James_Faulconer/james_faulconer.html (accessed August 10, 2007).
- . “Divine embodiment and transcendence: Propaedeutic thoughts and questions.” Element: An E-Journal of Mormon Philosophy and Theology 1, no. 1 (Spring 2005): Section 14. http://www.smpt.org/member_resource/element/faulconer_element1-1.html (accessed January 7, 2008).
- . “Hebrew time.” In LDS-Phil. http://eyring.hplx.net/Eyring/Notes/Heb_Time.html (accessed January 9, 2007).
- . “Response to Professor Dorrien.” In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, 423-35. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.
- . “Response to Professor Tracy.” In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, 468-78. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.
- . “Scripture as incarnation.” In Historicity and the Latter-day Saint Scriptures, edited by Paul Y. Hoskisson, 17-61. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 2001.
- . Scripture Study: Tools and Suggestions. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, Brigham Young University, 1999.
- . “Self-image, self-love, and salvation.” Latter-day Digest 2, June 1993, 7-26. <http://jamesfaulconer.byu.edu/self-imag.htm> (accessed August 10, 2007).
- . “Why a Mormon won’t drink coffee but might have a coke: The atheological character of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.” Presented at God, Humanity, and Revelation: Perspectives from Mormon Philosophy and History, New Haven, CN: Yale University, March 29, 2003. http://ia301119.us.archive.org/0/items/Why-a-Mormon-Wont-Drink-Coffee-but-Might-Drink-Coke/Coke_but_not_Coffee_-_Reading_Draft.rtf (accessed February 26, 2008). Reprint, Element: The Journal of the Society for Mormon Philosophy and Theology 2, no. 2 (Fall 2006): 21-37.
- Faulkner, Raymond O., ed. 1973-1978. The Ancient Egyptian Coffin Texts: Spells 1-1185 and Indexes. Corrected 3-in-1 ed. Oxford, England: Aris & Phillips, 2007.
- , ed. The Ancient Egyptian Pyramid Texts 1st ed. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1969.
- Faulkner, Raymond O., and Carol A. R. Andrews, eds. 1972. The Ancient Egyptian Book of the Dead. Revised ed. Translated by R. O. Faulkner. Austin, TX: University of Texas Press, 2001.
- Faulkner, Raymond O., Ogden Goelet, Jr., and Carol A. R. Andrews, eds. 1972. The Egyptian Book of the Dead: The Book of Going Forth by Day. Translated by R. O. Faulkner. San Francisco, CA: Chronicle Books, 1994.
- Faulring, Scott H., Kent P. Jackson, and Robert J. Matthews, eds. Joseph Smith’s New Translation of the Bible: Original Manuscripts. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 2004.
- Faust, James E. “Heirs to the Kingdom of God.” Ensign 25, May 1995, 61-63.
- Feldman, Louis H. “Hellenization in Josephus’ portrayal of man’s decline.” In Religions in Antiquity: Essays in Memory of Erwin Ramsdell Goodenough, edited by Jacob Neusner. Religions in Antiquity, Studies in the History of Religions (Supplements to Numen) 14, 336-53. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1968.

- Feldman, Noah. "What is it about Mormonism?" New York Times Magazine, January 6 2008. <http://www.nytimes.com/2008/01/06/magazine/06mormonism-t.html?ref=magazine> (accessed August 24, 2008).
- . The Rise and Fall of the Islamic State. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2008.
- Feldman, Seymour, ed. The Wars of the Lord. 3 vols. Philadelphia, PA: Jewish Publication Society, 1984-1999.
- Ferdowsi, Abolquasem. ca. 1010. Shahnameh: The Persian Book of Kings. Translated by Dick Davis. New York City, NY: Viking Adult, Penguin Group, 2006.
- . ca. 1010. Shahnama of Ferdousi. 9 vols. Translated by Arthur George Warner and Edmond Warner. Trubner's Oriental Series. London, England: Kegan Paul, 1905-1925. Reprint, London, England: Routledge, Taylor & Francis Group, 2001.
- Feyerick, Ada, Cyrus H. Gordon, and Nahum M. Sarna. Genesis: World of Myths and Patriarchs. New York City, NY: New York University Press, 1996.
- Feynman, Richard. 1965. The Character of Physical Law. New York City, NY: The Modern Library, 1994.
- Fine, Lawrence. 1984. "Kabbalistic texts." In Back to the Sources: Reading the Classic Jewish Texts, edited by Barry W. Holtz, 305-59. New York City, NY: Simon and Schuster, 2006.
- Fine, Steven. 2005. "Between Rome and Jerusalem: The date palm as a 'Jewish symbol.'" In Art and Judaism in the Greco-Roman World: Toward a New Jewish Archaeology, edited by Steven Fine, 140-45. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2007.
- . 2005. "'The lamps of Israel': The Menorah as a Jewish symbol." In Art and Judaism in the Greco-Roman World: Toward a New Jewish Archaeology, edited by Steven Fine, 146-63. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2007.
- Fineberg, Gail. 1997. 'Let There Be Light': Exhibition Spotlights William Tyndale, English Martyr (July 1997). In Library of Congress Information Bulletin. <http://www.loc.gov/loc/lcib/9707/tyndale.html> (accessed October 4, 2008).
- Finkelstein, Sidney. Notes on the Program: Ralph Vaughan Williams, Folk Songs of Britain (Originally recorded in 1960): Vanguard Classics (OVC 8109), 1997.
- First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. "Letter reaffirms use of King James Version." LDS Church News, June 20 1992, Z3. <http://www.desnews.com> (accessed September 7, 2007).
- Fisch, Harold. The Biblical Presence in Shakespeare, Milton, and Blake: A Comparative Study. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1999.
- . Hamlet and the Word: The Covenant Pattern in Shakespeare. New York City, NY: Frederick Ungar, 1971.
- Fishbane, Michael. Biblical Myth and Rabbinic Mythmaking. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2003.
- . "A note on the spirituality of texts." In Etz Hayim Study Companion, edited by Jacob Blumenthal and Janet L. Liss, 11-12. New York City, NY: The Rabbinical Assembly, The United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism, and The Jewish Publication Society, 2005.
- Fisk, Bruce N. Do You Not Remember? Scripture, Story, and Exegesis in the Rewritten Bible of Pseudo-Philo. Sheffield, England: Sheffield Academic Press, 2001.
- Fitzmyer, Joseph A., ed. The Genesis Apocryphon of Qumran Cave 1 (1Q20): A Commentary. Third ed. Biblica et Orientalia 18/B. Rome, Italy: Editrice Pontificio Istituto Biblico, 2004.
- Flake, Kathleen. "Bound for glory." In On Faith Panelists Blog, The Washington Post, 29 June 2007. http://newsweek.washingtonpost.com/onfaith/panelists/kathleen_flake/2007/06/bound_for_glory.html (accessed March 24, 2009).
- . "From conferences to councils: The development of LDS church organization, 1830-1835." In Archive of Restoration Culture: Summer Fellows' Papers 1997-1999, edited by Richard Lyman Bushman, 1-8. Provo, UT: Joseph Fielding Smith Institute for Latter-day Saint History, 2000.
- . "'Not to be Riten': The Mormon temple rite as oral canon." Journal of Ritual Studies 9, no. 2 (Summer 1995): 1-21.
- . "Translating time: The nature and function of Joseph Smith's narrative canon." Journal of Religion 87, no. 4 (October 2007): 497-527. <http://www.vanderbilt.edu/divinity/facultynews/Flake%20Translating%20Time.pdf> (accessed February 22, 2009).
- Flake, Lawrence R. Three Degrees of Glory: Joseph Smith's Insights on the Kingdoms of Heaven. American Fork, UT: Covenant Communications, 2000.
- Fletcher-Louis, Crispin H. T. All the Glory of Adam: Liturgical Anthropology in the Dead Sea Scrolls. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 2002.
- Flew, Anthony. There is a God: How the World's Most Notorious Atheist Changed His Mind. Edited by Roy Abraham Varghese. New York City, NY: HarperOne, 2007.

- Flusser, David. "The Jewish-Christian understanding of human nature." In On Human Nature: The Jerusalem Center Symposium, edited by Truman G. Madsen, David Noel Freedman and Pam Fox Kuhlken, 59-67. Ann Arbor, MI: Pryor Pettengill Publishers, 2004.
- . "Qumran und die Zwölf." In Initiation, edited by Claas J. Bleeker. Studies in the History of Religion (Supplements to Numen) 10, 134-46. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1965.
- Foerster, Werner, ed. Gnosis: A Selection of Gnostic Texts - 2. Coptic and Mandaic Sources. 2 vols. Vol. 2. Translated by Robert McLachlan Wilson. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1974.
- Fohrman, David. The Beast that Crouches at the Door: Adam and Eve, Cain and Abel, and Beyond. Jerusalem, Israel: Devora, 2007.
- Fokkelman, J. P. "Genesis." In The Literary Guide to the Bible, edited by Robert Alter and Frank Kermode, 36-55. Cambridge, MA: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, 1987.
- Ford, J. Massingberd. "The Jewel of Discernment: A study of stone symbolism." Biblische Zeitschrift 11 (1967): 109-16.
- "Fourth book of Maccabees." 1927, 1930. In The Lost Books of the Bible and the Forgotten Books of Eden, edited by Rutherford H. Platt, 2:177-98. Berkeley, CA: Apocryphile Press, 2005.
- "Fourth Maccabees." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/4_Maccabees (accessed March 19, 2009).
- Fox, Everett, ed. The Five Books of Moses: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy. The Schocken Bible: Volume 1. New York, NY: Schocken Books, 1995.
- Foxe, John. 1563. Foxe's Book of Martyrs. Edited by W. Grinton Berry. Greenville, NC: Ambassador International, 2005.
- Frankl, Viktor. 1945. Man's Search for Meaning. 3rd revised and enlarged ed. New York City, NY: Pocket Books, 1985.
- Frankman, Thomas W. Genesis and the "Jewish Antiquities" of Flavius Josephus. Biblica et Orientalia 35, ed. Pontificio Istituto Biblico. Rome, Italy: Biblical Institute Press, 1979.
- Frawley, W. Linguistic Semantics. Hillsdale, N.J.: Lawrence Erlbaum, 1992.
- Frazer, James George. 1922. "The Golden Bough: A study of magic and religion." Abridged ed. In Project Gutenberg. <http://www.gutenberg.org/dirs/etext03/bough11h.htm> (accessed November 28, 2007).
- Freedman, David Noel. The Nine Commandments. Des Moines, IA: Anchor Bible, 2000.
- . "The nine commandments." Proceedings of the 36th Annual Convention of the Association of Jewish Libraries, La Jolla, CA, June 24-27, 2001. <http://www.jewishlibraries.org/ajlweb/publications/proceedings/proceedings2001/freedmand.pdf> (accessed August 11, 2007).
- . "The status and role of humanity in the cosmos according to the Hebrew Bible." In On Human Nature: The Jerusalem Center Symposium, edited by Truman G. Madsen, David Noel Freedman and Pam Fox Kuhlken, 9-25. Ann Arbor, MI: Pryor Pettengill Publishers, 2004.
- Freedman, David Noel, and Rebecca L. Frey. "The Dome of the Rock." In Revelation, Reason, and Faith: Essays in Honor of Truman G. Madsen, edited by Donald W. Parry, Daniel C. Peterson and Stephen D. Ricks, 635-49. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University FARMS, 2002.
- Freedman, David Noel, Allen C. Myers, and Astrid B. Beck. Eerdmans Dictionary of the Bible. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company, 2000.
- Freedman, H., and Maurice Simon, eds. 1939. Midrash Rabbah 3rd ed. 10 vols. London, England: Soncino Press, 1983.
- French, Yvonne. 1997. "Courage and Genius: Tyndale Responsible for Most of King James Translation, Says Biographer (July 1997)." In Library of Congress Information Bulletin. <http://www.loc.gov/loc/lcib/9707/daniell.html> (accessed October 4, 2008).
- Friedlander, Gerald, ed. Pirkei de Rabbi Eliezer. Brooklyn, NY: Sepher-Hermon Press, 1916.
- Friedman, Richard Elliott. The Bible with Sources Revealed: A New View into the Five Books of Moses. New York, NY: HarperCollins Publishers, 2003.
- , ed. Commentary on the Torah. New York, NY: HarperCollins, 2001.
- . The Hidden Book in the Bible. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1998.
- . 1987. Who Wrote the Bible? San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1997.
- Frye, Northrop. 1947. Fearful Symmetry: A Study of William Blake. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1969.
- . 1982. The Great Code: The Bible and Literature. San Diego, CA: Harvest, 1983.
- . The Secular Scripture: A Study of the Structure of Romance. The Charles Eliot Norton Lectures, 1974-1975. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1976.
- . "The Tempest." In On Shakespeare, edited by Robert Sandler, 171-86. Brighton, MA: Fitzhenry and Whiteside, 1986.

- Frye, Roland Mushat, ed. Is God a Creationist? The Religious Case Against Creation-Science. New York City, NY: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1983.
- . "Paradise Lost and the visual arts." Theology Today 34, no. 1 (April 1977). <http://theologytoday.ptsem.edu/apr1977/v34-1-article1.htm> (accessed August 11, 2007).
- Fussell, Paul. 1983. Class: A Guide Through the American Status System. New York City, NY: Touchstone, 1992.
- Gabirol, Solomon ibn. ca. 1100-1200. "The Crown of the Kingdom (Keter Malkhut)." In The Secret Garden: An Anthology in the Kabbalah, edited by David Meltzer. Translated by Harris Lenowitz, 99-104. Barrytown, NY: Barrytown Limited, 1997.
- Gadd, Mike. "Old, subtle serpent: Naked in Genesis 3:1." Studia Antiqua 5, no. 1 (Spring 2007): 9-14.
- Gage, Warren Austin. The Gospel of Genesis: Studies in Protology and Eschatology. Winona Lake, IN: Carpenter, 1984.
- Gager, John G. "Early Mormonism and early Christianity: Some parallels and their consequences for the study of new religions." Journal of Mormon History 9 (1982): 53-60.
- Galbraith, David B., D. Kelly Ogden, and Andrew C. Skinner. Jerusalem: The Eternal City. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1996.
- Gallagher, Jonathan. 2005. "Atoning for the atonement." In Pine Knoll Publications. <http://www.pineknoll.org/adventist/lesson/references/2005/q1/atone.pdf> (accessed August 13, 2007).
- Gallez, Édouard-Marie. Le messie et son prophète: Aux origines de l'Islam. Vol. 1: De Qumrân à Muhammad. Studia Arabica 1, ed. Marie-Thérèse Urvoy. Versailles, France: Éditions de Paris, 2005.
- Gallus, Tibor. "Der Nachkomme der Frau" (Gen. 3:15) in der Schriftauslegung von Luther, Zwingli und Calvin. Vol. 1. "Der Nachkomme der Frau" (Gen. 3:15) in der Altlutheranischen Schriftauslegung. Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der Exegese von Gen. 3:15, ed. Tibor Gallus. Klagenfurt, Germany: Verlag Carinthia, 1964.
- Ganssle, Gregory, ed. God and Time: Four Views. Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 2001.
- Gardiner, Alan H. 1927. Egyptian Grammar. 3rd ed. London: Oxford University Press, 1966.
- Gardner, Brant. "The Gadianton robbers in Mormon's theological history: Their structural role and plausible identification." Presented at the FAIR Conference 2002. http://www.fairlds.org/FAIR_Conferences/2002_Gadianton_Robbers_in_Mormons_Theological_History.html (accessed August 13, 2007).
- . Second Witness: Analytical and Contextual Commentary of the Book of Mormon. 6 vols. Salt Lake City, UT: Greg Kofford Books, 2007.
- Gardner, Bruce K. The Genesis Calendar: The Synchronistic Tradition in Genesis 1-11. Lanham, MD: University Press of America, 2001.
- Gardner, Iain., ed. Kellis Literary Texts. 2 vols. Vol. 1. Dakhleh Oasis Project Monograph 4. Oxford, England: Oxbow, 1996.
- . Kellis Literary Texts. 2 vols. Vol. 2. Dakhleh Oasis Project Monograph 15. Oxford, England: Oxbow, 2007.
- , ed. The Kephalaia of the Teacher: The Edited Coptic Manichaean Texts in Translation with Commentary. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 37, ed. James M. Robinson and H. J. Klimkeit. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1995.
- . "The Manichaean community at Kellis: A progress report." In Emerging from Darkness: Studies in the Recovery of Manichaean Sources, edited by Paul Mirecki and Jason David BeDuhn. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 43, eds. James M. Robinson and H. J. Klimkeit, 161-75. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1997.
- . "The reconstruction of Mani's epistles from three Coptic codices (Ismant el-Kaharab and Medinet Madi)." In The Light and the Darkness: Studies in Manichaeism and its World, edited by Paul Mirecki and Jason David BeDuhn. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 50, ed. Stephen Emmel, 93-104. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 2001.
- Gardner, Iain, Anthony Alcock, and Wolf-Peter Funk, eds. Coptic Documentary Texts from Kellis (= P. Kell. V). Vol. 1. Dakhleh Oasis Project 9. Oxford, England: Oxbow, 1999.
- Gardner, Iain, M. Franzmann, and Samuel N. C. Lieu. "A living Mani cult in the twenty-first century." Rivista di Storia e Letteratura Religiosa 41 (2005): VII-XI.
- Gardner, Iain, and Samuel N. C. Lieu, eds. Manichaean Texts from the Roman Empire. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2004.
- Gaskill, Alonzo L. The Lost Language of Symbolism: An Essential Guide for Recognizing and Interpreting Symbols of the Gospel. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2003.
- . The Savior and the Serpent: Unlocking the Doctrine of the Fall. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- Gaster, Moses, ed. The Asatir: The Samaritan Book of the "Secrets of Moses". London, England: Royal Asiatic Society, 1927.
- Gaylord, H. E., Jr. ed. "3 (Greek Apocalypse of) Baruch." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 653-79. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.

- Gee, John. "Eyewitness, hearsay, and the physical evidence of the Joseph Smith Papyri." In The Disciple as Witness: Essays on Latter-day Saint History and Doctrine in Honor of Richard Lloyd Anderson, edited by Stephen D. Ricks, Donald W. Parry and Andrew H. Hedges, 175-217. Provo, UT: The Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies at Brigham Young University, 2000.
- . A Guide to the Joseph Smith Papyri. Provo, UT: FARMS at Brigham Young University, 2000.
- . "New Light on the Joseph Smith Papyri." FARMS Review 19, no. 2 (2007): 245-60. <http://mi.byu.edu/publications/review/?vol=19&num=2&id=670>. (accessed September 28, 2009).
- . "A tragedy of errors: Review of By His Own Hand Upon Papyrus: A New Look at the Joseph Smith Papyri by Charles M. Larson." FARMS Review of Books 4, no. 1 (1992): 93-119.
- Gee, John, and Brian M. Hauglid, eds. Astronomy, Papyrus, and Covenant. Studies in the Book of Abraham 3. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), Brigham Young University, 2005.
- Gelander, Shamaï. The Good Creator: Literature and Theology in Genesis 1-11. South Florida Studies in the History of Judaism 147, ed. Jacob Neusner, Bruce D. Chilton, Darrell J. Fashing, William Scott Green, Sara Mandell and James F. Strange. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1997.
- Gemmell, Belle Anderson. "Utah medical history: Some reminiscences." California and Western Medicine 36, no. 1 (January 1932): 44-47. <http://www.pubmedcentral.nih.gov/picrender.fcgi?artid=1658092&blobtype=pdf> (accessed August 25, 2007).
- Gemmell, R. C. "Early History of the Medical Profession in Utah: Biography of Dr. W. F. Anderson." Typewritten manuscript. LDS Church Archives, n. d.
- George, Andrew, ed. 1999. The Epic of Gilgamesh. London, England: The Penguin Group, 2003.
- "George Herbert." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/George_Herbert (accessed May 16, 2009).
- Gianotti, Timothy J. "The Islamic view of humanity." In On Human Nature: The Jerusalem Center Symposium, edited by Truman G. Madsen, David Noel Freedman and Pam Fox Kuhlken, 85-93. Ann Arbor, MI: Pryor Pettengill Publishers, 2004.
- Gibbons, Francis M. Harold B. Lee: Man of Vision, Prophet of God. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1993.
- Gibbons, Joseph A., and Roger A. Bullard ed. "The Second Treatise of the Great Seth (VII, 2)." In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed, 362-71. San Francisco, CA: Harper-SanFrancisco, 1990.
- Giberson, Karl W. Saving Darwin: How to Be a Christian and Believe in Evolution. New York City, NY: HarperOne, 2008.
- Gibson, Margaret Dunlop, ed. Kitab al-Magall or The Book of the Rolls, One of the Books of Clement. Translated by Margaret Dunlop Gibson. In Apocrypha Arabica, ed. Margaret Dunlop Gibson. London, England: Cambridge University Press, 1901. Reprint, Day, Susie, ed. A History of Our First Parents: Adam and Eve, 108-118. Roseburg, OR: Linen Vail Books, 2006.
- Gibson, Shimon. The Final Days of Jesus: The Archaeological Evidence. New York City, NY: HarperOne, 2009.
- Gileadi, Avraham. Isaiah Decoded. Escondido, CA: Hebraeus Press, 2002.
- . ed. The Literary Message of Isaiah. New York, NY: Hebraeus Press, 1994.
- . Studies in the Book of Mormon. n. p.: Hebron Books, 2005.
- . "The twelve diatribes of modern Israel." In By Study and Also By Faith: Essays in Honor of Hugh W. Nibley, edited by John M. Lundquist and Stephen D. Ricks. 2 vols. Vol. 2, 353-405. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990.
- Gilliot, Claude. "Creation of a fixed text." In The Cambridge Companion to the Qur'an, edited by Jane Dammen McAuliffe, 41-57. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2006.
- . Exégèse, Langue, et Théologie in Islam: Lexégèse Coranique de Tabari. Paris, France: Librairie Philosophique Vrin, 1990.
- Gillman, Neil. The Death of Death: Resurrection and Immortality in Jewish Thought. Woodstock, VT: Jewish Lights Publishing, 2000.
- Gillum, Gary P. "Apocryphal literature: A selected bibliography." In Apocryphal Writings and the Latter-day Saints, edited by C. Wilfred Griggs, 125-31. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 1986.
- Gingerich, Owen. God's Universe. Cambridge, MA: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, 2006.
- Ginzberg, Louis, ed. The Legends of the Jews. 7 vols. Translated by Henrietta Szold and Paul Radin. Philadelphia, PA: The Jewish Publication Society of America, 1909-1938. Reprint, Baltimore, MD: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1998.
- Giorgi, Rosa. Anges et Démons. Translated by Dominique Férault. Paris, France: Éditions Hazan, 2003.
- Givens, Terryl L. By the Hand of Mormon: The American Scripture that Launched a New World Religion. Oxford,

- England: Oxford University Press, 2002.
- . “Dialectic and reciprocity in ‘faithful scholarship’: Preexistence as a case study.” Typescript in the possession of the author. Presented at the Annual Conference of Mormon Scholars in the Humanities, Provo, UT, March 22, 2007.
- . “Joseph Smith: Prophecy, Process, and Plenitude.” BYU Studies (Special Issue: The Worlds of Joseph Smith: A Bicentennial Conference at the Library of Congress) 44, no. 4 (2005): 55-68. Reprinted in Joseph Smith Jr: Reappraisals After Two Centuries, edited by Reid L. Neilson and Terryl L. Givens, 107-17. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2009.
- . People of Paradox: A History of Mormon Culture. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2007.
- . The Viper on the Hearth: Mormons, Myths, and the Construction of Heresy. Religion in America. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1997.
- . When Souls Had Wings: Pre-Mortal Existence in Western Thought. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2010.
- “Gnostic Society Library.” In The Gnosis Archive. <http://www.gnosis.org/library.html> (accessed October 3, 2008).
- Goates, L. Brent. Harold B. Lee: Prophet and Seer. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1985.
- Godfrey, Kenneth W. “The history of intelligence in Latter-day Saint thought.” In The Pearl of Great Price: Revelations from God, edited by H. Donl Peterson and Charles D. Tate, Jr., 213-35. Provo, UT: BYU Religious Studies Center, 1989.
- Goldenberg, David M. The Curse of Ham: Race and Slavery in Early Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2003.
- Goldenberg, Robert. The Origins of Judaism: From Canaan to the Rise of Islam. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2007.
- Goldin, Judah, ed. 1955. The Fathers According to Rabbi Nathan. Yale Judaica Series 10. New Haven, CN: Yale University Press, 1983.
- Goodenough, Erwin Ramsdell. By Light, Light: The Mystic Gospel of Hellenistic Judaism. New Haven, CN: Yale University Press, 1935.
- . 1940. “The fundamental motif of Christianity.” In Goodenough on the Beginnings of Christianity, edited by A. T. Kraabel, 15-25. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1990.
- . “The Greek garments on Jewish heroes in The Dura Synagogue.” In Biblical Motifs: Origins and Translations, edited by Alexander Altmann. Philip W. Lown Institute of Advanced Judaic Studies, Brandeis University, Studies and Texts 3, ed. Alexander Altmann, 221-37. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1966.
- . 1940. An Introduction to Philo Judaeus. 2nd Revised ed. Oxford, England: Basil Blackwell, 1962.
- . Pagan Symbols in Judaism. 2 vols. Jewish Symbols in the Greco-Roman Period 7-8, Bollingen Series 37. New York City, NY: Pantheon Books, 1958.
- . “Paul and the hellenization of Christianity.” In Goodenough on the Beginnings of Christianity, edited by A. T. Kraabel, 123-74. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1990.
- . The Problem of Method; Symbols from Jewish Cult. Jewish Symbols in the Greco-Roman Period 4, Bollingen Series 37. New York City, NY: Pantheon Books, 1954.
- . Summary and Conclusions. Jewish Symbols in the Greco-Roman Period 12, Bollingen Series 37. New York City, NY: Pantheon Books, 1965.
- . Symbolism in the Dura Synagogue. 3 vols. Jewish Symbols in the Greco-Roman Period 9-11, Bollingen Series 37. New York City, NY: Pantheon Books, 1964.
- Gordon, Robert P. “The Targumists as eschatologists.” In Hebrew Bible and Ancient Versions: Selected Essays of Robert P. Gordon, edited by Robert P. Gordon, 303-16. Aldershot, England: Ashgate, 2006.
- Gore, Al. The Assault on Reason. New York City, NY: The Penguin Press, 2007.
- Goslee, Nancy Moore. “‘In England’s Green and Pleasant Land’: The building of vision in Blake’s stanzas from Milton.” Studies in Romanticism 13 (1974): 105-25.
- Gospel Principles*. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1997.
- “Gothic nightmares: Satan in his original glory.” In Tate Gallery. <http://www.tate.org.uk/britain/exhibitions/gothic-nightmares/rooms/room7.htm> (accessed May 20, 2009).
- Graf, Fritz. “Lesser mysteries—not less mysterious.” In Greek Mysteries: The Archaeology and Ritual of Ancient Greek Secret Cults, edited by Michael B. Cosmopoulos, 241-62. New York City, NY: Routledge, 2003.
- Graffin, René, ed. Patrologia Syriaca. 2 vols. Paris, France: Firmin-Didot, 1894.
- Graffin, René, François Nau, Max Prince of Saxony, and François Graffin, eds. Patrologia Orientalis. 41 vols. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 1904-.

- Graham, William A. Divine Word and Prophetic Word in Early Islam: A Reconsideration of the Sources with Special Reference to the Divine Saying or Hadith Qudsi. Religion and Society 7, ed. Leo Laeyendecker and Jacques Waardenburg. The Hague, Netherlands: Mouton Publishers, 1977.
- Grant, Heber J., Anthony W. Ivins, and Charles W. Nibley. 1925. "'Mormon' view of evolution." In Messages of the First Presidency, edited by James R. Clark. 6 vols. Vol. 5, 243-44. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1971.
- Grant, Jedediah M. 1854. "Fulfilment of prophecy; wars and commotions (A discourse by President Jedediah M. Grant, in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, April 2, 1854)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 2, 145-49. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886.
- . 1855. "Times for all things; prayer; chastisement; unity; faithfulness; reverence for sacred things; reformation (Discourses by Presidents B. Young, H. C. Kimball, and J. M. Grant, and Elder E. T. Benson, delivered July 13, 1855, at a Conference held at Provo City, Utah Territory)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 3, 58-61. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886.
- Grant, Patrick. 1979. "The Tempest and the magic of charity." In Shakespeare's Christian Dimension: An Anthology of Commentary, edited by Roy Battenhouse, 267-70. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1994.
- Graulich, Michel. Myths of Ancient Mexico. Translated by Bernard R. Ortiz de Montellano and Thelma Ortiz de Montellano. The Civilization of the American Indian 222. Norman, OK: The University of Oklahoma Press, 1997.
- Graves, Robert, and Raphael Patai. Hebrew Myths: The Book of Genesis. New York City, NY: Doubleday, 1964.
- Grébaut, Sylvain ed. 1911. "Les computes et les symboles (Fascicule 3, No. 28)." In Patrologia Orientalis, edited by Pontificio Istituto Orientale Roma. Vol. 6, 428-57. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols Publishers NV, 2003.
- Green, Arnold H. "Mormonism and Islam: From polemics to mutual respect and cooperation." BYU Studies 40, no. 4 (2001): 199-220.
- Green, Arthur. A Guide to the Zohar. Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press, 2004.
- Green, Rosalie, Michael Evans, Christine Bischoff, and Michael Curschmann, eds. The Hortus Deliciarum of Herrad of Hohenbourg: A Reconstruction. 2 vols. London, England: Warburg Institute, 1979.
- Greenberg, Gary. 2000. 101 Myths of the Bible. Naperville, IL: Sourcebooks, Inc., 2002.
- Greenberg, Moshe. Ezekiel 21-37: A New Translation with Introduction and Commentary. The Anchor Bible 22A, ed. William F. Albright and David Noel Freedman. New York City, NY: Doubleday, 1997.
- Greene, Brian. The Fabric of the Cosmos: Space, Time, and the Texture of Reality. New York City, NY: Vintage Books, 2005.
- Greenspan, Alan. The Age of Turbulence: Adventures in a New World. New York City, NY: The Penguin Press, 2007.
- Greenstein, Edward L. 1984. "Medieval Bible commentaries." In Back to the Sources: Reading the Classic Jewish Texts, edited by Barry W. Holtz, 213-59. New York City, NY: Simon and Schuster, 2006.
- Gregory Nazianzen. ca. 374-390. "Against Apollinarius (De incarnatione, adversus Apollinarium)." In On God and Man: The Theological Poetry of St. Gregory of Nazianzus, edited by Peter Gilbert. Translated by Peter Gilbert. Popular Patristics, 81-83. Crestwood, NY: St. Vladimir's Seminary Press, 2001.
- . ca. 374-390. On God and Man: The Theological Poetry of St. Gregory of Nazianzus. Translated by Peter Gilbert. Edited by Peter Gilbert. Popular Patristics. Crestwood, NY: St. Vladimir's Seminary Press, 2001.
- . ca. 350-363. "Oration 38: On the Theophany, or Birthday of Christ." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 7, 345-51. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1894. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- . ca. 350-363. "Oration 39: Oration on the Holy Lights." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 7, 351-59. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1894. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- . ca. 350-363. "Orations." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 7, 203-434. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1894. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Gregory of Nyssa. ca. 330-395. "The Great Catechism." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 5, 471-509. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1893. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Griffith, Ralph T. H., ed. Hinduism: The Rig Veda. Translated by Ralph T. H. Griffith. Sacred Writings 5, ed. Jaroslav Pelikan. New York City, NY: Quality Paperback Book Club, 1992.
- Griffith-Jones, Robin. The Four Witnesses. New York City, NY: HarperCollins Publishers, 2000.
- Griggs, C. Wilfred. "Evidences of a Christian population in the Egyptian Fayum and genetic and textile studies of the Akhmim noble mummies." BYU Studies 33, no. 2 (1993): 214-43.
- . "The tree of life in ancient cultures." Ensign 18, June 1988, 26-31.

- Gross, Jules. 1938. The Divinization of the Christian According to the Greek Fathers. Translated by Paul A. Onica. Anaheim, CA: A & C Press, 2002.
- Grossfeld, Bernard, ed. The Targum Onqelos to Genesis: Translated with a Critical Introduction, Apparatus, and Notes. Aramaic Bible 6. Edinburgh, Scotland: T & T Clark, 1988.
- Grossfeld, Bernard, and Lawrence H. Schiffman, eds. Targum Neofiti 1: An Exegetical Commentary to Genesis including Full Rabbinic Parallels. Brooklyn, NY: Sepher-Hermon Press, 2000.
- Guénon, René. Symboles fondamentaux de la Science sacrée. Paris, France: Gallimard, 1962.
- Guerlain, Pierre. "Robert Kagan and Noam Chomsky: Two ways of being a political intellectual." Comparative American Studies 4, no. 4 (2006): 446-58. <http://cas.sagepub.com/cgi/content/abstract/4/4/446> <http://cas.sagepub.com/cgi/reprint/4/4/446.pdf> (accessed August 20, 2007).
- Guggenheimer, Heinrich W., ed. Seder Olam: The Rabbinic View of Biblical Chronology. Lanham, MI: Jason Aronson/Rowman and Littlefield Publishing Group, 1998.
- Guilleux, Alain. Le Temple de Derr. Une Promenade en Egypte. http://alain.guilleux.free.fr/derr/lac_nasser_temple_derr.html (accessed June 2, 2008).
- Gündüz, Sinasi. The Knowledge of Life: The Origins and Early History of Mandaeans and Their Relation to the Sabians of the Qur'an and to the Harranians. Journal of Semitic Studies Supplement 3. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1994.
- Gunn, Stanley R. Oliver Cowdery: Second Elder and Scribe. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1962.
- Gutmann, Joseph. "Introduction." In The Dura-Europos Synagogue: A Re-evaluation (1932-1992), edited by Joseph Gutmann, ix-xl. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1992.
- . "Programmatic painting in the Dura synagogue." In The Dura-Europos Synagogue: A Re-evaluation (1932-1992), edited by Joseph Gutmann, 137-54. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1992.
- Haardt, Robert. 1967. Gnosis: Character and Testimony. Translated by J. F. Hendry. English ed. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1971.
- Hafen, Bruce C. The Broken Heart. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . Covenant Hearts: Marriage and the Joy of Human Love. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . "A disciple's journey." In Brigham Young University 2007-2008 Speeches, 291-305. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University, 2008. <http://speeches.byu.edu/reader/reader.php?id=12148>. (accessed September 1, 2009).
- . A Disciple's Life: The Biography of Neal A. Maxwell. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2002.
- . "Reason, faith, and the things of eternity." The FARMS Review 20, no. 2 (2008): 15-35.
- . Spiritually Anchored in Unsettled Times. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2009.
- Hafen, Bruce C., and Marie K. Hafen. The Belonging Heart: The Atonement and Relationships with God and Family. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- Hagen, Kirk D. "Eternal progression in a multiverse: An explorative Mormon cosmology." Dialogue: A Journal of Mormon Thought 39, no. 2 (Summer 2006): 1-45.
- Hale, Van. "The origin of the human spirit in early Mormon thought." In Line Upon Line: Essays on Mormon Doctrine, edited by Gary James Bergera, 115-26. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 1989.
- . "What about the Adam-God theory?" Sandy, UT: Mormon Miscellaneous, 1983.
- Haleem, M. A. S. Abdel, ed. The Qur'an: A New Translation. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2004.
- Hales, Robert D. "The British contribution to the restored gospel." BYU Studies 27, no. 1 (1987): 1-13.
- . "A question of free agency." Ensign 5, May 1975, 43-44.
- Halford, Mary-Bess. Lutwin's Eva und Adam: Study - Text - Translation. Göppingen, Germany: Kümmerle Verlag, 1984.
- Hall, John F. 2007. "As far as it is translated correctly': The problem of tampering with the word of God in the transmission and translation of the New Testament." In Proceedings of the FAIR Conference. http://www.fairlds.org/FAIR_Conferences/2007_As_Far_As_It_Is_Translated_Correctly.html#enloc12 (accessed April 23, 2008).
- Hallo, William W., and K. Lawson Younger, eds. The Context of Scripture. 3 vols. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill Academic Publishers, 1996-2002.
- Haloun, G., and W. B. Henning. "The Compendium of the Doctrines and Styles of the Teaching of Mani, the Buddha of Light." Asia Major 3 (1952): 184-212.
- Halperin, David J. Faces of the Chariot: Development of Rabbinic Exegesis of Ezekiel's Vision of the Divine Chariot. Texte und Studien Zum Antiken Judentum. Philadelphia, PA: Coronet Books, 1988.
- Halpern, Paul, and Paul Wesson. Brave New Universe: Illuminating the Darkest Secrets of the Cosmos. Washington, DC: Joseph Henry Press, 2006.

- Halverson, W. Dee. The LDS Conference Center and Its History. Salt Lake City, UT: Heritage Associates, DMT Publishing, 2000.
- Hamblin, William J. "Aspects of an early Christian initiation ritual." In By Study and Also by Faith: Essays in Honor of Hugh W. Nibley, edited by John M. Lundquist and Stephen D. Ricks. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 202-21. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990.
- . "Joseph or Jung? A response to Douglas Salmon with an appendix by Gordon C. Thomasson." FARMS Review 13, no. 2 (2001): 87-107. http://farms.byu.edu/publications/review/?reviewed_author&vol=13&num=2&id=391 (accessed January 30, 2009).
- . 1983. "Pre-Islamic Arabian Prophets." In Mormons and Muslims: Spiritual Foundations and Modern Manifestations, edited by Spencer J. Palmer. Updated and Revised ed, 135-55. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 2002.
- . "Temple motifs in Jewish mysticism." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 440-76. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- Hamblin, William J., and David Rolph Seely. Solomon's Temple: Myth and History. London, England: Thames & Hudson, 2007.
- Hamilton, Victor P. The Book of Genesis: Chapters 1-17. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans Publishing, 1990.
- Hammond, Gerald. "English translations of the Bible." In The Literary Guide to the Bible, edited by Robert Alter and Frank Kermode, 647-66. Cambridge, MA: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, 1987.
- Hamori, Esther J. "When Gods Were Men": The Embodied God in Biblical and Near Eastern Literature. Beihefte zur Zeitschrift für die alttestamentliche Wissenschaft 384, ed. John Barton, Reinhard G. Kratz, Choon-Leong Sow and Markus Witte. Berlin, Germany: Walter de Gruyter, 2008.
- Hanauer, James Edward. Folk-Lore of the Holy Land: Moslem, Christian, and Jewish. Edited by Marmaduke Pickthall. 1st ed. London, England: Duckworth, 1907. <http://books.google.com/books?id=r4cTAAAYAAJ> (accessed June 7, 2008).
- Hanks, Marion D. "A loving, communicating God." Ensign 22, November 1992, 63-65.
- Hannay, James. "In the name of the Prophet—Smith!" Household Words 3, 1851, 385.
- Hansen, Gerald E., Jr., and Val Brinkerhoff. Sacred Walls: Learning from Temple Symbols. Salt Lake City, UT: Covenant Communications, 2009.
- Hansen, H. Kimball. "Astronomy and the scriptures." In Science and Religion: Toward a More Useful Dialogue, Vol. 1, edited by Wilford M. Hess and Raymond T. Matheny, 181-96. Geneva, IL: Paladin House Publishers, 1979.
- Hardy, Kenneth R. "Social origins of American scientists and scholars." Science 185 (9 August 1974): 497-506.
- Hardy, Thomas. 1919. "The Oxen." In The Lied and Art Song Texts Page. http://www.recmusic.org/lieder/get_text.html?TextId=7259 (accessed April 5, 2008).
- Harper, Donald. "Warring states natural philosophy and occult thought." In The Cambridge History of Ancient China: From the Origins of Civilization to 221 BC, edited by Michael Loewe and Edward L. Shaughnessy, 813-84. New York City, NY: Cambridge University Press, 1999.
- Harper, Douglas. 2001. Online Etymology Dictionary. <http://www.etymonline.com/abbr.php> (accessed August 22, 2007).
- Harper, Steven C. "All things are the Lord's: The law of consecration in the Doctrine and Covenants." In The Doctrine and Covenants: Revelations in Context: The 37th Annual Brigham Young University Sidney B. Sperry Symposium, edited by Andrew H. Hedges, J. Spencer Fluhman and Alonzo L. Gaskill, 212-27. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- Harrell, Charles R. "The development of the doctrine of preexistence, 1830-1844." BYU Studies 28, no. 2 (1988): 1-25.
- Harrington, D. J. ed. "Pseudo-Philo." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. 2 vols. Vol. 2, 297-377. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Harris, J. Rendell. 500-600. The Gospel of the Twelve Apostles, Together with the Apocalypses of Each One of Them, Edited from the Syriac MS. with a Translation and Introduction. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 1900. Reprint, Eugene, OR: Wipf and Stock, n. d.
- Harrison, B. Kent. "Truth, the sum of existence." In Of Heaven and Earth: Reconciling Scientific Thought with LDS Theology, edited by David L. Clark, 148-80. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1998.
- Harrison, Edward R. Cosmology: The Science of the Universe. New York, NY: Cambridge University Press, 1981.
- "Harrowing of Hell." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Harrowing_of_Hell (accessed December 26, 2007).
- Harvey, A. E. The New English Bible Companion to the New Testament. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1970.
- . The New English Bible Companion to the New Testament. 2nd ed. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University - Press, 2004.

- Harvey, Susan Ashbrook, and David G. Hunter, eds. The Oxford Handbook of Early Christian Studies. Oxford Handbooks in Religion and Theology. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2008.
- Hassett, Maurice M. "Orans (Orante).” In The Catholic Encyclopedia: An International Work of Reference on the Constitution, Doctrine, Discipline, and History of the Catholic Church, edited by Charles George Hebermann, Edward A. Pace, Condé B. Pallen, Thomas J. Shahan and John J. Wynne. 15 vols. Vol. 11, 269. New York City, NY: The Universal Knowledge Foundation, 1913. <http://books.google.com/books?id=kFosAAAAIAAJ> (accessed February 1, 2009).
- Hatch, Trevan G. Visions, Manifestations, and Miracles of the Restoration. Orem, UT: Granite Publishing, 2008.
- Haug, Martin ed. "The Book of Arda Viraf: A Dantesque Vision of Heaven and Hell." In The Sacred Books and Early Literature of the East 7, edited by Charles F. Horne, 185-207. New York City, NY: Parke, Austin, and Lipscomb, 1917. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2005.
- Hauglid, Brian M. "The Book of Abraham and Muslim tradition." In Astronomy, Papyrus, and Covenant, edited by John Gee and Brian M. Hauglid. Studies in the Book of Abraham, Number 3, eds. John Gee and Brian M. Hauglid, 131-46. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), Brigham Young University, 2005.
- . "Garment of Joseph: An update." In Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies Occasional Papers, edited by Jared W. Ludlow. Vol. 4, 25-29. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), Brigham Young University, 2003.
- . "Joseph Smith's inspired commentary on the doctrine of calling and election." In Shedding Light on the New Testament: Acts-Revelation, edited by Ray L. Huntington, Frank F. Judd, Jr. and David M. Whitchurch, 209-26. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 2009.
- . "Sacred time and the temple." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 636-45. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- Hawking, Stephen. 2004. "Gödel and the end of physics." In Department of Applied Mathematics and Theoretical Physics, Cambridge University. <http://www.damtp.cam.ac.uk/strts/dirac/hawking/> (accessed August 19, 2007).
- . The Universe in a Nutshell. New York, NY: Bantam Book, 2001.
- Hawkins, Chad S. The First 100 Temples. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2001.
- Haws, J. B. "Defenders of the doctrine of deification." In Prelude to the Restoration: From Apostasy to the Restored Church, The 33rd Annual Sidney B. Sperry Symposium, edited by Fred E. Wood, Steven C. Harper, Andrew H. Hedges, Patty A. Smith and Thomas R. Valetta, 70-98. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2004.
- Hawthorne, N. 1852. "The Miraculous Pitcher." In A Wonder Book and Tanglewood Tales. The Centenary Edition of The Works of Nathaniel Hawthorne 7, 115-139. Columbus, OH: Ohio State University Press, 1972.
- Haymond, Bryce. 2008. "Job's covenant: Hebrew tav and 'Behold my sign!' in Job 31." In Temple Study: Sustaining and Defending the LDS Temple. <http://www.templestudy.com/2008/08/16/jobs-covenant-hebrew-tav-and-behold-my-sign-in-job-31/>. (accessed August 21, 2009).
- . 2008. "The Seal of Melchizedek – Part 4." In Temple Study: Sustaining and Defending the LDS Temple. <http://www.templestudy.com/2008/09/11/the-seal-of-melchizedek-part-4/#more-902> (accessed September 12, 2008).
- Haynes, Stephen R. Noah's Curse: The Biblical Justification of American Slavery. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2002.
- Hayward, C. T. R. Interpretations of the Name Israel in Ancient Judaism and Some Early Christian Writings: From Victorious Athlete to Heavenly Champion. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2005.
- Hazen, Robert M. Genesis: The Scientific Quest for Life's Origin. Washington, DC: Joseph Henry Press, 2005.
- "Hebron: Historical background and statistics" (28 October 1996). In MFA Newsletter, Israel Ministry of Foreign Affairs. <http://www.mfa.gov.il/MFA/Peace+Process/Guide+to+the+Peace+Process/Hebron+-+Background.htm> (accessed June 10, 2008).
- Hedrick, Charles W., and Douglas M. Parrott ed. "The (Second) Apocalypse of James (V, 4)." In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed, 269-76. San Francisco, CA: Harper-San Francisco, 1990.
- Heffer, Simon. 2000. Vaughan Williams. Boston, MA: Northeastern University Press, 2001.
- Hegemonius. Acta Archelai (The Acts of Archelaus). Translated by Mark J. Vermes. Edited by Mark J. Vermes and Samuel N. C. Lieu. Manichaeae Studies 4. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 2001. <http://www.loc.gov/catdir/toc/fy0704/2003438282.html>.
- Heidegger, Martin. The Question Concerning Technology and Other Essays. New York City, NY: Harper Colophon Books, 1977.

- Heiser, Michael S., and David E. Bokovoy. "Scholarly Exchange." FARMS Review 19, no. 1 (2007): 221-323.
- Hendel, Ronald S. "Of demigods and the deluge: Toward an interpretation of Genesis 6:1-4." Journal of Biblical Literature 106 (1987): 13-26.
- . "The poetics of myth in Genesis." In The Seductiveness of Jewish Myth, edited by S. D. Breslauer, 157-70. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1997.
- . "Tangled plots in Genesis." In Fortunate the Eyes that See: Essays in Honor of David Noel Freedman, edited by Astrid B. Beck, Andrew H. Bartelt, Paul R. Raabe and Chris A. Franke, 35-51. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1995.
- Hennecke, Edgar, and Wilhelm Schneemelcher, eds. "The Acts of John." In New Testament Apocrypha, edited by Edgar Hennecke and Wilhelm Schneemelcher. 2 vols. Vol. 2, 188-259. Philadelphia, PA: The Westminster Press, 1965.
- , eds. "The Acts of Thomas." In New Testament Apocrypha, edited by Edgar Hennecke and Wilhelm Schneemelcher. 2 vols. Vol. 2, 425-531. Philadelphia, PA: The Westminster Press, 1965.
- , eds. "Apocalypse of Paul." In New Testament Apocrypha, edited by Edgar Hennecke and Wilhelm Schneemelcher. 2 vols. Vol. 2, 755-98. Philadelphia, PA: The Westminster Press, 1965.
- , eds. "Apocalypse of Peter." In New Testament Apocrypha, edited by Edgar Hennecke and Wilhelm Schneemelcher. 2 vols. Vol. 2, 663-83. Philadelphia, PA: The Westminster Press, 1965.
- , eds. "Hymn of the Pearl." In New Testament Apocrypha, edited by Edgar Hennecke and Wilhelm Schneemelcher. 2 vols. Vol. 2, 498-504. Philadelphia, PA: The Westminster Press, 1965.
- , eds. "The (Manichaean) Gospel of the Twelve Apostles." In New Testament Apocrypha, edited by Edgar Hennecke and Wilhelm Schneemelcher. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 268-69. Philadelphia, PA: The Westminster Press, 1965.
- , eds. New Testament Apocrypha. 2 vols. Philadelphia, PA: The Westminster Press, 1965.
- , eds. "The Protoevangelium of James." In New Testament Apocrypha, edited by Edgar Hennecke and Wilhelm Schneemelcher. 2 vols. Vol. 1. Translated by A. J. B. Higgins, 370-88. Philadelphia, PA: The Westminster Press, 1965.
- Henry, Matthew. 1706-1714. Matthew Henry's Commentary on the Whole Bible: Complete and Unabridged in One Volume. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 1991.
- Henry, Paul. Les Églises de Moldavie du Nord, des Origines à la Fin du XVIe Siècle. 2 vols. Monuments de l'Art Byzantin 6. Paris, France: Ernest Leroux, 1930.
- Herbert, George. 1633. The Temple. Edited by Christopher Harvey. 2nd ed. London, England: Pickering, 1838. <http://books.google.com/books?id=vv-PaLfn8wIC> (accessed May 16, 2009).
- Herbert, Máire, and Martin McNamara, eds. Irish Biblical Apocrypha: Selected Texts in Translation. Edinburgh, Scotland: T & T Clark, 1989.
- Hermes Trismegistus. "Asclepius." In The Other Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone, 575-80. San Francisco, CA: Harper-SanFrancisco, 2005.
- . "Poimandres." In The Gnostic Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone and Marvin W. Meyer, 502-11. Boston, MA: Shambhala, 2003.
- . "Poimandres." In The Other Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone, 567-74. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 2005.
- . Thrice-Greatest Hermes: Studies in Hellenistic Theosophy and Gnosis, Being a Translation of the Extant Sermons and Fragments of the Trismegistic Literature with Prolegomena, Commentaries, and Notes. 3 vols. Edited by George Robert Shaw Mead. London, England: The Theosophical Publishing Society, 1906. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, n.d. <http://www.gnosis.org/library/hermet.htm> (accessed August 30, 2007).
- Hertz, J. H., ed. The Soncino Edition of the Pentateuch and HafTorahs (with Hebrew Text, English Translation and Commentary) 2nd ed. Brooklyn, NY: The Soncino Press, 1970.
- Heschel, Abraham Joshua. 1962, 1965, 1995. Heavenly Torah as Refracted Through the Generations. 3 vols. in 1. Translated by Gordon Tucker. Edited by Gordon Tucker and Leonard Levin. New York City, NY: Continuum International, 2007.
- Hess, Richard S., and David Toshio Tsumura, eds. I Studied Inscriptions Before the Flood: Ancient Near Eastern, Literary, and Linguistic Approaches to Genesis 1-11. Sources for Biblical and Theological Study 4. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 1994.
- Heuser, Manfred, and Hans-Joachim Klimkeit. Studies in Manichaean Literature and Art. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 46. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1998.
- Hicks, Michael. Mormonism and Music: A History. Music in American Life. Urbana-Champaign, IL: University of Illinois Press, 1989.
- Hiebert, Robert J. V., ed. A New English Translation of the Septuagint and the Other Greek Translations Traditionally

- Included under that Title: Genesis Provisional ed. NETS: New English Translation of the Septuagint, ed. Albert Pietersma and Benjamin Wright. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2005. <http://ccat.sas.upenn.edu/nets/edition/gen.pdf> (accessed August 22, 2007).
- Hilton, Lynn M. 1981. "The hand as a cup in ancient religious worship." In Discovering Lehi: New Evidence of Lehi and Nephi in Arabia, edited by Lynn M. Hilton and Hope A. Hilton, 171-77. Springfield, UT: Cedar Fort Incorporated, 1996.
- Hinckley, Gordon B. "Daughters of God." Ensign 21, November 1991, 97-100.
- . "Don't drop the ball." Ensign 24, November 1994, 46-49.
- . 2004. "Manhattan, New York, Member Meeting, 12 June 2004." In Discourses of President Gordon B. Hinckley. 2 vols. Vol. 2: 2000-2004, 419-29. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . "The marvelous foundation of our faith." Ensign 32, November 2002, 78-81.
- . "The need for greater kindness." Ensign 36, May 2006, 58-61.
- . 1997. "Ogden, Utah, Institute of Religion Devotional, 15 April 1997." In Discourses of President Gordon B. Hinckley. 2 vols. Vol. 1: 1995-1999, 370-80. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . 2002. "Priesthood Session, 6 April 2002." In Discourses of President Gordon B. Hinckley. 2 vols. Vol. 2: 2000-2004, 124-31. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . "Sunday Morning Session, 2 April 1995." In Discourses of President Gordon B. Hinckley. 2 vols. Vol. 1: 1995-1999, 13-20. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . 1996. "Sunday Morning Session, 6 October 1996." In Discourses of President Gordon B. Hinckley. 2 vols. Vol. 1: 1995-1999, 98-106. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . 1998. "Sunday Morning Session, 4 October 1998." In Discourses of President Gordon B. Hinckley. 2 vols. Vol. 1: 1995-1999, 206-13. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . 2004. "Sunday Morning Session, 3 October 2004." In Discourses of President Gordon B. Hinckley. 2 vols. Vol. 2: 2000-2004, 257-63. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . Teachings of Gordon B. Hinckley. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book Company, 1997.
- . "To all the world in testimony." Ensign 30, May 2000, 4-6.
- . 1998. "University of Utah Commencement Exercises, 12 June 1998." In Discourses of President Gordon B. Hinckley. 2 vols. Vol. 1: 1995-1999, 539-46. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . 2003. "University of Utah, Gordon B. Hinckley Endowment for British Studies, 12 July 2003." In Discourses of President Gordon B. Hinckley. 2 vols. Vol. 2: 2000-2004, 544-48. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . "Women of the Church." Ensign 26, November 1996, 67-70.
- Hinckley, Gordon B., Thomas S. Monson, and James E. Faust. "The family: A proclamation to the world. Proclamation of the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve presented at the General Relief Society Meeting, September 23, 1995." Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1995.
- "Hindu groups oppose canal project." September 12. In BBC News. http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/world/south_asia/6990847.stm (accessed September 30, 2007).
- Hirschman, Jack ed. "Baraita on the Work of Creation: Baraita de Mas'aseh Bereshit." In The Secret Garden: An Anthology in the Kabbalah, edited by David Meltzer, 3-20. Barrytown, NY: Barrytown Limited, 1997.
- "History of Joseph Smith (continued)." Nauvoo, IL: Times and Seasons 4:5, January, 1843, 71-73.
- "History of Joseph Smith (continued)." Nauvoo, IL: Times and Seasons 6:12, July 1, 1845, 944-48.
- Hodges, Horace Jeffery. "Milton's muse as brooding dove: Unstable image on a chaos of sources." Milton Studies of Korea 12, no. 2 (2002): 365-92. <http://memes.or.kr/sources/%C7%D0%C8%B8%C1%F6/%B9%D0%C5%CF%BF%AC%B1%B8/12-2/11.Hodges.pdf> (accessed August 25, 2007).
- Hogel, Christian. Symeon Metaphrastes: Rewriting and Canonization. Copenhagen, Denmark: University of Copenhagen, Muesum Tusculanum Press, 2002.
- Holland, Jeffrey R. "Atonement of Jesus Christ." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 1, 82-86. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- . Christ and the New Covenant: The Messianic Message of the Book of Mormon. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1997.
- . "I stand all amazed." In On Earth As It Is in Heaven, edited by Jeffrey R. Holland and Patricia T. Holland, 198-213. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1986. "Lift up your eyes." In On Earth As It Is in Heaven, edited by Jeffrey R. Holland and Patricia T. Holland, 115-23. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.

- . “My words... never cease.” Ensign 28, May 2008, 91-94.
- . “My words... never cease.” In Broken Things to Mend, edited by Jeffrey R. Holland, 184-90. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . 1986. “O Lord, Keep My Rudder True.” In On Earth As It Is in Heaven, edited by Jeffrey R. Holland and Patricia T. Holland, 138-50. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1988. Of Souls, Symbols, and Sacraments. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2001.
- Holland, Jeffrey R., and Patricia T. Holland. “Some things we have learned together.” In However Long and Hard the Road, edited by Jeffrey R. Holland, 99-113. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1985.
- Holtz, Barry W. 1984. Back to the Sources: Reading the Classic Jewish Texts. New York City, NY: Simon and Schuster, 2006.
- Holzappel, Richard Neitzel, and T. Jeffery Cottle. Old Mormon Kirtland and Missouri. Santa Ana, CA: Fieldbrook Productions, 1991.
- Holzappel, Richard Neitzel, and David Rolph Seely. My Father's House: Temple Worship and Symbolism in the New Testament. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1994.
- Holzappel, Richard Neitzel, and Thomas A. Wayment. From Bethlehem through the Sermon on the Mount. 2 vols. Vol. 1. The Life and Teachings of Jesus Christ. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . From the Last Supper through the Resurrection: The Savior's Final Hours. 2 vols. Vol. 2. The Life and Teachings of Jesus Christ. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2003.
- Homer. ca. 800 BC. The Odyssey of Homer Done into English Prose. Edited by S. H. Butcher and M. A. Lang. Second, Revised and Corrected ed. London, England: Macmillan and Company, 1879. <http://books.google.com/books?id=3oMCAAAAQAAJ> (accessed August 31, 2008).
- Hooker, J. T. “Introduction.” In Reading the Past: Ancient Writing from Cuneiform to the Alphabet, edited by J. T. Hooker, 6-13. London, England: The British Museum Press, 1990.
- Hooper, Walter. C. S. Lewis: A Companion and Guide. New York: HarperCollins, 1996.
- Hopkins, Clark. The Discovery of Dura-Europos. Edited by Bernard Goldman. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 1979.
- Horne, Charles F., ed. The Medieval Hebrew Tanhuma Midrash. Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2005.
- , ed. Sacred Books and Early Literature of the East. 14 vols. New York City, NY: Parke, Austin, and Lipscomb, 1917. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2005.
- Horne, Dennis B., ed. An Apostle's Record: The Journals of Abraham H. Cannon. Salt Lake City, UT: Gnolaum Books, 2004.
- . Bruce R. McConkie: Highlights from His Life and Teachings. Roy, UT: Eborn Books, 2000.
- Horton, George A., Jr. “Elias.” In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 2, 449. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- . “Insights into the Book of Genesis.” In The Joseph Smith Translation: The Restoration of Plain and Precious Things, edited by Monte S. Nyman and Robert L. Millet, 51-88. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 1985.
- Hoselton, M.A. “Inventory of Manuscripts from Qumran.” In Dead Sea Scrolls and Qumran. <http://www.flash.net/~hoselton/deadsea/caves.htm> (accessed October 3, 2008).
- Howard, Luke. Album notes from “Requiem: Choral Music of Mack Wilberg”, performed by The Mormon Tabernacle Choir and the Orchestra at Temple Square. Salt Lake City, UT: Intellectual Reserve, 2008.
- Howard, Richard P. Restoration Scriptures. Independence, MO: Herald House, 1969.
- . Restoration Scriptures. 2nd ed. Independence, MO: Herald House, 1995.
- Huchel, Frederick M. “The cosmic ring dance of the angels: An early Christian rite of the temple.” Presented at the Temple Studies Group Symposium II, Temple Church, London England, May 30, 2009. <http://www.heavenlyascents.com/2009/06/10/the-cosmic-ring-dance-of-the-angels-the-text-of-frederick-m-huchels-presentation-at-the-uk-temple-studies-group-symposium-ii/> (accessed June 11, 2009).
- . The Cosmic Ring Dance of the Angels: An Early Christian Rite of the Temple. North Logan, UT: The Frithurex Press, 2009. <http://www.lulu.com/content/paperback-book/the-cosmic-ring-dance-of-the-angels---softbound/7409216> (accessed September 21, 2009).
- Hudson, Valerie M., and Alma Don Sorenson. “Response to Professor Thomas.” In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, 323-38. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.

- Huff, Benjamin. "Theology in the light of continuing revelation." In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, 478-87. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.
- Hugh of Saint Victor. ca. 1134. On the Sacraments of the Christian Faith (De Sacramentis). Translated by Roy J. DeFerrari. Medieval Academy Books 58. Cambridge, MA: The Medieval Academy of America, 1951. Reprint, Eugene, OR: Wipf & Stock, 2007.
- Hugo, Victor. Selected Poetry in French and English. Translated by Steven Monte. New York City, NY: Routledge, 2002.
- Hultgren, Arland J. The Parables of Jesus: A Commentary. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 2000.
- Humphrey, Caroline, and Piers Vitebsky. Sacred Architecture: Symbolic Form and Ornament Traditions of East and West Models of the Cosmos. New York City, NY: Barnes and Noble, 2005.
- Hunter, Howard W. 1979. "All are alike unto God." In That We Might Have Joy, 68-75. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . 1983. "Parents' concern for children." In That We Might Have Joy, 111-15. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . The Teachings of Howard W. Hunter. Edited by Clyde J. Williams. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1997.
- Hunter, Robert Grams. 1965. "The regeneration of Alonzo." In Shakespeare's Christian Dimension: An Anthology of Commentary, edited by Roy Battenhouse, 263-67. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1994.
- Hustwit, Ronald. "Wittgenstein's interest in Kierkegaard." Wittgenstein Studies (1997). <http://sammelpunkt.philo.at:8080/archive/00000526/01/18-2-97.TXT> (accessed August 25, 2007).
- Hutchinson, Anthony A. "A Mormon midrash? LDS creation narratives reconsidered." Dialogue 21, no. 4 (Winter 1988): 11-74.
- Hyde, Orson. 1859. "Sowing and reaping; fulfilment of covenants (Remarks made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 6 October 1859)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 7, 313-17. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . "A diagram of the Kingdom of God." Liverpool, England: Millennial Star 9:2, January 15, 1847, 23-24. Reprinted in Smith, J., Jr. The Words of Joseph Smith. Edited by A.F. Ehat and L.W. Cook. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1980, pp. 297-299 n. 8. <http://contentdm.lib.byu.edu/cgi-bin/showfile.exe?CISOROOT=/MStar&CISOPT=562&filename=563.pdf> (accessed January 3, 2008).
- . 1841. "Prayer of Orson Hyde on the Mount of Olives." In History of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Documentary History), edited by Joseph Smith, Jr. and Brigham Henry Roberts. 7 vols. Vol. 4, 456-59. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1978.
- Hyde, Paul Nolan. "Intelligences." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 2, 692-93. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Hymns of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints*. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1948.
- Hymns of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints*. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1985.
- Ibn Ezra, Abraham ben Meir. d. 1164. Ibn Ezra's Commentary on the Pentateuch: Genesis (Bereshit). Edited by H. Norman Strickman and Arthur M. Silver. Chicago, IL: Menorah Publications, 1988.
- Ibn Ishaq ibn Yasar, Muhammad. d. 767. The Life of Muhammad: A Translation of Ishaq's Sirat Rasul Allah. Translated by Alfred Guillaume. Edited by Abd Al-Malik Ibn Hisham. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2002.
- . d. 767. The Making of the Last Prophet: A Reconstruction of the Earliest Biography of Muhammad. Edited by Gordon Darnell Newby. Columbia, SC: University of South Carolina Press, 1989.
- Ibn Kathir, Ismail. d. 1373. Stories of the Prophets. Translated by Rashad Ahmad Azami. 2nd ed. Riyadh, Saudi Arabia: Dar-us-Salam Publications, 2003.
- . d. 1373. Tafsir Ibn Kathir (Abridged). 10 vols. Translated by Safiur-Rahman Al-Mubarakpuri. Houston, TX: Dar-us-Salam Publications, 2000.
- Ibrahim, Raymond, ed. The Al Qaeda Reader. Translated by Raymond Ibrahim. New York City, NY: Broadway Books, 2007.
- Idel, Moché. 1987. "Hénoch c'est Métatron." In Le Livre hébreu d'Hénoch ou Livre des Palais, edited by Charles Mopsik, 379-426. Lagrasse, France: Éditions Verdier, 1989.
- Ignatius. d. ca. 110-112. "Epistle of Ignatius to the Philadelphians." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 1, 79-85. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.

- "Industrial-strength design: How Brooks Stevens shaped your world." In Milwaukee Art Museum Exhibition, June 7-September 7, 2003. http://www.mam.org/exhibitions/_sites/brooks/biography.asp (accessed October 20, 2007).
- "Inflatable church." In Innovations Xtreme. <http://www.inflatablechurch.com/mainpage.htm> (accessed August 20, 2008).
- Ingebreetsen, Richard J. Joseph Smith and Modern Astronomy. Springville, UT: Cedar Fort International, 1999.
- Insler, Stanley, ed. The Gathas of Zarathustra, edited with a Translation, Commentary, and a Glossary. Acta Iranica — Encyclopédie Permanente des Études Iraniques, Textes et Mémoires 1. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1975.
- International Theological Commission. "The hope of salvation for infants who die without being baptized." Origins: CNS Documentary Service (Washington, DC: Catholic News Service) 36, no. 45 (26 April 2007): 725-46.
- Irenaeus. ca. 150-200. "Against Heresies." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 1, 315-567. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- . d. ca. 202. Irenaeus's Demonstration of the Apostolic Preaching: A Theological Commentary and Translation. Translated by Iain M. MacKenzie. Aldershot, England: Ashgate Publishing Ltd., 2002.
- . ca. 150-200. St. Irenaeus: Proof of the Apostolic Preaching. Translated by Joseph P. Smith. Mahwah, NJ: Paulist Press, 1978.
- Irving, Gordon. "The law of adoption: One phase of the development of the Mormon concept of salvation." BYU Studies 14 (Spring 1974): 291-314.
- Isaac, E. ed. "1 (Ethiopic Apocalypse of) Enoch." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 1, 5-89. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Isaacson, Walter. Einstein: His Life and Universe. New York City, NY: Simon & Schuster, 2007.
- Isar, Nicoletta. "The dance of Adam: Reconstructing the Byzantine choros." Byzantino-Slavica: Revue Internationale des Études Byzantines 61 (2003): 179-204.
- Isenberg, Wesley W. ed. "The Gospel of Philip (II, 3)." In The Nag Hammadi Library, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed, 139-60. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- Israel, David Asia. Secret Teachings of the Angelic Kings: New Translation of the Ancient Aramaic "Drashia d-Malkia" Scroll, Containing the Lost Gnostic Sermons of Jesus, Mary Magdalene, and John the Baptist. Order of Nasorean Essenes, 2007.
- Jablonka, Eva, and Marion J. Lamb. Evolution in Four Dimensions: Genetic, Epigenetic, Behavioral, and Symbolic Variation in the History of Life. Cambridge, MA: The MIT Press, 2005.
- Jackson, Deirdre. Marvellous to Behold: Miracles in Medieval Manuscripts. London, England: The British Library, 2007.
- Jackson, Kent P. The Book of Moses and the Joseph Smith Translation Manuscripts. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 2005.
- . E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, July 6, 2006.
- . E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, August 21, 2006.
- . "Joseph Smith's Cooperstown Bible: The Historical Context of the Bible Used in the Joseph Smith Translation." BYU Studies 40, no. 1 (2001): 41-70.
- . "New discoveries in the Joseph Smith Translation of the Bible." Religious Educator 6, no. 3 (2005): 149-60.
- . The Restored Gospel and the Book of Genesis. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2001.
- Jackson, Kent P., and Peter M. Jasinski. "The process of inspired translation: Two passages translated twice in the Joseph Smith Translation of the Bible." BYU Studies 42, no. 2 (2003): 35-64.
- Jackson, Kent P., and Charles Swift. "The ages of the Patriarchs in the Joseph Smith Translation." In A Witness for the Restoration: Essays in Honor of Robert J. Matthews, edited by Kent P. Jackson and Andrew C. Skinner, 1-11. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 2007.
- Jacobs, Alan. Original Sin: A Cultural History. New York City, NY: HarperOne, 2008.
- Jacobson, Howard, ed. A Commentary on Pseudo-Philo's Liber Antiquitatum Biblicarum, with Latin Text and English Translation. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill Academic Publishers, 1996.
- Jafri, Syed Husain M. "Twelve Imam Shi'ism." In Islamic Spirituality, edited by Seyyed Hossein Nasr. Vol. 1: Foundations, 160-78. New York City, NY: The Crossroad Publishing Company, 1987.
- James, Montague Rhodes ed. 1924. "The Acts of Thomas." In The Apocryphal New Testament, edited by Montague Rhodes James, 364-438. Oxford, England: The Clarendon Press, 1983.
- , ed. 1924. The Apocryphal New Testament. Oxford, England: The Clarendon Press, 1983.
- , ed. 1924. "The Gospel of Bartholomew." In The Apocryphal New Testament, edited by Montague Rhodes James,

- 166-81. Oxford, England: The Clarendon Press, 1983.
- , ed. 1924. "The Hymn of the Soul." In The Apocryphal New Testament, edited by Montague Rhodes James, 411-15. Oxford, England: The Clarendon Press, 1983.
- James, William. "What pragmatism means." In Pragmatism: A New Name for Some Old Ways of Thinking, Popular Lectures on Philosophy by William James, edited by William James, 43-81. New York City, NY: Longmans, Green, and Company, 1907. http://books.google.com/books?id=1S62J9uY_x4C (accessed September 3, 2007).
- . "The will to believe." In The Will to Believe and Other Essays in Popular Philosophy, 1-31. New York City, NY: Longmans, Green, and Company, 1897. Reprint, Mineola, NY: Dover, 1985.
- Janowitz, Naomi. The Poetics of Ascent: Theories of Language in a Rabbinic Ascent Text. SUNY Series in Judaica: Hermeneutics, Mysticism, and Culture. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1989.
- Jarratt, Devereux. The Life of the Reverend Devereux Jarratt, Rector of Bath Parish, Dinwiddie County, Virginia, Written by Himself, in a Series of Letters Addressed to the Rev. John Coleman, One of the Ministers of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Maryland. Baltimore, MD: Warner and Hanna, 1806. <http://books.google.com/books?id=fn4EAAAYAAJ> (accessed May 27, 2009).
- Jarvik, Elaine. "Beliefs on Darwin's evolution vary from religion to religion." Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News, January 19, 2006.
- Jastrow, Marcus, ed. 1903. Dictionary of the Targumim, Talmud Bavli, Talmud, Yerushalmi, and Midrashic Literature. Brooklyn, NY: Judaica Press, 2004.
- Jeffery, Duane E. "Noah's flood: Modern scholarship and mormon traditions." Sunstone, October 2004, 27-39, 42-45.
- . "'We don't know': A survey of Mormon responses to evolutionary biology." In Science and Religion: Toward a More Useful Dialogue, edited by Wilford M. Hess, Raymond T. Matheny and Donlu D. Thayer, 23-37. Geneva, IL: Paladin House Publishers, 1979.
- Jensen, Marlin K. "Gospel doctrines: Anchors to our souls." Ensign 38, October 2008, 58-61.
- Jensen, Robin M. "The Dura Europos synagogue, early-Christian art, and religious life in Dura Europos." In Jews, Christians, and Polytheists in the Ancient Synagogue: Cultural Interaction During the Greco-Roman Period, edited by Steven Fine, 154-67. New York City, NY: Routledge, 1999.
- Jensen, Robin Scott. E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, July 20, 2009.
- . "From manuscript to printed page: An analysis of the history of the Book of Commandments and Revelations." BYU Studies 48, no. 3 (2009): 18-52.
- Jerahmeel ben Solomon. ca. 1100-1200. The Chronicles of Jerahmeel or, The Hebrew Bible Historiale. Translated by Moses Gaster. Oriental Translation Fund New Series 4. London, England: Royal Asiatic Society, 1899. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2007.
- Jeremias, Joachim. Rediscovering the Parables. New York City, NY: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1966.
- . The Sermon on the Mount. Biblical Series 2. Philadelphia, PA: Fortress Press, 1963.
- Jerome. ca. 347-420. The Homilies of Saint Jerome (1-59 on the Psalms). Translated by Marie Liquori Ewald. The Fathers of the Church, Volume 48. Washington, DC: Catholic University of America Press, 1964.
- . ca. 347-420. Jerome's Hebrew Questions on Genesis. Translated by C. T. R. Hayward. Oxford Early Christian Studies. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1995.
- . ca. 386. "Letter 46: Paula and Eustochium to Marcella." In Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, edited by Philip Schaff and Henry Wace. 14 vols. Vol. 8, 60-65. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1895. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- "Jerusalem." In Icons: A Portrait of England, ed. ICONS Online. <http://www.icons.org.uk/theicons/collection/jerusalem/features/and-did-those-feet> (accessed November 24, 2007).
- Jessee, Dean C. 1969. "The earliest documented accounts of Joseph Smith's First Vision." In Opening the Heavens: Accounts of Divine Manifestations, 1820-1844, edited by John W. Welch and Erick B. Carlson, 1-33. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 2005.
- . "The writing of Joseph Smith's history." BYU Studies 11 (Summer 1971): 439-73.
- "Jesus Christ is the brother of Satan." In FAIRWiki. http://en.fairmormon.org/Jesus_Christ_is_the_brother_of_Satan (accessed March 19, 2009).
- Jobes, Karen H., and Moisés Silva. Invitation to the Septuagint. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2000.
- Johnson, Hollis R. "The big bang: What does it mean for us?" The FARMS Review 16, no. 2 (2004): 277-312.
- Johnson, Ken, ed. Ancient Seder Olam. Nashville, TN: Xulon Press, Salem Communications, 2006.
- Johnson, Luke Timothy. Hebrews: A Commentary. The New Testament Library, ed. C. Clifton Black and John T. Carroll. Louisville, KY: Westminster John Knox Press, 2006.

- . The Real Jesus: The Misguided Quest for the Historical Jesus and the Truth of the Traditional Gospels. New York: HarperCollins/HarperSanFrancisco, 1996.
- . Religious Experience in Earliest Christianity: A Missing Dimension in New Testament Studies. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 1998.
- Johnson, M. D. ed. "Life of Adam and Eve." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 2, 249-95. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Johnson, Mark J. "The lost prologue: Moses chapter one and the Joseph Smith Translation of the Bible as ancient text." Unpublished article in the possession of the author, 2006.
- Johnson, Maxwell E. "Christian initiation." In The Oxford Handbook of Early Christian Studies, edited by Susan Ashbrook Harvey and David G. Hunter. Oxford Handbooks in Religion and Theology, 693-710. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2008.
- Jolly, Penny Howell. Made in God's Image? Eve and Adam in the Genesis Mosaics at San Marco, Venice. California Studies in the History of Art, Discovery Series 4, ed. Walter Horn and James Marrow. Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1997.
- Jones, Alan, ed. The Qur'an. Translated by Alan Jones. Oxford, England: Oxbow Books and the E. J. Gibb Memorial Trust, 2007.
- Jones, Dan. 1847. History of the Latter-day Saints, from Their Establishment in the Year 1823, to the Time When Three Hundred Thousand of Them Were Exiled from America Because of Their Religion in the Year 1846. Translated by Ronald D. Dennis. Edited by Ronald D. Dennis. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 2008.
- Jones, Edward T. "The Theology of Thomas Dick and its Possible Relationship to that of Joseph Smith." Masters Thesis, Brigham Young University, 1969.
- Jones, F. Stanley, ed. An Ancient Jewish Christian Source on the History of Christianity: Pseudo-Clementine Recognitions 1.27-71. Society of Biblical Literature Texts and Translations 37: Christian Apocrypha Series 2, ed. Jean-Daniel Dubois and Dennis R. MacDonald. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1995.
- Jones, Gerald E. Animals and the Church. Salt Lake City, UT: Eborn Books, 2003.
- . "Apocryphal literature and the Latter-day Saints." In Apocryphal Writings and the Latter-day Saints, edited by C. Wilfred Griggs. Religious Studies Monograph Series 13, 19-33. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1986.
- Jones, Gracia N. Emma and Joseph: Their Divine Mission. American Fork, UT: Covenant Communications, 1999.
- Jones, Norman. "Shakespeare's England." In A Companion to Shakespeare, edited by David Scott Kastan, 25-56. Oxford, England: Blackwell Publishers, 1999.
- Jones, Robin. "An Englishman abroad: Sir James Emerson Tennent in Ceylon, 1845-50." Apollo: The International Magazine for Collectors, November 2006. http://findarticles.com/p/articles/mi_m0PAL/is_537_164/ai_n16865262/pg_1 (accessed March 13, 2008).
- Jones, Steven E. "Was there death before Adam?" In Death Before Adam. http://www.tungate.com/Death_Before_Adam.htm (accessed July 14, 2008).
- Josephus, Flavius. 37-ca. 97. "The Antiquities of the Jews." In The Genuine Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian. Translated from the Original Greek, according to Havercamp's Accurate Edition. Translated by William Whiston, 23-426. London, England: W. Bowyer, 1737. Reprint, Grand Rapids, MI: Kregel Publications, 1980.
- , ed. 37-ca. 97. The Genuine Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian. Translated from the Original Greek, according to Havercamp's Accurate Edition. Translated by William Whiston. London, England: W. Bowyer, 1737. Reprint, Grand Rapids, MI: Kregel Publications, 1980.
- . 37-ca. 97. Jewish Antiquities. Vol. 5-13 of the Works of Josephus. Translated by Henry St. John Thackeray, Ralph Marcus, Allen Wikgren and Louis H. Feldman. Loeb Classical Library 242, 490, 281, 326, 365, 489, 410, 433, 456. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1930-1965.
- . 37-ca. 97. Josephus: The Essential Works. Translated by Paul L. Maier. 5th ed. Grand Rapids, MI: Kregel Academic and Professional, 1995.
- . 37-ca. 97. The New Complete Works of Josephus. Translated by Paul L. Maier and William Whiston. Grand Rapids, MI: Kregel Publications, 1999.
- . 37-ca. 97. "The Wars of the Jews." In The Genuine Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian. Translated from the Original Greek, according to Havercamp's Accurate Edition. Translated by William Whiston, 427-605. London, England: W. Bowyer, 1737. Reprint, Grand Rapids, MI: Kregel Publications, 1980.
- Jospe, Raphael, Truman G. Madsen, and Seth Ward, eds. Covenant and Chosenness in Judaism and Mormonism. Madison, NJ: Fairleigh Dickenson University Press, 2001.
- Justin Martyr. d. ca. 165. "Dialogue with Trypho." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 1, 194-270. Buffalo, NY: The Christian - Literature Company, 1885. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.

- Kahne, Marcel. "La Genèse et la symbolique de la création." In Iduméa-Études, edited by Bruno Kahne. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 10-13. Castelnau d'Estretfonds, France: Iduméa, 2004.
- Kaiser, Walter C., Jr. "Exodus." In The Expositor's Bible Commentary, edited by Frank E. Gaebelein, 287-497. Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan, 1990.
- . Toward an Old Testament Theology. Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan Publishing House, 1991.
- Kaplan, Abraham. The Conduct of Inquiry. New York: Harper and Row, 1963.
- Kaplan, Abraham. "The meanings of ritual: Comparisons." In Reflections on Mormonism: Judeo-Christian Parallels, Papers Delivered at the Religious Studies Center Symposium, Brigham Young University, March 10-11, 1978, edited by Truman G. Madsen. Religious Studies Monograph Series 4, 37-56. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1978.
- Kaplan, Aryeh, ed. The Bahir. Revised ed. Newburyport, MA: Weiser Books, 1989.
- , ed. Sefer Yetzirah: The Book of Creation. Revised ed. Newburyport, MA: Weiser Books, 1997.
- Karabell, Zachary. Peace Be upon You: The Story of Muslim, Christian, and Jewish Coexistence. New York City, NY: Alfred A. Knopf, 2007.
- Karr, Don. 1985. "Notes on the study of Merkabah mysticism and Hekhalot literature in English with an appendix on Jewish Magic." In Collected Articles on the Kabbalah, edited by Don Karr. Vol. 1, 17-20. Ithaca, NY: KoM #5, 2006.
- Kass, Leon R. The Beginning of Wisdom: Reading Genesis. New York City, NY: Free Press, Simon and Schuster, 2003.
- Kastler, Esthi. 2006. "Commentaire du texte de Genèse 2.4b à 4.26." In Études bibliques, Fédération protestante de France. <http://www.protestants.org/etudes-bibliques/genese/etude.htm> (accessed August 25, 2007).
- Kearney, Greg. "The message and the messenger: Latter-day Saints and Freemasonry." Presented at the FAIR Conference, August, 2005. http://www.fairlds.org/FAIR_Conferences/2005_Latter-day_Saints_and_Freemasonry.html (accessed February 22, 2009).
- Keber, Eloise Quiñones, ed. Codex Telleriano-Remensis: Ritual, Divination, and History in a Pictorial Aztec Manuscript. Austin, TX: University of Texas Press, 1995.
- Kee, Howard C. ed. "Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 1, 775-828. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Keele, Alan. "Die Zauberflöte: Mozart's magical celebration of Apotheosis, the man/woman monad, and the temple as blueprint for the celestial life." In In Search of the Supernal: Pre-Existence, Eternal Marriage, and Apotheosis in German Literary, Operatic, and Cinematic Texts, edited by Alan Keele, 79-136. Münster, Germany: agenda Verlag, 2003.
- . "Toward an anthropology of apotheosis in Mozart's 'Magic Flute': A demonstration of the artistic universality and vitality of certain 'peculiar' Latter-day Saint doctrines." BYU Studies 43, no. 3 (2004): 43-83.
- Keener, Craig S. The Gospel of John: A Commentary. 2 vols. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson, 2003.
- Keller, Roger R. "Adam: As understood by four men who shaped Western Christianity." In The Man Adam, edited by Joseph Fielding McConkie and Robert L. Millet, 151-88. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1990.
- . "Teaching the Fall and the Atonement: A comparative method." The Religious Educator: Perspectives on the Restored Gospel 5, no. 2 (2004): 101-18. http://rsc.byu.edu/TRE/TRE5_2.pdf. (accessed September 1, 2009).
- Kelly, George A. "A brief introduction to personal construct theory." In Perspectives in Personal Construct Theory, edited by D. Bannister, 1-29. London: Academic Press, 1970.
- . "A mathematical approach to psychology." In Clinical Psychology and Personality: The Selected Papers of George Kelly, edited by B. A. Maher, 7-45. New York: Wiley, 1969.
- . The Psychology of Personal Constructs. 2 vols. New York: Norton, 1955.
- Kelly, Henry Ansgar. Satan: A Biography. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2006.
- Kelly, Joseph F., and Jeanne-Nicole Saint-Laurent. "Instrumenta studiorum: Tools of the trade." In The Oxford Handbook of Early Christian Studies, edited by Susan Ashbrook Harvey and David G. Hunter. Oxford Handbooks in Religion and Theology, 957-77. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2008.
- Kempis, Thomas à. 1441. The Imitation of Christ: A New Reading of the 1441 Latin Autograph Manuscript. Translated by William C. Creasy. Edited by William C. Creasy. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.
- Kendrick, Albert Frank. Catalogue of Textiles from Burying-Grounds in Egypt. 3 vols. Vol. 1: Greco-Roman Period. London, England: Victoria and Albert Museum Department of Textiles, published under the authority of His Majesty's Stationery Office, 1920. <http://books.google.com/books?id=SGq1AAAAIAAJ> (accessed September 12, 2008).

- Kennedy, Michael. 1964. The Works of Ralph Vaughan Williams. 2nd ed. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1992.
- Kerényi, Carl. Eleusis: Archetypal Image of Mother and Daughter. Translated by Ralph Manheim. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1967.
- Kerry, Paul E. "Initiates of Isis Now, Come, Enter into the Temple!": Masonic and Enlightenment thought in The Magic Flute." BYU Studies 43, no. 3 (2004): 104-28.
- . "Thomas Carlyle's draft essay on the Mormons." Literature and Belief 25, no. 1-2 (2005): 261-88.
- Keyte, Hugh, and Andrew Parrott ed. "Noël Nouvelet." In The Shorter New Oxford Book of Carols, 298-99. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1993.
- Khalidi, Tarif, ed. The Muslim Jesus: Sayings and Stories in Islamic Literature. Convergences: Inventories of the Present, ed. Edward E. Said. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2001.
- Kierkegaard, Søren. 1843. Fear and Trembling: A Dialectical Lyric. Translated by Walter Lowrie. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1941.
- . 1851. "For Self-Examination." In For Self-Examination; Judge for Yourself!, edited by Howard V. Hong and Edna H. Hong. Kierkegaard's Writings 21, 1-87. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1990.
- . Parables of Kierkegaard. Edited by Thomas C. Oden. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1978.
- . 1844. Purity of Heart is to Will One Thing. Translated by Douglas V. Steere. New York, NY: Harper and Row, 1956.
- Kikawada, Isaac M., and Arthur Quinn. 1985. Before Abraham Was: The Unity of Genesis 1-11. San Francisco, CA: Ignatius Press, 1989.
- Kimball, Edward L. E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, January 3, 2009.
- Kimball, Heber Chase. 1856. "Remarks at the funeral of President Jedediah M. Grant made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 4 December 1856." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 4, 135-38. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1861. "Unity; commandments of God, etc. (Discourse by Heber C. Kimball, made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, January 6, 1861)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 8, 327-34. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966. Also reported in Journal of Discourses, Vol. 9, 126-133.
- . 1861. "Submission to reproof, etc. (Remarks made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 17 March 1861)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 9, 40-43. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1868. "Forbearance to each other; necessity of reading the Bible and Book of Mormon; counsel to the young brethren (Remarks made in the Tabernacle, Bountiful, Sunday, 12 April 1868)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 12, 188-91. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- Kimball, Spencer W. "Be ye therefore perfect." (BYU Devotional address given on September 17, 1974). In BYU Speeches. <http://speeches.byu.edu/reader/reader.php?id=6057> (accessed September 3, 2007).
- . "Becoming the pure in heart." Ensign 8, May 1978, 79-81.
- . "The blessings and responsibilities of womanhood." Ensign 6, March 1976, 70-73.
- . "An eternal hope in Christ." Ensign 8, November 1978, 71-73.
- . "The false gods we worship." Ensign 6, June 1976, 3-6.
- . "... For they shall see God." Improvement Era 67, June 1964, 496-99.
- . 1976. "The importance of celestial marriage." Ensign 9, October 1979, 3-6.
- . The Miracle of Forgiveness. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1969.
- . "The mistletoe." In Faith Precedes the Miracle, 225-31. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1972.
- . "Our great potential." Ensign 7, May 1977, 49-51.
- . "Our own Liahona." Ensign 6, November 1976, 77-79.
- . "Revelation: The word of the Lord to His prophets." Ensign 7, May 1977, 76-78.
- . "The role of righteous women." Ensign 9, November 1979, 102-04.
- . The Teachings of Spencer W. Kimball. Edited by Edward L. Kimball. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1982.
- . "Temptation and a snare." In Faith Precedes the Miracle, 233-48. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1972.
- Kimball, Spencer W., N. Eldon Tanner, and Marion G. Romney. 1978. "Statement of the First Presidency: God's love for all mankind." Included in entirety in Palmer, Spencer J., ed. The Expanding Church. Salt Lake City, UT:

- Deseret Book, 1978, initial page. Excerpted in S. J. Palmer article "World Religions, Overview." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 4, 1589. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Kimball, Stanley B. 1981. Heber C. Kimball: Mormon Patriarch and Pioneer. Illini Books ed. Urbana, IL: University of Illinois Press, 1986.
- King, Arthur Henry. 1971. "An Account of My Conversion." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague, 27-53. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- . "Afterword." In Feasting Upon the Word, edited by Dennis Packard and Sandra Packard, 229-37. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1981.
- . "Atonement: The only wholeness." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague, 317-29. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- . 1971. "The Child is Father to the Man." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague, 101-19. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- . 1992. "Education in the home." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague, 229-48. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- . 1992. "God's healing wholeness." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague, 331-47. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- . 1992. "Joseph Smith as a Writer." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague, 285-93. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- . "Language, Humour, Character, and Persona in Shakespeare." In By Study and Also by Faith, edited by John M. Lundquist and Stephen D. Ricks. 2 vols. Vol. 2, 456-82. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990.
- . 1971. "Moral significance in Anglo-Saxon literature." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague, 163-79. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- . "Religion, art, and morality." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- . 1971. "Rhetoric." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague, 199-215. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- . "Style in Shakespeare." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague, 217-25. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- . 1971. "Total language." In Arm the Children: Faith's Response to a Violent World, edited by Daryl Hague, 183-90. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1998.
- King, Hannah T. "Reminiscence of Victor Hugo." Contributor 7, February 1886, 198.
- Kingsley-Smith, Jane. "The Tempest's forgotten exile." In Shakespeare and Religions, edited by Peter D. Holland. Shakespeare Survey: An Annual Survey of Shakespeare Studies and Production 54, ed. Peter D. Holland, 223-33. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2001.
- Kinnaman, David, and Gabe Lyons. Unchristian. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Books, 2007.
- Kirkham, Francis W. . 1942. A New Witness for Christ in America: The Book of Mormon. 2 vols. Vol. 1. 3rd Enlarged ed. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University, 1960.
- Kittel, Gerhard, and Gerhard Friedrich. Theological Dictionary of the New Testament. 10 vols. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1977.
- Klauck, Hans-Josef. The Religious Context of Early Christianity: A Guide to Greco-Roman Religions (Die religiöse Umwelt des Urchristentums). Translated by Brian McNeil. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 2003.
- Klein, Michael L., ed. The Fragment Targums of the Pentateuch According to Their Extant Sources. 2 vols. Rome, Italy: Pontifical Biblical Institute, 1970.
- , ed. Geniza Manuscripts of Palestinian Targum to the Pentateuch. 2 vols. Springfield, NJ: Behrman House, 1987.
- Klijn, A. F. J. ed. "2 (Syriac Apocalypse of) Baruch." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 1, 615-52. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Knibb, M. A. ed. "Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. 2 vols. Vol. 2, 143-76. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Knuth, Donald E. 3:16 — Bible Texts Illuminated. Madison, WI: A-R Editions, 1991.
- Koch, Klaus. "Wort und Einheit des Schöpfergottes in Memphis und Jerusalem: Zur Einzigartigkeit Israels." Zeitschrift für Theologie und Kirche 62 (1965): 251-52.
- Koenen, Ludwig, and Cornelia Eva Römer, eds. Der Kölner Mani-Kodex: Über das Werden seines Leibes (Edition und Übersetzung) Critical ed. Translated by Ludwig Koenen and Cornelia Römer. Sonderreihe der Abhandlungen Papyrologica Coloniensis 14. Opladen, Germany: Westdeutscher Verlag, 1988.

- Koester, Craig R. Hebrews: A New Translation with Introduction and Commentary. The Anchor Bible 36. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 2001.
- . Symbolism in the Fourth Gospel: Meaning, Mystery, Community. 2nd ed. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress, 2003.
- Koester, Helmut, and Thomas O. Lambdin ed. "The Gospel of Thomas (II, 2)." In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed, 124-38. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- . Introduction to the New Testament: History and Literature of Early Christianity. 2 vols. Vol. 2. 2nd ed. Berlin, Germany: Walter de Gruyter, 2000.
- . Introduction to the New Testament: History, Culture, and Religion of the Hellenistic Age. 2 vols. Vol. 1. 2nd ed. Berlin, Germany: Walter de Gruyter, 1995.
- Kohlenberger, John R., III, ed. The Interlinear NIV Hebrew-English Old Testament. Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan, 1993.
- Koltun-Fromm, Naomi. "Aphrahat and the rabbis on Noah's righteousness in light of the Jewish-Christian polemic." In The Book of Genesis in Jewish and Oriental Christian Interpretation, edited by Judith Frishman and Lucas Van Rompay. Traditio Exegetica Graeca, vol. 5, 57-71. Louvain, Belgium: Editions Peeters, 1997.
- Kourcikidze, C. and J.-P. Mahé, eds. La Caverne des Trésors, Version géorgienne. 2 vols. Corpus Scriptorum Christianorum Orientalium 526-527 (Scriptores Iberici 23-24). Louvain, Belgium: Peeters, 1993.
- Kraeling, Carl H., C. C. Torrey, C. B. Welles, and B. Geiger. The Synagogue. Edited by A. R. Bellinger, F. E. Brown, A. Perkins and C. B. Welles. The Excavations at Dura-Europos Conducted by Yale University and the French Academy of Inscriptions and Letters: Final Report VIII, Part I. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 1956.
- Kraft, Robert A. "The pseudepigrapha in Christianity." In Tracing the Threads: Studies in the Vitality of Jewish Pseudepigrapha, edited by John C. Reeves, 55-86. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1994.
- , ed. The Testament of Job According to the SV Text. Texts and Translations 5, Pseudepigrapha Series 4. Missoula, Montana: Society of Biblical Literature and Scholars' Press, 1974.
- Kramer, S. N. ed. "Dumuzi and Enkimdu: The Dispute between the Shepherd-God and the Farmer-God." In Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament, edited by James B. Pritchard, 41-42. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1972.
- Kraus, Hans-Joachim. Theology of the Psalms. Minneapolis, MN: Augsburg, 1986.
- Krauss, Lawrence M., and Richaard Dawkins. "Should science speak to faith?" Scientific American, July 2007, 88-91. <http://www.sciam.com/article.cfm?chanId=sa013&articleID=44A95E1D-E7F2-99DF-3E79D5E2E6DE809C> (accessed August 26, 2007).
- . 2007. "Should science speak to faith?" Extended version. In Scientific American Online. <http://www.sciam.com/article.cfm?chanId=sa013&articleID=44A95E1D-E7F2-99DF-3E79D5E2E6DE809C> (accessed July 27, 2007).
- Krauss, Lawrence M., and Robert J. Scherrer. "The end of cosmology?" Scientific American 298, March 2008, 46-53.
- Kren, Emil, and Daniel Marx. n.d. "The Ghent Altarpiece: The offering of Abel and Cain." In Web Gallery of Art. http://www.wga.hu/frames-e.html?/html/e/eyck_van/jan/09ghent/1open1/u2cain.html (accessed August 26, 2006).
- Kriwaczek, Paul. In Search of Zarathustra: The First Prophet and the Ideas That Changed the World. New York City, NY: Alfred A. Knopf, 2002.
- Kugel, James L. The Bible As It Was. Cambridge, MA: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, 1997.
- . The God of Old: Inside the Lost World of the Bible. New York City, NY: The Free Press, 2003.
- . How to Read the Bible: A Guide to Scripture, Then and Now. New York City, NY: Free Press, 2007.
- . "Some instances of biblical interpretation in the hymns and wisdom writings of Qumran." In Studies in Ancient Midrash, edited by James L. Kugel, 155-69. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2001.
- . Traditions of the Bible. Revised ed. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1998.
- Kulik, A. Retroverting Slavonic Pseudepigrapha: Toward the Original of the Apocalypse of Abraham. Text-Critical Studies 3, ed. J.R. Adair, Jr. Atlanta, GA: Society of Biblical Literature, 2004.
- Küng, Hans. 2005. The Beginning of All Things: Science and Religion. Translated by John Bowden. Grand Rapids, MI: William R. Eerdmans, 2007.
- LaCocque, André. The Trial of Innocence: Adam, Eve, and the Yahwist. Eugene, OR: Cascade Books, 2006.
- "Lactantius." In Wikipedia. <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Lactantius> (accessed April 17, 2009).
- Lactantius. ca. 303-311. "The Divine Institutes (Divinarum Institutionum)." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 7, 9-223. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1886. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Lair, John. Songs Lincoln Loved, with an Introduction by William H. Townsend. New York City, NY and Boston, MA: Duell, Sloan and Pearce; Little, Brown and Company, 1954.

- Lake, Peter. "Religious Identities in Shakespeare's England." In A Companion to Shakespeare, edited by David Scott Kastan, 57-84. Oxford, England: Blackwell Publishers, 1999.
- Lane, Jennifer. "The redemption of Abraham." In Astronomy, Papyrus, and Covenant, 167-74. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), Brigham Young University, 2005.
- Lane, William L. Hebrews 9-13. Word Biblical Commentary 47B, eds. David A. Hubbard, Glenn Barker, W. and John D. W. Watts. Nashville, TN: Thomas Nelson, 1991.
- Larsen, David J. E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, December 6, 2008.
- . "Two high priesthoods? Evidence for non-Levitical priesthood in ancient Israel," 2009, in press.
- Larsen, David J. and Jeffrey M. Bradshaw. The vision of Moses as a heavenly ascent: New light from the Apocalypse of Abraham. Article in preparation.
- Larson, Stan. "The King Follett Discourse: A newly amalgamated text." BYU Studies 18, no. 2 (Winter 1978): 193-208.
- Lasch, Christopher. 1995. The Revolt of the Elites and the Betrayal of Democracy. New York City, NY: W. W. Norton, 1996.
- Latter Day Saints' Messenger and Advocate*. Kirtland, OH, 1834-1837. Reprint, 3 vols.
- Law, William. 1728. "A Serious Call to a Devout and Holy Life." In William Law: 'A Serious Call to a Devout and Holy Life' and 'The Spirit of Love', edited by Paul G. Stanwood. The Classics of Western Spirituality: A Library of the Great Spiritual Masters, ed. Richard J. Payne, 41-352. New York City, NY: Paulist Press, 1978.
- Layton, Bentley, ed. The Gnostic Scriptures: A New Translation with Annotations and Introductions. The Anchor Bible Reference Library, ed. David Noel Freedman. New York City, NY: Doubleday, 1987.
- , ed. "The Secret Book According to John." In The Gnostic Scriptures: A New Translation with Annotations and Introductions, edited by Bentley Layton, 23-51. New York City, NY: Doubleday, 1987.
- Lee, Harold B. "Keep your lamp lighted." Improvement Era 73, December 1970, 103-05.
- . 1960. "The place of the Church, Address to Seminary and Institute Faculty, Brigham Young University, June 24, 1960, pp. 12-13 (Excerpt)." In Determining Doctrine: A Reference Guide for Evaluating Doctrinal Truth, edited by Dennis B. Horne, 193. Roy, UT: Eborn Books, 2005.
- . "Strengthen the stakes of Zion." Ensign 3, July 1973, 2-6.
- . The Teachings of Harold B. Lee. Edited by Clyde J. Williams. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1996.
- . Teachings of the Presidents of the Church: Harold B. Lee. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 2000.
- . "To know God." Improvement Era 72, 1969, 103-05.
- . Ye Are the Light of the World: Selected Sermons and Writings of President Harold B. Lee. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1974.
- Leemhuis, Fred. "From palm leaves to the Internet." In The Cambridge Companion to the Qur'an, edited by Jane Dammen McAuliffe, 145-61. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2006.
- Leeming, David. The Oxford Companion to World Mythology. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2005.
- Legg, Phillip R. Oliver Cowdery: The Elusive Second Elder of the Restoration. Independence, MO: Herald House, 1989.
- Lemon, Steevun. "J. Kirk Richards: LDS painter has fresh vision for inspirational art." Meridian Magazine (June 13 2005). <http://www.meridianmagazine.com/arts/050613richards.html>.
- Leonard, Glen M. Nauvoo: A Place of Peace, A People of Promise. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2002.
- Leone, Mark P. The Roots of Modern Mormonism. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1979.
- Leonhard, Clemens. "Observations on the date of the Syriac Cave of Treasures." In The World of the Aramaeans III: Studies in Honor of Paul-Eugène Dion, edited by P. M. Michèle Daviau, John William Wevers and Michael Weigl. Journal for the Study of the Old Testament Supplement Series 326, eds. David J. A. Clines and Philip R. Davies, 255-93. Sheffield, England: Sheffield Academic Press, 2001.
- "Letter to Professor Miroslav Štastný of 24 January 1984." In Zdenek Kopal. <http://www.litomysl.cz/zdenekkopal/?lang=en&menu=g&img=10> (accessed October 28, 2007).
- Lettieri, Gaetano. "The ambiguity of Eden and the Enigma of Adam." In The Earthly Paradise: The Garden of Eden from Antiquity to Modernity, edited by F. Regina Psaki and Charles Hindley. International Studies in Formative Christianity and Judaism, 23-54. Binghamton, NY: Academic Studies in the History of Judaism, Global Publications, State University of New York at Binghamton, 2002.
- Levering, Miriam, ed. Rethinking Scripture: Essays from a Comparative Perspective. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1989.
- Levine, Baruch A. In the Presence of the Lord. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1974.
- Levine, Lee I. 1998. The Ancient Synagogue: The First Thousand Years. 2nd ed. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 2005.

- . Judaism and Hellenism in Antiquity: Conflict or Confluence? The Samuel and Althea Stroum Lectures in Jewish Studies. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 1999.
- Levy, B. Barry. Fixing God's Torah: The Accuracy of the Hebrew Bible Text in Jewish Law. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2001.
- Lewis, Bernard. 2003. The Crisis of Islam: Holy War and Unholy Terror. London, England: Phoenix, Orion Books, 2004.
- . 1993. Islam in History: Ideas, People, and Events in the Middle East. 2nd ed. Chicago, IL: Open Court, 2002.
- Lewis, C. S. 1946. "Appendix B: On special providences." In Miracles, 226-34. New York City, NY: Touchstone, Simon and Schuster, 1996.
- . 1939. "Christianity and literature." In C. S. Lewis: Essay Collection and Other Short Pieces, edited by Lesley Walmsley, 411-20. London, England: HarperCollins, 2000.
- . The Collected Letters of C. S. Lewis. Vol. 3: Narnia, Cambridge, and Joy 1950-1963. Edited by Walter Hooper. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 2007.
- . 1955. "De Descriptione Temporum." In Selected Literary Essays, edited by Walter Hooper, 1-14. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 1969.
- . The Discarded Image. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 1964.
- . 1943. "Dogma and the universe (Originally: Dogma and science)." In C. S. Lewis: Essay Collection and Other Short Pieces, edited by Lesley Walmsley, 118-26. London, England: HarperCollins, 2000.
- . The Four Loves. New York City, NY: Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 1960.
- . 1946. The Great Divorce. New York City, NY: Touchstone, 1996.
- . 1939. "Learning in war-time." In C. S. Lewis: Essay Collection and Other Short Pieces, edited by Lesley Walmsley, 47-63. London, England: HarperCollins, 2000.
- . 1964. Letters to Malcolm, Chiefly on Prayer: Reflections on the Intimate Dialogue Between Man and God. San Diego, CA: Harcourt, 1991.
- . 1946. "Man or rabbit?" In C. S. Lewis: Essay Collection and Other Short Pieces, edited by Lesley Walmsley, 352-56. London, England: HarperCollins, 2000.
- . 1942-1944. Mere Christianity. New York City, NY: Touchstone, 1996.
- . 1946. Miracles. New York City, NY: Touchstone, Simon and Schuster, 1996.
- . 1944. Perelandra. New York City, NY: Scribner, 2003.
- . 1942. A Preface to Paradise Lost. London, England: Oxford University Press, 1961.
- . 1962. The Problem of Pain. New York City, NY: Touchstone, 1996.
- . 1958. Reflections on the Psalms. San Diego, CA: Harcourt, A Harvest Book, 1964.
- . 1946. "Religion without dogma?" In C. S. Lewis: Essay Collection and Other Short Pieces, edited by Lesley Walmsley, 163-78. London, England: HarperCollins, 2000.
- . 1941. The Screwtape Letters. New York, NY: Touchstone, 1996.
- . 1943. "Three kinds of men." In C. S. Lewis: Essay Collection and Other Short Pieces, edited by Lesley Walmsley, 315-16. London, England: HarperCollins, 2000.
- . 1956. Till We Have Faces: A Myth Retold. San Diego, CA: Harcourt, 1984.
- . 1941. "The weight of glory." In C. S. Lewis: Essay Collection and Other Short Pieces, edited by Lesley Walmsley, 96-106. London, England: HarperCollins, 2000.
- Lewis, Lionel Smithett. 1922. St. Joseph of Arimathea at Glastonbury or The Apostolic Church of Britain. 7th ed. Cambridge, England: James Clarke, 1983.
- Lewis, Mark Edward. The Construction of Space in Early China. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 2006.
- . The Early Chinese Empires: Qin and Han. History of Imperial China 1, ed. Timothy Brook. Cambridge, MA: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, 2007.
- . The Flood Myths of Early China. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 2006.
- . Writing and Authority in Early China. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1999.
- Lichtheim, Miriam, ed. 1973-1980. Ancient Egyptian Literature: A Book of Readings. 3 vols. Berkeley, CA: The University of California Press, 2006.
- . Late Egyptian Wisdom Literature in the International Context: A Study of Demotic Instructions. Göttingen, Germany: Vandenhoeck and Ruprecht, 1983.
- , ed. 1973. "The Memphite Theology." In Ancient Egyptian Literature: A Book of Readings, edited by Miriam Lichtheim. 3 vols. Vol. 1, 51-57. Berkeley, CA: The University of California Press, 2006.

- Lidzbarski, Mark, ed. Das Johannesbuch der Mandäer. 2 vols. Giessen, Germany: Alfred Töpelmann, 1905, 1915.
- , ed. Ginza: Der Schatz oder das Grosse Buch der Mandäer. Quellen der Religionsgeschichte, der Reihenfolge des Erscheinens 13:4. Göttingen and Leipzig, Germany: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, J. C. Hinrichs'sche, 1925.
- . Mandäische Liturgien. Berlin, Germany: Weidmannsche Buchhandlung, 1920.
- Lieber, David L., ed. Etz Hayim: Torah and Commentary. New York City, NY: The Rabbinical Assembly of the United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism, produced by The Jewish Publication Society, 2001.
- Lieber, Moshe. The Pirkei Avos Treasury: Ethics of the Fathers. The Sages' Guide to Living, with an Anthologized Commentary and Anecdotes. Edited by Nosson Scherman. Artscroll Mesorah Series. Brooklyn, NY: Mesorah Publications, 1995.
- Lieu, Samuel N. C., ed. Dictionary of Manichaean Texts. Vol. 1: Texts from the Roman Empire (Texts in Syriac, Greek, Coptic and Latin). Corpus Fontium Manichaeorum, Series Subsidia 2, 1999.
- . "Manichaeism." In The Oxford Handbook of Early Christian Studies, edited by Susan Ashbrook Harvey and David G. Hunter. Oxford Handbooks in Religion and Theology, 221-36. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2008.
- . Manichaeism in Central Asia and China. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 45. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1998.
- . "Manichaeism in China." In Order of Nazorean Essenes. <http://essenes.net/new/maniinchina.html> (accessed December 29, 2007).
- Lindquist, Danille Christensen. "'Old devils' or 'joint-heirs': Pre-existent intelligences in Christian theodicy and Mormon doctrine." In Archive of Restoration Culture: Summer Fellows' Papers 1997-1999, edited by Richard Lyman Bushman, 119-31. Provo, UT: Joseph Fielding Smith Institute for Latter-day Saint History, 2000.
- Lipscomb, W. Lowndes, ed. The Armenian Apocryphal Literature. University of Pennsylvania Armenian Texts and Studies 8, ed. Michael E. Stone. Philadelphia, PA: University of Pennsylvania, 1990.
- , ed. "Concerning the Good Tidings of Seth." In The Armenian Apocryphal Literature, edited by W. Lowndes Lipscomb. University of Pennsylvania Armenian Texts and Studies 8, ed. Michael E. Stone, 172-205, 55-60, 76-82. Philadelphia, PA: University of Pennsylvania, 1990.
- , ed. "History of Abel and Cain, the sons of Adam." In The Armenian Apocryphal Literature, edited by W. Lowndes Lipscomb. University of Pennsylvania Armenian Texts and Studies 8, ed. Michael E. Stone, 142-71, 249-54, 70-75. Philadelphia, PA: University of Pennsylvania, 1990.
- , ed. "History of the Creation and transgression of Adam." In The Armenian Apocryphal Literature, edited by W. Lowndes Lipscomb. University of Pennsylvania Armenian Texts and Studies 8, ed. Michael E. Stone, 108-27, 241-45, 61-66. Philadelphia, PA: University of Pennsylvania, 1990.
- , ed. "History of the expulsion of Adam from the Garden." In The Armenian Apocryphal Literature, edited by W. Lowndes Lipscomb. University of Pennsylvania Armenian Texts and Studies 8, ed. Michael E. Stone, 128-41, 267-69. Philadelphia, PA: University of Pennsylvania, 1990.
- , ed. "History of the repentance of Adam and Eve." In The Armenian Apocryphal Literature, edited by W. Lowndes Lipscomb. University of Pennsylvania Armenian Texts and Studies 8, ed. Michael E. Stone, 210-33. Philadelphia, PA: University of Pennsylvania, 1990.
- Litchfield, W. Reid. "The search for the physical cause of Jesus Christ's death." BYU Studies 37, no. 4 (1997-1998): 93-109.
- Lobdell, William. Losing My Religion: How I Lost My Faith Reporting on Religion in America—and Found Unexpected Peace. New York City, NY: HarperCollins, 2009.
- Loewe, Michael. Ways to Paradise: The Chinese Quest for Immortality. London, England: George Allen & Unwin, 1979.
- Lomax, John A., Alan Lomax, and George Lyman Kittredge, eds. 1934. American Ballads and Folk Songs. New York City, NY: Macmillan Publishing Company, 1972.
- L'Orange, H. P. Studies on the Iconography of Cosmic Kingship in the Ancient World. New Rochelle, NY: Caratzas Brothers and Institutttet for Sammenlignende Kulturforskning, 1982.
- Lossky, Vladimir. 1974. In the Image and Likeness of God. Crestwood, NY: Saint Vladimir's Seminary Press, 2001.
- . 1944. The Mystical Theology of the Eastern Church. Crestwood, NY: St. Vladimir's Seminary Press, 1976.
- Louth, Andrew, and Marco Conti, eds. Genesis 1-11. Ancient Christian Commentary on Scripture, Old Testament 1, ed. Thomas C. Oden. Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 2001.
- Lovejoy, Arthur O. 1936. The Great Chain of Being: A Study of the History of an Idea. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1970.
- Lowy, Simeon. The Principles of Samaritan Bible Exegesis. Studia Post-Biblica 28, ed. J. C. H. Lebram. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1977.

- Ludlow, Daniel H., ed. Encyclopedia of Mormonism. 4 vols. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Ludlow, Jared W. "Abraham's visions of the heavens." In Astronomy, Papyrus, and Covenant, edited by John Gee and Brian M. Hauglid. Studies in the Book of Abraham 3, 57-73. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), Brigham Young University, 2005. <http://farms.byu.edu/publications/books/?bookid=40&chapid=164>. (accessed October 10, 2008).
- Ludlow, Victor L. Principles and Practices of the Restored Gospel. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- Lundquist, Jason H. "Keywords: Joseph Smith, language change, and theological innovation, 1829-44." Dialogue: A Journal of Mormon Thought 38, no. 2 (Summer 2005): 1-38.
- Lundquist, John M. "Fundamentals of temple ideology from Eastern traditions." In Reason, Revelation, and Faith: Essays in Honor of Truman G. Madsen, edited by Donald W. Parry, Daniel C. Peterson and Stephen D. Ricks, 651-701. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2002.
- . "Temple, covenant, and law in the ancient Near East and in the Old Testament." In Israel's Apostasy and Restoration: Essays in Honor of Roland K. Harrison, edited by Avraham Gileadi, 293-305. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Book House, 1988.
- . The Temple: Meeting Place of Heaven and Earth. London, England: Thames and Hudson, 1993.
- . The Temple of Jerusalem: Past, Present, and Future. Westport, CT: Praeger, 2008.
- . 1983. "What is a temple? A preliminary typology." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 83-117. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . "What is reality?" In By Study and Also by Faith: Essays in Honor of Hugh W. Nibley, edited by John M. Lundquist and Stephen D. Ricks. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 428-38. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990.
- Lundwall, N. B. 1968. Temples of the Most High. Revised and Enlarged ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1978.
- Lunn, John E., and Ursula Vaughan Williams. Ralph Vaughan Williams: A Pictorial Biography. London, England: Oxford University Press, 1971.
- Luo, Michael. "Crucial test for Romney in speech on his religion." New York City, NY: New York Times, December 6, 2007. <http://www.nytimes.com/2007/12/06/us/politics/06romney.html?ref=politics> (accessed December 6, 2007).
- Lupieri, Edmondo. 1993. The Mandaeans: The Last Gnostics. Italian Texts and Studies on Religion and Society, ed. Edmondo Lupieri. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 2002.
- Luz, Frédéric. Orthodoxie. Puiseaux, France: Éditions Pardès, 2001.
- Lyon, Michael P. "Set design for the final scene in The Magic Flute." BYU Studies 43, no. 3 (2004): 270-72.
- Lyon, Michael P. E-mail message to William J. Hamblin, September 8, 2008.
- Macaulay, David. Great Moments in Architecture. Boston, MA: Houghton Mifflin, 1978.
- MacDonald, Joan B. The Holiness of Everyday Life. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1995.
- Mace, Wandle. "Autobiography." Typescript. Provo, UT: Perry Special Collections, Harold B. Lee Library, Brigham Young University, n.d.
- Macho, A. Diez, ed. Neophyti 1: Targum Palestinense Ms de la Biblioteca Vaticana. 5 vols. Madrid, Spain: Consejo Superior de Investigaciones Científicas, 1968-1978.
- Mackay, Thomas W. "The resurrected Lord and his apostles (John 21)." In The Gospels, edited by Kent P. Jackson and Robert L. Millet. Studies in Scripture 5, 461-70. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- MacLagan, David. 1977. Creation Myths: Man's Introduction to the World. London, England: Thames & Hudson, 1997.
- MacRae, George W., ed. "Apocalypse of Adam." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 1, 707-19. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- . "The temple as a house of revelation in the Nag Hammadi texts." In The Temple in Antiquity, edited by Truman G. Madsen, 175-90. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1984.
- MacRae, George W., William R. Murdock, and Douglas M. Parrott, ed. "The Apocalypse of Paul (V, 2)." In The Nag Hammadi Library, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed, 256-59. San Francisco, CA: Harper-SanFrancisco, 1990.
- MacRae, George W., and Douglas M. Parrott, ed. "The Apocalypse of Adam (V, 5)." In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed, 277-86. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- Madsen, Truman G. 2004. "Blessings of the temple." In The Temple: Where Heaven Meets Earth, 38-43. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . "Chosenness: Implications and extensions in Mormonism and Judaism." In Covenant and Chosenness in Judaism and Mormonism, edited by Raphael Jospe, Truman G. Madsen and Seth Ward, 131-46. Madison, NJ:

- Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, 2001.
- . 1976. “Eternal Man.” In Five Classics by Truman G. Madsen, 1-68. Salt Lake City, UT: Eagle Gate, 2001.
- . 2004. Foundations of Temple Worship (BYU-Idaho Devotional, 26 October 2004). In Gazelman Foundation. www.trumanmadsen.com/media/FoundationsofTempleWorship.pdf (accessed November 23, 2008).
- . 1994. “The Gospel and the Sabbath.” In Five Classics by Truman G. Madsen, 330-46. Salt Lake City, UT: Eagle Gate, 2001.
- . 1978. “House of glory.” In Five Classics by Truman G. Madsen, 273-85. Salt Lake City, UT: Eagle Gate, 2001. Reprint, Madsen, Truman G. 1978. “House of glory.” In The Temple: Where Heaven Meets Earth, 1-14. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . 1994. “In a place called Gethsemane.” In Five Classics by Truman G. Madsen, 299-306. Salt Lake City, UT: Eagle Gate, 2001.
- . “Introductory essay.” In Reflections on Mormonism: Judeo-Christian Parallels, Papers Delivered at the Religious Studies Center Symposium, Brigham Young University, March 10-11, 1978, edited by Truman G. Madsen. Religious Studies Monograph Series 4, xi-xviii. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1978.
- . Joseph Smith the Prophet. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1989.
- . 2000. “‘The joy of the Lord is your strength’ (Nehemiah 8:10)” (BYU Devotional, 21 November 2000). In BYU Speeches. <http://speeches.byu.edu/reader/reader.php?id=1004> (accessed May 29, 2009).
- . “The Latter-day Saint view of human nature.” In On Human Nature: The Jerusalem Center Symposium, edited by Truman G. Madsen, David Noel Freedman and Pam Fox Kuhlken, 95-107. Ann Arbor, MI: Pryor Pettengill Publishers, 2004.
- . 1994. “Man Illumined.” In Five Classics by Truman G. Madsen, 307-19. Salt Lake City, UT: Eagle Gate, 2001.
- . “Mormonism and philosophy.” Inaugural lecture, CMSSA Lecture Series, February 21, 2008. Claremont, CA: The Claremont Mormon Studies Student Association, Claremont Graduate University School of Religion, excerpts transcribed from audio recording available at <http://rsc.cgu.edu/cmssa/media/> (accessed July 15, 2008).
- . “Nine reasons for learning to learn.” In A Twenty-Something's Guide to Spirituality: Questions You Hesitate to Ask, Answers You Rarely Hear, edited by Jacob Werrett and David Read, 95-118. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2007.
- . “On how we know (Speech delivered 20 September 1994).” In Brigham Young University 1994-1995 Devotional and Fireside Speeches, 21-26. Provo, UT: BYU Publications and Graphics, 1995. Reprint, “Reverberations of truth” in Charting a New Millennium: The Latter-day Saints in the Coming Century, edited by M. Proctor and S. Proctor, 456-465. Salt Lake City, UT: Aspen Books, 1998.
- . The Presidents of the Church: Insights into their Lives and Teachings. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2004.
- . 1983. “Purposes of the temple.” In The Temple: Where Heaven Meets Earth, 90-99. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . “Putting on the names: A Jewish-Christian legacy.” In By Study and Also by Faith: Essays in Honor of Hugh W. Nibley, edited by John M. Lundquist and Stephen D. Ricks. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 458-81. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990. Reprint, Madsen, Truman G. 1990. “Putting on the names: A Jewish-Christian legacy.” In The Temple: Where Heaven Meets Earth, 138-156. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- , ed. Reflections on Mormonism: Judeo-Christian Parallels, Papers Delivered at the Religious Studies Center Symposium, Brigham Young University, March 10-11, 1978. Religious Studies Monograph Series 4. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1978.
- . The Sacrament: Feasting at the Lord's Table. Orem, UT: Amalphi Publishing, 2008.
- . “The suffering servant.” In The Redeemer: Reflections on the Life and Teachings of Jesus the Christ, 223-48. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2000.
- . “The temple and the atonement.” In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 63-79. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . 1978. “Twenty questions.” In Five Classics by Truman G. Madsen, 148-61. Salt Lake City, UT: Eagle Gate, 2001.
- Madsen, Truman G., David Noel Freedman, and Pam Fox Kuhlken, eds. On Human Nature: The Jerusalem Center Symposium. Ann Arbor, MI: Pryor Pettengill Publishers, 2004.
- Madsen, Truman G., and Ann N. Madsen. 1998. “House of glory, house of light, house of love.” In The Temple: Where Heaven Meets Earth, 44-76. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- Maffly-Kipp, Laurie F. “Who's that on the $50 bill? Placing Joseph Smith in America's story.” Books and Culture: A Christian Review 12, no. 1 (January/February 2006). <http://www.ctlibrary.com/bc/2006/janfeb/7.11.html> (accessed September 3, 2007).

- Maguire, Henry. "Paradise withdrawn." In Byzantine Garden Culture, edited by Antony Littlewood, Henry Maguire and Joachim Wolschke-Bulmahn, 23-35. Washington, D. C.: Dumbarton Oaks Research Library and Collection, 2002. <http://www.doaks.org/ByzGarden/ByzGarch3.pdf> (accessed September 4, 2007).
- Maher, Michael, ed. Targum Pseudo-Jonathan, Genesis. Vol. 1b. Aramaic Bible. Collegeville, MN: Liturgical Press, 1992.
- Mahoney, Michael J. Scientist as Subject: The Psychological Imperative. Cambridge, MA: Ballinger Publishing Company, 1976.
- Maimonides, Moses. 1180. The Code of Maimonides (Mishneh Torah). To date 14 vols. Yale Judaica Series. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 1949-.
- . d. 1204. The Guide of the Perplexed. 2 vols. Translated by Shlomo Pines. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press, 1963.
- . 1180. Mishneh Torah. Edited by Eliyahu Touger. Brooklyn, NY: Moznaim Publishing, 1989-.
- Major, John S. Heaven and Earth in Early Han Thought: Chapters Three, Four, and Five of the Huainanzi. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1993.
- Makarewicz, Mary Raynelda. The Patristic Influence on Chaucer. Washington, DC: Catholic University of America Press, 1953.
- Malan, Solomon Caesar, ed. The Book of Adam and Eve: Also Called The Conflict of Adam and Eve with Satan: A Book of the Early Eastern Church. Translated from the Ethiopic, with Notes from the Kufale, Talmud, Midrashim, and Other Eastern Works. London, England: Williams and Norgate, 1882. Reprint, San Diego, CA: The Book Tree, 2005.
- "Mamre." In Wikipedia. <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mamre> (accessed June 10, 2008).
- "Mandaicism." In Wikipedia. <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mandaicism> (accessed December 31, 2007).
- "Manuscript Junius 11." In Early Manuscripts at Oxford University. <http://image.ox.ac.uk/show?collection=bodleian&manuscript=msjunius11> (accessed May 10, 2009).
- Mariella, Sister. "The head, the foot and the rib of Adam." Notes and Queries 171 (August 15, 1936): 119.
- . "The Parson's Tale and the Marriage Group." Modern Language Notes 53, no. 4 (April 1938): 251-56.
- Marmorstein, A. 1920-1937. The Doctrine of Merits in Old Rabbinical Literature and The Old Rabbinic Doctrine of God (1. The Names and Attributes of God, 2. Essays in Anthropomorphism). 3-in-1 vol. New York City, NY: KTAV Publishing House, 1968.
- Marquardt, H. Michael, ed. The Joseph Smith Revelations: Text and Commentary. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 1999.
- Marshall, Evelyn T. "Garments." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 2, 534-35. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Martin, Richard C., ed. Encyclopedia of Islam and the Muslim World. 2 vols. New York, City, NY: Macmillan Reference USA, Gale Group, Thomson Learning, 2004.
- Martinez, Florentino Garcia, ed. "11QMelchizedek (11Q13 [11QMelch])." In The Dead Sea Scrolls Translated: The Qumran Texts in English, edited by Florentino Garcia Martinez. 2nd ed. Translated by Wilfred G. E. Watson, 139-40. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1996.
- , ed. The Dead Sea Scrolls Translated: The Qumran Texts in English 2nd ed. Translated by Wilfred G. E. Watson. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1996.
- , ed. "Genesis Apocryphon (1QapGen ar)." In The Dead Sea Scrolls Translated: The Qumran Texts in English, edited by Florentino Garcia Martinez. 2nd ed. Translated by Wilfred G. E. Watson, 230-37. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1996.
- , ed. "The Hymns (1QHymns-a (1QHodaytoth-a [1QH-a])." In The Dead Sea Scrolls Translated: The Qumran Texts in English, edited by Florentino Garcia Martinez. 2nd ed. Translated by Wilfred G. E. Watson, 317-70. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1996.
- , ed. "Pseudo-Ezekiel (4QPseudo-Ezekiel-a (4Q385 [4QpsEz-a])." In The Dead Sea Scrolls Translated: The Qumran Texts in English, edited by Florentino Garcia Martinez. 2nd ed. Translated by Wilfred G. E. Watson, 286. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1996.
- Martinez, Florentino Garcia, and Eibert J. C. Tigchelaar, eds. The Dead Sea Scrolls Study Edition. 2 vols. Leiden, Netherlands: Brill, 1997-1998.
- Martins, Marcus H. Blacks and the Mormon Priesthood. Setting the Record Straight. Orem, UT: Millennial Press, 2007.
- . "False images of Christ." A devotional address presented at Brigham Young University-Hawaii, May 24, 2001. <http://w3.byuh.edu/academics/religion/martinsm/Papers/FalseImages-talk.htm> (accessed September 4, 2007).
- Marty, Martin E. "Foreword." In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, vii-x. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.

- Marx, Steven. Shakespeare and the Bible. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2000.
- Masani, Rustom. 1938. Zoroastrianism: The Religion of the Good Life. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1969.
- Matheme, Bobby. 1999. "Book review: Wind, Sand, and Stars." In A Reader's Journal. <http://www.doyletics.com/arj/wsasrvw.htm> (accessed September 4, 2007).
- Mathews, Edward G., Jr. "The Armenian commentary on Genesis attributed to Ephrem the Syrian." In The Book of Genesis in Jewish and Oriental Christian Interpretation: A Collection of Essays, edited by Judith Frishman and Lucas Van Rompay. Traditio Exegetica Graeca 5, 143-61. Louvain, Belgium: Editions Peeters, 1997.
- Mathews, Kenneth A., ed. The New American Commentary: Genesis 1-11:26. Nashville, TN: Broadman and Holman Publishers, 1996.
- Matt, Daniel C., ed. The Zohar, Pritzker Edition. Vol. 1. Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press, 2004.
- , ed. The Zohar, Pritzker Edition. Vol. 2. Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press, 2004.
- , ed. The Zohar, Pritzker Edition. Vol. 3. Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press, 2006.
- , ed. The Zohar, Pritzker Edition. Vol. 4. Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press, 2007.
- Matthews, Robert J. "Adam-on-di-Ahman." BYU Studies 13, no. 1 (Autumn 1972): 27-35.
- . "Fall of Adam." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 2, 485-86. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- . "The Fall of man." In The Man Adam, edited by Joseph Fielding McConkie and Robert L. Millet, 37-64. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1990.
- . "Moses: Prince of Egypt, Prophet of God." In A Bible! A Bible!, edited by Robert J. Matthews, 54-68. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1990.
- . "A Plainer Translation": Joseph Smith's Translation of the Bible—A History and Commentary. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1975.
- . "The probationary nature of mortality." In Alma: "The Testimony of the Word." Papers from the Sixth Annual Book of Mormon Symposium, 1991, edited by Monte S. Nyman and Charles D. Tate, Jr. Book of Mormon Symposia 6, 47-60. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1992. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Greg Kofford Books, 2008.
- . "The role of the Joseph Smith Translation of the Bible in the restoration of doctrine." In The Disciple as Witness: Essays on Latter-day Saint History and Doctrine in Honor of Richard Lloyd Anderson, edited by Stephen D. Ricks, Donald W. Parry and Andrew H. Hedges, 327-53. Provo, UT: The Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies at Brigham Young University, 2000.
- . "What is the Book of Moses?" In The Pearl of Great Price, edited by Robert L. Millet and Kent P. Jackson. Studies in Scripture 2, 25-41. Salt Lake City, UT: Randall Book Co., 1985.
- Maududi, Sayyid Abul A'la. Towards Understanding the Qur'an. Translated by Zafer Ishaq Ansari. Markfield, England: The Islamic Foundation, 1988-.
- Mauss, Armand L. "From near-nation to new world religion?" In Revisiting Thomas F. O'Dea's The Mormons: Contemporary Perspectives, edited by Cardell J. Jacobson, John P. Hoffmann and Tim. B. Heaton, 289-327. Salt Lake City, UT: The University of Utah Press, 2008.
- Maxwell, Neal A. All These Things Shall Give Thee Experience. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1979.
- . "Behold, the enemy is combined." Ensign 23, May 1993, 76-79.
- . But for a Small Moment. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1986.
- . "Deny yourselves of all ungodliness." Ensign 25, May 1995, 66-68.
- . Deposition of a Disciple. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1976.
- . "The disciple-scholar." In On Becoming a Disciple-Scholar, edited by Henry B. Eyring, Jr., 1-22. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1995.
- . "God will yet reveal." Ensign 16, November 1986, 52-54, 59.
- . 1992. "The inexhaustible gospel (BYU Devotional, August 18, 1992)." In The Inexhaustible Gospel: A Retrospective of Twenty-One Firesides and Devotionals at Brigham Young University 1974-2004, 211-25. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University, 2004.
- . 1976. "Insights from my life (BYU Devotional, October 26, 1976)." In The Inexhaustible Gospel: A Retrospective of Twenty-One Firesides and Devotionals at Brigham Young University 1974-2004, 39-52. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University, 2004.
- . 2000. "Jesus, the perfect mentor." Ensign 31, February 2001, 8-17.
- . 1982. "Meekly drenched in destiny (BYU Address, September 5, 1982)." In The Inexhaustible Gospel: A Retrospective of Twenty-One Firesides and Devotionals at Brigham Young University 1974-2004, 123-36. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University, 2004.

- . The Neal A. Maxwell Quote Book. Edited by Cory H. Maxwell. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1997.
- . Notwithstanding my Weakness. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1981.
- . “O Divine Redeemer.” Ensign 11, November 1981, 8-10.
- . One More Strain of Praise. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1999.
- . “Our Creator’s Cosmos.” Presented at the Church Educational System Conference on the Doctrine and Covenants and Church History, Brigham Young University, Provo, UT, August 13, 2002, 2002, 1-8.
- . “The seventh commandment: A shield.” Ensign 31, November 2001, 78-80.
- . “Some thoughts on the gospel and the behavioral sciences.” BYU Studies 16, no. 4 (1976): 589-602.
- . Things as They Really Are. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1978.
- . A Time to Choose. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1972.
- . We Will Prove Them Herewith. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1982.
- . Wherefore, Ye Must Press Forward. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1977.
- . A Wonderful Flood of Light. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1990.
- May, William F. “Manichaeism in American politics.” Christianity and Crisis (May 2, 1966). <http://www.religion-online.org/showarticle.asp?title=387> (accessed September 4, 2007).
- McAuliffe, Jane Dammen, ed. The Cambridge Companion to the Qurʾān. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2006.
- . “Ibn Taymiya: Treatise on the principles of tafsir.” In Windows on the House of Islam: Muslim Sources on Spirituality and Religious Life, edited by J. Renard, 35-43. Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1998.
- . “Introduction.” In The Cambridge Companion to the Qurʾān, edited by Jane Dammen McAuliffe, 1-20. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2006.
- . “The tasks and traditions of interpretation.” In The Cambridge Companion to the Qurʾān, edited by Jane Dammen McAuliffe, 181-209. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2006.
- McBride, Matthew. A House for the Most High: The Story of the Original Nauvoo Temple. Salt Lake City, UT: Greg Kofford Books, 2007.
- McClellan, Richard D. “Not your average French communist Mormon: A short history of Louis Bertrand.” Mormon Historical Studies 1, no. 2 (Fall 2000): 3-24.
- McCollum, Adele Brannon. “The First Vision: Re-visioning historical experience.” In Literature of Belief, edited by Neal E. Lambert, 177-95. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 1981.
- McConkie, Bruce R. “Christ and the creation.” Ensign 12, June 1982, 8-15.
- . “Come: Hear the voice of the Lord.” Ensign 15, December 1985, 54-59.
- . Doctrinal New Testament Commentary. 3 vols. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1973.
- . Doctrines of the Restoration: Sermons and Writings of Bruce R. McConkie. Edited by Mark L. McConkie. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1989.
- . The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man. The Messiah Series 6. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1982.
- . Mormon Doctrine. 2nd ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . Mormon Doctrine. Revised 2nd ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1979.
- . The Mortal Messiah: From Bethlehem to Calvary. 4 vols. The Messiah Series 2-5. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1979-1981.
- . “Mothers in Israel and daughters of Zion.” New Era 8, May 1978, 34-37.
- . A New Witness for the Articles of Faith. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1985.
- . The Promised Messiah: The First Coming of Christ. The Messiah Series 1. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1978.
- McConkie, Joseph Fielding. Answers: Straightforward Answers to Tough Gospel Questions. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1998.
- . Gospel Symbolism. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1985.
- . “Modern revelation: A window to the past.” In “To Be Learned Is Good if...,” edited by Robert L. Millet, 115-28. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1987.
- . “The mystery of Eden.” In The Man Adam, edited by Joseph Fielding McConkie and Robert L. Millet, 25-35. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1990.
- . “Premortal existence, foreordinations, and heavenly councils.” In Apocryphal Writings and the Latter-day Saints, edited by C. Wilfred Griggs, 173-98. Provo, UT: BYU Religious Studies Center, 1986.

- . Sons and Daughters of God: The Loss and Restoration of Our Divine Inheritance. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1994.
- McConkie, Joseph Fielding, and Robert L. Millet. The Man Adam. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1990.
- McConkie, Joseph Fielding, and Craig J. Ostler, eds. Revelations of the Restoration: A Commentary on the Doctrine and Covenants and Other Modern Revelations. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2000.
- McDannell, Colleen, and Bernhard Lang. Heaven: A History. 2nd ed. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 1988.
- McDonald, Lee Martin, and James A. Sanders, eds. The Canon Debate. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2002.
- McDonald, Michael E. "Scriptural cosmology." Dialogue: A Journal of Mormon Thought 40, no. 2 (Summer 2007): vii-viii.
- McKay, David O. Cherished Experiences from the Writings of David O. McKay. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1955.
- . 1956. "Gospel ideals—Life's surest anchor." Address given at Brigham Young University, October 30, 1956. <http://speeches-files.byu.edu/download.php/McKay56.mp3?type=2&fname=McKay56.mp3> (accessed September 5, 2007).
- . 1952. "A message for LDS college youth." Address given to the student body at Brigham Young University, October 8, 1952. In McKay Addresses. <http://education.byu.edu/mckay/52oct8.html> (accessed September 4, 2007).
- . Treasures of Life. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1962.
- McKinlay, Daniel B. "Temple imagery in the Epistles of Peter." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 492-514. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- McKinlay, Lynn A. 1950. Life Eternal: A Series of Four Lectures. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1972.
- . "Patriarchal order of the Priesthood." In The Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 3, 1067. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- McLachlan, James. "The modernism controversy: William Henry Chamberlin, his teachers Howison and Royce, and the conception of God debate." In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, 39-83. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.
- . "Reply to Professor Griffin." In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, 207-09. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.
- McLellin, William E. The Journals of William E. McLellin, 1831-1836. Edited by Jan Shipps and John W. Welch. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1994.
- McMurrin, Sterling M. 1965. The Theological Foundations of the Mormon Religion. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 2000.
- McNamara, Martin, ed. Targum Neofiti 1, Genesis, translated, with apparatus and notes. Vol. 1a. Aramaic Bible. Collegeville, MN: Liturgical Press, 1992.
- McWhorter, John. The Power of Babel: A Natural History of Language. New York City, NY: W. H. Freeman, Times Books, Henry Holt, 2001.
- Mead, George Robert Shaw, ed. Gnostic John the Baptizer: Selections from the Mandaean John-Book. London, England: John M. Watkins, 1924. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, n.d. http://www.gnosis.org/library/grs-mead/gnostic_john_baptist/ (accessed September 11, 2007).
- , ed. 1921. Pistis Sophia: The Gnostic Tradition of Mary Magdalene, Jesus, and His Disciples. Mineola, NY: Dover Publications, 2005.
- Meeks, Wayne A. "The image of the androgyne: Some uses of a symbol in earliest Christianity." History of Religions 13, no. 3 (February 1974): 165-208.
- . "Moses as God and King." In Religions in Antiquity: Essays in Memory of Erwin Ramsdell Goodenough, edited by Jacob Neusner. Religions in Antiquity, Studies in the History of Religions (Supplements to Numen) 14, 354-71. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1968.
- Meldrum, D. Jeffrey. "The children of Lehi: DNA and the Book of Mormon." Presented at the 2003 FAIR Conference, Provo, UT, August 7-8, 2003. http://www.fairlds.org/FAIR_Conferences/2003_Evolution_and_Latter-day_Saint_Theology.html (accessed September 5, 2007).
- Meldrum, D. Jeffrey, and Trent D. Stephens. "Who are the children of Lehi?" Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 12, no. 1 (2003): 38-51, 116.
- . Who Are the Children of Lehi? DNA and the Book of Mormon. Salt Lake City, UT: Greg Kofford Books, 2007.
- Meltzer, David ed. "Shiur Qoma: The Measure of the Divine Body." In The Secret Garden: An Anthology in the Kabbalah, edited by David Meltzer, 23-37. Barrytown, NY: Barrytown Limited, 1997.
- Mettinger, Trygve N. D. The Eden Narrative: A Literary and Religio-historical Study of Genesis 2-3. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 2007.

- Metzger, Bruce M. The Bible in Translation: Ancient and English Versions. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2001.
- , ed. “The Fourth Book of Ezra.” In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 517-59. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Meyer, Marvin W. The Ancient Mysteries: A Sourcebook of Sacred Texts. 2nd ed. Philadelphia, PA: University of Pennsylvania Press, 2001.
- , ed. The Nag Hammadi Scriptures: The International Edition. New York City, NY: HarperOne, 2007.
- , ed. “On the origin of the world.” In The Nag Hammadi Scriptures: The International Edition, edited by Marvin Meyer, 199-221. New York City, NY: HarperOne, 2007.
- Michael, Thomas. The Pristine Dao: Metaphysics in Early Dao Discourse. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 2005.
- Michon, Jean-Louis. “The spiritual practices of Sufism.” In Foundations, edited by Seyyed Hossein Nasr. Islamic Spirituality 1, 265-93. New York City, NY: The Crossroad Publishing Company, 1987.
- Middleton, James. n. d. The Archangel Michael Subduing Satan. In Polyhymnia. <http://www.polyhymnia-nyc.org/Raphael.html> (accessed August 28, 2006).
- Migne, Jacques P., ed. Patrologiae Cursus Completus, Series Graeca. 161 vols. Paris, France, 1857-1866. http://patrologia.ct.aegean.gr/PG_Migne/ (accessed March 28, 2008).
- , ed. Patrologiae Cursus Completus, Series Latina. 221 vols. Paris, France, 1844-1855. <http://pld.chadwyck.co.uk/> (accessed March 28, 2008).
- Mikaël, Bakhayla. ca. 1400. “Another discourse concerning the birth of Enoch.” In The Book of the Mysteries of the Heavens and the Earth and Other Works of Bakhayla Mikaël (Zosimas), edited by E. A. Wallis Budge, 140-62. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1934. Reprint, Berwick, ME: Ibis Press, 2004.
- . ca. 1400. “The book of the mysteries of the heavens and the earth.” In The Book of the Mysteries of the Heavens and the Earth and Other Works of Bakhayla Mikaël (Zosimas), edited by E. A. Wallis Budge, 1-96. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1934. Reprint, Berwick, ME: Ibis Press, 2004.
- . ca. 1400. The Book of the Mysteries of the Heavens and the Earth and Other Works of Bakhayla Mikaël (Zosimas). Edited by E. A. Wallis Budge. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1934. Reprint, Berwick, ME: Ibis Press, 2004.
- . ca. 1400. “The interpretation of the vision of St. John, the author of the Apocalypse.” In The Book of the Mysteries of the Heavens and the Earth and Other Works of Bakhayla Mikaël (Zosimas), edited by E. A. Wallis Budge, 97-125. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1934. Reprint, Berwick, ME: Ibis Press, 2004.
- Mikaël, Isaac, son of Bakhayla. ca. 1400. “Discourse concerning the mystery of the Godhead and the Trinity.” In The Book of the Mysteries of the Heavens and the Earth and Other Works of Bakhayla Mikaël (Zosimas), edited by E. A. Wallis Budge, 126-39. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1934. Reprint, Berwick, ME: Ibis Press, 2004.
- Mikkelsen, G., ed. Bibliographia Manichaica: A Comprehensive Bibliography of Manichaeism through 1996. Corpus Fontium Manichaeorum, Series Subsidia. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 1997.
- , ed. Dictionary of Manichaean Texts. Vol. 4: Texts from Central Asia and China. Corpus Fontium Manichaeorum, Series Subsidia. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 2007.
- Milgrom, Jacob. “The temple in biblical Israel: Kinships of meaning.” In Reflections on Mormonism: Judeo-Christian Parallels, Papers Delivered at the Religious Studies Center Symposium, Brigham Young University, March 10-11, 1978, edited by Truman G. Madsen. Religious Studies Monograph Series 4, 57-65. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1978.
- Milik, J. T., ed. The Books of Enoch: Aramaic Fragments from Qumran Cave 4. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1976.
- Mill, John Stuart. On Liberty. London, England: John W. Parker and Son, 1859. <http://books.google.com/books?id=qCQCAAAQAAJ> (accessed December 26, 2007).
- Miller, Adam S. “Atonement and testimony.” Element: The Journal of the Society for Mormon Philosophy and Theology 2, no. 2 (Fall 2006): 73-83.
- Miller, Andrew I. “What does the word “testial” mean?” In Strong Reasons. <http://strongreasons.blogspot.com/2008/07/what-does-word-mean.html> (accessed November 30, 2008).
- Miller, D. Patrick. “Yogananda’s legacy.” Yoga Journal, May/June 1991, 59-62, 107-09, 20.
- Miller, Jeanette W. “The tree of life, a personification of Christ.” Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 2, no. 1 (1993): 93-106.
- Miller, Kenneth R. 1999. Finding Darwin’s God: A Scientist’s Search for Common Ground Between God and Evolution. New York City, NY: Harper Perennial, 2002.
- Miller, Mary Ellen, and Karl A. Taube. 1993. The Gods and Symbols of Ancient Mexico and the Maya: An Illustrated Dictionary of Mesoamerican Religion. New York City, NY: Thames and Hudson, 1997.

- Millet, Robert L. Alive in Christ: The Miracle of Spiritual Rebirth. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1997.
- . “Appendix A: Doctrinal parameters within Mormonism.” In Bridging the Divide: The Continuing Conversation between a Mormon and an Evangelical, edited by Robert L. Millet and Gregory C. V. Johnson, 131-48. Rhinebeck, NY: Monkfish, 2007.
- . “C. S. Lewis on the transformation of human nature.” In C. S. Lewis: The Man and His Message, A Latter-day Saint Perspective, edited by Andrew C. Skinner and Robert L. Millet, 143-55. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1999.
- . A Different Jesus? The Christ of the Latter-day Saints. Grand Rapids, MI: Eerdmans, 2005.
- . Lost and Found: Reflections on the Prodigal Son. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2001.
- . The Vision of Mormonism: Pressing the Boundaries of Christianity. St. Paul, MN: Paragon House, 2007.
- Millet, Robert L., and Gregory C. V. Johnson. Bridging the Divide: The Continuing Conversation Between a Mormon and an Evangelical. Rhinebeck, NY: Monkfish Book Publishing, 2007.
- Millet, Robert L., and Joseph Fielding McConkie. Our Destiny: The Call and Election of the House of Israel. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1993.
- Millet, Robert L., and Gerald R. McDermott. Claiming Christ: A Mormon-Evangelical Debate. Grand Rapids, MI: Brazos Press, 2007.
- Milstein, Rachel. “The stories and their illustrations.” In Stories of the Prophets: Illustrated Manuscripts of Qisas al-Anbiya, edited by Rachel Milstein, Karin Rühdanz and Barbara Schmitz. Islamic Art and Architecture Series 8, eds. Abbas Daneshvari, Robert Hillenbrand and Bernard O’Kane, 105-83. Costa Mesa, CA: Mazda Publishers, 1999.
- Milstein, Rachel, Karin Rühdanz, and Barbara Schmitz. Stories of the Prophets: Illustrated Manuscripts of Qisas al-Anbiya. Islamic Art and Architecture Series 8, ed. Abbas Daneshvari, Robert Hillenbrand and Bernard O’Kane. Costa Mesa, CA: Mazda Publishers, 1999.
- Milton, John. 1667. “Paradise Lost.” In Paradise Lost, Paradise Regained, Samson Agonistes, edited by Harold Bloom, 15-257. London, England: Collier, 1962.
- . 1671. “Samson Agonistes.” In Paradise Lost, Paradise Regained, Samson Agonistes, edited by Harold Bloom, 307-48. London, England: Collier, 1962.
- “Minyan.” In Wikipedia. <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Minyan> (accessed February 5, 2008).
- Miola, Robert S. Shakespeare’s Reading. Oxford Shakespeare Topics, eds. Peter D. Holland and Stanley Wells. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2000.
- “Miranda.” In Shakespeare Illustrated, Department of English, Emory University. http://www.english.emory.edu/classes/Shakespeare_Illustrated/Miranda1.html (accessed December 12, 2007).
- Mirecki, Paul, and Jason David BeDuhn, eds. Emerging from Darkness: Studies in the Recovery of Manichaean Sources. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 43, eds. James M. Robinson and H. J. Klimkeit. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1997.
- Mirecki, Paul, Iain Gardner, and Anthony Alcock. “Magical spell, Manichaean letter.” In Emerging from Darkness: Studies in the Recovery of Manichaean Sources, edited by Paul Mirecki and Jason David BeDuhn. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 43, eds. James M. Robinson and H. J. Klimkeit, 1-32. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1997.
- Mirecki, Paul, and Jason David BeDuhn, eds. The Light and the Darkness: Studies in Manichaeism and its World. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 50, ed. Stephen Emmel. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 2001.
- Mirecki, Paul. “Introduction [to the Manichaean Literature].” In The Gnostic Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone and Marvin W. Meyer, 569-80. Boston, MA: Shambhala, 2003.
- . “On the Origin of His Body [Introduction].” In The Gnostic Bible, edited by Willis Barnstone and Marvin W. Meyer, 581-82. Boston, MA: Shambhala, 2003.
- Mitchell, Stephen, ed. 1987. The Book of Job. New York City, NY: HarperPerennial, 1992.
- Mitchell, W. J. T. “Blake’s composite art.” In William Blake, edited by Harold Bloom. Bloom’s BioCritiques, ed. Harold Bloom, 137-62. Philadelphia, PA: Chelsea House Publishers, 2006.
- Moberly, R. W. L. “Did the serpent get it right?” In From Eden to Golgotha: Essays in Biblical Theology, edited by R. W. L. Moberly. South Florida Studies in the History of Judaism 52, eds. Jacob Neusner, William Scott Green, James F. Strange, Darrell J. Fasching and Sara Mandell, 1-27. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1992.
- Modi, Jivanji Jamshedji. The Navjote Ceremony of the Parsees. 2nd ed. Bombay, India, 1914. <http://www.avesta.org/ritual/navjote.htm> (accessed September 13, 2007).
- . The Religious Ceremonies and Customs of the Parsees. Bombay, India: British India Press, 1922. <http://www.avesta.org/ritual/rcc.htm> (accessed September 13, 2007 - incomplete version).
- Mohammed, Khaleel. “Assessing English translations of the Qur’an.” The Middle East Quarterly 12, no. 2 (Spring 2005). <http://www.meforum.org/article/717> (accessed September 5, 2007).
- Monneret, Jean-Luc. Les Grands Thèmes du Coran. Paris, France: Éditions Dervy, 2003.
- Monson, Thomas S. “Our sacred priesthood trust.” Ensign 36, May 2006, 54-57.

- Mopsik, Charles, ed. Le Livre hébreu d'Hénoch ou Livre des Palais. Les Dix Paroles, ed. Charles Mopsik. Lagrasse, France: Éditions Verdier, 1989.
- , ed. Le Zohar. 5 vols. Collection Les Dix Paroles, ed. Charles Mopsik. Lagrasse, France: Verdier, 1981.
- Mordell, Phineas ed. "Sefer Yetsirah (excerpt)." In The Secret Garden: An Anthology in the Kabbalah, edited by David Meltzer, 41-45. Barrytown, NY: Barrytown Limited, 1997.
- Mordtman Jr., A. "Monuments relatifs au culte d'Isis à Cyzique." Revue Archéologique 5 (May 1879): 257-62.
- Moreland, J. P., and John Mark Reynolds. Three Views on Creation and Evolution. Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan Publishing, 1999.
- Morgan, Michael A., ed. Sefer ha-Razim: The Book of Mysteries. Society of Biblical Literature Texts and Translations Pseudepigrapha Series 11, ed. Harold W. Attridge. Chico, CA: Scholars Press, 1983.
- Murray-Jones, Christopher R. A. "Divine names, celestial sanctuaries, and visionary ascents: Approaching the New Testament from the perspective of Merkava traditions." In The Mystery of God: Early Jewish Mysticism and the New Testament, edited by Christopher Rowland and Christopher R. A. Murray-Jones. Compendia Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum 12, eds. Pieter Willem van der Horst and Peter J. Tomson, 219-498. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 2009.
- Morris, Colin. 2005. The Sepulchre of Christ and the Medieval West: From the Beginning to 1600. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2007.
- Morris, Simon Conway. Life's Solution: Inevitable Humans in a Lonely Universe. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2003.
- Morrison, Alexander B. "The Latter-day Saint concept of canon." In Historicity and the Latter-day Saint Scriptures, edited by Paul Y. Hoskisson, 1-16. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 2001.
- Motzki, Harold. "Alternative accounts of the Qur'an's formation." In The Cambridge Companion to the Qur'an, edited by Jane Dammen McAuliffe, 59-75. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2006.
- Mouritsen, Dale C. "Transfiguration." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 4, 1484-85. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Mouritsen, Paul. "Secret combinations and flaxen cords: Anti-Masonic rhetoric and the Book of Mormon." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 12, no. 1 (2003): 64-77.
- Muggeridge, Malcolm. Jesus: The Man Who Lives. New York: Harper and Row, 1975.
- Muhlestein, Kerry. "Approaching understandings in the Book of Abraham." FARMS Review of Books 18, no. 2 (2006): 229-46.
- . "The Book of Breathings in its place." FARMS Review of Books 17, no. 2 (2005): 471-86.
- . "One continuous flow: Revelations surrounding the 'New Translation.'" In The Doctrine and Covenants: Revelations in Context: The 37th Annual Brigham Young University Sidney B. Sperry Symposium, edited by Andrew H. Hedges, J. Spencer Fluhman and Alonzo L. Gaskill, 40-65. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- Müller, F. Max, ed. Avesta Khorda Avesta: Book of Common Prayer. American ed. Translated by James Darmesteter. The Sacred Books of the East, 1898. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. "Bahman Yast." In Pahlavi Texts: The Bundahis, Bahman Yast, and Shayast La-Shayast (including Selections of Zad-spāram), edited by F. Max Müller. 5 vols. Vol. 1. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 5, ed. F. Max Müller, 189-235. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1880. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. "Bundahis." In Pahlavi Texts: The Bundahis, Bahman Yast, and Shayast La-Shayast (including Selections of Zad-spāram), edited by F. Max Müller. 5 vols. Vol. 1. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 5, ed. F. Max Müller, 1-151. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1880. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. "Dadistan-i Dinik." In Pahlavi Texts: The Dadistan-i Dinik and the Epistles of Manuskihar, edited by F. Max Müller. 5 vols. Vol. 2. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 18, ed. F. Max Müller, 1-276. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1882. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. "Dinai Mainog-i khirad." In Pahlavi Texts: Dinai Mainog-i khirad, Sikand-Gumanik Vigar, Sad Dar., edited by F. Max Müller. 5 vols. Vol. 3. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 24, ed. F. Max Müller, 1-113. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1884. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. "Dinkard, Books 5, 7." In Pahlavi Texts: Marvels of Zoroastrianism, edited by F. Max Müller. 5 vols. Vol. 5. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 47, ed. F. Max Müller, 3-130. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1897. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. Pahlavi Texts: The Bundahis, Bahman Yast, and Shayast La-Shayast (including Selections of Zad-spāram). 5 vols. Vol. 1. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 5, ed. F. Max Müller. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1880. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.

- , ed. Pahlavi Texts: Contents of the Nasks (Dinkard, Books 8-9). 5 vols. Vol. 4. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 37, ed. F. Max Müller. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1892. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. Pahlavi Texts: The Dadistan-i Dinik and the Epistles of Manuskihar. 5 vols. Vol. 2. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 18, ed. F. Max Müller. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1882. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. Pahlavi Texts: Dinai Mainog-i khirad, Sikand-Gumanik Vigar, Sad Dar. 5 vols. Vol. 3. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 24, ed. F. Max Müller. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1884. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. Pahlavi Texts: Marvels of Zoroastrianism (Dinkard, Books 5, 7; Selections of Zad-sparam). 5 vols. Vol. 5. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 47, ed. F. Max Müller. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1897. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. "Selections of Zad-sparam." In Pahlavi Texts: The Bundahis, Bahman Yast, and Shayast La-Shayast (including Selections of Zad-sparam), edited by F. Max Müller. 5 vols. Vol. 1. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 5, ed. F. Max Müller, 153-87. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1880.
- , ed. "Sikand-Gumanik Vigar." In Pahlavi Texts: Dinai Mainog-i khirad, Sikand-Gumanik Vigar, Sad Dar, edited by F. Max Müller. 5 vols. Vol. 3. Translated by E. W. West. The Sacred Books of the East 24, ed. F. Max Müller, 115-251. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1884.
- , ed. The Upanishads, Part Two. 2 vols. Vol. 2. The Sacred Books of the East 15, ed. F. Max Müller. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1884. Reprint, New York City, NY: Dover, 1962.
- , ed. "Yasna (1-27, 35-42, 52, 54-72)." In The Zend Avesta: The Yasna, Visparad, Afrinagan, Gahs, and Miscellaneous Fragments, edited by F. Max Müller. 3 vols. Vol. 3. Translated by Lawrence Heyworth Mills. The Sacred Books of the East 31, ed. F. Max Müller, 195-332. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1887.
- , ed. "Yasts." In The Zend Avesta: The Sirozahs, Yasts, and Nyayis, edited by F. Max Müller. 3 vols. Vol. 2. Translated by James Darmesteter. The Sacred Books of the East 23, ed. F. Max Müller, 21-345. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1883. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. The Zend Avesta: The Sirozahs, Yasts, and Nyayis. 3 vols. Vol. 2. Translated by James Darmesteter. The Sacred Books of the East 23, ed. F. Max Müller. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1883. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. The Zend Avesta: The Vendidad. 3 vols. Vol. 1. Translated by James Darmesteter. The Sacred Books of the East 4, ed. F. Max Müller. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1880. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- , ed. The Zend Avesta: The Yasna, Visparad, Afrinagan, Gahs, and Miscellaneous Fragments. 3 vols. Vol. 3. Translated by Lawrence Heyworth Mills. The Sacred Books of the East 31, ed. F. Max Müller. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1887. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- Müller-Kessler, C. "A Mandaic gold amulet in the British Museum." Bulletin of the American Schools of Oriental Research 311 (1998): 83-88.
- Munk, Eliyahu, ed. Hachut Hameshulash: Commentaries on the Torah by Rabbeinu Chananel, Rashyybam, Ryydak, and Sforno. 6 vols. Jerusalem, Israel: Urim Publications, 2003.
- Munoa, Philip B. Four Powers in Heaven: The Interpretation of Daniel 7 in the Testament of Abraham. Journal for the Study of the Pseudepigrapha Supplement Series 28, eds. Lester L. Grabbe and James H. Charlesworth. Sheffield, England: Sheffield Academic Press, 1998.
- Munro-Hay, Stuart. The Quest for the Ark of the Covenant: The True History of the Tablets of Moses. London, England: I. B. Tauris, 2006.
- Murphy, Frederick J. Pseudo-Philo: Rewriting the Bible. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1993.
- Murphy, G. Ronald. Gemstone of Paradise: The Holy Grail in Wolfram's Parzival. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2006.
- . "Gemstone of Paradise: The Holy Grail in Wolfram's Parzival" (excerpt). Company: The World of Jesuits and their Friends 242, Winter 2006, 8-11. <http://www.companysj.com/v242/gemstone.pdf> (accessed October 4, 2008).
- Murphy, Roland. "Israel's Wisdom: Dialogue between the Sages." In Light in a Spotless Mirror: Reflections on Wisdom Traditions in Judaism and Early Christianity, edited by James H. Charlesworth and Michael A. Daise, 7-25. Harrisburg, PA: Trinity Press International, 2003.
- Murray, Robert. The Cosmic Covenant. London, England: Sheed and Ward Limited, 1992.
- . 1975. Symbols of Church and Kingdom: A Study in Early Syriac Tradition. Revised ed. Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2004.

- Musée du Louvre. "Saint Michel terrassant le démon, dit Le Grand Saint Michel." In Musée du Louvre: Atlas. http://cartelen.louvre.fr/cartelen/visite?srv=car_not_frame&idNotice=13966 (accessed June 28, 2007).
- Muslim, Ibn Al-Hajjaj, ed. ca. 860. Sahih Muslim. 4 vols. Translated by Abdul Hamid Siddiqi. Chicago, IL: Kazi Publications, 1971.
- Musser, Donald W., and David L. Paulsen, eds. Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.
- Myers, Merlin G. "Kinship, religion, and the transformation of society." In Speeches of the Year 1975: Brigham Young University Centennial Devotional and Fireside Addresses, 85-96. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University, 1975.
- Mylonas, George E. 1961. Eleusis and the Eleusinian Mysteries. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1969.
- Nadauld, Stephen D. Principles of Priesthood Leadership. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1999.
- Nanayakkara, S. S. M. 2000. "Sri Pada: Sanctuary for all faiths." In The Sunday Observer. <http://sripada.org/nanayakkara.htm> (accessed September 20, 2007).
- Nanji, Azim. "Isma'ilism." In Foundations, edited by Seyyed Hossein Nasr. Islamic Spirituality 1, 179-98. New York City, NY: The Crossroad Publishing Company, 1987.
- Nasafi, Aziz, and Lloyd Ridgeon, eds. Aziz Nasafi. Curzon Sufi Series. Oxford, England: RoutledgeCurzon, 1998.
- Nasr, Seyyed Hossein. "II. Sunnah and Hadith." In Foundations, edited by Seyyed Hossein Nasr. Islamic Spirituality 1, 97-110. New York City, NY: The Crossroad Publishing Company, 1987.
- . "The Qur'an as the foundation of Islamic spirituality." In Foundations, edited by Seyyed Hossein Nasr. Islamic Spirituality 1, 3-10. New York City, NY: The Crossroad Publishing Company, 1987.
- Nasrai, Yesai. "Scroll of Miryai and Scroll of Shum, from the Aramaic Drashe d-Malke (Discourse of the Celestial Kings)," chapters 34, 35, 14-17, 48-51, 56, 74. Translated from the German. In Sacred Scrolls of the Order of Nazorean Essenes, Manichaeon Orthodox Church. <http://essenenes.net/scrolls/64ssMiryai.html> (accessed September 12, 2007).
- Nee, Sean. "The great chain of being." Nature 435 (2005): 429.
- Neilson, Reid L., and Terry L. Givens, eds. Joseph Smith Jr.: Reappraisals After Two Centuries. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2009.
- Nelson, Ethel R., Richard E. Broadberry, and Ginger Tong Chock. God's Promise to the Chinese. Dunlap, TN: Read Books Publisher, 1997.
- Nelson, Russell M. "The Creation." Ensign 30, May 2000, 84-86.
- . "Lessons from Eve." Ensign 17, November 1987, 86-89.
- Nersessian, Vrej. Treasures from the Ark: 1700 Years of Armenian Christian Art. London, England: The British Library, 2001.
- Nes, Solrunn. The Uncreated Light: An Iconographical Study of the Transfiguration in the Eastern Church. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 2007.
- Neugroschel, Joachim ed. "Book Bahir" (excerpt). In The Secret Garden: An Anthology in the Kabbalah, edited by David Meltzer, 49-96. Barrytown, NY: Barrytown Limited, 1997.
- Neumiller, S. Kurt. 1998. "Comments on Isaiah." In LDS GospelDoctrine.net. <http://www.ldsgospeldoctrine.net/kn/ot/> (accessed September 5, 2007).
- Neusner, Jacob, ed. The Babylonian Talmud: A Translation and Commentary. 22 vols. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2006.
- . 1991. Confronting Creation: How Judaism Reads Genesis. Eugene, OR: Wipf and Stock Publishers, 2004.
- . 1953-1968. "Editor's Foreword." In Jewish Symbols in the Greco-Roman Period, edited by Jacob Neusner and Erwin Ramsdell Goodenough. Abridged ed. Bollingen Series, ix-xxxvii. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1988.
- , ed. Genesis Rabbah: The Judaic Commentary to the Book of Genesis, A New American Translation. 3 vols. Vol. 1: Parashiyyot One through Thirty-Three on Genesis 1:1 to 8:14. Brown Judaic Studies 104, ed. Jacob Neusner. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1985.
- , ed. Genesis Rabbah: The Judaic Commentary to the Book of Genesis, A New American Translation. 3 vols. Vol. 2: Parashiyyot Thirty-Four through Sixty-Seven on Genesis 8:15-28:9. Brown Judaic Studies 105, ed. Jacob Neusner. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1985.
- , ed. Genesis Rabbah: The Judaic Commentary to the Book of Genesis, A New American Translation. 3 vols. Vol. 3: Parashiyyot Sixty-Eight through One Hundred on Genesis 28:10 to 50:26. Brown Judaic Studies 106, ed. Jacob Neusner. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1985.
- , ed. Judaism and Story: The Evidence of the Fathers According to Rabbi Nathan. Eugene, OR: Wipf and Stock Publishers, 1992.

- . 1964. "Judaism at Dura-Europos." In The Dura-Europos Synagogue: A Re-evaluation (1932-1992), edited by Joseph Gutmann, 155-92. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1992.
- , ed. The Mishnah: A New Translation. London, England: Yale University Press, 1988.
- . "Religious studies: The next vocation." Bulletin of the Council on the Study of Religion 8, no. 5 (December 1977): 117-20.
- . "Ritual without myth: The use of legal materials for the study of religions." Religion: Journal of Religion and Religions 5 (Autumn 1975): 91-100. Reprint, Neusner, J. "Ritual without myth: The use of legal materials for the study of religions." In Neusner on Judaism. 3 vols. Vol. 3: Religion and Theology, 139-148. Ashgate Contemporary Thinkers on Religion: Collected Works, ed. J. Hinnels. Aldershot, England: Ashgate, 2006.
- . 1987. "Studying ancient Judaism through the art of the synagogue." In Art as Religious Studies, edited by Doug Adams and Diana Apostolos-Cappadona, 29-57. New York City, NY: Crossroad, 1990.
- , ed. The Talmud of the Land of Israel. 35 vols. Chicago Studies in the History of Judaism. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press, 1982-1995.
- , ed. The Tosefta: Translated from the Hebrew, with a New Introduction. 2 vols. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2002.
- "New Oxford American Dictionary." In Oxford University Press. <http://www.oup.com/us/noad> (accessed May 30, 2008).
- New Primary Children's Songbook*. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1991.
- "New Testament Apocrypha." In Interfaith Online. <http://www.interfaith.org/christianity/apocrypha/> (accessed October 3, 2008).
- Newby, Gordon Darnell. A Concise Encyclopedia of Islam. Oxford, England: Oneworld Publications, 2002.
- . A History of the Jews of Arabia: From Ancient Times to Their Eclipse under Islam. Columbia, SC: University of South Carolina Press, 1988.
- . "Muslims, Jews and Christians: Relations and Interactions." In The Muslim Almanac, edited by Azim Nanji, 423-29. Detroit, MI: Gale Research, 1996.
- Nibley, Hugh W. Abraham in Egypt. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1981.
- . 1981. Abraham in Egypt. Edited by Gary P. Gillum. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 14. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2000.
- . "Abraham's temple drama." In The Temple in Time and Eternity, edited by Donald W. Parry and Stephen D. Ricks, 1-42. Provo, UT: The Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, Brigham Young University, 1999. Reprint, Nibley, Hugh W. "Abraham's temple drama." In Eloquent Witness: Nibley on Himself, Others, and the Temple, edited by Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 17, 445-482. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . 1954. "The ancient law of liberty." In The World and the Prophets, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 3, 182-90. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . 1967. "Apocryphal writings and the teachings of the Dead Sea Scrolls." In Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12, 264-335. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . 1968-1979. An Approach to the Book of Abraham. Edited by John Gee. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 18. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), 2009.
- . 1957. An Approach to the Book of Mormon. Edited by John W. Welch. 3rd ed. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 6. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1988.
- . "Assembly and atonement." In King Benjamin's Speech: 'That Ye May Learn Wisdom', edited by John W. Welch and Stephen D. Ricks, 119-45. Provo, UT: FARMS, 1998. Reprint, Nibley, Hugh W. "Assembly and Atonement." In Eloquent Witness: Nibley on Himself, Others, and the Temple, edited by Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 17, 420-444. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . 1980. "Before Adam." In Old Testament and Related Studies, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 1, 49-85. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- . 1973. "The best possible test." In Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present, edited by D.E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12, 532-40. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . "Beyond politics." In Nibley on the Timely and the Timeless: Classic Essays of Hugh W. Nibley, edited by Truman G. Madsen, 279-305. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 1978.
- . 1954. "The Book of Mormon as a witness." In The World and the Prophets, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 3, 207-15. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.

- . 1988. "The Book of Mormon: Forty years after." In The Prophetic Book of Mormon, edited by John W. Welch. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 8, 533-69. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1972. "Brigham Young on the environment." In Brother Brigham Challenges the Saints, edited by Don E. Norton and Shirley S. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 13, 23-54. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . 1982. "Christ among the ruins." In The Prophetic Book of Mormon, edited by John W. Welch. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 8, 407-34. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1959-1960. "Christian envy of the temple." In Mormonism and Early Christianity, edited by Todd M. Compton and Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 4, 391-434. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . "The circle and the square." In Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12, 139-73. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . 1979. "A conversation with Hugh Nibley." In Eloquent Witness: Nibley on Himself, Others, and the Temple, edited by Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 17, 51-72. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . 1978. "The early Christian prayer circle." In Mormonism and Early Christianity, edited by Todd M. Compton and Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 4, 45-99. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . 1970. "Educating the Saints." In Brother Brigham Challenges the Saints, edited by Don E. Norton and Shirley S. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 13, 306-45. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . Enoch the Prophet. Edited by Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 2. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- . 1966. "Evangelium Quadraginta Dierum: The Forty-day Mission of Christ—The Forgotten Heritage." In Mormonism and Early Christianity, edited by Todd M. Compton and Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 4, 10-44. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . 1965. "The expanding gospel." In Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present, edited by D.E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12, 177-211. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . "The facsimiles of the Book of Abraham." Sunstone 4, no. 5/6 (December 1979): 49-51.
- . 1981. "Foreword to Learn Greek through the New Testament." In Eloquent Witness: Nibley on Himself, Others, and the Temple, edited by Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 17, 111-13. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . 1981. "Freemen and King-men in the Book of Mormon." In The Prophetic Book of Mormon, edited by John W. Welch. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 8, 328-79. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1985. "From the earth upon which thou standest." In Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present, edited by D.E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12, 550-54. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . 1982. "Funeral address." In Approaching Zion, edited by D.E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 9, 290-307. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1972. "The genesis of the written word." In Nibley on the Timely and the Timeless, edited by Truman G. Madsen, 101-27. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1978.
- . 1979. "Gifts." In Approaching Zion, edited by D.E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 9, 85-117. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1986. "The greatness of Egypt." In Eloquent Witness: Nibley on Himself, Others, and the Temple, edited by Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 17, 271-311. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . "The hierocentric state." Western Political Quarterly 4 (1951): 226-53.
- . 1951. "The hierocentric state." In The Ancient State, edited by Donald W. Parry and Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 10, 99-147. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1991.
- . 1956. "Historicity of the Bible." In Old Testament and Related Studies, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 1, 1-19. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- . 1993. "A house of glory." In Eloquent Witness: Nibley on Himself, Others, and the Temple, edited by Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 17, 323-39. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . 1980. "How firm a foundation! What makes it so." In Approaching Zion, edited by D.E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 9, 149-77. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . "An intellectual autobiography." In Nibley on the Timely and the Timeless: Classic Essays of Hugh W. Nibley, edited by Truman G. Madsen, ix-xxviii. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 1978.
- . 1986. "The law of consecration." In Approaching Zion, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 9, 422-86. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1983. "Leaders to managers: The fatal shift." In Brother Brigham Challenges the Saints, edited by Don E. Norton and Shirley S. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 13, 491-508. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.

- . 1952. Lehi in the Desert, The World of the Jaredites, There Were Jaredites. Edited by John W. Welch, Darrell L. Matthews and Stephen R. Callister. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 5. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1988.
- . 1956. “The lesson of the sixth century BC.” BYU Devotional given March 20, 1956; FARMS Publication N-LES. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies. <http://speeches.byu.edu/?act=viewitem&id=829> (accessed May 17, 2009).
- . 1972. “Man’s dominion or subduing the earth.” In Brother Brigham Challenges the Saints, edited by Don E. Norton and Shirley S. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 13, 3-22. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . 1988. “The meaning of the atonement.” In Approaching Zion, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 9, 554-614. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1975. “The meaning of the temple.” In Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12, 1-41. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . “Meanings and functions of temples.” In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 4, 1458-63. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- . 1975. The Message of the Joseph Smith Papyri: An Egyptian Endowment. 2nd ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . 1971. “Myths and the scriptures.” In Old Testament and Related Studies, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 1, 37-47. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- . “A New Look at the Pearl of Great Price.” Improvement Era, 1968-1970. Reprint, Provo, UT: FARMS, Brigham Young University, 1990.
- . 1976. “Nibliography.” In Eloquent Witness: Nibley on Himself, Others, and the Temple, edited by Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 17, 46-50. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . “Not to worry.” In Expressions of Faith: Testimonies of Latter-day Saint Scholars, edited by Susan Easton Black, 139-54. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1996.
- . “On the sacred and the symbolic.” In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 535-621. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994. Reprint, Nibley, Hugh W. “On the Sacred and the Symbolic.” In Eloquent Witness: Nibley on Himself, Others, and the Temple, edited by Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 17, 340-419. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . 1989. “One eternal round.” In Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12, 379-433. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . 1961. “The passing of the primitive Church: Forty variations on an unpopular theme.” In Mormonism and Early Christianity, edited by Todd M. Compton and Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 4, 168-208. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . 1980. “Patriarchy and matriarchy.” In Old Testament and Related Studies, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 1, 87-113. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- . 1992. “Promised lands.” In Brother Brigham Challenges the Saints, edited by Don E. Norton and Shirley S. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 13, 76-101. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . 1982. “The prophetic Book of Mormon.” In The Prophetic Book of Mormon, edited by John W. Welch. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 8, 435-69. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1954. “Prophets and gnostics.” In The World and the Prophets, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 3, 63-70. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . 1954. “Prophets and ritual.” In The World and the Prophets, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 3, 146-53. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . 1954. “The prophets and the open mind.” In The World and the Prophets, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 3, 126-34. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . ca. 1960. “Rediscovery of the apocrypha and the Book of Mormon.” In Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12, 212-63. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . 1986. “Return to the temple.” In Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12, 42-90. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . 1975. “Sacred vestments.” In Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12, 91-138. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . 1985. “Scriptural perspectives on how to survive the calamities of the last days.” In The Prophetic Book of Mormon, edited by John W. Welch. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 8, 470-97. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.

- . 1967. Since Cumorah. Edited by John W. Welch. 2nd ed. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 7. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), 1988.
- . 1951. "Sparsiones." In The Ancient State, edited by Donald W. Parry and Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 10, 148-94. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1991.
- . 1989. "Stewardship of the air." In Brother Brigham Challenges the Saints. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 13, 55-75. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . 1989-1990. Teachings of the Book of Mormon. 4 vols. Provo, UT: FARMS, 2004.
- . 1986. Teachings of the Pearl of Great Price. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), Brigham Young University, 2004.
- . 1999. "Temples Everywhere." Insights: The Newsletter of the Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS) at Brigham Young University 25, no. 1 (2005): 10-16. Reprint, Nibley, Hugh W. "Temples everywhere." In Eloquent Witness: Nibley on Himself, Others, and the Temple, edited by Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 17, 483-500. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . 1966. "Tenting, toll, and taxing." In The Ancient State, edited by Donald W. Parry and Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 10, 33-98. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1991.
- . "Three degrees of righteousness from the Old Testament." In Approaching Zion, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 9, 308-37. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . "To open the last dispensation: Moses chapter 1." In Nibley on the Timely and the Timeless: Classic Essays of Hugh W. Nibley, edited by Truman G. Madsen, 1-20. Provo, UT: BYU Religious Studies Center, 1978. <http://farms.byu.edu/publications/transcripts/?id=71> (accessed October 10, 2008).
- . 1973. "Treasures in the heavens." In Old Testament and Related Studies, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 1, 171-214. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- . "The Roman games as a survival of an archaic year-cult." Doctoral Dissertation, University of California, Berkeley, 1939.
- . Temple and Cosmos: Beyond This Ignorant Present. Edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 12. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.
- . "The Three Facsimiles from the Book of Abraham." Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, Brigham Young University, 1980.
- . 1967. "Unrolling the scrolls—some forgotten witnesses." In Old Testament and Related Studies, edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 1, 115-70. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- . 1984. "We will still weep for Zion." In Approaching Zion, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 9, 341-77. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1958, 1983. "What is a temple?" In Mormonism and Early Christianity, edited by Todd M. Compton and Stephen D. Ricks. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 4, 355-90. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . "Where is the battle?" Unpublished lecture notes recorded by Michael B. James, n.d.
- . 1982. "Work we must, but the lunch is free." In Approaching Zion, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 9, 202-51. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- . 1954. The World and the Prophets. Edited by John W. Welch, Gary P. Gillum and Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 3. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . "Young, Brigham: Teachings of Brigham Young." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 4, 1609-11. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- . 1975. "Zeal without knowledge." In Approaching Zion, edited by Don E. Norton. The Collected Works of Hugh Nibley 9, 63-84. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- Nichols, Beverley. The Queen's Coronation Day: The Pictorial Record of the Great Occasion. Andover, UK: Pitkin Unichrome, 1953.
- Nielsensburg, George W. E., ed. 1 Enoch 1: A Commentary on the Book of 1 Enoch, Chapters 1-36; 81-108. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 2001.
- . Ancient Judaism and Christian Origins. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 2003.
- Nielsensburg, George W. E., and James C. VanderKam, eds. 1 Enoch: A New Translation. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 2004.
- Nielsen, F. Kent, and Stephen D. Ricks. "Creation, creation accounts." In The Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 1 340-343. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).

- Nigosian, S. A. 1993. The Zoroastrian Faith: Tradition and Modern Research. Montreal, Canada: McGill-Queen's University Press, 2003.
- Nissinen, Martti, and Risto Uro. Sacred Marriages. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 2008.
- Noah, Mordecai M., ed. 1840. The Book of Jasher. Translated by Moses Samuel. Salt Lake City, UT: Joseph Hyrum Parry, 1887. Reprint, New York City, NY: Cosimo Classics, 2005.
- Noah, Mordecai M., and Wayne Simpson, eds. 1840. The Authentic Annals of the Early Hebrews (Also Known as The Book of Jasher and Sefer Hayashar). Translated by Moses Samuel. Kearney, NE: Morris Publishing, 2005.
- Norman, Keith E. "Deification, early Christian." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 1, 369-70. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- . 1980. Deification: The Content of Athanasian Soteriology. Occasional Papers. Provo, UT: FARMS, 2000.
- . "Ex nihilo: The development of the doctrines of God and creation in early Christianity." BYU Studies 17 (Spring 1977): 291-318.
- Norman, V. Garth. Izapa Sculpture, Part 2: Text. Papers of the New World Archaeological Foundation 30. Provo, UT: New World Archaeological Foundation, Brigham Young University, 1976. <http://contentdm.lib.byu.edu/cdm4/document.php?CISOROOT=/NWAF&CISOPTR=8921&REC=14> (accessed February 9, 2009).
- Norris, Leslie, and Mark Magleby. Kershishnik: Paintings from Life. Madison, WI: Guild Publishing, 2002.
- Novatian. ca. 235-258. "A treatise of Novatian concerning the Trinity." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 6, 611-44. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1886. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Novickij (Novitskii), P. P. ed. "Откровение Авраама (Otkrovenie Avraama / Facsimile edition of the Codex Sylvester)." In Общество любителей древней письменности (Obshchestvo liubitelei drevnei pis'mennosti). Vol. 99:2. St. Petersburg, Russia: A. F. Markova, 1891. Reprint, Obshchestvo liubitelei drevnei pis'mennosti i iskusstva, Leningrad, Russia, 1967. <http://www.marquette.edu/maqom/spart1.pdf> (accessed June 18, 2008).
- Numbers, Ronald L. The Creationists: The Evolution of Scientific Creationism. Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1992.
- Nuttall, A. D. Shakespeare the Thinker. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 2007.
- Nuttall, L. John. Journal 2 (December 1876-August 1877). Journals of L. John Nuttall, 1857-1904. Provo, UT: L. Tom Perry Special Collections, Brigham Young University
- Nylan, Michael. "Toward an archaeology of writing: Text, ritual, and the culture of public display in the classical period (475 B.C.E.-220 C.E)." In Text and Ritual in Early China, edited by Martin Kern, 3-49. Seattle, WA: University of Washington Press, 2005.
- O'Brien, Christian, ed. "The Book of the Great Logos (SHABD) or The Book of Knowledge (1 Jeu)." In The Path of Light, 229-56. Kemble, Cirencester, England: Dianthus Publishing, 1999.
- , ed. "The Book of the Hierarchy of Heaven (2 Jeu)." In The Path of Light, 259-85. Kemble, Cirencester, England: Dianthus Publishing, 1999.
- , ed. The Path of Light, Volumes 1 and 2. Kemble, Cirencester, England: Dianthus Publishing, 1999.
- O'Dea, Thomas F. The Mormons. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press, 1957.
- O'Reilly, Jennifer. "The trees of Eden in mediaeval iconography." In A Walk in the Garden: Biblical, Iconographical and Literary Images of Eden, edited by Paul Morris and Deborah Sawyer. Journal for the Study of the Old Testament Supplement Series 136, eds. David J. A. Clines and Philip R. Davies, 167-204. Sheffield, England: JSOT Press, 1992.
- Oakley, John. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News, February 2, 1854, 1.
- Oaks, Dallin H. "The challenge to become." Ensign 30, November 2000, 32-34.
- . "Free agency and freedom." BYU Fireside Address, October 11, 1987. In Brigham Young University 1987-1988 Devotional and Fireside Speeches, 37-47. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Publications, 1987. <http://speeches.byu.edu/reader/reader.php?id=7014> (accessed September 6, 2007).
- . "The great plan of happiness." Ensign 23, November 1993, 72-75.
- . "Joseph Smith in a personal world." In The Worlds of Joseph Smith: A Bicentennial Conference at the Library of Congress, edited by John W. Welch, 153-72. Provo, UT: The Brigham Young University Press, 2005.
- . "Revelation." September 29, 1981. In Brigham Young University 1981-82 Speeches, 1-9. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1981. <http://speeches.byu.edu/index.php?act=viewitem&id=568> (accessed October 3, 2007).
- . "Scripture reading and revelation." Ensign 25, January 1995, 7-9.
- . "Sharing the Gospel." Ensign 31, November 2001, 7-9.
- . "Taking upon us the name of Jesus Christ." Ensign 15 1985, 80-83.

- Oden, Robert A., Jr. "Divine aspirations in Atrahasis and in Genesis 1-11." Zeitschrift für die Alttestamentliche Wissenschaft 93 (1981): 197-216.
- Ogden, D. Kelly, and Andrew C. Skinner. The Four Gospels. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2006.
- Old Testament Student Manual, Religion 301*. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1980.
- Olsen, Nolan Porter. 1978. Logan Temple: The First 100 Years. Providence, UT: Keith W. Watkins & Sons, 1994.
- Olson, Daniel C. "1 Enoch." In Eerdmans Commentary on the Bible, edited by James D. G. Dunn and John W. Rogerson, 904-41. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 2003.
- Olson, Camille Fronk. Women of the Old Testament. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2009.
- Oman, Nathan B. "A defense of the authority of Church doctrine." Dialogue: A Journal of Mormon Thought 40, no. 4 (Winter 2007): 1-28.
- . "Jurisprudence and the problem of church doctrine." Element: The Journal of the Society for Mormon Philosophy and Theology 2, no. 2 (Fall 2006): 1-19.
- . "Secret combinations: A legal analysis." FARMS Review 16, no. 1 (2004): 49-73.
- Oman, Richard G. "Exterior symbolism of the Salt Lake Temple: Reflecting the faith that called the place into being." BYU Studies 36, no. 4 (1996-97): 7-68.
- Oman, Richard G., and Robert O. Davis. Images of Faith: Art of the Latter-day Saints. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1995.
- Onions, C. T., and Robert D. Eagleson. A Shakespeare Glossary. 3rd ed. Oxford, England: The Clarendon Press, 1989.
- Orgel, Stephen. "Introduction." In The Tempest, edited by Stephen Orgel. The Oxford Shakespeare, ed. Stanley Wells, 1-87. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1987.
- Origen. ca. 200-254. "Commentary on John." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 10, 297-408. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1896. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- . ca. 200-230. "De Principiis." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 4, 239-384. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- . ca. 200-254. Homilies on Genesis and Exodus. Translated by Gary Wayne Barkley. Fathers of the Church. Washington, DC: Catholic University of America Press, 1982.
- . ca. 200-254. Homilies on Leviticus 1-16. Translated by Gary Wayne Barkley. Fathers of the Church. Washington, DC: Catholic University of America Press, 1990.
- . ca. 234-240. Homilies on Luke: Fragments on Luke. Translated by Joseph T. Lienhard. Washington, D.C.: Catholic University of America Press, 1996.
- Orlov, Andrei A. The Enoch-Metatron Tradition. Texts and Studies in Ancient Judaism 107. Tübingen, Germany Mohr Siebeck, 2005.
- . "'The gods of my father Terah': Abraham the iconoclast and the polemics with the divine body traditions in the Apocalypse of Abraham." Journal for the Study of the Pseudepigrapha 18, no. 1 (2008): 33-53. Reprint, Orlov, Andrei A. "'The gods of my father Terah': Abraham the iconoclast and the polemics with the divine body traditions in the Apocalypse of Abraham." In Divine Manifestations in the Slavonic Pseudepigrapha, edited by Andrei A. Orlov, Orientalia Judaica Christiana 2, 217-235. Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2009.
- . "The heir of righteousness and the king of righteousness: The priestly Noachic polemics in 2 Enoch and the Epistle to the Hebrews." Journal of Theological Studies 58, no. 1 (2007): 45-65. <http://jts.oxfordjournals.org/cgi/reprint/58/1/45.pdf?ijkey=c9zZNzBnzJiHUI&keytype=ref> (accessed September 6, 2007).
- . "On the polemical nature of 2 (Slavonic) Enoch: A reply to C. Böttrich." Journal for the Study of Judaism 34 (2003): 274-303.
- . "In the mirror of the Divine Face: The Enochic features of the Exagoge of Ezekiel the Tragedian." In Divine Manifestations in the Slavonic Pseudepigrapha, edited by Andrei A. Orlov. Orientalia Judaica Christiana 2, 135-51. Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2009.
- . "Praxis of the voice: The divine name traditions in the Apocalypse of Abraham." Journal of Biblical Literature 127, no. 1 (2008): 53-70. Reprint, Orlov, Andrei A. "Praxis of the voice: The divine name traditions in the Apocalypse of Abraham." In Divine Manifestations in the Slavonic Pseudepigrapha, edited by Andrei A. Orlov, Orientalia Judaica Christiana 2, 155-175. Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2009.
- . "Resurrection of Adam's body: The redeeming role of Enoch-Metatron in 2 (Slavonic) Enoch." Presented at the American Academy of Religion/Society of Biblical Literature Annual Meeting, Early Jewish and Christian Mysticism Group, Atlanta, GA, November 24, 2003. <http://www.marquette.edu/maqom/oil.html> (accessed June 18, 2008).

- Orton, Chad A. More Faith than Fear: The Los Angeles Stake Story. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1987.
- Osiek, Carolyn, ed. Shepherd of Hermas: A Commentary. Hermeneia—A Critical and Historical Commentary on the Bible. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 1999.
- Ostler, Blake T. The Attributes of God. Exploring Mormon Thought 1. Salt Lake City, UT: Greg Kofford Books, 2001.
- . “Clothed upon: A unique aspect of Christian antiquity.” BYU Studies 22, no. 1 (1981): 1-15.
- . “The idea of preexistence in Mormon thought.” In Line Upon Line: Essays on Mormon Doctrine, edited by Gary James Bergera, 127-44. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 1989.
- . Of God and Gods. Exploring Mormon Thought 3. Salt Lake City, UT: Greg Kofford Books, 2008.
- . “Out of nothing: A history of Creation ex nihilo in early Christian thought.” The FARMS Review 17, no. 2 (2005): 253-320.
- . The Problems of Theism and the Love of God. Exploring Mormon Thought 2. Salt Lake City, UT: Greg Kofford Books, 2006.
- . 2007. “Spiritual experiences as the basis for belief and commitment.” In Proceedings of the FAIR Conference. http://www.fairlds.org/FAIR_Conferences/2007_Spiritual_Experiences.html (accessed April 23, 2008).
- Ostler, Nicholas. 2005. Empires of the Word: A Language History of the World. New York City, NY: Harper Perennial, 2006.
- Ouaknin, Marc-Alain, and Éric Smilévitch, eds. 1983. Chapitres de Rabbi Éliézer (Pirqé de Rabbi Éliézer): Midrach sur Genèse, Exode, Nombres, Esther. Les Dix Paroles, ed. Charles Mopsik. Lagrasse, France: Éditions Verdier, 1992.
- Ouseley, Gideon Jasper Richard. 1923. The Gospel of the Holy Twelve. Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2004.
- Ouspensky, Leonid, and Vladimir Lossky. The Meaning of Icons. Crestwood, NY: St. Vladimir's Seminary Press, 1999.
- Owen, Paul L. “Narrowing the divide: How being an ‘Anglo-Catholic’ has changed my view of the LDS Church.” Element: The Journal of the Society for Mormon Philosophy and Theology 2, no. 2 (Fall 2006): 57-70.
- Pace, William B. “Autobiography of William Bryan Pace.” Typescript. Harold B. Lee Library, Brigham Young University, 1847.
- Pack, Russell T. “Quantum cosmology.” Sunstone 11, January 1987, 2-4.
- Packard, Dennis, and Sandra Packard. Feasting Upon the Word. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1981.
- Packer, Boyd K. “Building bridges of understanding: The Church and the world of Islam (Introduction of Dr. Alwi Shihab).” BYU Studies 45, no. 4 (2006): 5-8.
- . “Covenants.” Ensign 20, November 1990, 84-86.
- . “Do not fear.” Ensign 34, May 2004, 77-80.
- . “The great plan of happiness.” Presented at the Seventeenth Annual Church Educational System Religious Educators' Symposium on the Doctrine and Covenants/Church History, Brigham Young University, Provo, UT, August 10, 1993, 1-7. <http://ldscs.org/general%20authority%20talks/bkp.The%20Great%20Plan%20of%20Happiness.1993.pdf> (accessed August 24, 2008).
- . The Holy Temple. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1980.
- . “The law and the light.” In Jacob Through the Words of Mormon: To Learn with Joy, edited by Monte S. Nyman and Charles D. Tate, Jr., 1-31. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University, 1990.
- . “Let them govern themselves.” Presented at the Regional Representatives Seminar, March 30, 1990.
- . “Little Children.” Ensign 16, November 1986, 16-18.
- . “The mantle is far, far greater than the intellect.” BYU Studies 21, no. 3 (1981): 1-18.
- . “The Mediator.” Ensign 7, May 1977, 54-55.
- . The Mediator. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1978.
- . Mine Errand from the Lord: Selections from the Sermons and Writings of Boyd K. Packer. Edited by C.J. Williams. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . 1984. “The pattern of our parentage.” In Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled, 286-93. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1991.
- . “Personal revelation: The gift, the test, and the promise.” Ensign 24, November 1994, 59-62.
- . 2007. President Boyd K. Packer Interview Transcript for PBS Documentary. In Meridian, July 25, 2007. <http://www.meridianmagazine.com/churchupdate/070725packer.html> (accessed March 28, 2008).
- . “Scriptures.” Ensign 12, November 1982, 51-53.
- . “Self-reliance.” Ensign 5, August 1975, 85-89.

- . “Solving emotional problems in the Lord’s own way.” Ensign 8, May 1978, 91-95.
- . 1988. “Who is Jesus Christ?” Ensign 38, March 2008, 13-19.
- Pagels, Elaine. 1988. Adam, Eve, and the Serpent. New York City, NY: Vintage Books, 1989.
- . 1995. The Origin of Satan. New York City, NY: Vintage Books, 1996.
- Palmer, Christopher. “Vaughan Williams: Serenade to Music, Flos Campi, Five Mystical Songs, Fantasia on Christmas Carols (CD Liner).” Hyperion CDA86420, 1990.
- Palmer, Martin J. “Adam, ancient sources.” In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 1, 17-18. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Palmer, Roy. The Painful Plough: A Portrait of the Agricultural Labourer in the Nineteenth Century from Folk Songs and Ballads and Contemporary Accounts. Resources of Music 5, ed. Wilfrid Mellers and John Paynter. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 1972.
- Palmer, Spencer J., ed. The Expanding Church. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1978.
- , ed. Mormons and Muslims: Spiritual Foundations and Modern Manifestations 2nd ed. American Fork, UT: Covenant Communications, 2002.
- . “Zoroastrianism.” In Religions of the World: A Latter-day Saint View, edited by Spencer J. Palmer, Roger R. Keller, Doug Sull Choi and James A. Toronto. Revised and Enlarged ed, 146-61. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1997.
- Parkinson, Dilworth B. “We have received, and we need no more.” The FARMS Review 17, no. 1 (2005): 255-71.
- Parr, Ryan. “Missing the boat to ancient America... just plain missing the boat.” The FARMS Review 17, no. 1 (2005): 83-106.
- Parrish, Alan K. John A. Widtsoe: A Biography. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2003.
- Parrot, André. 1955. Golgotha and the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. Translated by Edwin Hudson. Studies in Biblical Archaeology 6. New York City, NY: Philosophical Library, 1957.
- Parrott, Douglas M. ed. “Eugnostos the blessed (III,3 and V,1) and the Sophia of Jesus Christ (III,4 and BG 8502,3).” In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed, 220-43. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- Parry, Donald W. “The cherubim, the flaming sword, the path, and the tree of life.” Draft manuscript in the possession of the author based on a presentation at the BYU Tree of Life Symposium, September 29, 2006. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University, 2007.
- . “Garden of Eden: Prototype sanctuary.” In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 126-51. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . “Service and temple in King Benjamin’s speech.” Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 16, no. 2 (2007): 42-47.
- . “Temple worship and a possible reference to a prayer circle in Psalm 24.” BYU Studies 32, no. 4 (1992): 57-62.
- Parry, Donald W., Jay A. Parry, and Tina M. Peterson, eds. Understanding Isaiah. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1998.
- Parry, Donald W., and Dana M. Pike, eds. LDS Perspectives on the Dead Sea Scrolls. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS) at Brigham Young University, 1997.
- Parry, Donald W., and Stephen D. Ricks. The Dead Sea Scrolls: Questions and Responses for Latter-day Saints. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS) at Brigham Young University, 2000.
- Parry, Donald W., and Emanuel Tov, eds. The Dead Sea Scrolls Reader. 6 vols. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 2005.
- Parry, Jay A., and Donald W. Parry. “The temple in heaven: Its description and significance.” In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 515-32. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- Patai, Raphael. 1978. The Hebrew Goddess. 3rd ed. Detroit, MI: Wayne State University Press, 1990.
- Paul, Erich Robert. Science, Religion, and Mormon Cosmology. Urbana and Chicago, IL: University of Illinois Press, 1992.
- Paulsen, David L. “Are Christians Mormon? Reassessing Joseph Smith’s theology in his bicentennial.” BYU Studies 45, no. 1 (2006): 35-128.
- . “Divine embodiment: The earliest Christian understanding of God.” In Early Christians in Disarray, edited by Noel B. Reynolds, 239-93. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 2005.
- . “An interview with David L. Paulsen.” BYU Studies 48, no. 2 (2009): 64-68.
- . “Response to Professor Pinnock.” In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, 515-42. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.

- Pearson, Birger A. ed. "The thought of Norea (IX,2)." In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed., 445-47. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- Pedersen, Niels A., ed. Manichaean Homilies. Corpus Fontium Manichaeorum, Series Coptica, eds. Aloïs van Tongerloo, Samuel N. C. Lieu and Johannes van Oort. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 2006.
- Peel, Malcolm L., and Jan Zandee ed. "The Teachings of Sylvanus (VII, 4)." In The Nag Hammadi Library, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed., 379-95. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- Pelikan, Jaroslav. Whose Bible Is It? A Short History of the Scriptures. New York City, NY: Penguin Group, 2005.
- Pennock, Robert T. Tower of Babel: The Evidence against the New Creationism. Cambridge, MA: Bradford, The MIT Press, 1999.
- Peretz, Jean-Claude. L'Outil et le Compagnon. Paris, France: SELD-Jean-Cyrille Godefroy, 1994.
- Perkins, PHEME. "Gnosticism and the Christian Bible." In The Canon Debate, edited by Lee Martin McDonald and James A. Sanders, 355-71. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2002.
- Perry, L. Tom. "The Gospel of Jesus Christ." Ensign 38, May 2008, 44-46.
- Peshitta Foundation, ed. Bereshith and Bereshith Rabba (Aramaic English Standard Version of Genesis): The Peshitta Foundation, 2006.
- Petermann, Julius Heinrich, ed. 1867. The Great Treasure or Great Book, Commonly Called "The Book of Adam," the Mandaean's Work of Highest Authority (Thesaurus sive Liber Magnus, vulgo "Liber Adami" appellatus, opus Mandaeorum summi ponderis) with a New Introduction by Charles Häberl. Reprint of Berlin-Leipzig [caligraphy] edition. 3 vols. Gorgias Mandaean Studies 2. Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2007.
- Peters, Edward, ed. Heresy and Authority in Medieval Europe: Documents in Translation. Philadelphia, PA: University of Pennsylvania Press, 1980. <http://books.google.com/books?id=rnggrHo-dqUC> (accessed March 24, 2009).
- Peters, Melvin K. H., ed. A New English Translation of the Septuagint and the Other Greek Translations Traditionally Included under that Title: Deuteronomy Provisional ed. NETS: New English Translation of the Septuagint, eds. Albert Pietersma and Benjamin Wright. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2004. <http://ccat.sas.upenn.edu/nets/edition/deut.pdf>.
- Petersen, Boyd Jay. Hugh Nibley: A Consecrated Life. Salt Lake City, UT: Greg Kofford Books, 2002.
- Peterson, Daniel C. Abraham Divided. Revised ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Aspen Books, 1995.
- . "Editor's Introduction: Reflections on the reactions to Rough Stone Rolling and related matters." FARMS Review 19, no. 1 (2007): xi-liv.
- . "The Gadianton robbers as guerilla warriors." In Warfare in the Book of Mormon, edited by Stephen D. Ricks and William J. Hamblin, 146-73. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990.
- . "The language of God: Understanding the Qur'an." BYU Studies 40, no. 4 (2001): 51-68.
- . "Muhammad." In The Rivers of Paradise: Moses, Buddha, Confucius, Jesus, and Muhammad as Religious Founders, edited by David Noel Freedman and Michael J. McClymond, 457-612. Grand Rapids, MI: Wm. B. Eerdmans, 2001.
- . Muhammad, Prophet of God. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 2007.
- . "Nephi and his Asherah." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 9, no. 2 (2000): 16-25.
- . "Nephi and his Asherah: A note on 1 Nephi 11:8-23." In Mormons, Scripture, and the Ancient World: Studies in Honor of John L. Sorenson, edited by Davis Bitton, 191-243. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 1998.
- . "Notes on 'Gadianton Masonry'." In Warfare in the Book of Mormon, edited by Stephen D. Ricks and William J. Hamblin, 174-224. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990.
- . "Notes on historicity and inerrancy." In Historicity and the Latter-day Saint Scriptures, edited by Paul Y. Hoskisson, 197-215. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 2001.
- . "On the motif of the weeping God in Moses 7." In Reason, Revelation, and Faith: Essays in Honor of Truman G. Madsen, edited by Donald W. Parry, Daniel C. Peterson and Stephen D. Ricks, 285-317. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2002.
- . "The Qur'anic tree of life." Presented at the BYU Tree of Life Symposium, Provo, UT, September 29, 2006.
- . "Review of Philip L. Barlow, Mormons and the Bible: The Place of the Latter-day Saints in American Religion." Review of Religious Research 34, no. 1 (1992): 78-79.
- . "'Secret combinations' revisited." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 1, no. 1 (1992): 184-88.
- . "'Ye are gods': Psalm 82 and John 10 as witnesses to the divine nature of humankind." In The Disciple as Scholar: Essays on Scripture and the Ancient World in Honor of Richard Lloyd Anderson, edited by Stephen D. Ricks, Donald W. Parry and Andrew H. Hedges, 471-594. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2000.

- Peterson, Daniel C., and Stephen D. Ricks. Offenders for a Word: How Anti-Mormons Play Word Games to Attack the Latter-day Saints. Salt Lake City, UT: Aspen Books, 1992.
- . “The throne theophany/prophetic call of Muhammad.” In The Disciple as Scholar: Essays on Scripture and the Ancient World in Honor of Richard Lloyd Anderson, edited by Stephen D. Ricks, Donald W. Parry and Andrew H. Hedges, 323-37. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2000.
- Peterson, H. Donl. The Pearl of Great Price: A History and Commentary. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1987.
- . The Story of the Book of Abraham: Mummies, Manuscripts, and Mormonism. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1995.
- Petropoulou, Maria-Zoe. Animal Sacrifice in Ancient Greek Religion, Judaism, and Christianity, 100 BC to AD 200. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2008.
- Phelps, William Wine. “Adam-ondi-Ahman.” Kirtland, OH: Latter Day Saints’ Messenger and Advocate 1:9, June, 1835, 144.
- . “The answer (25 December 1844).” Nauvoo, IL: Times and Seasons 5:24, January, 1845, 757-61.
- . “There is no end.” Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News, November 19, 1856, 2.
- Philo. b. 20 BCE. “Allegorical Interpretation, III (Legum Allegoriae, III).” In The Works of Philo: Complete and Unabridged, edited by C. D. Yonge. New Updated ed. Translated by C. D. Yonge, 50-79. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2006.
- . b. 20 BCE. “Allegorical Interpretation of Genesis (Legum Allegoriae).” In Philo, edited by F. H. Colson and G. H. Whitaker. 12 vols. Vol. 1. Translated by F. H. Colson and G. H. Whitaker. The Loeb Classical Library 226, ed. Jeffrey Henderson, 140-478. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1929.
- . “Appendix 2 — Fragments.” In The Works of Philo: Complete and Unabridged, edited by C. D. Yonge. New Updated ed. Translated by C. D. Yonge, 880-97. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2006.
- . b. 20 BCE. “On Abraham (De Abrahamo).” In The Works of Philo: Complete and Unabridged, edited by C. D. Yonge. New Updated ed. Translated by C. D. Yonge, 411-34. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2006.
- . b. 20 BCE. “On dreams, that they are God-sent (Quod a Deo Mittantur Somnia or De Somniis).” In The Works of Philo: Complete and Unabridged, edited by C. D. Yonge. New Updated ed. Translated by C. D. Yonge, 365-410. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2006.
- . b. 20 BCE. “On mating with the preliminary studies (De Congressu Quaerendae Eruditionis Gratia).” In The Works of Philo: Complete and Unabridged, edited by C. D. Yonge. New Updated ed. Translated by C. D. Yonge, 304-20. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2006.
- . b. 20 BCE. “On Rewards and Punishments (De Praemiis et Poenis).” In The Works of Philo: Complete and Unabridged, edited by C. D. Yonge, 664-81. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2006.
- . b. 20 BCE. “On the Giants (De Gigantibus).” In Philo, edited by F. H. Colson and G. H. Whitaker. 12 vols. Vol. 2. Translated by F. H. Colson and G. H. Whitaker. The Loeb Classical Library 227, ed. Jeffrey Henderson, 441-79. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1929.
- . b. 20 BCE. “On the Life of Moses, 1 (De Vita Mosis, 1).” In The Works of Philo: Complete and Unabridged, edited by C. D. Yonge. New Updated ed. Translated by C. D. Yonge, 459-90. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2006.
- . b. 20 BCE. “On the Virtues (De Virtutibus).” In Philo, edited by F. H. Colson. 12 vols. Vol. 8. Translated by F. H. Colson. The Loeb Classical Library 341, 158-305, 440-50. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1939.
- . b. 20 BCE. Philo. 12 vols. Vol. 1-6. Translated by F. H. Colson and G. H. (Vols. 1-5) Whitaker. The Loeb Classical Library 226, 227, 247, 261, 275, 289, ed. Jeffrey Henderson. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1953.
- . b. 20 BCE. Philo: Supplement 1 (Questions on Genesis). 12 vols. Vol. 11. Translated by Ralph Marcus. The Loeb Classical Library 380, ed. Jeffrey Henderson. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1953.
- . b. 20 BCE. Philo Supplement 2 (Questions on Exodus). Translated by Ralph Marcus. Edited by Ralph Marcus. The Loeb Classical Library 401, ed. Jeffrey Henderson. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1953.
- . b. 20 BCE. “The special laws, 1 (De specialibus legibus, 1).” In The Works of Philo: Complete and Unabridged, edited by C. D. Yonge. New Updated ed. Translated by C. D. Yonge, 534-67. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2006.
- . b. 20 BCE. The Works of Philo: Complete and Unabridged. Translated by C. D. Yonge. Edited by C. D. Yonge. New Updated ed. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2006.
- Piazza, Tom. 2003. “The devil gets the best lines.” In Criterion Collection Essay. <http://www.criterionco.com> (accessed October 21, 2006).
- Piccione, Michele, and Ariel Rubenstein. “Equilibrium in the jungle.” The Economic Journal 117 (July 2007): 883-86.
- “Piero della Francesca.” In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Piero_della_Francesca (accessed June 18, 2008).
- Pietersma, Albert, and Benjamin G. Wright, eds. A New English Translation of the Septuagint and the Other Greek Translations Traditionally Included Under That Title. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2007.

- Pindar. d. 443 BC. Pindari Carmina cum Fragmentis: recognouit breuique adnotatione critica instruxit C. M. Bowra. Edited by Cecil Maurice Bowra. 1st ed. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1935.
- Pinkus, Assaf. E-mail Message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, January 20, 2007.
- . “The impact of the Black Death on the sculptural programs of the pilgrimage church St. Theobald in Thann: New perception of the Genesis Story.” Assaph: Studies in Art History 6 (2001): 161-76.
- . Patrons and Narratives of the Parler School: Southwestern German Sculpture 1350-1400. Berlin, Germany: Deutscher Kunstverlag, 2008.
- . Workshops and Patrons of St. Theobald in Thann. Studien zur Kunst am Oberrhein 3, ed. Wilhelm Schlink. Münster, Germany: Waxmann, 2006.
- Pinnock, Clark H., Richard Rice, John Sanders, William Hasker, and David Basinger. The Openness of God: A Biblical Challenge to the Traditional Understanding of God. Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 1994.
- Plato. after 385 BCE. “Symposium (The Banquet).” In Great Dialogues of Plato, edited by Eric H. Warmington and Philip G. Rouse. Translated by W. H. D. Rouse, 69-117. New York City, NY: New American Library, 1956.
- Platt, Rutherford H., ed. The Forgotten Books of Eden. New York City, NY: Alpha House, 1927.
- , ed. 1927, 1930. The Lost Books of the Bible and the Forgotten Books of Eden. Berkeley, CA: Apocryphile Press, 2005.
- Plaut, W. Gunther, ed. The Torah: A Modern Commentary. New York City, NY: Union of American Hebrew Congregations, 1981.
- Pliny the Elder. 77. The Natural History of Pliny. 6 vols. Vol. 1. Translated by John Bostock and H. T. Riley. Bohn's Classical Library. London, England: George Bell and Sons, 1893. <http://books.google.com/books?id=aVMMAAAIAIAAJ&pg=PA177&dq=albio+pliny+natural+history#PPR23,M1> (accessed November 29, 2007).
- Plotinus. 250. The Six Enneads. Edited by Stephen MacKenna and Bertram Samuel Page. Great Books of the Western World 17. Chicago, IL: Encyclopedia Britannica, 1952. <http://ccat.sas.upenn.edu/jod/texts/plotinus> (accessed April 17, 2008).
- Plutarch. d. 120. Plutarch's Lives. 4 vols. Vol. 1. Translated by Aubrey Stewart and George Long. Bohn's Standard Library. London, England: George Bell and Sons, 1900. <http://books.google.com/books?id=mlcUAAAYAAJ> (accessed August 31, 2008).
- Porch of Wisdom Cultural Institution. Faith and Reason: A Compendium of Fifty Questions and Answers Related to Islamic Theology, Jurisprudence and Other Themes. Stanmore, United Kingdom: The Islamic Education Board of the World Federation of the Khoja Shia Ithna-Asheri Muslim Communities, 2006.
- Porter, Bruce H., and Stephen D. Ricks. “Names in antiquity: Old, new, and hidden.” In By Study and Also by Faith, edited by John M. Lundquist and Stephen D. Ricks. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 501-22. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990.
- Porter, Joshua Roy. 1995. The Illustrated Guide to the Bible. New York City, NY: Oxford University Press, 1998.
- Potter, George. “Bible scholarship supports Book of Mormon authorship.” In Ten More Amazing Discoveries, edited by George Potter, 121-41. Springville, UT: Cedar Fort, 2005.
- . “Finding the real Mount Sinai.” In Ten More Amazing Discoveries, edited by George Potter, 25-39. Springville, UT: Cedar Fort, 2005.
- Potter, George, and Richard Wellington. Lehi in the Wilderness. Springville, UT: Cedar Fort, 2003.
- Potter, R. Dennis. “What does God write in his Franklin Planner? The paradoxes of providence, prophecy, and petitionary prayer.” Dialogue 37, no. 3 (Fall 2004): 49-64.
- Poulter, Mary D. “Doctrines of faith and hope found in Emma Smith's 1835 hymnbook.” BYU Studies 37, no. 2 (1997-1998): 33-56.
- Pratt, Orson. 1852. “Celestial marriage (A discourse delivered by Elder Orson Pratt, in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, August 29, 1852).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 1, 53-66. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . “The Seer.” 1853-1854. Reprint, Orem, UT: Grandin Book Company, 1994.
- . 1854. “Consecration (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 10 September 1854).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 2, 96-104. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1855. “The Holy Spirit and the Godhead (Discourse delivered in the open air, on the Temple Block, Great Salt Lake City, 18 February 1855).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 2, 334-47. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1873. “Consecration; temporal equality; selfishness to be overcome; resurrection; return to Jackson County; glory of Zion (Discourse delivered in the 16th Ward assembly rooms, Salt Lake City, Sunday Afternoon, 9 March 1873).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 15, 354-66. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.

- . 1873. "Meeting of Adam with his posterity in the valley of Adam-on-di-Ahman; location of the valley; the covenant with Enoch; records of God's dealings with men from the period of the Creation; method of preserving the records of ancient prophets; Christ's advent among the Nephites; fulfillment of God's purposes and the fulness of times (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Ogden, Sunday Morning, 18 May 1873)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 16, 47-59. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1877. "Discourse delivered in the Eighteenth Ward Meetinghouse, Salt Lake City, Sunday Afternoon, 25 February 1877." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 18, 335-48. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1879. "Exhortation from Isaiah; the Saints obeying it; glimpse at the settlement of Utah; fulfilling ancient prophecies; Jackson County, Missouri; the destination of the Saints; the temple to be built there; New Jerusalem; how it will be preserved from decay; its description; the wicked powerless to prevent the Saints from fulfilling their destiny (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, October 26, 1879)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 24, 20-32. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1879. "Preexistence, in spiritual form, of man, the lower animals and the earth; the temporal probationary state; the Millennium; the final change (Discourse delivered at Mount Pleasant, 12 November 1879)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 21, 197-206. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1880. "Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday Afternoon, 18 July 1880." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 21, 286-96. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- Pratt, Parley P. "The apocryphal book of Enoch." Millennial Star 1 (July 1840): 61-63.
- . 1853. "Spiritual communication (Oration delivered on the Northeast cornerstone of the Temple at Great Salt Lake City, after the Twelve Apostles, the First Presidency of the Seventies, and the Presidency of the Elders' Quorum had laid the stone, 6 April 1853)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 2, 43-47. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1853. "Heirship and priesthood (10 April 1853)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 1, 256-63. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1855. "Key to the Science of Theology." In Key to the Science of Theology, A Voice of Warning, vii-114. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1978.
- Prévost, Antoine-François. Histoire Generale des Voyages ou Nouvelle Collections de Toutes les Relations de Voyages par Mer et par Terre. 20 vols. Paris, France: Didot, 1746-1789.
- Price, Robert M., ed. The Pre-Nicene New Testament: Fifty-Four Formative Texts. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 2006.
- Priest, J. ed. "Testament of Moses." In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 919-34. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Prince, Gregory A., and William Robert Wright. David O. McKay and the Rise of Modern Mormonism. Salt Lake City, UT: University of Utah Press, 2005.
- Pritchard, James B., ed. 1969. Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament. 3rd with Supplement ed. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1972.
- , ed. "The God and his unknown name of power." In Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament, edited by James B. Pritchard, 12-14. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1972.
- , ed. "The Tale of Two Brothers." In Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament, edited by James B. Pritchard, 23-25. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1972.
- Pritchett, Bruce M., Jr. "Lehi's theology of the fall in its preexilic/exilic context." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 3, no. 2 (1994): 49-83.
- "Program Notes for The Carnegie Hall National High School Choral Festival, March 14, 2006." In Carnegie Hall Presents. http://www.carnegiehall.org/article/box_office/events/evt_5970_pn.html?selecteddate=03142006 (accessed March 28, 2008).
- Propp, William H. C. "Symbolic wounds: Applying anthropology to the Bible." In Le-David Maskil: A Birthday Tribute for David Noel Freedman, edited by Richard Elliott Friedman and William H. C. Propp. Biblical and Judaic Studies from the University of California San Diego 9, 17-24. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 2004.
- Prothero, Stephen. Religious Literacy: What Every American Needs to Know—and Doesn't. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 2007.
- Psellus, Michael. d. ca. 1078. Psellus' Dialogue on the Operation of Daemons. Translated by Marcus Collisson. Sydney, Australia: J. Tegg, 1843. <http://www.esotericarchives.com/psellos/daemonibus.pdf> (accessed March 19, 2009).

- Pseudo-Clement. "The Clementine Homilies." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 8, 223-346. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1886. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- . ca. 235-258. "Recognitions of Clement." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 8, 77-211. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1886. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Pseudo-Dionysius. ca. 500. "The Celestial Hierarchy." In Pseudo-Dionysius: The Complete Works, edited by René Roques, Jaroslav Pelikan, Jean Leclercq and Karlfried Froehlich. Translated by Colm Luibheld and Paul Rorem. Classics of Western Spirituality, 143-91. Mahwah, NJ: The Paulist Press, 1987.
- Pseudo-Matthew. "The Gospel of Pseudo-Matthew." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 8, 368-83. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1886. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Ptolemy, Claudius. ca. 147-170. Geography of Claudius Ptolemy. Translated by Edward Luther Stevenson. New York City, NY: The New York Public Library, 1932. Reprint, New York City, NY: Dover Publications, 1991. http://penelope.uchicago.edu/Thayer/E/Gazetteer/Periods/Roman/_Texts/Ptolemy/home.html (accessed November 29, 2007).
- "Public expresses mixed views of Islam, Mormonism." In The Pew Research Center for the People and the Press. <http://people-press.org/reports/display.php3?ReportID=358> (accessed April 27, 2008).
- Pulsipher, John. "Autobiography." Typescript. Provo, UT: Perry Special Collections, Lee Library, Brigham Young University, n.d.
- Purvis, James D. The Samaritan Pentateuch and the Origin of the Samaritan Sect. Harvard Semitic Monographs 2, ed. Frank Moore Cross, William L. Moran and G. Ernest Wright. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1968.
- Pusey, Merlo J. Builders of the Kingdom: George A. Smith, John Henry Smith, George Albert Smith. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1981.
- Pyramid Texts Online*. <http://www.pyramidtextsonline.com> (accessed October 3, 2008).
- Qa'im, Mahdi Muntazir, ed. Jesus through the Qur'an and Shi'ite Narrations. Elmhurst, NY: Takike Tarsile Qur'an, 2005.
- Quesnel, Michel. "Naissance du petit prince." In Le Petit Prince, 5-25. Paris, France: Éditions Gallimard, 1993.
- Quinn, D. Michael. "Latter-day Saint Prayer Circles." BYU Studies 19, no. 1 (1978): 79-105.
- Quodvultdeus. d. ca. 450. Promesse e predizioni di Dio. Rome, Italy: Città Nuova, 1989.
- . d. ca. 450. Quodvultdeus of Carthage: The Creedal Homilies. Translated by Thomas Macy Finn. Ancient Christian Writers 60. Mahwah, NJ: Paulist Press, 2004.
- Qutb, Sayyid. 1954-1964. In the Shade of the Qur'an. 18 vols. Translated by Adil Salahi. Markfield, England: The Islamic Foundation, 2005.
- Rahmani, Ignatius Ephraem, II, ed. ca. 350. Testamentum Domini Nostri Jesu Christi. Mainz, Germany: Franz Kirchheim, 1899. Reprint, Hildesheim, Germany: Georg Olms, 1968.
- "Ralph Vaughan Williams." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ralph_Vaughan_Williams (accessed March 28, 2008).
- Ramban. ca. 1250. Commentary of the Torah. 5 vols. Edited by Charles Chavel. Brooklyn, NY: Judaica Press, 1974.
- Rashi. c. 1105. The Torah with Rashi's Commentary Translated, Annotated, and Elucidated. Vol. 1: Beresheis/Genesis. Translated by Rabbi Yisrael Isser Zvi Herczeg. ArtScroll Series, Sapirstein Edition. Brooklyn, NY: Mesorah Publications, 1995.
- Rashi. c. 1105. The Torah with Rashi's Commentary Translated, Annotated, and Elucidated. Vol. 2: Shemos/Exodus. Translated by Rabbi Yisrael Isser Zvi Herczeg. ArtScroll Series, Sapirstein Edition. Brooklyn, NY: Mesorah Publications, 1994.
- Rasmussen, Dennis. The Lord's Question. Provo, UT: Keter Foundation, 1985.
- Rasmussen, Ellis T. A Latter-day Saint Commentary on the Old Testament. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1993.
- Reardon, Patrick Henry. Creation and the Patriarchal Histories: Orthodox Christian Reflections on the Book of Genesis. Ben Lomond, CA: Conciliar Press Ministries, 2008.
- Reddy, Michael. "The conduit metaphor: A case of frame conflict in our language about language." In Metaphor and Thought, edited by A. Ortony. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1979.
- Reed, Annette Yoshiko. Fallen Angels and the History of Judaism and Christianity: The Reception of Enochic Literature. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2005.
- Rees, James. Shakespeare and the Bible. Philadelphia, PA: Claxton, Remsen, and Haffelfinger, 1876. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, n.d.
- Reeves, John C., ed. 'Ajā'ib al-makhlūqāt wa-gharā'ib al-mawjūdāt: Harut wa-Marut exemplar 2. Religious Studies, The University of North Carolina at Charlotte, n.d. <http://www.religiousstudies.uncc.edu/jcreeves/harutwamarut2.htm> (accessed September 6, 2007).

- . n.d. "Eutychii Patriarchae Alexandrini Annales." In Religious Studies, The University of North Carolina at Charlotte. <http://www.religiousstudies.uncc.edu/jcreeves/eutychiusongen6,14.htm> (accessed September 6, 2007).
- . "The flowing stream: Qur'anic interpretations and the Bible." Religious Studies News: SBL Edition 2, no. 9 (December 2001). <http://www.sbl-site.org/Article.aspx?ArticleId=58> (accessed September 6, 2007).
- . Heralds of that Good Realm: Syro-Mesopotamian Gnosis and Jewish Traditions. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 41, ed. James M. Robinson and Hans-Joachim Klimkeit. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- . Jewish Lore in Manichaean Cosmogony: Studies in the Book of Giants Traditions. Monographs of the Hebrew Union College 14. Cincinnati, OH: Hebrew Union College Press, 1992.
- . "Jewish pseudepigrapha in Manichaean literature: The influence of the Enochic library." In Tracing the Threads: Studies in the Vitality of Jewish Pseudepigrapha, edited by John C. Reeves, 173-203. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1994.
- . n.d. "The Manichaean version of Genesis 2-4." In Religious Studies, The University of North Carolina at Charlotte. http://www.religiousstudies.uncc.edu/jcreeves/manichaean_version_of_genesis_2-4.htm (accessed November 14, 2008).
- . n.d. "Midrash of Shemhazai and Azazel." In Religious Studies, The University of North Carolina at Charlotte. http://www.religiousstudies.uncc.edu/jcreeves/bereshit_rabbati_29-31.htm (accessed September 6, 2007).
- . n.d. "Midrash Wa-Yosha." In Religious Studies, The University of North Carolina at Charlotte. http://www.religiousstudies.uncc.edu/jcreeves/bereshit_rabbati_29-31.htm (accessed September 6, 2007).
- . n.d. "Tarikh al-Yaqubi." In Religious Studies, The University of North Carolina at Charlotte. <http://www.religiousstudies.uncc.edu/jcreeves/yaqubionbible.htm> (accessed September 6, 2007).
- . Trajectories in Near Eastern Apocalyptic: A Postbiblical Jewish Apocalypse Reader. Resources for Biblical Study 45, ed. Susan Ackerman and J. Ross Wagner. Atlanta, GA: Society of Biblical Literature, 2005.
- "Respect for diversity of faiths." In Newsroom: The Official Resource for News Media, Opinion Leaders, and the Public, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. <http://newsroom.lds.org/ldsnewsroom/eng/commentary/respect-for-diversity-of-faiths> (accessed April 27, 2008).
- "Return to Nauvoo, expanded liner notes and lyrics to the hymns." In FiddleSticks: Celtic and American Folk Music. http://www.fiddle-sticks.com/Liner_Nauvoo.htm (accessed March 28, 2008).
- "Reverence for the Bible." In Newsroom: The Official Resource for News Media, Opinion Leaders, and the Public, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. <http://newsroom.lds.org/ldsnewsroom/eng/commentary/reverence-for-the-bible> (accessed February 5, 2008).
- Revillout, E. ed. 1904. "Évangile des douze apôtres." In Les Apogryphes Coptes, Première Partie: Les Évangiles des Douze Apôtres et de Saint Barthélemy. Translated by E. Revillout. Patrologia Orientalis 2, fasc. 2, no. 7, eds. René Graffin and François Nau, 131-84. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 1985. <http://coptica.ch/revillout-1.pdf> (accessed April 17, 2009).
- Rey, Alain. Dictionnaire Historique de la Langue Française. 2 vols. 3ième ed. Paris, France: Dictionnaires Le Robert, 2000.
- Reynolds, Noel B. "The decline of covenant in early Christian thought." In Early Christians in Disarray, edited by Noel B. Reynolds, 295-324. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 2005.
- . "Nephite kingship reconsidered." In Mormons, Scripture, and the Ancient World: Studies in Honor of John L. Sorenson, edited by Davis Bitton, 151-89. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 1998.
- . "Preface." In Expressions of Faith: Testimonies of Latter-day Saint Scholars, edited by Susan Easton Black, ix-xiv. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1996.
- Rhodes, Michael D, ed. The Hor Book of Breathings: A Translation and Commentary. Studies in the Book of Abraham 2, ed. John Gee. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, Brigham Young University, 2002.
- . 1994. "The Joseph Smith Hypocephalus... Twenty years later." In Brigham Young University Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS). <http://home.comcast.net/~michael.rhodes/JosephSmithHypocephalus.pdf> (accessed September 6, 2007).
- . "A translation and commentary of the Joseph Smith hypocephalus." BYU Studies 17, no. 3 (1977): 259-74.
- , ed. The Tshemmin Book of the Dead: A Translation and Commentary. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), in preparation.
- Rhodes, Michael D., and J. Ward Moody. "Astronomy and the Creation in the Book of Abraham." In Astronomy, Papyrus, and Covenant, edited by John Gee and Brian M. Hauglid. Studies in the Book of Abraham 3, 17-36. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), Brigham Young University, 2005.
- Ri, Andreas Su-Min, ed. La Caverne des Trésors: Les deux recensions syriaques. 2 vols. Corpus Scriptorum Christianorum Orientalium 486-487 (Scriptores Syri 207-208). Louvain, Belgium: Peeters, 1987.

- . Commentaire de la Caverne des Trésors: Étude sur l'Histoire du Texte et de ses Sources. Supplementary 103. Corpus Scriptorum Christianorum Orientalium 581. Leuven, Belgium: Peeters, 2000.
- Richards, J. Kirk. 2006. "Bio." In The Fine Art of J. Kirk Richards. <http://art.jkirkrichards.com/bio.php> (accessed October 1, 2006).
- Richards, LeGrand. 1950. A Marvelous Work and a Wonder. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1976.
- Ricoeur, Paul. 1976. "Toward a hermeneutic of the idea of revelation." In Essays on Biblical Interpretation, edited by Lewis S. Mudge. Translated by David Pellauer, 73-118. Philadelphia, PA: Fortress, 1980.
- Richter, Siegfried, ed. The Manichaean Coptic Papyri in the Chester Beatty Library Psalm Book Part II, 2, Die Herakleides-Psalmen. Corpus Fontium Manichaeorum, Series Coptica, eds. Alois van Tongerloo, Samuel N. C. Lieu and Johannes van Oort. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 1999.
- Ricks, Brian W. "James E. Talmage and the Nature of the Godhead: The Gradual Unfolding of Latter-day Saint Theology." Master's Thesis, Brigham Young University, 2007.
- Ricks, Shirley S. "A sure foundation." The FARMS Review 20, no. 2 (2008): 253-91.
- Ricks, Stephen D. "Adam's fall in the Book of Mormon, second temple Judaism, and early Christianity." In The Disciple as Scholar: Essays on Scripture and the Ancient World in Honor of Richard Lloyd Anderson, edited by Stephen D. Ricks, Donald W. Parry and Andrew H. Hedges, 595-606. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2000.
- . "Ancient views of creation and the doctrine of creation ex nihilo." In Reason, Revelation, and Faith: Essays in Honor of Truman G. Madsen, edited by Donald W. Parry, Daniel C. Peterson and Stephen D. Ricks, 319-37. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2002.
- . "Dexiosis and Dextrarum Iunctio: The sacred handclasp in the classical and early Christian world." The FARMS Review 18, no. 1 (2006): 431-36.
- . "The garment of Adam in Jewish, Muslim, and Christian tradition." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 705-39. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . "Liturgy and cosmogony: The ritual use of creation accounts in the ancient Near East." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 118-25. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . "Oaths and oath-taking in the Old Testament." In The Temple in Time and Eternity, edited by Donald W. Parry and Stephen D. Ricks, 43-53. Provo, UT: FARMS at Brigham Young University, 1999.
- . "Olive culture in the second temple era and early rabbinic period." In The Allegory of the Olive Tree, edited by Stephen D. Ricks and John W. Welch, 460-76. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . "The prophetic reality of tribal reconstruction." In Israel's Apostasy and Restoration: Essays in Honor of Roland K. Harrison, edited by Avraham Gileadi, 273-81. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Book House, 1988.
- Ricks, Stephen D., and John J. Sroka. "King, coronation, and temple: Enthronement ceremonies in history." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 236-71. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- Ridderbos, Herman N. The Gospel According to John: A Theological Commentary. Translated by John Vriend. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1997.
- Riddle, Chauncey C. "Devils." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 1, 379-82. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992.
- . "The New and Everlasting Covenant." In Doctrines for Exaltation: The 1989 Sperry Symposium on the Doctrine and Covenants, 224-45. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989.
- Riddle, Donald W. "The Cephas-Peter problem, and a possible solution." Journal of Biblical Literature 59 (1940): 169-80.
- Riesenfeld, Harald. The Resurrection in Ezekiel XXXVII and in the Dura Europos Paintings. Uppsala Universitets Arsskrift 11. Uppsala, Sweden: Almqvist and Wiksells, 1948.
- Rigdon, Sidney. 1836. "Dedication of the Kirtland Temple, Sidney Rigdon's Sermon (27 March 1836)." In History of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Documentary History), edited by Joseph Smith, Jr. and Brigham Henry Roberts. Vol. 2, 418-19. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1978.
- Righter, Anne. "Introduction." In The Tempest, edited by Anne Righter. New Penguin Shakespeare, eds. T. J. B. Spencer and Stanley Wells, 7-51. London, England: Penguin, 1968.
- Rikala, Mia. "Sacred Marriage in the New Kingdom of ancient Egypt: Circumstantial evidence for a ritual interpretation." In Sacred Marriages, edited by Martti Nissinen and Risto Uro, 115-44. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 2008.
- Rippin, Andrew, and Jan Knappert, eds. 1986. Textual Sources for the Study of Islam. Chicago, IL: The University of Chicago Press, 1990.
- Rivkin, Ellis. 1984. What Crucified Jesus? Messianism, Pharisaism, and the Development of Christianity. New York, NY: UAHC Press, 1997.

- Rje, Mkhas Grub. 1968. Introduction to the Buddhist Tantric Systems. Translated by F. D. Lessing and Alexander Wayman. 2nd ed. New York City, NY: Samuel Weiser, 1980.
- Roberts, Alexander, and James Donaldson, eds. The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325). 10 vols. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885-1886. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- , eds. "Constitutions of the holy Apostles." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 7, 387-508. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1886. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- , eds. "The Gospel of the Nativity of Mary." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 8, 384-87. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1886. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Roberts, Alison. Golden Shrine, Goddess Queen: Egypt's Anointing Mysteries. Rottingdean, England: NorthGate, 2008.
- . My Heart My Mother: Death and Rebirth in Ancient Egypt. Rottingdean, England: NorthGate, 2000.
- Roberts, Brigham Henry. Comprehensive History of the Church. 6 vols. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News Press, 1930. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1965.
- . 1892. "Comprehensiveness of the Gospel (Lecture delivered by Elder B. H. Roberts, at the General Conference of the Y.M.M.I.A., in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, June 5, 1892)." In Collected Discourses, edited by Brian H. Stuy. 5 vols. Vol. 3, 64-71. Woodland Hills, UT: B.H.S. Publishing, 1989.
- . Defense of the Faith and the Saints. 2 vols. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News, 1907, 1912. Reprint, Brigham City, UT: Brigham Distributing, 2002.
- . "Discourse (8 April 1911)." In Conference Reports: Eighty-First Annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 56-60. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News, 1911. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Hawkes Publishing, n. d.
- . Divine Mission of the Savior: Course of Study for the Quorum of the Priesthood—Priests. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1910.
- . 1886. "God must and will be glorified (Address delivered by Elder B.H. Roberts, at the Pioneer Day Celebration, July 24, 1886)." In Collected Discourses, edited by Brian H. Stuy. 5 vols. Vol. 1, 17-19. Woodland Hills, UT: B.H.S. Publishing, 1987.
- . The Seventy's Course in Theology, First Year Book. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1907.
- . The Seventy's Course in Theology, Fifth Year. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News Press, 1912.
- . The Seventy's Course in Theology (Being the Reprint of the First Year Book of that 'Course'). 2nd ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1931.
- . 1896. "The spirit of the Gospel (Discourse delivered by Elder B.H. Roberts, at the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, April 26, 1896)." In Collected Discourses, edited by Brian H. Stuy. 5 vols. Vol. 5, 134-41. Woodland Hills, UT: B.H.S. Publishing, 1992.
- . 1928. The Truth, the Way, the Life: An Elementary Treatise on Theology, ed. John W. Welch. Provo, UT: BYU Studies, 1994.
- Roberts, J. M., ed. The Bible and the Ancient Near East: Collected Essays. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 2002.
- Robertson, John S. "Adamic language." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 1, 18-19. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Robertson, Noel. "Orphic mysteries and Dionysiac ritual." In Greek Mysteries: The Archaeology and Ritual of Ancient Greek Secret Cults, edited by Michael B. Cosmopoulos, 218-40. New York City, NY: Routledge, 2003.
- Robinson, James M., ed. The Coptic Gnostic Library: A Complete Edition of the Nag Hammadi Codices. 5 vols. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill Academic, 2000.
- . "The Manichaean codices of Medinat Madi (Terenouthis)." Presented at the Twenty-eighth International Congress of Byzantine Studies, Moscow, Russia 1991, 950-51. http://www.tertullian.org/rprowse/manuscripts/medinet_madu.htm (accessed November 20, 2007).
- , ed. 1978. The Nag Hammadi Library in English 3rd, Completely Revised ed. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- Robinson, Joseph Lee, Oliver Preston Robinson, Mary Robinson Egan, David Nielsen, Joni Nielsen, and Kevin Merrell. 2003. "The Journal of Joseph Lee Robinson: Mormon Pioneer (1886)." In Planet Nielsen. http://www.planetnielsen.com/joseph_lee_robinson/jlr_basic_journal.pdf (accessed September 6, 2007).
- Robinson, Stephen E. "The Apocalypse of Adam." BYU Studies 17, no. 2 (Winter 1977): 1-28.
- . Believing Christ. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1992.

- . “The Book of Adam in Judaism and early Christianity.” In The Man Adam, edited by Joseph Fielding McConkie and Robert L. Millet, 131-50. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1990.
- . “Jesus Christ, names and titles of.” In The Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 2, 740-42. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- . “Lying for God: The uses of the Apocrypha.” In Apocryphal Writings and the Latter-day Saints, edited by C. Wilfred Griggs, 133-54. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 1986.
- . Are Mormons Christians? Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1991.
- , ed. “Testament of Adam.” In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 1, 989-95. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- , ed. 1978. The Testament of Adam: An Examination of the Syriac and Greek Traditions. Dissertation Series 52, ed. Howard C. Kee and Douglas A. Knight. Chico, CA: Scholars Press, 1982.
- Robinson, Stephen E., and H. Dean Garrett, eds. A Commentary on the Doctrine and Covenants. 4 vols. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2001-2005.
- Robison, Elwin C. The First Mormon Temple: Design, Construction, and Historic Context of the Kirtland Temple. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1997.
- Robison, John C. “Crucifixion in the Roman world: The use of nails at the time of Christ.” Studia Antiqua 2, no. 1 (Winter 2002): 25-53.
- Robson, Kent E. “Response to Professor Dorrien.” In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, 410-19. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.
- . “Time and eternity.” In The Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 4, 1478-79. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Römer, Cornelia Eva, ed. Manis frühe Missionreisen nach der Kölner Manibibliographie: Textkritischer Kommentar und Erläuterungen zu p. 121-p. 192 des Kölner Mani-Kodex. Papyrologica Coloniensia 24. Opladen, Germany: Westdeutscher Verlag, 1994.
- Romney, Marion G. “Assurance of blessings.” Conference Report, October 1949, 39-45.
- . 1984. “The celestial nature of self-reliance.” Ensign 39, March 2009, 61-65.
- . “The covenant of the priesthood.” Ensign 2, July 1972, 98-99.
- . “Living welfare principles.” Ensign 11, November 1981, 92-93.
- . “The oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood.” Conference Report, April 1962, 16-20.
- . 1970. “Temples—the gates to heaven.” In Look to God and Live, 229-40. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1971.
- . “Welfare services.” Ensign 5, November 1975, 124-27.
- Rona, Daniel. Israel Revealed: Discovering Mormon and Jewish Insights in the Holy Land. Sandy, UT: The Ensign Foundation, 2001.
- Roper, Matthew. 2006. “Adam in ancient texts and the restoration.” In Proceedings of the FAIR Conference. http://www.fairlds.org/FAIR_Conferences/2006_Adam_in_Ancient_Texts_and_the_Restoration.html (accessed September 19, 2006).
- Rosenbaum, Jonathan. 1985. “Judaism: Torah and tradition.” In The Holy Book in Comparative Perspective, edited by Frederick M. Denny and Rodney L. Taylor, 10-35. Columbia, SC: University of South Carolina Press, 1993.
- Rosenberg, A. J., ed. Mikraot Gedoloth: Genesis and Exodus. 5 vols. Brooklyn, NY: The Judaica Press, 1993.
- Rosenblum, Robert. Paintings in the Musée d'Orsay. New York City, NY: Stewart, Tabori, and Chang, 1989.
- Rosewell, Roger. Medieval Wall Paintings. Woodbridge, England: The Boydell Press, 2008.
- Rousseau, Jean-Jacques. 1754. “Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality Among Men (Second Discourse).” In The First and Second Discourses and the Essay on the Origin of Languages, edited by Victor Gourevitch, 117-230. New York City, NY: Harper and Row, 1986.
- Rowland, Christopher. “Blake and the Bible: Biblical exegesis in the work of William Blake.” In Biblical Interpretation: The Meanings of Scripture—Past and Present, edited by John M. Court, 168-84. London, England: T. & T. Clark, 2004.
- Roy, Christelle. “L'univers était liquide.” Les Dossiers de la Recherche, no. 23 (mai-juin 2006): 32-38.
- Rubinkiewicz, R. ed. “Apocalypse of Abraham.” In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 1, 681-705. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.

- Rudolph, Kurt, ed. Der mandäische 'Diwan der Flüsse'. Abhandlungen der Sächsischen Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Leipzig, Philologisch-historische Klasse 70/1. Berlin, Germany: Akademie-Verlag, 1982.
- . 1980. Gnosis: The Nature and History of Gnosticism. Translated by Robert McLachlan Wilson, P. W. Coxon and K. H. Kuhn. 2nd ed. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1987.
- . “Part 2: Mandaean [sic] Sources.” Coptic and Mandaic Sources, edited by Werner Foerster, in Gnosis: A Selection of Gnostic Texts 2, 121-319. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1974.
- Ruhlen, Merritt. On the Origin of Languages: Studies in Linguistic Taxonomy. Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press, 1994.
- Ruse, Michael. The Evolution-Creation Struggle. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2005.
- Russell, James R. 1995. “Ezekiel and Iran.” In Armenian and Iranian Studies, edited by James R. Russell. Harvard Armenian Texts and Studies 9, 899-907. Cambridge, MA: Department of Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations, Harvard University Press and the Armenian Heritage Press, National Association for Armenian Studies and Research, 2004.
- . 1995. “On Mithraism and Freemasonry.” In Armenian and Iranian Studies, edited by James R. Russell. Harvard Armenian Texts and Studies 9, 641-59. Cambridge, MA: Department of Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations, Harvard University Press and the Armenian Heritage Press, National Association for Armenian Studies and Research, 2004.
- . 1980. “The word k'ustik in Armenian.” In Armenian and Iranian Studies, edited by James R. Russell. Harvard Armenian Texts and Studies 9, 107-14. Cambridge, MA: Department of Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations, Harvard University Press and the Armenian Heritage Press, National Association for Armenian Studies and Research, 2004.
- Russell, Norman. The Doctrine of Deification in the Greek Patristic Tradition. Oxford Early Christian Studies, eds. Gillian Clark and Andrew Louth. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2004.
- “Russian Orthodox Church Outside Russia.” In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Russian_Orthodox_Church_Outside_Russia (accessed June 9, 2008).
- Ruzer, Serge. “The Cave of Treasures on swearing by Abel's blood and expulsion from Paradise: Two exegetical motives in context.” Journal of Early Christian Studies 9, no. 2 (Summer 2001): 257-77.
- . “A long way from the Cave of Treasures to Jerusalem: Pilgrimage or exile?” In Semiotics of Pilgrimage, edited by W. Moskovich and S. Schwarzband, 19-26. Jerusalem, Israel, 2003.
- . “Reflections of Genesis 1-2 in the old Syriac Gospels.” In The Book of Genesis in Jewish and Oriental Christian Interpretation, edited by Judith Frishman and Lucas Van Rompay. Traditio Exegetica Graeca 5, 91-102. Louvain, Belgium: Editions Peeters, 1997.
- Ryan, Robert. 2003. “Blake and religion.” In The Cambridge Companion to William Blake, edited by Morris Eaves, 150-68. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2006.
- Ryen, Jon Olav. The Tree in the Lightworld: A Study in the Mandaean Vine Motif. Oslo, Norway: Unipub/Oslo Academic Press (Faculty of Humanities, University of Oslo), 2006.
- “Sacred books of the East.” In Internet Sacred Text Archive. <http://www.sacred-texts.com/sbe/> (accessed October 3, 2008).
- Sailhamer, John H. “Genesis.” In The Expositor's Bible Commentary, edited by Frank E. Gaebelein, 1-284. Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan, 1990.
- Saint Exupéry, Antoine de. 1948. Citadelle. Paris, France: Éditions Gallimard, 1958.
- . Dessins. Paris, France: Gallimard, 2006.
- . 1943. The Little Prince. London, England: Penguin Books, 1995.
- . 1939. Terre des Hommes. Paris, France: Éditions Gallimard, 2006.
- Salisbury, Frank B. The Case for Divine Design: Cells, Complexity, and Creation. Springville, UT: Cedar Fort (CFI), 2006.
- . The Creation. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1976.
- Sallustius, Platonis. ca. 363. Sallustius: Concerning the Gods and the Universe. Edited by Arthur Darby Nock. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 1926. <http://www.geocities.com/SoHo/2923/sallustius1.html> (accessed April 17, 2008).
- Salt Lake School of the Prophets Minute Book*. 1883. Reprint, Palm Desert, CA: ULC Press, 1981.
- Samuelson, Norbert M. 1984. “Medieval Jewish philosophy.” In Back to the Sources: Reading the Classic Jewish Texts, edited by Barry W. Holtz, 263-303. New York City, NY: Simon and Schuster, 2006.
- Sanders, E. P. ed. “Testament of Abraham.” In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 1, 871-902. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.

- Sandmel, Samuel. "An appreciation." In Religions in Antiquity: Essays in Memory of Erwin Ramsdell Goodenough, edited by Jacob Neusner. Religions in Antiquity, Studies in the History of Religions (Supplements to Numen) 14, 3-17. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1968.
- Sandmel, Samuel, M. Jack Suggs, and Arnold J. Tkacik, eds. "Ecclesiasticus or The Wisdom of Jesus Son of Sirach." In The New English Bible with the Apocrypha, Oxford Study Edition, edited by Samuel Sandmel, M. Jack Suggs and Arnold J. Tkacik, 115-75. New York City, NY: Oxford University Press, 1976.
- , eds. "The First Book of the Maccabees." In The New English Bible with the Apocrypha, Oxford Study Edition, edited by Samuel Sandmel, M. Jack Suggs and Arnold J. Tkacik, 195-231. New York City, NY: Oxford University Press, 1976.
- , eds. The New English Bible with the Apocrypha, Oxford Study Edition. New York: Oxford University Press, 1976.
- , eds. "The Second Book of the Maccabees." In The New English Bible with the Apocrypha, Oxford Study Edition, edited by Samuel Sandmel, M. Jack Suggs and Arnold J. Tkacik, 232-57. New York City, NY: Oxford University Press, 1976.
- , eds. "The Wisdom of Solomon." In The New English Bible with the Apocrypha, Oxford Study Edition, edited by Samuel Sandmel, M. Jack Suggs and Arnold J. Tkacik, 97-114. New York City, NY: Oxford University Press, 1976.
- Santillana, Giorgio de, and Hertha von Dechend. 1969. Hamlet's Mill: An Essay on Myth and the Frame of Time. Boston, MA: David R. Godine, 1977.
- Sarna, Nahum M., ed. Exodus. The JPS Torah Commentary, ed. Nahum M. Sarna. Philadelphia, PA: The Jewish Publication Society, 1991.
- , ed. Genesis. The JPS Torah Commentary, ed. Nahum M. Sarna. Philadelphia, PA: The Jewish Publication Society, 1989.
- . "The mists of time." In Genesis: World of Myths and Patriarchs, edited by Ada Feyerick, 49-82. New York City, NY: New York University Press, 1996.
- Satran, David, and Benjamin E. Wright. "Martyrological traditions." In The Apocryphal Ezekiel, edited by Michael E. Stone, Benjamin E. Wright and David Satran. Early Judaism and Its Literature 18, ed. John C. Reeves, 95-100. Atlanta, GA: Society of Biblical Literature, 2000.
- Satterfield, Bruce. "Melchizedek, LDS sources." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. Vol. 2, 879-80. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Savedow, Steve, ed. Sepher Reziel Hemelach: The Book of the Angel Reziel. Boston, MA: WeiserBooks, 2000.
- Schäfer, Peter. Jesus in the Talmud. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2007.
- . "Wisdom finds a home: Torah as Wisdom." In Light in a Spotless Mirror: Reflections on Wisdom Traditions in Judaism and Early Christianity, edited by James H. Charlesworth and Michael A. Daise, 26-44. Harrisburg, PA: Trinity Press International, 2003.
- Schaff, Philip, ed. Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, First Series. 14 vols. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1886-1890. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Schaff, Philip, and Henry Wace, eds. Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series. 14 vols. New York City, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1890-1900. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- Schakel, Peter J. Reason and Imagination in C. S. Lewis: A Study of 'Till We Have Faces'. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1984.
- Schaya, Léo. 1958. The Universal Meaning of the Kabbalah (L'homme et l'absolu selon la Kabbale). Translated by Nancy Pearson. Baltimore, MD: Penguin Books, 1974.
- Schenck, Kenneth L. Understanding the Book of Hebrews: The Story Behind the Sermon. Louisville, KY: Westminster John Knox Press, 2003.
- Scherer, Mark A. "Through the mists of time." Community of Christ Herald 148, October 2001, 8.
- Schiff, Stacy. 1994. Saint-Exupéry: A Biography. New York City, NY: Da Capo Press, 1996.
- Schimmel, Annemarie. 1981. And Muhammad Is His Messenger: The Veneration of the Prophet in Islamic Piety. English ed. Studies in Religion, ed. Charles H. Long. Chapel Hill, NC: The University of North Carolina Press, 1985.
- . Mystical Dimensions of Islam. Chapel Hill, NC: The University of North Carolina Press, 1975.
- Schmidt, Carl, ed. 1892. The Books of Jeu and the Untitled Text in the Bruce Codex. Translated by Violet MacDermot. Nag Hammadi Studies 13, ed. Martin Krause, James M. Robinson and Frederik Wisse. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1978. <http://www.gnosis.org/library/1ieo.htm> (1 Jeu 1-10), <http://fam-faerch.dk/pseudigrapher/gnostic/un-titled.htm> (The Untitled Text in the Bruce Codex) (accessed September 18, 2007).
- , ed. 1905. Pistis Sophia (Askew Codex). Translated by Violet MacDermot. Nag Hammadi Studies 9, eds. Martin Krause, James M. Robinson and Frederik Wisse. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1978.

- Schmidt, Carl, and Walter Till eds. 1892. "Die Beiden Bücher des Jeû." In Koptisch-Gnostische Schriften: Die Pistis Sophia, Die Beiden Bücher des Jeû, Ubekanntes Altgnostisches Werk, edited by Carl Schmidt and Walter Till. 2nd ed. Translated by Carl Schmidt. Die Griechischen Christlichen Schriftsteller der Ersten Jahrhunderte 1, ed. Der Kommission für Spätantike Religionsgeschichte der Deutschen Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin, 257-329. Berlin, Germany: Akademie-Verlag, 1954.
- , eds. 1892. "Unbekanntes altgnostisches Werk." In Koptisch-Gnostische Schriften: Die Pistis Sophia, Die Beiden Bücher des Jeû, Ubekanntes Altgnostisches Werk, edited by Carl Schmidt and Walter Till. 2nd ed. Translated by Carl Schmidt. Die Griechischen Christlichen Schriftsteller der Ersten Jahrhunderte 1, ed. Der Kommission für Spätantike Religionsgeschichte der Deutschen Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin, 335-67. Berlin, Germany: Akademie-Verlag, 1954.
- Schmidt, Nathaniel. "The 'Son of Man' in the Book of Daniel." Journal of Biblical Literature 19, no. 1 (1900): 22-28.
- Scholem, Gershom. 1974. Kabbalah. New York City, NY: Dorset Press, 1987.
- , ed. 1941. Major Trends in Jewish Mysticism. New York City, NY: Schocken Books, 1995.
- Schroer, Silvia. 1986. "The Spirit, Wisdom, and the dove: Feminist-critical exegesis of a Second Testament symbol against the background of its history in ancient Near Eastern and hellenistic-early Jewish tradition." In Wisdom Has Built Her House: Studies on the Figure of Sophia in the Bible, edited by Silvia Schroer. Translated by Linda M. Maloney and William McDonough, 132-63. Collegeville, MN: The Liturgical Press, A Michael Glazier Book, 2000.
- Schubert, Kurt. "Jewish pictorial traditions in early Christian art." In Jewish Historiography and Iconography in Early and Medieval Christianity, edited by Heinz Schreckenberg, Kurt Schubert and Peter J. Tomson. Translated by Paul A. Cathey. Compendium Rerum Iudaicarum ad Novum Testamentum: Section 3 - Jewish Traditions in Early Christian Literature 2, eds. Y. Aschkenasy, T. Baarda, W. J. Burgers, David Flusser, Pieter W. Van der Horst, Th.C. de Kruijf, S. Safrai, Peter J. Tomson and B. H. Young, 139-260, 1992.
- Schwartz, Howard. Tree of Souls: The Mythology of Judaism. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2004.
- Schweitzer, Albert. The Light Within Us. New York City, NY: The Wisdom Library, 1959.
- Seach, John Eugene. Ancient Texts and Mormonism: Discovering the Roots of the Eternal Gospel in Ancient Israel and the Primitive Church. 2nd Revised and Enlarged ed. Salt Lake City, UT: n. p., 1995.
- . Ancient Texts and Mormonism: The Real Answer to Critics of Mormonism. 1st ed. Murray, UT: Sounds of Zion, 1983.
- . A Great Mystery: The Secret of the Jerusalem Temple. Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2008.
- . 1980. Mormonism, the Dead Sea Scrolls, and the Nag Hammadi Texts. Midvale, UT: Sounds of Zion, 1991.
- . "Was Freemasonry derived from Mormonism?" In Scholarly and Historical Information Exchanged for Latter-day Saints (SHIELDS). <http://www.shields-research.org/General/Masonry.html> (accessed November 6, 2007).
- Searle, Howard C. "History of the Church (History of Joseph Smith)." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 2, 647-48. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Seely, David Rolph. "Genesis 15 in light of the Restoration." In Reason, Revelation, and Faith: Essays in Honor of Truman G. Madsen, edited by Donald W. Parry, Daniel C. Peterson and Stephen D. Ricks, 339-64. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, Brigham Young University, 2002.
- . "The image of the hand of God in the book of Exodus." In God's Word for Our World: Biblical Studies in Honor of Simon John De Vries, edited by J. Harold Ellens, Deborah L. Ellens, Rolf P. Knierim and Isaac Kalimi. Vol. 1. Journal for the Study of the Old Testament Supplement 388, 38-54. London, England: T & T Clark, 2004.
- . "The image of the hand of God in the Book of Mormon and the Old Testament." In Rediscovering the Book of Mormon, edited by John L. Sorenson and Melvin J. Thorne, 140-50. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1991. <http://maxwellinstitute.byu.edu/publications/books?bookid=72&chapid=867> (accessed March 22, 2009).
- . "The image of the hand of God in the Exodus traditions." Doctoral Dissertation, University of Michigan, 1990.
- . "Jehovah, Jesus Christ." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 2, 720-21. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- . "The raised hand of God as an oath gesture." In Fortunate the Eyes that See: Essays in Honor of David Noel Freedman in Celebration of His Seventieth Birthday, edited by Astrid B. Beck, Andrew H. Bartelt, Paul R. Raabe and Chris A. Franke, 411-21. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 1995.
- Segond, Louis, ed. La Bible Revue ed. Brussels, Belgium: Les Sociétés Bibliques, 1910.
- Seler, Eduard. Codex Borgia: Eine altmexikanische Bilderschrift der Bibliothek der Congregatio de Propaganda Fide. 3 vols. Berlin, Germany: n.p., 1904-1910. http://www.famsi.org/spanish/research/loubat/Booklets/Seler_Borgia_1.pdf, http://www.famsi.org/spanish/research/loubat/Booklets/Seler_Borgia_2.pdf, http://www.famsi.org/spanish/research/loubat/Booklets/Seler_Borgia_3.pdf (accessed February 9, 2009).

- . Codex Vaticanus No. 3773 (Codex Vaticanus B): An Old Mexican Pictorial Manuscript in the Vatican Library. 2 vols. Translated by A. H. Keane. Berlin, Germany: n. p., 1902-1903. <http://books.google.com/books?id=aW96AAAAAAAJ> (Vol. 2. only) (accessed February 6, 2009).
- Sforno, Obadiah ben Jacob. d. 1550. Sforno: Commentary on the Torah. 2 vols. Edited by Raphael Pelcovitz. The Artscroll Mesorah Series. Brooklyn, NY: Mesorah Publications, 1987-1989.
- Shaheen, Naseeb. Biblical References in Shakespeare's Plays. Newark, NJ: University of Delaware Press, 1999.
- Shakespeare, William. ca. 1594. "The Comedy of Errors." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 79-105. Boston, MA: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . ca. 1603. "The History of Troilus and Cressida." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 442-98. Boston, MA: Houghton-Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . 1604. "Measure for Measure." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 545-86. Boston, MA: Houghton-Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . ca. 1598. "Much Ado about Nothing." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 327-64. Boston, MA: Houghton-Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . 1608. "Pericles, Prince of Tyre." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 1479-516. Boston, MA: Houghton-Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . 1611. "The Tempest." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 1606-38. Boston, MA: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . 1611. The Tempest. Edited by Stephen Orgel. The Oxford Shakespeare, ed. Stanley Wells. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1987.
- . ca. 1606-1607. "The Tragedy of Antony and Cleopatra." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 1343-91. Boston, MA: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . 1600. "The Tragedy of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 1135-97. Boston, MA: Houghton-Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . 1605. "The Tragedy of King Lear." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 1240-305. Boston, MA: Houghton-Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . 1595. "The Tragedy of King Richard the Second." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 800-41. Boston, MA: Houghton-Mifflin, 1974.
- . 1606. "The Tragedy of Macbeth." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 1306-42. Boston, MA: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . 1592. "Venus and Adonis." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 1703-19. Boston, MA: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1974.
- . 1610. "The Winter's Tale." In The Riverside Shakespeare, edited by G. Blakemore Evans, 1564-605. Boston, MA: Houghton-Mifflin Company, 1974.
- Shanks, Hershel. Jerusalem's Temple Mount: From Solomon to the Golden Dome. New York City, NY: Continuum, 2007.
- Shannon, C. E., and W. Weaver. 1949. The Mathematical Theory of Communication. Urbana, IL: University of Illinois Press, 1964.
- Shaw, Ian, and Paul Nicholson. 1995. The British Museum Dictionary of Ancient Egypt. Revised and Expanded ed. London, England: The British Museum Press, 2008.
- Shelemon. ca. 1222. The Book of the Bee, the Syriac Text Edited from the Manuscripts in London, Oxford, and Munich with an English Translation. Translated by E. A. Wallis Budge. Reprint ed. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1886. Reprint, n. p., n. d.
- Sheridan, Mark, ed. Genesis 12-50. Ancient Christian Commentary on Scripture, Old Testament 2, ed. Thomas C. Oden. Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 2002.
- Sherlock, Richard. "Blake Ostler's Mormon Theology." The FARMS Review 18, no. 1 (2006): 291-305.
- . "Mormonism and intelligent design." The FARMS Review 18, no. 2 (2006): 45-81.
- . "Response to Professor McCann." In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, 92-111. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.
- Shermer, Michael. Why Darwin Matters: The Case Against Intelligent Design. New York City, NY: Times Books, Henry Holt, 2006.
- Sherry, Thomas E. "Changing attitudes toward Joseph Smith's translation of the Bible." In Plain and Precious Truths Restored: The Doctrinal and Historical Significance of the Joseph Smith Translation, edited by Robert L. Millet and Robert J. Matthews, 187-226. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1995.

- Shields, Mark A. Your Endowment. Springville, UT: Cedar Fort, 2009.
- Shihab, Alwi. "Building bridges to harmony through understanding." BYU Studies 45, no. 4 (2006): 9-18.
- Shippo, Jan. Sojourner in the Promised Land: Forty Years among the Mormons. Urbana, IL: University of Illinois Press, 2000.
- Shirts, Kerry A. n. d. "Chnum-Re – Figure 1 on Hypocephalus." In Mormonism Researched. <http://www2.ida.net/graphics/shirtail/amunre.htm> (accessed September 7, 2007).
- . n. d. "Did Joseph Smith invent the Book of Abraham because he learned Hebrew?" In Mormonism Researched. <http://www2.ida.net/graphics/shirtail/another.htm> (accessed September 7, 2007).
- . The resurrection of Christ: Is it or is it not real? In The Shirttail Review. <http://www2.ida.net/graphics/shirtail/signific.htm>. (accessed September 1, 2009).
- Shoemaker, Stephen J. "Early Christian apocryphal literature." In The Oxford Handbook of Early Christian Studies, edited by Susan Ashbrook Harvey and David G. Hunter. Oxford Handbooks in Religion and Theology, 521-48. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2008.
- Shokek, Shimon. Jewish Ethics and Jewish Mysticism in Sefer Ha-Yashar. Translated by Roslyn Weiss. Jewish Studies. Lewiston, NY: The Edwin Mellen Press, 1991.
- Siddiqi, Muhammad Zubayr. 1961. Hadith Literature: Its Origin, Development, Special Features, and Criticism. Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia: Islamic Book Trust, 2006.
- Siebach, Jim. "Response to Professor Tracy." In Mormonism in Dialogue with Contemporary Christian Theologies, edited by Donald W. Musser and David L. Paulsen, 462-67. Macon, GA: Mercer University Press, 2007.
- Simpson, J. A., and E. S. C. Weiner. 1989. The Compact Oxford English Dictionary. 2nd ed. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2004.
- Singer, Peter. The President of Good and Evil: The Ethics of George W. Bush. New York City, NY: Dutton, 2004.
- Skeat, W.W. An Etymological Dictionary of the English Language. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1882. http://books.google.com/books?id=n-0_AAAAMAAJ (accessed July 30, 2008).
- Skinner, Andrew C. The Garden Tomb. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2005.
- . Golgotha. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2004.
- . "Joseph Smith vindicated again: Enoch, Moses 7:48, and apocryphal sources." In Reason, Revelation, and Faith: Essays in Honor of Truman G. Madsen, edited by Donald W. Parry, Daniel C. Peterson and Stephen D. Ricks, 365-81. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2002.
- . "Savior, Satan, and serpent: The duality of a symbol in the scriptures." In The Disciple as Scholar: Essays on Scripture and the Ancient World in Honor of Richard Lloyd Anderson, edited by Stephen D. Ricks, Donald W. Parry and Andrew H. Hedges, 359-84. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2000.
- . Temple Worship: Twenty Truths That Will Bless Your Life. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- Skousen, Eric N. Earth: In the Beginning. Revised and Enlarged ed. Orem, UT: Verity Publishing, 1997.
- Skousen, Royal. "The earliest textual sources for Joseph Smith's 'New Translation' of the King James Bible." The FARMS Review 17, no. 2 (2005): 451-70.
- . "Joseph Smith's translation of the Book of Mormon: Evidence for tight control of the text." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 7, no. 1 (1998): 22-31. <http://www.farmsresearch.com/publications/jbms/?vol=7&num=1&id=167> (accessed February 22, 2009).
- . "Through a glass darkly: Trying to understand the scriptures." BYU Studies 26, no. 3 (1986): 1-18.
- Skousen, W. Cleon. 1953. The First 2,000 Years. Salt Lake City, UT: Ensign Publishing, 1997.
- Slover, George. 1978. "An analogical reading of The Tempest." In Shakespeare's Christian Dimension: An Anthology of Commentary, edited by Roy Battenhouse, 257-63. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1994.
- Smith, A. W. "'And Did those Feet...?': The 'legend' of Christ's visit to Britain." Folklore 100, no. 1 (1989): 63-83.
- Smith, Hyrum M., and Janne M. Sjodahl. 1916. Doctrine and Covenants Commentary. Revised ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1979.
- Smith, Jonathan Z. Drudgery Divine: On the Comparison of Early Christianities and the Religions of Late Antiquity (Jordan Lectures in Comparative Religion, XIV; School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London). Chicago Studies in the History of Judaism, ed. William Scott Green. Chicago, IL: The University of Illinois Press, 1990.
- Smith, Joseph, Jr. 1832-1844. An American Prophet's Record: The Diaries and Journals of Joseph Smith. Edited by Scott H. Faulring. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 1989.
- . "The answer to W. W. Phelps, Esq.: A vision." Nauvoo, IL: Times and Seasons 4:6, February 1, 1843, 82-85.

- . “The Elders of the Church in Kirtland, to their brethren abroad.” Kirtland, OH: The Evening and Morning Star 2:18, 1834, 142-44.
- . Encyclopedia of Joseph Smith's Teachings. (Formerly The Teachings of Joseph Smith). Edited by Larry E. Dahl and Donald Q. Cannon. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2000.
- . 1902-1932. History of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Documentary History). 7 vols. Edited by Brigham Henry Roberts. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1978.
- , ed. 1867. The Holy Scriptures: Inspired Version. Independence, MO: Herald Publishing House, 1991.
- . 1805-1844. The Joseph Smith Papers, ed. Dean C. Jessee, Ronald K. Esplin and Richard Lyman Bushman. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church Historian's Press, 2008-.
- . The Joseph Smith Papers Project. <http://www.josephsmithpapers.net/Default.htm> (accessed February 26, 2008).
- . “Latter Day Saints.” In An Original History of the Religious Denominations at Present Existing in the United States, edited by I. Daniel Rupp, 404-10. Philadelphia, PA: J. Y. Humphreys, 1844. <http://books.google.com/books?id=OQgRAAAAMAAJ&dq> (accessed November 30, 2007).
- . “Minutes of a special conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, held in the City of Nauvoo, commencing on the 6th of October 1843.” Nauvoo, IL: Times and Seasons 4:21, September 15, 1843, 329-32.
- . The Papers of Joseph Smith. 2 vols. Edited by Dean C. Jessee. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1989-1992.
- . The Personal Writings of Joseph Smith. Edited by Dean C. Jessee. 2nd ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2002.
- . Teachings of the Presidents of the Church: Joseph Smith. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 2007.
- . 1938. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith. Edited by Joseph Fielding Smith, Jr. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1969.
- . “Try the spirits.” Nauvoo, IL: Times and Seasons 3:11, April 1, 1842, 743-48.
- . The Words of Joseph Smith. Edited by Andrew F. Ehat and Lyndon W. Cook. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1980.
- Smith, Joseph F. 1873. “Discourse (Delivered in the 13th Ward assembly rooms, Salt Lake City, Sunday afternoon, 9 February 1873).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 15, 324-28. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1882. “Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday, June 18, 1882 (Man a mortal and an immortal being; redemption through the atonement and gospel of Christ; sons of perdition; man's pre-existent, disembodied, and resurrected states; Jesus Christ the great example; the righteous to be conformed to His image; His similarity to the Father; His mission not completed at His death; His resurrection and the redemption of humanity).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 23, 169-75. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1919. Gospel Doctrine. Edited by Joseph Fielding Smith, Jr. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- . “Philosophy and the church schools.” Juvenile Instructor 46 (1911): 208-09.
- . Teachings of the Presidents of the Church: Joseph F. Smith. Salt Lake City, UT: Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1998.
- Smith, Joseph F. and E. H. Anderson. “Editorial.” Improvement Era 13, April 1910, 570.
- Smith, Joseph F., J. R. Winder, and A. H. Lund. 1909. “The origin of man.” In Messages of the First Presidency, edited by James R. Clark. 6 vols. Vol. 4, 199-206. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1970.
- . “Words in Season from the First Presidency.” Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Evening News, December 17, 1910, 3.
- Smith, Joseph Fielding, Jr. 1957-1966. Answers to Gospel Questions. 5 vols. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1979.
- . “Discourse.” In Ninety-Fifth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, April 4-6, 1925, 73-76. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1925.
- . Doctrines of Salvation: Sermons and Writings of Joseph Fielding Smith. Edited by Bruce R. McConkie. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1954-1956.
- . Fall, Atonement, Resurrection, Sacrament (Delivered at the University of Utah Institute of Religion, January 19, 1961). Salt Lake City, UT: University of Utah Institute of Religion, 1961.
- . “Magnifying our callings in the priesthood.” Improvement Era 73, June 1970, 65-66.
- . Man: His Origin and Destiny. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1954.
- . “The oath and covenant of the priesthood.” In Conference Report: 140th Semiannual General Conference, 90-92. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1970.

- . Origin of the "Reorganized" Church: The Question of Succession. 1st ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News Press, 1909.
- . Seek Ye Earnestly. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1970.
- . 1931. The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes Dedicated to All Who Are Interested in the Redemption of the Living and the Dead. 5th ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Genealogical Society of Utah, 1945.
- Smith, Julie M. "The Beginning and the End: Echoes of Genesis 1-3 in Revelation 21-22." Presented at the Mormon Theology Seminar: Latter-day Saint Readings of Revelation 21-22, University of Texas, Austin, TX, 25 September 2009, 2009. <http://www.mormontheologyseminar.org/>. (accessed September 19, 2009).
- Smith, Lucy Mack. 1853. Lucy's Book: A Critical Edition of Lucy Mack Smith's Family Memoir. Edited by Lavina Fielding Anderson. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 2001.
- Smith, Mark S. The Origins of Biblical Monotheism: Israel's Polytheistic Background and the Ugaritic Texts. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2001.
- Smith, Morton. 1967. "Goodenough's Jewish Symbols in Retrospect." In Studies in the Cult of Yahweh: Historical Method, Ancient Israel, Ancient Judaism, edited by Shaye J. D. Cohen. 2 vols. Vol. 1, 184-200. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- . 1982. The Secret Gospel: The Discovery and Interpretation of the Secret Gospel According to Mark. Middletown, CA: The Dawn Horse Press, 2005.
- Smith, Roger J. 1997. "Michelangelo's Sistine Chapel: The loss of grace through original sin and its consequence. In The East Lewis County (Washington) Catholic Community. http://landru.i-link-2.net/shnyves/Fall_expulsion_from_Ed.html (accessed September 9, 2007).
- Smith, Timothy. "The Book of Mormon in a Biblical culture." Journal of Mormon History 7 (1980): 3-22.
- Smith, William, and Samuel Cheetham. A Dictionary of Christian Antiquities Being a Continuation of "The Dictionary of the Bible". 2 vols. Hartford, CN: The J. B. Burr Publishing Company, 1876, 1880.
- Smith, William V., ed. A Joseph Smith Commentary on The Book of Abraham. 2nd ed. Provo, UT: The Book of Abraham Project (BOAP), 2002. <http://www.boap.org/LDS/BOAP/SecondEd/> (accessed Summer, 2006).
- Snodgrass, Klyne R. Stories with Intent: A Comprehensive Guide to the Parables of Jesus. Grand Rapids, MI: William B. Eerdmans, 2008.
- Snow, Eliza R. Biography and Family Record of Lorenzo Snow. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News Company, 1884.
- Snow, Erastus. 1878. "There is a God; communion with Him an inherent craving of the human heart; man in his image; male and female created he them; spirit and flesh; mortal and immortal (Discourse delivered in the meetinghouse, Beaver City, Beaver county, Utah, on Sunday Morning, 3 March 1878)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 19, 266-79. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- Snow, Lorenzo. 1877. "Discourse delivered at a two days' meeting held by the St. George Stake of Zion, in the Temple, at St. George, Thursday morning, 5 April 1877." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 18, 371-76. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . The Teachings of Lorenzo Snow. Edited by Clyde J. Williams. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1984.
- Sophocles. d. 406 BC. Oedipus Rex. <http://www.users.bigpond.net.au/soloword/Oedipus.htm> (accessed August 31, 2008).
- . d. 406 BC. Sophoclis Tragoediae Superstites et Deperditarum Fragmenta ex rec. G. Dindorfii. 2 vols. Edited by Wilhelm Dindorf. 2nd Revised ed. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1860.
- Sorenson, John L. An Ancient American Setting for the Book of Mormon. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1985.
- . "The 'Brass Plates' and biblical scholarship." Dialogue 10 (Autumn 1977): 31-39.
- . "Origin of man." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 3, 1053-54. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Sorvig, Kim. "Learning from Salt Lake." American Society of Landscape Artists (2004): 96-107. <http://www.asla.org/meetings/am2004/learning.pdf> (accessed September 7, 2007).
- Sourvinou-Inwood, Christiane. "Festival and mysteries: Aspects of the Eleusinian cult." In Greek Mysteries: The Archaeology and Ritual of Ancient Greek Secret Cults, edited by Michael B. Cosmopoulos, 25-49. New York City, NY: Routledge, 2003.
- Sparks, Kenton L. Ancient Texts for the Study of the Hebrew Bible: A Guide to the Background Literature. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2005.
- Speiser, Ephraim A. ed. "The Creation Epic (Enuma Elish)." In Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament, edited by James B. Pritchard. 3rd with Supplement ed, 60-72, 501-03. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press,

- 1972.
- , ed. “Etana.” In Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament, edited by James B. Pritchard, 114-18. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1972.
- , ed. 1964. Genesis: A New Translation with Introduction and Commentary. Anchor Bible Commentary Series 1, ed. William F. Albright. Garden City, NY: Doubleday, 1985.
- Spencer, Robert. 2003. “A loss to the cultural inheritance of mankind.” In Mandaean Human Rights Files: Australia 2003. http://www.mandaeanworld.com/mhr_iraq_2003_4.html (accessed August 19, 2007).
- Spenser, Edmund. 1590/1596. The Faerie Queen. Edited by A. C. Hamilton, Hiroshi Yamashita and Toshiyuki Suzuki. 2nd ed. Harlow, England: Pearson Education, Longman, 2007.
- Sperling, Harry, Maurice Simon, and Paul P. Levertoff, eds. The Zohar: An English Translation. 5 vols. London, England: The Soncino Press, 1984.
- Spinks, Bryan D. Early and Medieval Rituals and Theologies of Baptism: From the New Testament to the Council of Trent. Liturgy, Worship and Society, ed. Dave Leal, Bryan D. Spinks, Paul Bradshaw, Gregory Woolfenden and Phillip Tovey. Aldershot, England: Ashgate, 2006.
- Spittler, R. P. ed. “Testament of Job.” In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 1, 829-68. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Staheli, Donald L. “Obedience—Life’s greatest challenge.” Ensign 28, May 1998, 81-82.
- Stark, Rodney. Discovering God: The Origins of the Great Religions and the Evolution of Belief. New York City, NY: HarperOne, 2007.
- Starr, James. 2007. “Does 2 Peter 1:4 speak of deification?” In Partakers of the Divine Nature: The History and Development of Deification in the Christian Traditions, edited by Michael J. Christensen and Jeffery A. Wittung, 81-92. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2008.
- Staub, Jacob J., ed. The Creation of the World According to Gersonides: A Translation and Commentary to the War of the Lord 6:2:1-8. Brown Judaic Studies 24. Chicago, IL: Scholars Press, 1982.
- Stoyanov, Yuri. The Other God: Dualist Religions from Antiquity to the Cathar Heresy. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 2000.
- Stein, Sir Mark Aurel. Innermost Asia. 3 vols. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 1930.
- Steinberg, Leo. “Who’s who in Michelangelo’s creation of Adam: A chronology of the picture’s reluctant self-revelation.” Art Bulletin 74, no. 4 (December 1992): 552-66.
- Steinsaltz, Adin, ed. The Talmud: The Steinsaltz Edition. New York City, NY: Random House, 1989-.
- Stendahl, Krister. “The Sermon on the Mount and Third Nephi.” In Reflections on Mormonism: Judeo-Christian Parallels: Papers Delivered at the Religious Studies Center Symposium, Brigham Young University, March 10-11, 1978, edited by Truman G. Madsen. Religious Studies Monograph Series 4, 139-54. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1978.
- Stephanus, H. Thesaurus Graecae Linguae. Graz, Austria: Akademische Druck und Verlagsanstalt, 1954.
- Stephens, Trent D. 2003. “Evolution and Latter-day Saint theology: The tree of life and DNA.” In 2003 FAIR Conference. http://www.fairlds.org/FAIR_Conferences/2003_Evolution_and_Latter-day_Saint_Theology.html (accessed September 7, 2007).
- Stephens, Trent D., D. Jeffrey Meldrum, and Forrest B. Peterson. Evolution and Mormonism: A Quest for Understanding. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 2001.
- Sterling, Gregory E. “Philo of Alexandria.” In The Historical Jesus in Context, edited by Amy-Jill Levine, Dale C. Allison, Jr. and John Dominic Crossan. Princeton Readings in Religions, ed. Donald S. Lopez, Jr., 296-308. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2006.
- Stevens, Keith G. Chinese Mythological Gods. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2001.
- Stevenson, Edward. Autobiography of Edward Stevenson, 1820-1897 (The Life and History of Elder Edward Stevenson). Edited by Joseph Grant Stevenson. Provo, UT: Stevenson’s Genealogical Center, 1986.
- Stokes, William Lee. The Creation Scriptures: A Witness for God in the Scientific Age. Bountiful, UT: Horizon, 1979.
- Stone, Michael E., ed. Signs of the Judgment, Onomastica Sacra, and the Generations from Adam. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1981.
- . “Abel and other pieces.” In Armenian Apocrypha Relating to Adam and Eve, edited by Michael E. Stone, 141-57. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- , ed. 1401-1403. Adamgirk’: The Adam Book of Arakel’ of Siwnik’. Translated by Michael E. Stone. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2007.
- . Adam’s Contract with Satan: The Legend of the Cheirograph of Adam. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 2002.

- . “The angelic prediction.” In Literature on Adam and Eve: Collected Essays, edited by Gary A. Anderson, Michael E. Stone and Johannes Tromp, 111-31. Leiden, Netherlands: Brill, 2000.
- , ed. Armenian Apocrypha Relating to Adam and Eve. Studia in Veteris Testamenti Pseudepigrapha, ed. A.-M. Denis, M. de Jonge, M. A. Knibb, H.-J. de Jonge, J.-Cl. Haelewyck and Johannes Tromp. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- , ed. Armenian Apocrypha Relating to the Patriarchs and Prophets. Jerusalem, Israel: The Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities, 1982.
- , ed. “The Descendants of Adam.” In Armenian Apocrypha Relating to the Patriarchs and Prophets, edited by Michael E. Stone, 84-87. Jerusalem, Israel: The Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities, 1982.
- . “The fall of Satan and Adam’s penance: Three notes on the Books of Adam and Eve.” In Literature on Adam and Eve: Collected Essays, edited by Gary A. Anderson, Michael E. Stone and Johannes Tromp, 43-56. Leiden, Netherlands: Brill, 2000.
- , ed. “History of Adam and his grandsons.” In Armenian Apocrypha Relating to Adam and Eve, edited by Michael E. Stone, 80-100. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- , ed. “History of the forefathers, Adam and his sons and grandsons.” In Armenian Apocrypha Relating to Adam and Eve, edited by Michael E. Stone, 180-200. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- . A History of the Literature of Adam and Eve. Society of Biblical Literature: Early Judaism and its Literature, ed. William Adler. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1992.
- . “The legend of the cheirograph of Adam.” In Literature on Adam and Eve: Collected Essays, edited by Gary A. Anderson, Michael E. Stone and Johannes Tromp, 149-66. Leiden, Netherlands: Brill, 2000.
- , ed. “On the fall of Adam.” In Armenian Apocrypha Relating to Adam and Eve, edited by Michael E. Stone, 3-7. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- , ed. “Question.” In Armenian Apocrypha Relating to Adam and Eve, edited by Michael E. Stone, 114-34. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- . “Selections from On the Creation of the World by Yovhannes Tulkuranci.” In Literature on Adam and Eve: Collected Essays, edited by Gary A. Anderson, Michael E. Stone and Johannes Tromp, 167-213. Leiden, Netherlands: Brill, 2000.
- , ed. “Sermon concerning the Flood.” In Armenian Apocrypha Relating to Adam and Eve, edited by Michael E. Stone, 174-79. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- , ed. “The Sethites and the Cainites.” In Armenian Apocrypha Relating to Adam and Eve, edited by Michael E. Stone, 201-06. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- Stordalen, Terje. Echoes of Eden: Genesis 2-3 and the Symbolism of the Eden Garden in Biblical Hebrew Literature. Leuven, Belgium: Peeters, 2000.
- Storme, Albert. Le Mont des Oliviers. 3rd Revised ed. Lieux Saints de Palestine. Jerusalem, Israel: Franciscan Printing Press, 1993.
- Stott, Gerald. “Effects of college education on the religious involvement of Latter-day Saints.” BYU Studies 24, no. 1 (1984): 43-52.
- Strack, H. L., and Günter Stemberger. 1887. Introduction to the Talmud and Midrash. 2nd ed. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 1996.
- Strathern, Gaye, and Brian M. Hauglid. “The Great Mosque and its Ka’ba as an Islamic temple complex in light of Lundquist’s typology of ancient Near Eastern temples.” In The Temple in Time and Eternity, edited by Donald W. Parry and Stephen D. Ricks, 275-302. Provo, UT: The Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS) at Brigham Young University, 1999.
- Stratton, Richard D., ed. Kindness to Animals and Caring for the Earth. Portland, OR: Inkwater Press, 2004.
- Strong, Eugenie Sellers. Apotheosis and the After Life, Three Lectures on Certain Phases of Art and Religion in the Roman Empire. London, England: Constable and Company, Ltd., 1915.
- Stuckenbruck, Loren T. “The formation and re-formation of Daniel in the Dead Sea Scrolls.” In The Bible and the Dead Sea Scrolls: The Second Princeton Symposium on Judaism and Christian Origins, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Scripture and the Scrolls 1, ed. James H. Charlesworth, 101-30. Waco, TX: Baylor University Press, 2006.
- Summerhays, James T. 2010. The wisdom and intelligence of Eve. In Meridian Magazine. <http://www.meridianmagazine.com/articles/100108wisdom.html>. (accessed January 9, 2010).
- Sundberg, Waldemar. Kushta: A Monograph on a Principal Word in Mandaean Texts. The Descending Knowledge 1. Lund, Sweden: C. W. K. Gleerup, 1953.
- Swanson, Vern Grosvenor. Dynasty of the Holy Grail: Mormonism’s Sacred Bloodline. Springville, UT: CFI, 2006.
- Swindle, L.L. and S.E. Black. Joseph Smith: Impressions of a Prophet. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1998.

- Szink, Terrence L. "Authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews." In How the New Testament Came to Be: The 35th Annual Brigham Young University Sidney B. Sperry Symposium, edited by Kent P. Jackson and Frank F. Judd, Jr., 243-59. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2006.
- Tajadod, Nahal, ed. Mani le Bouddha de Lumière: Catéchisme manichéen chinois. Sources Gnostiques et Manichéennes 3, ed. Michel Tardieu. Paris, France: Les Éditions du Cerf, 1990.
- Taleb, Nassim Nicholas. The Black Swan: The Impact of the Highly Improbable. New York City, NY: Random House, 2007.
- Talmage, James E. 1924. The Articles of Faith. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1984.
- . 1931. "The earth and man (originally published in Deseret News, November 21, 1931, pp. 7-8)." In The Essential James E. Talmage, edited by James P. Harris, 241-55. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 1997.
- . "The eternity of sex." Young Woman's Journal 25, October 1914, 602-03.
- . 1912. The House of the Lord. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 1998.
- . 1915. Jésus le Christ. Salt Lake City, UT: Église de Jésus Christ des Saints des Derniers Jours, 1991.
- . 1915. Jesus the Christ. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1983.
- . "Knowledge concerning God's attributes essential to intelligent worship; The relationship of Jesus Christ to God, the Eternal Father, spiritual and bodily; Relationship of mankind to Deity (6 April 1915)." In Conference Reports: Eighty-Fifth Annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 120-24. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News, 1915. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Hawkes Publishing, n. d.
- . The Parables of James E. Talmage. Edited by Albert L. Zobell, Jr. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1973.
- Tannenbaum, Leslie. Biblical Tradition in Blake's Early Prophecies: The Great Code of Art. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1982.
- Tanner, John S. "Of men and mantles: Kierkegaard and the difference between a genius and an apostle." BYU Studies 40, no. 2 (2001): 149-64.
- . "Shakespeare among the Saints." Journal of Mormon History 32, no. 1 (2006): 82-115. <http://avp.byu.edu/documents/pdf/shakespearesaints.pdf>.
- . "The world and the word: History, literature, and scripture." In Historicity and the Latter-day Saint Scriptures, edited by Paul Y. Hoskisson, 217-35. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 2001.
- Tardieu, Michel. Le Manichéisme. 2nd ed. Que sais-je? Paris, France: Presses Universitaires de France, 1997.
- . Manichaeism. Translated by Malcolm DeBevoise. Urbana, IL: University of Illinois Press, 2008.
- Taylor, Charles. A Secular Age. Cambridge, MA: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, 2007.
- Taylor, John. 1853. "Motives and feelings of the Saints; experience necessary; the state of the world; infidels; religions and works of men, and the religion and works of God; truth and salvation (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 12 June 1853)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 1, 147-59. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1876. "Burial services, an ancient practice; God, the God of the living; keys committed to Joseph Smith; the last dispensation; Jesus the great Redeemer; an everlasting priesthood; the powers of the resurrection; scriptural, philosophical, and certain; sealing powers eternal (Funeral sermon preached at the 7th Ward Meetinghouse, Salt Lake City, on Sunday Afternoon, 31 December 1876, over the remains of Ann Tenora, the wife of Isaac Waddell; and also over the remains of George W., son of Edward Callister)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 18, 324-35. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . The Gospel Kingdom: Selections from the Writings and Discourses of John Taylor. Edited by G. Homer Durham. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1943.
- . The Government of God. Liverpool, England: S. W. Richards, 1852. Reprint, Heber City, UT: Archive Publishers, 2000.
- . The Mediation and Atonement. Salt Lake City, UT: The Deseret News, 1882. Reprint, Heber City, UT: Archive Publishers, 2000.
- . New York City, NY: The Mormon, August 29, 1857.
- Taylor, Sheila. "A broken-mirror image': Original sin in LDS theology." Presented at the 2008 Conference of the Society for Mormon Philosophy and Theology, Salt Lake City, UT, March 28, 2008.
- Tennent, James Emerson. Ceylon: An Account of the Island Physical, Historical, and Topographical with Notices of Its Natural History, Antiquities and Productions. 2 vols. 4th, Thoroughly Revised ed. London, England: Longman, Green, Longman, and Roberts, 1860. <http://www.gutenberg.org/etext/13552> (accessed March 13, 2008).
- Terry, Roger. E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, July 31, 2009.
- Tertullian. ca. 197-222. "An Answer to the Jews." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 3, 151-73. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.

- . ca. 197-222. "Apology." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 3, 17-60. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- . ca. 197-222. "On baptism." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 3, 669-79. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- . ca. 197-222. "On prayer (De Oratione)." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 3, 681-91. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2004.
- "The Electronic Text Corpus of Sumerian Literature, 2nd Edition." 2006. In Faculty of Oriental Studies, Oxford University. <http://etcsl.orinst.ox.ac.uk/> (accessed November 1, 2007).
- "The gathering (unsigned editorial)." Nauvoo, IL: Times and Seasons 5:2, January, 1844, 407-10.
- "The Holy Trinity." In Department of Modern Languages and Literatures at Rollins College. http://www.rollins.edu/Foreign_Lang/Russian/trinity.html (accessed November 16, 2006).
- The Oxford Annotated Apocrypha: Expanded Edition of the Revised Standard Version*. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1977.
- "The Pentagram." In Grand Lodge of British Columbia and Yukon, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. <http://www.freemasonry.bcy.ca/anti-masonry/pentagram.html> (accessed September 9, 2008).
- The Revised Version of the Apocrypha*. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 1927.
- The Society for Mormon Philosophy and Theology*. <http://www.smpt.org/> (accessed April 28, 2009).
- Theophilus. d. ca. 183-185. "Theophilus to Autolycus." In The Ante-Nicene Fathers (The Writings of the Fathers Down to AD 325), edited by Alexander Roberts and James Donaldson. 10 vols. Vol. 2, 89-121. Buffalo, NY: The Christian Literature Company, 1885. Reprint, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 1994.
- "Theophilus of Antioch." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Theophilus_of_Antioch (accessed January 19, 2008).
- Thomas, M. Catherine. "The Brother of Jared at the veil." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 388-98. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . "Hebrews: To ascend the holy mount." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 479-91. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . "Jacob's allegory: The mystery of Christ." In The Allegory of the Olive Tree, edited by Stephen D. Ricks and John W. Welch, 11-20. Provo, UT: FARMS, 1994.
- . Light in the Wilderness: Explorations in the Spiritual Life. Provo, UT: Amalphi Publishing, 2008.
- . "The Sermon on the Mount: The sacrifice of the human heart." In The Gospels, edited by Kent P. Jackson and Robert L. Millet. Studies in Scripture 5, 236-50. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1986.
- . "Women, priesthood, and the at-one-ment." In Spiritual Lightening: How the Power of the Gospel Can Enlighten Minds and Lighten Burdens, edited by M. Catherine Thomas, 47-58. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1996.
- Thomas, Richard. "The Israelite origins of the Mandaean people." Studia Antiqua 5, no. 2 (2007): 3-27.
- Thurston, Herbert. "Corporal." In The Catholic Encyclopedia: An International Work of Reference on the Constitution, Doctrine, Discipline, and History of the Catholic Church, edited by Charles George Hebermann, Edward A. Pace, Condé B. Pallen, Thomas J. Shahan and John J. Wynne. 15 vols. Vol. 4, 386-87. New York City, NY: The Universal Knowledge Foundation, 1913. <http://books.google.com/books?id=2GcQAAAAIAAJ> (accessed February 1, 2009).
- Tiffany, Scott, ed. City Saints: Mormons in the New York Metropolis. New York City, NY: Nauvoo Books, 2004.
- Tiller, Patrick A., ed. A Commentary on the Animal Apocalypse of 1 Enoch. Society of Biblical Literature Early Judaism and Its Literature Series 4, ed. William Adler. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1993.
- Times and Seasons*. Nauvoo, IL, 1839-1846. Reprint, 6 vols.
- Timothy of Alexandria. ca. 385. "The Discourse on Abbaton." In Coptic Martyrdoms, etc. in the Dialect of Upper Egypt, edited by E. A. Wallis Budge, 474-96. London, England: The British Museum, 1914.
- . ca. 385. "How Abbaton, the angel of death, became the king of all mankind." In Egyptian Tales and Romances: Pagan, Christian and Muslim, edited by E. A. Wallis Budge, 195-203. London, England: Thornton Butterworth Limited, 1931. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2003.
- "Titian." In Notable Names Database. <http://www.nndb.com> (accessed March 20, 2006).
- Tobin, Gary A., and Aryeh K. Weinberg. Religious Beliefs and Behavior. Profiles of the American University 2. San Francisco, CA: The Institute for Jewish and Community Research, 2007.
- Todd, Jay M. "Background of the Church Historian's Fragment." Improvement Era 71, February 1968, 40A-40I.

- Toner, P. J. "Extreme Unction." In The Catholic Encyclopedia: An International Work of Reference on the Constitution, Doctrine, Discipline, and History of the Catholic Church, edited by Charles George Hebermann, Edward A. Pace, Condé B. Pallen, Thomas J. Shahan and John J. Wynne. 15 vols. Vol. 5, 716-30. New York City, NY: The Universal Knowledge Foundation, 1913. <http://books.google.com/books?id=-aSQNo8kNqIC> (accessed February 1, 2009).
- Top, Brent L. The Life Before: How Our Premortal Existence Affects Our Mortal Life. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1988.
- Toronto, James A. "Islam." In Religions of the World: A Latter-day Saint View, edited by Spencer J. Palmer, Roger R. Keller, Doug Sull Choi and James A. Toronto, 212-41. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1997.
- Tóth, Endre, and Károly Szelényi. The Holy Crown of Hungary: Kings and Coronation. 2nd ed. Budapest, Hungary: Kossuth Publishing, 2000.
- Tov, Emanuel. Scribal Practices and Approaches Reflected in the Texts Found in the Judean Desert. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 2004.
- Townes, Charles H. "The convergence of science and religion." Improvement Era 71, February 1968, 62-69.
- Townsend, John T., ed. Midrash Tanhuma. 3 vols. Jersey City, NJ: Ktav Publishing, 1989-2003.
- Tozzer, Alfred M. A Comparative Study of the Mayas and the Lacandonas. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1907. <http://books.google.com/books?id=eMRpAAAAMAAJ> (accessed February 6, 2009).
- Treharne, Reginald Francis. The Glastonbury Legends: Joseph of Arimathea, the Holy Grail, and King Arthur. London, England: The Cresset Press, 1967. Reprint, The Glastonbury Legends: The Quest for King Arthur and the Holy Grail. London, England: Sphere Books, 1971.
- Trippi, Peter. J. W. Waterhouse. London, England: Phaidon Press, 2002.
- Tromp, Johannes. "Cain and Abel in the Greek and Armenian/Georgian recensions of the Life of Adam and Eve." In Literature on Adam and Eve: Collected Essays, edited by Gary A. Anderson, Michael E. Stone and Johannes Tromp, 277-96. Leiden, Netherlands: Brill, 2000.
- . "Literary and exegetical issues in the story of Adam's death and burial (GLAE 31-42)." In The Book of Genesis in Jewish and Oriental Christian Interpretation, edited by Judith Frishman and Lucas Van Rompay. Traditio Exegetica Graeca 5, 25-41. Louvain, Belgium: Editions Peeters, 1997.
- Tullidge, Edward W. 1877. The Women of Mormondom. New York City, NY: n.p., 1997.
- Turner, Laurence. Announcements of Plot in Genesis. Journal for the Study of the Old Testament Supplement Series 96, ed. David J. A. Clines and Philip R. Davies. Sheffield, England: JSOT Press, 1990.
- Turner, Martha Lee. The Gospel According to Philip. Nag Hammadi and Manichaean Studies 38. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1996.
- Turner, Rodney. "The Position of Adam in Latter-day Saint Scripture and Theology." Master's Thesis, Brigham Young University, 1953.
- . "The visions of Moses (Moses 1)." In The Pearl of Great Price, edited by Robert L. Millet and Kent P. Jackson, 43-61. Studies in Scripture 2. Salt Lake City, UT: Randall Book Company, 1985.
- Turner, Victor. 1969. The Ritual Process: Structure and Anti-Structure. New Brunswick, NJ: AldineTransaction, 2009.
- Turner, Victor, and Edith L. B. Turner. Image and Pilgrimage in Christian Literature. Lectures on the History of Religions Sponsored by the American Council of Learned Societies, New Series 11. New York City, NY: Columbia University Press, 1978.
- Tvedtnes, John A. The Book of Mormon and Other Hidden Books. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University FARMS, 2000.
- . "Early Christian and Jewish rituals related to temple practices." Presented at the FAIR Conference 1999. http://www.fairlds.org/FAIR_Conferences/1999_Early_Christian_and_Jewish_Rituals_Related_to_Temple_Practices.html (accessed September 8, 2007).
- . E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, September 26, 2006.
- . "Faith and Truth." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 3, no. 2 (Fall 1994): 114-16.
- . "Gospel doctrine: Three degrees of glory." In Meridian Magazine. <http://www.meridianmagazine.com/gospel-doctrine/nt/070823nt34sf.html> (accessed November 30, 2008).
- . "The higher and lesser laws." In Reason, Revelation, and Faith: Essays in Honor of Truman G. Madsen, edited by Donald W. Parry, Daniel C. Peterson and Stephen D. Ricks, 383-406. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2002.
- . "The King Follett discourse in light of ancient and medieval Jewish and Christian beliefs." Presented at the FAIR Conference 2004. <http://www.fairlds.org/pubs/conf/2004TveJ.html> (accessed September 8, 2007).
- . "My first-born in the wilderness." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 3, no. 1 (1994): 207-09.
- . "Nebuchadnezzar or Nabonidus? Mistaken identities in the book of Daniel." Ensign 16, September 1986, 54.

- . "Olive oil: Symbol of the Holy Ghost." In The Allegory of the Olive Tree, edited by Stephen D. Ricks and John W. Welch, 427-59. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . "Priestly clothing in Bible times." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 649-704. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.
- . "Review of Metcalfe, Brent Lee (Ed.), New Approaches to the Book of Mormon." Review of Books on the Book of Mormon 6, no. 1 (1994): 8-18.
- . "Science and Genesis." In Science and Religion: Toward a More Useful Dialogue, edited by Wilford M. Hess, Raymond T. Matheny and Donlu D. Thayer. Vol. 2, 39-60. Geneva, IL: Paladin House Publishers, 1979.
- . "Temple prayer in ancient times." In The Temple in Time and Eternity, edited by Donald W. Parry and Stephen D. Ricks, 79-98. Provo, UT: The Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, Brigham Young University, 1999.
- . "Word Groups in the Book of Mormon." Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 6, no. 2 (1997): 263-68.
- Tvedtnes, John A., Brian M. Hauglid, and John Gee, eds. Traditions about the Early Life of Abraham. Studies in the Book of Abraham, ed. John Gee. Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, Brigham Young University, 2001.
- Tyndale, William, ed. 1526. The New Testament: A Facsimile of the 1526 Edition. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2008.
- Ulansey, David. "The heavenly veil torn: Mark's cosmic 'inclusio'." Journal of Biblical Literature 110, no. 1 (Spring 1991): 123-25. <http://www.well.com/user/davidu/veil.html> (accessed June 18, 2008).
- . The Origins of the Mithraic Mysteries: Cosmology and Salvation in the Ancient World. New York City, NY: Oxford University Press, 1989.
- Underwood, Grant. "Book of Mormon usage in early LDS theology." Dialogue 17 (Autumn 1984): 35-74.
- . "A 'Communities of Discourse' approach to early LDS thought." In Discourses in Mormon Theology: Philosophical and Theological Possibilities, edited by James McLachlan and Loyd Ericson, 27-38. Salt Lake City, UT: Greg Kofford Books, 2007.
- . "Revelation, text, and revision: Insight from the Book of Commandments and Revelations." BYU Studies 48, no. 3 (2009): 67-84.
- Uro, Risto. "The bridal chamber and other mysteries: Ritual system and ritual transmission in the Valentinian movement." In Sacred Marriages, edited by Martti Nissinen and Risto Uro, 457-86. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 2008.
- Vajda, Jordan. Partakers of the divine nature: A comparative analysis of Patristic and Mormon doctrines of divinization. Occasional Papers 3. Provo, UT: The Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS), 2002.
- Valades, Didacus. Rhetorica Christiana, 1579.
- "Valeriano Ugolini: Visions." April 4-May 5, 2005. In Art in the Library, Harold B. Lee Library, Brigham Young University. <http://net.lib.byu.edu/art/ugolini.html> (accessed September 13, 2008).
- Van Biema, David. "God vs. Science (Debate between Richard Dawkins and Francis Collins)." Time, November 13 2006, 49-55.
- Van Buren, Paul M. "Some lines on lions." Theology Today 24, no. 2 (1967): 227-29. <http://theologytoday.ptsem.edu/jul1967/v24-2-criticscorner1.htm> (accessed September 8, 2007).
- Van Dam, Cornelis. The Urim and Thummim: A Means of Revelation in Ancient Israel. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 1997.
- Van de Graaff, Kent M. "Physical body." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 3, 1080-81. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- van der Heide, Albert. "Midrash and exegesis." In The Book of Genesis in Jewish and Oriental Christian Interpretation, edited by Judith Frishman and Lucas Van Rompay. Traditio Exegetica Graeca 5, 43-56. Louvain, Belgium: Editions Peeters, 1997.
- Van der Horst, Pieter. "The site of Adam's tomb." In Studies in Hebrew Literature and Jewish Culture: Presented to Albert van der Heide on the Occasion of his Sixty-Fifth Birthday, edited by Martin F. J. Baasten and Reinier Munk. Amsterdam Studies in Jewish Thought 12, 251-55. Amsterdam, Holland: Springer Netherlands, 2007.
- VanderKam, James C. Enoch: A Man for All Generations. Columbia, SC: University of South Carolina Press, 1995.
- van der Toorn, Karel, Bob Becking, and Pieter Willem Wvan der Horst. Dictionary of Deities and Demons in the Bible. 2nd Extensively Revised ed. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1999.
- van Gennep, Arnold. 1908. The Rites of Passage. Translated by Monika B. Vizedom and Gabrielle L. Caffee. Chicago, IL: The University of Chicago Press, 1960.
- Vaughan, Virginia Mason, and Alden T. Vaughan. 1999. "Introduction." In The Tempest, edited by Virginia Mason Vaughan and Alden T. Vaughan. The Arden Shakespeare (Third Series), eds. Richard Proudfoot, Ann Thompson and David Scott Kastan, 1-138. London, England: Thomson Learning, 2005.

- Vaughan Williams, Ralph. Vaughan Williams on Music. Edited by David Manning. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2008.
- Vaughan Williams, Ursula. 1964. R. V. W.: A Biography of Ralph Vaughan Williams. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press, 2002.
- “Vaughan Williams’ Orchestral Works.” In Agentsmith. http://www.agentsmith.com/rvw/RVW_Works/Orchestral.html (accessed March 28, 2008).
- Veblen, Thorstein. The Theory of the Leisure Class: An Economic Study of Institutions. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1899. Reprint, New York City, NY: Dover Books, 1994.
- Veraseren, M. J. Mithras, The Secret God. New York City, NY: Barnes and Noble, 1963.
- Verkerk, D.H. 1999. “Biblical manuscripts in Rome 400-700 and the Ashburnham Pentateuch.” In Imaging the Early Medieval Bible, edited by J. Williams, 97-120. University Park, PA: The Pennsylvania State University Press, 2002.
- . Early Medieval Bible Illumination and the Ashburnham Pentateuch. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2004.
- Vermes, Geza, ed. 1962. The Complete Dead Sea Scrolls in English. Revised ed. London, England: Penguin Books, 2004.
- Vernay-Nouri, Annie. Livres d’Arménie: Collections de la Bibliothèque nationale de France. Paris, France: Bibliothèque nationale de France, 2007.
- Verne, Jules. 1873. Around the World in Eighty Days. New York City, NY: Signet Classics, New American Library, Penguin Group, 2005.
- . 1889. “In the Year 2889.” In Project Gutenberg, EText-No. 19362, Release Date September 23, 2006. <http://www.gutenberg.org/etext/19362> (accessed September 9, 2007).
- . 1889. La Journée d’un Journaliste Américain en 2889. Paris, France: Éditions Gallimard, 1978.
- Vikan, Gary. “Byzantine pilgrimage art.” In Dumbarton Oaks Byzantine Collection Publications, edited by Gary Vikan. Washington, D.C.: Dumbarton Oaks Center for Byzantine Studies, 1982. <http://www.doaks.org/PilgrimageArt.pdf> (accessed September 8, 2007).
- Villalpando, Juan Bautista. Ezechielem Explanaciones. 3 vols, 1594-1605.
- Villey, André, ed. Psaumes des errants: Écrits manichéens du Fayyum. Translated by André Villey. Sources gnostiques et manichéennes 4, ed. Michel Tardieu. Paris, France: Les Éditions du Cerf, 1994.
- Villien, A. History and Liturgy of the Sacraments. Translated by H. W. Edwards. New York City, NY: Benziger Brothers, 1932. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, n.d.
- Vilnay, Zev, Rachel Vilnay, and Oren Vilnay. Jerusalem, Beersheba, and Southern Israel. The Vilnay Guide to Israel: A New Millennium Edition 1. Atlit, Israel: Beit-Or Vilnay Publishers, 1999.
- Vilnay, Zev. 1932. The Sacred Land. Legends of Jerusalem 1. Philadelphia, PA: Jewish Publication Society of America, 1973.
- Vincent, L-H. “L’Eléona: Sanctuaire primitif de l’Ascension.” Revue Biblique 64 (1957): 48-71.
- Vine, W. E. An Expository Dictionary of New Testament Words. Lynchburg, Virginia: The Old-Time Gospel Hour, n.d.
- Vine, W. E., Merrill F. Unger, and William White, Jr. Vine’s Complete Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words with Topical Index. Nashville, TN: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 1996.
- Viola, Frank, and George Barna. 2002. Pagan Christianity? Exploring the Roots of Our Church Practices. Revised and updated ed. Carol Stream, IL: Tyndale House, 2008.
- Virgil. The Aeneid of Virgil. Translated by John Conington. 3rd ed. London, England: Longmans, Green, 1919.
- Visotzky, Burton L. “The conversation of palm trees.” In Tracing the Threads: Studies in the Vitality of Jewish Pseudepigrapha, edited by John C. Reeves, 205-14. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1994.
- Vogel, Dan, ed. Early Mormon Documents. 5 vols. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 1996-2003.
- Vogels, Walter. “Cham découvre les limites de son père Noé.” Nouvelle Revue Théologique 109, no. 4 (1987): 554-73.
- Volluz, Corbin T. “Lehi’s dream of the Tree of Life: Springboard to prophecy.” Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 2, no. 2 (1993): 14-38.
- von Eschenbach, Wolfram. ca. 1210. Parzival and Titurel. Translated by Cyril Edwards. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2006.
- von Wellnitz, Marcus. “The Catholic Liturgy and the Mormon temple.” BYU Studies 21, no. 1 (1979): 3-35.
- “W56 Isis and Serapis.” In Prifysgol Abertawe, Swansea University. <http://www.swan.ac.uk/egypt/infosheet/W56.htm> (accessed September 4, 2007).
- Wagner, Reinhard. Die Gnosis von Alexandria: Eine Frage des frühe Christentums an die Gegenwart. Stuttgart, Germany: Verlag Urachhaus, 1968.

- Wahlgren, Staffan, ed. Symeonis Magistri et Logothetae Chronicon: Recensuit Staffan Wahlgren. 2 vols. Vol. 1. Corpus Fontium Historiae Byzantinae. Berlin, Germany: Walter de Gruyter, 2006.
- Walker, Charles Lowell. Diary of Charles Lowell Walker. 2 vols. Edited by A. Karl Larson and Katharine Miles Larson. Logan, UT: Utah State University Press, 1980.
- Walker, Steven C. "Selling the soul of science for a pot of message: Evangelizing atheism in The God Delusion." BYU Studies 47, no. 1 (2008): 133-47.
- Walter, James. 1983. "From tempest to epilogue." In Shakespeare's Christian Dimension: An Anthology of Commentary, edited by Roy Battenhouse, 271-79. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1994.
- Walton, John H. Ancient Near Eastern Thought and the Old Testament: Introducing the Conceptual World of the Hebrew Bible. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2006.
- Wansbrough, John. 1972. Qur'anic Studies: Sources and Methods of Scriptural Interpretation. Amherst, NY: Prometheus Books, 2004.
- Ward, Jay Bryant. "News and Events." In Jay Bryant Ward Studios. <http://www.jbwstudios.com/102.php> (accessed May 11, 2008).
- Warner, C. Terry. "Accountability." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 1, 13. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- . Bonds That Make Us Free: Healing Our Relationships, Coming to Ourselves. Salt Lake City, UT: Shadow Mountain, 2001.
- . "Truth." In Encyclopedia of Mormonism, edited by Daniel H. Ludlow. 4 vols. Vol. 4, 1489-91. New York City, NY: Macmillan, 1992. <http://www.lib.byu.edu/Macmillan/> (accessed November 26, 2007).
- Warren, Bruce W. "Secret combinations, warfare, and captive sacrifice in Mesoamerica and the Book of Mormon." In Warfare in the Book of Mormon, edited by Stephen D. Ricks and William J. Hamblin, 225-36. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990.
- Wasserstrom, Steven M. "Jewish pseudepigrapha in Muslim literature: A bibliographical and methodological sketch." In Tracing the Threads: Studies in the Vitality of Jewish Pseudepigrapha, edited by John C. Reeves, 87-114. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1994.
- Watts, Isaac. Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in Three Books with an Essay Towards the Improvement of Christian Psalmody, by the Use of Evangelical Hymns in Worship, As Well As the Psalms of David. London, England: John Lawrence, 1707-1709. Reprint, Watts, Isaac, and Samuel Worcester. Psalms, Hymns and Spiritual Songs of the Rev. Isaac Watts, D. D. To Which Are Added Select Hymns from Other Authors, and Directions for Musical Expression by Samuel Worcester, D. D. Boston, MA: Crocker & Brewster, 1856. <http://books.google.com/books?id=zSZs5jCXgHoC> (accessed April 13, 2009).
- Weber, Robert, ed. Biblia Sacra Vulgata 4th ed: American Bible Society, 1990.
- Webster, Noah. An American Dictionary of the English Language. New York City, NY, 1828. Reprint, Chesapeake, VA: Foundation for American Christian Education, 1968.
- Wedderburn, A. J. M. Baptism and Resurrection: Studies in Pauline Theology against Its Greco-Roman Background. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 44, ed. Joachim Jeremias, Otto Michel, Martin Hengel and Otfried Hofius. Tübingen, Germany: J. C. B. Mohr (Paul Siebeck), 1987.
- Weil, G., ed. 1846. The Bible, the Koran, and the Talmud or, Biblical Legends of the Mussulmans, Compiled from Arabic Sources, and Compared with Jewish Traditions, Translated from the German. New York City, NY: Harper and Brothers, 1863. Reprint, Kila, MT: Kessinger Publishing, 2006. http://books.google.com/books?id=_jYMAAAIAAJ (accessed September 8, 2007).
- Weimer, W. Notes on the Methodology of Scientific Research. Hillsdale, New Jersey: Erlbaum, 1979.
- Weisberg, Jacob. 2006. "Romney's religion: A Mormon president? No way." In Slate, December 20, 2006. <http://www.slate.com/id/2155902> (accessed August 27, 2007).
- Welburn, Andrew, ed. Mani, the Angel, and the Column of Glory: An Anthology of Manichaean Texts. Edinburgh, Scotland: Floris Books, 1998.
- Welch, John W. "The Good Samaritan: A type and shadow of the plan of salvation." BYU Studies 38, no. 2 (1999): 51-115.
- . "The Good Samaritan: Forgotten symbols." Ensign 37, February 2007, 40-47.
- . The Sermon at the Temple and the Sermon on the Mount. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1990.
- . The Sermon on the Mount in the Light of the Temple. Farnham, England: Ashgate, 2009.
- . "The temple in the Book of Mormon: The temples at the cities of Nephi, Zarahemla, and Bountiful." In Temples of the Ancient World, edited by Donald W. Parry, 297-387. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1994.

- . “And with all thy mind.” In Brigham Young University 2003-2004 Speeches, 105-12. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Publications and Graphics, 2003.
- , ed. The Worlds of Joseph Smith: A Bicentennial Conference at the Library of Congress. Provo, UT: The Brigham Young University Press, 2005.
- Welch, John W., and Claire Foley. “Gammadia on early Jewish and Christian garments.” BYU Studies 36, no. 3 (1996-1997): 253-58.
- Welch, John W., and James V. Garrson. “The Hymn of the Pearl: An ancient counterpart to ‘O My Father.’” BYU Studies 36, no. 1 (1996-1997): 127-38.
- Wellington, Richard, and George Potter. “Lehi’s trail: From the Valley of Lemuel to Nephi’s Harbor.” Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 15, no. 2 (2006): 26-43, 113-16.
- Wenham, Gordon J., ed. Genesis 1-15. Word Biblical Commentary 1. Nashville, TN: Nelson Reference and Electronic, 1987.
- Wesley, Charles. 1755. Epistle to George Whitefield. London, England: J. & W. Oliver, 1771. http://www.divinity.duke.edu/wesleyan/docs/cworiginal/71_Epistle_to_Whitefield_\(1771\).pdf.pdf) (accessed May 27, 2009).
- Wesley, John, and Charles Wesley. Hymns and Sacred Poems. Fourth ed. Bristol, England: Felix Farley, 1743. <http://ia340912.us.archive.org/2/items/hymnsandsacredpo00wesliala/hymnsandsacredpo00wesliala.pdf> (accessed May 2, 2009).
- Westermann, Claus, ed. 1974. Genesis 1-11: A Continental Commentary 1st ed. Translated by John J. Scullion. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press, 1994.
- Westermeyer, Paul. Let the People Sing: Hymn Tunes in Perspective. Chicago, IL: GIA Publications, 2005.
- Wevers, John William. Notes on the Greek Text of Genesis. Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1993.
- “Wheel of Fortune.” In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Wheel_of_Fortune (accessed December 18, 2007).
- Wheeler, Brannon M. Mecca and Eden: Ritual, Relics, and Territory in Islam. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press, 2006.
- . Prophets in the Quran: An Introduction to the Quran and Muslim Exegesis. Comparative Islam Studies, ed. Brannon M. Wheeler. London, England: Continuum, 2002.
- Wheeler, Geraldine, and Lindsay Farrell. “Frank Wesley: Religious worlds retrospective exhibition.” Australian EJournal of Theology 4 (February 2005). http://dlibrary.acu.edu.au/research/theology/ejournal/aejt_4/farrell.htm (accessed September 8, 2007).
- White, Clayton M., and Mark D. Thomas. “On balancing faith in Mormonism with traditional biblical stories: The Noachian flood story.” Dialogue: A Journal of Mormon Thought 40, no. 3 (Fall 2007): 85-110.
- White, Ellen G. The Faith I Live By: The Morning Watch Texts with Appropriate Selections Compiled from the Writings of Ellen G. White. Washington, DC: Review and Herald, 1958.
- Whitfield, Roderick. Textiles, Sculpture, and Other Arts. The Art of Central Asia: The Stein Collection in the British Museum 3. Tokyo, Japan: Kodansha International Ltd (in cooperation with the Trustees of the British Museum), 1985.
- Whitlock, Stephen T. E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, August 23, 2006.
- . E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, June 9, 2008.
- Whitmer, David. An Address to All Believers in Christ by a Witness to the Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon. Richmond, MO, 1887.
- Whitney, Elizabeth Ann. “A leaf from an autobiography.” The Woman’s Exponent 7:11, November 1, 1878, 83. <http://contentdm.lib.byu.edu/cgi-bin/showfile.exe?CISOROOT=/WomansExp&CISOPTR=6638>. (accessed July 31, 2009).
- Whitney, Orson F. “A marvelous work and a wonder, etc. (7 October 1916).” In General Conference Report of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Eighty-Sixth Annual Conference, 51-57. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1916.
- . “Discourse (April 1928).” In General Conference Report of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Ninety-Eighth Annual Conference, 56-61. Salt Lake City, UT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1928.
- . 1888. The Life of Heber C. Kimball. 2nd ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Stevens & Wallis, 1945.
- . 1921. “Saturday Night Thoughts: A Series of Dissertations on Spiritual, Historical and Philosophic Themes (Whitney on Doctrine).” In Cowley and Whitney on Doctrine (Originally published as “Cowley’s Talks on Doctrine” (Ben E. Rich, comp.) and “Saturday Night Thoughts”), edited by Forace Green, 197-517. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1963.

- Whittaker, David J. "Studying Joseph Smith Jr.: A guide to the sources." In Joseph Smith Jr.: Reappraisals After Two Centuries, edited by Reid L. Neilson and Terryl L. Givens, 221-37. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 2009.
- . "Substituted names in the published revelations of Joseph Smith." BYU Studies 23, no. 1 (1983): 103-12.
- Wickman, Lance B. "But if not." Ensign 32, November 2002, 30-32.
- Widengren, Geo. "Die Mandäer." In Religionsgeschichte des Orients in der Zeit der Weltreligionen, edited by Johannes Leipoldt, Geo Widengren, Alfred Adam, Bertold Spuler, Ernst Ludwig Dietrich, Johannes W. Fück, A. J. Arberry, R. Strothmann and Annemarie von Gabain. Handbuch der Orientalistik 1, VIII, 2, eds. H. Franke, J. Gonda, H. Hammitzsch, H. Kees, J. E. van Lohuizen-de Leeuw and F. Vos, 83-101. Leiden, The Netherlands: E. J. Brill, 1961.
- . "Heavenly enthronement and baptism studies in Mandaean baptism." In Religions in Antiquity: Essays in Memory of Erwin Ramsdell Goodenough, edited by Jacob Neusner. 14 vols. Religions in Antiquity, Studies in the History of Religions (Supplements to Numen) 551-582. Leiden, The Netherlands: Brill, 1968.
- . 1961. Mani and Manichaeism. Translated by Charles Kessler. English ed. History of Religion Series, ed. E. O. James. New York City, NY: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1965.
- Widtsoe, John A. "58. Are all exalted who enter the celestial glory?" In Evidences and Reconciliations: Aids to Faith in a Modern Day, edited by John A. Widtsoe. 2nd ed, 277-78. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1943.
- . "22. Did the flood cover the highest mountains of the earth?" In Evidences and Reconciliations: Aids to Faith in a Modern Day, edited by John A. Widtsoe. 2nd ed., 109-12. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1943.
- . 1943, 1947, 1951. Evidences and Reconciliations. 3 vols. Single Volume ed. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1960.
- . "The House of the Lord." Improvement Era 39, April 1936, 228. Reprint, Improvement Era 48:10 (October 1945), 584; 72:7 (July 1969), 13-14.
- . In a Sunlit Land: The Autobiography of John A. Widtsoe. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News Press, 1952.
- . 1921. "Temple worship. Original publication in The Utah Genealogical and Historical Magazine 12, April 1921, 49-64." In The House of the Lord, edited by Harvard S. Heath, 185-97. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 1998.
- Wilcox, S. Michael. Fire in the Bones: William Tyndale—Martyr, Father of the English Bible. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2004.
- Wilkinson, David. God, Time, and Stephen Hawking. London, England: Monarch Books, 2001.
- Wilkinson, Richard H. 1992. Reading Egyptian Art: A Hieroglyphic Guide to Ancient Egyptian Painting and Sculpture. London, England: Thames and Hudson, 2006.
- "William Blake." In Wikipedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/William_Blake (accessed November 23, 2007).
- "William Blake online: Blake's cast of characters: Personification of the fallen tyrant." In Tate Gallery. http://www.tate.org.uk/learning/worksinfocus/blake/imagin/cast_04.html (accessed April 27, 2007).
- Williams, Drew. The Complete Idiot's Guide to Understanding Mormonism. Indianapolis, IN: Alpha Books, 2003.
- Williams, Francis E. ed. "The Apocryphon of James (I, 2)." In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed, 29-37. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- Williams, Michael Allen. Rethinking 'Gnosticism': An Argument for Dismantling a Dubious Category. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1996.
- Williams, Nicholas M. 1998. Ideology and Utopia in the Poetry of William Blake. Cambridge Studies in Romanticism 28, eds. Marilyn Butler and James Chandler. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2006.
- Williams, Wesley. 2005. "The shadow of God: Speculations on the body divine in Jewish esoteric tradition." In The Black God. <http://www.theblackgod.com/Shadow%20of%20God%20Short%5B1%5D.pdf> (accessed December 21, 2007).
- Wilson, Charles W. Golgotha and the Holy Sepulchre. London, England: The Committee of the Palestine Exploration Fund, 1906.
- Wilson, Duane. "Temple Symbolism in The Conflict of Adam and Eve." Studia Antiqua 2, no. 2 (Fall 2002): 33-61.
- Wilson, E. O. The Creation. New York City, NY: W. W. Norton, 2006.
- Wilson, John A. The Culture of Ancient Egypt. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press, 1951.
- Wilson, Lindsay. Joseph Wise and Otherwise: The Intersection of Wisdom and Covenant in Genesis 37-50. Paternoster Biblical Monographs. Waynesboro, GA: Paternoster Press, 2005.
- Wilson, Lycurgus A. Wilson. Life of David W. Patten. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret News, 1900. Reprint, Heber City, UT: Archive Publishers, 2000.
- Wilson, R. McLain. The Gospel of Philip. New York City, NY: Harper and Row, 1962.
- Windfuhr, Gernot L. "Where guardian spirits watch by night and evil spirits fail: The Zoroastrian prototypical heaven." In The Word of the Lord Shall Go Forth: Essays in Honor of David Noel Freedman in Celebration of His Sixtieth Birthday, edited by Carol L. Myers and M. O'Connor. American Schools of Oriental Research Special Volume Series 1, ed. Eric M. Meyers, 625-45. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns, 1983.

- Winston, David. Logos and Mystical Theology in Philo of Alexandria. Cincinnati, OH: Hebrew Union College Press, 1985.
- . “Preexistence in Hellenic, Judaic and Mormon sources.” In Reflections on Mormonism: Judeo-Christian Parallels, Papers Delivered at the Religious Studies Center Symposium, Brigham Young University, March 10-11, 1978, edited by Truman G. Madsen. Religious Studies Monograph Series 4, 13-35. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1978.
- Wintermute, O. S. ed. “Jubilees.” In The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, edited by James H. Charlesworth. Vol. 2, 35-142. Garden City, NY: Doubleday and Company, 1983.
- Wirth, Diane E. Decoding Ancient America: A Guide to the Archaeology of the Book of Mormon. Springville, UT: Horizon, 2007.
- . E-mail message to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, March 12, 2009.
- . Parallels: Mesoamerican and Ancient Middle Eastern Traditions. St. George, UT: Stonecliff Publishing, 2003.
- Wise, Michael, Martin Abegg, Jr., and Edward Cook, eds. The Dead Sea Scrolls: A New Translation. New York City, NY: Harper-Collins, 1996.
- Wisse, Frederik ed. “The Apocryphon of John (II, 1, III, 1, IV, 1, and BG 8502,2).” In The Nag Hammadi Library in English, edited by James M. Robinson. 3rd, Completely Revised ed., 104-23. San Francisco, CA: HarperSanFrancisco, 1990.
- Witham, Larry A. Where Darwin Meets the Bible: Creationists and Evolutionists in America. New York City, NY: Oxford University Press, 2002.
- Witherington, Ben, III. Letters and Homilies for Jewish Christians: A Socio-Rhetorical Commentary on Hebrews, James and Jude. Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press Academic, 2007.
- Wittgenstein, Ludwig. 1949. Philosophical Investigations. Translated by G. E. M. Anscombe. 3rd ed. Malden, MA: Blackwell Publishing, 2001.
- Woodford, Robert J. “Discoveries from the Joseph Smith Papers Project: The early manuscripts.” In The Doctrine and Covenants: Revelations in Context: The 37th Annual Brigham Young University Sidney B. Sperry Symposium, edited by Andrew H. Hedges, J. Spencer Fluhrman and Alonzo L. Gaskill, 23-39. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2008.
- . “The Historical Development of the Doctrine and Covenants (3 vols.).” Doctoral Dissertation, Brigham Young University, 1974.
- Woodruff, Wilford. “Administration of angels (Discourse delivered by President Wilford Woodruff, at a Priesthood Meeting, held in Provo, Sunday Evening, March 3rd, 1889).” In Collected Discourses, edited by Brian H. Stuy. 5 vols. Vol. 1, 215-20. Woodland Hills, UT: B.H.S. Publishing, 1987.
- . 1894. “The law of adoption (Delivered by President Wilford Woodruff, at the Sixty-fourth Annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, held in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday Morning, April 8th, 1894).” In Collected Discourses, edited by Brian H. Stuy. 5 vols. Vol. 4, 67-76. Woodland Hills, UT: B.H.S. Publishing, 1991.
- . 1896. “Moses Thatcher (Discourse delivered by President Wilford Woodruff, at the General Conference of the Church, held in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Monday Afternoon, October 5, 1896).” In Collected Discourses, edited by Brian H. Stuy. 5 vols. Vol. 5, 198-201. Woodland Hills, UT: B.H.S. Publishing, 1992.
- . “The administration of angels (Discourse delivered by President Wilford Woodruff, at the Weber Stake Conference, Ogden, Monday, October 19, 1896).” In Collected Discourses, edited by Brian H. Stuy. 5 vols. Vol. 5, 233-40. Woodland Hills, UT: B.H.S. Publishing, 1992.
- . 1909. Wilford Woodruff: History of His Life and Labors. Edited by Matthias F. Cowley. Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1964.
- . Wilford Woodruff Journal: 1833-1898. 9 vols. Edited by Scott Kenney. Midvale, UT: Signature Books, 1983-1985.
- Wooton, Richard T. Saints and Scientists. Mesa, AZ: EduTech Corporation, 1992.
- Wray, Naomi. “Background Information about the Forgiving Father.” Unpublished material provided to Jeffrey M. Bradshaw, April 2, 2007.
- . Frank Wesley: Exploring Faith with a Brush. Auckland, NZ: Pace Publishing, 1989.
- Wright, Archie T. The Origin of Evil Spirits. Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 2. Reihe 198, ed. Jörg Frey. Tübingen, Germany: Mohr Siebeck, 2005.
- Wright, J. Edward. “The synagogue paintings from Dura Europos.” In The Apocryphal Ezekiel, edited by Michael E. Stone, Benjamin E. Wright and David Satran. Early Judaism and Its Literature 18, ed. John C. Reeves, 101-12. Atlanta, GA: Society of Biblical Literature, 2000.
- Wright, Nicholas Thomas. Christian Origins and the Question of God. Vol. 3: The Resurrection of the Son of God. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress, 2003.

- . “How can the Bible be authoritative?” Vox Evangelica 21 (1991): 7-32. http://www.ntwrightpage.com/Wright_Bible_Authoritative.htm (accessed April 7, 2008).
- . 2005. The Last Word: Beyond the Bible Wars to a New Understanding of the Authority of Scripture. New York City, NY: HarperSanFrancisco, 2006.
- . Surprised by Hope: Rethinking Heaven, the Resurrection, and the Mission of the Church. New York City, NY: HarperOne, 2008.
- Wurst, Gregor, ed. The Manichaean Coptic Papyri in the Chester Beatty Library Psalm Book Part II, 1, Die Berna-Psalmen. Corpus Fontium Manichaeorum, Series Coptica, ed. Alois van Tongerloo, Samuel N. C. Lieu and Johannes van Oort. Turnhout, Belgium: Brepols, 1996.
- Wyatt, Nicholas. Space and Time in the Religious Life of the Near East. Sheffield, England: Sheffield Academic Press, 2001.
- Yadin, Yigal, ed. 1977. The Temple Scroll. English ed. 3 vols. Jerusalem, Israel: The Israel Exploration Society, 1983.
- Yamauchi, Edwin M. 1970. Gnostic Ethics and Mandaean Origins. Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2004.
- , ed. Mandaic Incantation Texts. American Oriental Series 49. New Haven, CN: American Oriental Society, 1967.
- Yarnold, E. “Teleios in St. Matthew’s Gospel.” In Texte und Untersuchungen 102 (1968). Studia Evangelica 4, 269-73.
- “Yazidi.” In Wikipedia. <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Yezidi> (accessed September 14, 2007).
- Young, Brigham. 1941. Discourses of Brigham Young. Edited by John A. Widtsoe. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1977.
- . Letters of Brigham Young to His Sons. Edited by Dean C. Jessee. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, in collaboration with the Historical Department of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1974.
- . Manuscript History of Brigham Young 1847-1850. Edited by William S. Harwell. Salt Lake City, UT: Collier’s Publishing, 1997.
- . The Office Journal of President Brigham Young: 1858-1863, Book D. Edited by Fred C. Collier. Hanna, UT: Collier’s Publishing Company, 2006.
- . 1845. “Letter to Lyman Wight et al.: A plea for union.” In History of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Documentary History), edited by Joseph Smith, Jr. and Brigham Henry Roberts. 7 vols. Vol. 7, 400-01. Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 1978.
- . 1852. “Necessity of the servants of God being pure in heart and in deed; dependence on the Holy Spirit; celestial exaltations, etc. (Remarks at a special conference held in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 28 August 1852).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 6, 273-77. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1852. “Self-government; mysteries; recreation and amusements, not in themselves sinful; tithing; Adam, our Father and our God (Sermon delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 9 April 1852).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 1, 46-53. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1852. “Weakness and impotence of men; condition of the Saints; dedication to the Lord; the Millennium (Discourse delivered at the opening of the new Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 6 April 1852).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 1, 198-203. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1853. “Duties and privileges; sacrifice; confidence; language; organization and disorganization; taking wives (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 27 February 1853).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 1, 112-20. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1853. “Necessity of building temples; the endowment (Oration delivered in the South-East Cornerstone of the Temple at Great Salt Lake City, after the First Presidency and the Patriarch had laid the Stone, 6 April 1853).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 2, 29-33. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1853. “The Gospel; growing in knowledge; the Lord’s supper; blessings of faithfulness; utility of persecution; creation of Adam; experience (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 23 October 1853).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 2, 1-10. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1853. “The Temple cornerstones; the apostleship, etc. (Sermon delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 6 April 1853, at the General Conference).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 1, 131-37. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1854. “‘I propose to speak in a subject that does not immediately concern yours or my welfare,’ a sermon delivered on 8 October 1854.” In The Essential Brigham Young. Classics in Mormon Thought 3, 86-103. Salt Lake City, UT: Signature Books, 1992.

- . 1854. “Spiritual gifts; hell; the spirit world; the elders and the nations; the Lamanites; the temple (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 3 December 1854).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 2, 136-45. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1855. “Consecration (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 3 June 1855).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 2, 298-308. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1856. “Disinclination of men to learn through the teachings and experience of others; Latter-day Saints compared with those of former days; sacrifice; sheep and goats; customs and traditions (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 20 April 1856).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 3, 316-27. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1856. “Preaching; necessity of the Saints having confidence in those over them; necessity of wisdom in dealing with those who are dead to good works; ignorance of worldly philosophers; the principle of life as shown in the dissolution of organized matter (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 23 March 1856).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 3, 272-79. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1856. “The emigrating saints were prompted by the spirit of God (Remarks by Brigham Young, made in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, November 9, 1856).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 4, 111. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1857. “Necessity for a reformation a disgrace; intelligence a gift, increased by imparting; spirit of God; variety in spiritual as well as natural organizations; God the Father of the spirits of all mankind, etc. (Discourse delivered in Great Salt Lake City, 8 March 1857).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 4, 264-72. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1857. “To know God is eternal life; God the Father of our spirits and bodies; things created spiritually first; atonement by the shedding of blood (Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 8 February 1857).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 4, 215-21. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1859. “Intelligence, etc. (Remarks delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 9 October 1859).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 7, 282-91. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1859. “Progress in knowledge, etc. (Remarks by President Brigham Young, delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, October 8, 1859).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 7, 331-34. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1859. “Providences of God; privileges and duties of the Saints; spiritual operations and manifestations; the spirit world, etc. (Remarks made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 1 September 1859).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 7, 237-44. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1860. “Privileges of the Sabbath; duty of living our religion; human longevity, etc. (Remarks by President Brigham Young, made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, May 20, 1860).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 8, 57-64. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1884. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1860. “Remarks pertaining to foreign missions, etc. (Remarks by President Brigham Young, made in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, September 23, 1860).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 8, 183-87. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1884. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1860. “Blessings of the Saints; covetousness, etc. (Remarks made in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 30 September 1860).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 8, 188-91. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1860. “Sufferings of the Saints; overcoming evil with good, etc. (Remarks made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 5 January 1860).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 9, 101-08. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1860a. “Religion, progress, and privileges of the Saints, etc. (Remarks by President Brigham Young, made at Ogden City, June 12, 1860-a).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 8, 80-84. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1860b. “Salvation and condemnation—improvement, etc. (Remarks by President Brigham Young, made at Willow Creek, June 12, 1860-b).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 8, 293-97. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1861. “Varieties of mind and character—chastisement—freedom, etc. (Remarks by President Brigham Young, made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, February 17, 1861).” In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 9, 121-25. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.

- . 1862. "Government of the tongue; impartiality of judgment; sealing (Remarks made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 6 April 1862)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 9, 266-71. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1862. "Salvation the result of individual exertion (Remarks made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 23 March 1862)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 9, 246-50. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1862. "The Kingdom of God (Remarks made in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 13 July 1862)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 9, 308-17. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1864. "Necessity of a living testimony of the Holy Ghost; how we are to be united, etc. (Remarks delivered in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 7 October 1864)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 10, 339-40. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1884. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1864. "Turning out the water of the Weber; the sufferings of the saints; the desires of the servants of God to bless the people; the blessings of the Lord to Israel; endowments, etc. (Instructions by President Brigham Young, during his visit to Davis and Weber counties, June 10, 11, 12, and 13, 1864)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 10, 307-14. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1884. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1864. "Difference of ideas entertained respecting God; the foundation of our religion based upon new revelation; man made in the image of God; we are the offspring of God, etc. (Remarks delivered in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 31 July 1864)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 10, 318-27. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1864. "Salvation the result of individual exertion." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 9, 246-50. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1865. "Ordinance of bread and wine; its nature; character of God and of Jesus; reasons why sin and death exist; earthly probation necessary for future glory; danger of apostasy (Remarks delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 8 January 1865)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 11, 39-44. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1865. "Personality of God; his attributes; eternal life, etc. (Remarks delivered at the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 18 June 1865)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 11, 119-28. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1866. "The kingdom of God on earth is a living, moving, effective institution: We do not carry it, but it carries us (Remarks by President Brigham Young, in the Tabernacle, in Great Salt Lake City, June 17, 1866)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 11, 249-56. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1866. "Delegate Hooper; beneficial effects of polygamy; final redemption of Cain." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 11, 266-72. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1867. "How divisions were introduced into the Christian world; the Gospel perfect, but its teachers imperfect; the priesthood and its restoration (Discourse delivered 23 June 1867)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 12, 64-71. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1867. "Remarks delivered in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 8 April 1867." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 11, 371-75. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1869. "Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 14 November 1869." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 13, 150-56. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1870. "Discourse delivered in the new Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 30 October 1870." In Journal of Discourses. 282 vols. Vol. 13, 274-83. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1870. "Sin; the atonement; good and evil; the Kingdom of God (Remarks delivered in the Tabernacle, Ogden City, 10 July 1870)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 14, 70-73. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1871. "Remarks delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 14 May 1871." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 14, 114-18. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1872. "The fulness of the Gospel; its power to unite; its comprehensiveness; definition of its priesthood;

- condition of apostates." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 15, 121-29. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1884. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1872. "Increase of Saints since Joseph Smith's death; Joseph Smith's sons; resurrection and Millennial work (Remarks delivered at Farmington, Saturday Afternoon, 24 August 1872)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 15, 135-39. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1873. "Discourse delivered in the Bowery, Logan City, Saturday Afternoon, 28 June 1873." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 16, 63-71. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1873. "The order of Enoch (Remarks delivered in the Bowery, Logan City, Sunday Morning, 29 June 1873)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 16, 122-23. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1874. "Discourse delivered in the new Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday Afternoon, 3 May 1874." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 17, 51-56. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1874. "Nothing strange or new to live and die; must die in order to be quickened; the world of mankind ignorant of immortality; the righteous should live to enjoy the light of their spirit; all people are the children of God; they learn by contrast; world to be organized and peopled in future existence (Discourse delivered at the funeral services of Elder Thomas Williams, in the Fourteenth Ward, Assembly Rooms, Salt Lake City, Sunday Morning, 10 July 1874)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 17, 139-45. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- . 1876. "Personal revelation the basis of personal knowledge; philosophic view of Creation; apostasy involves disorganization and returns to primitive element; one man power (Discourse by Brigham Young, delivered in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday Afternoon, September 17, 1876)." In Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. Vol. 18, 230-35. Liverpool and London, England: Latter-day Saints Book Depot, 1853-1886. Reprint, Salt Lake City, UT: Bookcraft, 1966.
- Young, Frances, Lewis Ayres, and Andrew Louth, eds. The Cambridge History of Early Christian Literature. Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2004.
- Youngquist, Paul. Madness and Blake's Myth. University Park, PA: The Pennsylvania State University Press, 1989.
- Zabkar, Louis V. "The theocracy of Amarna and the doctrine of the Ba." Journal of Near Eastern Studies 13 (1954): 87.
- Zagzebski, Linda Trinkaus. The Dilemma of Freedom and Foreknowledge. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press, 1991.
- Zilio-Grandi, Ida. "Paradise in the Koran and in the Muslim exegetical tradition." In The Earthly Paradise: The Garden of Eden from Antiquity to Modernity, edited by F. Regina Psaki and Charles Hindley. International Studies in Formative Christianity and Judaism, 75-90. Binghamton, NY: Academic Studies in the History of Judaism, Global Publications, State University of New York at Binghamton, 2002.
- Zimmer Gunsul Frasca Partnership. Building the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Conference Center. New York City, NY: Edzioni Press, 2002.
- Zimmerli, Walther. 1969. Ezekiel 2: A Commentary on the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel Chapters 25-48. Translated by James D. Martin. Edited by Paul D. Hanson and Leonard J. Greenspoon. Hermeneia—A Critical and Historical Commentary on the Bible, eds. Frank Moore Cross, Klaus Baltzer, Paul D. Hanson, S. Dean McBride, Jr. and Roland E. Murphy. Philadelphia, PA: Fortress Press, 1983.
- "Ziziphus." In Wikipedia. <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ziziphus> (accessed July 30, 2007).
- Zlotowitz, Gedaliah, ed. The Schottenstein Edition Talmud Bavli. 73 vols. Brooklyn, NY: ArtScroll/Mesorah, 1990-2004.
- , ed. The Schottenstein Edition Talmud Yerushalmi. Brooklyn, NY: ArtScroll/Mesorah, 2005-.
- Zlotowitz, Rabbi Meir, and Rabbi Nosson Scherman, eds. 1977. Bereishis/Genesis: A New Translation with a Commentary Anthologized from Talmudic, Midrashic and Rabbinic Sources. 2nd ed. Two vols. ArtScroll Tanach Series, ed. Rabbi Nosson Scherman and Rabbi Meir Zlotowitz. Brooklyn, NY: Mesorah Publications, 1986.
- Zornberg, Avivah Gottlieb. Genesis: The Beginning of Desire. Philadelphia, PA: Jewish Publication Society, 1995.
- "Zoroaster." In Encyclopedia Britannica Online. <http://www.britannica.com/eb/article-8138> (accessed July 16, 2007).
- Zucker, Louis C. "Joseph Smith as a student of Hebrew." Dialogue 3, no. 2 (1968): 41-55.

COLOR PLATES

for Selected Figures

0-4: Moses Indignant at the Golden Calf.....	1012
0-5: Rock Sculpted with Ark and Annunciation	1012
1-2: Jacob's Ladder	1012
1-3: Ascent	1012
1-7: Abraham and the Angel Yahoel Approach the Throne of God....	1013
1-8: Guardians Part the Veils, Taking Muhammad by the Hand	1014
2-7: The Creation of Adam	1015
2-8: The Creation of Eve	1014
3-2: The Creation of Light	1016
3-3: The Four and Twenty Elders.....	1016
3-6: Behold Your Little Ones.....	1017
4-2: God Creating the Universe	1017
4-3: The Third Day of Creation.....	1018
4-5: When the Morning Stars Sang Together.....	1018
4-6: Satan in his Original Glory	1019
4-8: The Fall of the Rebel Angels (Beccafumi).....	1019
4-9: The Fall of the Rebel Angels (Bruegel).....	1020
4-15: The Rebuke of Adam and Eve	1021
4-16: Expulsion of Adam and Eve	1021
4-17: Cherubim and the Flaming Sword	1022
4-18: The Expulsion of Adam and Eve.....	1022
4-21: The Clothing of Adam and Eve.....	1023
5-2: The Archangel Michael Subduing Satan	1023
5-6: Cain and Abel (Titian)	1024
5-7: Cain and Abel (Il Monrealese)	1024
5-8: Cain, Based on Victor Hugo's Poem	1025
5-10: The Holy Trinity.....	1026
5-13: The Ladder of Virtues.....	1027
6-5: Toward Immortality and Eternal Youth.....	1028
6-6: The Forgiving Father	1029
6-7: The Return of the Prodigal Son.....	1028
6-9: Gate to Paradise.....	1030
6-12: Descent of Christ into Limbo.....	1033
E2-1: The Lord Answers Job from the Whirlwind	1031
E19-3: Generations	1030
E20-1: Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Vitale	1032
E20-2: Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Apollinare in Classe	1032
E24-1: The Primaeval Giants Sunk in the Soil	1033
E25-2: Adam and Eve Enthroned in Paradise.....	1031

E53-3: Mount Sinai and the Tabernacle.....	1034
E53-4: The Nativity of Christ	1034
E53-5: The Three Magi.....	1035
E53-6: Funerary Chamber Adjoining the Grotto of the Teachings.....	1035
E53-7: Telesterion at Eleusis.....	1036
E53-9: The Paradise Altar of Bamberg.....	1036
E53-13: Abraham and the Angel Yahoel Ascend on Wings of Eagles	1037
E53-15: The Cycle of Ezekiel from the Synagogue at Dura Europos ..	1039
E54-2: Noah Sees the Ark in Vision.....	1039
E55-3: Itzpapalotl and the Broken Tree	1038

FIGURE 1-2: Jacob's Ladder. William Blake (see p. 34).

FIGURE 0-4: Moses Indignant at the Golden Calf. William Blake (see p. 6).

FIGURE 0-5: Rock Sculpted with Ark and Annunciation. William Blake (see p. 6).

FIGURE 1-3: Ascent. David Linn (see p. 34).

FIGURE 1-7: Abraham and the Angel Yahoel Approach the Throne of God. (see p. 38).

FIGURE 2-8: The Creation of Eve (see p. 89)

FIGURE 1-8: Guardians Part the Veils, Taking Muhammad by the Hand (see p. 39)

FIGURE 2-7: The Creation of Adam (see p. 88)

FIGURE 3-2: The Creation of Light. Gaetano Prevati (see p. 136).

FIGURE 3-3: The Four and Twenty Elders. William Blake (see p. 137).

FIGURE 3-6: Behold Your Little Ones. David Lindsay (see p. 139).

FIGURE 4-2: God Creating the Universe. William Blake (see p. 217).

FIGURE 4-3: The Third Day of Creation. Hieronymus Bosch (see p. 218).

FIGURE 4-5: When the Morning Stars Sang Together. William Blake (see p. 223).

FIGURE 4-6: Satan in his Original Glory. William Blake (see p. 224).

FIGURE 4-8: The Fall of the Rebel Angels. Domenico Beccafumi (see p. 226).

FIGURE 4-9: The Fall of the Rebel Angels, Pieter Bruegel, the Elder (see p. 227).

FIGURE 4-15: The Rebuke of Adam and Eve. Domenico Zampieri (see p. 232).

FIGURE 4-16: Expulsion of Adam and Eve. Michelangelo Buonarroti (see p. 233).

FIGURE 4-17: Cherubim and the Flaming Sword. J. Kirk Richards (see p. 233).

FIGURE 4-18: The Expulsion of Adam and Eve. (see p. 234).

FIGURE 4-2.1: The Clothing of Adam and Eve. William Blake (see p. 238).

FIGURE 5-2: The Archangel Michael Subduing Satan. Raphael (see p. 326).

FIGURE 5-6: Cain and Abel. Titian (see p. 336).

FIGURE 5-7: Cain and Abel. Il Monrealese (see p. 336).

FIGURE 5-8: Cain, Based on Victor Hugo's Poem. Cormon (see p. 337).

FIGURE 5-10: The Holy Trinity. Andrei Rublev (see p. 340).

FIGURE 6-5: Toward Immortality and Eternal Youth. Albert-Dominique Roze (see p. 463).

FIGURE 6-7: The Return of the Prodigal Son. Pompeo Batoni (see p. 465).

FIGURE 6-6: The Forgiving Father. Frank Wesley (see p. 464).

FIGURE E19-3: Generations. Valeriano Ugolini (see p. 568).

FIGURE 6-9: Gate to Paradise. Wulf E. Barsch (see p. 468).

FIGURE E25-2: Adam and Eve Enthroned in Paradise. (see p. 593).

FIGURE E2-1: The Lord Answers Job from the Whirlwind. William Blake (see p. 517).

FIGURE E20-1: Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Vitale. (see p. 573).

FIGURE E20-2: Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Apollinare in Classe. (see p. 573).

FIGURE E24-1: The Primalval Giants Sunk in the Soil, William Blake (see p. 588).

FIGURE E24-2: Descent of Christ into Limbo, Andrea da Firenze (see p. 471).

FIGURE E53-3: Mount Sinai and the Tabernacle. (see p. 671).

FIGURE E53-4: The Nativity of Christ. (see p. 672).

FIGURE 53-5: The Three Magi. (see p. 673).

FIGURE E53-6: Funerary Chamber Adjoining the Grotto of the Teachings. (see p. 674).

FIGURE E53-9: The Paradise Altar of Ramberg. (see p. 680).

FIGURE E53-7: Telesterion at Eleusis. (see p. 676).

FIGURE E53-13: Abraham and the Angel Yahoel Ascend on Wings of Birds. (see p. 684).

FIGURE E55-3: Itzpapalotl and the Broken Tree of Tamoanchan. (see p. 698).

FIGURE E53-15: The Cycle of Ezekiel from the Synagogue at Dura Europos. (see p. 688).

FIGURE E54-2: Noah Sees the Ark in Vision. (see p. 696).

INDEXES

Indexes	1041
Thumbnail Index to Figures	1042
Scripture Index.....	1051
Index of Latter-day Prophets.....	1069
Topical Index.....	1071

About the Indexes

Thumbnail Index to Figures

The thumbnail index is designed to help the reader search visually for a desired figure or table. Each of these is also listed alphabetically by title in the Topical Index under the heading of “Figures.” Additionally, many figures are listed under the name of the appropriate artist, photographer, topic, or place name.

Scripture Index

Entries in this index reference pages where a given scriptural passage is mentioned, referenced, quoted, or discussed.

The original plans for the book also included an index to citations of ancient texts. However, it was suddenly realized during the indexing process that the number and complexity of the entries had exceeded the capacity of the indexing software. Schedule constraints required a quick switch to manual methods for the remainder of the work—a tedious and inevitably error-prone process. Regrettably, as a result of these last-minute complications, plans for an index to ancient texts had to be abandoned.

Index of Latter-day Prophets

This index lists references to and quotations from statements attributed to Presidents of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, either made before or during their respective presidencies. First Presidency statements are attributed to the individual who was serving as President at the time. The most specific date that could be found for each statement is listed; some dates, of course, are approximate or unknown. Dates of first publication are used in lieu of more specific dates when necessary.

Topical Index

Topics, figures, and names of selected individuals discussed in the text are listed alphabetically. Titles of many of the ancient texts described in the Annotated Bibliography are also included. Special attention has been given to entries for cross-cutting or obscure topics that may be difficult to find by browsing the Table of Contents. Because most readers will already be familiar with the central thread of Judeo-Christian themes and sources that run through the book, relatively greater space in the index is allowed for entries relating to other cultural and religious groups. No attempt has been made to exhaustively index individuals or topics that are ubiquitous in the text (e.g., “Eve,” “God,” “heaven,” “revelation”).

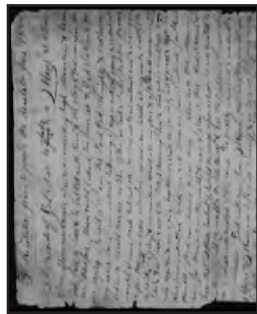

Figure 0-1, Page xxxvi.
Old Testament Manuscript 1
Page 1, 1830.

Figure 0-2, Page 3.
Time Sequence of Joseph Smith
Translation of Old Testament

Figure 1-2, Page 34.
Jacob's Ladder, ca. 1800.
William Blake, 1757-1827.

Figure 1-7, Page 38.
Abraham and the An Approach the Throne

Take Me
me of God.

Figure 2-1, Page 82.
Creation of Sun, Moon, Planets.
Michelangelo Buonarroti.

Figure 2-2, Page 84.
The First Day of Creation, 1925.
M. C. Escher, 1898-1972.

Figure 2-3, Page 86.
Separation of Light, Darkness.
Michelangelo Buonarroti.

Figure 2-4, Page 87.
The Second Day of Creation.
M. C. Escher, 1898-1972.

Figure 2-5, Page 87.
The Third Day of Creation.
M. C. Escher, 1898-1972.

Figure 2-6, Page 87.
The Fourth Day of Creation.
M. C. Escher, 1898-1972.

Figure 2-7, Page 88.
The Creation of Adam, 1510.
Michelangelo Buonarroti.

Figure 2-8, Page 89.
The Creation of Eve, 1510.
Michelangelo Buonarroti.

Figure 3-1, Page 132.
The Garden of Eden, 1612.
Jan Breughel, the Elder.

Figure 3-2, Page 136.
The Creation of Light, 1913.
Gaetano Previati, 1852-1920.

Figure 3-3, Page 137.
The Four and Twenty Elders.
William Blake, 1757-1827.

Figure 3-4, Page 138.
The Great Chain of Being, 1579.
Didacus Valades.

Figure 3-5, Page 138.
A Depiction of Ein Sof and the Encircling Angelic Hierarchies.

Figure 3-6, Page 139.
Behold Your Little Ones, 1983.
David Lindsay, 1954-

Figure 3-7, Page 143.
Adam's Peak, 1780.
Antoine-François Prévost.

Thumbnail Index to Figures (PART 2 OF 5)

Figure 3-8, Page 145.
Court of Palms Mural at Mari.
Syria, ca. 1750 BCE.

Figure 3-9, Page 146.
Topography, Eden and Temple.
Michael P. Lyon, 1952-

Figure 3-10, Page 147.
Sacred Stones Emerging from Waters, John M. Lundquist.

Figure 3-11, Page 149.
Holy of Holies Solomon's Temple, Juan Bautista Villalpando.

Figure 4-1, Page 214.
Expulsion from Garden Eden.
Thomas Cole, 1801-1848.

Figure 4-2, Page 217.
God Creating the Universe.
William Blake, 1757-1827.

Figure 4-3, Page 218.
The Third Day of Creation.
Hieronymus Bosch.

Figure 4-4, Page 219.
Masjid al-Haram at Night.

Figure 4-5, Page 223.
When the Morning Stars Sang
Together, 1820. William Blake.

Figure 4-6, Page 224.
Satan in His Original Glory.
William Blake, 1757-1827.

Figure 4-7, Page 225.
Adam Enthroned, Angels Prostrating Themselves before Him.

Figure 4-8, Page 226.
The Fall of the Rebel Angels.
Domenico Beccafumi.

Figure 4-9, Page 227.
The Fall of the Rebel Angels.
Pieter Bruegel, the Elder.

Figure 4-10, Page 228.
God Creating Eve, Instructing
Adam and Eve, 12th century.

Figure 4-11, Page 230.
Anubis Leads Nakht Towards the Entrance to Other World.

Figure 4-12, Page 230.
Palm Tree Growing over
"Adam's Grave" in Hebron.

Figure 4-13, Page 231.
Ramesses II in the Ished-tree,
13th Century BCE.

Figure 4-14, Page 232.
Eve, After the Transgression,
1869. Eugene Delaplanche.

Figure 4-15, Page 232.
The Rebuke of Adam and Eve.
Domenico Zampieri.

Figure 4-16, Page 233.
Expulsion of Adam and Eve.
Michelangelo Buonarroti.

Figure 4-17, Page 233.
Cherubim and the Flaming
Sword. J. Kirk Richards, 1977-

Figure 4-18, Page 234.
The Expulsion of Adam and
Eve, 1646.

Figure 4-19, Page 235.
Three Zones of Sacredness
Within Eden.

Figure 4-20, Page 237.
Sacred Tree on the Apron of Charlemagne, eighth century.

Figure 4-21, Page 238.
The Clothing of Adam and Eve.
William Blake, 1757-1827.

Figure 5-1, Page 322.
The Offering of Abel and Cain.
Jan van Eyck, ca. 1395-1441.

Figure 5-2, Page 326.
The Archangel Michael Subduing Satan. Raffaello Sanzi.

Figure 5-3, Page 330.
How the Devil Deceived Eve,
early 14th century. Lutwin.

Figure 5-4, Page 332.
The Bond of Adam, Church
Mural, Voronet, Moldavia.

Figure 5-5, Page 334.
The Foolish Man and the Creditor. Jerry Harston, 1943-

Thumbnail Index to Figures (PART 3 OF 5)

Figure 5-6, Page 336.
Cain and Abel, ca. 1540.
Tiziano Vecellio (Titian).

Figure 5-7, Page 336.
Cain and Abel. Pietro Novelli (II Monrealese), 1603-1647.

Figure 5-8, Page 337.
Cain. Based on Victor Hugo's Poem. Fernand-Anne Piestre.

Figure 5-9, Page 339.
Abraham Entertains Three Strangers. Paul Gustave Doré.

Figure 5-10, Page 340.
The Holy Trinity, ca. 1408-1425.
Andrei Rublev.

Figure 5-11, Page 343.
The Two Ways.

Figure 5-12, Page 346.
The Devil Approaches Jabez Stone. Harold Denison.

Figure 5-13, Page 351.
The Ladder of Virtues, twelfth century. Herrad of Hohenbourg.

Figure 6-1, Page 454.
Adam and His Children.
Piero della Francesca.

Figure 6-2, Page 457.
Church History Sites in Western Missouri, 1831-1839.

Figure 6-3, Page 461.
The Quest of Seth for the Oil of Mercy, 1351-1360.

Figure 6-4, Page 462.
Ampulla 11, "Oil from the Tree of Life," 5th-6th century.

Figure 6-5, Page 463.
Toward Immortality.
Albert-Dominique Roze.

Figure 6-6, Page 464.
The Forgiving Father.
Frank Wesley, 1923-2002.

Figure 6-7, Page 465.
The Return of the Prodigal Son.
Pompeo Batoni, 1708-1787.

Figure 6-8, Page 466.
Romans 5:10-11, William Tyndale's Translation, 1526.

Figure 6-9, Page 468.
Gate to Paradise.
Wulf E. Barsch, 1943-

Figure 6-10, Page 469.
Drawing of a Barque Shrine,
Karnak. Michael P. Lyon, 1952-

Figure 6-11, Page 470.
Stela of Tantomani, Karnak.
Michael P. Lyon.

Figure 6-12, Page 471.
Descent of Christ into Limbo.
Andrea da Firenze.

Figure 6-13, Page 472.
Charity with an Anchor, 1876.

Figure 6-14, Page 473.
The Woman at the Tomb and the Ascension, ca. 400.

Figure E1-1, Page 514.
Shabaka Stone, ca. 710 BCE.

Figure E2-1, Page 517.
The Lord Answers Job from the Whirlwind. William Blake.

Figure E8-1, Page 542.
Creation Sequence, 1351-1360.

Figure E12-1, Page 549.
The Flight of the Little Prince.
Antoine de Saint Exupéry.

Figure E12-2, Page 550.
Chiasmic Structure, The Little
Prince. Laurent de Galemberet.

Figure E19-1, Page 566.
William W. Phelps. Author of
"If You Could Hie to Kolob."

Figure E19-2, Page 566.
Ralph Vaughan Williams. Arranger of "Kingsfold."

Figure E19-3, Page 568.
Generations, 2005
Valeriano Ugolini, 1948-

Thumbnail Index to Figures (PART 4 OF 5)

1048

INDEXES – THUMBNAIL INDEX TO FIGURES

Figure E20-1, Page 573.
Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Vitale, ca. 538-542 CE.

Figure E20-2, Page 573.
Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Apollinare in Classe, ca. 520 CE.

Figure E20-3, Page 574.
Linen Cloth, ca. 300-400.

Figure E24-1, Page 588.
The Primaeva Giants Sunk in the Soil. William Blake.

Figure E25-2, Page 593.
Adam and Eve Enthroned in Paradise, 16th-century.

Figure E36-1, Page 615.
Elevation of the Cross, 1948.

Figure E36-2, Page 616.
The Chapel of Adam, ca. 1167.
Laura E. Hoffman, 1961-

Figure E37-1, Page 619.
Luther's 1534 German Translation of Genesis 4:1.

Eden	Ark
Presence of God (Summit)	The
Tree of Knowledge (Heights)	Noah
The Righteous (Slopes)	Beasts
Perviant Sinners (Lower Slopes)	Animals

Figure E25-1, Page 592.
Divisions, Temple, Eden, Noah's Ark, Sinai. Ephrem the Syrian.

Figure E41-1, Page 627.
Excerpt from Preface to Milton.
William Blake.

Figure E42-1, Page 633.
Nebuchadnezzar, 1795.
William Blake, 1757-1827.

Figure E43-1, Page 634.
Portrait of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. Barbara Krafft.

Figure E44-1, Page 635.
Miranda — The Tempest.
John William Waterhouse.

Figure E50-1, Page 657.
Fu Xi with His Consort Nü Gua, ca. 689.

Hebrews	D&C 84:34	From the
Levitical Priesthood	Aaronic Priesthood	Moses
Melchizedek Priesthood	Moses	Abraham
	Melchizedek	"Priest and King"
		"Priest and King"

Figure E53-1, Page 668.
The Mysteries of Aaron, Moses, and Melchizedek.

Figure E53-2, Page 670.
Adam and Eve Outside
Paradise, 12th century.

Figure E53-3, Page 671.
Mount Sinai and Tabernacle,
Tours Pentateuch, ca. 600.

Figure E53-4, Page 672.
The Nativity of Christ, 15th century.

Figure E53-5, Page 673.
The Three Magi, Basilica of St.
Apollinare Nuovo, 6th century.

Figure E53-6, Page 674.
Funerary Chamber Adjoining
Grotto of Teachings, Eleona.

Figure E53-7, Page 676.
Telesterion at Eleusis.
Stephen T. Whitlock, 1951-

Figure E53-8, Page 679.
King David Prays Before the Ark, ca. 1250.

Figure E53-9, Page 680.
The Paradise Altar of Bamberg, twelfth century.

Figure E53-10, Page 682.
Plagon Exchanges Handclasp with Her Mother.

Figure E53-11, Page 683.
Introduction of Adam into
Paradise, thirteenth century.

Figure E53-12, Page 684.
The Angel Yahoel Takes Abraham by the Hand.

Figure E53-13, Page 684.
Abraham and the Angel Yahoel
Ascend.

Figure E53-14, Page 686.
Detail from the Robail-Navier
Family Sepulchre, ca. 1832.

Figure E53-15, Page 688.
The Cycle of Ezekiel from the Synagogue at Dura Europos.

MOSES IN THE SPIRIT WORLD (vv. 3-8)	I w ha Cf ear I h
God to show a vision of eternity
Reason for God's favor
The prophet is commissioned

Figure E54-1, Page 694.
Table of Parallels with the Apocalypse of Abraham.

Thumbnail Index to Figures (PART 5 OF 5)

Figure E54-2, Page 696.
Noah Sees the Ark in Vision.

Guiltly	Seductive
Inextinguishable	Tezcatlipoca d
Xochiquetzal	animal
Tlazoteotl Ixcuina	Tezcatlipoca d
Itzpapalotl	Huhuecoyotl

Figure E55-1, Page 697.
The Transgressions at Tamoanchan.

Figure E55-5, Page 700.
Man Emerging from a Split Tree
Trunk, Codex Vindobonensis.

Figure E55-2, Page 698.
Broken Tree of Tamoanchan,
Codex Telleriano-Remensis.

Figure E55-3, Page 698.
Itzpapalotl and the Broken Tree of Tamoanchan, Codex Borgia.

Figure E55-4, Page 700.
Anthropomorphic Tree, Codex Boturini.

Figure B-1, Page 872.
Pact and Pax: The Kushta. 1956.
E.S. Drower, 1879-1972.

SCRIPTURE INDEX

OLD TESTAMENT

Genesis

Genesis 1 ... 85, 200, 501

1:1 ... 1, 93, 853

1:1-3 ... 743

1:1-11 ... 825

1:2 ... 33

1:3 ... 136

1:13-22 ... 825

1:14 ... 386

1:18-21 ... 824

1:26 ... 325

1:26-27 ... 798, 886

1:26-28 ... 112

1:27 ... 325, 787

1:27-28 ... 801

1:28 ... 325

Genesis 1:1-2:3 ... 561

Genesis 1:1-2:4 ... 148

Genesis 1:1-6:4 ... 832

Genesis 1-2 ... 788, 825

Genesis 1-3 ... 463, 724

Genesis 1-4 ... 608

Genesis 1-5 ... 886

Genesis 1-6 ... 851

Genesis 1-11 ... 124, 391, 728, 840

Genesis 1:23-8:16 ... 833

Genesis 1-24 ... 3, 4

Genesis 2 ... 85, 811

2:1-3 ... 561

2:1-4 ... 200

2:4 ... 156

2:4-7 ... 228

2:6-7 ... 825

2:7 ... 158, 798

2:9 ... 10, 113, 276

2:16-17 ... 228

2:17 ... 174, 276

2:18-19 ... 825

2:19 ... 179

2:19-24 ... 228

2:21 ... 115

Genesis 2-3 ... 433, 555, 556

Genesis 2:4-3:34 ... 432

Genesis 3 ... 811

3:5 ... 276

3:6-8 ... 833

3:8 ... 231, 260

3:10-12 ... 829

3:11-14 ... 824

3:20 ... 158

3:22 ... 111, 276

Genesis 4 ... 617

4:1 ... 619, 735, 736

4:1-16 ... 432

4:5-7 ... 829

4:14 ... 388

4:23 ... 829

Genesis 5

5:1-2 ... 112

5:1-3 ... 195

5:3 ... 11

5:21-32 ... 818

Genesis 5:22-24:41 ... 3

Genesis 6 ... 827

6:1-2 ... 589

6:1-4 ... xxvii, 585, 586

6:2 ... 587

6:2-4 ... 586

6:4 ... 587

6:4-6 ... 590

6:6 ... 7

6:14 ... 211

6:17 ... 158

Genesis 6:5-9:17 ... 492

Genesis 6-11 ... 618

Genesis 7

7:2 ... 117

7:4 ... 155

7:12 ... 360

7:15 ... 158

7:17-20 ... 829

7:22 ... 158

7:23 ... 589

Genesis 8

8:4 ... 152

8:6-12 ... 80, 97

8:11 ... 403

8:21 ... 729

Genesis 9

9:1-77 ... 591

9:3-4 ... 114

9:19 ... 728

9:20 ... 591

9:21 ... 592

9:21-27 ... 591

Genesis 10 ... 848

10:2-5 ... 477

10:6-20 ... 477

10:7 ... 171

10:29 ... 171

10:30 ... 43

Genesis 11 ... 608

11:1-9 ... 116, 258, 473

11:2 ... 161

11:4 ... 391

11:6-9 ... 637

11:7 ... 111

11:10-27 ... 481

11:27 ... 154

11:27-29 ... 377

11:29 ... 377, 477

Genesis 12

12:5 ... 606

12:18 ... 261

Genesis 13

13:10 ... 160, 433

13:11 ... 161

Genesis 14 ... 667

14:17-20 ... 161

14:17-24 ... 523

14:18 ... 759

14:18-20 ... 573, 781

14:19 ... 367

14:22 ... 758

Genesis 15

15:9ff ... 42, 378

15:12 ... 181

Genesis 16 ... 393, 612

16:1-4 ... 258

16:8 ... 262

Genesis 17

17:5 ... 379

17:12 ... 617

17:12-13 ... 500

17:16 ... 367

17:19 ... 476

17:20 ... 477

17:23-27 ... 339

Genesis 18

18:2 ... 195, 481

18:3 ... 339

18:7 ... 767

18:13 ... 383

18:19 ... 606

Genesis 19

19:1 ... 195, 481

19:6 ... 173

19:19-38 ... 477

19:24-28 ... 492

Genesis 20

20:6 ... 252

20:9 ... 261

20:12 ... 377

Genesis 21

21:12-21 ... 207

21:19 ... 258

Genesis 22 ... 359, 821

22:1 ... 52, 78

22:2ff ... 78

22:13-15 ... 824

22:14 ... 825

22:17 ... 64

22:18 ... 167

22:20-24 ... 477

Genesis 23

23:17-19 ... 824

Genesis 24 ... 1, 377

24:16 ... 744

24:22-24 ... 824, 825

24:27 ... 744

Genesis 24:41-Nehemiah

10:30 ... 3

Genesis 25

25:1-4 ... 821

25:18 ... 171

25:23 ... 541

25:27 ... 380

25:29 ... 380

Genesis 25-27 ... 380

Genesis 26

26:5 ... 382

26:9-10 ... 261

26:11 ... 252

Genesis 27

27:1-40 ... 258

27:33 ... 58

27:36 ... 476

27:38-39 ... 825

27:42-43 ... 825

Genesis 27-33 ... 463

Genesis 28 ... 377

28:11 ... 181

28:12 ... 34, 43, 351

Genesis 29

29:14 ... 183

29:20 ... 744

Genesis 30

30:36 ... 370

Genesis 32

32:3-5 ... 829

32:24 ... 195, 481

32:25-32 ... 826

32:29-30 ... 829

32:31 ... 826

32:32-33 ... 829

Genesis 33

33:1 ... 829

33:18-20 ... 829

Genesis 34

34:1-3 ... 829

34:5-7 ... 829

34:7 ... 372

34:17-21 ... 825

34:30-31 ... 829

Genesis 35

35:1, 4-7 ... 829

35:4 ... 440

35:5 ... 833

35:6-10 ... 829

35:17-29 ... 825

35:24-29 ... 829

Genesis 36

36:1-2 ... 829

36:1-13 ... 825

36:5-17 ... 829

36:6 ... 833

36:19-27 ... 825
36:43 ... 825

Genesis 37 ... 380

37:1-2 ... 825
37:2 ... 154, 370
37:3 ... 275
37:5-6 ... 825
37:7 ... 380
37:15 ... 380
37:19 ... 637
37:22-27 ... 825
37:27-30 ... 825
37:34-36 ... 829
37:35 ... 744
37:36 ... 173

Genesis 38 ... 170

38:1 ... 829
38:10-12 ... 829

Genesis 39

39:1 ... 173
39:2-3 ... 637
39:11-23 ... 825

Genesis 40

40:1 ... 825
40:18-23 ... 825

Genesis 41

41:1-8 ... 825
41:15-18 ... 825
41:23-27 ... 825
41:29-36 ... 825
41:35-44 ... 825
41:38-39 ... 762
41:38-43 ... 825
41:42 ... 497

Genesis 42

42:5 ... 780
42:9 ... 744
42:15-22 ... 825
42:17-19 ... 825
42:21 ... 744
42:38 ... 825

Genesis 43

43:1-2 ... 825
43:5-8 ... 825
43:8-14 ... 825
43:17 ... 173
43:24 ... 173
43:25 ... 744
43:43-45 ... 744

Genesis 44

44:3 ... 107
44:4 ... 744
44:5 ... 744
44:15 ... 744

Genesis 45

45:1-4 ... 744
45:5-7 ... 638
45:12 ... 744
45:14-22 ... 825
45:15 ... 744
45:23 ... 825
45:26-28 ... 825

Genesis 46

46:7-11 ... 829

Genesis 47

47:13-14 ... 825

Genesis 48 ... 6

48:1-11 ... 825
48:2-4 ... 825
48:5 ... 477
48:15-22 ... 825

Genesis 49 ... 6, 818

49:1-5 ... 825
49:1ff ... 483
49:6-8 ... 825
49:10 ... 749, 827
49:25 ... 96

Genesis 50 ... 6

50:24-26 ... 773
50:26 ... 825

JST Genesis

JST Genesis 1-8 ... 9

JST Genesis 8

8:23 ... 386
8:47 ... 98

JST Genesis 9

9:1-25 ... 591
9:4-25 ... 655
9:9-11 ... 174
9:10-11 ... 117
9:21-23 ... 341
9:24 ... 170

JST Genesis 11

11:5 ... 111
11:6 ... 443

JST Genesis 13

13:13 ... 341

JST Genesis 14

14:7 ... 666
14:25-40 ... 7, 523
14:36 ... 7

JST Genesis 17 ... 617

17:4-7 ... 475, 617
17:6 ... 618
17:11 ... 617

JST Genesis 44 ... 6

JST Genesis 48 ... 6

JST Genesis 50

50:24-37 ... 69

Exodus

Exodus 1

1:1-5 ... 825
1:3-17 ... 825
1:3-22 ... 825
1:9 ... 277

Exodus 1-15 ... 209

Exodus 1-36 ... 825

Exodus 2

2:1-5 ... 825
2:3, 5 ... 211
2:10 ... 825
2:22-25 ... 825

Exodus 3 ... 43, 163

3:1 ... 370
3:1-4 ... 825
3:7 ... 383
3:7-10 ... 61
3:8-16 ... 825
3:12 ... 826
3:13-14 ... 45
3:17-21 ... 825
3:18-21 ... 825

Exodus 4

4:2-4 ... 741
4:4-9 ... 825
4:13-15 ... 56
4:22 ... 541
4:26-31 ... 825

Exodus 5

5:1 ... 825
5:2 ... 369, 448
5:3-17 ... 825

Exodus 6

6:1 ... 280
6:3 ... 736
6:4-21 ... 825
6:25 ... 825

Exodus 6:2-9:35 ... 65

Exodus 7 ... 741

7:5-13 ... 825
7:8-12 ... 247, 728
7:9-12 ... 109, 749
7:15-20 ... 825

Exodus 7-12 ... 209

Exodus 8

8:13-15 ... 825
8:19-21 ... 825
8:24-26 ... 825

Exodus 9

9:8 ... 825
9:25-29 ... 825
9:29 ... 449
9:33 ... 449
9:33-35 ... 825

Exodus 10

10:1-5 ... 825
10:23 ... 107

Exodus 11

11:4-10 ... 825

Exodus 12

12:1-11 ... 825
12:3 ... 499
12:8 ... 148
12:13 ... 386
12:42-46 ... 825

Exodus 13

13:8-10 ... 309
13:16 ... 387

Exodus 14 ... 741

14:15-24 ... 825
14:21 ... 98
14:21-22 ... 60
14:27-30 ... 57

Exodus 15 ... 96

Exodus 16

16:2-7 ... 825
16:3 ... 414
16:5 ... 151
16:13-14 ... 825
16:18-20 ... 825
16:22 ... 151
16:23-25 ... 825
16:26 ... 151
16:26-31 ... 825
16:32-34 ... 679, 681
16:33-34 ... 173
16:33-35 ... 825

Exodus 17

17:1-3 ... 825
17:5-11 ... 825

Exodus 18

18:17-24 ... 825

Exodus 19

19:3 ... 684
19:6 ... 671, 763
19:17-23 ... 826
19:24-25 ... 825

Exodus 19-32 ... 43

Exodus 20 ... 607

20:1-2 ... 825
20:2-5 ... 48
20:3-4 ... 607
20:7 ... 607
20:8 ... 91
20:8-10 ... 607
20:8-11 ... 151
20:11 ... 152
20:12 ... 607, 826
20:13 ... 607
20:14 ... 607
20:15 ... 607
20:16 ... 826
20:17 ... 826
20:18-19 ... 259
20:18-21 ... 259
20:19 ... 607
20:19-22 ... 826
20:22-26 ... 826
20:26 ... 239

Exodus 21

21:1 ... 826
21:4 ... 826
21:6 ... 826
21:8 ... 826
21:10 ... 826
21:15 ... 826
21:16 ... 826
21:18 ... 826
21:20 ... 826
21:22 ... 826
21:24 ... 390
21:25 ... 826
21:30 ... 499
21:32 ... 826
21:34 ... 826
21:35-37 ... 826

- Exodus 22
 22:1-11 ... 826
 22:1-13 ... 826
 22:18 ... 125
 22:21-24 ... 383
 22:23-24 ... 825
- Exodus 23
 23:2 ... 328
 23:5-16 ... 825
 23:12 ... 151
- Exodus 24
 24:4-6 ... 826
 24:4-8 ... 671
 24:9 ... 768
 24:9-10 ... 62, 782
 24:9-18 ... 671, 768
 24:13 ... 768
 24:27-28 ... 826
- Exodus 25 ... 679
 25:7-20 ... 825
 25:8 ... 187
 25:10 ... 773
 25:16 ... 680, 681
 25:17-22 ... 750
 25:18-22 ... 148, 280
 25:22 ... 499
 25:29 ... 304
 25:30 ... 148
 25:31-37 ... 555
 25:31-40 ... 148
- Exodus 25-31 ... 561
- Exodus 26
 26:29-37 ... 825
 26:31 ... 280
 26:33 ... 101
- Exodus 27
 27:1 ... 825
 27:6-14 ... 825
- Exodus 28 ... 235
 28:9 ... 305
 28:13-20 ... 172
 28:29 ... 305
 28:30 ... 706
 28:33-35 ... 825
 28:36-38 ... 387
 28:40-42 ... 825
 28:41 ... 305
 28:42 ... 275
- Exodus 29
 29:24 ... 305
 29:33 ... 305
- Exodus 30
 30:29 ... 149, 674
 30:32 ... 826
 30:34 ... 826
- Exodus 31
 31:13-17 ... 151
 31:18 ... 681
- Exodus 32 ... 360
 32:1-4 ... 715
 32:4 ... 607
 32:17-19 ... 726
 32:19 ... 6
- 32:29 ... 305
 32:30ff ... 47
- Exodus 33
 33:2-3 ... 758
 33:11 ... 7, 517, 782
 33:20 ... 782
 33:23 ... 782
- Exodus 34
 34:21 ... 151
 34:28 ... 360
- Exodus 35
 35:2 ... 151
- Exodus 35-40 ... 561
- Exodus 36
 36:8 ... 280
 36:34-36 ... 825
 36:35 ... 280
- Exodus 37
 37:6-9 ... 148
 37:7-9 ... 280
 37:17-24 ... 148
- Exodus 39
 39:10-13 ... 172
 39:27-28 ... 317
 Exodus 39:32 ... 561
 Exodus 39:42-43 ... 561
- Exodus 40 ... 118
 40:12-13 ... 520, 661
 40:17-19 ... 148
 40:20-21 ... 148
 40:33 ... 149
- JST Exodus
- JST Exodus 33
 33:20 ... 517
- JST Exodus 34
 34:1-2 ... 6, 480, 521, 665, 669, 758
- Leviticus
- Leviticus 1
 1:4 ... 499
- Leviticus 1-7 ... 443
- Leviticus 3
 3:3-5 ... 372
 3:9-11 ... 372
 3:14-16 ... 372
- Leviticus 5 ... 309
 5:1 ... 384
- Leviticus 8
 8:22-24 ... 309
 8:26-28 ... 305
 8:33 ... 305
- Leviticus 8-10 ... 443
- Leviticus 9
 9:2-7 ... 309
- Leviticus 11 ... 174, 270
 11:42 ... 265
- Leviticus 11-16 ... 443
- Leviticus 14
 14:1-6 ... 309
 14:7 ... 309
- 14:8-12 ... 309
 14:14 ... 309
 14:15 ... 309
 14:17-18 ... 309
- Leviticus 15
 15:31 ... 765
- Leviticus 16 ... 499
 16:3-4 ... 146
 16:12 ... 304
 16:12-13 ... 304
 16:15-16 ... 146
 16:23 ... 173
 16:32 ... 305
- Leviticus 17 ... 443
- Leviticus 18
 18:24-28 ... 270
- Leviticus 19 ... 443
- Leviticus 20 ... 443
 20:22 ... 270
- Leviticus 21
 21:10 ... 305
- Leviticus 22
 22:32 ... 780
- Leviticus 23 ... 270, 443
 23:2ff ... 108
 23:3 ... 151
 23:10 ... 372
 23:17-18 ... 372
 23:40-43 ... 166
- Leviticus 24 ... 443
 24:10-16 ... 607
 24:19 ... 390
- Leviticus 25-27 ... 443
- Leviticus 26 ... 270
- Leviticus 27
 27:30 ... 106
- Leviticus 28 ... 828
- Numbers
- Numbers 2
 2:2 ... 386
- Numbers 3
 3:3 ... 305
 3:8 ... 173
- Numbers 6
 6:24 ... 382
 6:24-26 ... 70, 781
 6:26 ... xxv
- Numbers 7
 7:8-9 ... 280
 7:84-86 ... 304
 7:89 ... 499
- Numbers 8
 8:13-15 ... 309
- Numbers 11
 11:7 ... 172
 11:29 ... 533, 631
- Numbers 12
 12:1 ... 393, 612
 12:10 ... 393, 612
- Numbers 13
 13:33 ... 587
- Numbers 15
 15:20 ... 158
 15:32-36 ... 607
 15:37-41 ... 730
- Numbers 16
 16:15 ... 372
- Numbers 17
 17:4 ... 173
 17:8 ... 749
- Numbers 18
 18:23 ... 749
- Numbers 19
 19:1-10 ... 618
- Numbers 21
 21:4-9 ... 247, 728
 21:8-9 ... 247
- Numbers 22
 22:9 ... 262
 22:23 ... 281
- Numbers 24
 24:3-4 ... 258
 24:17 ... 749
- Deuteronomy
- Deuteronomy 1
 1:39 ... 169, 276
- Deuteronomy 3
 3:14 ... 391
 3:20 ... 173
- Deuteronomy 4
 4:2 ... 252
 4:6 ... 343, 518
 4:12 ... 782
 4:15 ... 782
 4:19 ... 151
 4:34 ... 689
- Deuteronomy 5
 5:4 ... 502
 5:6 ... 444
 5:14 ... 152
 5:15 ... 689
 5:25 ... 259
 5:30-31 ... 826
- Deuteronomy 6
 6:8 ... 387
 6:13 ... 55
 6:21 ... 689
- Deuteronomy 7
 7:8 ... 500, 689
 7:19 ... 689
- Deuteronomy 8
 8:4 ... 741
- Deuteronomy 9
 9:26 ... 689
- Deuteronomy 10
 10:1-5 ... 681
 10:12 ... xxxiv
- Deuteronomy 11
 11:2 ... 689
 11:18 ... 387
 11:24 ... 172

Deuteronomy 12

12:2 ... 440
12:6 ... 345
12:10 ... 152, 173

Deuteronomy 13

13:1 ... 252

Deuteronomy 14 ... 270

14:22-27 ... 189

Deuteronomy 15

15:16-17 ... 309

Deuteronomy 15:18-

20:22 ... 826

Deuteronomy 16 ... 302

16:21 ... 115

Deuteronomy 18

18:15 ... 46, 69
18:16 ... 259

Deuteronomy 19

19:10 ... 388
19:11 ... 395
19:21 ... 390

Deuteronomy 21

21:1 ... 618
21:18-21 ... 607
21:22 ... 446

Deuteronomy 22

22:25 ... 380

Deuteronomy 25

25:8 ... 261
25:19 ... 152, 173

Deuteronomy 26 ... 372

26:4 ... 173
26:8 ... 689
26:10 ... 173
26:12-14 ... 189

Deuteronomy 28 ... 270

28:16-18 ... 384
28:48 ... 315

Deuteronomy 29

29:19 ... 255

Deuteronomy 30

30:11-14 ... 517
30:12 ... 752
30:16 ... 173
30:19 ... 328

Deuteronomy 32

32:6 ... 367
32:8 ... 151
32:11 ... 84, 97, 247, 684
32:29-41 ... 281
32:43 ... 582

Deuteronomy 33

33:13 ... 96

Deuteronomy 34

34:12 ... 689

JST DeuteronomyJST Deuteronomy 1 ... 93-130*JST Deuteronomy 10

10:1-2 ... 665
10:2 ... 341

JoshuaJoshua 2

2:12 ... 386

Joshua 3

3:14-17 ... 60

Joshua 4

4:6 ... 16, 905

Joshua 7

7:1 ... 607

Joshua 10

10:13 ... 833

Joshua 14

14:15 ... 767

JudgesJudges 4

4:5 ... 165
4:21-22 ... 741

Judges 9 ... 380

9:2 ... 183
9:6 ... 440
9:7-21 ... 163
9:27 ... 380
9:32 ... 380
9:37 ... 440
9:44 ... 380

Judges 17

17:5 ... 305
17:12 ... 305

Judges 19-21 ... 607Judges 20

20:31 ... 380

RuthRuth 2

2:20 ... 499

Ruth 4

4:1 ... 499

1 Samuel1 Samuel 1

1:11 ... 367
1:20 ... 367

1 Samuel 2

2:8 ... 157

1 Samuel 10

10:3 ... 440

1 Samuel 13

13:8-14 ... 309

1 Samuel 15

15:22-23 ... 371

1 Samuel 16

16:11 ... 370

1 Samuel 17

17:10 ... 395
17:34 ... 370
17:36 ... 395
17:43-46 ... 395

1 Samuel 18

18:7 ... 612
18:8 ... 372

2 Samuel2 Samuel 1

1:18 ... 833

2 Samuel 3

3:8 ... 372

2 Samuel 5

5:1 ... 183
5:9 ... 391

2 Samuel 7

7:8 ... 173
7:23 ... 500

2 Samuel 11-12 ... 6072 Samuel 12 ... 347

12:27 ... 277
12:28 ... 391

2 Samuel 19

19:12-13 ... 183
19:35 ... 276

2 Samuel 22 ... 2101 Kings*1 Kings 1

1:33 ... 172
1:38 ... 172
1:45 ... 172

1 Kings 3

3:9 ... 169

1 Kings 6

6:4 ... 108
6:14-36 ... 555
6:23-35 ... 280
6:29 ... 165
6:32 ... 165
6:35 ... 165

1 Kings 7

7:36 ... 165, 280
7:39 ... 171

1 Kings 8

8:6-7 ... 280
8:9 ... 681
8:38 ... 449

1 Kings 13

13:33 ... 305

1 Kings 14

14:15 ... 115
14:23 ... 115

1 Kings 16

16:2 ... 157
16:24 ... 391

1 Kings 17

17:21 ... 503

1 Kings 18

18:28 ... 736

1 Kings 19

19:8 ... 360
19:9 ... 675
19:13 ... 741
19:19 ... 741

1 Kings 21 ... 6071 Kings 22

22:19 ... 151

2 Kings2 Kings 1

1:8 ... 600

2 Kings 2

2:8 ... 741
2:11 ... 630

2 Kings 4

4:34 ... 503

2 Kings 5

5:27 ... 185

2 Kings 6

6:15-18 ... 363
6:17-20 ... 258

2 Kings 17

17:15-16 ... 115

2 Kings 18

18:4 ... 555

1 Chronicles1 Chronicles 11

11:1 ... 183

1 Chronicles 16

16:27 ... 311

1 Chronicles 29

29:5 ... 305

2 Chronicles2 Chronicles 1

1:5-21 ... 848

2 Chronicles 3

3:5 ... 165

2 Chronicles 4

4:10 ... 171

2 Chronicles 13

13:9 ... 305

2 Chronicles 24

24:20-22 ... 617
24:27 ... 642

2 Chronicles 26

26:16-21 ... 592

2 Chronicles 29

29:20 ... 642
29:31 ... 305

2 Chronicles 30

30:8 ... 471

2 Chronicles 32

32:30 ... 172

2 Chronicles 33

33:14 ... 172

EzraEzra 8

8:16 ... 741

NehemiahNehemiah 4

4:1 ... 372

Nehemiah 8

8:3 ... 107

8:10 ... 311
 8:13-17 ... 166
Nehemiah 9
 9:21 ... 741
Nehemiah 11-Psalm 10
 ... 3

Esther

Esther 4
 4:11 ... 593
Esther 5
 5:1-2 ... 594

Job

Job 1
 1:6 ... 365
Job 4
 4:18 ... 590
 4:19 ... 158
Job 7
 7:5 ... 587
Job 11
 11:13 ... 356
Job 15
 15:7-8 ... 320
 15:7-9 ... 433
 15:8 ... 93, 517, 590
 15:15 ... 590
Job 19
 19:25 ... 499
 19:25-26 ... 52
 19:26 ... 364
Job 21
 21:7-15 ... 448
 21:12 ... 394
 21:14-15 ... 448
Job 22
 Job 22:11 ... 588
 Job 22:15-16 ... 588
Job 26
 26:10 ... 571
 26:13 ... 96
 26:38-41 ... 96
Job 28 ... 65
Job 30
 30:31 ... 394
Job 31 ... 518
 31:33 ... 433
 31:35 ... 516
Job 33
 33:6 ... 158
 33:24 ... 499
Job 36
 36:18 ... 499
Job 38 ... 200, 516
 38:1 ... 517
 38:3 ... 516
 38:4 ... 136, 223
 38:4-7 ... 433
 38:7 ... 108, 136, 200,
 223, 304, 516
 38:8 ... 172

38:8-11 ... 217
 38:31 ... 217, 223
 38:33 ... 217
Job 40
 40:23 ... 172

Psalms

Psalm 1
 1:1-3 ... 164
 1:3 ... 188
Psalm 2
 2:6-7 ... 583
 2:7 ... 80, 403
Psalm 8
 8:3 ... 468
 8:4-6 ... 76
 8:4-7 ... 112
 8:5 ... 124, 138, 586
 8:6 ... 582
Psalm 11
 11:3 ... 475
Psalm 11-Malachi ... 3
Psalm 12
 12:6 ... 386
Psalm 18 ... 96, 210
 18:6 ... 210
Psalm 19 ... 96
 19:7-9 ... 653
Psalm 22
 Psalm 22:6 ... 76
Psalm 24 ... 96, 356
 24:3-4 ... 356
 24:7-9 ... 672
Psalm 25
 25:14 ... 93, 708
Psalm 27 ... 686
 27:5 ... 465
 27:15 ... 780
Psalm 28
 28:2 ... 449
Psalm 29
 29:11-4 ... 876
Psalm 32
 32:1 ... 333
Psalm 33 ... 96
 33:6 ... 94
 33:9 ... 94
Psalm 36
 36:9 ... 99
Psalm 48
 48:2 ... 44
Psalm 49
 49:17 ... 499
Psalm 51
 51:17-18 ... 371
Psalm 54
 54:2 ... 357
Psalm 55
 55:14 ... 93
Psalm 63
 63:5 ... 449

Psalm 68 ... 96
 68:18 ... 471
Psalm 72
 72:8 ... 173
 72:9 ... 265
Psalm 73
 73:23-24 ... 686
 73:25 ... 99
Psalm 74
 74:12-15 ... 96
 74:13-14 ... 267
Psalm 77
 77:15 ... 467
Psalm 82 ... 501
 82:1 ... 93
 82:7 ... 433
Psalm 85
 85:3 ... 333
Psalm 87
 87:1 ... 759
Psalm 88
 88:10 ... 449
Psalm 89 ... 686
 89:13 ... 686
 89:21 ... 686
 89:27 ... 221
Psalm 92
 92:11-12 ... 164
 92:12 ... 164
Psalm 93 ... 96
Psalm 95
 95:11 ... 152
Psalm 96
 96:5 ... 94
Psalm 102
 102:5 ... 185
Psalm 104 ... 96
 104:1-2 ... 239, 672
 104:2 ... 99, 100, 101
 104:4 ... 281, 587
 104:7-9 ... 105, 147
Psalm 110 ... 163, 666,
667, 696, 759, 760, 761
 110:2 ... 749
 110:3 ... 670, 672, 759,
 760
 110:4 ... 760
Psalm 111
 111:1 ... 93
Psalm 113
 113:7 ... 157
Psalm 115
 115:16 ... 95
 115:19 ... 367
Psalm 121
 121:4-8 ... 382
Psalm 129
 129:12 ... 386

Psalm 130
 130:1 ... 57
Psalm 133
 133:3 ... 760
Psalm 137
 137:6 ... 185
Psalm 139 ... 745
 139:13 ... 367
 139:16 ... 745, 747

Proverbs

Proverbs 3
 3:13-18 ... 658
 3:18 ... 433, 749
 3:32 ... 93
Proverbs 7
 7:4-27 ... 76
Proverbs 8
 8:1-31 ... 115
 8:22-30 ... 65
 8:22-31 ... 123
 8:22-33 ... 96
 8:27 ... 571
 8:27-29 ... 217
Proverbs 9
 9:13-18 ... 76
Proverbs 11
 11:30 ... 433
Proverbs 13
 13:12 ... 433
Proverbs 14
 14:13 ... 381
Proverbs 15
 15:4 ... 433
 15:8-9 ... 371
Proverbs 18
 18:22 ... 7
Proverbs 21
 21:3 ... 371
 21:27 ... 371
Proverbs 30
 30:1-4 ... 517, 518
Proverbs 31
 31:12 ... 276

Ecclesiastes

Ecclesiastes 1
 1:2 ... 369
Ecclesiastes 4
 4:10 ... 176
Ecclesiastes 9
 9:8 ... 662
Ecclesiastes 12
 12:8 ... 369

Song of Solomon

Song of Solomon 1
 1:5 ... 393, 612
 1:10 ... 162

IsaiahIsaiah 1

1:10-20 ... 371
 1:15-16 ... 355
 1:29 ... 440
Isaiah 1:3 ... 672

Isaiah 2

2:2 ... 44, 555, 768
 2:3 ... 442
 2:4 ... 411
 2:12 ... 103

Isaiah 5

5:1-7 ... 167
 5:7 ... 98
 5:20 ... 276

Isaiah 6

6:1 ... 782
 6:1-8 ... 281
 6:3 ... 304
 6:5 ... 262

Isaiah 11 ... 518

11:1 ... 749, 753, 864
 11:1-9 ... 114
 11:2 ... 80
 11:4 ... 749
 11:6-7 ... 726
 11:6-8 ... 403
 11:7 ... 117
 11:10 ... 753

Isaiah 12

12:6 ... 547

Isaiah 13

13:5 ... 103
 13:9 ... 103

Isaiah 14 ... 224

14:4 ... 57
 14:4-23 ... 223
 14:7 ... 57
 14:12 ... 226
 14:12-17 ... 245
 14:13 ... 593
 14:14 ... 593
 14:16 ... 58

Isaiah 19

19:10 ... 475

Isaiah 22

22:23 ... 309

Isaiah 23 ... 727Isaiah 24

24:4-5 ... 301
 24:4-6 ... 219, 501
 24:16 ... 762

Isaiah 25

25:6-9 ... 67, 556

Isaiah 26

26:19 ... 157, 779
 26:21 ... 384

Isaiah 27 ... 384

27:1 ... 96, 109
 27:40-42 ... 96

Isaiah 28

28:7 ... 571
 28:10 ... 36

Isaiah 29 ... 742

29:1 ... 741
 29:4 ... 741
 29:6 ... 742
 29:8 ... 742
 29:10 ... 742

Isaiah 32

32:15-18 ... 403

Isaiah 34

34:11 ... 96

Isaiah 36

36:19 ... 780

Isaiah 40

40:5 ... 765
 40:6 ... 159
 40:12 ... 571
 40:22 ... 101, 571
 40:31 ... 247, 684

Isaiah 42

42:1 ... 403
 42:6 ... 473, 762
 42:10 ... 304

Isaiah 43

43:27 ... 67

Isaiah 45

45:7 ... 96

Isaiah 46

46:9-10 ... 48
 46:10 ... 747

Isaiah 49

49:6 ... 765
 49:8 ... 762
 49:16 ... 218, 308, 871
 49:23 ... 265

Isaiah 51

51:3 ... 160, 403, 433
 51:9 ... 109
 51:10 ... 96

Isaiah 52

52:7 ... 162, 628
 52:10 ... 765

Isaiah 53

53:2 ... 548
 53:3 ... 295, 296
 53:4 ... 77

53:5 ... 296

53:6 ... 76

53:10-12 ... 780

53:11 ... 467, 762

Isaiah 55

55:6-11 ... 123

Isaiah 56

56:12 ... 765

Isaiah 60

60:1 ... 181

Isaiah 61

61:1 ... 333
 61:1-2 ... 403

Isaiah 63

63:11-19 ... 403

Isaiah 65

25 ... 265
 65:17 ... 94
 65:22 ... 433
 65:25 ... 117, 265, 403

Isaiah 66

66:1-2 ... 561
 66:15-16 ... 281

JST Isaiah

JST Isaiah 50 ... xxi

JeremiahJeremiah 1

1:5 ... 544, 745
 1:16 ... 185

Jeremiah 2

2:13 ... 516

Jeremiah 3

3:17 ... 255

Jeremiah 4

4:23-27 ... 96

Jeremiah 5

5:22-24 ... 106

Jeremiah 7

7:5-7 ... 373
 7:9 ... 607

Jeremiah 10

10:10-11 ... 94
 10:12 ... 101

Jeremiah 11

11:16 ... 108

Jeremiah 14

14:9 ... 547

Jeremiah 17

17:5 ... 159

Jeremiah 18

18:8 ... 7

Jeremiah 23

23:9 ... 97

Jeremiah 24

24:3 ... 276

Jeremiah 27

27:5 ... 436

Jeremiah 31

31:31-34 ... 341
 31:33 ... 692

Jeremiah 32

32:6-12 ... 499

Jeremiah 34

34:5 ... 436

Jeremiah 44

44:17ff ... 115
 44:25 ... 305

Jeremiah 46

46:10 ... 103

Jeremiah 50

50:20 ... 333

LamentationsLamentations 3

3:41 ... 356

Lamentations 4

4:20 ... 158

EzekielEzekiel 1 ... 781

1:4 ... 547
 1:4-28 ... 281
 1:22 ... 62
 1:24 ... 61
 1:26 ... 62, 301
 1:26-28 ... 123
 1:28 ... 782

Ezekiel 3

3:1-3 ... 751

Ezekiel 6

6:2-7 ... 691
 6:13 ... 691

Ezekiel 8

8:2 ... 690

Ezekiel 9

9:4 ... 387
 9:6 ... 387

Ezekiel 11

11:17 ... 642

Ezekiel 13

13:5 ... 103

Ezekiel 16

16:39 ... 315

Ezekiel 17

17:22-24 ... 693

Ezekiel 18

18:19-28 ... 328
 18:23 ... 414
 18:26-27 ... 376

Ezekiel 20

20:28 ... 691
 20:47 ... 691

Ezekiel 22

22:40 ... 693

Ezekiel 23

23:29 ... 315

Ezekiel 27

27:1 ... 571

Ezekiel 28

28:11-19 ... 223, 433
 28:11-19 ... 433
 28:12-14 ... 582
 28:13 ... 160, 162
 28:13-19 ... 690
 28:14 ... 693
 28:15 ... 224
 28:31 ... 162

Ezekiel 31

31:1-18 ... 433
 31:8-9 ... 691
 31:9 ... 160
 31:16 ... 691
 31:18 ... 691

Ezekiel 32
32:5 ... 691

Ezekiel 34
34:27 ... 693

Ezekiel 35
35:1-8 ... 691

Ezekiel 36
36:1-7 ... 691
36:30 ... 693
36:35 ... 433

Ezekiel 37 ... 778, 780
37:1 ... 690
37:2-7 ... 691
37:3 ... 688
37:5-6 ... 778
37:7 ... 691
37:9 ... 778
37:9-10 ... 692, 778
37:14 ... 778
37:15-20 ... 779
37:26 ... 341

Ezekiel 38
38:20 ... 691

Ezekiel 39
39:17-20 ... 726

Ezekiel 40
40:2 ... 684
40:16 ... 778
40:22 ... 778
40:26 ... 778
40:31 ... 778
40:34 ... 778
40:37 ... 778
Ezekiel 40:16 ... 165
Ezekiel 40:22 ... 165
Ezekiel 40:26 ... 165
Ezekiel 40:31 ... 165
Ezekiel 40:34 ... 165
Ezekiel 40:37 ... 165

Ezekiel 41
41:18-20 ... 165, 280, 778
41:20 ... 149
41:25 ... 280
41:25-26 ... 165, 778

Ezekiel 42
42:20 ... 101

Ezekiel 43
43:2 ... 61
43:26 ... 305

Ezekiel 47
47:1 ... 171
47:1-12 ... 555
47:7 ... 693
47:12 ... 693

Daniel

Daniel 1
1:5 ... 414

Daniel 2
2:28 ... 709

Daniel 3
3:27 ... 741

Daniel 4
4:10-28 ... 260
4:13-15 ... 632
4:20 ... 163
4:20-22 ... 248
4:22 ... 163, 632
4:23 ... 632
4:25 ... 632, 739
4:31-33 ... 633
4:31-34 ... 632
4:33 ... 632

Daniel 5
5:22 ... 632, 739
5:23 ... 412

Daniel 7 ... 434
7:1 ... 632, 739
7:9-14 ... 460
7:13 ... 53
7:13-14 ... 485

Daniel 8
8:1 ... 632, 739
8:10-12 ... 223
8:17 ... 53
8:26 ... 51

Daniel 10
10:4 ... 172
10:6 ... 62
10:8-9 ... 51

Daniel 12
12:1-3 ... 778
12:2 ... 157

Hosea

Hosea 1-3 ... 504

Hosea 4
4:13 ... 440

Hosea 6
6:2 ... 780
6:7 ... 433

Hosea 11
11:9 ... 547

Hosea 14
14:2 ... 371
14:9 ... 228

Joel

Joel 2
2:3 ... 433
2:22 ... 169
2:27 ... 547

Joel 3
3:10 ... 411
3:18 ... 171

Amos

Amos 5
5:14 ... 276
5:18 ... 103

5:20 ... 103

Amos 7
7:8 ... 571

Micah

Micah 4
4:3 ... 411

Micah 5
5:2 ... 673
5:13-14 ... 547

Micah 6
6:6-8 ... 371

Micah 7
7:8 ... 780
7:17 ... 265

Habakkuk

Habakkuk 1
1:12 ... 673

Habakkuk 3
3:8 ... 96
3:10 ... 96

Zechariah

Zechariah 2
2:10 ... 765

Zechariah 3
3:5 ... 547
3:15 ... 547
3:17 ... 547

Zechariah 13
13:6 ... 218, 308, 871

Zechariah 14
14:4 ... 777
14:8 ... 171

Malachi

Malachi 3
3:2-3 ... 610
3:3 ... 609, 610
3:7 ... 497
3:13-15 ... 448

Malachi 4
4:5-6 ... 649

NEW TESTAMENT

Matthew

Matthew 2
2:1 ... 161, 673
2:11 ... 673
2:13 ... 7
2:19 ... 7

Matthew 3
3:4 ... 7, 600
3:11 ... 272
3:16 ... 59, 80

Matthew 4
4:1-11 ... 33, 360, 516
4:3 ... 53
4:6 ... 53
4:8-9 ... 53
4:10 ... 55
4:11 ... 55
4:19-20 ... 488

Matthew 5
5:8 ... 668, 782
5:9 ... 535
5:16-48 ... 11
5:21-22 ... 445
5:21-48 ... 777
5:27-28 ... 870
5:29 ... 488
5:30 ... 446
5:43-48 ... 870
5:44-45 ... 412
5:48 ... 11, xxiii, xxiv, xxv, 567

Matthew 5-7 ... 343

Matthew 6
6:1-8 ... 777
6:1-32 ... 11
6:3 ... 870
6:4 ... 7
6:10 ... xxiv, 419, 467, 571, 597
6:19-20 ... 870
6:24 ... 281

Matthew 6:19-7:27 ... 776

Matthew 7
7:6 ... 267
7:7 ... 419, 489
7:11-21 ... 11
7:13 ... 870
7:13-14 ... 584
7:16 ... 545
7:17 ... 164
7:21 ... 413

Matthew 8
8:10 ... 7
8:20 ... 675
8:29 ... 57

Matthew 9
9:29 ... 239

Matthew 10
10:16 ... 247
10:20-33 ... 11
10:25 ... 431
10:30 ... 67

Matthew 11
11:5 ... 864
11:15 ... 709
11:19 ... 80
11:25-27 ... 11
11:28 ... 471
11:29 ... 596

Matthew 12
12:35 ... 276
12:46-50 ... 498

Matthew 13
 13:11 ... 663, 709
 13:32 ... 248
 13:44 ... 488
 13:46 ... 488

Matthew 15
 15:13 ... 11

Matthew 16
 16:16 ... 736
 16:16-19 ... 219
 16:17-27 ... 11
 16:18 ... 301
 16:18-19 ... 301
 16:19 ... 220
 16:24 ... 737
 16:26 ... 877

Matthew 17
 17:1 ... 438
 17:1-9 ... 782
 17:4 ... 210

Matthew 18
 18:4 ... 139
 18:10-35 ... 11

Matthew 19
 19:21 ... 24, 349

Matthew 20
 20:16 ... 351
 20:28 ... 499

Matthew 21
 21:18-20 ... 169
 21:33-44 ... 279

Matthew 22
 22:1-14 ... 505
 22:13 ... 420
 22:14 ... 351

Matthew 23
 23:9 ... 11
 23:35 ... 617, 666

Matthew 24
 24:8 ... 268
 24:32 ... 169
 24:36-37 ... 590

Matthew 24:1-26:2 ...
 675

Matthew 25
 25:14-29 ... 296
 25:21 ... 60, 311
 25:35-36 ... 870

Matthew 26
 26:29-53 ... 11
 26:39 ... 597
 26:42 ... 419

Matthew 27
 27:3-8 ... 7
 27:33 ... 616
 27:52 ... xxi

Matthew 28
 28:17-18 ... 305
 28:18 ... 523, 712
 28:19 ... 390
 28:20 ... 401

JST Matthew

JST Matthew 9
 9:6 ... 184
JST Matthew 24 ... 9
JST Matthew 4
 4:8 ... 684

Mark

Mark 1
 1:6 ... 600
 1:10 ... 59, 80, 764
 1:12-13 ... 33

Mark 2
 2:27 ... 153

Mark 4
 4:11 ... 663
 4:32 ... 248
 4:35-41 ... 96

Mark 6
 6:13 ... 239
 6:45-51 ... 96

Mark 8
 8:23-25 ... 239

Mark 9
 9:2-9 ... 782
 9:5 ... 210

Mark 10
 10:37-40 ... 715

Mark 11
 11:25-26 ... 11, 769

Mark 12
 12:1-11 ... 279
 12:25 ... 740

Mark 14
 14:29 ... 732
 14:36 ... 11

Mark 15
 15:38 ... 764

Mark 16
 16:16 ... 367
 16:22 ... 616

Luke

Luke 1
 1:17 ... 649

Luke 2
 2:7 ... 672
 2:9 ... 782
 2:14 ... 69
 2:30-32 ... 765
 2:51 ... 672

Luke 3
 3:6 ... 765
 3:15-16 ... 281, 472
 3:22 ... 59, 80
 3:38 ... 157

Luke 4
 4:1-13 ... 33, 516
 4:2 ... 52
 4:5 ... 62, 63
 4:6 ... 436
 4:9 ... 329

Luke 6

6:29 ... 7
 6:36 ... 11
 6:45 ... 276

Luke 9
 9:26 ... 11
 9:33 ... 210
 9:58 ... 675

Luke 10
 10:18 ... 223, 305
 10:21-22 ... 11
 10:30 ... 239
 10:34 ... 239

Luke 11
 11:1-4 ... 769
 11:2-13 ... 11

Luke 12
 12:7 ... 635, 741
 12:30-32 ... 11

Luke 13
 13:6-9 ... 169
 13:6-10 ... 279
 13:19 ... 248
 13:34 ... 97

Luke 15
 15:11-32 ... 462, 464
 15:12-29 ... 11
 15:17 ... 464
 15:17-19 ... 496
 15:18-19 ... 497
 15:20 ... 429, 464, 497
 15:21 ... 496, 497
 15:22-23 ... 497
 15:31 ... 342

Luke 16
 16:25 ... 471

Luke 20
 20:35 ... 740

Luke 21
 21:37 ... 675

Luke 22
 22:32 ... 732
 22:39 ... 675

Luke 23
 23:33 ... 616

Luke 24
 24:36-40 ... 523
 24:39 ... 159
 24:49 ... 80
 24:50 ... 80

JST Luke

JST Luke 3
 3:45 ... 157

JST Luke 4
 4:1 ... 51

John

John 1
 1:1 ... 93, 94, 745
 1:1-3 ... 67
 1:1-28 ... 129

1:5 ... 100
 1:9 ... 649
 1:12-13 ... 47
 1:13 ... 703, 760
 1:14 ... 210, 765, 782
 1:18 ... 7
 1:29 ... 129, 499
 1:32 ... 80, 97
 1:35 ... 129
 1:43 ... 129
 1:48 ... 169

John 2
 2:1 ... 129

John 3
 3:1-5 ... 675
 3:3 ... 703
 3:5 ... 341
 3:14-15 ... 247, 728

John 4 ... 732

John 5 ... 1
 5:9 ... 643
 5:17 ... 174
 5:17-45 ... 11
 5:25-26 ... 248
 5:29 ... xxi
 5:30 ... 597
 5:39 ... 653

John 6
 6:25-58 ... 341
 6:27-65 ... 11
 6:35 ... 272
 6:38-39 ... 597
 6:39-40 ... 577
 6:68 ... 442

John 7
 7:17 ... 597
 7:18 ... 245

John 7:53-8:1 ... 675

John 8
 8:6 ... 52
 8:7 ... 289
 8:16-56 ... 11
 8:44 ... 266, 375, 387
 8:56 ... 400

John 10
 10:1-18 ... 76
 10:14 ... 732
 10:15-38 ... 11
 10:34-36 ... xxiii
 10:36 ... 703, 760

John 12
 12:12-13 ... 166
 12:26-50 ... 11

John 13
 13:21-27 ... 420
 13:37 ... 732
 13:38 ... 737

John 14
 14:2-23 ... 473
 14:2-31 ... 11
 14:3 ... 472
 14:7-10 ... 113
 14:9 ... 788, 792

- 14:15 ... 599
 14:16 ... 342
 14:23 ... 342
 14:27 ... 598
John 15
 15:1-26 ... 11
 15:13 ... 737
 15:13-15 ... 597
 15:14 ... 599
 15:14-15 ... 597
 15:15 ... 599
John 15-17 ... 674, 675
John 16
 16:3-32 ... 11
 16:28 ... 496
John 17 ... 501
 17:1-25 ... 11
 17:3 ... xxv, 849
 17:5 ... 100, 501, 703
 17:8 ... 442
 17:12 ... 222, 244, 375, 420, 603
 17:20-23 ... 468
 17:21 ... 340, 418, 568
 17:22 ... 501, 760
 17:23 ... 500, 501, 703
 17:24 ... 17, 501
John 19
 19:17 ... 616
John 20
 20:17-21 ... 11
John 21 ... 731
 21:15-16 ... 732
 21:15-17 ... 598
 21:18 ... 732
 21:18-19 ... 599
 21:19 ... 732

JST John
JST John 1
 1:1-19 ... 102
 1:3 ... 102
 1:9 ... 102
 1:42 ... 219

Acts
Acts 1
 1:1-3 ... 675
 1:4 ... 210
 1:9 ... 80
 1:12 ... 675
 1:18-19 ... 7
Acts 3
 3:19-26 ... 69
Acts 4
 4:36 ... 844
Acts 9
 9:4 ... 51
 9:17-18 ... 51
Acts 10
 10:39 ... 446
 10:41 ... 782

Acts 13
 13:2 ... 844
 13:10 ... 266
Acts 15
 15:18 ... 48
Acts 17
 17:29 ... 11
 17:34 ... 542
Acts 20
 20:10 ... 503
Acts 27
 27:34 ... 635, 741
Acts 28
 28:3 ... 741
 28:3-5 ... 741
 28:6 ... 741
 28:7 ... 741
 28:10 ... 741

Romans
Romans 2
 2:6-29 ... 894
Romans 3
 3:24 ... 499
 3:25 ... 499
Romans 5
 5:10-11 ... 466, 644
 5:11 ... 500
 5:12-21 ... 238
 5:14 ... 167, 198, 221, 325
 5:20 ... 288
Romans 6
 6:3-4 ... 238
 6:4-6 ... 80
Romans 8
 8:6 ... 366
 8:14 ... 703, 760
 8:15 ... 11
 8:17 ... 469, 470, 736
 8:19 ... 302
 8:22 ... 268
 8:29 ... 113, 221, 703
Romans 11
 11:16 ... 167
 11:24 ... 167
Romans 13
 13:11-12 ... 181

JST Romans
JST Romans 9
 9:6-8 ... 521

1 Corinthians
1 Corinthians 1
 1:20 ... 76
 1:24 ... 80
 1:25 ... 615
 1:30 ... 749
1 Corinthians 1:24-2:16 ... 76

1 Corinthians 2
 2:7-10 ... 65
 2:14 ... 200
1 Corinthians 3
 3:10-15 ... 776
 3:13 ... 282, 472
1 Corinthians 4
 4:1 ... 709
1 Corinthians 5
 5:4-5 ... 445
1 Corinthians 6
 6:19-20 ... 285
 6:20 ... 489
1 Corinthians 7
 7:14 ... 504
 7:23 ... 489
 7:31 ... 742
1 Corinthians 8
 8:5-6 ... 568
1 Corinthians 10
 10:16-17 ... 737
1 Corinthians 11
 11:7 ... 128
 11:11 ... 115, 128
1 Corinthians 13
 13:1-3 ... 350, 579
 13:2 ... 709
 13:7 ... 448
 13:9-10 ... 532
 13:11 ... 553
 13:12 ... 532, 597
 13:13 ... 351
1 Corinthians 14
 14:15 ... 597
1 Corinthians 15
 15:20 ... 725
 15:20-22 ... 238
 15:22 ... 68, 88, 286, 325, 420, 616
 15:22-24 ... 770
 15:24 ... 770
 15:25-26 ... 266
 15:28 ... 467
 15:29 ... 420
 15:34 ... 181
 15:40-42 ... 420
 15:44 ... 200
 15:45-47 ... 88
 15:45-48 ... 135
 15:45-50 ... 238
 15:46 ... 616
 15:47 ... 616
 15:49 ... 328, 616
 15:53 ... 238
 15:55 ... 463

2 Corinthians
2 Corinthians 1
 1:5-7 ... 503
 1:7 ... 737
 1:22 ... 351

2 Corinthians 3
 3:4 ... 7
2 Corinthians 4
 4:10 ... 470, 736, 737
2 Corinthians 5
 5:4 ... 239
 5:5 ... 351
 5:17 ... 238
2 Corinthians 10
 10:4 ... 630
2 Corinthians 11
 11:12-15 ... 54, 258
2 Corinthians 12
 12:1-3 ... 37
 12:1-4 ... 838
 12:2 ... 42
 12:4 ... 69

Galatians
Galatians 2
 2:9 ... 438, 471
 2:20 ... 470, 736
Galatians 3
 3:24 ... 234
 3:28-29 ... 273
Galatians 3:25-4:7 ... 703
Galatians 4
 4:4 ... 80, 188, 703
 4:6 ... 11
Galatians 5
 5:19 ... 159
Galatians 6
 6:17 ... 470, 736

Ephesians
Ephesians 1 ... 637
 1:4 ... 17
 1:10 ... 103
 1:14 ... 351
 1:21 ... 542
Ephesians 2
 2:2 ... 575
 2:6 ... 188
 2:14 ... 595
 2:16 ... 643
 2:20-21 ... 301
Ephesians 4
 4:8-10 ... 471
 4:12, 14 ... 24
Ephesians 5
 5:30 ... 185
 5:32 ... 185
Ephesians 6
 6:10 ... 630
 6:11 ... 630
 6:11-12 ... 630
 6:12 ... 542

Philippians
Philippians 1
 1:21 ... 419

Philippians 2
2:9-10 ... 583
2:10 ... 770
2:12 ... 648
Philippians 3
3:10 ... 356
3:10-14 ... 473

Colossians

Colossians 1
1:15 ... 221
1:15-17 ... 467
1:16 ... 542, 583
1:26 ... 442
Colossians 2
2:9 ... 315
2:14 ... 736
2:15 ... 542
2:18 ... 716

1 Thessalonians

1 Thessalonians 4
4:17 ... 42
1 Thessalonians 5
5:4-8 ... 181
5:21 ... 530

2 Thessalonians

2 Thessalonians 1
1:3 ... 747
1:10 ... 747
2 Thessalonians 2
2:3 ... 375
2:3-4 ... 248
2 Thessalonians 3
3:10 ... 894

1 Timothy

1 Timothy 1
1:20 ... 445
1 Timothy 2
2:5 ... 564
2:6 ... 499
2:8 ... 356
2:14 ... 257
1 Timothy 3
3:16 ... 708, 709
1 Timothy 6
6:16 ... 100

JST 1 Timothy

JST 1 Timothy 2
2:4 ... 47

Titus

Titus 2
2:12 ... 500
2:14 ... 500

Philemon

Philemon 3
3:10-11 ... 503

Hebrews

Hebrews 1
1:1 ... 763
1:1-2 ... 400
1:2 ... 93
1:3 ... 788, 792
1:6 ... 221, 582, 583
1:9 ... 167
1:14 ... 326
Hebrews 2
2:18 ... 296
Hebrews 3
3:11 ... 152, 668
3:14 ... 506
Hebrews 3:2-4:11 ... 668
Hebrews 4
4:3 ... 152
4:8 ... 668
4:10 ... 152
4:11 ... 668
4:14 ... 472
4:15 ... 313
Hebrews 5
5:4 ... 680
5:7 ... 296
5:14 ... 276
5:14-6:1 ... xxiv
Hebrews 6
6:4-6 ... 152
6:4-8 ... 306
6:18-20 ... 472, 473, 667, 668
Hebrews 7 ... 766
7:2 ... 189
7:3 ... 202, 763
7:5 ... 763
7:6-10 ... 763
7:11 ... 760
7:13 ... 763
7:15 ... 573, 760
7:16 ... 760
7:19 ... xxv
7:23 ... 760
7:24 ... 763
Hebrews 9
9:4 ... 658, 679, 680, 773
9:7-8 ... 668
9:10 ... 763
9:11 ... xxiv
9:13-14 ... 499, 735
9:22 ... 417
9:22-23 ... 763
9:23 ... 763
9:23-28 ... 762
Hebrews 10
10:1 ... xxv
10:19-22 ... 564, 668
Hebrews 11 ... 666

11:3 ... 218
11:4 ... 376, 618, 619
11:7 ... 773
11:8-10 ... 668
11:12 ... 64
11:13 ... 400
11:13-16 ... 668
11:37 ... 693
11:38 ... 738
Hebrews 12
12:1 ... 12
12:2 ... 418
12:8-24 ... 668
12:9 ... 11
12:22-23 ... 668
12:23 ... 24, 523
12:24 ... 220, 617, 618
Hebrews 13
13:13-14 ... 668

JST Hebrews

JST Hebrews 7
7:3 ... 45

James

James 1
1:6 ... 321
1:23-24 ... 828
James 2
2:19 ... 57
2:23 ... 599
James 3
3:12 ... 169
3:15 ... 366

1 Peter

1 Peter 1
1:2 ... 544
1:12 ... 590
1:20 ... 17, 399
1 Peter 2
2:5 ... 301
2:9 ... 12
1 Peter 3
3:18-21 ... 57, 360, 471
3:18-22 ... 211
3:19-20 ... 588
3:20 ... 773
3:21 ... 744
1 Peter 4
4:6 ... 278, 436, 471, 588, 725

2 Peter

2 Peter 1
1:3-4 ... 737
1:4 ... 319, 341, 419, 469, 503
1:5-7 ... 709
1:5-11 ... 351
1:10 ... 37, 55, 448, 472,

522
1:17-19 ... 522
1:18-19 ... 448
1:20 ... 531
1:21 ... 59
2 Peter 2
2:4 ... 245, 586, 588
2:5 ... 448
2:19 ... 381, 413
2 Peter 3
3:10-11 ... 742

1 John

1 John 1
1:5 ... 99
1 John 2
2:1 ... 499
2:2 ... 499
2:16 ... 159
2:27 ... 675
1 John 3
3:1-3 ... 239, 564
3:2 ... xxv, 431, 501
3:2-3 ... 277, 597
3:3 ... 431
3:9 ... 47
3:10-12 ... 266
3:11-12 ... 375
3:12 ... 666

Jude

Jude 1
1:6 ... 245, 588
1:9 ... 325
1:11 ... 322
1:14-15 ... 226
1:15 ... 448

Revelation

Revelation 1
1:6 ... 763
1:7 ... 648
1:15 ... 61
Revelation 2
2:7 ... 282, 462
2:17 ... 62, 299, 305, 680, 681
Revelation 3
3:4-5 ... 239, 317
3:17 ... 451
Revelation 4
4:1 ... 37, 60
4:2 ... 137, 782
4:4 ... 137, 239
4:6 ... 62, 137, 202
4:6-9 ... 177
4:7 ... 247, 684
4:10-11 ... 137
Revelation 5
5:13 ... 121

Revelation 6
 6:1-8 ... 387
 6:11 ... 239
 6:14 ... 742
Revelation 7
 7:3 ... 387
 7:9 ... 166, 239
 7:13-15 ... 239
 7:14 ... 166
Revelation 8
 8:4 ... 304
 8:8-11 ... 98
 8:13 ... 247, 684
Revelation 9
 9:4 ... 387
Revelation 10
 10:9-10 ... 751
Revelation 12
 12:1 ... 720
 12:1-12 ... 96
 12:3 ... 502
 12:3-9 ... 223
 12:6 ... 227, 577
 12:7 ... 325
 12:7-9 ... 245
 12:9 ... 227, 246
 12:10 ... 306, 725
 12:14 ... 245, 247, 684
Revelation 13 ... 98
 13:1 ... 502
 13:8 ... 399, 470
 13:11-15 ... 541
 13:16 ... 387, 620
Revelation 14
 14:1 ... 387
 14:3 ... 304
 14:9 ... 387
Revelation 15
 15:6 ... 317
Revelation 17
 17:1-18 ... 76
 17:3 ... 502
 17:14 ... 523
Revelation 18
 18:4 ... 389
Revelation 19
 19:4 ... 177
 19:8 ... 317
 19:9 ... 270
 19:10 ... 533
 19:16 ... 523
Revelation 20
 20:2-3 ... 246
 20:4 ... 387
 20:6 ... 763
 20:7 ... 246
 20:12 ... 456
Revelation 21
 21:1 ... 94, 97, 204
 21:6 ... 171
 21:10 ... 684
 21:18 ... 62
 21:21 ... 62

21:22 ... 149, 763
Revelation 22
 22:1 ... 171
 22:1-2 ... 658
 22:1-3 ... 593
 22:1-5 ... 149
 22:2 ... 461, 778
 22:3-4 ... 763
 22:4 ... 387
 22:14 ... 282
 22:16 ... 565

BOOK OF MORMON

1 Nephi

1 Nephi 1
 1:2 ... 479
 1:7 ... 51
 1:8 ... 547
 1:10 ... 108
1 Nephi 2
 2:16 ... 709
 2:20 ... 173
1 Nephi 3
 3:19 ... 65
1 Nephi 4
 4:34 ... 498
1 Nephi 5
 5:4 ... 44
 5:11 ... 66
1 Nephi 8
 8:11 ... 165, 189
 8:20 ... 506, 556
 8:20-24 ... 473
 8:26 ... 473
 8:28 ... 277
 8:30 ... 473
1 Nephi 8-13 ... 37
1 Nephi 9
 9:5 ... 65
1 Nephi 10
 10:19 ... 135, 138, 201, 709
1 Nephi 11
 1 Nephi 11:16 ... 76
 11:1 ... 42, 43, 684
 11:8-22 ... 164
 11:16 ... 77
 11:22 ... 295
 11:22-23 ... 163
 11:25 ... 145, 170, 506
 11:26 ... 76, 77
 11:35-36 ... 473
 11:36 ... 390
1 Nephi 12
 12:18 ... 281, 473
 12:23 ... 387
1 Nephi 13
 13:4 ... 69

13:24-28 ... 69
 13:24-29 ... 787
 13:26-40 ... 6
1 Nephi 14
 14:10 ... 76
 14:25 ... 62
 14:26 ... 62
1 Nephi 15
 15:15-16 ... 871
 15:23-24 ... 473
 15:28 ... 281
1 Nephi 16
 16:28-29 ... 731
1 Nephi 17
 17:5 ... 161, 189
 17:15 ... 731
1 Nephi 18
 18:24 ... 354
1 Nephi 19
 19:3 ... 65
 19:7 ... 267
 19:13 ... 446
 19:23 ... 534
1 Nephi 22
 22:13 ... 76
 22:20-21 ... 69
 22:23 ... 159, 449
 22:26 ... 246
2 Nephi
2 Nephi 1
 1:1ff ... 483
 1:13 ... 181
 1:15 ... 181, 469
2 Nephi 2 ... 325, 433
 2:1-2 ... 465, 477
 2:4-6 ... 338
 2:5 ... 169, 276
 2:11 ... 34, 215, 223, 258, 265
 2:11-29 ... 724
 2:13 ... 284
 2:15 ... 166, 176
 2:16 ... 320, 429
 2:17 ... 245
 2:18 ... 246, 250, 276
 2:19 ... 354
 2:19-20 ... 354
 2:21 ... 175, 278, 376, 581
 2:22 ... 135, 162
 2:22-23 ... 139, 199
 2:22-25 ... 283
 2:23 ... 116, 268
 2:25 ... 290, 311
 2:26 ... 169, 276, 365, 724
 2:26-27 ... 229
 2:26-30 ... 381, 413
 2:27 ... 295, 564

2 Nephi 3
 3:5-22 ... 69
 3:9 ... 69
2 Nephi 4
 4:15-35 ... 465
 4:18 ... 374
 4:25 ... 42, 684, 695
 4:27-28 ... 181
 4:33 ... 465
 4:34 ... 159
2 Nephi 5
 5:2 ... 465
 5:3 ... 465
 5:10 ... 763
 5:19 ... 465
 5:20 ... 386
 5:21-24 ... 387
2 Nephi 6
 6:2 ... 763
2 Nephi 6-10 ... 443
2 Nephi 8
 8:13 ... 101
2 Nephi 9
 9:3-26 ... 248
 9:5-10 ... 311
 9:5-26 ... 221
 9:7 ... 72, 486
 9:8 ... 311
 9:8-9 ... 250, 303, 580, 581
 9:9 ... 54, 258, 310, 374, 375, 489
 9:10 ... 229, 246
 9:14 ... 60, 186, 236, 239, 258, 489
 9:18 ... 418, 470
 9:19 ... 489
 9:27-28 ... 255
 9:28 ... 76, 105
 9:28-29 ... 246, 443
 9:29 ... 255
 9:31 ... 429
 9:39 ... 366
 9:41 ... 167, 248, 471, 499
 9:42 ... 76, 471
 9:43 ... 76
2 Nephi 10
 10:3 ... 320
 10:7 ... 46
 10:16 ... 76
2 Nephi 15
 15:20 ... 276
 15:21 ... 76
2 Nephi 21
 21:30-31 ... 338
2 Nephi 22
 22:6 ... 547
2 Nephi 25
 25:20 ... 247
 25:23 ... 350, 429, 497, 644

2 Nephi 26
26:10-11 ... 380
26:22 ... 375

2 Nephi 27
27:26 ... 76

2 Nephi 28
28:15 ... 76
28:31 ... 159

2 Nephi 29
29:3 ... 712
29:3-14 ... 341
29:12 ... 15

2 Nephi 31
31:3 ... 198
31:13 ... 298, 564
31:17-18 ... 341
31:18 ... 430
31:19 ... 430
31:20 ... 351, 472, 523
31:19-20 ... 341

2 Nephi 32
32:2-3 ... 298
32:3-6 ... 430
32:7 ... 709
32:8 ... 259
32:9 ... 361

Jacob

Jacob 1
1:13-14 ... 388
1:17 ... 494
1:19 ... 519

Jacob 2
2:27-30 ... 393

Jacob 3
3:11 ... 181

Jacob 4
4:4-5 ... 400
4:9 ... 68, 99
4:11 ... 644
4:18 ... 709

Jacob 5 ... 167, 279

Jacob 6
6:11 ... 341

Jacob 7
7:10-11 ... 400

Enos

1:21 ... 354
1:27 ... 472, 523

Jarom

1:11 ... 47

Words of Mormon

1:7 ... 65

Mosiah

Mosiah 1
1:16 ... 731

Mosiah 1-6 ... 443

Mosiah 2
2:25 ... 51

Mosiah 3
3:13 ... 47
3:16 ... 200
3:19 ... 200, 237, 238,
255, 366, 429, 443
3:21 ... 237

Mosiah 4
4:2 ... 76
4:5-7 ... 51
4:11 ... 51

4:12 ... 596
4:14 ... 375
4:26 ... 596

Mosiah 5
5:6-12 ... 298
5:7-12 ... 302
5:8 ... 564

Mosiah 6
6:6-7 ... 344, 354

Mosiah 7
7:24-25 ... 366

Mosiah 11
11:5-6 ... 310
11:5-13 ... 310
11:27 ... 369, 448

Mosiah 12
12:28-29 ... 310

Mosiah 16
16:3 ... 365, 366
16:5 ... 365, 366
16:6 ... 47

Mosiah 20
20:1-5 ... 310
20:4-5 ... 349

Mosiah 22
22:22 ... 471

Mosiah 23
23:31-35 ... 310

Mosiah 24
24:1-7 ... 310
24:7 ... 310

Mosiah 27
27:12 ... 51
27:18-19 ... 51
27:29 ... 756

Mosiah 29
29:21-22 ... 267
29:42 ... 763

Alma

Alma 1
1:4 ... 253

Alma 3
3:6-19 ... 387
3:13-19 ... 387, 388

Alma 4
4:14 ... 596
4:20 ... 763

Alma 5

5:7 ... 181, 374, 498

5:10 ... 374, 498

5:14 ... 467, 705

5:14-19 ... 277

5:19 ... 564

5:25 ... 375, 498

5:26 ... 304

5:33 ... 469

5:34 ... 341

5:53 ... 267

5:57 ... 498

Alma 6

6:7 ... 391

6:8 ... 763

Alma 7

7:12 ... 77

7:20 ... 201

7:26 ... 731

Alma 10

10:6 ... 382

Alma 11

11:46 ... 58

Alma 12 ... 325

12:9 ... 400, 731

12:9-11 ... 65, 709

12:10-11 ... 400

12:12-15 ... 420

12:21-27 ... 278, 581

12:22 ... 257

12:23 ... 230

12:23-24 ... 230

12:23-34 ... 282

12:24 ... 256, 292

12:24-26 ... 283

12:26 ... 278, 581

12:28-30 ... 345

12:28-35 ... 118, 360

12:29-35 ... 324

12:31 ... 169, 276

12:31-32 ... 246

12:31-37 ... 359

12:37 ... 324

Alma 12-13 ... 443

Alma 13

13:1 ... 544

13:1-8 ... 520

13:1-20 ... 763

13:3 ... 351, 399, 544,
703, 759

13:5 ... 759

Alma 18

18:22 ... 247

Alma 22

22:13 ... 17, 366

22:18 ... 418

22:29-31 ... 161, 189

Alma 24

24:29 ... 388

Alma 25

25:4 ... 310, 349

25:7-9 ... 310, 349

Alma 26

26:12 ... 51

26:21 ... 200

Alma 28

28:14 ... 649

Alma 29

29:5 ... 169, 276

29:8 ... 15

Alma 30

30:13 ... 251

30:17 ... 379, 395

30:23-27 ... 251

30:60 ... 266

Alma 32

32:12 ... 271

32:28 ... 295

32:28-43 ... 600

32:37 ... 295

32:41-42 ... 145

32:41-43 ... 731

32:42 ... 166, 295

Alma 33

33:19 ... 247

Alma 34

34:10 ... 573

34:10-16 ... 221

34:13-14 ... 610

34:14 ... 345, 467, 653

34:15 ... 333

34:32 ... 292

34:33 ... 278

34:35 ... 580

Alma 36

36:4 ... 366

36:10 ... 51

36:26 ... 44

Alma 37

37:7 ... 76

37:12 ... 65, 201

37:14 ... 65

37:18 ... 65

Alma 38

38:3 ... 731

Alma 39

39:9 ... 446, 737

Alma 40

40:8 ... 48, 103, 537

40:11-14 ... 751

40:11-26 ... 420

Alma 41

41:3 ... 420

41:4 ... 200

41:11 ... 200

41:12 ... 200

41:13 ... 366

Alma 42 ... 325

42:2 ... 354

42:2-3 ... 230

42:3 ... 276

42:3-5 ... 230, 278

42:4 ... 278, 292, 581

42:5 ... 227, 278, 580

42:8 ... 233
 42:9 ... 233
 42:10 ... 200, 278, 365, 366, 725
 42:14 ... 334
 42:15 ... 335
 42:15-26 ... 579
 42:22-25 ... 333
 42:24 ... 437
Alma 43
 43:13 ... 388
Alma 46
 46:20-21 ... 378
Alma 47
 47:35 ... 388
 47:36 ... 414
Alma 49
 49:20 ... 731
Alma 60
 60:33 ... 267

Helaman
Helaman 4
 4:21-22 ... 267
Helaman 5
 5:10-11 ... 278, 578
Helaman 6
 6:26 ... 375, 429
 6:28 ... 391
 6:31 ... 267
 6:31-38 ... 414
Helaman 7
 7:16 ... 429
Helaman 8
 8:14-15 ... 247
 8:18 ... 363
Helaman 11
 11:24 ... 388
Helaman 12
 12:2 ... 267
 12:4-26 ... 106
 12:7 ... 51, 76
Helaman 14
 14:31 ... 169, 276

3 Nephi
3 Nephi 1
 1:13 ... 790
3 Nephi 2
 2:14-16 ... 387
3 Nephi 4
 4:7 ... 600
 4:28 ... 446
3 Nephi 6
 6:15 ... 449
3 Nephi 9
 9:19-20 ... 372, 418, 610
3 Nephi 11
 11:8 ... 547
 11:15 ... 44
 11:32 ... 434

3 Nephi 11-18 ... 343, 443
3 Nephi 12
 12:6 ... 363
 12:8 ... 668
 12:19 ... 343
 12:21-22 ... 445
 12:22 ... 343
 12:27-30 ... 348
 12:28-32 ... 343
 12:30 ... 445, 446
 12:31-32 ... 348
 12:39 ... 343
 12:41-45 ... 343
 12:48 ... 11, xxv, 567
3 Nephi 13
 13:1 ... 343
 13:10 ... 467
 13:20 ... 343
 13:24 ... 343
3 Nephi 14
 14:6 ... 267
3 Nephi 15
 15:2-10 ... 573
3 Nephi 17
 17:12 ... 139, 547
 17:13 ... 547
 17:16-17 ... 69
 17:20-21 ... 487
 17:23 ... 547
 17:23-24 ... 139
 17:24 ... 547
3 Nephi 20
 20:23 ... 69
3 Nephi 21
 21:17-18 ... 547
3 Nephi 25
 25:6 ... 649
3 Nephi 26
 26:3-5 ... 67
3 Nephi 27
 27:27 ... 429
 27:32 ... 375
3 Nephi 28
 28:13 ... 42, 46
 28:13-16 ... 69
 28:15 ... 46
 28:35 ... 267
3 Nephi 29
 29:7 ... 375

4 Nephi
 1:3-4 ... 349
 1:17 ... 390
 1:35-38 ... 388

Mormon
Mormon 4
 4:5 ... 386
Mormon 8
 8:10-11 ... 195

8:39 ... 412
Mormon 9
 9:4-5 ... 258
 9:12 ... 294
 9:23 ... 367

Ether
Ether 1
 1:33-43 ... 479
Ether 1-4 ... 443
Ether 2
 2:15 ... 375
Ether 3
 3:1 ... 43
 3:6 ... 554
 3:6-8 ... 262
 3:6-16 ... 789
 3:7 ... 262
 3:13 ... 311
 3:14 ... 399
 3:15 ... 83, 159, 788
 3:15-16 ... 113
 3:19 ... 523
 3:20 ... 62
 3:21-28 ... 479
 3:24-28 ... 479
 3:25 ... 50, 62
Ether 3:21-4:7 ... 69
Ether 4
 4:18 ... 367
Ether 6
 6:13 ... 354
 6:13-16 ... 354
 6:19ff ... 483
Ether 7
 7:4 ... 389
Ether 8
 8:15 ... 398
 8:18-19 ... 410
 8:20 ... 398
 8:20-26 ... 399
 8:22 ... 410
Ether 10
 10:25 ... 354
Ether 12
 12:4 ... 472
 12:23-27 ... 554
 12:25 ... 198
 12:28 ... 351
Ether 14
 14:20 ... 414

Moroni
Moroni 6
 6:9 ... 459
Moroni 7
 7:12 ... 329, 375
 7:12-13 ... 307, 429
 7:12-19 ... 649
 7:15 ... 276
 7:15-16 ... 169, 276

7:16 ... 276
 7:19 ... 169, 276
 7:31 ... 400
 7:32 ... 400
 7:44 ... 350
 7:47 ... 351, 579
 7:48 ... 277, 429, 431, 501
Moroni 8 ... 475
 8:8 ... 246
 8:25-26 ... 351
 8:26 ... 431
Moroni 10
 10:31 ... 181
 10:32 ... 429, 430, 470
 10:33 ... 429, 430

DOCTRINE & COVENANTS

Section 1 ... 71
 1:11-16 ... 219, 501
 1:15-23 ... 423
 1:15ff ... 302
 1:16 ... 255, 276
 1:24 ... 35, 85, 532
 1:31 ... 291
Section 3
 3:2 ... 201
 3:5 ... 159
 3:15 ... 267
Section 6
 6:7 ... 424, 709
 6:16 ... 250
Section 7 ... 751
Section 9
 9:7-9 ... xxii
Section 10
 10:21 ... 335
 10:37 ... 414
Section 11
 11:21 ... 494
Section 13
 13:1 ... 609
Section 14
 14:7 ... 68, 277
Section 19
 19:4-22 ... 709
 19:8-10 ... 709
 19:10 ... 708, 709
 19:11 ... 45
 19:11-12 ... 500
 19:18 ... 296
 19:18-19 ... 597
Section 20 ... 626
 20:20 ... 366
 20:30 ... 596
 20:31 ... 596
 20:37 ... 341, 359, 704
 20:54 ... 346
 20:73 ... 59

- 20:77 ... 179
Section 21
 21:1-68 ... 75
 21:6 ... 428
Section 26 ... 432
 26:1 ... 83, 116
Section 27
 27:5-14 ... 270, 487
 27:9 ... 649
 27:11 ... 325, 434
 27:13 ... 103, 467
Section 28
 28:2 ... 69
 28:7 ... 709
Section 29
 29:1 ... 44
 29:5 ... 135
 29:9 ... 135
 29:21 ... 76
 29:26 ... 325
 29:30 ... 67, 480
 29:30-35 ... 134
 29:31-33 ... 48
 29:32 ... 135
 29:33 ... 135, 198, 567
 29:35 ... 135, 366
 29:36 ... 244, 245, 257, 307, 540
 29:36-38 ... 245
 29:36-45 ... 223
 29:38 ... 102
 29:40 ... 257
 29:41 ... 280, 358
 29:41-42 ... 400
 29:42 ... 44, 338, 347
 29:46 ... 44
 29:47 ... 246
Section 35
 35:1 ... 201
Section 38
 38:27 ... 468
 38:27 ... 340
 38:32 ... 523
Section 42
 42:22-24 ... 348
 42:46 ... 470
 42:47 ... 471
 42:61 ... 311, 709
Section 43
 43:15-16 ... 108
 43:31 ... 246
 45:55 ... 246
Section 45
 45:17 ... 311
 45:32 ... 282
 45:46 ... 44
 45:48 ... 777
 45:52 ... 599
 45:61 ... 5
Section 46
 46:2 ... 459
Section 49
 49:9 ... 341
 49:20 ... 424
 49:22 ... 184
Section 50
 50:2-3 ... 246
 50:13-22 ... 494
 50:24 ... 486
 50:24-30 ... 709
 50:45 ... 44
Section 52
 52:14 ... 246
Section 53
 53:1 ... 522
Section 57
 57:3 ... 548
Section 58
 58:18 ... 668
 58:26-28 ... 597
Section 59
 59:8 ... 345, 418
 59:8-14 ... 341, 359
 59:9-12 ... 341, 359
 59:13-21 ... 270
 59:16 ... 486
 59:18 ... 371
 59:20 ... 371
Section 61
 61:14 ... 98
 61:17 ... 270
 61:17-19 ... 96
 61:22 ... 732
Section 62
 62:8 ... 732
Section 63
 63:21 ... 204
 63:23 ... 663
Section 64
 64:34 ... 372
Section 65
 65:5-6 ... 467
Section 66
 66:2 ... 341
Section 66-68 ... 625
Section 67
 67:10-12 ... 200
 67:10-13 ... 366
 67:11-12 ... 44
 67:12 ... 231
Section 68 ... 458, 459
 68:1-5 ... 459
 68:2-4 ... 531
 68:3 ... 459
 68:12 ... 705
 68:25-28 ... 617
Section 74 ... 504, 617
Section 75
 75:26 ... 375
 75:32 ... 375
 75:43 ... 375
Section 76 ... xxi, 49, 51, 81, 302, 575, 751, 770
 76:5-10 ... 709
 76:7 ... 65, 709
 76:10 ... 65
 76:12 ... 554
 76:15-19 ... 713
 76:19 ... 554
 76:19-20 ... 81
 76:23-24 ... 65
 76:25-26 ... 223
 76:26 ... 335, 374
 76:28 ... 223
 76:32-35 ... 335
 76:32-43 ... 577
 76:37-39 ... 244
 76:41-42 ... 320
 76:43-44 ... 244
 76:43-48 ... 420
 76:51-53 ... 706
 76:54 ... 522
 76:56-59 ... 522, 669
 76:57 ... 668
 76:67 ... 522, 686
 76:69 ... 24, 523
 76:71 ... 522
 76:85 ... 770
 76:87 ... 168
 76:94 ... 522
 76:96-98 ... 420
 76:102 ... 522
 76:106-107 ... 770
 76:112 ... 168, 766
 76:114-119 ... 709
Section 77
 77:2 ... 159, 199, 202, 789
 77:2-4 ... 177
 77:3 ... 791
 77:9 ... 387
 77:12 ... 112, 152
Section 78
 78:5-6 ... 424
 78:7 ... 349
 78:14 ... 199, 423, 424
 78:15 ... 492
 78:15-16 ... 492
 78:16 ... 325
Section 82
 82:10 ... 218
Section 84 ... 458, 491, 668, 758
 84:2 ... 520
 84:6 ... 520, 668
 84:6-32 ... 519
 84:14-15 ... 761
 84:16 ... 325, 376, 378, 491
 84:18 ... 520, 521
 84:19 ... 65, 521, 709
 84:19-20 ... 560, 663
 84:19-22 ... 342, 428, 596, 668
 84:20-21 ... 486
 84:22 ... 44, 517, 766
 84:23 ... 521, 669
 84:23-25 ... 480
 84:23-27 ... 668
 84:24 ... 610
 84:26 ... 521
 84:31-32 ... 520
 84:32 ... 609
 84:33 ... 238, 340, 520, 522
 84:33-34 ... 519
 84:33-48 ... 342, 472
 84:34 ... 668, 669
 84:38 ... 342, 428, 498, 523, 604
 84:40 ... 428
 84:41 ... 308
 84:43 ... 342, 522
 84:44 ... 342
 84:46 ... 649
 84:46-48 ... 649
 84:47-48 ... 522
 84:63 ... 599
 84:80 ... 520
Section 86
 86:3 ... 76
Section 87
 87:8 ... 282
Section 88 ... 165, 458
 88:3 ... 599
 88:3-4 ... 342
 88:5-61 ... 201
 88:6 ... 39, 77, 100
 88:6-13 ... 649
 88:7-9 ... 99
 88:12 ... 125, 539
 88:12-13 ... 99, 102
 88:13 ... 358, 547
 88:15 ... 158, 326
 88:15-17 ... 311
 88:18-19 ... 204
 88:26 ... 204
 88:27-32 ... 420
 88:28 ... 200, 232, 234, 278, 581
 88:28-32 ... 163, 175, 277
 88:29 ... 520
 88:32-33 ... 420
 88:34-38 ... 217, 218
 88:35 ... 255
 88:37 ... 539
 88:41 ... 48, 547, 649
 88:42-45 ... 108, 217, 218
 88:47-48 ... 342
 88:49-50 ... 709
 88:51-61 ... 320
 88:63-69 ... 709
 88:68 ... 277, 319, 522
 88:68-69 ... 152, 350
 88:69 ... 347
 88:77 ... xxv
 88:96 ... 42
 88:107 ... 604
 88:110-111 ... 246
 88:110-115 ... 246
 88:110-116 ... 326
 88:112 ... 325
 88:118 ... xxv, 141, 528

- 88:121 ... 346
88:133 ... 341
Section 89 ... 174
89:17 ... 633
Section 91
91:1-6 ... 815
91:4-5 ... 18
91:4-6 ... 18
Section 92
92:2 ... 301
Section 93 ... 290, 541
93:1 ... 44, 519, 709
93:2 ... 649
93:12 ... 599
93:15 ... 80
93:19 ... 486
93:19-20 ... 47
93:19-22 ... 709
93:21 ... 221
93:22 ... 428
93:23 ... 11, 201, 541
93:25 ... 243, 375
93:26 ... 486
93:26-28 ... 709
93:29 ... 201, 538
93:29-30 ... 11, 541
93:30 ... 202
93:31 ... 307, 310
93:33 ... 11, 231, 519, 541
93:33-34 ... 200, 311, 487
93:36 ... 68, 137, 452, 546
93:36-37 ... 54
93:36-39 ... 709
93:38 ... 198, 313
93:39 ... 229
93:45-46 ... 599
Section 94
94:1 ... 599
Section 95 ... 562
95:5-6 ... 351
Section 97
97:1 ... 599
97:9 ... 164
97:16 ... 668
97:21 ... 349, 668
Section 98
98:1 ... 599
98:18 ... 473
Section 101
101:21 ... 548
101:23 ... 67, 556
101:31 ... 42
101:32-33 ... 793
101:32-34 ... 194
101:78 ... 286, 307, 578
101:91 ... 420, 572
Section 102 ... 458, 625, 626
Section 103
103:1 ... 599
103:16 ... 69
103:19-20 ... 758
Section 104
104:1 ... 599
104:14 ... 101
104:15-16 ... 424
104:16 ... 424
104:58 ... 626
Section 105
105:11-13 ... 80
105:26 ... 599
Section 107 ... 458, 483, 491, 625, 626
107:1 ... 668
107:1-4 ... 573
107:1-6 ... 668
107:1-58 ... 491
107:3 ... 57, 522
107:9 ... 69
107:10 ... 573
107:14 ... 765
107:17 ... 763
107:18-19 ... 65, 663, 709
107:19 ... 149, 220, 385, 521
107:38-39 ... 597
107:39-40 ... 456
107:39-42 ... 491
107:40-41 ... 348
107:40-52 ... 625
107:41-52 ... 492
107:42 ... 456
107:42-53 ... 483
107:43 ... 482
107:49 ... 483, 492
107:53-55 ... 492
107:53-56 ... 457, 483, 623, 625, 626
107:53-57 ... 485
107:54 ... 325, 457, 459
107:56 ... 62, 363, 459
107:57 ... 363, 625
107:58 ... 597
107:59-100 ... 491
107:73 ... 597
107:85-87 ... 597
107:89 ... 597
107:91 ... 597
107:93 ... 625
107:99 ... 597
Section 109
109:5 ... 675
109:15 ... 486, 487
109:19 ... 356
109:22, 26, 79 ... 179
109:75 ... 42
109:77 ... 486
109:78-79 ... 357
Section 110
110:1-2 ... 554
110:2 ... 62
110:3 ... 61
110:7 ... 179
110:7-9 ... 471
110:15 ... 649
Section 111
111:11 ... 247
Section 116 ... 460, 622, 623
116:1 ... 325, 434, 485, 623
Section 117
117:8 ... 325, 623
117:8-11 ... 623
Section 121 ... 227
121:1 ... 210, 407
121:2 ... 210
121:26-28 ... 709
121:26-32 ... 201
121:30-32 ... 217, 218
121:32 ... 94, 111
121:34 ... 351
121:34-35 ... 351
121:34-46 ... 597
121:37 ... 227
121:39 ... 227, 269, 374
121:44 ... 351
121:45 ... 186, 236, 351
Section 122
122:7 ... 276
122:7-8 ... 39
122:8 ... 77
Section 124
124:25-55 ... 720
124:28 ... 486, 610
124:30 ... 440
124:33 ... 218
124:39 ... 610
124:40-41 ... 218
Section 128
128:7 ... 709
128:13 ... 563
128:17 ... 649
128:18 ... 103, 126, 467, 531, 610
128:20 ... 54, 246, 258, 330, 339
128:21 ... 325
128:24 ... 610
Section 129
129:4-7 ... 54, 258, 330
129:8 ... 246
Section 130
130:1-3 ... 277
130:3 ... 342
130:4 ... 140
130:4-11 ... 62, 299, 305, 681
130:5 ... 100
130:7 ... 48
130:8-9 ... 62
130:9 ... 38, 63, 204
130:11 ... 523, 680
130:19 ... 597
130:20 ... 17
Section 131
131:1 ... 669
131:1-4 ... 766
131:5-6 ... 522
131:6 ... 192, 229
131:7-8 ... 538
Section 132 ... 5
132:5 ... 217, 218
132:11 ... 217, 218
132:19 ... 233, 278, 280, 486, 489, 581
132:19-24 ... 342
132:20 ... 45, 523
132:22 ... 669
132:22-24 ... 158
132:23 ... 709
132:26 ... 523
132:27 ... 375
132:28 ... 218
132:29 ... 523
132:30 ... 64
132:30-31 ... 521
132:49 ... 522
Section 133
133:10 ... 487
133:18 ... 387
133:20 ... 777
133:22 ... 61
133:26-33 ... 485
133:72-73 ... 572
133:76 ... 420
Section 137
137:2 ... 547
137:4 ... 62
137:5 ... 325
137:7-9 ... 765
137:7-10 ... 420
137:9 ... 420
Section 138 ... 420
138:1-11 ... 713
138:11 ... 554
138:38 ... 325
138:38-39 ... 138, 220, 544
138:39 ... 595
138:41 ... 761
138:50 ... 311
Official Declaration 2 ... xxiii

PEARL OF GREAT PRICE

Moses

Moses 1 ... 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 33–81, 40–41, 83, 684, 694, 810

1:1 ... 42–44, 44, 684, 694
 1:1-2 ... 37, 74
 1:1-23 ... 59
 1:2 ... 44, 60, 64, 79, 590
 1:3 ... 44–45, 45, 694
 1:3-7 ... 37, 544
 1:3-9 ... 71
 1:4 ... 44, 45, 45–46, 49, 67, 425, 694
 1:4-5 ... 46
 1:5 ... 44, 45, 46, 50, 231
 1:6 ... 36, 45, 46–49, 47, 53, 60, 520, 694
 1:7 ... 44, 45, 46, 49, 50
 1:7-8 ... 79
 1:8 ... 33, 38, 44, 49, 49–50, 50, 79, 540, 694
 1:8-10 ... 49
 1:9 ... 44, 50, 51, 60, 74, 80
 1:9-10 ... 684
 1:9-11 ... 694
 1:9-23 ... 38
 1:10 ... 51–52, 74, 200, 363
 1:10-11 ... 71
 1:11 ... 44, 52, 60, 74, 200
 1:12 ... 48, 52–53, 694
 1:12-16 ... 47
 1:12-19 ... 329
 1:12-22 ... 33, 516
 1:13 ... 44, 45, 46, 52, 53–54, 71, 694
 1:13-15 ... 52
 1:14 ... 44, 54, 60, 200, 694
 1:15 ... 44, 54, 54–55, 102, 387
 1:16 ... 47, 53, 55, 57, 694
 1:16-22 ... 281
 1:17 ... 36, 47, 55–56, 56
 1:18 ... 55, 56, 60, 71, 102, 477, 694
 1:19 ... 45, 50, 53, 54, 56–57, 71, 243, 246, 435, 541, 695
 1:20 ... 44, 55, 57, 72, 477, 515, 695
 1:21 ... 32, 47, 50, 55, 57–58, 243, 695

1:21-22 ... 57
 1:22 ... 44, 58
 1:23 ... 37, 42, 59, 69
 1:23-24 ... 72
 1:24 ... 38, 44, 59, 60, 62, 80, 695
 1:24-41 ... 59
 1:24ff ... 364
 1:25 ... 44, 45, 59–61, 72, 477, 695
 1:25-26 ... 36, 38, 46
 1:25-27 ... 80
 1:26 ... 45, 61
 1:27 ... 44, 50, 62–64, 695
 1:27-28 ... 50, 72, 79
 1:27-29 ... 38
 1:27-41 ... 787
 1:27ff ... 33
 1:28 ... 44, 45, 64, 695
 1:29 ... 44, 50, 64
 1:30 ... 38, 64, 65, 695, 696
 1:30-36 ... 74
 1:31 ... 35, 37, 44, 45, 49, 60, 64, 64–65, 79, 196, 517, 695
 1:32 ... 45, 46, 47, 65, 93, 102
 1:32-33 ... 93
 1:33 ... 45, 47, 50, 65–66
 1:34 ... 66–67, 159, 790
 1:35 ... 44, 45, 49, 50, 64, 67, 72, 696
 1:35-38 ... 67
 1:35-40 ... 39
 1:36 ... 50, 72
 1:37 ... 45, 67
 1:38 ... 45, 50, 67–68, 72
 1:39 ... 34, 44, 45, 51, 65, 68, 72, 74, 106, 381, 567, 597, 696, 800
 1:40 ... 45, 50, 69
 1:40-41 ... 73
 1:41 ... 6, 45, 59, 69, 695
 1:42 ... 5, 37, 42, 69, 69–70, 73, 695
 Moses 1:23 ... 671
 Moses 1:42 ... 671
Moses 1-2 ... 788
Moses 1-3 ... 215
Moses 1-4 ... 78, 323
Moses 1-5:43 ... 125
Moses 1-6:12 ... 12
Moses 1-8 ... 9, 343
Moses 1:40-2:1 ... 69
Moses 2 ... 46, 78, 83–131, 92, 123, 133, 146, 154, 159, 176, 177, 184, 198, 255, 695
 2:1 ... 47, 83, 86, 93, 93–95, 110

2:1-2 ... 45
 2:1-5:43 ... 3
 2:2 ... 84, 90, 95, 95–98, 104, 116, 136, 403, 778
 2:3 ... 99, 99–100, 129, 136
 2:3-4 ... 86
 2:4 ... 93, 99, 100–102, 101
 2:5 ... 102–103, 154
 2:6 ... 99, 101, 104
 2:7 ... 99, 101, 104–105
 2:8 ... 98, 163
 2:9 ... 99, 105, 147
 2:10 ... 98, 99, 105–106
 2:11 ... 99, 101, 106–107
 2:12 ... 99, 101, 107
 2:13 ... 107
 2:14 ... 82, 99, 101, 107–108
 2:14-15 ... 107
 2:14-19 ... 99
 2:15 ... 99, 108–109
 2:16 ... 99, 102, 109
 2:16-18 ... 637
 2:18 ... 99, 101, 229
 2:20 ... 109, 110
 2:20-25 ... 199
 2:21 ... 99, 101, 109, 109–110
 2:22 ... 110, 116, 152
 2:24 ... 99, 101, 107, 110, 246
 2:25 ... 99, 101, 110, 256
 2:26 ... xxiii, xxiv, 47, 83, 110, 111–114, 114, 123, 124, 176, 403, 788, 886
 2:26-27 ... 87, 113, 152, 156, 198, 200, 482, 743
 2:26-28 ... 122, 123
 2:26-31 ... 476
 2:27 ... 47, 83, 88, 99, 113, 115–116, 122, 176, 256, 759, 788, 798
 2:27-28 ... 112, 886
 2:28 ... 91, 102, 116–117, 152, 169, 177, 258, 264, 271, 632, 886
 2:29 ... 117, 272
 2:29-30 ... 114
 2:29-31 ... 91
 2:30 ... 99, 117, 117–118
 2:31 ... 87, 99, 118, 174, 176, 403
Moses 2-3 ... 8, 65, 243
Moses 2-4 ... 8, 50, 83, 133, 279
Moses 2-5 ... 2, 39, 64

Moses 2-5:43 ... 83, 125
Moses 3 ... 112, 122, 125, 133–213, 150, 695
 3:1 ... 149, 151
 3:1-3 ... 134
 3:2 ... 151–152
 3:3 ... 152–153
 3:4 ... 103, 133, 151–212, 153–154
 3:4-5 ... 153
 3:4-7 ... 788
 3:5 ... 116, 134, 136, 154–156, 155, 156, 159, 216, 279, 354, 540, 624, 860
 3:5-17 ... 215
 3:6 ... 136, 155, 156
 3:6-7 ... 134, 198
 3:7 ... 66, 135, 156, 157–159, 403, 778, 860
 3:7-8 ... 216
 3:8 ... 132, 139, 142, 159–162, 161, 173, 673, 683
 3:8-10 ... 145
 3:8-14 ... 134, 139, 155
 3:9 ... 135, 139, 140, 145, 155, 158, 162–170, 170, 187, 200, 252, 276, 591, 592
 3:10 ... 145, 170–171, 187, 403
 3:10-14 ... 171
 3:11 ... 171–172
 3:11-14 ... 171, 211
 3:12 ... 172, 185
 3:13 ... 172
 3:14 ... 172–173
 3:15 ... 116, 152, 155, 173–174, 272
 3:15ff ... 155
 3:16 ... 173, 276
 3:16-17 ... 91, 228, 290
 3:17 ... 106, 174, 174–176, 253, 276, 621
 3:18 ... 176, 268
 3:18-20 ... 134
 3:18-25 ... 215
 3:19 ... 135, 158, 177–180, 183, 199
 3:19-20 ... 102
 3:20 ... 157, 179, 180, 743
 3:21 ... 180–181
 3:21-22 ... 87, 89
 3:21-24 ... 134, 743
 3:22 ... 179, 181–183, 199
 3:23 ... 183–184, 185, 199, 200, 268, 368
 3:23-24 ... 87
 3:24 ... 184, 184–185,

- 185, 199
 3:25 ... 134, 157,
 185–186, 216, 234,
 236, 274, 315
 3:26 ... 62
 3:33 ... 200
Moses 3-4 ... 144
Moses 3-5 ... 888
Moses 4 ... 8, 134, 154,
215–321, 242, 337, 369,
384, 433, 695
 4:1 ... 47, 243–244, 244,
 284, 307, 365, 577
 4:1-4 ... 33, 215, 216,
 243
 4:2 ... 221, 243,
 244–245, 399
 4:3 ... 47, 201, 224, 245,
 422, 577, 579, 581,
 593
 4:3-4 ... 101
 4:4 ... 229, 246, 374,
 375, 443
 4:5 ... 246–249, 249,
 384, 886
 4:5-11 ... 215
 4:5ff ... 516
 4:6 ... 50, 57, 72, 234,
 245, 249–251, 250,
 251, 266, 320
 4:7 ... 249, 251
 4:8 ... 252
 4:9 ... 167, 252, 592
 4:9-11 ... 252
 4:10 ... 252–253
 4:10-11 ... 594–595, 886
 4:11 ... 253–255, 276,
 320
 4:12 ... 251, 255–257,
 258, 277
 4:12-14 ... 215
 4:13 ... 169, 185,
 237, 253, 256, 258,
 258–259, 274, 315,
 368, 619, 886
 4:14 ... 224, 259–261,
 592
 4:15 ... 261–262
 4:15-19 ... 215
 4:16 ... 236, 262
 4:17 ... 262–263, 886
 4:18 ... 180, 232, 257,
 263
 4:19 ... 263–264, 594
 4:20 ... 264–265, 384
 4:20-25 ... 185
 4:20-27 ... 215
 4:21 ... 32, 206,
 265–267, 368, 476,
 619, 620, 888
 4:22 ... 116, 264,
 268–270, 273, 292,
 295, 354
 4:22-25 ... 276
 4:23 ... 66, 246, 264,
 265, 268, 270–271,
 292, 293, 384, 443
 4:23-24 ... 624
 4:24 ... 155, 271, 272,
 295, 860
 4:24-25 ... 271, 632
 4:25 ... 66, 142, 184,
 216, 264, 272–273,
 295, 354, 416
 4:26 ... 183, 273–274
 4:26-27 ... 179
 4:26-31 ... 185
 4:27 ... 152, 216, 234,
 237, 238, 258, 264,
 273, 274–276, 275,
 276, 386, 444
 4:28 ... 10, 111, 122,
 276, 276–278, 278,
 320, 886
 4:28-31 ... 215, 230,
 276, 591
 4:29 ... 154, 155, 184,
 278, 278–320, 278–
 279, 280, 354, 624
 4:30 ... 279
 4:31 ... 145, 161, 214,
 216, 233, 278, 279,
 280–282, 357, 758,
 889
 4:32 ... 69, 282, 671
Moses 5 ... 272, 323–453,
352–353, 607
 5:1 ... 154, 155, 272,
 344, 354, 624, 887
 5:1-2 ... 355
 5:1-6 ... 344, 354
 5:1-12 ... 324
 5:1-16 ... 2
 5:1-59 ... 8
 5:2 ... 11, 256, 324, 344,
 354, 354–355, 367,
 568, 886
 5:3 ... 272, 355
 5:4 ... 55, 60, 80, 355–
 358, 367, 400, 477
 5:4-8 ... 118, 673
 5:5 ... 358–360, 475
 5:5-6 ... 344, 354
 5:5-8 ... 237
 5:5-9 ... 276, 341, 359,
 456
 5:6 ... 16, 360–361, 367,
 400, 404, 905
 5:6-8 ... 347, 362
 5:7 ... 47, 65, 309, 345,
 361
 5:7-8 ... 347
 5:8 ... 56, 355, 361–362,
 422, 434
 5:9 ... 44, 47, 59, 60, 80,
 347, 362–363, 400
 5:10 ... 272, 363–364,
 364
 5:10-11 ... 257, 363
 5:11 ... 239, 268, 276,
 364
 5:12 ... 195, 347, 364,
 366, 400, 456, 481
 5:13 ... 243, 345, 354,
 365–366, 366, 369,
 377, 384, 400, 478
 5:13-41 ... 324
 5:13ff ... 11
 5:14 ... 366, 400
 5:14-15 ... 475
 5:15 ... 367, 401
 5:16 ... 195, 310, 324,
 367, 367–369, 369,
 370, 395, 443, 448,
 456, 475, 476, 886
 5:16-17 ... 11, 475
 5:17 ... 310, 324, 369–
 371, 443, 476, 886
 5:18 ... 371, 384, 409
 5:18-26 ... 324
 5:18-27 ... 375
 5:19 ... 371–372
 5:20 ... 372
 5:20-21 ... 322
 5:21 ... 367, 372–373,
 409
 5:22 ... 373
 5:23 ... 324, 373–374,
 443
 5:23-24 ... 335
 5:23-33 ... 423
 5:24 ... 374, 375, 540,
 603
 5:25 ... 376
 5:26 ... 373, 376, 385
 5:27 ... 376, 443
 5:28 ... 324, 376–377,
 384
 5:29 ... 367, 377–379,
 397
 5:29-30 ... 346
 5:30 ... 379
 5:31 ... 335, 379–380,
 381, 410
 5:31-33 ... 409
 5:32 ... 336, 380–381,
 457, 603
 5:32-36 ... 381
 5:33 ... 381–382, 413
 5:34 ... 262, 336, 367,
 382–383, 410
 5:35 ... 337, 382, 383
 5:36 ... 384
 5:36-37 ... 386
 5:37 ... 337, 384, 391
 5:38 ... 384, 410
 5:38-39 ... 337
 5:39 ... 266, 280, 324,
 385
 5:39-40 ... 337
 5:40 ... 385–388, 396,
 410, 432
 5:41 ... 161, 338, 348,
 382, 386, 388–390
 5:42 ... 367, 388,
 390–391, 886
 5:42-43 ... 392
 5:42-46 ... 274, 324
 5:43 ... 391–392, 396
 5:43-5:51 ... 3
 5:43-51 ... 323
 5:43-54 ... 387
 5:44 ... 355, 392–393
 5:45 ... 393, 393–394
 5:45-47 ... 393
 5:46 ... 393, 394–395
 5:47 ... 395–396, 612
 5:47-48 ... 185, 395, 397
 5:47-54 ... 324
 5:47-55 ... 393
 5:48 ... 396, 432
 5:49 ... 350, 379, 397,
 613
 5:49-50 ... 335, 378
 5:49-59 ... 185
 5:50 ... 379, 397, 410,
 613
 5:51 ... 348, 367, 398
 5:52 ... 398
 5:53 ... 398–399, 613
 5:54 ... 399
 5:55 ... 347
 5:55-59 ... 324
 5:56 ... 384, 398, 399
 5:57 ... 17, 47, 324, 399,
 443, 475
 5:58 ... 347, 400
 5:58-59 ... 347, 475
 5:59 ... 347, 400,
 400–401
 Moses 5:21-22 ... 381
 Moses 5:26 ... 381
 Moses 5:31-32 ... 116
 Moses 5:47 ... 116
Moses 5:1-6:52 ... 323
Moses 5-7 ... 50, 282
Moses 5-8 ... 323
Moses 5:52-6:18 ... 3,
323, 455
Moses 6 ... 323, 455–509,
483
 6:1 ... 364, 399, 443, 475
 6:1-2 ... 11
 6:1-12 ... 455, 474
 6:1-22 ... 886
 6:1-52 ... 8
 6:2 ... 355, 456, 457,
 475, 475–477, 886,
 888
 6:2-3 ... 475, 476
 6:3 ... 477
 6:3-4 ... 456, 476

- 6:3-23 ... 886
 6:4 ... 365, 475, 477-478
 6:5 ... 154, 478-480
 6:5-6 ... 454
 6:5-8 ... 415
 6:5-23 ... 348
 6:6 ... 479, 480
 6:7 ... 348, 480
 6:8 ... 154, 157, 480-481
 6:9 ... 10, 112, 113, 257, 274, 348, 481-482
 6:10 ... 11, 113, 115, 348, 482
 6:10-11 ... 886
 6:11 ... 482-483
 6:12 ... 175, 483-484
 6:15 ... 116, 118, 323, 348, 350, 415
 6:17 ... 415
 6:19-6:52 ... 3
 6:22 ... 154, 157, 195, 348
 6:23 ... 348
 6:29 ... 378
 6:31 ... 447
 6:36 ... 50, 200
 6:38 ... 195, 394
 6:40 ... 828
 6:41 ... 195
 6:43-68 ... 2
 6:49 ... 366
 6:50 ... 361
 6:50-53 ... 237
 6:51 ... 50
 6:51-63 ... 361
 6:51-64 ... 362
 6:52 ... 47, 59, 443
 6:52-64 ... 347
 6:52-68 ... 331, 360
 6:53 ... 237, 313
 6:56 ... 169, 276, 310, 324
 6:57 ... 47, 53, 184, 603
 6:59 ... 47, 50, 157, 290, 442, 522
 6:59-60 ... 596, 704
 6:61 ... 65, 362
 6:62 ... 47
 6:64 ... 42, 347, 362
 6:64-65 ... 276, 341
 6:66 ... 59, 362
 6:67-68 ... 347, 362
 6:68 ... 157
Moses 6-7 ... 625
Moses 6:26-7:69 ... 481
Moses 6:52-7:1 ... 3
Moses 7 ... 2
 7:2 ... 684
 7:2-7:69 ... 3
 7:4 ... 50
 7:4-67 ... 62
 7:5 ... 394
 7:7-8 ... 387
 7:8 ... 55
 7:11 ... 59, 362
 7:12 ... 195, 481
 7:13 ... 121
 7:17 ... 389, 415, 727
 7:18 ... 12, 349, 350, 447
 7:19 ... 391, 447
 7:20-67 ... 7
 7:21 ... 195, 447, 481
 7:22 ... 55, 195, 196, 387, 389, 481, 585
 7:23 ... 33, 50
 7:25ff ... 302
 7:26 ... 226
 7:27 ... 42, 195, 400, 481
 7:28 ... 127, 447
 7:29 ... 349
 7:32 ... 245, 447
 7:32-33 ... 350
 7:33 ... 195, 373, 448, 456
 7:35 ... 45, 53, 184, 603
 7:36-37 ... 320, 350
 7:36-38 ... 588
 7:37 ... 195, 196, 266, 456
 7:41 ... 355
 7:48 ... 199
 7:50 ... 47
 7:51-53 ... 195, 196, 481
 7:59 ... 47
 7:62 ... 47, 447
 7:62-63 ... 485
 7:63 ... 447, 515
 7:69 ... 12, 109, 310, 344, 350, 391, 547
Moses 7:1-8:12 ... 8
Moses 8
 8:1 ... 481, 483, 492
 8:1-8:30 ... 3
 8:2-3 ... 196, 481
 8:9 ... 152
 8:13 ... 76, 348, 443, 589
 8:13-14 ... 397
 8:13-22 ... 195, 226, 481
 8:13-30 ... 2
 8:14 ... 447
 8:15 ... 443, 588
 8:17 ... 375, 483, 726
 8:18 ... 116, 195, 481
 8:19 ... 347
 8:19-21 ... 398
 8:20 ... 443
 8:20-21 ... 349
 8:21 ... 348, 355, 443, 447, 448, 589, 727
 8:22 ... 118, 589
 8:23 ... 443
 8:23-24 ... 343
 8:24 ... 443
 8:25 ... 7, 268
 8:28 ... 323, 350
 8:29 ... 118
 8:30 ... 310, 344
 8:41-42 ... 195, 481
 Moses 8:4 ... 116
 Moses 8:14 ... 392
 Moses 8:21 ... 392
 Moses 8:30 ... 116
Moses 8:13-Genesis 6:22 ... 8
Abraham
Abraham 1
 1:2 ... 516, 520
 1:3 ... 17
 1:18 ... 684
 1:26 ... 348, 455
Abraham 2
 2:9-11 ... 486
 2:12 ... 694
Abraham 3 ... 163
 3:1-18 ... 63
 3:2-4 ... 84
 3:2-10 ... 567
 3:4-5 ... 537
 3:6 ... 201
 3:8 ... 201
 3:9 ... 137, 140, 163, 547
 3:11-12 ... 49
 3:14 ... 64
 3:16 ... 140, 163, 201
 3:16-19 ... 546
 3:18-19 ... 201
 3:19 ... 137, 138, 597
 3:21 ... 302
 3:21-22 ... 50
 3:21ff ... 33
 3:22 ... 137, 544, 694
 3:22-23 ... 38, 50, 63, 79, 137, 138, 220, 544
 3:23 ... 520, 547, 694
 3:23-25 ... 583
 3:24 ... 106
 3:24-25 ... 221
 3:25 ... 106, 303
 3:26 ... 239, 523
 3:27 ... 583
 3:27-28 ... 33, 223
 3:28 ... 201, 245
Abraham 4 ... 106
 4:1 ... 94
 4:1ff ... 93
 4:2 ... 84, 95, 98
 4:4 ... 101
 4:5 ... 103
 4:6 ... 104
 4:8 ... 103
 4:10 ... 106
 4:12 ... 85, 106
 4:13 ... 103
 4:14 ... 108, 119, 120
 4:14-18 ... 84
 4:14ff ... 103
 4:15 ... 109
 4:16-17 ... 120
 4:18 ... 106
 4:21 ... 85, 106
 4:24-25 ... 85, 199
 4:25 ... 106, 801
 4:26 ... 111
 4:26-27 ... 112, 153
 4:26-29 ... 85
Abraham 5
 5:1 ... 151
 5:2-3 ... 85
 5:2ff ... 112
 5:3-5 ... 63
 5:4 ... 153
 5:4-5 ... 85
 5:7 ... 158, 798
 5:9 ... 276
 5:13 ... 84, 140, 276
 5:20 ... 199
Facsimile 1 ... 435
Facsimile 2 ... 808
 Fig. 1 ... 163, 302, 567, 720
 Figs. 1-2 ... 79
 Fig. 2 ... 694
 Fig. 3 ... 340
 Fig. 5 ... 430
 Fig. 7 ... 42, 247, 442
Facsimiles 1-3 ... 808
Joseph Smith-Matthew ... 9
 1:27 ... 247
Joseph Smith-History
 1:11ff ... 713
 1:15-16 ... 33
 1:15-17 ... 57
 1:16 ... 59
 1:20 ... 51
 1:31 ... 238
 1:33 ... 276
 1:36-41 ... 712
 1:39 ... 649
 1:40 ... 69
 1:74 ... 513
Articles of Faith
 1:1 ... xx
 1:2 ... 257, 289, 290, 364
 1:3 ... 671
 1:9 ... 532
 1:10 ... 204, 610
 1:13 ... 448

INDEX OF LATTER-DAY PROPHETS

Joseph Smith, Jr.

No date

... 12, 75, 80, 158, 203,
356, 457, 521, 575,
622, 720, 750, 839

1830... 708

1830.06.xx ... 36
1830.07.xx ... 323, 626
1830.12.xx ... 8

1831

1831.10.11 ... 459
1831.10.25 ... 351, 493
1831.11.01 ... 459

1832

1832.02.xx ... 751
1832.02.16 ... 15, 21, 34
1832.03.xx ... 622
1832.07.31 ... 20, 22
1832.11.27 ... 35, 63, 217

1833

1833.01.14 ... 165, 248
1833.06.25 ... 733
1833.07.02 ... 2
1833.12.18 ... 326, 492

1834

1834.xx.xx ... 361
1834.01.11 ... 626
1834.01.22 ... xxvii, 29,
75, 250, 269, 371, 399,
416, 475, 554, 579,
617, 731
1834.02.12 ... 494, 495
1834.02.19 ... 494, 495
1834.05.26 ... 117

1835

1835.09.xx ... 533
1835.09.01 ... 26
1835.11.12 ... 80
1835.11.14 ... 25
1835.11.24 ... 182
1835.12.xx ... 43, 248

1836

1836.01.15 ... 460
1836.03.27 ... 624

1838

1838.05.08 ... i-20
1838.05.19 ... 623
1838.12.16 ... 548

1839

1839.03.22 ... 190
1839.03.25 ... xxiv, 459,

493, 553
1839.06.27 ... 44, 342,
351, 456, 472, 520,
522, 523, 523, 732
1839.07.02 ... 325, 326,
326, 342, 428, 457,
460, 473, 520, 575,
584, 596
1839.08.08 ... 43, 112,
285, 314, 458, 541,
544, 625

1840

1840.02.06 ... 49, 73,
399, 541
1840.03.04 ... 20
1840.06.18 ... 26
1840.10.05 ... 178, 320
325, 326, 335, 345,
371, 376, 522, 609,
609, 618
1840.10.19 ... 599

1841

1841.01.05 ... 23, 94,
95, 112, 125, 203, 222,
246, 250, 303, 311,
374, 521, 541, 544,
579, 580, 765
1841.01.19 ... 544, 580
1841.02.09 ... 175, 288
1841.03.xx ... 544
1841.03.09 ... 140, 175
1841.03.21 ... 42
1841.03.28 ... 221, 541
1841.04.06 ... 675
1841.05.16 ... 216, 229,
708

1842

1842.01.25 ... 387
1842.03.20 ... 107, 202,
217, 218
1842.04.01 ... 54, 175,
202, 258, 539, 544
1842.04.10 ... xxxiv,
178, 192
1842.04.11 ... 319
1842.04.15 ... 36, 49,
220
1842.04.28 ... 202, 357,
575
1842.05.01 ... 44, 472,
523
1842.05.02 ... 627

1842.05.04 ... 342, 442,
559, 560, 668
1842.06.09 ... 333, 732
1842.08.02 ... 520
1842.08.27 ... 744

1843

1843.01.01 ... 191
1843.01.02 ... 575
1843.01.09 ... 482
1843.01.22 ... 218, 757
1843.01.29 ... xxiii, xxxi, 42, 247
1843.02.01 ... 66, 81,
302, 320, 575
1843.02.08 ... 713
1843.04.06 ... 221, 487,
575
1843.04.08 ... 76, 178,
202, 202, 513, 534,
709
1843.04.13 ... 66, 367,
369, 589
1843.04.16 ... 22, 76,
470
1843.05.14 ... 44, 55,
76, 178, 224, 229, 266,
306, 311, 495
1843.05.16 ... 766
1843.05.17 ... 136, 158,
178, 539
1843.05.21 ... 178, 303,
351, 523, 544, 580,
655
1843.06.11 ... 178, 218,
218, 390, 669
1843.07.09 ... 10, 113,
191
1843.07.23 ... 534
1843.08.13 ... 705
1843.08.27 ... 178, 487,
521, 522, 669, 766,
766
1843.09.28 ... 669
1843.10.06 ... 102
1843.10.09 ... 138, 178,
217, 218, 218, 513,
544
1843.10.15 ... 26

1844

1844.01.02 ... 203
1844.01.21 ... 178
1844.02.05 ... 562
1844.02.23 ... 80
1844.03.10 ... 26, 522,
523, 523, 578, 655
1844.04.06 ... 649
1844.04.07 ... 10, 43, 52,
68, 81, 94, 111, 113,
178, 202, 220, 224,
244, 244, 303, 305,
306, 338, 350, 375,
375, 437, 351, 538,
541, 543, 544, 577,

577, 578, 603
1844.04.08 ... 26, 559
1844.05.02 ... 136, 151,
365, 544, 757
1844.05.12 ... 138, 139,
218, 520, 544, 708,
709, 709
1844.06.16 ... 26, 46, 48,
84, 111, 178, 544, 568,
703, 839

Brigham Young

1841-1849

1841.10.12 ... 675
1843.08.06 ... 704
1844.12.xx ... 253, 289,
575
1844.12.29 ... 224
1845.04.17 ... 548
1847.02.23 ... 545

1850-1859

1852.04.06 ... 122
1852.04.09 ... 93, 603,
604, 605
1852.08.28 ... 204
1853.02.27 ... 409, 513
1853.04.06-a ... 563
1853.04.06-b ... 146,
233, 280, 557, 563,
675
1853.10.23 ... 553
1854.10.08 ... 67, 218,
545, 553, 604
1854.12.03 ... 437
1855.06.03 ... 289
1856.03.23 ... 199
1856.04.20 ... 204
1856.11.09 ... 244, 419
1857.02.08 ... 604
1857.03.08 ... 604
1859.09.01 ... 604
1859.10.08 ... 567
1859.10.09 ... 204, 604

1860-1869

1860.01.05 ... 410
1860.01.27 ... 712
1860.05.20 ... 21
1860.06.12-a ... 603
1860.06.12-b ... 244
1860.09.23 ... 534
1860.09.30 ... 118
1861.02.17 ... 244, 419
1862.03.23 ... 122
1862.04.06 ... 545
1862.07.13 ... 203
1864.03.23 ... 410
1864.06.13 ... 574, 781
1864.07.31 ... 331
1864.10.07 ... 712
1865.01.08 ... 604

1865.06.18 ... 112
 1866.08.19 ... 604
 1867.04.08 ... 191, 526
 1867.06.23 ... 253
 1869.11.14 ... 534

1870-1876

1870.07.10 ... 67
 1870.10.30 ... 578, 580
 1871.05.14 ... 193, 526
 1872.08.11 ... 594
 1872.08.14 ... 342
 1872.08.24 ... 765
 1873.06.28 ... 121
 1873.06.29 ... 520
 1874.05.03 ... 526
 1874.07.10 ... 80, 203
 1876.09.17 ... 103
 1876.10.19 ... 709

John Taylor

1852.xx.xx ... 320, 350
 1853.06.12 ... 191
 1857.08.29 ... 203
 1876.12.31 ... 99
 1882.xx.xx ... 142, 324, 379

Wilford Woodruff

1840.10.18 ... 439
 1889.03.03 ... 439
 1894.04.08 ... 545
 1896.10.05 ... 439
 1896.10.19 ... 439

Lorenzo Snow

1846.06.xx ... 520
 1877.04.05 ... 417
 1894.04.06 ... 451
 1901.06.15 ... 517, 603

Joseph F. Smith

1873.02.09 ... 30
 1882.06.18 ... 160
 1902.xx.xx ... 531
 1907.xx.xx ... 708
 1909.11.xx ... 11, 115, 135, 157, 159, 199, 787
 1910.04.xx ... 798
 1910.12.17 ... 141, 791
 1911.xx.xx ... 798
 1918.06.xx ... 578
 1919.xx.xx ... 250

Heber J. Grant

1925.09.xx ... 115, 157, 792
 1931.04.07 ... 793

George Albert Smith

No date ... 366

David O. McKay

1920.12.20 ... 345
 1921.05.10 ... 596
 1941.09.25 ... 345
 1952.10.08 ... 799
 1956.03.11 ... 450
 1956.10.30 ... 800

Joseph Fielding Smith, Jr.

1916.xx.xx ... 224
 1920.xx.xx ... 204
 1925.04.xx ... 417
 1928.10.xx ... 141
 1931.xx.xx ... 114, 204, 460, 519, 545
 1932.03.26 ... 182
 1935.xx.xx ... 59, 451
 1935.03.02 ... 644
 1935.03.09 ... 644
 1935.03.30 ... 335, 375
 1939.04.22 ... 68, 174, 289
 1941.02.15 ... 135
 1942.04.04 ... 480
 1942.10.14 ... 320
 1945.08.11 ... 609
 1950.12.13 ... 763
 1954.xx.xx ... 93, 112, 135, 156, 159, 204
 1955.xx.xx ... 705
 1957.xx.xx ... 758
 1958.xx.xx ... 374, 491
 1958.06.18 ... 451
 1961.01.19 ... 174
 1963.xx.xx ... 174
 1966.xx.xx ... 136, 151
 1970.06.xx ... 521, 522
 1970.10.xx ... 519

Harold B. Lee

1947.04.04 ... 349
 1953.06.06 ... 141
 1954.06.23 ... 140
 1956.03.11 ... 450
 1960.06.24 ... 141
 1961.07.xx ... 560, 663, 709
 1966.07.08 ... 31
 1969.xx.xx ... 566
 1970.12.xx ... 706
 1972.08.27 ... 421
 1973.07.xx ... 390
 1973.10.06 ... 349

Spencer W. Kimball

1964.06.xx ... 52

1969.xx.xx ... 765
 1971.09.26 ... 377
 1972.xx.xx ... 372, 382
 1974.09.17 ... 76
 1976.03.xx ... 112, 157, 181, 268, 269
 1976.05.xx ... 269, 800
 1976.06.xx ... 411
 1976.11.xx ... 604
 1977.02.26 ... 87, 269
 1977.05.xx ... 342, 532
 1978.xx.xx ... 15, 896
 1978.05.xx ... 68, 380
 1979.10.xx ... 765
 1979.11.xx ... 138, 520, 544, 545

Ezra Taft Benson

1977.04.12 ... 342
 1982.09.28 ... 341, 346, 349
 1987.05.xx ... 294

Howard W. Hunter

1979.02.04 ... 896
 1983.11.xx ... 407
 1984.08.30 ... 141
 1991.10.05 ... 390
 1994.11.xx ... 176

Gordon B. Hinckley

1984.01.29 ... 269
 1991.11.xx ... 115, 128, 269
 1994.11.xx ... 517, 603
 1995.04.02 ... 68
 1995.09.23 ... 87, 116
 1996.04.10 ... 349
 1996.10.06 ... 269
 1996.11.xx ... 176
 1997.04.15 ... 802
 1998.06.12 ... 743
 1998.10.04 ... 269
 2000.05.xx ... 563
 2002.xx.xx ... 802
 2002.04.06 ... 269
 2002.11.xx ... 552
 2003.07.12 ... 743
 2004.06.12 ... 563
 2004.10.03 ... 270
 2006.05.xx ... 569

Thomas S. Monson

2006.05.xx ... 51

TOPICAL INDEX

A

Aaron ... 520-521, 661, 664

mystery of ... 664

sons of ... 520-521

washing, anointing, and clothing of ... 520, 661

Aaronic Priesthood ... 668, 765.

SEE ALSO Priesthood

appendage to the Melchizedek

Priesthood ... 765

Abbaton, Discourse on ... 844

Abel ... 322, 335-338, 345, 369-

370, 372, 380-381, 573, 617-621,

666, 670, 680, 734-737, 866-867.

SEE ALSO Cain

as a redeemer ... 617-621

as a red heifer ... 618, 735

as a type of Jesus Christ ... 617

as a prototypical Mandaean priest and baptizer ... 617

as the "righteous" one in the Epistle to the Hebrews ... 666

hearkened ... 370

holds the keys of his dispensation ... 618 holy priesthood traced through ... 491

"keeper of sheep" ... 370

Mandaean stories about ... 866-867

meaning of name ... 369

murder of ... 335-338, 380-381

illustrations ... 670

purported salvific role of ... 475, 617-621, 734-737

sacrifice of ... 345, 372

illustrations ... 322, 573, 670, 680

special birth circumstances ... 736 swearing by the holy blood of ... 618, 734

"walked in holiness" ... 376

Abel and Cain, History of ... 845

Abraham ... 4, 13, 15, 26-27, 30,

33, 38, 42, 49-50, 61-63, 78, 84,

127, 137, 190, 201-202, 209, 212,

219, 221, 230, 273, 298, 300-302,

309, 329, 339-340, 357, 359,

367-368, 377, 379, 382, 393, 410,

421, 435, 439-441, 444, 449, 464,

470-471, 478-480, 483, 485, 487,

491, 495, 500, 519, 521-523, 584,

606, 608, 632, 645, 647, 651,

664-667, 669, 680, 684, 694-696,

704-705, 716, 739, 744, 749, 753,

762, 766-768, 776, 781, 884, 901.

SEE ALSO Abraham, Apocalypse of;

Book of Abraham; Codex Sylvester astronomy of ... 137

dream of cedar and date palm ...

209. SEE ALSO Palm tree: conversation of entertains three messengers ... 339,

340, 435, 439-441

illustrations ... 339, 340

hospitality of ... 339, 606

illustrations ... 339, 340

near sacrifice of Isaac ... 523, 716

illustrations ... 573, 680

oak or terebinth of ... 440-441

religion of, suppressed ... 665

Satan interrupts the worship of ... 435 seed of ... 521

Abraham, Apocalypse of ... 694-

696, 818. SEE ALSO Codex Sylvester;

Vision of Moses: compared to

Apocalypse of Abraham

first English translation of, published by the Church ... 695 rejects possibility of seeing God ... 696

Abraham, Testament of ... 819

Adah and Zillah ... 393, 395-396

Adam. SEE ALSO Adam-ondi-Ahman;

Ancient of Days; Chapel of Adam;

Cheirograph of Adam; Clothing;

Eve; Fall of Adam and Eve;

Transgression of Adam and Eve

Adam becomes Adam when he begins an ancestral record ...

196, 481

apron ... 258-259

as a type of God ... 603

as an archetypical Levite ... 173

as the archetypical human ... 203,

327-328, 434

"blessed God" ... 363

"bone of my bones" ... 182, 183 book of ... 456, 478-479, 480-481

Egyptian traditions ... 478

Islamic traditions ... 478-479

burial place ... 614, 616, 641,

669-670, 733, 734, 749, 767,

767-768. SEE ALSO Cave of Treasures

photograph ... 230

"called upon the name of the Lord"

... 355-357, 362, 367

Chinese analogue to ... 654, 755 commandment forbidding the Tree of Knowledge ... 174-176

confession of ... 261-263

illustration ... 232

"in the cool of the day" ...

259-260

"courtyard" as the place of

... 260

"where goest thou?" ... 261-

262 confusion regarding identity and roles of ... 582-584, 725

consequences of transgression ...

270-273

creation of ... 88, 111-116, 156-

159, 273. SEE ALSO Origin of Man idea of transplantation ...

204-205

in an "intermediate state" ...

313 in the "image and likeness"

of God ... 10-11, 23-24,

113-114, 124, 130, 315-

316, 481-482, 501. SEE

ALSO Deification; Exaltation;

Perfect, be ye therefore; God:

man in image and likeness

of place of ... 162, 669, 766-767

purported androgyny ... 115

cursing of the ground ... 270-271

death ... 483-484

"deep sleep" ... 89, 180-181

description of, as "beautiful" ...

433, 482

"dominion" of ... 114, 116-117,

354, 725

"dust thou wast" ... 273

extracanonical literature about ...

327, 601-602

ritual origins of ... 329

"first" commandments given to ...

246, 358

"first flesh upon the earth" ... 159, 210 forgetfulness ... 180-181

hides ... 231, 260-261

historicity of ... 553, 718

Holy Ghost falls upon ... 362

illustration of Eve, and child ...

Frontispiece, 11

"in the day thou eatest" ... 175

"knew" Eve ... 354-355, 367, 475 language of ... 479

long life of ... 175, 482-483

Mandaean stories about ... 866

meaning of name ... 66-67

mourns because of Cain ... 376 movement from darkness to light ... 358. SEE ALSO Cave of Treasures; Mysteries: movement from darkness to light movements after the Fall ... 457 new details about, given through Joseph Smith ... 324-327 obedience of ... 344, 354-359, 475 tested for “many days” ... 360

“one flesh” with Eve ... 184-185 ordinances received by additional, given ... 347, 442
anointing ... 434
baptism ... 347, 362, 435, 436
baptism, in Mandaeism ... 362, 436, 617, 866 baptism, in Manichaeism ... 907 clothing ... 185-186, 234-240, 258-259, 262-263, 274-276 enthronement ... 225, 314, 593
illustrations ... 225, 593 gives names ... 176-180 “holy ordinance” given ... 400 marriage of ... 182-183 receives name ... 179, 180 ordained to the Melchizedek Priesthood ... 362 prays ... 355-357 receives power by divine investiture ... 604 sacrificial altar ... 359, 766 sacrificial offering ... 345, 359-362, 404 penance of ... 271-272, 330, 632-633 posterity. SEE ALSO Abel; Cain; Seth become carnal, sensual, and devilish ... 365 believers among, to be saved ... 365 council with, at Adam-ondi-Ahman ... 325-326, 457-460, 493 defined by covenant, not merely by lineage ... 195, 196, 212, 456, 476-477, 480-481
illustration ... 454 love Satan more than God ... 364-365 monogamy of ... 355
obedience of ... 355
prophecies about ... 363, 492 taught by Adam ... 364, 475
premortal exaltation of ... 582, 583
premortal status of Satan given to ... 301, 330, 575
“put” (Moses 3:8) ... 162
“put” (Moses 3:15) ... 173
rejoicing of ... 363-364 rib of ... 181-182

role in final judgment ... 583-584, 725
roles of ... 325-328
Ancient of Days ... 67, 138, 325, 434 blesses posterity in Adam-ondi-Ahman ... 325-326, 457-460, 493 head of premortal spirits ... 325 holds the keys of the Presidency ... 325
King and Priest ... 314, 433-434
member of the premortal council ... 433
Michael the archangel ... 325 reveals priesthood keys ... 325
son of God ... 433
will give an account of stewardship ... 326 will hold a council prior to the second coming ... 327, 460, 485 “second” commandments given to ... 246, 358-359
“thou mayest choose” ... 174-175
“thou shalt eat the herb of the field” ... 271-272 three messengers visit ... 181, 360, 400. SEE ALSO Three messengers to be one with Eve ... 87
“to dress” and “to keep” the Garden ... 173-174, 282 to till the ground ... 155-156, 272, 279, 354
“tilling” our natures ... 188
“took” ... 173
wheat provided for ... 272, 354, 633
Egyptian parallel ... 442
Islamic parallels ... 272
Mesopotamian parallel ... 272
Adam, Apocalypse of ... 818, 852
Adam, History of the Creation and Transgression of ... 845
Adam, History of the Expulsion of, from the Garden ... 845
Adam and Eve, The Conflict of, with Satan ... 845
Adam and Eve, Life of ... 820
Adam-God theory ... 204-205, 603-605
Adam Kadmon ... 603
Adam Kasia ... 603
Adam-ondi-Ahman ... 325-326, 455, 457-460, 485, 491-493, 622-626, 737 dating of D&C 107 ... 491-492
gathering to ... 455 great council at ... 325-326, 457-460, 493 provides a model for modern Church governance ... 458-460 to be repeated before Christ’s coming in glory ... 327, 460, 485 history and location of ... 623-624, 737

Joseph Smith’s vision of connections with contemporaneous revelations ... 458 dating ... 625-626 movement of Adam northward to ... 457, 492-493 map ... 457 possible meanings of term ... 622
Adamgirk’ ... 847
Adam’s Peak ... 143, 206-208
illustration ... 143
Adoption, priesthood. SEE Sealing: priesthood adoption Agency ... 173-174, 227, 229, 245, 254-255, 262, 284, 285-288, 307, 310, 578-579, 581, 594, 597, 724-725 and accountability ... 286, 307 coercion cannot destroy ... 578 different from freedom ... 578 exercised through diligence ... 597 existed from premortality ... 245 fanaticism and coercion to be rejected ... 713
God’s respect for ... 262, 286 inefficiency is the price of ... 287-288 knowledge a precondition for ... 310 libertarian vs. compatibilist models ... 724-725 moral vs. free ... 286, 307 preferred over absolute goodness ... 724 a profoundly voluntaristic universe ... 284 vs. moral autonomy ... 254-255
Satan cannot compel ... 229, 288, 310
Satan sought to destroy ... 227, 229, 245, 578-579, 581 test of, in the Garden of Eden ... 173-174, 594 al-Kisa’i, Muhammad ibn Abd Allah Tales of the Prophets ... 901
Al-Mizan ... 900
al-Tabari
Creation ... 902
al-Tha’labi, Abu Ishaq Ahmad Ibn Muhammad Ibn Ibrahim Lives of the Prophets ... 901
Alexander the Great associated with Adam’s Peak ... 206

- rebuked by a talking tree ... 209.
SEE ALSO Palm tree: conversation serpent steals girdle and precious stone of ... 300
- Alighieri, Dante
Divine Comedy ... 6, 21, 260, 588 poetry of, compared to that of Ephrem the Syrian ... 842
- Anchor, symbol of the ... 472
- Ancient of Days. SEE ALSO Adam as a title of Adam ... 67, 138, 325, 460 order pertaining to the ... 342, 442
- Ancient Near Eastern texts ...
806-812
- Ancient texts
guidelines in using ... 14-18, 27-28, 31
value of ... 15-17, 27-30. SEE ALSO Truth: need to accept from all sources
- Androgynous creation of man. SEE Adam, creation of
- Angels ... 136, 149, 151, 177-179,
200, 224, 226-227, 306-307, 542,
547, 557, 716. SEE ALSO Cherubim
Adam recited series of names to ...
177-178
as sentinels ... 557
concourses of ... 547 created on the first day ... 136, 151, 200, 542
illustration ... 542
deterioration in artistic portrayals
... 227
hierarchies ... 542
in Holy of Holies of Solomon's
temple ... 149
knowledge of names of, gave absolute authority ... 179 not to be worshiped ... 716 rebel ... 224, 226, 227, 306-307
illustrations ... 226, 227
- Animal Apocalypse of Enoch ...
585, 725-726
- Animal sacrifice. SEE Sacrifice:
animal
- Animals ... 109-110, 120-121, 135,
176-180, 199, 212. SEE ALSO Origin of man
Adam's naming of the ... 176-180 account of, placed after creation of Eve in book of Abraham ... 176
creation of ... 109-110
"creature" vs. "living creature" ...
199 each creature to fulfill the measure of its creation ... 120-121 spirits of ... 135, 199, 212 suffering and death of ... 121
- Anointing ... 189, 210, 224, 317, 434, 460-462, 658, 661-662, 670,
- 759-761. SEE ALSO Washing and anointing anointing oil ... 670
ampulla with oil ... 462
illustration ... 462
from the subsequently sprouted olive tree ... 189, 210, 461
illustration ... 461
from the Tree of Life ... 434, 460 missing from second temple
... 658
associated with clothing ... 317 explanation of the title "Christ"
... 317
in Eastern Orthodox tradition ...
661 in Roman Catholic tradition ...
661 on different parts of the body ...
224, 317, 661, 662
one of five secret ordinances ... 658 performed twice in Armenian liturgy ... 462
royal ... 224, 434, 759-761.
SEE ALSO Anointing, Second;
Melchizedek Priesthood: ful-ness of the
to be received by all the righteous
... 460-461
- Anointing, Second ... 522. SEE
ALSO Anointing: royal; King and Priest; Melchizedek Priesthood:
fulness of the; Ordinances, temple
- Anthropic principle ... 49, 120, 524
- Anthropos ... 603
- Apocrypha. SEE New Testament
Apocrypha; Old Testament
Apocrypha
- Apotheosis. SEE Deification
- Apple tree
Tree of Knowledge as an ... 170
- Aprons, ritual. SEE ALSO Clothing as a symbol of priesthood power and authority ... 600
fig-leaf, made by Adam and Eve
... 234
counterfeit nature of ... 258-259 symbol of procreation ... 258, 600 use in ancient times ... 600
- Aquinas, Thomas ... 130, 182, 844
- Archons, Hypostasis of the ... 851
- Ark ... 6, 89, 211, 591-592, 647, 658, 679-681, 773
of Noah
as a temple ... 211, 591 parallels to Eden and Temple
... 591-592
of the covenant. SEE ALSO Eleusinian Mysteries: cista
- mystica*
analogue to ark of Noah ...
211, 591, 773
analogue to Christian altar or reliquary ... 679, 680, 773
illustration ... 679, 680
analogue to Pandora ... 773 contents of, controversial ...
680
David dances at the return
of ... 6
Eve as the ... 89
foundation stone in front of ... 147. SEE ALSO Stone: foundation, of temple and Creation
function of vs. contents of ...
679-681
missing in second temple ...
658 tokens within the ... 681
- Arnon, Noam
Palm Tree Growing over "Adam's Grave" at the Tomb of the Patriarchs in Hebron ... 230
- Ascent, heavenly ... 37-39, 60-61,
79, 80-81, 299, 427, 469, 473,
660, 684, 687-693, 700, 756, 777,
866-867, 884-885, 905-906. SEE
ALSO Mysteries
illustrations ... 38, 39, 469, 473, 684, 688, 690-693, 700
in the Apocalypse of Abraham
... 38
in the Cycle of Ezekiel ... 687-693 in the Islamic hajj ... 79, 299
in Mandaean tradition ... 866-867
in Manichaean tradition ... 660,
756, 777, 884-885
dangers of ... 905-906
in Merkabah mysticism ... 81, 688 in Mesoamerican account ... 700 in Muhammad's night journey ...
39, 81
in vision of Moses ... 37, 60-61, 79
figure with outline of ... 37
Jesus' baptisms as ... 80 temple endowment as a ... 427
- Ashburnham Pentateuch. SEE Tours
Pentateuch
- Asherah ... 115, 164
- Astronomy. SEE ALSO Science
Abraham's ... 137, 201-202 long association between, and religion ... 201
- at-Tabatab'i, Allamah as-Sayyid
Muhammad Husayn
Al-Mizan ... 900
- Atonement ... 97-98, 211, 238,
320, 466-472, 485-488, 490,
499-502, 504, 642-648, 736-737,
750. SEE ALSO Atonement, Day of; Justification; Sanctification

as healing ... 487-488 becoming one with Christ ... 468, 469-470 connotes wholeness ... 643-644 cosmic significance ... 467-468, 501-502 efficacious for other worlds ... 320 efficacy of the ... 485 fellowship with Christ's suffering ... 469-472, 504, 736-737 fulness of the ... 486-487 is another word for the sealing power ... 486 losses to be made up ... 470-472 meaning of the ... 467-470, 499-501 Muslim perspectives repudiation of limited scope of Christian salvation ... 646 view of Christ's ... 645 view of redemption ... 645-648 no resultant loss of identity ... 642 origin and meaning of the English term ... 238, 466, 642-643, 642-644
 illustration ... 466 origin and meaning of the Hebrew term (kippur) ... 469-470, 502, 504. SEE ALSO Embrace, ritual personal significance ... 468-470 possible allusion to, at the Creation ... 97-98 translation difficulties ... 644, 750
Atonement, Day of ... 103, 147, 219-220, 301-302, 305, 333, 499, 645, 716, 761. SEE ALSO Atonement Augustine of Hippo ... 843
Avesta ... 856-857
Axis mundi ... 147, 164, 548, 571, 654-655, 657, 699, 717, 753, 754-755. SEE ALSO Center, sacred; Tree, World as sacred center ... 548 in Chinese texts ... 654, 717, 753 destruction of ... 655, 755
 in depiction of Fu Xi and Nü Gua ... 657, 754 in depiction of Serapis and Isis ... 754 in Mesoamerican text ... 699 king as ... 164
 temple as ... 147, 571
 Tree of Life as ... 164
Ayoub, Mahmoud M.
The Qur'an and Its Interpreters ... 900

B

Babel, Tower of ... 111, 127, 161, 391, 411, 473, 492, 591, 608, 637, 729

Ballif, Arta R.
Lamentation ... 405-407
Baptism ... 59, 341, 347, 362, 430-431, 441, 617, 658, 866-867, 907. SEE ALSO Washing additional ordinances needed beyond ... 341
 as the gate ... 341, 430 impossibility of keeping covenant of, without help of the Holy Ghost ... 441
 in the name of Abel ... 617 is about breaking out of Satan's orbit ... 431 linked to banishment of Satan ... 59
 Mandaean ... 867
 of Adam ... 347, 362, 435, 436
 in Mandaism ... 362, 436, 617, 866
 in Manichaeism ... 907
 one of five secret ordinances ... 658 part of the covenant of salvation ... 341
Barnabas, Letter of ... 844
Barsch, Wulf E.
biographical sketch ... 468
Gate to Paradise ... 468
Baruch, pseudepigraphal book of ... 818
Bath-kol ... 357-358
Beccafumi, Domenico
The Fall of the Rebel Angels ... 226
Bede, the Venerable ... 287, 321, 843
Bee, Book of the ... 846
Benét, Stephen Vincent
The Devil and Daniel Webster ... 346
Berossus
Babyloniaca ... 806
Bertrand, Louis ... 449-450
Bialik, Hayim Nahman
The Book of Legends ... 833
Bible
 studies of, moving to the fringes ... xxvii Big bang. SEE Universe: beginning of bin Gorion, Micha Joseph
Mimekor Yisrael ... 834
Birds ... 42-43, 80, 84, 97-98, 145, 165, 212, 246-248, 473, 506-507, 684, 754 associated with a tree of knowledge or of life ... 247-248, 473, 506-507
 illustration ... 473
 "brooding" imagery in Creation accounts ... 84, 97-98
 "caught up" on the wings of a bird ... 42, 684
 Chinese sun crow and messenger birds ... 754 dove brought olive branch from Paradise ... 165

 Eve in the Garden of Eden as a ... 42, 247 in date palm of the Court of the Palms mural ... 145 in Mandaean death rite ... 212
 Satan appearing as a ... 42, 246-247 sign of, at Jesus' baptism ... 80 symbolism of the ... 507
 Egyptian "ba" ... 165 symbolize divine communication ... 42-43
Black death impact of, on art and literature ... 640-641
Blake, William ... 6, 21, 27, 34, 137, 208-209, 217, 223-224, 321, 517, 588, 627-631, 633, 737-739, 783 circle and square in ... 217 death of ... 21, 321
 "madness" of ... 27, 783
 mythology of ... 217
 works
 Excerpt from the "Preface to Milton" ... 627. SEE ALSO Milton, John
 The Four and Twenty Elders ... 137
 God Creating the Universe ... 217
 Jacob's Ladder ... 34
 Jerusalem ... 627-631, 737-739
 The Lord Answers Job from the Whirlwind ... 517
 Moses Indignant at the Golden Calf ... 6
 Nebuchadnezzar ... 633, 739
 The Primeval Giants Sunk in the Soil ... 588
 Rock Sculpted with Ark and Annunciation ... 6
 Satan in His Original Glory ... 224
 The Everlasting Gospel ... 208-209
 When the Morning Stars Sang Together ... 223
Bloch, Carl
 Get Thee Hence, Satan ... 32
Blood of sprinkling ... 617, 618
Bloom, Harold high regard for revelations of Joseph Smith ... xxii-xxiii, 653 Blows of death ... 237-239, 315, 612. SEE ALSO Clothing as ritual wounds ... 612 received when Adam and Eve became mortal ... 237, 315

- reversed through Christ ... 238-239
- Body ... 221, 230-234, 238, 277-278, 303, 310-311, 423, 451, 520, 579-581
- enables essential experiences ... 579
- God agrees to form a, for spirits ... 221
- Holy Ghost brings knowledge to the ... 451
- importance of physical death ... 230-234, 277-278
- importance of gaining ... 579-580
- necessary for a "fulness of joy" ... 311
- provides power and protection ... 303, 580
- renewing of ... 238, 340, 520
- Satan sought to deprive Adam and Eve of a glorious resurrected ... 231-234
- Satan sought to deprive spirits of opportunity for a ... 311, 581
- Satan's great punishment in being deprived of a ... 306, 310-311, 579
- temple enables one's, to be brought into harmony and union with one's spirit ... 423
- temple provides a "patriarchal blessing" to every organ, attribute, and power of our being ... 423
- Boethius, Ancius Manlius Severinus ... 48, 73, 843
- Book of Abraham. SEE ALSO Abraham
- creation account of ... 84-85
- papyri of ... 808
- translation of ... 19
- Book of Moses ... xxii-xxiii, xxx-xxxi, xxxvi, 8-9, 11, 26, 133, 197, 432-433, 461-462
- account is liturgical, not scientific ... 26, 461-462
- authorship ... 133, 197, 432-433
- brilliance in its details ... xxiii, xxx-xxxi
- called surprising and neglected ... xxii
- central message of ... 11, 26
- history of ... 8-9
- photograph of first page of manuscript ... xxxvi
- restates the archaic Jewish religion ... xxii-xxiii
- Book of the Dead of Nakht
- history and description ... 230
- illustration
- Anubis Leads Nakht Towards the Entrance to the Other World ... 230
- nature of the postlife journey ... 311-312
- Bordeaux Pilgrim ... 441, 733, 767, 769, 843
- Born again. SEE ALSO Sons of God:
- becoming
- first and second sonships ... 703-704
- through ordinances ... 342, 428-429, 442, 520, 596
- Bosch, Hieronymus
- The Third Day of Creation ... 218
- Bountiful
- Eden and the name of ... 161
- Breughel, Jan, the Elder
- The Garden of Eden ... 132
- Bridal chamber
- one of five secret ordinances ... 183, 658, 719, 765, 778
- Brinkerhoff, Val
- Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Apollinare in Classe ... 573
- Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Vitale ... 573
- The Three Magi ... 673
- Bruegel, Peter, the Elder
- The Fall of the Rebel Angels ... 227
- Bukhari, Muhammad Ibn Ismail
- Sahih al-Bukhari ... 898
- Buonarroti, Michelangelo ... 82, 86, 88-89, 127-129, 233
- depicted Adam as prefiguring Christ ... 89
- depicted Mary as the second Eve ... 88
- depicted Mary as the symbol of the Church ... 89
- said "I am no painter" ... 86
- studies of the brain ... 128-129
- typological interpretations ... 86, 127
- works of
- The Creation of Adam ... 88, 128-129
- The Creation of Eve ... 89
- Creation of Sun, Moon, and Planets ... 82
- Expulsion of Adam and Eve ... 233
- Separation of Light from Darkness ... 86
- BYU New Testament Commentary ... xxxiii-xxxiv
- C
- Caduceus. SEE Serpent: Caduceus
- Cain ... 57-58, 335-338, 345, 367-395, 407-409, 438, 620, 656, 736. SEE ALSO Abel; Sethites and Cainites
- anger of ... 372-373, 376
- as Perdition ... 335, 375, 437
- born in answer to prayer ... 367
- brother's keeper ... 382-383, 409
- builds a city ... 391-392, 411
- called Master Mahan ... 379
- consequences of Abel's murder ... 384-390, 407-409
- cursed from the earth ... 384
- face of the Lord hid ... 385
- "fugitive and a vagabond" ... 337, 338, 384, 388, 407-409
- illustration ... 337
- mark ... 386-388
- risk of being slain ... 385-386
- death of ... 386, 390-391, 397
- dubious story of a modern-day encounter with ... 438
- "hearkened not" ... 369
- later life of ... 388-389, 407-409
- long-suffering of God with ... 373, 376
- murder of Abel ... 335-338, 380-381
- gloried in the ... 381, 412-413
- illustrations ... 336, 670
- motivated by gain ... 379-382, 409-410
- naming of ... 367-369, 735-736
- messianic implications ... 368-369, 619, 736
- parallels in the story of Adam's transgression ... 432
- pivotal significance of the story of ... 323
- posterity of ... 389-395
- introduce the pastoral, musical, nomadic, and metalworking professions ... 393-394
- rejects the Lord ... 373-376
- sacrifice of ... 345, 371-373
- illustrations ... 322, 573, 670, 680
- instigated by Satan ... 371
- swears to Satan by his throat and by the living God ... 377-378
- tiller of the ground ... 370-371
- cursed from the ground ... 384
- forced products of nature by extortion ... 370-371
- traditions about birth ... 620, 736
- trembles and shakes the earth ... 57-58, 388
- troubled marriage situation of ... 376-377
- Chinese parallels ... 656
- voice of brother's blood cries from the ground ... 383
- wanders in the land of Nod ... 388
- warned about Satan
- desireth to have thee ... 374
- thou shalt be called Perdition ... 375 thou shalt be the father of his lies ... 375 thou shalt rule over him ... 375 was also “before the world” ... 375

Cainites. SEE Sethites and Cainites
Calling and election made sure ... 37, 448, 522, 705–706. SEE ALSO Exaltation; More sure word of prophecy
Calvary. SEE Golgotha
Campbell, Joseph ... 30, 552
Canonical Prayerbook of the Mandaean ... 880 Carlyle, Thomas
 views on Mormonism ... xxix
“Carnal, sensual, and devilish” ... 345, 365–366
Cave of Treasures ... 211, 389–390, 664–665, 669–675, 681, 768, 773. SEE ALSO Adam: burial place of; Caves allusions to, in illustration of Sinai ... 671 as a proto-temple ... 670
 as a Garden of Eden replacement ... 670 dwelling place of the Sethites ... 389–390 treasures of as gold, frankincense, and myrrh ... 670 as hidden mysteries revealed to Adam ... 674
 as tokens ... 681
 in Islamic tradition ... 768 idea of, mirrored in the story of the Magi ... 673
 illustration ... 670
 mysteries ... 681
 resemblances to, in icon of the Nativity ... 672
Cave of Treasures, Book of the ... 845
Caves. SEE ALSO Adam: burial place of; Cave of Treasures
 Grotto of the Teachings ... 674, 675
 description ... 769
 photograph ... 674
 place where apostles initiated into the mysteries ... 674, 675. SEE ALSO Jesus Christ: initiated his apostles into the mysteries in Greek mysteries ... 664–665 of Church of the Holy Sepulchre ... 675 of Sinai
 illustration ... 671
 of the Nativity ... 674, 675 as the Holy of Holies ... 674
 illustration ... 672 ritual uses of ... 757

Celestial Kingdom attainment of, not to be equated with exaltation ... 765–766 degrees within ... 669, 765–766
Celestial marriage. SEE Marriage, Celestial Center, sacred ... 138–139, 167–168, 187–188, 547–548, 592, 675. SEE ALSO Axis mundi; SEE ALSO Circle, sacred as a tent pole or pillar ... 548
 Garden of Eden as ... 187–188
 God as the ... 138, 187–188
 illustrations ... 139, 225
 Jesus Christ as the ... 139, 675
 Noah in the midst of tent ... 592
 temple as ... 187–188, 571
 Tree of Knowledge said by Eve to be “in the midst” ... 167
 Tree of Life planted “in the midst” ... 167–168
Chapel of Adam ... 616. SEE ALSO Adam: burial place photograph ... 616 Charity ... 350–351, 420–421, 431, 448, 472, 660, 708–709, 747–748, 791, 870, 884–885. SEE ALSO Faith, Hope, and Charity; Love as a divine attribute ... 431 as the anchor ... 472
 illustration ... 472
 as the essence of the law of consecration ... 350 as the final qualification signaling readiness for the crowning blessing ... 350
 illustration ... 351
 as the measure of true wealth ... 421 asleep until awakened by Abraham ... 606 associated with the mysteries ... 708–709 described as only a partial attainment in Article of Faith 13 ... 448 described as “wonderful” and “admirable” ... 747–748
 Harold B. Lee and ... 421
 Manichaeon teaching that the last gift is bestowed by the right hand of ... 660, 884–885 taught by Christ ... 791 taught by Mandaean ... 870 turning our natural loves into ... 420–421
Cheirograph of Adam ... 226, 508, 332–334, 359, 361, 436, 620–621, 736. as a bond ... 736
 illustrations ... 332, 334
 writing removed from Satan’s hand ... 226, 308

Cherubim. SEE ALSO Angels
 analogue in Court of the Palms Mural ... 145 and the flaming sword ... 233, 280–281, 282 functions of ... 233, 280–281
 illustration ... 233
 Chinese ... 654
Children
 holiness of ... 547–548
Chinese
 fragmented state of myths ... 656, 755 originally lacked cultural unity ... 656 paradisiacal tree ... 728
 parallels with Genesis ... 654–656, 753
Chrism. SEE ALSO Anointing
 Jesus called Christ because of ... 661
Christian Texts ... 838–848
Christianity
 sources of, in first temple tradition ... 464, 664, 757
Chronicles of Jerahmeel ... 833
Chrysostom, John ... 843
Church Fathers, Writings of the ... 838–844
 Joseph Smith’s high regard for the martyrs and for early Christian traditions ... 839 Church of the Holy Sepulchre. SEE Holy Sepulchre, Church of the Circle and square ... 217, 219, 225, 298, 548, 571–574, 655, 657, 671, 696, 717, 755
 Chinese ... 717, 755
 compass and square ... 217, 298, 571–572, 696
 Chinese ... 655, 657, 754
 illustrations ... 217, 657
 concentric circles vs. ... 225, 548
 illustrations ... 138, 139, 218, 219, 225, 573, 574, 671 in altar cloths, veils, and clothing ... 572–574, 657 in the hajj ... 219 possible meanings of symbol ... 571
Circle, prayer. SEE Prayer circle Circle, sacred ... 547–548. SEE ALSO Center, sacred; Prayer circle as a choral dance ... 547
 as a wheel ... 548
Circumcision ... 339, 439, 500, 617, 667
Clarke, Arthur C.
 Adam’s Peak in “The Fountains of Paradise” ... 208 and C. S. Lewis ... 724
 theme of agency in “Childhood’s End” ... 724

- Cleaving. SEE ALSO Embrace, ritual; Marriage, Celestial to God ... 185, 469
to one's marriage partner ... 184-185
- Clement of Alexandria ... 841
- Clement, Second Letter of ... 844
- Clothing ... 179, 185-186, 218, 234-240, 258-259, 262-263, 274-276, 296, 298, 313-319, 340, 444, 484, 489, 495, 520, 564, 572-574, 657, 671, 689, 690, 692-693, 730-731, 780-781, 868, 903. SEE ALSO Aprons, ritual; SEE ALSO Blows of death; SEE ALSO Ordinances, temple Adam and Eve "clothed," then naked ... 234-235, 315
illustration ... 234
among early Christians ... 661-662, 756 associated with anointing ... 317 associated with temple ritual and descriptive terms ... 313 at the synagogue of Dura Europos markings on ... 692, 780-781 three kinds of ... 689
Chinese traditions relating to ... 657 clothed with purity ... 489
"coats of skin" ... 179, 274-276
as mortal flesh ... 234, 237, 315 constructed using palm thorns ... 275 healing power of the ... 495 later replaced by linen garment ... 317 made of sheepskin ... 275 provided before Adam and Eve left the Garden ... 444 provide protection ... 274, 316-317 to be understood in a ritual context ... 274-275 false finery of academic caps and gowns ... 296 gammadia on ... 572-574, 692
illustrations ... 573, 574, 671
garment ... 238-239
associated with the temple veil ... 564, 731 efforts to steal or copy the ... 730 name of God traced upon ... 218, 298 protective ... 444, 904-905 represents Christ ... 564 represents premortal glory ... 693 garment of light
represents premortal glory ... 236 laid up to await the individual's return ... 236 in preparation for burial ... 317, 484 links together the whole of salvation history ... 236 nakedness and, of Adam and Eve
1. from glory to nakedness ... 185-186, 236, 313-314
2. from innocence to transgression ... 236-237, 258-259, 262-263, 312, 314-315
3. from transgression to blamelessness ... 237-239, 274-276
4. from blamelessness to celestial glory ... 239-240, 317 of Aaron ... 520
priestly vestments in areas of temple match changes of clothing in spaces of Eden ... 235
Mandaeen
photograph ... 872 provides protection during ascent ... 316-317 purpose of the Incarnation is the restoration of Adam's original garment ... 318 robes ... 239-240, 340 represent the priesthood ... 693 shifting of tassels, prayer shawls, and robes from one side to another ... 340, 690; SEE ALSO Hand from Heaven: reversal of symbol of protection and accrual of glory among the Mandaeans ... 317-318, 868, 904-905 vs. actor's costume ... 240, 318-319
Zoroastrian ... 903
- CMC (Cologne Mani Codex) ... 893-894
- Codex Borgia
Itzpaplotl and the Broken Tree of Tamoanchan ... 698
- Codex Boturini
Anthropomorphic Tree ... 700
- Codex Sylvester. SEE ALSO Apocalypse of Abraham
illustrations
Abraham and the Angel
Yahoel Approach the Throne of God ... 38
Abraham and the Angel
Yahoel Ascend on the Wings of Birds ... 684
The Angel Takes Abraham by the Hand ... 684
- Codex Telleriano-Remensis
The Broken Tree of Tamoanchan ... 698
- Codex Vindobonensis
Man Emerging from a Split Tree
Trunk ... 700
- Cole, Thomas
Expulsion from the Garden of Eden ... 214
- Compass and square. SEE Circle and square
- Consecration. SEE Covenants, temple: consecration
- Constantine ... 441, 614-615, 734, 735, 770, 842. SEE ALSO Helena, mother of Constantine biography of, by Eusebius ... 842 builds basilica at Eleona ... 770 builds basilica at the site of Abraham's oak ... 441 builds basilica of the Resurrection ... 615
illustration ... 615
conquers with the cross ... 614
re-excavates purported site of Christ's burial ... 734, 735
- Continuing revelation.
SEE Revelation: continuing
- Council of the gods ... 85, 93-94, 111, 122, 125, 149
- Councils, church council at Adam-ondi-Ahman provided a model for ... 458
Joseph Smith calls six men to teach principles of ... 459, 493 participants were to be led by the Holy Ghost ... 459-460, 494-495 comparison in use of, to other denominations ... 493
- Councils in heaven, premortal ... 220-226, 243-246, 302, 307, 433, 493, 515, 542, 546, 577-578, 583, 723. SEE ALSO Jesus Christ, premortal proposal of; Satan: premortal proposal of; Spirits: premortal existence of Adam a member of ... 433 awe and gratitude of the assembled hosts ... 223
God agrees to form bodies for premortal spirits ... 221
God consults with the righteous ... 220-221
Egyptian parallels to ... 307, 515 held on Kolob ... 302 identities and roles of protagonists in ... 583
illustrations ... 224, 225
Jesus Christ's premortal proposal ... 221-222, 577-578
"maximum participation" in ... 220-221 morning song of Creation ... 223, 303-304 multiple ... 302
plan required voluntary acceptance by all present ... 222-223

- Satan's proposal in the ...* 223-224, 577-578, 723
Satan's rebellion ... 224-226, 243-246, 542, 546
- Conversation of palm trees. SEE Palm tree: conversation of
- Covenant-breaking pattern of, in the Primary History ... 343-344, 607-608
- Covenant, New and Everlasting ... 216-220, 298, 340-342, 359. SEE ALSO Covenants, temple; Marriage, Celestial and Creation ... 216-218, 298 includes baptismal, temple, and other covenants ... 340-341 meaning of term ... 341
premortal covenant between members of the Godhead ... 216 three ordinances (baptism, sacrifice, sacrament) associated with one covenant ... 341, 359 two parts covenant of salvation ... 341 covenant of exaltation ... 342
- Covenants. SEE ALSO Covenant, New and Everlasting; Covenants, temple emphasis on, lost in early Christianity ... 302 renewal enables sanctification ... 596 strengthening power of ... 596
- Covenants, premortal ... 216, 223, 298, 344, 649-650, 751 between members of the Godhead ... 216, 298 knowledge of, limited ... 649 light of Christ assists in keeping ... 649 obedience ... 223, 344, 649
 Muslim teachings ... 650 sacrifice ... 223, 649
- Covenants, temple ... 184-185, 223, 285, 342-351, 358-359, 365, 400-401, 417, 419, 422-425, 428, 431, 443-449, 445-446, 557-559, 611, 658, 869-870. SEE ALSO Covenant, New and Everlasting; Culture and society, critiques of; Temple text are between the individual and the Lord ... 423 are made in faith ... 428 as rungs on a ladder ... 351 bring strength when made with conviction ... 428 chastity ... 184-185, 348-349, 422, 443, 445-446, 557 consecration ... 285, 349-351, 419, 422, 423-425, 431, 443, 447, 448-449, 557, 611 correspondences to, in Mandaean ritual ... 869-870 Gospel ... 346-348, 359, 400-401, 422, 443, 444, 445, 557 in the Sermon at the Temple ... 343 interleaving of history and covenant-making ... 342-343 obedience ... 344-345, 358, 422, 443-444, 557
 premortal covenant of ... 223, 344, 649
 strenuousness of ... 365 sacrifice ... 345, 358, 417, 422, 443, 444, 557. SEE ALSO Sacrifice premortal covenant of ... 223, 649 teach self-discipline ... 422
Ten Commandments ... 444, 607-608
- Creation ... 61, 75, 82-131, 136, 147-149, 151, 197-198, 200, 203, 209-210, 216-221, 303, 432-433, 354, 524-525, 528-529, 542, 725. SEE ALSO Adam: creation of; Creation, spiritual; Eve: creation of; Universe: beginning of "after his kind" ... 107
all things "very good" ... 118 and covenant ... 216-218
as a model for the temple ... 147-149, 432
as organization ... 84, 94-95, 119-120 as progressive distinction and separation ... 85-87, 126 as a basic concept in perception and reality ... 127-128 motif continues throughout the Pentateuch ... 127 as the progressive unfolding of a splendid pageant ... 120
"be fruitful and multiply" ... 116
"beginning" ... 93, 94
"bounds," "limits," "conditions," and "engravings" of ... 216-220
"brooding" upon the water ... 84, 97-98 building of the Tabernacle as the climax of ... 148-149, 432 chance in ... 524-525 creation and division of light in ... 99-102
"darkness" upon the deep ... 96-97
"days" and "times" of Creation ... 84, 103
"dominion" ... 114, 116-117, 354, 725
"dry land" and "sea" ... 105, 147 ex nihilo ... 94-95, 125, 538, 716 exodus of Moses as an undoing and redoing of ... 209 fifth day of ... 109-110
"firmament" ... 104-105
first day of ... 99-103, 200, 209-210 fish, birds, beasts ... 109-110
"for there is space there" ... 221, 303 fourth day of ... 107-109 foundation stone as first point of ... 105, 147, 209, 219 heavenly council participating in. SEE Council of the gods.
hierarchic order of, until the creation of woman ... 87, 128
"host" of heaven ... 136, 151, 200
 illustration ... 542
human body as a microcosm of the ... 209 idea that earth was composed of fragments of other worlds ... 203
illustrations ... 82, 84, 86, 87, 88, 89, 136, 147, 217, 218, 542
"image and likeness." SEE Exaltation; Perfect, be ye there-fore; God: man in image and likeness of "male and female" ... 115-116, 122-123 man the only creature who will not obey law of creation ... 105-106, 118, 122, 124 obedience and "maximum participation" in ... 105-106, 220-221 order and perfection in, conveyed by the use of the numbers seven and eight ... 90, 129-130, 432-433 plants ... 106-107 process is open, ongoing, and dominated by love ... 119 prologue ... 93-98
purpose in ... 524-525
sabbath ... 90, 130
science and ... 99, 100, 102, 104-105, 106, 107-108, 120, 125-126, 127-128, 524-525, 528-529 scriptures not primarily concerned with creatures of other ages or other planets ... 120 second day of ... 104-105 separation of light from darkness, possible allusions to premortal rebellion of Satan's hosts ... 86, 100, 101-102 seventh day ... 151-153. SEE ALSO Sabbath sixth day ... 110-118
subduing of the waters ... 61, 75 sun, moon, and stars ... 107-109, 125-126 temple symbolism in the days of ... 148-149 temporal/natural vs. spiritual ... 134-135, 197-198, 200 third day of ... 105-107
"water" of ... 98

“we will prove them herewith” ...
221, 303
“without form and void” ... 90,
95-96

Creation accounts

Chinese ... 654
differences between book of Moses and Genesis ... 83 differences between book of Abraham and Genesis ... 83-85
Egyptian ... 130, 515
have different interests, goals, and assumptions than science ... 194
historicity of ... 552-554
Mandaean ... 864-867
Manichaeism ... 885-889
Mesoamerican ... 697-701, 782-
783. SEE ALSO Mesoamerican
Mesopotamian ... 96-97, 130,
147-148
model for temple design ... 561
Muslims and Mt. Moriah ... 767
Noah parallels ... 218, 591
illustration ... 218
primeval struggles for preeminence among the gods in ... 33, 96-97
Shakespeare's “The Tempest” ...
636-637, 743, 745
temple ... 84-85, 557-560
value of multiple accounts ... 85
vs. secular notion of “environment”
... 187
weeping at the separation of the waters ... 127, 447-448
Zoroastrian ... 857-859, 903-904

Creation, spiritual ... 134-144,
153-156, 200, 540, 716. SEE
ALSO Creation
dual meaning applies to premortal life and paradisiacal creation ...
135, 200
“every plant... before it was in the earth” ... 154-155
vs. temporal/natural ... 134-135, 197-198, 200
not merely a planning process ...
198, 540, 716

Creationism. SEE Intelligent design

Crusaders Bible

King David Prays Before the Ark
... 679

Culture and society, critiques of. SEE ALSO Covenants, temple; consecration; Nature; Religion, critiques of adversarial and domineering family relationships ... 268-270 city life ... 391, 411-412 conspicuous consumption ... 451 contracted, narrow, and prejudicial views ... 390

converting life into property ...
335, 381-382, 411

creative destruction ... 451 debauchery and lasciviousness ...
348-349, 446-447
drive to own and control ... 331, 335, 346, 379-380
education for success ... 427 exploitation and misuse of nature
... 121-122, 384, 371, 410, 589 garbage dumps ... 425 hatred, craftiness, and violence ...
350, 389, 455 idea that anything can be had for money ... 331, 381-382, 410 idolatry of wealth ... 411-412 illusion of freedom ... 337, 379, 381, 409, 412-413
invidious comparison ... 202, 451 machines and gadgets ... 426, 427 markets and the law of the jungle
... 381
misuse of knowledge for power and gain ... 409, 427 planned obsolescence ... 451 self-deception of self-sufficiency ...
411-412, 424
vs. self-reliance ... 450 shepherds vs. farmers ... 370-371, 436-437
stable vs. acquisitive cultures ...
424-426
three kinds of people ... 419 trust in material things ... 411-412 two ways vs. two parties ... 413-414 unmarried cohabitation ... 447 wars and bloodshed ... 348, 412 wastefulness ... 425, 451

Curses, ritual imposed on Satan ... 226, 308, 309-310

symbolic enactment in temple
ritual ... 308-309

Cypress tree ... 165, 166, 189, 211, 228, 593, 729, 749

Cyril of Jerusalem ... 842

Catechetical Lectures ... 661-662

D

David

dances at return of the Ark ... 6 prays before the ark ... 679

da Firenze, Andrea

Descent of Christ into Limbo ...
471

Dawkins, Richard

and Great Chain of Being ... 717 as a temporary agnostic in practice
... 710
God of the theologians unworthy of the grandeur of the universe
... 529

need to distinguish truth value of religion from its consolation value ... 717

Dead Sea Scrolls ... 822-829 evidence for mystical liturgy in

... 776

Decalogue. SEE Ten

Commandments

Deification ... 10, 23, 60-61, 79, 254, 338, 430-431, 516-517, 523, 757, 759. SEE ALSO Exaltation;

God: man in image and likeness of: spiritual nature; Partakers of the divine nature; Perfect, be ye therefore

LDS view of ... 430-431

of Job ... 516-517

of Melchizedek ... 759

of Moses ... 60-61, 79, 757 promise of, to Adam ... 338 views in rabbinical tradition ... 10 views of C. S. Lewis ... 23 views of Eastern Orthodox tradition ... 10, 23

views of William Blake ... 517

Delaplanche, Eugène

Eve, After the Transgression ... 232

della Francesca, Piero

Adam and His Children ... 454

Denison, Harold

The Devil Approaches Jabez Stone
... 346

Devil. SEE Satan

Dexiosis. SEE Handclasps, sacred

Dickens, Charles

views on the Mormons ... xxii, xxviii

Didache ... 844

Diligence, obedience, and friend- ship ... 597-599, 731, 731-732

Discipleship, cost of ... 488-489, 504

Divine accommodation. SEE God: speaks to us in our weakness

Divine investiture ... 44-45, 47, 362, 604

Divinization. SEE Deification

Documentary Hypothesis.

SEE Book of Moses: authorship

Domenichino. SEE Zampieri, Domenico.

Dominion ... 114, 116-117

godly vs. satanic ... 725

Doré, Paul Gustave

Abraham Entertains Three
Strangers ... 339

Dove. SEE Birds: dove

Dura Europos, synagogue at eagle behind a head of Orpheus

... 247

Ezekiel, Cycle of ... 687-693. SEE
ALSO Ezekiel: Cycle of, at Dura
Europos

history ... 687, 764
 literal vs. figurative mysteries at
 ... 776

E

Earth

different than other worlds ... 320 wickedest of God's creations ... 320
 Eastern Orthodox Church
 choros reflects divine movement
 ... 717

Eastward movement as increasing separation from God ... 161, 390

Eden. SEE Garden of Eden

Education ... 427, 451-452, 487, 526-528, 707-708, 710, 713. SEE

ALSO Science; Truth

for success, critique of ... 427 gas law of learning ... 710 highly educated LDS are the most committed ... 707, 708

Mormons overrepresented in academia ... 526-527 need for LDS to resist the feeling they've "arrived" ... 451-452

purpose of ... 487

reasons for positive LDS attitudes toward ... 527-528, 708 valued even by prophets ... 713

Egeria ... 441, 675, 733, 769, 843

Egyptian ... 29, 115, 130, 160, 179, 230, 248, 300, 307, 311-312, 435, 463, 469-470, 478, 515, 518, 696, 702, 719-720, 806-808, 810, 867.

SEE ALSO Eyes, opening of the;

Hypocephalus; Osiris; Shabaka

Stone

book of Atum ... 478

creation account ... 130, 515

description of the post-life journey ... 311-312 embrace, ritual ... 469, 470

"false Horus" ... 435

funerary documents ... 806-808

hypocephalus as a picture of eternity ... 696 idea of the "horizon" ... 160, 230, 312

male earth god and female heaven separated at the Creation ... 115 mouth, opening of the ... 300, 317, 515 names used to advance past gatekeepers ... 179 obsession to find key to truth ... 29 parallels to premortal councils in heaven ... 307, 515 rituals for the living ... 518, 702, 719, 720

Mandaean ritual and ... 867

sacred marriage ... 702

serpent under paw of cat ... 311

stone of truth ... 300

story of Setne taking the book of Knowledge ... 248 story of Sinuhe ... 463, 810 tree standing before the door to the "Other World" ... 230

illustration ... 230

Ein Sof

depiction of ... 138

definition of ... 138

Einstein, Albert

beliefs about the order in the universe ... 710 beliefs about time ... 48 conversation with Henry Eyring,

Sr. on preexistence of animals

... 212

Elder serving younger, motif of in Genesis and Exodus ... 541

Satan and Adam ... 540-541

Elect of God ... 522-523

El Elyon. SEE God: Most High

Eleona ... 675, 769. SEE ALSO Caves:

Grotto of the Teachings

Eleusinian Mysteries ... 675-679, 770-773. SEE ALSO Mysteries cista mystica ... 677, 679. SEE

ALSO Ark: of the covenant

Jewish and Christian analogues ... 679-681 danger in failure of the test ... 678

description ... 676-677

emotional exaltation of initiates

... 678

emphasis on "seeing" ... 771 expectations of initiates in afterlife

... 772-773

history ... 675-676

initiate admitted to the presence of a god ... 678

in Shakespeare's "The Tempest"

... 636

lasting significance for participants

... 678

parallels with Greek recognition drama ... 677-678 purification rites ... 771 recognition tokens ... 677-678

rites remained relatively unchanged

... 770

ritual embrace ... 678

role of the hierophant ... 677

sacred handclasp ... 683, 774

sacred marriage ... 678

secrecy of ... 771

Telesterion ... 676

photograph ... 676

Elias

spirit and power of ... 522, 705

Elijah

spirit and power of ... 522, 705. SEE

ALSO Sealing

Elohim. SEE God

Embrace, ritual ... 181, 303, 308,

464-465, 467, 469-470, 498,

503-504, 506, 660, 678, 777, 871.

SEE ALSO Atonement: origin and meaning of the Hebrew term (kip-pur);

Cleaving; Gestures, ritual

"encircled... eternally in the arms of his love" ... 181, 498

vs. "loosed from the chains of hell" ... 498

in Egyptian ritual ... 469, 470, 503

illustrations ... 469, 470

in Eleusinian Mysteries ... 678

in Jewish and Christian sources ...

503-504

in Mandaean ritual ... 303, 308,

506, 871

in Manichaean ritual ... 660, 777 in parable of the prodigal son ...

464 in psalm of Nephi ... 465, 467

Empyrean heaven. SEE Heaven,

empyrean

Endowment ... 29, 80, 313, 431,

427, 442, 557-560, 719-720, 756-

757. SEE ALSO Ordinances, temple antiquity of ... 29, 559, 560, 719,

720, 756-757

available to all ... 557

coherence of pedagogical scheme

... 558

definition ... 427, 557, 560

description ... 442, 557-560

entering fully into Christ's orbit

... 431

meaning of term ... 313, 559

outlines plan of salvation ... 557,

558 prerequisite for certain assignments

... 80

step-by-step ascent into the Eternal

Presence ... 427

symbolic nature ... 558, 560 understood through revelation ...

558 uplifting nature ... 557

England

as holy ground ... 628

Enki and Ninhursag ... 181, 209,

811

Enoch, righteous son of Jared ... 4,

7, 8, 12, 33, 39, 42, 50, 62-63, 75,

109, 118, 121, 127, 195-196, 204,

209, 226, 310, 335, 341, 343-344,

349-350, 362, 368, 389, 391-392,

441, 442, 447-448, 455, 478-479,

481, 483, 485, 491, 552, 582, 585,

587, 590, 593, 666-668, 684, 695,

730, 761-763, 884, 894

avoids repeating Adam's transgression ... 593 city of ... 447

- gathering to ... 455
 exaltation of ... 582
 high regard for pseudepigraphal book of, among LDS ... 310
 meaning of name ... 390
 motif of weeping ... 350, 447-448 mysteries spoken to, out of the Trees of Knowledge and Life ... 209. SEE ALSO Palm tree: conversation of parallels with experiences and expectations of the early LDS ... 447 parallels with Joseph Smith ... 447 people of, fully lived the law of consecration ... 343, 349 pseudepigraphal books of ... 818, 836 vs. Enoch, son of Cain ... 391
Enoch, wicked son of Cain ... 391, 392, 397
Enos, son of Seth ... 477
 Mandaean stories about ... 866
Enuma Elish ... 96, 97, 130, 147-148, 442, 778, 811
Ephrem the Syrian ... 842
The Divisions of the Temple Compared to Eden, Noah's Ark, and Mt. Sinai ... 592
Eridu ... 392
Escher, M. C. frustration with his limited capacities ... 75-76
 works of
The First Day of Creation ... 84
The Second, Third, and Fourth Days of Creation ... 87
Relativity ... 36
Esdras book of 2 Esdras (2, 4, 5, 6 Ezra) ... 816
Esther
 prerequisites for admission to king's presence ... 593
Eternal Life. SEE Exaltation
Eternal marriage. SEE Marriage, Celestial
Eternal progression ... 451-452, 567, 721
Eternal round ... 135, 138, 201, 567
Eternalism ... 566
 endless nature of all good things ... 569
Eternity. SEE Time: and eternity
Eucharist. SEE Sacrament of the Lord's Supper
Eusebius of Caesarea ... 842
Eve. SEE ALSO Adam; Fall of Adam and Eve; Transgression of Adam and Eve associated with Ishtar ... 45
 Chinese ... 654
 childbearing of ... 268, 354-355, 364
 confession of ... 263-264 confusion of, about the identity and purpose of the tree ... 252 consequences of transgression ... 268-270
 illustration ... 232 creation of ... 87, 89, 111-116, 176, 180-186, 553. SEE ALSO Lilith account of, placed before naming of animals in book of Abraham ... 176
 illustration ... 228
 in the image of a heavenly female figure ... 115-116, 123
 Mesopotamian accounts of ... 181 symbolism of the rib ... 181-182 crown of Creation ... 128 deceived by Satan while doing penance ... 330 distinguishes true and false messengers by tokens ... 331 first to understand the positive consequences of the Fall ... 257
 God's trust in women ... 290
 "help meet" to Adam ... 176, 180
 illustration of Adam, and child ... 11 immediately recognizes and exposes Satan after the Fall ... 258 intelligence of, surpasses that of man ... 182 lamentations over Cain and Abel ... 405-407, 449
 meaning of name ... 273, 274
 Mesoamerican ... 697, 782
 "mother of all living" ... 273-274
 "not good" for man to "be alone" ... 176
 obedience of ... 344, 594 receives a name ... 179, 180, 183-184, 273-274
 rejoicing of ... 364
 "sorrow" and "conception" to be multiplied ... 268
 "thy desire shall be to thy husband" ... 268-270 united in celestial marriage to Adam ... 182-183
Ewe and Wheat ... 272, 811
Eyes, opening of the
 at the First Vision ... 80 at the vision of D&C 76 ... 81 of Abraham ... 49
 of Adam and Eve ... 253, 255, 256, 258, 363-364, 594
Exaltation ... 220, 231-234, 315-316, 419-420, 467, 523, 579, 581, 597, 688, 702, 706, 723, 765-766. SEE ALSO Deification; God: man in image and likeness of: spiritual nature; Knowledge; Ladder; symbol of the process of exaltation; More sure word of prophecy; Perfect, be ye therefore all who seriously and constantly desire, will have it ... 419-420 a process of "becoming" ... 315-316, 420, 467, 579, 597, 702 attaining celestial kingdom not to be equated with ... 765-766 fulness of the priesthood is a prerequisite for ... 765 possibility of, offered by God to "weaker intelligences" ... 220 requires proving oneself at all hazards ... 523, 706 Satan sought to preclude possibility of ... 231-234, 581, 723
 theme of, at Dura Europos ... 688
Extreme Unction. SEE Anointing: in Roman Catholic tradition Eyring, Henry attitude of meekness ... 710 conversation with Albert Einstein on preexistence of animals ... 212 views on evolution ... 192, 212
Ezekiel, cycle of ... 687-693, 777-779. SEE ALSO Hand from heaven: at Dura Europos; Mysteries; Philo Judaeus bodies being reassembled ... 691 death of Ezekiel ... 693, 779 figurative resurrection of Ezekiel ... 777 figures in Greek dress with markings ... 692, 780-781 figures of Psyche ... 691 four winds ... 692, 778 gesture used to raise the dead ... 692, 778 individual bodily resurrection in ... 780 intact mountain and single tree ... 693, 779 power to raise dead delegated to Ezekiel ... 779 reflected something like Philo's higher mystery ... 690 split mountain and two trees ... 691, 778
 "sticks" of Judah and Joseph ... 779
 summary of Goodenough's interpretation ... 693 ten figures pray with upraised hands ... 692, 780 three types of clothing shown ... 689 toppling citadel ... 691 tree bearing fruit or flowers ... 690 trees with exaggerated fruit ... 691 yellow altar ... 693

F

Faith, Hope, and Charity. SEE

ALSO Charity
as the principal rungs on the ladder of exaltation ... 351. SEE ALSO Ladder
in Article of Faith 13 ... 448 development of, as part of the process of sanctification ... 341

Fall of Adam and Eve ... 121-122,
127, 140-144, 168-169, 175-176,
199-200, 203-204, 209, 214, 215-
216, 227-234, 248-249, 254-255,
258, 264, 276-282, 283-286, 288-
296, 298, 310, 315, 319-320, 358,
384, 410, 432-433, 435, 442, 549,
591-595, 632-633, 637, 697-698,
701, 728-729, 739, 753, 758, 779,
782-783, 859-861. SEE ALSO Adam;
Cherubim; and the flaming sword;
Eve; Transgression of Adam and Eve
as Israel's central story in miniature
... 315
as a good act performed prematurely and without authorization
... 248-249, 319
as "partaking of the divine nature"
... 319-320
as a revelation of divine knowledge
... 248-249, 320
as the exercise of moral autonomy
... 254-255
as violation of a divine boundary
... 235, 591, 728
Atonement reverses effects of the
... 595
chiastic structure of the account of the ... 215-216, 298
combination of influences in accounts of the ... 310 darkness and gloominess following
the ... 358
death before the ... 140-144, 175-176, 199-200, 203-204 effects of the, in daily life ... 284-286 epilogue ... 282
experience of shame and fear ...
258 expulsion from Eden ... 276-282
illustrations ... 214, 233, 234, 549 fortunate fall (felix culpa) ... 283-284, 288, 289-291, 320
how far we fall depends on us ...
435

in Kabbalah ... 127, 758, 779
in Saint Exupéry's "The Little Prince" ... 549
in Shakespeare's "The Tempest"
... 637
"knowledge of good and evil" ...
168-169, 254-255
vs. "good from evil" ... 276 nature becomes an enemy to fallen man ... 121-122, 384, 410 parallel in story of Tower of Babel
... 728
parallel motif in Islamic tradition
... 592
parallel motif in Pistis Sophia ...
593 parallel motif in "The Magic Flute"
... 739
parallel motif in the story of Esther
... 593
parallel motifs in Chinese traditions ... 753
parallel motifs in Mesoamerican tradition ... 697, 698, 701, 782-783
parallel motifs in Mesopotamian traditions ... 209 parallel motifs in Zoroastrian
tradition ... 859-861 parallels in Enoch traditions ... 592 parallels in Old Testament ... 433 parallels in Satan's rebellion ... 229, 298, 593
parallels in story of Cain and Abel
... 432
parallels in story of Noah ...
591-592, 729-731 parallels in story of Uzziah ... 592 parallels in story of Nebuchadnezzar ... 632-633, 739
illustration ... 633
parallels in story of the Watchers
... 248, 729
punishments of Adam and Eve are in reality blessings ... 264, 276 purported movement of the earth after the ... 140, 203 purpose of the ... 291-292, 294-296 results in separation, not evil per se ... 320
similar consequences for Adam and Eve ... 292-293
temple provided to restore access to the presence of God lost in the
... 442
Family ... 220, 268-270, 292, 407,
485, 545, 766. SEE ALSO Marriage, celestial; Patriarchal Priesthood all things center in the ... 485 learning oneness in marriage and family relationships ... 268-270 premortal organization ... 220, 545 successful parents ... 407 system of checks and balances ...

292 ties of, essential to exaltation ...
766

Fasting ... 733

Ferdowsi, Abolquasem

Shahnama ... 857, 860-861

Fig tree

Tree of Knowledge as a ... 169,
189, 232

Figures

Abraham and the Angel Yahoel
Approach the Throne of God
... 38
Abraham and the Angel Yahoel
Ascend on the Wings of Eagles
... 684
Abraham Entertains Three
Strangers ... 339
Adam and Eve Enthroned in
Paradise ... 593
Adam and Eve Outside Paradise
... 670
Adam and His Children ... 454
Adam Enthroned, the Angels
Prostrating Themselves before Him ... 225
Adam's Peak ... 143
Ampulla 11, with inscription "Oil
from the Tree of Life" ... 462
The Angel Yahoel Takes Abraham
by the Hand ... 684
Anthropomorphic Tree ... 700
Anubis Leads Nakht Towards the Entrance to the Other World
... 230
The Archangel Michael Subduing
Satan ... 326
Ascent ... 34
The Bond of Adam ... 332
The Broken Tree of Tamoanchan
... 698
Cain and Abel (Il Monrealese) ...
336
Cain and Abel (Titian) ... 336
The Chapel of Adam ... 616
Charity with an Anchor ... 472
Cherubim and the Flaming Sword
... 233
Chiastic Structure of "The Little Prince" ... 550
Church History Sites in Western Missouri ... 457
Court of the Palms Mural at Mari
(Tel Hariri) ... 145
The Creation of Adam ... 88
The Creation of Eve ... 89
The Creation of Light ... 136
Creation of Sun, Moon, Planets
... 82

- Creation Sequence ... 542
 The Cycle of Ezekiel from the Synagogue at Dura Europos ... 688
 The Divisions of the Temple Compared to Eden, Noah's Ark, and Mt. Sinai ... 592
 A Depiction of Ein Sof and Encircling Angelic Hierarchies ... 138
 Descent of Christ into Limbo ... 471
 Detail from the Robail-Navier Family Sepulchre ... 686
 The Devil Approaches Jabez Stone ... 346
 Dog Code ... 35
 Drawing from the Stela of Tantamani, Karnak ... 470
 Drawing of a Barque Shrine, Karnak ... 469
 Elevation of the Cross ... 615
 Eve, After the Transgression ... 232
 Excerpt from the "Preface to Milton" ... 627
 Expulsion from the Garden of Eden ... 214
 Expulsion of Adam and Eve ... 233
 The Fall of the Rebel Angels ... 226
 The Fall of the Rebel Angels ... 227
 The First Day of Creation ... 84
 First Parents ... Frontispiece, 11
 The Flight of the Little Prince ... 549
 The Foolish Man and the Creditor ... 334
 The Forgiving Father ... 464
 The Four and Twenty Elders ... 137
 Funerary Chamber Adjoining Grotto of the Teachings at Eleona ... 674
 Fu Xi with His Consort Nü Gua ... 657
 The Garden of Eden ... 132
 Gate to Paradise ... 468
 Generations ... 568
 Get Thee Hence, Satan ... 32
 Go With Me to Cumorah ... xx, 5
 God Creating Eve, God Instructing Adam and Eve ... 228
 God Creating the Universe ... 217
 Guardians Part the Veils, Taking Muhammad by the Hand ... 39
 Holy of Holies in Solomon's Temple ... 149
 The Holy Trinity ... 340
 How the Devil Deceived Eve ... 330
 Inflatable Cathedral ... xxiv
 Introduction of Adam into Paradise ... 683
 Itzpaplotl and the Broken Tree of Tamoanchan ... 698
 Jacob's Ladder ... 34
 King David Prays Before the Ark ... 679
 The Ladder of Virtues ... 351
 The Lord Answers Job from the Whirlwind ... 517
 Luther's 1534 German Translation of Genesis 4:1 ... 619
 Man Emerging from a Split Tree Trunk ... 700
 Masjid al-Haram at Night ... 219
 Miranda—The Tempest ... 635
 Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Apollinare in Classe ... 573
 Mosaic from the Basilica of St. Vitale ... 573
 Moses Indignant at the Golden Calf ... 6
 Mount Sinai and the Tabernacle ... 671
 The Mysteries of Aaron, Moses, and Melchizedek ... 668
 The Nativity of Christ ... 672
 Nebuchadnezzar ... 633
 Noah Sees the Ark in Vision ... 696
 The Offering of Abel and Cain ... 322
 Old Testament Manuscript 1, Page 1, 1830 ... xxxvi
 Outline of the Heavenly Ascent Pattern in Moses 1 ... 37
 Palm Tree Growing over "Adam's Grave" at the Tomb of the Patriarchs in Hebron ... 230
 The Paradise Altar of Bamberg ... 680
 Plangon Exchanges Handclasps with Her Mother ... 682, 773
 Portrait of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart ... 634
 The Primaeval Giants Sunk in the Soil ... 588
 The Quest of Seth for the Oil of Mercy ... 461
 Ralph Vaughan Williams (1872-1958) ... 566
 Rameses II in the Ished-tree ... 231
 The Rebuke of Adam and Eve ... 232
 Relativity ... 36
 Rock Sculpted with Ark and Annunciation ... 6
 Romans 5:10-11 in William Tyndale's English Translation of the New Testament ... 466
 Sacred Stones Emerging from the Waters ... 147
 Sacred Topography of Eden and the Temple ... 146
 Satan in His Original Glory ... 224
 The Second, Third, and Fourth Days of Creation ... 87
 Separation of Light from Darkness ... 86
 Shabaka Stone ... 514
 Table of Parallels with the Apocalypse of Abraham ... 694-695
 Telesterion at Eleusis ... 676
 The Third Day of Creation ... 218
 The Three Magi ... 673
 Time Sequence of the Joseph Smith Translation of the Old Testament ... 3
 Toward Immortality and Eternal Youth ... 463
 The Transgressions of Tamoanchan ... 697
 The Two Ways ... 343
 When the Morning Stars Sang Together ... 223
 William W. Phelps (1792-1872) ... 566
 The Woman at the Tomb and the Ascension ... 473
Flaming sword. SEE Cherubim: and the flaming sword Flood, Noachian ... 30, 98, 116-118, 155, 170, 195, 211, 218, 227, 310, 323, 329, 344, 350, 370, 386, 390, 444, 455, 481, 483, 492, 583, 586-588, 591, 608, 616, 636-637, 655-656, 697, 726, 730-735, 745, 755-756, 762-763, 777, 849, 858.
 SEE ALSO Noah
 anticipation of, in Garden of Eden account ... 155
 Cain said to have died in the ... 386, 390
 Chinese flood myths ... 655 depravity induced by the Watchers as a precursor to the ... 227, 350
 in Shakespeare's "The Tempest" ... 637 post-flood covenant announced before the ... 386 prophecy of Adam concerning the ... 492 recapitulates Creation ... 218, 591 withdrawal of the Shekhinah in the generation of the ... 444 Foreknowledge of God ... 36, 48-49, 73-74. SEE ALSO Time: and eternity.
Foreordination ... 220, 302, 520, 544-545, 703
Frazer, James George ... 16, 29, 30
Freedman, David N.
 biographical sketch ... 130
 covenant-breaking pattern in the Primary History ... 343-344, 607-608 Freemasonry and LDS temple rituals ... 719 themes from, in Mozart's "The Magic Flute" ... 634

Friendship, divine. SEE Diligence, obedience, and friendship

Fu Xi and Nü Gua ... 654–656, 754–755 as a divine model of husband and wife ... 655
 as gods of creation ... 654
 as guardians of inner doorways ... 655 as progenitors of mankind ... 654, 755 confused identification of ... 656, 753
 Fu Xi brought order ... 654 holders of compass and square ... 655, 657, 754
 illustration ... 657
 possible identification of Nü Gua with Noah ... 656

G

Gammadia. SEE Circle and square: in altar cloths, veils, and clothing Garden of Eden ... 117, 126, 132, 135, 138–147, 155–156, 159–174, 187–188, 202–203, 206, 224, 230, 234, 282, 312, 357, 464, 468, 549, 555–556, 591–592, 623, 654, 657, 673, 697–698, 737, 754, 766–767, 782, 858–859. SEE ALSO Cherubim: and the flaming sword as a mountain ... 591

 as a horizon or place of transition ... 160–161, 312 as the sacred center ... 187–188. SEE ALSO Center, sacred Chinese ... 654, 657, 754
 creation of the ... 135, 138–144 divisions parallel Noah's Ark, Sinai, and temple ... 591–592
 "eastward" ... 160–161
 Egyptian idea of the "horizon" ... 160, 230
 God is planter of, not occupant ... 160 gold and precious stones of ... 171–172, 224
 illustrations ... 132, 234, 698
 in Saint Exupéry's "The Little Prince" ... 549 in story of the Magi ... 673
 Islamic traditions ... 142–143, 206, 767
 Jewish traditions ... 766 meaning of "Eden" ... 161–162 meanings of "sphere" ... 139–140, 162–163, 202–203
 Mesoamerican traditions ... 697, 767, 782 name of "Bountiful" and ... 161 name of "Nauvoo" and ... 161–162 not identifiable in geographical terms ... 171, 203, 623, 737 no veil hiding heavens in ... 556 one vs. two special trees in ... 591 parallels to, in Court of the Palms Mural ... 145 prototype for the synagogue ... 556 prototype for the temple ... 146–147, 160, 173–174, 555–556

 illustration ... 146
 questions regarding the nature of ... 141–144 return to ... 282, 357, 464
 illustration ... 468 rivers of ... 156, 170–173, 212, 680
 analogue in Court of the Palms Mural ... 145
 analogue to bronze sea in Temple of Solomon ... 170 detailed description of, omitted in book of Abraham ... 126, 170–171
 Zoroastrian ... 858–859
 similarity to Valley of Lemuel ... 556 symbols and metaphors in story of ... 142–144 vegetarianism is the rule in the ... 117 vs. Garden of God ... 160 wall surrounding ... 234, 235, 250 water by irrigation, not rain ... 155–156 way toward the ... 282, 357
 Zoroastrian ... 858–859

Garment. SEE Clothing: garment

Gemara ... 831

Gender

eternal nature of ... 116
 of God ... 115, 122

Gathering

not always appropriate ... 390
 purpose of ... 390

Genesis Rabbah ... 832

Gestures, ritual ... 145, 224, 226,

228, 304–305, 330, 355–356,

377–378, 449, 473, 692. SEE

ALSO Embrace, ritual; Hand from heaven;

cupped hand or spoon holding frankincense ... 304 holding oil of the anointing

... 304

holding orb is a late invention

... 305

receiving blood of the sacrifice

... 304

receiving emblems of office ...

145 (illustration), 224

in expulsion of Satan ... 226, 330

illustration ... 330

oath gestures ... 145, 228, 330, 516

illustrations ... 145, 228, 330

orans gesture ... 145, 355–356, 692.
 at Dura Europos ... 692

associated with prayer by or in behalf of deceased souls
 ... 449

"clean hands" ... 355–356

illustrations ... 145, 692

in resurrection scenes ... 473, 692

"open hands" ... 449

"pure heart" ... 356

similitude of Christ's crucifixion ... 355–356, 449 self-cursing ... 308–309, 377–378 used in resurrection scenes ... 692

Giants

possible understandings of term
 ... 726

Gilgamesh ... 300, 811

Ginza ... 873–880

Ginzberg, Louis

Legends of the Jews ... 833

Gnosticism ... 456, 491, 659, 756, 849–855, 861–862, 864–865, 904

affinities to, in Mandaean religion
 ... 864–865 claims to lost knowledge (gnosis)

 ... 659

differences in nature of dualism from Zoroastrianism ... 861–862, 904 resemblances in early Christianity

 ... 756

role of Seth in ... 456, 491

texts ... 849–855

worldview of ... 849–850

God. SEE ALSO Divine investiture;

Foreknowledge of God; Sons of God; Time: and eternity.

Adam as a type of ... 603 arguments for existence of absence of evidence is not evidence of absence ... 707 design arguments fail ... 706

First Cause and "god of the gaps" arguments fail ... 716 reasons why some do not take religion seriously ...

707–708

as a glorified Man ... 603

as approachable and friendly ... 74

both more liberal and more terrible than we suppose ... 744 compatibility of ancient Hebrew view of, and Mormonism ...

653, 753

calls men to repentance by the Holy Ghost ... 366

composed of the man and woman united ... 115

does not live in the dimension of time as do we ... 48

- gap in understanding between, and man ... 35, 76-78
 illustration ... 35
 vs. Lord God ... 133, 154, 251 Godhead vs. Trinity ... 568
 illustration ... 340
 is planter, not occupant, of Garden of Eden ... 160 male and masculine, not androgynous ... 122 man in the image and likeness of ... 10-12, 23-24, 83, 87-89, 111-116, 122-124, 130-131, 158-159, 176, 222, 274, 277, 315-316, 328, 330, 348, 481-482, 501, 532, 536, 562, 603, 703, 743, 759-760, 787-792, 801 parenthood ... 11, 24, 115 physical resemblance ... 10, 113, 123, 130-131, 481-482, 603 spiritual nature ... 10, 23, 113, 123, 315-316, 431, 603. SEE ALSO Deification; Perfect, be ye therefore many gods ... 48, 84, 111, 125, 254, 568
 Mormon worship of one ... 568
 Most High ... 665, 758 of the theologians not worthy of the grandeur of the universe ... 529 offered possibility of advancement to "weaker intelligences" ... 220 power of, circumscribed ... 298
 premortal covenant between members of the Godhead ... 216, 298 speaks to us in our weakness ... 35, 77. SEE ALSO Revelation: language inadequate for work and glory of ... 68 worship of Most High, suppressed ... 665
- Golden calf. SEE Israel: rebellion during golden calf incident
- Gold, frankincense, and myrrh ... 495, 670-674, 768-769 additional gifts beyond these three ... 768
 as tokens ... 670, 769
 associated with both Adam and Christ ... 670-674, 769 garment of Jacob had the smell of the Garden and of the temple incense ... 495 symbolism of ... 670, 674
- Golgotha ... 473, 595, 615-617, 733-734, 767
 as place of Adam's burial ... 616 as place of Adam's creation ... 767
- Goodenough, Erwin
 interpretation of Dura Ezekiel cycle ... 689-693
- scholarly credentials of ... 687, 774-776
- Gospel of Thomas possible ritual use of ... 443
- Grace, cheap vs. costly ... 488-489
- Grail, Holy. SEE von Eschenbach, Wolfram: Parzival: grail
- Grape vine
 as Tree of Knowledge ... 170, 727, 729
 Noah and the ... 729-730
- Great chain of being ... 137, 138, 201-202, 546, 716-717
 illustration ... 138
- Greater Priesthood.
 SEE Melchizedek Priesthood
- Grotto of the Teachings. SEE Caves: Grotto of the Teachings
- ## H
- Ham ... 477, 592, 726, 730
 sin parallels transgression of Adam and Eve ... 592, 730
- Hand from Heaven ... 60, 79, 351, 689-690. SEE ALSO Handclasp, sacred
 at Dura Europos ... 689 associated with resurrection ... 689 reversal of ... 689-690. SEE ALSO Clothing: shifting of tassels in ancient temple texts ... 60
- Handclasp, sacred ... 60, 79, 228, 308, 317-318, 351, 439, 471, 473, 505-506, 660, 681-686, 756, 773-774, 777, 870-873, 884-885, 905. SEE ALSO Gestures, ritual; Hand from Heaven among Iraqi Jews ... 686, 873 among the Parsis ... 686, 873
 Egyptian motif ... 684
 illustrations ... 228, 471, 473, 682, 683, 684, 686, 872 in Akitu festival rites ... 686, 873 in Christianity ... 873
 as part of a covenantal gesture ... 683, 685 as part of heavenly ascents ... 60, 79, 351, 505, 684
 as part of prayer circles ... 685 at the moment of resurrection ... 308, 473, 685 in going through the portal of Paradise ... 683 in Jesus' reclaiming the righteous from hell ... 471
 in raising someone to his feet ... 684
 in Eastern Christian churches ... 686
- in Greek drama and ritual ... 681-683 as an ambiguous and flexible motif ... 773 in marriage ... 681
 in parting from loved ones at death ... 681, 682
 in raising someone to his feet ... 682 in reunion with ancestors ... 681, 682 in scenes of deification ... 682, 683, 773, 773-774 in scenes of rescue ... 682 possible use in Eleusinian rites ... 683
 in Mandaean ritual ... 308, 317-318, 473, 506, 660, 686, 777, 870, 871-873 dead raised by the hand of Adam ... 473
 in Manichaeism ... 660, 756, 777, 884-885 in the Old Testament ... 686 perfect symbol of recognition ... 681
 Satan imitates ... 439, 905
- Hands, raised. SEE Gestures, ritual: orans gesture
- Haram al-Khalil. SEE Machpelah
- Harrowing of Hell ... 436, 437, 471, 620-621, 838. SEE ALSO Jesus Christ: descent into Hell (descentus)
 Abel's role in ... 620-621
- Harston, Jerry
The Foolish Man and the Creditor ... 334
- Haydn, Joseph
Die Schöpfung (The Creation) ... 101-102
- Heaven, empyrean ... 548
- Heavenly Mother ... 115-116, 123
- Heavenly veil. SEE Veil, heavenly
- Hebrew
 meaning of the term ... 434
- Heilig-Kreuz-Münster in Schwäbisch Gmünd, Germany
 Creation Sequence ... 542
The Quest of Seth for the Oil of Mercy ... 461
- Helena, mother of Constantine ... 614-615, 674, 734. SEE ALSO Constantine finds the true cross ... 614, 615
 illustration ... 615 founded churches at the sites of three mystic caves ... 674, 734
- Heraclius
 recovers the true cross ... 614
- Herbert, George
 biographical sketch ... 507

works
The Call ... 431
Love ... 490
Hero pattern ... 462-464, 496
Hibil. SEE Abel
hieros gamos ... 183, 636, 647, 678.
 SEE ALSO Eleusinian Mysteries:
 sacred marriage
in Mozart's "The Magic Flute" ...
 647 in New Year rites ... 183
in Shakespeare's "The Tempest"
 ... 636
Hinckley, Gordon B.
love of Shakespeare ... 743
Historicity of sacred events ... 119,
 140-144, 552-554, 717, 718. SEE
 ALSO Religion, critiques of Hoffman, Laura
The Chapel of Adam ... 616
Hohenbourg, Herrad of. SEE Hortus
Deliciarum
Hokmah. SEE Sophia; Wisdom
Holy Ghost ... 340, 362, 366, 441, 451, 750
"confirm" connotes spiritual strengthening ... 441 brings knowledge to the body ...
 451 fell upon Adam ... 362
listen to first promptings of ... 750
Lord God calls men to repentance
by the ... 366
provides divine help in keeping baptismal covenants ... 441
Holy Priesthood. SEE Melchizedek
 Priesthood
Holy Sepulchre, Church of the ...
 616, 675, 733-734. SEE ALSO Jesus Christ: crucifixion and burial site of
Holy Spirit of Promise ... 522, 706
Holy Trinity Church in Statfordupon-Avon, England
Noah Sees the Ark in Vision ... 696
Holy Trinity Church in Vanves
(Paris), France
Elevation of the Cross ... 616
Hortus Deliciarum
history and description ... 228, 846
illustrations
God Creating Eve, God
Instructing Adam and Eve
 ... 228
The Ladder of Virtues ... 351
Host of heaven. SEE Creation: "host" of heaven
House of God. SEE Temple
Hugo, Victor
encounters with Mormonism ...
 449-450
 works
Conscience ... 407-409

Contemplations, La Fin de
Satan et Dieu ... 450
Les Misérables ... 450
Hymns, carols, and other music.
 SEE ALSO Music
morning song of Creation ... 223, 303-304 titles
Adam-on-di-Ahman ... 457,
 623
All Creatures of Our God and King ... 570
Be Still, My Soul ... 429
Come, All Whose Souls Are Lighted ... 208
Come, Come Ye Saints ... 566
Die Schöpfung (The Creation)
 ... 101-102
The Call ... 431
Father in Heaven ... 48
For All the Saints ... 570
From Greenland's Icy
Mountains ... 208
God, My Only Happiness ... 99
Hark! the Herald Angels Sing
 ... 315-316
Hope of Israel ... 413, 414
I Believe in Christ ... 523
I Feel My Savior's Love ... 431
I Saw a Mighty Angel Fly ...
 570
I Stand All Amazed ... 489
If You Could Hie to Kolob ...
 538, 566-570, 721-727
I'm Trying to Be Like Jesus
 ... 430
Jerusalem ... 627-631,
 737-739
Jesus Loves Me, This I Know
 ... 508
Loch Lomond ... 777-778
Love ... 490
My Old White Stone ... 299-
 300, 520
Noël Nouvelet ... 769
O Give Me Back My Prophet
Dear ... 299
O God, the Eternal Father
 ... 236
O My Father ... 202
Praise to the Man ... 569
Who's on the Lord's Side ...
 429

I

Ibn Ezra, Abraham ... 835
Ibn Ishaq ibn Yasar, Muhammad
Making of the Last Prophet ... 901
Sirat Rasul Allāh ... 898
Ibn Kathir, Ismail
Stories of the Prophets ... 902

Tafsir ... 899
Idolatry, modern ... 411-412
Il Monrealese. SEE Novelli, Pietro
Image and likeness of God. SEE
 God: man in image and likeness
Incarnation
Muslim view of, as absurd ... 645
Initiatory ordinances. SEE Clothing;
 Washing and anointing
Intelligence
ascending order of stars compared with degrees of ... 137, 138
eternal nature of ... 541-543, 567
Intelligent design ... 524, 528, 706, 709
Irad ... 392
Irenaeus of Lyons ... 840
Isaiah
death of, in split tree ... 231, 260, 693
Isaiah, Martyrdom and Ascension
of ... 819
Islam. SEE ALSO Muhammad animal sacrifice in ... 359, 645, 647, 750
based on a message rather than a messenger ... 753
book of Adam ... 478-479
description of different groups within ... 498-499 discovery of "Greatest Name of God" enables highest bliss ... 179
Dome of the Rock ... 219, 299, 767, 768
faith and good deeds, not religious identity, is essential ... 750-751
Fall of Adam and Eve ... 142-144,
 205-206, 207-208, 254, 260, 261 favorable LDS views toward ...
 896, 907
Garden of Eden ... 142-143, 206, 767 hajj ... 207, 219, 299
as a form of ascent ... 79, 299
circumambulation in likeness of the angels ... 219, 717 name given during ... 299
photograph ... 219
"proxy" participation in ... 905
Satan stoned ... 219, 299, 359 handholds used for heavenly ascent
 ... 473, 505, 506
house of God
black stone ... 219 built by the angels ... 219 rebuilt by Adam, Abraham, and others ... 219
incarnation, absurdity of the ...
 645
Ka'bah ... 219, 225, 299, 658 loss and recovery of items from
the ... 658, 674

original site of throne and Tree of Life ... 225 veil of the ... 299
 man, unlike angels, has agency ... 307-308, 716 name given to participants in the hajj ... 299 names recited to the angels by Adam in the Garden ... 177-178 need for Divine Revelation after the Fall ... 438 no compulsion in religion ... 652 obedience essential to salvation ... 646
 Paraclete ... 906
 paradisiacal trees ... 168, 593, 728, 729, 749 possibility of true dialogue in prayer ... 39 postmortal spirit world ... 751 premortal covenant of obedience with all mankind ... 650, 750 redemption ... 645-648, 748
 as deification ... 646
 repudiation of Christian, through death and suffering ... 646 repudiation of Christ's Atonement ... 645
 repudiation of limited scope of Christian salvation ... 646 repudiation of original sin ... 646 sense in which Christ and Muhammad provide ... 648 sense in which God's messengers bring ... 748 sense in which imams are mediators ... 748 through a corporate process ... 648 through execution of judgment ... 648 through intercession ... 647 through knowledge ... 647 through repentance and good works ... 647 through return of Jesus and the Mahdi ... 647-648, 748 special regard for Judaism, Christianity, and Mandaean ... 651-652, 750-751, 752, 907 texts ... 896-902
 Mystical ... 902
 Qisas al-Anbiya (isra'iliyyat) ... 900-901, 908
 Qur'an ... 896-897, 907, 908
 Sunnah (Sirah and Hadith) ... 897-898, 908
 Tafsir ... 899-900
 Ta'rikh ... 902 tradition of the cloak or mantle ... 498 veil ... 299 view that inspiration continues, though revelation has ceased ... 712 view that temple was provided to restore access to the presence of God lost in the Fall ... 442 words given to Adam after the Fall to enable his return ... 178 words Satan promised to reveal that would preserve from death ... 178-179, 248 Ishtar

 associated with Eve ... 145
Israel. FOR INFORMATION ON THE OLD TESTAMENT PROPHET, SEE Jacob, son of Isaac all are of, by birth or adoption ... 704 high priesthood withdrawn from ... 521, 665, 668-669, 758 rebellion during golden calf incident ... 6, 521, 665
Jabal ... 393, 394

J

Jacob, son of Isaac ladder of ... 34, 351
 smell of garment is the fragrance of temple incense ... 495
James, Infancy Gospel of ... 838
Jaredite barges ... 211
Jehovah. SEE ALSO Jesus Christ helped organize the earth and other worlds ... 65-66, 93, 604
 Jewish view of, as incompatible with Jesus Christ ... 653
Jerome ... 843. SEE ALSO Vulgate
Jesus Christ. SEE ALSO Jehovah;
 Prodigal son, parable of the;
 Serpent: to be crushed beneath the heel
 Abel as a type of ... 617
 all things to be done in the name of ... 361 allusions to Elijah, Elisha, and Ezekiel in revivication miracles ... 780-779 Annunciation ... 6 as "keeper of the gate" ... 167, 248, 471, 499, 505
 as the gate itself ... 505 as many as believe in, should be saved ... 367 as the Mediator ... 333-335
 illustration ... 334
 as the new Adam ... 315-316, 674
 as the restorer of the true temple ... 464, 674, 769 as the Savior and Redeemer ... 340 baptism of as an ascent ... 80
 parallels to Genesis in ... 403 bodily manifestation of Jehovah ... 111 confusion regarding premortal identity and roles ... 582-584, 725 cross of ampulla of oil with picture of cross (illustration) ... 462 as Tree of Life or Knowledge ... 166-167, 340, 462, 595, 614, 615, 640-641, 749 festival of the raising of the (illustration) ... 615 legend of true cross ... 614-616 crucifixion and burial site of ... 734. SEE ALSO Holy Sepulchre, Church of the crucifixion and pieta paralleled in depiction of Seth's quest for the oil of mercy ... 461 descent into Hell (descensus) ... 436, 437, 471, 620-621, 838; SEE ALSO Harrowing of Hell died of a broken heart ... 418 divinity and humanity of, allows him to bear our griefs ... 77-78 fellowship with his suffering ... 469-472, 504, 736-737 final declarations to apostles reflected in language of the book of Moses ... 367, 401 forty-day ministry of ... 675 four gospels composed to appeal to different audiences ... 126 initiated his apostles into the mysteries ... 674, 675, 764-765, 838. SEE ALSO Caves: Grotto of the Teachings Jewish view of, as incompatible with Jehovah ... 653 nativity of ... 126, 672, 674. SEE ALSO Caves: of the Nativity; Magi Nephite children and ... 139, 547-548
 illustration ... 139 perfectly followed the divine pattern ... 313
 premortal exaltation of ... 582
 premortal proposal of ... 221-222, 577-578, 305-306
 "chosen from the beginning" ... 243, 244
 "here I am, send me" ... 243
 "thy will be done" ... 244 prepared from the foundation of the world ... 399 prophecies that Satan's power will diminish ... 305

- resurrection of ... 473
 illustration ... 473
 Sabbath teachings ... 173-174 sacrifice in similitude of ... 361, 416-417 set above scripture ... 652, 753 strength acquired through covenantal relationship with ... 596, 732 symbolized in temple clothing ... 564 symbolized in the temple veil ... 564 taking on the name of ... 564 teaches Peter to feed His sheep ... 598-599, 731-732 tempted by Satan ... 32, 75
 illustration ... 32
 parallels to Genesis ... 403 parallels to Moses' experience ... 33, 53
- Jeu, Two Books of ... 855
- Jewish Texts ... 830-837
- Job
 converses with God ... 517
 illustrations ... 223, 517
 test of ... 52
 Wisdom tradition and ... 223, 516
- John, Acts of ... 838
- John, (Mandaean) Book of ... 881
- John, Secret Book According to ... 852
- Joseph and Aseneth ... 819
- Joseph Smith Translation of the Bible ... xxii, 1-9, 19-23, 34, 75, 78, 83, 125, 323, 432, 455 did not diminish LDS views of importance of the Bible ... 19-20 frustrations in efforts to publish ... 2, 19, 20 history of ... 1-2, 19, 75, 78, 83, 125, 323, 432, 455
- Old Testament
 focus on temple themes ... 4-6 greater attention given to Genesis 1-24 ... 3-4 time sequence of translation ... 3
- limitations due to constraints on what could be revealed ... 5-6, 20-21
- limitations due to time constraints ... 6, 21
- loss and recovery of plain and precious things ... 6, 34, 75
- official status of JST vs. KJV ... 9, 23
- question about completeness of the ... 7-8, 19, 20, 21, 23
- serious studies now being made of ... xxii, 19
- six basic types of changes ... 6-7
- translation process ... 21-22, 125
- Joseph, son of Jacob
 allusions to, in Shakespeare's "The Tempest" ... 637, 744
- Josephus, Flavius ... 830
- Josiah
 purges and reforms of ... 658, 665, 673
- Joy meaning of, in a temple context ... 311
- Jubal ... 393, 394
- Jubilees, book of ... 819
- Judaism
 close affinities between Jews and Mormons ... 830 compatibility of ancient Hebrew view of God with Mormonism ... 653, 753 competing priesthood claims in Second Temple ... 665-666 laws without myth ... 702-703
 minyan
 unifies heaven and earth ... 717 post-biblical law vs. the Torah ... 752 question of openness of canon ... 652 self-description as "People of the Book" ... 652 view that Jesus and Jehovah are incompatible ... 653
- Jungle, law of the ... 381
- Justice and Mercy ... 333-335, 437
- Justification ... 239, 467, 596, 704.
 SEE ALSO Atonement; Sanctification
- Justin Martyr ... 840
- K
- Kebra Nagast ... 298, 303, 847
- Kephalaia ... 892
- Kershishnik, Brian
 Dog Code ... 35
 spiritual nature of art ... 76
- Kimball, Heber C.
 encounter with evil spirits in England ... 75
- King and Priest ... 125, 224, 305, 314, 433-434, 487, 521-522, 523.
 SEE ALSO Anointing; royal
 Adam as ... 314, 433-434 clothing originally patterned after the Israelite high priest ... 305 emblems of kingship orb ... 224, 305
 scepter ... 224
 staff or rod ... 224
 sword ... 224
 investiture in Court of the Palms Mural ... 145
 Lucifer depicted as ... 224 ordination as ... 487, 521-522, 523
- King, Arthur Henry
 approach to reading scripture ... xxiii, xxxi
- King James Version of the Bible.
 SEE Joseph Smith Translation of the Bible: official status of JST vs. KJV; Tyndale, William
- Kitab al-Fehrest ... 887-889
- Knowledge ... 168, 178, 229, 234, 276, 310, 338, 366, 409, 415, 423, 434-435, 451-452, 557, 702 as a precondition for exaltation ... 310, 557, 702. SEE ALSO Exaltation importance of, in Islam ... 178 importance of, in teachings of Joseph Smith ... 178, 229 line between good and evil ... 415, 452 need to obtain knowledge of good from evil ... 168, 234 need for continuing expansion of one's ... 451-452 of "good and evil" vs. "good from evil" ... 276 principle of, is the principle of salvation ... 229 purpose of, not for power or gain ... 409 requires instruction ... 338 temple and Holy Ghost allow, that is locked in the spirit to become part of one's flesh ... 423, 451 test for this life is not ... 366, 434-435 was the prize at stake in the Garden of Eden ... 229
- Kolob ... 84, 125, 137, 163, 201-202, 302, 537, 565-570, 720-727
 ascending order of stars compared with degrees of intelligence ... 137, 201-202
 If You Could Hie to ... 566-570, 721-727 location where Grand Councils held ... 302 nigh unto throne of God ... 567 not the place where God lives ... 302 possible understandings of term ... 565 reckoning of time on ... 137, 537 revolutions of ... 137
- Krafft, Barbara
 Portrait of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart ... 634
- Kugel, James L.
 The Bible As It Was ... 834
 Traditions of the Bible ... 834
- K'un-lun. SEE Garden of Eden: Chinese
- Kushta. SEE Mandaean religion:

ritual handclasps (kushta)

L

Ladder

book of Adam “placed on a ladder”
... 479
covenants are the rungs on the ladder ... 351
symbol of the process of exaltation
... 34, 81, 351
illustrations ... 34, 351 three principal rungs represent the three degrees of glory or faith, hope, and charity ... 351. SEE ALSO Faith, Hope, and Charity

Lamech ... 349-350, 392-393, 397-399, 612-613 cast out ... 399
meaning of name ... 392 revealed secrets to his wives ...
398-399
parallels ... 398-399 secret society of ... 398-399, 613 slew Irad for the oath's sake ... 397, 613 sword song of ... 395-396, 612-613 attempt to glorify violence ...
395
“took” two women ... 392-393

Laws, celestial. SEE Covenants, temple

Lee, Harold B.

experience of pure love ... 421, 450

Legend of the True Cross. SEE Jesus Christ: cross of: legend of true cross

Lemuel, valley of similarity to Garden of Eden ...

556

Lesser Priesthood. SEE Aaronic
Priesthood

Levitical Priesthood. SEE Aaronic
Priesthood

Lewis, C. S.

and Arthur C. Clarke ... 724 themes of Creation and Fall in science fiction of ... 320-321, 724

Lichfield, England Cathedral

Charity with an Anchor ... 472

Light ... 86, 99-100, 108-109, 136, 151, 200, 209-210, 539, 542 enables discerning of differences;
discerning brings more light ...
86 fills immensity of space ... 539 heavenly hosts part of the Creation
of ... 136, 151, 200, 209-210
illustrations ... 136, 542
of Creation, God as the source ...
99-100 temple gives, rather than receiving it from elsewhere ... 108-109

Lilith ... 184

Limbo ... 436, 471, 505

Linn, David

Ascent ... 34

The Little Prince

as an Adam figure ... 549 autobiographical aspects of ...
550-551
creation story and ... 551
de Galember's “Chiastic Structure of the Little Prince” ... 550 fairy tales as degenerate myths ...
550
illustration ... 549

Love. SEE ALSO Charity different Greek terms for ... 597-598

Lucifer. SEE Satan

Lundquist, John M.

Sacred Stones Emerging from the Waters ... 147

Luther, Martin

reading of Cain's naming ... 619,
627, 735, 736

Lutwin

How the Devil Deceived Eve ... 330
Vita Adae et Evae ... 846

Lyon, Michael P.

Drawing from the Stela of Tantamani, Karnak ... 470
Drawing of a Barque Shrine,
Karnak ... 469
Sacred Topography of Eden and the Temple ... 146

M

Maccabees

books of the ... 816

Machpelah ... 230, 767-768

Magi. SEE ALSO Gold, frankincense, and myrrh; Jesus Christ: nativity
of allusions to, in story of the Cave of Treasures ... 673
mosaic of ... 673

Mahan ... 379

Mahdi. SEE Islam: redemption: through return of Jesus and the Mahdi

Mahujael ... 392

Maimonides, Moses ... 835

Mandaean religion ... 212, 303,
308, 316-318, 339-340, 360, 362,
435-436, 438, 495, 506, 617, 863-882, 905
affinities to Gnosticism ... 864-865 baptism of Adam ... 362, 435-436, 617, 866
creation stories ... 864-867 death rite (masiqta) ... 212, 495,

506 generally negative views concerning Jesus ... 864, 867

heavenly ascents in ... 866-867

historical overview ... 863-864

naming ... 870, 905 putting on of clothing as the accrual of glory ... 317-318

ritual ... 867-873

baptism ... 867

clothing as a symbol of the accrual of glory ... 317-318,
868 journey to the place of life ...

870 meaning of, may have been lost ... 905

moral instructions as part of ... 870

mysteries ... 868

reminiscent of Egyptian
endowment ... 867

ritual embrace ... 303, 308, 871

ritual handclasps (kushta) ... 308,
317-318, 473, 506, 660, 686, 777, 870, 871-873

scripture ... 873-882

esoteric texts ... 881-882

exoteric texts ... 881

Ginza ... 873-880

stories about Abel ... 866-867 stories about Adam ... 866 stories about Enos ... 866 stories about Seth ... 866

three messengers

identified as Peter, James, and
John ... 339, 340, 360, 438

named as Abel, Seth, and Enos
... 866

opposed by Satan ... 869 taught hymns, order of prayer, ordinances ... 869

visit Adam ... 868-869

veneration of John the Baptist ...
864

vine as a metaphor of soul's protective clothing during ascent ...

316-317

warned against Satan and his temptations regarding the treasures of the earth ... 869

Manichaeism ... 209, 659-660, 687,

728, 756, 777, 883-895, 905-907

baptism of Adam ... 907

claims to lost knowledge ...

659-660

Elchasai warned that he should not cut down the palm tree ... 209.

SEE ALSO Palm tree: conversation of heavenly ascent and five lessons ...

660, 756, 777, 884-885 dangers ... 905-906

- ritual embrace ... 660
 sacred handclasp ... 660 historical overview ... 883-884
 life of Mani ... 883-884, 907
 Mani as the Paraclete and Seal of the Prophets ... 906 oversimplistic characterizations of Mani's dualism ... 906-907 salvation is collective not individual ... 907 texts ... 889-895
 tree of life ... 728
- Manna
 hidden ... 681
 associated with stone and new name ... 299
 missing from the second temple ... 658
- Mari (Tel Hariri), Syria
 Court of the Palms Mural ... 145
- Marriage, Celestial ... 182-183, 184-185, 268-270, 293, 348, 393, 447, 521, 568, 634, 655, 657, 702, 739. SEE ALSO Cleaving; Covenant, New and Everlasting; Family; Patriarchal Priesthood; Sealing Adam and Eve united in ... 182-183, 184-185
 Chinese traditions relating to ... 655, 657
 Egyptian traditions relating to ... 702
 in Mozart's "The Magic Flute" ... 634, 739 laws of divorce relating to ... 348 learning oneness in marriage and family relationships ... 268-270 patriarchal order of the priesthood and ... 348 system of checks and balances ... 293 tacit condemnation of Lamech's unauthorized polygamy ... 393 tacit condemnation of unmarried cohabitation of the wicked husbands ... 447 unending posterity in ... 568
- Mary, mother of Jesus
 associated with the Tree of Life ... 164, 166
 Michelangelo's depiction as the symbol of the Church ... 89
 Michelangelo's depiction as the second Eve ... 88
- Masjid al-Haram
 photograph ... 219
- Masonry. SEE Freemasonry
- Masoretic Text ... 814
- Matter and Energy
 eternal nature of ... 538-539
- McKay, David O.
- advises curriculum committee ... 31
 dedication of Los Angeles Temple ... 450 influence of the temple on his character ... 427-428
- Melchizedek ... 464, 573, 665-668, 680, 736, 758-765
 as a title ... 667
 Christian mysteries of, in Epistle to the Hebrews ... 666-668, 760-764 deification of ... 759 king of righteousness ... 666 mosaics of sacrifice of ... 573 parallels with Noah ... 736 religion of, suppressed ... 464, 665, 758 seal of ... 573
 temple rites of, greater than those of Moses ... 667
- Melchizedek Priesthood ... 20, 362, 521-522, 665, 668-669, 704-705, 758-761, 765-766. SEE ALSO Priesthood
 Adam received ... 362 degrees of the ... 521, 669, 765-766 fulness of the ... 521-522, 704, 705. SEE ALSO Anointing; royal; SEE ALSO Anointing, Second; SEE ALSO King and Priest can be received in this life or the next ... 765 delayed until Elijah appeared in Kirtland ... 20
 Moses received ... 766
 prerequisite for exaltation ... 765 holds the key of the mysteries of the kingdom ... 521, 668 in Psalm 110 and Hebrews ... 759-761 priests become sons of God ... 696 restored ... 521 withdrawn ... 521, 665, 668-669, 758
- Memphite Theology. SEE Shabaka Stone
- Menorah. SEE ALSO Tree of Mercy missing in the second temple ... 658
 originally in Holy of Holies ... 209, 658, 755-756
- Mercy. SEE Justice and Mercy; SEE Tree of Mercy
- Mesoamerican
 creation accounts ... 699-701
 transgression account ... 413-414, 697, 698
- Messiah spirit of ... 523
- Methusael ... 392
- Michael
 as a title ... 325, 584
 confusion regarding identity and roles ... 582-584, 725 helped organize the earth ... 93, 604
 illustration ... 326
 role in final judgment ... 583-584
- Michelangelo. SEE Buonarrotti, Michelangelo.
- Midrash ... 832-834
- Midrash Rabbah ... 832
- Mika'el, Bakhayla ... 847
- Mill, John Stewart
 views on the Mormons ... xxviii
- Milton, John. SEE ALSO Blake, William: works: Excerpt from the "Preface to Milton" fellow visionary to Blake ... 630-631
 Gray's vision of ... 739 informed the work of C. S. Lewis ... 724 Paradise Lost battle in heaven ... 630 better to rule in Hell than serve in Heaven ... 202, 331, 435 Christ substituted for Adam in story of Adam's exaltation ... 583 compellingly-drawn figure of Satan ... 576, 723 fall of the rebel angels ... 227, 306, 375 golden compasses ... 217
 Heaven-gate ... 287
 Hell placed outside the universe ... 572 imagery of the dove ... 97, 98 opening paragraph ... 78
 over wrath, grace shall abound ... 284, 291
 Satan and Eve seek to overturn the natural order of Heaven ... 546
 Samson Agonistes
 eyeless in Gaza ... 629
- Mishnah ... 831
- More sure word of prophecy ... 522-523. SEE ALSO Calling and election made sure; Exaltation
- Mormon Tabernacle Choir performance of "Dona Nobis Pacem" ... 721-722 performance of "Jerusalem" ... 737
- Moses. SEE ALSO Vision of Moses as hierophant ... 664, 757
 at Mount Sinai
 illustrations ... 6, 671
 divisions on Sinai parallel Eden

- and Temple ... 591–592
 exaltation of ... 60–61, 79, 582, 757 exodus as an undoing and redoing of Creation ... 209
 mystery of ... 664
 received fulness of the priesthood ... 766 revealed only the lesser law to Israel ... 521, 665, 668–669, 766
 sons of ... 520–521, 668
 three names given to ... 667
- Mother of Books ... 902
- Mount of Olives
 site of Eleona and Grotto of the Teachings ... 674, 675, 769 site of resurrection ... 777
- Mountain
 as temple ... 43–44, 147
 primeval ... 105, 147, 209, 859
- Mozart, Wolfgang Amadeus portrait ... 634
 works
 Requiem ... 21
 The Magic Flute ... 634, 739 and Freemasonry ... 634
- Muhammad. SEE ALSO Islam
 call of, by Gabriel or God Himself ... 907–908 night journey (isra) ... 39
 illustration ... 39
 seal of the Prophets ... 906
- Murphy, G. Ronald
The Paradise Altar of Bamberg ... 680
- Music. SEE ALSO Hymns, carols, and other music plays role in the seduction of the Sethites ... 394, 416, 446
- Muslim, Ibn Al-Hajjaj
Sahih al-Muslim ... 898
- Mysteries ... 12, 358, 398–399, 456, 560, 590, 663–669, 674–675, 687–693, 755–757, 772–773, 776, 868. SEE ALSO Ascent, heavenly; Mysteries of the Kingdom
 Cyril's lectures on the ... 661–662 definition of the term ... 560, 663
 Greco-Roman ... 663–664, 772–773. SEE ALSO Eleusinian Mysteries Mithraism ... 687
 in the Cave of Treasures ... 681
 in Epistle to the Hebrews ... 666–668 in the restored Church ... 668–669 consistent with Philo and book of Hebrews ... 668, 669
 Jesus initiated His Apostles in the ... 674, 675
 Jewish
 at Dura Europos ... 687–693.
 SEE ALSO Ezekiel: Cycle of, at Dura Europos lesser vs. greater ... 664 literal vs. figurative at Dura and Qumran ... 776
 Mandaean ... 868
 movement from darkness to light ... 12, 358, 663, 755–756 of Aaron, Moses, and Melchizedek ... 663–669 of Philo Judaeus ... 664 primeval, handed on by Seth ... 456 three stages in ... 663, 757
 Watchers' knowledge of ... 398–399, 590
- Mysteries of Godliness.
 SEE Mysteries of the Kingdom
- Mysteries of the Kingdom encouragement to search deeper into the ... 708–709, 757 key of the, held by Melchizedek Priesthood ... 521, 668 temple ordinances as ... 560, 663
- Myth and ritual school ... 16
- Myths
 invented to explain ritual ... 16, 30, 905
- N
- Naamah ... 394
- Nag Hammadi Codices and Gnostic Texts ... 849–855
- Nail in the sure place ... 472
- Name ... 177–180, 183–184, 248, 298, 299, 302–303, 523, 667, 680, 706, 870, 905. SEE ALSO Ordinances, temple Adam asked to give, of Eve ... 184
 and covenant ... 298 given before birth ... 667 in Egyptian mythology and liturgy ... 179 in Islam ... 905
 in Judaism ... 905
 in Mandaean ritual ... 303, 870, 905 knowledge of, gives authority ... 179 means of reaching highest bliss through discovery of the “Greatest Name of God” ... 179 new ... 523, 667, 680 given to participants in the Islamic hajj ... 299 not to be revealed to unauthorized parties ... 179 of God dwells in the temple ... 179 of Melchizedek given as a title ... 667 of the Son of Man to bind the oath ... 302 proper use of, of God constitutes a covenant ... 179 received by Adam ... 179, 180 received by Eve ... 179, 183–184 recited by Adam to the angels in the Garden of Eden ... 177–178
 Satan promised to give secret, that would preserve from death ... 178–179, 248 revealed through the Urim and Thummim ... 706 three names given to Moses ... 667
- Nature. SEE ALSO Culture and society, critiques of becomes an enemy to fallen man ... 121–122, 384, 410 man vs. God at the center of ... 187
- Nauvoo
 Eden and name of ... 161–162
- Nebuchadnezzar
 abasement of ... 632
 portrait of ... 633 parallels with myth of Osiris ... 632 story identified with Nabonidus ... 739
- Nephi, psalm of ... 465, 467, 498–499
 related Muslim tradition of the cloak ... 498
- New and Everlasting Covenant.
 SEE Covenant, New and Everlasting
- New Jerusalem. SEE ALSO Zion anticipation of ... 627
- New Testament Apocrypha ... 838
- New Testament Pseudepigrapha ... 838
- New Year rites
 antiphonal chorus of women ... 393, 395–396, 612 hieros gamos in ... 183 time for contracts and covenants ... 190 use of creation accounts in ... 148
- Nibley, Hugh W.
 writes priesthood manual ... 31
- Noah ... 4, 7–8, 27, 30, 90, 97, 118, 127, 165, 170, 174, 195–196, 211, 221, 226–227, 248, 268, 310, 329, 343, 348–350, 355, 360, 369, 387, 392, 395, 403, 410, 432, 449, 455, 478, 481, 483, 491–492, 553, 588, 591–592, 616, 656, 666–667, 679, 696, 725–731, 733–734, 736, 761–762, 773, 867, 884, 888, 903. SEE ALSO Flood, Noachian and sons as a Tree of Life ... 726 ark of. SEE Ark: of Noah confronted by Satan ... 329
 “heir of righteousness” in Epistle to the Hebrews ... 666
 illustration ... 696
 not condemned for drunkenness ...

592, 729–731
parallels with Melchizedek ... 736 possible identification of, with Nū Gua ... 656
sees ark in vision ... 696
special birth circumstances ... 736 story of, anticipates the last days
 ... 432
story of, parallels the Creation and Fall ... 432, 591–592, 729–731
Noise disturbs deity ... 586, 699, 726
Novelli, Pietro
Cain and Abel ... 336
Nū Gua. SEE Fu Xi and Nū Gua

O

Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood ... 342, 472, 498,
 519–523
allusion to, in parable of the prodigal son ... 498
obligations and promises of the
 ... 342
specific teachings about, to be found in the temple ... 342 temple blessings in the ... 519–523 two irrevocable acts of the ... 472 Obedience. SEE Covenants, temple: obedience; Diligence, obedience, and friendship
Odes of Solomon ... 820
Oil of Mercy. SEE Tree of Mercy
Old Testament Apocrypha ...
 815–816
Old Testament Pseudepigrapha ...
 817–821
Olive tree. SEE ALSO Tree of Life; Tree of Mercy
as a Tree of Life ... 164–165, 462 as the Tree of Mercy ... 165, 166– 167, 189, 210
vs. palm tree as symbol of the Tree of Life ... 166–167
Only Begotten
translation issues ... 47
On the Origin of the World ... 852
One Eternal Round. SEE Eternal
Round
Orans gesture. SEE Gestures, ritual:
orans gesture
Ordinance of salvation
one of five secret ordinances ... 658
Ordinances ... 316, 342, 347,
 362, 400, 404, 428–429, 513,
 520, 596, 756–757, 765. SEE
 ALSO Ordinances, temple
Adam receives “an holy ordinance”
 ... 347, 400 additional, to be received in the next life ... 342, 765

antiquity of ... 756–757
baptism ... 316, 347, 362
born again through ... 342, 428– 429, 520, 596
performed in faith, generally with no explanation ... 404 provide direct experience ... 513 validity rests on the fact that they have been revealed ... 404
Ordinances, temple ... 37, 218,
 423, 519, 560. SEE ALSO Clothing;
Endowment; Mysteries of the Kingdom; Ordinances; Sealing;
Temple; Washing and anointing early anticipation of modern ...
 519 established before the foundation of the world ... 218 facilitate a unique sense of community ... 423
provide a model for patterning one’s life and relationships ... 423 represent eternal realities or the order of heaven ... 37, 423 teach us who we are ... 560
Origin of Alexandria ... 841
Origin of Man ... 192–196, 212,
 456, 476–477, 480–481, 785–
 803. SEE ALSO Adam: creation of;
Animals; Science
Adam becomes Adam when he begins an ancestral record ...
 196, 481
evolutionary biology one of the largest and most successful programs at BYU ... 803 perspectives on creatures that looked like men who lived before
Adam ... 196, 212
sons of Adam defined by covenant, not merely by lineage ... 195,
 196, 212, 456, 476–477, 480–481 specifics of, not of great concern to Mormons ... 192–193
speculations on scriptural support for surviving non-Adamic or non-Noachian lineages ... 195–
 196, 212
Original sin. SEE Sin: original
Orpheus ... 25, 247, 821
Osiris ... 57, 165, 231, 260–261,
 311–312, 442, 504, 515, 632, 634,
 702. SEE ALSO Egyptian
becoming ... 312, 702
deceased is led into the presence of
 ... 230
final test of baptism ... 57
in Mozart’s “The Magic Flute” ...
 634 liberated from a tree ... 165, 231, 260, 261, 312, 632
illustration ... 231

parallels with story of Nebuchadnezzar ... 632
wheat provided from body of ...
 442

P

Packer, Boyd K.

The Mediator ... 15, 333–335
Palm tree ... 145, 149, 165–167,
 209, 230, 556, 778. SEE ALSO Tree
of Life
absent from Cycle of Ezekiel ... 778 as the Tree of Life ... 165–166, 556 conversation of ... 145, 209
in Ezekiel’s vision of the temple
 ... 165
in Holy of Holies of Solomon’s
temple ... 149
over “Adam’s Grave” in Hebron
 ... 230
photograph ... 230
vs. olive tree as symbol of the Tree
of Life ... 166–167
Pandora ... 398, 613, 773
Paraclete ... 884, 906
Parents, successful ... 407
Partakers of the divine nature ...
 319–320, 341, 419, 469, 503, 707.
 SEE ALSO Deification
Parzival. SEE von Eschenbach,
Wolfram: Parzival
Passover ... 148, 386, 499
Patriarchal Priesthood ... 348,
 456, 480, 491, 493, 521. SEE
 ALSO Family; Marriage, celestial
Paul, Apocalypse of ... 838
Pearl, Hymn of the ... 296–297,
 300, 853
People of the Book ... 82, 531,
 651–653, 750–751, 753
Islam’s special regard for ...
 651–652, 750–751
Jesus Christ set above scripture ...
 652–653, 753
Jewish self-description as ... 652 Jewish view of Divinity located in language, not person ... 82 meaning of the term ... 651
Perdition
Cain as ... 335, 375
sons of ... 577
Perfect, be ye therefore ... 11, 23,
 24–26, 523. SEE ALSO Deification;
Exaltation; God: man in the image and likeness of: spiritual nature
Peshitta ... 814
Pesikta de Rav Kahana ... 832
Pesikta Rabbati ... 832
Peter, Apocalypse of ... 838
Peter, Simon

- told by Jesus to feed His sheep ... 598–599, 731–732
- Phelps, William W.
If You Could Hie to Kolob ... 566–570, 721–727
 biographical sketch ... 569, 721
 photograph ... 566
- Philip, Gospel of ... 851
- Philo Judaeus ... 830. SEE
 ALSO Ezekiel: Cycle of, at Dura
 Europos
Mysteries of Aaron and Moses ... 664, 690, 757, 774 teachings part of First Temple
 Judaism ... 665, 687, 757
 views on deification of Moses ... 757
- Pinkus, Assaf
Creation Sequence ... 542
The Quest of Seth for the Oil of Mercy ... 461
- Pirkei Avos ... 831
- Pirkei de Rabbi Eliezer ... 833
- Pistis Sophia ... 46, 168, 209, 471, 593, 820, 854, 855
- Plato ... 127
- Pomegranate tree
Tree of Knowledge as a ... 170
- Popol Vuh
 creation account ... 699–701
- Portable reliquary or altar. SEE Ark: of the covenant: analogue to Christian altar or reliquary
- Prayer circle ... 219, 299, 356–357, 547, 675, 685, 717, 780. SEE ALSO Circle, sacred;
 choros ... 685, 717
 formed by ancient apostles ... 547, 675
 Jewish minyan ... 717, 780
 Muslim hajj practices relating to ... 219, 299, 717 repetition as part of ... 356–357 sacred handclasps as part of ... 685 unintelligible language ... 356 unites heaven and earth ... 717
- Pre-Adamites. SEE Origin of Man
- Premortal existence. SEE Councils in heaven, premortal; Jesus Christ, premortal proposal of; Satan: premortal proposal of; Satan: premortal rebellion of; Spirits: premortal existence of
- Previati, Gaetano
The Creation of Light ... 136
- Prévost, Antoine-François
Adam's Peak ... 143
- Priesthood. SEE ALSO Aaronic Priesthood; Melchizedek Priesthood; Patriarchal Priesthood competing claims in Second Temple Judaism ... 665–666, 759 keys ... 521
- Priests
 offering of frankincense ... 670
- Prodigal son, parable of the ... 26, 429, 462, 464, 465, 469, 496–498.
 SEE ALSO Repentance
 Adam and Eve as the archetypes of the ... 464 allusion to oath and covenant of the priesthood in ... 498
- Prometheus ... 227
- Prophet
 is only a prophet when acting as such ... 713
- Protoevangelion. SEE Serpent: to be crushed beneath the heel
- Pseudepigrapha. SEE New Testament Pseudepigrapha; Old Testament Pseudepigrapha
- Pseudo-Clement ... 841
- Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite ... 843
- Pseudo-Philo ... 820
- Q
- Qumran. SEE Dead Sea Scrolls
- Qur'an ... 896–897, 907, 908
- R
- Raphael. SEE Sanzi, Raffaello
- Rashi ... 835
- Red heifer ... 618, 735
 Abel as a ... 618
- Religion, critiques of ... xxii, xxv, xxvii–xxx, xxxv, 26, 192–194, 524–530, 552–554, 707–708, 717. SEE ALSO Culture and society, critiques of; Historicity of sacred events assumption that rational discourse and inspiration are incompatible ... xxvii–xxviii belief in biological or cultural origins of religious belief ... 708 belief that science is incompatible with religion ... 192–194, 526–530 belief that the God of the theologians is not worthy of the grandeur of the universe ... 529 belief that there is no need to posit religious beliefs in order to explain the universe ... 524–525 doubts about the conception and resurrection of Jesus Christ ... xxvii, xxviii doubts about the historicity of religious events ... xxii, 552–554 extreme religious literalism ... 553
- failure of believers to distinguish truth value of religion from its consolation value ... 717 history of fraudulent religious claims ... 707 implausibility of specific religious beliefs ... xxix incredulity at the idea of “visions in the age of railways” ... xxiii lack of agreement among religionists ... 707 lack of intellectual depth and coherence of theologies ... xxx no ear for religion ... 26 rejection of emotion and entertainment as legitimate staples of worship ... xxv rejection of vague notions of “faith in faith” ... xxv, xxxv resistance to religion in its living forms ... xxviii, xxix–xxx stereotypes based on fundamentalist extremes ... 707
- Repentance ... 357, 366, 434–435, 464–465, 470–472, 505. SEE ALSO Prodigal son, parable of the and forgiveness, the only things one can be very good at in this life ... 366, 434–435 as return ... 357, 501 changes the meaning of past events ... 470–472, 505
 illustrations ... 464, 465
 Lord God calls men to ... 366 not a popular topic ... 434
- Resurrection ... 520, 523, 580, 670, 685, 690, 703, 706, 760–761, 770, 779–780. SEE ALSO Mount of Olives: site of resurrection
 Ezekiel
 idea of an individual bodily resurrection in book of ... 780 power of resurrection delegated to ... 779 imparts power over disembodied spirits ... 580 initiation in the mysteries as a kind of ... 690, 703, 760–761
 Jesus depicted at, of Adam ... 685 myrrh as the dew of ... 670 renewal of the body takes place in ... 520 sorrow of those who receive a lesser resurrection ... 706 celestial beings are last to receive ... 770 time of covenantal fulfillment ... 523 without, the Devil would have power over individuals ... 580
- Revelation ... xxiv, 35, 76–78, 493,

512-513, 553, 558, 560-563,
713-714, 719. SEE ALSO Revelation, continuing; Stone; Urim and Thummim comes in the temple ... 558, 719 dialogic ... 713-714 in temple design ... 561-563 language inadequate for ... 35, 76-78, 513
line-upon-line process ... 212 mysteries known only through ...
560 requires time and experience ...
xxiv, 493, 553
speech, writing, and ... 77,
512-513
Revelation, continuing ... 531-534,
712, 717. SEE ALSO Scripture: open and unending canon of both heightens and lowers the status of scripture ... 712 message of, overshadowed content of, in early church ... 717
Rhetorica Christiana
The Great Chain of Being ... 138
Richards, J. Kirk
biographical sketch ... 233
Cherubim and the Flaming Sword
... 233
Ritual
more stable than myth ... 16, 30, 702-703, 905
Rolls, Book of the ... 846
Roze, Albert-Dominique
Toward Immortality and Eternal
Youth ... 463
Rublev, Andrei
The Holy Trinity ... 340

S

Sabazius
cultic gesture of ... 778
Sabbath ... 90-91, 151-153, 173-
174 anticipates the "rest" of the faithful
... 152
"blessed" and "sanctified" ... 152-153 creation motif in Jesus' teachings ...
173-174
Israel is to be "wedded" to the ...
90-91
question of whether creative activity occurred on the ... 151-152 seventh day of Creation ... 151-153
Sacrament of the Lord's Supper foretaste of the celestial feast ... 508
illustrations ... 340, 573, 671, 679, 680
one of five secret ordinances ... 658
Sacred circle. SEE Circle, sacred

Sacrifice ... 322, 345, 356, 359,
360-362, 371-372, 416-418, 573,
609-610, 645, 670, 680, 736-737.
SEE ALSO Covenants, temple:
sacrifice
after the order of the Melchizedek
Priesthood ... 356
animal ... 356, 359, 609-610 ending of ... 345, 610
in Islam ... 359, 645
similitude of Christ ... 361, 416-417
must be done in fashion prescribed by God ... 371-372, 416-417 of a broken heart and a contrite spirit ... 418
of Adam ... 345, 359, 360-362
of Cain and Abel ... 345
illustrations ... 322, 573, 670, 680 personal ... 359, 418, 736-737 placing all one has on the altar
... 417 restoration of ... 609-610 through, we are proven ... 417 Sagan, Carl science has surpassed religion in delivering awe ... 529
Saint Exupéry, Antoine de. SEE
ALSO The Little Prince
The Flight of the Little Prince ...
549
San Giovanni Battista, Basilica di
Ampulla 11, with inscription "Oil
from the Tree of Life" ... 462
Sanctification ... 204, 239, 277,
340, 429-431, 441, 452, 467,
596, 704. SEE ALSO Atonement;
Justification
affirmative nature of ... 452 enabled by renewal of covenants
... 596
made possible through the Atonement ... 430
must have been completed before partaking of eternal life ... 277 of the earth ... 204
San Francesco in Arezzo, Church
of story of the true cross in ...
615-616
San Marco, Church of
Introduction of Adam into
Paradise ... 683
Sanzi, Raffaello
The Archangel Michael Subduing
Satan ... 326
Satan ... 52-59, 223-227, 243-246,
319-320, 540-542, 546, 575-581,
723. SEE ALSO Councils in heaven, premortal; Serpent; Transgression
of Adam and Eve appeal of devilish characters in fiction ... 723

appears deceptively ... 42, 54, 247, 248, 259, 365
illustration ... 330
as a generic adversarial character
vs. specific individual ... 307 as an abstract representation of the principle of justice ... 333
as Perdition ... 244, 248, 335
assumes the garb of piety ... 365 attempts to bribe us with a "sure thing" ... 285, 288, 320
before Adam ... 540-541 better to reign in Hell than serve in Heaven ... 202, 331, 435
body severed and wings broken ...
226, 308, 309-310
Cain swears to, by his throat and by the living God ... 377-378 cannot compel ... 229, 288, 310 cast out through Only Begotten
... 58
cast to earth ... 224, 226, 310 claims ownership of the earth ...
331, 332-333, 335, 436 claims to be a son of God ... 365 converts life into property ... 335 deprived of a body ... 306, 310-311, 579
deprived of clothing ... 226 deprived of glory ... 54-55 devil's dilemma ... 413-415
does not know the mind of God ...
250, 320
encounter with Moses ... 52-59 ever ready to make a deal ... 346
illustration ... 346
"extensive wingspan" of ... 224
feigned surprise and indignation
of ... 251
God's "gifts" to ... 293
Golden Question of ... 435
impersonates Christ ... 247, 248 mixes truth with lies ... 253, 594 opposition of, increases as a person approaches the Lord ... 75 permitted by God to try and tempt
... 329
power and premortal status of ...
224, 226, 575-576
given to Adam ... 301, 330, 575
illustration ... 224
premortal proposal of ... 223-224, 305-306, 577-578, 723
egocentric and duplicitous
"here I am, send me" ... 243
"one soul shall not be lost" ...
244 required no atonement ... 243
premortal rebellion of ... 224-226,
243-246, 306-310, 542, 546
Chinese myths relating to ...

- 655
 illustrations ... 226, 227
 parallels to Adam and Eve's transgression ... 593 program of destruction for the fallen world... 265-266, 335, 337 refusal to pay homage to newly-created Adam ... 219, 225, 307-308, 330, 540, 716, 725
 illustration ... 225
 satirized in Aristophanes' "The Pluto" ... 445 sets up his kingdom in opposition to God ... 365 seeks "power" and "honor" ... 224, 307 seeks to deceive Adam with a handclasp ... 439, 905 seeks to deprive spirits of opportunity to gain a body ... 311, 581 seeks to destroy agency ... 227, 229, 245, 578-579, 724 seeks to eliminate time of probation ... 230-233, 581, 725 seeks to obtain worship ... 53, 329 seeks to preclude exaltation ... 231-234, 581, 723 seeks to "redeem" all in their sins ... 578, 580 seeks to soften the severity of the prohibition in Eden ... 251 seeks to take away light and knowledge ... 229
 "sought to destroy the world" ... 250 stoning of ... 219, 299, 359 tempted Jesus Christ. SEE Jesus Christ: tempted by Satan tempts with prospects of power and riches ... 329-331, 346, 409-411 tirade of, following God's rebuke ... 265
 trembles and shakes the earth ... 57-58 waning of belief in a personal ... 307 wounded Adam while he was offering sacrifice ... 359 writing removed from hand of ... 226, 308
- Scholarly temperaments differences in ... 31, 775
- Schwäbisch Gmund, great minster at
 Creation Sequence ... 542
- Schwartz, Howard
 Tree of Souls ... 834
- Science ... 126, 141, 192-194, 526-530, 566-567, 710, 710-711, 716, 803. SEE ALSO Astronomy; Creation; Origin of Man; Truth an ongoing process of revision ... 530, 710, 711 awe and meekness in ... 126, 529, 566-567, 710, 710-711 evolutionary biology at BYU ... 803
 "god of the gaps" ... 716
 LDS scientists overrepresented in ... 526-527
 Mormonism and ... 141, 192-194, 526-530. SEE ALSO Education not a good foundation for religion ... 711 open-mindedness and prejudice ... 711 scripture and, approach Creation with different interests, goals, and assumptions ... 194
- Scripture ... xxiii-xxv, xxvii, xxxi-xxxv, 85, 125-126, 144, 191-194, 208-209, 531-536, 552-554, 712-715, 717-719
 all can come to an understanding of ... xxxi authority and power of ... 531-536 challenge in decoding imagery of ... xxiii-xxiv, xxxv closed canon reinforces idea that revelation has ceased ... 713 contextual, narrative nature of ... 534-536, 714, 714-715 encouragement to focus on central doctrines of ... xxv extreme literalism ... 552-553, 719 he who reads oftenest will like best ... xxvii historicity of ... 552-554, 717-719
 is only as accurate as God requires ... 193-194 literal readings of ... 144, 208-209 modern tendency to embrace ethics and avoid doctrine ... xxxiii new scripture to come ... 712 not a substitute for direct experience ... 513 open and unending canon of ... 531, 712. SEE ALSO Revelation, continuing personal experience and ... 554 revealed anew when a witness of, received ... 712-713 subordinated to continuing revelation ... 531-532, 712 to be understood in context and from specific perspectives ... xxxi, 126 to be understood both by study and also by faith ... xxv, xxxiv-xxxv, 191-192. SEE ALSO Education; SEE ALSO Truth value of an amateur's perspective on ... xxvii value of multiple versions of scripture stories ... 85, 125-126 value of traditional modes of exploring ... xxxi-xxxii virtue of careful reading ... xxiii, xxxi
- Seal of the Prophets ... 884, 906
- Sealing ... 185, 486, 522-523, 545, 705. SEE ALSO Elijah: spirit and power of; Marriage, Celestial Atonement is another word for the power of ... 486 priesthood adoption ... 545 sealing power of Elijah ... 522, 523 suggests totality of union ... 185 to parents ... 545, 705
 two seals in the priesthood... 705 various meanings of the term ... 705
- Seal of Melchizedek.
SEE Melchizedek: seal of
- Second Anointing. SEE Anointing, Second
- Seeing God ... 38, 44, 277, 364, 385, 517, 521, 765, 781-782
 attribute of true Israel ... 765
 Cain deprived of blessing of ... 385 idea became controversial ... 781-782
 illustrations ... 38, 517 in the flesh ... 364
 in Vision of Moses ... 44
 only possible when process of sanctification is complete ... 277 privilege of, taken away ... 521
- Self-Reliance
 vs. self-sufficiency ... 450
- Septuagint ... 813
- Seraphim ... 38
- Serpent ... 32, 96, 186, 246-249, 251, 264-267, 300, 311, 315, 319, 326, 476-477, 654, 657. SEE ALSO Satan as a subsequently-recruited accomplice to Satan ... 249 as the "garment" of Satan ... 249
 Caduceus ... 247, 657 ambivalence of ... 247, 319
 Chinese ... 654
 serpentine depiction of Fu Xi and Nü Gua ... 657 cursed because it incited transgression ... 264-267 deceptive appearance of ... 246-248 figurative vs. literal ... 246
 Satan spoke "by the mouth of the" ... 251 steals the girdle and precious stone of Alexander ... 300
 "subtle"
 meaning of ... 246
 wordplay with "naked" ... 186, 315 symbol of Christ ... 247, 248

- symbol of life and wisdom* ... 247 to be crushed beneath the heel ...
 32, 96, 265-267, 476-477
Egyptian parallel ... 311
illustrations ... 32, 326
- Seth
Adam, not Eve, gives name to ...
 476 author of a book ... 456, 491
description of, as "beautiful" ...
 433, 482
hands on the primeval mysteries
 ... 456
in the image and likeness of Adam
 ... 482
Mandaean stories about ... 866
meaning of name ... 456, 475-476
offered an acceptable sacrifice ...
 477 ordained to the patriarchal priesthood by Adam ... 456 patriarchal priesthood traced through ... 491
quest for the oil of mercy ... 208,
 406, 460-462, 614, 640-641,
 748-749. SEE ALSO Staff, high priestly; Tree of Mercy healing herbs ... 208, 406, 640
illustration ... 461
Mandaean tradition where oil is carried from earth to heaven ... 495, 506 received ordinances ... 477 righteous posterity raised up through ... 475-477
role in Gnosticism ... 456
- Sethites and Cainites ... 348-349,
 389-391, 415-416, 446-447, 476,
 588-589, 671, 673. SEE ALSO Sons
 of God
- Shabaka Stone ... 261, 514-515,
 809. SEE ALSO Egyptian
- Shakespeare, William ... xxi, 35,
 253, 260, 269, 334, 346, 395,
 466, 546, 560, 629, 635-639, 723,
 739-748.
appeal in Mormon culture ... 743
Christianity of, and use of the Bible
 ... 740-743
compared to William Tyndale ...
 466
Gordon B. Hinckley's love of ... 743 role of Providence in ... 748
The Tempest ... 635-639, 739-748
Ariel shut up in a tree ... 260 as a "mystery play" ... 636
parallels with Genesis ...
 635-639, 743-745 portrait of Miranda ... 635 works (besides The Tempest)
Antony and Cleopatra ... 560,
 742
Comedy of Errors ... 395
- Hamlet* ... 35, 742, 747
King Lear ... 742
Macbeth ... 253, 346
Measure for Measure ... 334,
 742-743
Much Ado About Nothing ...
 269
Othello ... 723
Pericles ... 742
Richard II ... 629
Romeo and Juliet ... 743
Troilus and Cressida ... 546
Venus and Adonis ... xxi
The Winter's Tale ... 742
- Sheba, Queen of recognizes wood of the Tree of Life
 ... 614
- Shekhinah ... 115, 357, 444, 717,
 779, 780
- Shepherd of Hermas ... 844
- Signs. SEE ALSO Ordinances, temple to be given to angels ... 557
vs. tokens ... 499
- Sin. SEE ALSO Transgression of Adam and Eve against the Holy Ghost ... 375, 437, 577-578 original
Fall is not a fall into evil ...
 320
Muslim repudiation of ... 646
Chesterton's sardonic view that it is the "only Christian doctrine that is empirically provable" ... 321
vs. transgression ... 288-289, 364
- Sinai
divisions parallel Eden and Temple
 ... 591-592
- Sirat Rasul Allāh ... 898
- Smith, Joseph, Jr. ... 5, 19, 27,
 33-36, 39, 76, 80, 197, 210, 447,
 653
Bloom's high regard for revelations
of ... 653 experiences parallel Moses' encounter with Satan ... 33-36
First Vision of ... 33, 80, 210
illustration ... xx, 5 manuscript sources for teachings
of ... 27
opposition in Colesville, NY ...
 34-36 knowledge and revelations provide needed comfort and encouragement ... 36, 76
parallels with Enoch ... 447 revelations of, a result of wrestling with problems or questions ...
 197 vision of good and evil ... 39 was his own best follower ... 19
- Solomon ... 149, 170-173, 614
- building of the temple* ... 614 temple of, bronze sea ... 170-171 temple of, Holy of Holies ... 149
illustration ... 149
would have dominion "from the river unto the ends of the earth"
 ... 172-173
- Son of Man
meaning of ... 53
- Sons of God. SEE ALSO Sethites as angels vs. mortals ... 588-589, 726-727
becoming ... 24, 46-47, 53, 302,
 428-429, 501, 703-704, 727. SEE
 ALSO Born again married daughters of men ...
 348-349, 585-595, 726-727. SEE
 ALSO Watchers
- Sons of Levi. SEE Sacrifice: restoration of
- Sons of Perdition. SEE Perdition:
 sons of
- Sophia ... 80, 88, 115, 123,
 129, 247, 257, 849, 887. SEE
 ALSO Wisdom
- Spirit. SEE ALSO Holy Ghost
eternal nature of ... 538-539,
 541-543, 567
- Spirits ... 135-139, 151, 156, 198-
 199, 200, 212, 220, 228, 313,
 540-545
in the likeness of the body ... 199 of animals ... 135, 199, 212 of heavenly host, part of the creation of light ... 136, 151, 156, 200
origin of ... 135, 136, 198, 200, 541-543
premortal existence of ... 135-139, 151, 156, 228, 540-543
illustration ... 228
possibility of "sin" in the ...
 198-199, 313
premortal organization of, into families ... 138-139, 220, 544-545
some made rulers ... 137, 138
- Spiritual creation. SEE Creation, spiritual
- Spirit World ... 54, 79, 101, 198,
 234, 278, 303, 313, 420, 543, 580,
 694, 725, 751
Islamic parallels to LDS teachings
 ... 751
- Square and circle. SEE Circle and square
- Sri Pada. SEE Adam's Peak
- Staff, high priestly. SEE ALSO Anointing
missing from the second temple
 ... 658
sword substituted for ... 224
- Staff of Adam. SEE Tree of Knowledge: staff made from the St. Apollinare Nuovo, Basilica of

The Three Magi ... 673
Stichomythia ... 52
Stone ... 62, 105, 147, 209, 219,
 299-301, 359, 680-681. SEE
 ALSO Urim and Thummim associations with Abraham ... 300 associations with Peter ... 300-301 black ... 219
 Egyptian, of truth ... 300 foundation, of temple and Creation
 ... 105, 147, 209, 219, 301 and revelation ... 300-301 stoning of Satan ... 219, 299, 359 taken from Satan and given to Adam ... 301
 white ... 62, 299-301, 680, 681 given in premortal life ... 299-300, 520
Swindle, Liz Lemon
Go With Me to Cumorah ... xx, 5
Sword. SEE Cherubim: and the flaming sword; King and Priest:
 emblems of kingship
Synagogue
Garden of Eden as a model for the
 ... 556

T

Tabernacle, Israelite ... 43, 93, 118,
 148-149, 173, 187, 210-211, 235,
 280, 282, 301, 304, 317, 432, 444,
 469, 521, 561, 572, 591, 609, 671, 679, 768
architecture modeled on Moses' vision of Creation ... 148-149
illustration ... 671
in likeness of God's heavenly pavilion ... 67, 210-211, 556, 591, 731 Tablets of the Law
first vs. second ... 665, 758
T'ai Hao confusion with Fu Xi ... 656
Talmud ... 831
Tamoanchan. SEE Garden of Eden:
 Mesoamerican
Targums ... 813-814
Telestial
meaning of the term ... 769-770
Temple. SEE ALSO Covenants, temple; Curses, ritual; Embrace, ritual; Handclaps, sacred; Name;
 Ordinances, temple; Prayer circle;
 Signs; Stone: white; Temple text;
 Tokens (Symbols); Veil, temple allows knowledge locked in one's spirit to become part of one's flesh ... 423
as a mountain ... 43-44, 147
as a microcosm ... 561
as a place of revelation ... 558, 719
as a scale-model of the universe
 ... 148
as the origin of culture and civilization ... 189-190 brings one's physical being into harmony and union with one's spirit ... 423 building of, as the climax of
Creation ... 148-149, 432
Creation as a model for ... 147-
 149, 187-188, 432
Creation in, liturgy ... 148 different emphasis in design of each
 ... 561 divisions of ... 591-592, 776-777, 777 parallel the three heavens ...
 556 dramatic and pragmatic in the ...
 421-422, 435
First, was taproot of Christianity
 ... 664, 757
five lost things of the First ...
 658-660, 665, 674, 756
all associated with the high priesthood ... 658-659
lost contents of the Ark ... 680 forgetting of time and place in the
 ... 423
Garden of Eden a prototype for ...
 146-147, 173-174, 555-556
illustration ... 146 gardens of, provide a transition from the world ... 422 gives light rather than receiving it from elsewhere ... 108-109
Holy of Holies imparts holiness to all creation
 ... 149
in Solomon's temple (illustration) ... 149
human body as a microcosm of the
 ... 209
influence of, on life and character
 ... 427-428
layout of, reflects process of return and repentance ... 146, 147, 357 legal basis of the state legitimized
by the ... 442-443
provides a "patriarchal blessing" to every organ, attribute, and power of one's being ... 423 provides protection and insulation from evil ... 423
revelation informs design of ...
 561-563, 720
teaches self-discipline ... 422 teachings of the, are as real as the temple itself ... 422
Temple covenants. SEE Covenants,
 temple
Temple, heavenly ... 37, 67, 210-211, 556, 591, 593, 719, 731 ascent to the ... 37
portable pavilion ... 210-211, 591, 731
Islamic parallel to ... 593 veil of, hides the earth ... 67,
 556, 719
Temple of Derr
Rameses II in the Ished-tree ... 231
Temple ordinances. SEE Ordinances,
 temple
Temple text ... 342-343, 443-444.
SEE ALSO Covenants, temple;
 Temple
definition of ... 443
general outline ... 443-444
Joseph Smith Papyri as a ... 443
Leviticus as a ... 443
Moses 1-8 as a ... 342-343
Sermon on the Mount as a ... 343
Tempt
meaning of ... 52
Ten Commandments
breaking of, in Primary History ...
 444, 607-608
Tertullian of Carthage ... 841
Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs
 ... 818
Theology broader definition of, in Mormonism ... 714
reflection on history as a form of
 ... 714
Theophany. SEE Seeing God
Thomas, Acts of ... 853
Thomas, Gospel of ... 851
Three messengers ... 181, 338-340,
 360, 400, 422, 435, 438-439, 441,
 866, 868-869
Adam did not recognize at first ...
 181, 339
in Mandaean tradition ... 868-869
identified as Peter, James, and
John ... 339, 340, 360, 438
named as Abel, Seth, and Enos
 ... 866
illustrations ... 339, 340 instructions to pay heed to their counsel ... 422 knowledge of the Gospel given through ... 338
stand as representatives of the Godhead ... 340
symbolize divine unity ... 340 visit Abraham ... 339, 340, 435
visit Adam ... 181, 360, 400, 438
visit Wilford Woodruff ... 439
Throne ... 62, 69, 80-81, 84, 89,

- 96, 113, 121, 137, 148, 164, 166, 170, 222, 261, 326, 357, 363, 408, 433-434, 441-442, 469-470, 516, 523, 547, 561, 565, 567, 572, 582, 584, 591, 594, 612, 614, 632, 646, 658, 679, 686, 688, 696, 703-705, 731, 749, 779-780, 782, 861, 868, 885, 908
- Adam on ... 225, 861, 868
- Adam and Eve on ... 593
- chariot ... 261, 731
- heavenly ... 62, 69, 81, 84, 96, 113, 121, 137, 148, 166, 170, 222, 326, 357, 363, 433, 434, 441, 442, 470, 516, 523, 547, 561, 565, 567, 572, 582, 584, 591, 594, 688, 696, 703, 704, 705, 779, 780, 782, 868, 885
- illustrations ... 38, 137, 225, 593
- missing from the second temple ... 658
- Tree of Life as locus of God's ... 261, 593, 731
- Time ... 36, 48-49, 84-85, 103, 119, 312, 504, 537-539, 567, 715, 716
- and eternity ... 48-49, 119, 537-539, 567. SEE ALSO Foreknowledge of God illustration ... 36
- brief and transitory nature of life ... 312, 504
- meaning of term in Creation ... 84-85, 103
- scientific conceptions of ... 36, 48-49, 537-538, 715, 716
- Titian. SEE Vecellio, Tiziano
- Tokens (Symbols) ... 308, 331, 356, 439, 499, 557, 658-659, 670, 677-678, 681, 685, 769, 771-772
- Eve distinguishes true and false messengers by ... 331
- gold, frankincense, and myrrh as ... 439, 670, 769
- in the Ark of the Covenant ... 681
- in the Cave of Treasures ... 439, 681
- in the hand ... 308, 356, 685
- lost five ... 658, 659
- meaning of the term ... 771-772
- recognition, in Greek drama and mysteries ... 677-678, 772
- to be given to angels ... 557
- vs. signs ... 499
- Torah
- substituted for Wisdom ... 516, 752
- Tosefta ... 831
- Tours Pentateuch
- history and description ... 671
- Mount Sinai and the Tabernacle ... 671
- Transgression of Adam and Eve ... 229-234, 246-257, 319-320, 594-595. SEE ALSO Adam; Eve; Fall of Adam and Eve; Satan; Sin; Tree of Knowledge; Tree of Life
- aptness of the metaphor of eating ... 257
- as a violation of divinely-set boundaries ... 235, 591, 728
- confusion about the identity and purpose of the tree ... 252
- difficulties of diction simulate the excruciation of transgression ... 256
- does not symbolize carnal knowledge ... 169, 256
- Egyptian story of Setne and the ... 248
- Eve beguiled, but no deception when Adam ate of the ... 256-257, 263, 594-595
- eyes opened after eating ... 253, 255, 258, 363-364
- knowledge as the prize at stake in the Garden ... 229, 319-320
- "neither shall ye touch it" ... 231, 252, 253, 261, 288
- prohibition was of an advisory nature ... 289
- recapitulates battle waged by Satan in the premortal councils ... 229, 298, 593
- Satan's role in the
- attempts a threefold attack ... 253
 - attempts to mislead by false appearances ... 259
 - deceptively appears as the "keeper of the gate" ... 248
 - first makes an attempt to lead Adam astray ... 251
 - makes a threefold argument ... 255-256
 - picks the fruit, offers it to Eve, and touts its goodness ... 253
 - promises to reveal words that would preserve from death ... 178-179, 248
 - reveals forbidden knowledge ... 248-249, 319-320
 - seeks premature access for Adam to Tree of Life ... 229-231, 248-250, 319-320, 580
 - seeks to confuse the identity of the two trees ... 252
 - seeks to isolate Eve from Adam ... 249-250, 251
 - seeks to make Eve appear foolish and naïve ... 252-253
 - seeks to make God out to be a selfish rival ... 254
 - seeks to misrepresent the commandment as repressive ... 251, 252
 - speaks "by the mouth of the serpent" ... 251
 - speaks of "God" rather than of "Lord God" ... 251
 - strategy of, in the Garden of Eden ... 229-234, 580-581
- vs. sin ... 288-289, 364
- "ye shall be as the gods" ... 253-254, 319-320
- Tree of Knowledge ... 168-170. SEE ALSO Tree, split
- analogue of, in Court of the Palms mural ... 145
- as a book of knowledge ... 248
- as a fig tree ... 169, 189, 232
- as a grape vine ... 170, 727, 729
- as a pomegranate tree ... 170
- as a representation of the mortal learning experience ... 294-295
- as an apple tree ... 170, 232
- as the veil of the sanctuary ... 168, 230, 231, 591, 593, 728
- as wheat ... 169
- associated with birds ... 247-248
- forbidden ... 174-176, 228, 319-320
- literal vs. figurative ... 256
- illustration ... 228
- imparts knowledge of material things ... 591
- in Islam ... 168, 728, 729
- in Kabbalah ... 127, 758, 779
- in Manichaean tradition ... 728
- in Mesoamerican tradition ... 697, 698, 699-700
- in Zoroastrianism ... 168, 858
- initially shielded Tree of Life from view ... 167, 168, 591, 591, 727-728
- intertwined ... 168, 591, 727-728, 753
- "knowledge of good and evil" ... 168-169, 254-255
- vs. "good from evil" ... 276
- like the moon ... 189, 591
- speaks mysteries to Enoch ... 209
- staff made from the ... 749
- went to Babylon ... 778
- Tree of Life ... 163-168, 462, 591-595, 748-749. SEE ALSO Menorah; Olive tree; Palm tree; Tree of Mercy; Tree, split; Tree, World
- Abraham's oak as a ... 440-441
- analogue in Court of the Palms mural ... 145
- as a cypress ... 165, 166, 189, 211, 228, 593, 729, 749
- as a date palm ... 165-166
- as a prototype of the burning bush ... 163, 210
- as a prototype of the Menorah ...

- 163
 as a representation, in Lehi's dream, of the fruits of the Atonement ... 277 as a representation of embodied deity, the Messiah ... 163, 188-189 as a representation of eternal life ... 163, 175 as a representation of kings and righteous individuals ... 163-164, 188-189, 248, 752 as a representation of Noah and his sons ... 726 as a representation of the Savior's sanctifying power ... 295-296 as a Tree of Souls ... 228
 illustration ... 228
 as an almond tree ... 165
 as an olive tree ... 164-165
 as the kingdom of God ... 248
 as wheat ... 442
 associated with birds ... 247-248 associated with mother-goddess figures ... 164, 165, 166, 231, 261, 312 fruit of equated to the bread and waters of life ... 341 fragrances to be "in their bones" ... 282 like white grapes ... 165, 189 sweet ... 166
 white and in shape like a chestnut bur ... 165
 God sought to protect Adam and Eve from premature access to the ... 230-234, 276-278, 319-320
 handholds leading to the ... 143, 206-208, 473, 505-506
 illustrations ... 143, 473
 imparts knowledge of divine things ... 591 initially hidden from Adam and Eve ... 167, 168, 591, 727-728 in Chinese traditions ... 654, 657
 in Islamic tradition ... 168, 261, 729, 749-748 in Kabbalah, associated with primordial unity ... 127, 167, 758 to be reunited ... 779
 in Lehi's dream ... 166, 277, 473, 506 in Manichaeism tradition ... 728
 in Mesoamerican tradition ... 699-700
 "in the midst of the garden" ... 167-168 in Zoroastrian tradition ... 168, 858-859
 intertwined ... 168, 591, 657, 727-728 king depicted as tending ... 164 like the sun ... 189, 591 locus of throne ... 225, 593, 731
 originally in Holy of Holies ... 658, 755-756 over "Adam's Grave" ... 230 question of whether, eaten of by Adam before the Fall ... 175, 276-277
 Satan seeks for Adam's premature access to ... 229-231, 248-250, 319-320, 580 speaks mysteries to Enoch ... 209 twofold, in book of Revelation ... 778 way of the ... 282, 357 went to the south ... 778
Tree of Mercy ... 164-167, 189, 210, 640-641, 729. SEE ALSO Menorah; SEE ALSO Olive tree; Seth: quest for the oil of mercy; Tree of Life as a third tree that sprouted up after the Fall ... 166-167, 210, 461 (illustration)
 as an olive tree ... 164-165, 189, 210
 in Islamic tradition ... 729
Tree of Souls
 illustration ... 228
Tree, split ... 127, 165, 167, 231, 260-261, 312, 632, 693, 698, 700, 758, 779. SEE ALSO Tree of Knowledge; Tree of Life in Ascension of Isaiah ... 231, 260, 693
 in Islamic tradition ... 231, 260 in Kabbalistic tradition ... 127, 167, 758, 779
 in Mesoamerican tradition
 broken tree of Tamoanchan ... 698 representation of birth or rebirth ... 231, 260, 700 representation of migration of original ancestors ... 260, 700 in story of Nebuchadnezzar ... 632 in story of Osiris ... 165, 231, 261, 312, 632 associated with the "horizon" ... 231, 312
 illustration ... 231
Tree, World. SEE ALSO Axis mundi; SEE ALSO Tree of Life
 as axis mundi ... 571
 in Chinese tradition ... 728
 in Mesoamerican tradition ... 700
Truth ... xxv, xxxiv-xxxv, 190-193, 713, 717. SEE ALSO Ancient texts: value of; Science conviction of, takes priority over question of happiness ... 717 gaining knowledge and becoming godlike part of a single process ... 191-192 need to accept from all sources ... xxv, xxxiv-xxxv, 190-191, 713 only the truth need be believed ... 192 religious, in all denominations ... 191 should not be bound by creeds ... 190-191
Tubal Cain ... 393, 394, 397
The Two Ways ... 166, 324, 328-329, 343-344, 413-415, 434, 444 complete parting of the ways in Moses 5-8 ... 324, 343-344
 illustration ... 343
 doctrine of ... 166, 328-329 governing structure for the book of Isaiah ... 444 vs. metaphysical dualism ... 434
 vs. the two parties ... 413-415 withdrawal of the Shekhinah in stages ... 444 Tyndale, William appropriateness of archaizing collocation in translation of Hebrew ... 466 vs. inappropriateness for common everyday Greek of the NT ... 502 greatest of English Bible translators ... 466 introduced "atonement" into his translation ... 466
 Romans 5:10-11 in William Tyndale's English Translation of the New Testament ... 466
- ## U
- Ugolini, Valeriano
 Generations ... 568
Universe ... 65-67, 125, 537-539, 566-570, 716 beginning of ... 125, 537-539, 567.
 SEE ALSO Creation future of ... 539, 716
 infinite nature of ... 65-66, 67, 566-570 pluralistic nature of Mormon ... 567
Unpardonable sin. SEE Sin: against the Holy Ghost Urim and Thummim. SEE ALSO Stone name revealed through ... 706 revelation through ... 300
Uzziah
 parallels to Adam and Eve's transgression ... 592

V

van Eyck, Jan

The Offering of Abel and Cain ... 322

Vaughan Williams, Ralph

biographical sketch ... 569–570

photograph ... 566

works

If You Could Hie to Kolob ... 566–570, 721–727

Five Mystical Songs (The Call, Love) ... 431, 490, 507–508

Veccello, Tiziano

biographical sketch ... 437–438

Cain and Abel ... 336

Veil, heavenly ... 38–39, 62–63, 67, 79, 556, 696, 719

as described in the Codex Sylvester ... 38

illustration ... 38

as described in Muhammad's night journey ... 39

illustration ... 39

as the firmament of Creation, the sea of glass, and the white stone ... 62

hides heaven from earth ... 67, 556, 719 two "veils" create three heavens, corresponding to divisions of the temple ... 556 visions shown on the inside of the ... 62–63, 79, 696

illustration ... 696

Veil, temple ... 167, 248, 471–472, 499, 505, 564, 657, 668, 731, 764 associated with the garment ...

564, 731

as symbol of all creation ... 564

as symbol of Christ ... 564

as symbol of incarnation ... 564

as symbol of the dividing of heaven and earth in the Creation ... 104, 148

Chinese depictions relating to ... 657

Christ as the anchor beyond the ... 472

Christ as the gate ... 505

Christ as the keeper of the gate ... 167, 248, 471, 499, 505

Christians invited to pass through the ... 668, 764

complementary imagery of vestments ... 564

Islamic, at the gate of the Ka'bah (kiswa) ... 299

Verne, Jules

grave sculpture of ... 463

photograph ... 463

religious beliefs and practices ... 495 views on Mormonism ... 495–496

works

Around the World in Eighty Days ... 495–496

In the Year 2889 ... 463

Villalpando, Juan Bautista

Holy of Holies in Solomon's Temple ... 149

Vision of Moses ... xxxvi, 33–81, 694–696. SEE ALSO Moses aretology ... 45

as a heavenly ascent ... 37

figure with outline of ... 37

as a preparation for Moses' mission ... 39

both a suitable preface and an independent narrative ... 37, 75, 78 both the Father and the Son may have been present ... 45 brief summary of ... 37–39

calls upon God ... 59–61

"caught up" ... 42–43

compared to Apocalypse of Abraham ... 694–696. SEE

ALSO Abraham, Apocalypse of encounter with Satan ... 52–59,

329 parallels experiences of Joseph Smith ... 33–36 parallels Jesus' temptation ... 33, 53

epilogue ... 69–71

fall to the earth ... 51–52 fluent dictation of ... xxxvi glory upon Moses ... 44, 60 in God's presence ... 64–69

nothingness of man ... 51–52 photograph of OT1 manuscript ...

xxxvi

prologue ... 42–44, 78–79

Satan cast out ... 58 saw with spiritual eyes ... 52

son of God ... 46–47, 53

setting of ... 36–37 vision at the veil ... 62–64

deification ... 60–61, 79

voice ... 60, 62

vision of the spirit world ... 44–50

von Eschenbach, Wolfram grail ... 680

photograph ... 680

Parzival ... 680

Vulgate ... 814. SEE ALSO Jerome

W

War in heaven. SEE Councils in heaven, premortal; Satan

Ward, Jay Bryant

First Parents ... Frontispiece, 11

Washing ... 618. SEE ALSO Baptism;

Washing and anointing in Court of the Palms Mural ... 145

in the name of Abel ... 617

one of five secret ordinances ... 658

Washing and anointing ... 443, 520, 558, 661–662, 756. SEE

ALSO Ordinances, temple; Washing

among early Christians ... 661–662 confusion in accounts ... 756

in earnest of what one may become ... 443

Watchers ... 102, 226–227, 248, 310, 349, 398–399, 585–595, 589–590, 725–727

Book of Mormon parallel ... 310,

349 forbidden knowledge spread by ...

227, 248, 398–399, 589–590, 727

illustration ... 588

meaning of term ... 590

parallels to the Fall ... 248, 729 resultant depravity a precursor to the Flood ... 227

violated divine boundaries ... 591, 729

Waterhouse, John William

Miranda - The Tempest ... 635

Watts, Isaac

God, My Only Happiness ... 99

Wesley, Charles

Hark! the Herald Angels Sing ...

315–316

Wesley, Frank

biographical sketch ... 464

The Forgiving Father ... 464

Wheat ... 169, 272, 341, 441–442, 633–634

as the body of Christ ... 341,

441–442

as the body of Osiris ... 442

as the Tree of Knowledge ... 169

as the Tree of Life ... 442

provided for Adam and Eve ... 272,

633–634

Whitlock, Stephen T.

Abraham and the Angel Yahoel

Approach the Throne of God

... 38

Abraham and the Angel Yahoel

Ascend on the Wings of Eagles

... 684

The Angel Yahoel Takes Abraham

by the Hand ... 684

Noah Sees the Ark in Vision ... 696

Telesterion at Eleusis ... 676

Wisdom ... 35, 65, 223, 247, 343, 516–518, 665, 702. SEE

ALSO Sophia

access to, lost in Israel ... 343, 516,

518, 665

ancient concepts of ... 223, 343,

516

illustrations ... 35, 223, 517

impact of, on apocalyptic literature
... 702

“remaineth in me” ... 35, 65 serpent as a symbol of ... 247

Wisdom of Solomon ... 816

Wise Men. SEE Magi

World Tree. SEE Tree, World

Writing

origin of ... 512
speech, revelation, and ... 512–513

Y

Yazidi ... 725

Yom Kippur. SEE Atonement, Day of

Z

Zampieri, Dominico

The Rebuke of Adam and Eve ...
232

Zenos

allegory of ... 749

Zillah. SEE Adah and Zillah

Zion

anticipation of ... 627
our business is to build, not to tear down Babylon ... 414–415

Zohar ... 837

Zoroaster ... 856

Zoroastrian religion ... 168–169,

777, 856–862, 903–904

clothing ... 903

creation accounts ... 857–859, 903–904

differences in nature of dualism from Gnosticism, Manichaeism
... 861–862, 904 ethical dualism ... 861–862, 904

paradisiacal trees ... 168, 169, 858–859

primeval mountain ... 859

resemblances to LDS beliefs ...
861–862

resurrection beliefs ... 777 savior ... 861

texts ... 856–862